

ELECTRIFICATION WOULD RUIN BUSINESS HOUSES OF LONDON, SAYS LIEUT.-COL. HOBBS IN STRONG LETTER; HAMILTON NOW EAGER TO GET TRADE

Wholesale Houses Would Lose the Most Profitable Field in Southwest Ontario. Comprising 800 Miles of Railway and More Than 250 Stations—How Would City Get Cars to Sidings? How Would Cars Be Taken Away? Would Steam Railways Drop Everything To Take City's Business?

Leading Manufacturer and Wholesaler Declares Scheme To Spend $700,000 Would Be a Monumental Folly—Patronizes Hydro-Electric and Says He Would Support Present Scheme If It Would Benefit the City in Any Way—A Practical Treatise on the Danger to the City.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:

I venture the opinion that there is not a shipper in London who will be satisfied with an electric service on the London and Port Stanley Railway.

I hope that the right-thinking ratepayers of London will not for a moment jeopardize the interest of the men who compose the wholesale interests of London.

The Second Wholesale Centre.

It is something for London to be proud of that it is still the second city in Ontario as a wholesale centre. Toronto only excels it in this business. A great many men are given employment in clean shops, and all of them have a fair chance of advancement. It is as much in their interests as my own that I have been interviewed and have so often written myself on the question. These men have homes in London and it would be a cowardly thing to strike a blow at them.

A "Monumental Folly."

Electrification—I say it with a full conviction of its sweeping nature—would be the most monumental folly ever perpetrated in the city of London. When I say this I speak for men like the late Col. J. W. Little, Mr. R. C. Struthers, Mr. T. B. Escott, and a host of others who have large sums of capital at stake in London. When I say that these fair men are of the kind that form the backbone of our business community, I am within the facts, sir.

Uses Hydro-Electric.

And why do I oppose this electrification scheme? It is not because of any antipathy for its originator. Anyone who cares to take the trouble will find that his hydro-electric power is running the motors in the institutions I am connected with. If I could see that there was any benefit for the community, and myself, as I constitute part of that community, I should tell every ratepayer to grant the money if the city were in a financial condition to stand it.

Why am I opposed to this scheme?

What the Travellers Say. "Well, sir, every Saturday we have conferences of our travellers in our wholesale, as do the other wholesalers of the city. My travellers tell me, and I know it to be a fact, through long acquaintance, that the cream of our business is derived along the lines that operate in Southwest Ontario through St. Thomas. These travelling men are keen observers. They know to a few hours just by how much time we can beat Hamilton into this southwestern field—a field, I wish to impress upon the ratepayers, that has more than 800 miles of railways and more than 250 stations buying goods from the wholesale houses of London.

An Enormous Territory.

Think of the enormous extent of that territory. Think how many thousands of miles of prairie railway would have to be travelled before we could have that business, yet we send from London here scores of travellers into that prairie land. If there were a raise in freight rates to the west, the shippers here would rush to Ottawa. Yet it would take an enormous amount of western business before we could replace the business we would lose in that 800 miles of railways with its 250 stations were the London and Port Stanley Railway electrified.

Hamilton Hungry To Get In. The wholesale houses of Hamilton—how well our travellers know it—are hungry to get in this field. Even now I am told, the travellers in that city are discussing the prospect of beating the London traveller into his favorite hunting grounds in case there is such folly done as to electrify this road. To the wholesale houses in Hamilton this territory is a Promised Land. If London loses it, it will be a sorry day for London.

Would Sacrifice Business.

The chief reason why I oppose this scheme is that by no manner of means can freight be offered in London and handled at St. Thomas and reshipped, as it must be, perhaps twice, perhaps more than twice, without sacrificing a large portion of the business to the other wholesale centres.

Suppose I want a car of glass shipped from my siding off Ridout street. Can the city shoot an electric loco-live up there and get the car, or will they ask the Grand Trunk to do it? Would Drop Everything. Of course, the Grand Trunk would drop everything else it had on hand and take this car for the city and get another somewhere else and still another somewhere else, and hand them all over to the city—possibly—one or two days later.

I take down my telephone. "Yes, this is Hobbs—Oh, yes, Mr. Blank, of Rodney—that car of glass not there. Well, that's strange—I find that it hasn't got out of the yards yet. You say you've cancelled the order. See here, Mr. Blank, is that fair? We've had your business for twelve years. Think I ought to move to Hamilton, do you? Well, I'll have to do something, if they are going to keep on getting your business."

An Extra Charge. But, suppose in some miraculous way, the city gets this car away. I propose to ship it from St. Thomas M. C. R. when it gets off the L. and P. S. R. But I am told that the city has to have a separate charge on its work, whereas before, the M. C. R. didn't charge me anything to take the car from London to St. Thomas. They handled my freight from London for the same price they would handle freight from St. Thomas on many classes.

Where Are the Cars? If I want five freight cars in ten minutes some day where am I to get them? I haven't found a word about freight cars in any of these reports, and I have been assured by no less than three freight men—men who know their business—that NO RAILWAY can secure freight cars from another railway unless it has a certain number itself.

Then there is to be trans-shipment at St. Thomas, beyond any doubt. They can't get away from it. If the city buys cars it won't let them run around like the cars of the great systems. They'd land up in Montreal.

Some ratepayer would write a letter to the editor saying that

PREPARING FOR ANOTHER WAR

King of Greece Had Long Conference With Sir Edward Grey.

TURKEY MAKES TROUBLE

[Canadian Press.] London, Sept. 27.—King Constantine of Greece, conferred for a considerable time today with Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign secretary, on the situation in the Turkish province of Thrace, and in Albania, which has become so menacing that Greece is preparing for a third Balkan war.

The disposition of the islands in the Aegean Sea was also discussed. Turkey is reported to have demanded that Chios and Mytilene be restored to her before she will consent to resume peace negotiations with Greece.

BADLY TANGLED IS THE FREE PRESS OVER WAGE SCALE

Completely Muddled as to Wages of Electric Locomotive Drivers and the Motormen.

QUOTE THEIR "EXPERT" WITHOUT READING HIM

Scale of Mr. Warfield Is Exactly the Same as That of the Traction Company.

MUST BE UNION RATES

Schedule Called For by Brotherhood Must Be Used on City Electrified Road.

"Now, infidel, I have thee on the hip."

—The Merchant of Venice.

The clever investigators employed by the London Free Press have never yet read the Warfield report.

That assertion stands without fear of contradiction, or else there is a fitting occasion for the use of the short and uglier word.

Charity compels us to say that the report has never been read by a single individual in the Free Press office.

They have been tangling electric locomotive drivers up with trolley car motormen, and their confusion is great although until they have read this article they will never know it. Then there will be a berating for some clever young gentlemen. He will discover that he who reads may learn.

The Scale of Wages.

The Advertiser published the scale of wages provided by Expert Warfield for the engineers who would run the electric locomotives.

The wages for an eight-hour day amounted to the sum of $54.08 a month although Aid. Bennett says they must be paid $125 a month, if they are to be beside brotherhood men.

The Free Press took this to mean that Mr. Warfield provided this amount per month for motormen.

The fact is that the sums provided by the famous engineer-finance for motormen as found in section five of his details on the cost of electrical operation are as follows:

Four motormen, at 22 cents per hour, for 8½ hours per day... $48.50
Four conductors, at 22 cents per hour, for 8½ hours... $48.50
Three motormen, at 22 cents per hour, for 10 hours... $66.00
Three conductors, at 22 cents per hour, for 10 hours... $66.00

BOY LASHED WITH A WHIP

Brutal Incident This Morning Was Witnessed On Central Avenue.

A CHARGE MAY BE LAID

What is alleged by eye-witnesses to have been a brutal and entirely unprovoked assault upon a small boy, named Jerome Donnelly, whose home is in West London, and who works for a shoe repair company on Richmond street north, was perpetrated by a local gardener about 9 o'clock this morning.

Lashed Boy. Mr. Fred W. Boyd, of 173 Mill street, declares that he never saw anything more distasteful than the deliberate and unfeeling manner in which the gardener snatched a horse-whip from the delivery wagon of S. Stevely & Sons, which stood near-by, and proceeded to lash young Donnelly, who is said to have been entirely unoffending in the matter. It is further alleged that the gardener even followed the boy into the store where he is employed and administered several blows with the whip inside the store.

Mr. T. Coughlin, of Pall Mall street, a young man who was passing, intervened in the boy's behalf, and the latter assailant, deterred from his unmerciful attack on the boy, promptly drew a line on the sidewalk and dared young Coughlin to cross it. He did so, and the assailant did not go very far with his threats, but declared that he would horsewhip young Coughlin at 7 o'clock this evening.

May Be Charge. It is said that the gardener's son, who attends Talbot street school, was injured recently in an affair with other boys of the school district, and that his father, having learned of this, was angry and determined to teach the boy a lesson.

Whether a charge will be laid against him is not certain.

Held For Theft of Castro's Papers

[Canadian Press.] Hamburg, Germany, Sept. 27.—The theft of a confidential document belonging to Ciriaco Castro, the former Venezuelan dictator, and containing the plans of an insurrection to be started by him in Venezuela, brought two culprits before the police court here today, when they were sentenced to terms of four months each in jail.

The clerk of a Hamburg merchant, who was a friend of Castro, learned that his employer had in his keeping some important papers belonging to the Venezuelan dictator, and he attempted to steal them. He was caught by a private detective, and the papers and then attempted to sell them for $5,000, but the men were arrested before they had succeeded in doing so.

FELL TO DEATH

Unruly Girl Was Trying to Escape From Home.

[Canadian Press.] Newark, N. J., Sept. 27.—Elizabeth Taylor, 16 years old, was killed here today while trying to escape from the House of the Good Shepherd, a place of refuge for unruly girls. She fell out of a fourth story window and slide down a clothes line. They were uncovered just as the unruly girl was limbing out of the window. She leaped for the clothes line, missed it and fell to her death.

Little Boy Was Found Murdered

[Canadian Press.] Philadelphia, Sept. 27.—With the skull crushed and the shoulders, arms and back bearing bruises, the nude body of a 7-year-old boy was found today on the golf links of White Marsh Valley Country Club, near here.

The condition of the body led the police to announce that the child was probably attacked and killed by a degenerate. Around the boy's throat was a shoe-string, drawn tight enough to have strangled him.

The body of the boy was found face downward near a tree.

IF CITY GUARANTEES $1,000,000 BANKER WILL GET CAPITAL FOR NEW RADIAL RAILWAYS

One of Foremost Banking Men of City Characterizes Beck Scheme of Electrification as "Fooling Away" $700,000, and Would Run Three New Lines To Bring Business to City.

Get English Capital. He states that if $23,233 of the bonds of each company were guaranteed he could secure English capital which would undertake the building of the railways.

He takes strong ground on the proposed electrification of the London and Port Stanley Railway.

"We have one radial line to Port Stanley and one steam line," he said, "why should we have two radial lines when the necessity is for lines in other directions? The scheme will never bring anything but bitter regret to the men who are promoting it."

While the banker in question would not permit his name to be mentioned for obvious reasons, he authorized the statement made above.

A Former Londoner at Winnipeg Aids in Furnishing a Ward.

The chairman of the board of trustees of Victoria Hospital, has received from Mr. Sydney T. Smith, of Winnipeg, formerly of London, a contribution of $1,500 to be devoted to finishing and furnishing the ward for the care of advanced cases of tuberculosis, which is now nearing completion.

In addition to the amount provided by the city council, voluntary subscriptions to the amount of nearly $12,000 have been received for the purpose stated.

When complete the accommodation provided will be all that could be desired.

REV. GEORGE M'CALLUM WAS INSTANTLY KILLED

Former Resident of Gladstone Was Struck by a Michigan Central Flyer Going Sixty Miles an Hour—Alarm Bell at Lower Crossing Was Not in Working Order.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Gladstone, Sept. 26.—Relatives here have just returned from Leona, Mich., where they attended the funeral of Rev. George McCallum, who for many years resided here.

While walking from his home to the village Rev. Mr. McCallum was struck at a level crossing by a Michigan Central express going sixty miles an hour, and was instantly killed.

It was found that the crossing alarm was out of order and that Mr. Mc-tracks, without any warning of the flyer's approach.

He was at his home here a few weeks ago attending the funeral of his mother, who died at the age of 98. Mr. McCallum was 61 years old and resided here until about 20 years ago, when he entered the ministry. Mr. A. A. McCallum, of Gladstone, a brother, and Warren Barton, brother-in-law, attended the funeral. Besides his wife, Mr. McCallum is survived by six daughters. Callum had thus walked onto the Government Plans To Tie Up the Mails in Case of Trouble.

LEADERS ARE DEFIANT

Declare That Such an Act Would Be Practical Declaration of War.

[Canadian Press.] Belfast, Ireland, Sept. 27.—The review today of 11,000 Belfast volunteers belonging to the "Army of Ulster" by Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Irish Unionist party, attracted thousands of people from the surrounding districts and from every part of the Province of Ulster.

Besides the four Belfast regiments, each of them commanded by a retired army or militia officer, the Ulster "war staff" consisting of General Richards, two retired colonels, and two retired captains, headed the volunteers. They were armed with dummy rifles, as the carrying of firearms by unlicensed persons is prohibited in the British Isles.

The usual Saturday afternoon sporting fixtures, including all the football matches, were played earlier than usual, so as not to interfere with the big event of the day.

During the march of the volunteers with General Sir George Richardson at their head, a revolver was fired in the vicinity of Garlick Hill, and a child on the sidewalk received a slight injury in one of its legs.

CHURCHILL LEAVES.

[Canadian Press.] London, Sept. 27.—Another member of the British cabinet, Winston Spencer Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, left for Scotland today to join the Ministerial conference at Broomfield, where it is understood Premier Asquith and Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd George have been discussing the Ulster situation.

While no definite action in regard to the home rule question is likely to be taken until the full cabinet meets, the gathering of several of the most important cabinet ministers at Broomfield is regarded in political circles as of great significance, for Premier Asquith, shortly goes to Balmoral as minister in attendance on the King, and will without doubt discuss with his majesty the Ulster situation.

TI UP MAILS.

[Canadian Press.] New York, Sept. 27.—A London cable to the Tribune today says:

There is good reason to believe that John McKinnon, Robertson, parliamentary secretary to the board of trade, had ministerial warrant for his speech at Newcastle the other night, when he threatened that if any attempt is made to put a provisional government in Ulster after the passage of the home rule bill, the Government will withhold the mails from Ulster, and thus totally disorganize business in Belfast by isolating that city from the rest of the world. Such a measure would be to all intents and purposes an act of war.

Lincoln recalls that in 1867, when the States of America proclaimed their independence, Lincoln was urged to withhold the mails, but he declined on the ground that such conduct on his part would be provocative. "The action which Lincoln would not take against the states which deliberately seceded," says the Daily Mail, "Mr. Asquith apparently continued on Page Four."

MUSIC and DRAMA

Coming Attractions at Grand.

Today—Matinee and Night, "The Garden of Allah."
Tuesday, Sept. 30—"The Pink Lady."
Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 1 and 2—Pictures of the Romantic Drama, "Arizona."
Friday to Wednesday, Oct. 3 to 8—Edison's Talking Pictures.
Thursday, Oct. 9—"Peg o' My Heart."

"Garden of Allah."

Somebody had said that "The Garden of Allah," which appears twice today at the Grand, is the desert drama. It is more than that, however, for it tells the story of the renegade monk in search of that elusive something that we call peace and happiness. Every human being is searching for that. That a monk, for many years shut up in a monastery, should decide to leave his peaceful surroundings and look for contentment elsewhere is the groundwork of the story. There is a wealth of beauty in the settings, for they are most-creating as well as impressive to the eye. The very first panorama and the succeeding scenes, each in its own way, suggest the locale, while the Arabs and Moors in their picturesque costumes, wandering to and fro, speaking their unintelligible tongues, and suggesting the customs of their African home, give vividness to the action.

"The Fascinating Musical Play of 'The Pink Lady.'"

The most popular of musical comedies, "The Pink Lady," will be seen at the Grand Opera House on Tuesday evening. C. M. S. McLellan's book bristles with funny lines and situations. Ivan Caryll's delightful music is whistled everywhere, especially such catchy numbers as "Beautiful Lady," "The Girl By the Saskatchewan" and "Donny Did." It is seldom that a musical play is presented in such an elaborate and artistic manner as "The Pink Lady." The scenes of the three acts are exceptionally beautiful and the company are the latest word in Rue de la Paix fashions. Seats on sale.

An epoch in the career of motion photography has arrived in the presentation of Augustus Thomas' most powerful drama, "Arizona," which will be seen at the Grand Opera House, for four performances, commencing Wednesday matinee, Oct. 1. "Arizona," is a drama surcharged with Thomas' significant delineation of human emotions, and records the apex of success of the American playwright extraordinary.

At a western military post, Captain Hodgman, a black sheep has brought shame and sorrow to Lena, the daughter of Sergeant Kellar, a German, and Lena is found employed in the family of Henry Canby, owner of a big ranch. In the meantime Captain Hodgman makes violent love to Estrella, wife of the colonel, and also the elder daughter to Canby. The troop riding up the valley, make camp at the Canby ranch and discover Hodgman in the act of also the seducer, who is in the next room with Denton and Kellar. A shot is fired, Hodgman falls to the ground with a bullet in his breast. Cavalrymen and cowboys rush in, Denton is accused of the killing. After the bullet is extracted from the body, Denton is freed and Lena ordered under arrest. Tony, to save her, confesses that he did the shooting, and rushes through the gates into his saddle, making good his escape.

This is the first time in the history of motion photograph that a picture has been sent out to the public in the same way as a theatrical production, calling for an entire staff. These pictures cost the producers four times the usual amount expended on the original production with a large cast. At special prices seat sale opens Monday at 9 a.m. This attraction only plays the regular theatres, and does not play picture houses.

The Edison Talking Pictures, which are being viewed and heard for the first time here at the Grand Friday, Saturday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, twice daily, Oct. 3, 4, 6, 7, 8. The chief astonishment of the Edison talking pictures is caused by the exact coincidence between the motion of the lips of those in the pictures and the spoken word as it issues from the phonographic mechanism. Whatever may be the final service of the kinetophone, the salient fact that its coming emphasizes is that at last we have a scientific synchronization of sight and sound. The pictures and reproduction of records are in absolute perfect unison. Mr. Edison's latest invention is truly wonderful. Seats Wednesday.

The Comedy Success, "Peg o' My Heart." The much heralded Oliver Morosco production of "Peg o' My Heart," which has had an enviable run in New York and which the critics have declared one of the greatest successes in years, will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House Thursday evening, Oct. 9. The action of the play, which takes place in England, is well acted by Elsa Ryan, Lillian Keller, Fanny Addison Pitt, Wilda Mari Moore, Henry Stanford, Frank Burbach and Brian Darley.

Cyril Maude, England's Foremost Comedian.

Mr. Cyril Maude, England's foremost comedian, whose coming to America within the next ten days, is the biggest individual star's tour since Mrs. Patrick Campbell came to America some years ago, sailed last Wednesday on the Allan liner Virginian for Montreal, and will appear at the Grand Opera here on Oct. 12 and 14, after opening the tour at Toronto. Mr. Maude will appear in London in the pieces in which he earned his great renown in England. For the opening bill there will be "Teddies," an adaptation by the late Clyde Fitch, of Pretty Fall Wedding Solemnized in St. George's Anglican Church.

SMITH-KING

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Goderich, Sept. 26.—A pretty wedding took place yesterday at St. George's Anglican Church, where Miss Essie Smith was married to Mr. W. Croxley King, of Bristol, England. Miss Smith was one of Goderich's popular young ladies, daughter of the late Wilmer Smith, a leading merchant for many years. The ceremony was performed by Ven. Archdeacon Jones-Bateman in the absence of Rev. Mr. Fotheringham, the rector. Mr. and Mrs. King left for an extended eastern trip, and intend to reside in Goderich.

ALISA CRAIG.

Alisa Craig, Sept. 26.—Mrs. Geo. Calhoun and children, of Brantford, are visiting their aunt, Mrs. W. O'Leary. Miss Susie Holmes, of London, is visiting at Mrs. A. McDonald's. Mrs. T. Seale has returned from Berlin, where she attended the funeral of her son's father-in-law, Mr. Morley, of that place.

Mr. Harry Ward, of Darby, England, secured a position with Mr. D. McKellar.

BRUSSELS.

Brussels, Sept. 27.—Bally Day will be observed in the Presbyterian and Methodist Sabbath schools tomorrow.

Everything is now ready for East Hurel fall fair to be held here Thursday and Friday of next week.

Brussels horsemen cut quite a dash at Seaford fair, capturing first prizes for rooster and carriage horses, and first, second and third for rooster brood mare and foal.

The opening concert in the course being conducted by the library board was a great success.

Mrs. W. McKellar returned to Toronto on Tuesday, after a week's visit with Mr. and Mrs. D. McKellar, of this place.

ILDERTON FAIR BIGGER AND BETTER IN ALL RESPECTS

Fine Crowd Out to Annual Exhibition of London Township Agricultural Society.

A FINE LOT OF HORSES

The Special Attractions Proved
Diverting and Exciting—
Results of Races.

[By Our Own Man.]

Ilderton, Sept. 26.—A big, little fair, a fair that pleased the three thousand people who attended, and will bring them all back next year, and a fair that would have deserved an attendance of several times that number if the morning had not been threatened with rain and clouds to sadly interfere with the ever-favorite exhibition of the London Township Agricultural Society, was held here today. It was the first fair of the association held on their commodious new fair grounds. The new grounds will permit of the expansion that the fair richly merits. One of the few fair fairs that are going ahead rather than backward, the directors and members of the society are extremely optimistic, and with the addition of new buildings and other improvements to the grounds are confident that they will make it one of

Twice Proven Cure for Nerves

Irritable, Hysterical, Sleepless, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Restores Health.

There is a message in this letter for thousands of women who are suffering from broken-down nervous systems. Sleepless nights, much irritability over little things, spells of dizziness and nervous sick headaches are among the symptoms. You may not realize the nature of your ailment until nervous prostration comes upon you. But, in whatever stage you find yourself, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is ready to help you. Mrs. W. J. May, 88 Annette street, Toronto, writes: "Some years ago I suffered from nervous trouble, and took Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which completely cured me. About six months ago I received a shock which again shattered my nervous system to such an extent that I was irritable and hysterical, and could not sleep nights. I began to use the Nerve Food again and was not disappointed. Improvement was apparent from the first box, and now I am entirely well." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers.

the best fall fairs in Western Ontario.

Fine Lot of Horses.
The exhibit of horses was, as it always is a big feature of the fair. The Ilderton district is a breeding centre of fine horses, and the reputation of both the village and district was well maintained. In carriage and roadster classes the prize-winners and leading exhibitors were: Archibald Blaikie, Westminster; Henry McLurg, Alisa Craig; R. W. Jackson, Ilderton; Edwin Phillips, Falkirk; Bert Kennedy, Ilderton; George Carter, Ilderton; Frank Atwood, Ilderton; Fred Clatworthy, Ilderton; Thomas Chadcock, Ilderton.

Cattle and Sheep.
Ilderton district is also noted for the fine Shorthorns and Herefords produced here. M. Robson of Ilderton, was a heavy winner in Shorthorns. O'Neill Bros. of Denfield, carried off a big share of the Hereford prizes. Another noteworthy winner in the Hereford classes was T. Skippin, of Hyde Park.

One must not overlook the fine Lincoln sheep raised in London and adjoining townships. J. Lindon, of Denfield, M. Robson, of Ilderton and L. Hughes, of Ilderton were leading exhibitors. W. Kennedy, Ilderton, showed some exceptionally fine Southdowns. All around it was the best exhibit of sheep in the history of the fair, so the old-timers who attend every year declared.

There were some very good swine exhibits. Wm. Squires showed a lot of fine Berkshires. In the grade cattle classes, Henry Robson of Ilderton, Ed Porter, Ilderton, and N. Grievie, Ilderton, were successful exhibitors. A. F. O'Neill, Denfield, showed heavy draft and agricultural horses. James Robson, Arva, exhibited heavy horses. In the same class other leading exhibitors were Wesley Hall, Ilderton, and G. Grievie, Lobo.

Special Attractions.
Closely contested in every case, the special attractions and speed events held the attention of the fair visitors all afternoon.

WHAT'S INDIGESTION?
WHO CARES? LISTEN!

"Pape's Diapiesin" Makes Sour, Gassy Stomachs Feel Fine at Once.

Time! In five minutes all stomach distress will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness or belching of gas, acid, eructations or undigested food, no dizziness, bloating, foul breath or headache.

Pape's Diapiesin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest and most certain indigestion remedy in the whole world, and besides it is harmless. Millions of men and women now eat their favorite foods without fear—they know Pape's Diapiesin will save them from any stomach misery. Please, for your sake, get a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapiesin from any drug store and put your stomach right. Don't keep on being miserable—life is too short—you are not here long, so make your stay agreeable. Eat what you like and digest it; enjoy it, without dread of rebellion in the stomach. Pape's Diapiesin belongs in your home anyway. Should one of the family eat something which don't agree with them, or in case of an attack of indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis, or stomach derangement at daytime or during the night, it is handy to give the quickest, surest relief known.

ternoon, and until late in the evening. Abundance of good music was provided by the Birr Brass Band, a London Township musical aggregation from a neighboring village that met with deserving appreciation for the excellent program rendered.

Everybody, including the contestants, enjoyed the potato race. It was one of the unique features of the ring attractions. Six stalwart riders on noble steeds, armed with wooden lances, dashed down the track, circled an ordinary wooden barrel, and speared therefrom each time one large harness potato, carried it down the ring, carefully avoiding the interference of his opponents, and deposited it in another barrel in front of the judges' stand. It was not so easy a task as it appeared, for some of the competitors found it more exciting to tilt the potatoes from their opponents' lances than to see how many tubers they themselves could carry from one barrel to the other. Ten minutes were allowed, and when the bell rang Beverly Mitchell and ten potatoes all safely deposited. J. A. Henderson and Cecil Tuckey tied for second place, each with seven potatoes to his credit.

Race Results.
The results of the races follow:
Free-for-all—

Stop Coasting On Town Walks

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Ingersoll, Sept. 26.—As a result of the fatal accident in Woodstock on Wednesday, Chief of Police Fysh today visited the schools and impressed upon the pupils the fact that no more coasting on the sidewalks will be allowed.

There have been numerous complaints regarding children coasting on the walks here, and several serious accidents have been narrowly averted.

CROSS, FEVERISH, SICK CHILDREN NEED "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS."

A Coated Tongue Means Sluggish Liver and Bowels—Listen, Mother!

Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has sour stomach, diarrhoea, remember a little liver and bowel cleansing would always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills. Give a teaspoonful and in just a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food, clogged in the bowels, passes out of the system and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless fruit laxative and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on each bottle.

Mother, keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs." Then look and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no cheaper size. Don't be fooled.

TO REFORM DRUNKARDS.

[Canadian Press.]
Milan, Sept. 26.—A discussion on the various methods of curing habitual drunkards occupied the entire morning session of the International Congress on Alcoholism today, the delegates endeavoring to discover the best scientific and practical remedy.

TWO WOMEN TESTIFY

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did For Their Health—Their own Statements Follow.

Haliburton, P.E.I.—"I had a doctor examine me and he said I had falling of the womb, so I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has done me a lot of good. All the bearing-down pains have vanished. I have gained ten pounds in weight, the discharge is all gone, and I feel better than I have for a long time. I think any woman is foolish to suffer as I did for the sake of a few dollars."

"You can use my letter as a testimonial. It may encourage other poor women who suffer as I did to use your Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. GEO. COLLICUTT, Haliburton, Lot 7, P.E.I.

Read What This Woman Says:

New Moorefield, Ohio.—"I take great pleasure in thanking you for what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. I had bearing down pains, was dizzy and weak, had pains in lower back and could not be upon my feet long enough to get a meal. As long as I laid on my back I would feel better, but when I would get up those bearing down pains would come back, and the doctor said I had female trouble. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was the only medicine that helped me and I have been growing stronger ever since I commenced to take it. I hope it will help other suffering women as it has me. You can use this letter." — Mrs. CARSEN LLOYD, New Moorefield, Clark Co., Ohio.

DRUNKENNESS

is a curable disease, which requires treatment. The ORRINE treatment can be used with absolute confidence. It destroys all desire for whiskey, beer or other intoxicants. Can be given in the home. No sanatorium expense. No loss of time from work. Can be given secretly. If after a trial you fail to get any benefit from its use, your money will be refunded.

ORRINE is prepared in two forms: No. 1, secret treatment, a powder; ORRINE No. 2, in pill form, for those who desire to take voluntary treatment. Costs only $1.00 a box. Come in and talk over the matter with us. Ask for booklet.

"THE MOST RABID BUG THAT EVER BIT AN UMPIRE!"

That's the humorist who's going to write up the World Series in advance for The Advertiser.

WHO IS HE? HE IS

GEORGE M. COHAN

The world's greatest baseball fan, and the funniest comedian in America.

Baseball people know Cohan is the greatest and funniest fan who ever stepped into a grand stand. Always something doing in the screeching line when George is at the game.

He proved himself a thirty-third degree fan this year when Frank Chance opened in Chicago as an American League manager. Cohan shut down his theatre the afternoon of the game, which cost him $1,300, and he paid $1,000 for a box seat, the receipts being for Chance's benefit!

YES, BASEBALL IS WHERE GEORGE LIVES!

Cohan has written three stories for the London Advertiser on the world's series, which begin Tuesday, Oct. 7. They are full of funny remarks, thoroughly Cohanesque, but they deal out baseball logic by the chunk.

He has sized up the Giants and Athletics, and predicts the outcome of the struggle in an entertaining and convincing manner. The first story will be printed Monday.

The Fan—Specially Picked by George Cohan for The Advertiser. "You know me. I am the most rabid bug that ever bit an umpire."

MANY GRIDIRON BATTLES SCHEDULED FOR TODAY

Big American Colleges Are Opening Their Schedules in the East This Afternoon.

[Canadian Press.]
New York, Sept. 27.—Football begins to crowd baseball today. With the teams of Harvard, Princeton and Yale, the season of the college gridiron game will be a factor of increasing importance on the calendar of sport from now until the closing days of November. Yale and Cornell opened their playing schedule on Wednesday and return to the gridiron for the second game of the autumn this afternoon.

Cornell and Princeton appear to have drawn the hardest opponents of the day in playing Colgate and Rutgers, respectively. Yale, Pennsylvania, and Harvard have easier opposition in Holy Cross, Gettysburg and the University of Maine.

The First Fatality.
Owing to the death of Halfback Belyea, of the Norwich University team, as a result of injuries received in the game against Holy Cross on Wednesday, the army team will be without a game today. Norwich was scheduled to play at West Point, but cancelled the contest when the injured player died yesterday afternoon. The army's greatest rival, the naval academy team, will also continue to practice today, for the midweek schedule does not call for a game until next Saturday, when the football season opens at Annapolis.

RED SOX EASILY BEAT MACKMEN

Made American League Leaders Look Like a Team of Tailenders.

SENATORS BEAT YANKS

Griffith's Men Made Five Double Plays—St. Louis Lost to White Sox in the Tenth.

Boston, Sept. 26.—The Red Sox made the pennant winners of the American League look like tail-enders today, the score being 19 to 4. Connie Mack sent in four pitchers, but none of them was unhit. Leonard kept the Athletics' hits well scattered. The score:

DOUBLE PLAYS BEAT YANKS.
New York, Sept. 26.—The Washingtons spread a network of double plays around the infield at the Polo Grounds today, and every time the New Yorks had a chance to score they ran into one. The home team was shut out by a score of 3 to 0. The New Yorks managed themselves up against no less than five of these double plays, and principally for that reason were goaded to nothing. Cobb Has 12 Points Lead in Batting Race

Is Hitting at Rate of .385, While Joe Jackson Has Mark of .373—Daubert Leads in National League—Cravath Is Home Run Leader.

[Canadian Press.]
Chicago, Sept. 27.—Twelve points to the good, Ty Cobb has entered the homestretch in the race for the batting championship of the American League. His chief rival, Joe Jackson, is hitting at the rate of .373, to Cobb's .385. This Speaker is apparently out of it after a rally that threatened at one time to put him on top. He has fallen behind Hendricks, of Boston, batting .384, to the latter's average of .388 established in 25 games. Other American Leaguers batting .380 or better are:
Collins, Philadelphia, .342; Baker, Philadelphia, .337; Gilhooly, New York, .335; Lajoie, Cleveland, .336; Monahan, Philadelphia, .326; Gandil, Washington, .322; D. Murphy, Philadelphia, .315; Leivelt, Cleveland, .314; Bauman, Detroit, .313; Crawford, Detroit, .312; Stovall, St. Louis, .303; Williams, Washington, .300.
Daubert Leads National.
Topped only by Earl Yinsling, the Brooklyn pitcher, and pinch-hitter, Daubert, of the same club, is practically the leader in the National League with an average of .359, five points behind the mark set by Yinsling in 35 games. Ham Hyatt, Pittsburgh, pinch-hitter, is next with .357, and Cravath, the Philadelphia slugger, fourth, with .331. The 300 club in the National League includes, in addition:
R. Miller, Philadelphia, .329; Becker, Philadelphia, .325; Hess, Boston, .323; Walsh, Philadelphia, .320; Viox, Pittsburgh, .309; Meyers, New York, .308; Titus, Boston, .306; Zimmerman, Chicago, .304; Houser, St. Louis, .304; Tinker, Cincinnati, .304; Wagner, Pittsburgh, .303; Magee, Philadelphia, .301; Wheat, Brooklyn, .300.

Cravath Has 18 Home Runs.
Cravath is still the leading home-run hitter, with 18; Luderus, of Philadelphia, is next with 17, and Saier, of Chicago, third, with 14. Baker is ahead in the American League, with 13, and Veach, of Detroit, next with 9. Bodie, Chicago, and Crawford are tied for third with 8 each.
Milan, Washington, is ahead among the American League base stealers, with 66, and Moeller, Washington, next with 58. Carrie, Pittsburgh, is best in the National League, with 54, and Myers, Boston, next, with 49.
While Philadelphia leads in batting and fielding as well as in the race for the pennant in the American League, New York leads in the National only in the chase for the flag. St. Louis being on top in fielding, and Brooklyn in batting.

The Pitchers' Records.
The late rally of the Chicago Nationals placed three of their pitchers among the first five slabs men in the National League, who are:

ATHLETICS SAW GIANTS WIN GAME

Tesreau Pitched Great Ball and Defeated the Brooklyn Dodgers 4-2.

PHILLIES BROKE EVEN

Pirates Beat Cubs on Last Appearance in Pittsburgh This Season by Six to One Score.

New York, Sept. 26.—With Ira Thomas, Harry Davis and Dan Murphy, of the Athletics, sitting in the grandstand at Ebbetts' Field today Jeff Tesreau showed them his best brand of pitching by choking off the Dodgers with four hits, the Giants again winning by a 4 to 2 score. Tesreau received glittering support, especially from Herzog and Shafer, and as the Brooklyners were guilty of the usual headless baserunning the big box-man's task was comparatively easy. The score:

ERIE A GOOD BALL TOWN SAYS LOUIS

London's Crack First Baseman Believes Canadian Should Land It.

GIVES REASONS WHY

Tells Advertiser Readers Interesting Story of Pennsylvania City's Baseball Experience.

BY LOUIS BIERBAUER.
London's First Baseman.

I read that the Canadian League is trying to invade Erie, Pa. Personally, I think it would be a good move. Erie is a city of about 75,000 population, and a winning ball club there would be a big money-maker. Erie is my home town, and I first broke into professional ranks there, when the city had a team in the Ohio and Pennsylvania League. At that time the league was composed of the following clubs: Youngstown, Ohio; Akron, Ohio; East Liverpool, Ohio; Canton, Ohio; Newcastle, Pa.; McKeesport, Pa.; Mansfield, Ohio; and Erie. Erie finished in last place that year, but despite this fact the owners made money.

The following year Erie entered the Central League, and finished in third place. The Central League was a twelve-club league at that time, and Staughnessy won the pennant with his Fort Wayne club. The first six clubs finished within 80 points of each other. Last winter, this league was split into two leagues, the small cities claiming the jumps were too big in the larger circuit. The western clubs kept the title of Central League, while the eastern clubs took the name of Inter-State League. Erie being a member of the latter until it broke up in July.

There is no organized league ball club in Erie now, and the Canadian League should stand a good chance to secure a franchise there. Erie has a new ball park, laid out like a big ace of clubs, similar to the Polo grounds. John Murphy, the groundkeeper of the Polo grounds, who just recently laid out the park and superintended the building of it. Erie fans know baseball, and it is not necessary to have a pennant winner in order to get their support. I consider Erie just as good a ball town as London, and London is the best ball town in the Canadian League. They never had less than 4,000 people there on Saturdays and Sundays, and some Sundays the attendance ran as high as 8,000.

Erie has turned out as many good ball players as London. It is Mike Donlin's home town, and he learned the game there. Mike Morrissey was also born and brought up there. Umpire "Duffy" Finneran, the former National League umpire, lives in Erie. Gilhooly, who was purchased by Frank Chance for the Yankees from Montreal a few weeks ago, played with Erie's Central League team last year, while "Bobby" Schang, a brother of Schang of the Athletics, who is billed for a major league berth next season, also played with Erie last year.

Erie is just a six hour jump from London. This is about half as big as the London to Ottawa jump, or about the same as London to Peterboro. I venture to say that if Erie can be brought into the Canadian League it will be a profitable move for the league and I believe the fans of Erie would welcome it. The Canadian League officials should spare no effort to secure a franchise there.

MACPHERSON'S RINK WON ELMWOOD PRIZES

"AL DEMAREE WILL BE PITCHING STAR OF WORLD SERIES!"---HANS.

So Speaks That Mighty Slugger of the Pittsburgh Pirates, Hans Wagner, Who For Sixteen Years Hit Over .300—"Hit the First One Matty Pitches, But Wait 'Em Out on Tesreau," Advises Hans.

BY HANS WAGNER

Statement by National League's Slugging Shortstop.

I wouldn't be surprised to see Al Demaree fool the Athletics about as badly as any pitcher on McGraw's staff. The Athletics have batted against both Mathewson and Marquard, and may have learned something which will help them solve their deliveries. Demaree is a newcomer, though he is not a kid by any means. He has a delivery which has fooled me often this season. He puts on speed when you would swear he is pitching slow. One day I watched him warming up before one of the games he pitched against the Pirates, and I thought he had no smoke at all, but when I stepped to the plate he was shooting them over like cannon balls, yet he was not using a motion which indicated much exertion.

Of course, Mathewson's head will help him in the big series, but the chances are against Christy being as effective as he has been in similar series in the past. Age tells on the best of players. Matty has not been so successful lately as he once was, but he uses his brains about as much as any pitcher in the business, and he is likely to get by when a man with more stuff would fail.

My opinion is that the hitting in the world's series will depend very largely on whether one of the other teams is suffering from a slump. By that I mean to express my belief in the conviction that when a man is batting at his best he can hit any twirler in the world, and when he is off his stride a novice can fool him. I've studied slumps, but I've never been able to explain them, and I've never heard of a recipe for curing one except pegging away till your eye comes back.

Tesreau has a puzzling delivery, but I imagine he will have more trouble beating the Athletics than the other Giant hurlers, because he has lacked control nearly all season. In these post-season games it usually requires a tight twisting to win. When Tesreau's splitter is breaking right for him, he is hard to beat, but he has a lot of trouble in getting it over the plate.

Each series has had its pitching star in the past, and I would not be surprised to see Demaree out in front this fall. Matty may come through with some great games, but the chances are against it. He pitched very clever last fall, yet he could not win, and he's a year older now.

Marquard is a bit erratic, and requires more coaching and aid from his teammates than Mathewson. He is there, though, when he is right. I have found that it's a good thing to smash away at the ball.

Of course, I use a different system against the various New York pitchers, as I do against all other teams. You always figure on a man's control when you are facing him. A twirler like Matty, who seldom gives a base on balls, can only be beaten by hitting at his early pitches. By that I mean not waiting until he gets you two and three, for

he will exert himself to the limit then and he's likely to fool you. Hitting the early pitches. By that I mean not waiting until he gets you two and three, for

TWO PROMINENT GIANTS ARE ON HOSPITAL LIST

Larry Doyle Hurt in Auto Accident and Fred Snodgrass Has a Charley Horse—Both May Be Out of World's Series.

Brooklyn, Sept. 26.—The supporters of the New York Giants in the world's series got a double shock today, when they learned that Captain Larry Doyle had been injured in an automobile accident and Outfielder Snodgrass had sprung a "charley horse" in the game at Ebbets Field. Both are not likely to play again for a week and may be out of the series with the Athletics for the world's championship.

Doyle received his injury last night as he was driving home in the automobile he won as the best all-around National League ball player of 1912. Pitcher Fromme of the Giants was a passenger. Doyle became bewildered by the fog and steered the machine into a tree. Doyle was thrown out on his right shoulder. Fromme escaped with only a slight shaking up.

Doyle did not realize until this morning that his fall had possibly injured him seriously. A physician said the right arm was dislocated, or the shoulder-bone possibly broken. Manager McGraw said he would have Doyle placed under the X-ray.

Snodgrass opened the game today with a single to centre and slowed up turning first. He limped around a minute and then retired in favor of Cooper.

FRENCH AVIATORS ARE BREAKING ALL RECORDS

Amazing Speeds Are Made at French Aero Club's Meet, Which Opened Today.

Rheims, France, Sept. 27.—Amazing speeds and the breaking of official records marked the opening today of the flying meet here organized by the Aero Club of France.

Five French aviators took part in the elimination race to decide which three of them should participate in the contest for the international aeroplane championship.

Three of them should participate in the contest for the international aeroplane championship, which starts tomorrow. The course is a closed circuit with a circumference of 54 miles, around which the aviators flew ten times in the elimination trials.

Emile Vedrines was the first to ascend, he succeeded in accomplishing the distance at an average speed of 118 miles an hour, thus beating the world's record made by Maurice Prevost at Paris on June 17 last, when the speed recorded was just over 111 1/2 miles an hour.

Maurice Prevost was the next to ascend, and he did even better than Vedrines, the official record of his speed for the first 100 miles being 126 miles an hour. Eugene Gilbert, Gabriel Espanet and Rost, the other three Frenchmen, in their trials followed at lower speeds.

GAME WITH GUELPH IS NEXT SATURDAY

Local Rugby Club Decides to Play Aggies on Oct. 4 Instead of Today.

The local rugby club will practice this afternoon at Tecumseh Park instead of playing at Guelph as announced in Friday evening's Advertiser. The Guelph game had been originally set for today as announced in The Advertiser a couple of weeks ago, but Friday afternoon Manager Little decided to play the Guelph team on Oct. 4. It is not unlikely that the game will be played in this city instead of Guelph. An effort is being made at the present time to switch the game to this city. The players engaged in a practice last evening at the park, one of the largest turnouts of the season gladdening the heart of Capt. Judd and Manager Little.

MCGRAW DOES NOT THINK INJURIES SERIOUS

Believes Doyle and Snodgrass Will Be All Right for World's Series Games.

[Canadian Press.] New York, Sept. 27.—Manager McGraw, of the New York Nationals, it was learned today, believes that injuries received Thursday night and yesterday by Larry Doyle and Fred Snodgrass will not necessarily keep them out of the world's series. To what extent the heavy-hitting second baseman and the spry centre-fielder would feel the effects when the Giants face the Athletics, cannot be answered at this time. The injured shoulder due to Doyle's automobile mishap, and the "charley horse" Snodgrass developed in Friday's game, may cause a stiffness that would interfere with the smooth work demanded by the big series. Mrs. Doyle asserted today that her husband had nothing worse than a bruised shoulder. An X-ray examination failed to show any broken bones.

VARDON AND RAY ARE PLAYING IN TORONTO

English Golf Champions Are Opposing Toronto Professionals.

[Canadian Press.] Lambton Golf Course, Toronto, Ont., Sept. 27.—A gallery of five hundred spectators followed around the Lambton course this morning when Vardon and Ray, the English exponents of the game, undertook to trounce two local professionals, Cummings and Barrett. The weather was good though the wind was tricky. George Lyon acted as referee. Ray and Vardon were two up at the end of the fourteenth hole.

Steven Kyoshek Wanted as Witness

[Special to The Advertiser.] Sarnia, Sept. 27.—Detective Acton has returned from Walpole Island, where he went to serve a summons on Steven Kyoshek, who was discharged from custody last spring after being found not guilty of the murder of two redmen at the Indian reservation there. Kyoshek is wanted as a witness to testify against a man named Hicks, who was arrested about three weeks ago on an old warrant. Hicks supplied Kyoshek with a horse and spring for the Indian youth was released from custody.

NO APOLOGY YET

China, It Is Expected, Will Make Amends to Japan.

[Canadian Press.] London, Sept. 27.—The three days allowed to China by Japan in her ultimatum demanding satisfaction for the recent attacks on Japanese in Nanking expire today, according to a Central News dispatch from Shanghai. General Chang Hsin, commander of the Chinese Government forces at Nanking, had not apologized up to this morning, but it is generally expected that he will do so at the last possible moment.

Found Human Bones in Digging Cistern

A report to the effect that a well-preserved body of a woman had been discovered by soldiers when they were excavating on Hope street Friday afternoon was circulated about the city this morning, but investigation by an Advertiser reporter disclosed the fact that there was no truth in the story.

Not Resigning Says the Magistrate

Police Magistrate Judd denied a rumor this morning to the effect that he would tender his resignation to the Government, to take place at the end of the year.

The rumor which was in circulation Friday afternoon said that Mr. Judd would resume his private practice in London as soon as a successor was appointed.

THREE BADLY BURNED.

[Canadian Press.] North Bay, Ont., Sept. 27.—Three workmen were severely burned at the plant of the Energetic Explosives Company, Limited, 13 miles from North Bay, yesterday by a fire which started in some chemicals. Their names are John McDermott, Wm. Nelles and Alfred Barton.

A RECORD RELAY RACE.

[Canadian Press.] London, Sept. 27.—In the London Athletic Club sports at Stamford Bridge today the Polytechnic team of eight men beat the London Athletic Club team in the mile relay in the record time of 2 minutes 59 seconds.

made for meeting all emergencies. One of the provisions in the agreement in the acquisition of the Lyons plant was a stipulation that it might be discontinued at any time after the installation of the Salmon River service under certain conditions.

When Niagara power "went bad" about a year ago and trolley cars were stalled for several hours on a rainy night, power from the Lyons plant, the only available source, was sufficient to move cars on contracted interurban lines. There also was a small reserve which was used for illuminating the arc lamps in the Syracuse streets.

Depend On River. In the event that the Lyons plant should be closed and weather conditions put the Niagara transmission lines out of business, both the lighting and transportation facilities of Syracuse, needing 25,000-horsepower, would be dependent on the Salmon River plant.

An accident to the transmission line from the Orwell plant of the Salmon River Company would result in a disastrous power hold-up in Syracuse. It is this remote possibility which have led New York State railways and Syracuse Lighting Company officials to consider the advisability of an independent plant, it is said.

The opening of the barge canal and the probable abandonment of the Erie and Oswego canals in Syracuse will deprive the powerhouse of the Syracuse Lighting Company in Fulton street and the emergency plant of the New York State railways in Tracy street of water from the "state ditch." This water is now extensively used for condensing purposes.

This fact lends color to the report that lighting and trolley interests in Syracuse contemplate the erection of a new power plant, despite denials on the part of officials.

Plan New Move to Protect Thaw

[Canadian Press.] Concord, N. H., Sept. 27.—In order to bring about his legal removal to Pennsylvania, in the event that the request of the New York authorities for his extradition is denied by Governor Feller, a taxpayers' suit against the state of New York is planned by Harry K. Thaw.

Thaw said today that a report had reached him from New York that William T. Jerome intended to take no further steps in the case here if the executive refused to grant extradition.

Fear Tong War in Victoria Shooting
[Canadian Press.] Victoria, B. C., Sept. 27.—What the police believe may be an outbreak of Chinese tongs commenced Thursday, when Lim Bat Lum was shot through the body three times while sleeping in his bunk in a shack near Colwood near this city.

A certain mystery attaches to the wounding of the Chinaman in its similarity to the unexplained murder of Samuel Campbell, on the old Indian reserve here, whose body was found Aug. 21 riddled with bullets. In the case of Lim Bat Lum, a board was pried off from his shack and the assailant then inserted his hand containing the weapon and discharged five shots at the sleeping Chinaman. The bullets found in the same calibre as those which were found in Campbell's body. Three shots entered the Chinaman's body, but failed to kill him.

Suspect Husband of Brutal Murder
[Canadian Press.] Peru, Ind., Sept. 27.—While cutting corn in a field near Cassville, south of here, late yesterday afternoon, farmhands found a new grave, and upon investigation it was learned that it contained the badly-decomposed body of Mrs. Clyde Wilkinson, aged 40. She had been missing since Aug. 29. About that time her husband had a public sale, and it was said here that he disappeared. As bullets were seen in that vicinity, it was presumed they had gone away together. Sheriff Frank Hosteller and Coroner M. L. Wagoner were notified last night, and are on their way to the scene. Discovery of the woman's body has created intense excitement in the neighborhood.

HEAVY MARKET TODAY IN ALL THE LINES

From every indication there will be a record market today. At 9 o'clock the central sections were active, and the western and the east section also. Trading was brisk, with prices firm and high.

New oats are selling from 95c to $1.00 per bushel, and there is no indication of a change. Old oats are steady at $1.05 to $1.07 per cwt. Wheat as usual is 85c per bushel.

May will likely be a big offering, with prices from $1.15 to $1.20. Vegetable prices are steady, with few exceptions. Potatoes are selling from 65 to 70 cents per bushel retail and 55 to 60 cents per bushel wholesale. Green corn was noticeably scarce this morning. The price has advanced to 10 cents.

Eggplant is selling steadily at 30 cents per dozen. Other vegetables are as quoted on the list. Celery is 75 cents. Cauliflower, $1 to $2.50. Onions, $1 per bushel. Peppers, 15 cents per dozen.

Peaches are steady at 35c to 45c per basket for rawhorns. Plums are for small baskets and 25c for the larger sizes with the demand small. Pears are firm at 75c to $1. Crabapples are selling for 30c per peck. Grapes apparently are a small crop, judging from the offering. The price average 25c and 20c for baskets. Melons are getting scarce. Prices have as yet not changed, being 50c to $1.50.

There is no change in the prices of butter and eggs or live stock, but it is expected that live hogs will change about noon, when the buyers' price is made public.

Poultry is as quoted in the list. There is no change in butchers' meats. The prices are as quoted.

GRAND TRUNK FIRE LADDIES ARE FAST AND PROFICIENT

Keen Contest Today Between Hose Companies of Carshops and Roundhouse.

The annual competition between the several hose crews of the Grand Trunk Car shops and roundhouse took place this morning in Queen's Park. The amateur fire ladders are proficient in the art of handling a hose, which was demonstrated in a manner that left no grounds for contradiction. Remarkably fast work marked the manoeuvres, some lightning moves being successfully accomplished.

The exhibition consisted of three movements. Laying the hose from the revolving reel and making hydrant couplings, constituted the first; adding a second length was the second; and, lastly, replacing a damaged section.

Companies 1 and 2 from the Grand Trunk Car shops and a crew from the roundhouse made up the entries, and provided keen competition.

Two divisions were provided—the "dry" and the "wet" races. In the "dry" race, the hose was laid out on a dry surface, and the "wet" race, the hose was laid out on a wet surface.

Results were as follows:
Car shops No. 1—35 4-5—did not finish.
Car shops No. 2—29 1-5, 7 1-5, 11 3-5
48 3-5.
Roundhouse—30 3-5, 8 2-5, 13 3-5
58 3-5.

Car shops No. 1—26 1-5, 13 3-5, 19 4-5—1 minute 3 4-5 seconds.
Car shops No. 2—32 1-5, 13 2-5, 23—1 minute 8 3-5 seconds.
Roundhouse—23 2-5, 11, 23 3-5—1 minute 7 4-5 seconds.

Same as Traction Scale.
This is the same scale exactly as paid by the Traction Company to its employees. There is not a man working on the line who receives a cent less than 22 cents an hour. Some of the men make as much as $30 a month through overtime in the summer months.

The Free Press becomes mad as the sea and raves in the following terms: "City will pay higher scale than the Traction Company pays."

"The lowest wages estimated by Engineer Warfield to be paid by the city to motorman or conductor for the eight-hour day is $54.08—a difference of $12.58 per month, or $149.76 per year more than is paid by the Traction Company."

"IT WILL BE SEEN AT ONCE THAT IF THE WARFIELD ESTIMATE IS NOT LAID BY THE CITY, THERE IS ANOTHER RAILROAD IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD WHOSE WAGE BILL NEEDS IMMEDIATE ATTENTION."

The Warfield report, especially served up to Free Press readers, has never been read by the clever young writers on the Free Press.

The point that The Advertiser makes is that no employee of the city railway is entitled to be permitted to operate a train or car unless he is paid the rates provided by the brotherhoods.

The Traction Company pays wages as high as any paid in Canada, and has been ready to allow the men to organize whenever they cared to. Another point is that Warfield provides only 7 motormen and 7 conductors to handle crowds that require forty cars on some days.

Personal Mention
Mrs. Annie E. Tilt and daughter, Mrs. S. B. Ryder, and son, James Tilt, of Chicago, are in the city for a few days.

Miss Marie McCowell, nurse in training at St. Joseph's Hospital, London, is holidaying with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. McCowell, Thames street north, Ingersoll.

Alex. C. Thompson, formerly of 746 Queen's avenue, London, who has been told of a Grassy Lake branch of the Union Bank, has been promoted to the management of a new branch of the bank at Glacier, B. C.

Rev. J. W. Mitchell and Mrs. Mitchell, of Piccadilly, are visiting Mrs. Mitchell's sister, Mrs. Nell Cooper, at Piccadilly street. Mr. Mitchell will preach at Colborne Street Methodist Church Sunday morning.

WALKER—MILLING.
A pretty wedding took place at St. John's Episcopal Church, Norway, Toronto, on Saturday last, when Miss Florence Alice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Milling, was united in matrimony to Mr. Herbert Wesley Walker, of the bride formerly resided with her parents in this city.

SCOTT—KEENE.
The marriage took place in Vancouver, B. C., Thursday, Sept. 18, of Miss Ethelwyn Keene to Mr. Milton B. Scott, formerly of this city. The bride is a daughter of the late H. B. Keene, of this city. Two brothers, Mr. A. H. Keene and Mr. Oliver Keene, still reside here. The marriage took place at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Edward Huggins, of Vancouver, B. C.

FIVE KILLED BY EXPRESS CRASHING INTO CARRIAGE

No Light at Crossing or On Vehicle, and the Engineer Failed To Notice the Party in the Dark—Four Picked Up Dead and Another Died on Way to Hospital.

Montreal, Sept. 27.—Five people were instantly killed by the C. P. R. Quebec express ten miles from this city last night, when the carriage in which they were riding was struck by the pilot of the engine.

The dead:
Hormidas Allaire, 49 years old.
Mrs. Hormidas Allaire, 42 years old.
Albina Lortie, his sister, unmarried, 43 years old.
Victoria Lortie, another sister, 66 years of age.
All the deceased lived at St. Eliear, Que.

On Their Way Home.
The party were driving to their home at St. Eliear, over a sort of private road, known as Monte Du Moulin, which runs from Park Laval to St. Martin. The road is not much more than a rough track, and the crossing where the accident took place there is no light or sign of habitation. The train was en route to Montreal. The engine driver, realizing there there had been an accident, pulled up, and the train crew picked up the bodies of the party, which had been thrown in all directions, one of them being found on the engine. The carriage was smashed into splinters.

Instantly Killed.
Four of the victims were dead when picked up, the only one showing any sign of life being Albina Lortie. All were placed on the train and brought into Montreal.

At the Mile End Station an ambulance from the Royal Victoria Hospital was waiting. Paul Lortie was placed in the vehicle, but died before reaching the hospital.

How the accident happened no one seems to know, as the point where the carriage was struck is far removed from any farm house. The party carried on the first intimation he had when he felt the impact of the engine and carriage.

The bodies were placed in the Montreal morgue, and an inquest will follow.

IN THE POLICE COURT

William Heatherington, Fred McKeon, Edward Drew and Robert Fletcher appeared in police court this morning on a charge of disorderly conduct. All pleaded "Not guilty," and the case was enlarged until next Thursday, when three other youths, one who gave the wrong name, and two others who could not be located by the police, will be summoned to court on the same charge.

P. C. Thomas Noonan, who was responsible for the appearance of the young men, told Magistrate Judd that last Saturday night complaints were made to him that bad language was being used by a number of youths who congregated in a clubroom in the north end of the city.

As a result of the complaints, he went to the rooms Sunday night and heard language emanating from the place that he described as "vile and awful."

"Timothy Hay" called the court, and heads were craned expectantly to see the owner of such a name. Up bobbed a meek-looking man with a meek little voice, who admitted that he came from Leamington, and that he had been in the city for a long time. "I certainly will," was the reply, and "Timothy" was shown the way to freedom.

When William Britton was called to answer a charge of assault preferred by his wife, Mary Britton, he did not answer. P. C. Westman was then called to provide service of the summons, and the magistrate ordered a warrant for William's arrest.

Carpetball League.—A well-attended meeting was held at the Macarbee Hall, Dominion Savings building, on Wednesday evening for the purpose of organizing a City Carpetball League amongst the fraternal societies of the city, and was unanimously decided to go ahead with the movement. A further meeting has been called for the same place next Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, to which all persons interested in carpetball are invited.

Mr. Bingham Better.—Word has reached this city that the Rev. H. H. Bingham, pastor of the Talbot Street Baptist Church, who has been away on account of ill health, will preach in his own pulpit the second Sunday in October. The report also says that Mr. Bingham has completely recovered, and is returning to his city and his work again. This will be very gratifying news to his many friends.

Two Services at St. James'.—Rally day is to be observed in a number of Sunday schools tomorrow. At New St. James' Presbyterian Church a special children's service will be held in the morning of the church, and the pastor, Rev. T. H. Mitchell, will be in the pulpit. At 2 p.m. a special program will be used. Mr. Mitchell's evening theme will also be for young people.

A Farewell Social.—A farewell social was given last week by the congregation of Rev. Dr. Munroe, who is leaving for active work. Mrs. D. McPherson read an address of appreciation of Dr. Munroe's work, and he was presented with a bouquet of flowers and a purse containing $50 in gold. The ladies of the church furnished supper.

Old House Bought.—The Kilpatrick property on the northwest corner of Clarence and Horton streets, on which stands a frame structure, believed to be one of the very oldest houses in London, has been purchased by Mr. A. Hartman, of 300 Dundas street, at what is said to be a high price for property in that vicinity. The property is at present occupied by the grocery store of Mr. C. Strowbridge. Mr. Hartman states that he has not decided what class of building he will erect on the lot, which is at present vacant. Mr. Hartman recently purchased the property on the northeast corner, which formerly belonged to the estate of the late Col. Williams, and has plans ready for the erection of a two-story apartment house.

RAILWAY BOARD SITTINGS.
[Canadian Press.]
Ottawa, Sept. 27.—The railway board will hold a series of sittings in Ottawa places in next month, its itinerary being: Oct. 3, Cobourg; 10, Hamilton; 11, Sarnia; 12, Toronto.

LONDON AND DISTRICT

Notice!

Capt. Eaton Arrived.—Capt. Eaton, C.A.S.C., arrived in the city this morning to take charge of the Canadian Army Service Corps in the first division. Capt. Eaton succeeds Major Dean. Major Gordon-Hall leaves on Monday for Ottawa to take over his duties as director of manoeuvres in the Ottawa district.

Surprise Club.—On Friday evening the Surprise Club of the Adelaide Street Sunday School met at the home of Mr. D. H. Gilles, King street. A very interesting plan to obtain new members and keep up the attendance was outlined and adopted. Teams captained by Mr. W. Donney and Mr. L. Perkins were chosen. During the evening Mr. Downs rendered several piano selections very acceptably. Miss Zella Gilles and Mr. J. Broadhurst also favored the club with solos, which were well received. At the close, the Misses Hazel and Zella Gilles served a dainty luncheon. The meeting closed with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

A Peepers Busy.—Residents of East London, in the vicinity of Dame and Egerton streets, are complaining that a man has been peeping in their windows at night. One resident told The Advertiser that just before retiring one night this week she happened to look out and discovered a man peering through one corner of the window. She notified her husband, but by the time he got outside the man had disappeared. Some time ago a man, who was thought to have been a "Jack, the Peeper," fired a revolver at Mr. Thomas Fitzsimmons, of Elm street, and it is thought that the fellow is now hanging about Dame street.

Arbitration Board.—Word was received at the Grand Trunk depot this morning that the board of conciliation appointed to arbitrate the dispute between the Grand Trunk and the telegraphers will meet on the 1st of October. The arbitrators are: Judge Gurnell, chairman; Mr. E. H. McCann, for the company, and Mr. J. S. O'Donoghue for the men. The conference will be held at the Union Depot, Toronto.

FALL FROM APPLE TREE CAUSED FARMER'S DEATH

Melville A. Ferns of Westminster Township Succumbs to an Accident.

Internal injuries sustained in a fall from an apple tree resulted in the death this morning of Melville A. Ferns at his home, corner Bostick line and concession 8, Westminster Township.

The accident occurred on Friday, the 19th. He was engaged in picking apples in an orchard on the 8th concession, when in some manner he slipped and fell heavily to the ground. He was taken to his home, where he lingered until this morning.

He was 52 years of age, and is survived by his widow and four sons, Orrie, of Medicine Hat, and Olive, Herman and Leslie, at home.

The funeral will take place Monday at 2:30 to White Oak Cemetery. Services at 10 o'clock conducted by the Rev. Mr. Barnby.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF LONDON ARCHDEACONRY

Interesting Program To Be Given at Lucan on October 8 and 9.

The Archdeaconry of London will hold their fifth annual conference in Holy Trinity Church, Lucan, on Oct. 8 and 9. Archdeacon Richardson will preside.

It is the desire of those in charge of the conference to bring together the clergy and others for worship and also to consider all topics pertaining to the spiritual life and work in the church. The clergy, church wardens and lay representatives of the archdeaconry are ex-officio members of the conference, and it is desirable that all who can should be present. The services and sessions have been left open to the public. The clergy are requested to bring their vestments for the Thursday evening service.

Arrangements have been made for an interesting program, starting at 4 o'clock on Wednesday, Oct. 8, in the parish hall of the church. The program follows:

Wednesday afternoon 4 o'clock—Opening session in parish hall. 6 p.m.—Tea and social reunion. Introductory, Mr. Chris. Hodgins and Mr. John Fox, the very reverend dean of Huron.

8 p.m.—Evening prayer and sermon. Clergy vested, ritual deans will officiate. Preacher, Rev. L. Norman Tucker, D.C.L.

Thursday morning, Oct. 9, 8 o'clock—Holy communion. Devotional address, Rev. T. B. Clarke.

9:45 a.m.—Opening of conference; chairman, the archdeacon. Prayer, Rev. J. C. McCracken. "The Psalms of the Kingdom," Rev. Professor T. G. A. Wright. "The Work of a Parish," Rev. Canon Davis. "The Church Year," Rev. J. B. Fotheringham and Rev. D. J. Cornish.

Noon—Prayer and intercession for missions; adjournment for luncheon. 2 p.m.—Afternoon session—Chairman, Rev. William Lowe. 1:30 o'clock. "On Confirmation," Rev. C. R. Gunne and Rev. W. J. Doherty. "The Holy Sacraments," Rev. Canon Craig. "Adaptation of the Church to the Spirit of the Age," Rev. C. E. Jenkins. "Religion in the Home," Rev. Principal Waller and Rev. H. Sutton. "The Young People of Our Church," Rev. Arthur Carlisle and Rev. E. Appleby. "The Call from the Mission Field," Rev. Dr. Tucker and Rev. W. M. Shore.

5:30 p.m.—Closing words, prayer and benediction.

New Plans For Ingersoll Street

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Ingersoll, Sept. 27.—The attitude of the council at a special meeting yesterday afternoon did not indicate that they regarded the trouble that has followed the commencement of the work on Thames street in a serious light. They treated it in a mild-mannered way, and disposed of it without any trouble.

The trouble arose because of the objection of businessmen chiefly to the proposed curb, which, according to the plan, would have to be steps before reaching the street level.

The council will endeavor to solve the difficulty by having the engineer amend his plans, calling for one step only, and if these are satisfactory they will proceed with the work.

Another question likely to engage attention at once, to which reference was made yesterday by the council, was the installation of a sewerage system. The feeling seems to be pretty well established that Ingersoll is face to face with this situation, and the councillors are of the opinion, at least a number of them, that if this has to be done preliminary work should be commenced without delay.

In the past fifteen days there have been almost as many sessions of the council or civic committees. Now the aldermen are going to take a few days off and get acquainted with their families again. The past two weeks especially have been strenuous ones for the aldermen. The special star chamber sessions on the electrification question, the special meeting to ratify it, the special meeting to set the voting day, and the special meeting to set the vote as amended, have contributed to the "strenuousness."

Storm sewers and the West London breakwater also helped along with a special meeting called for last Tuesday.

Want a Holiday.
If this year's council has done nothing else it has at least had more the usual number of meetings, to say nothing of the conferences that have been indulged in from time to time, and where city business has been transacted, though not in the usual formal way.

"I think we are entitled to a holiday now," opined an alderman this morning, as he figured out how little he has been at home in the past few weeks. "This is getting worse all the time. The sooner we get a holiday the better for us."

CORRESPONDENCE

Springbank Cars.
To the Editor of The Advertiser:

I was very pleased to read the letter re above in your Wednesday's issue. I think it outrageous the way we are treated on this route. I understand the explanation given by the street railway company is that they can make money quicker on the city routes. I suppose this is the reason why on fair week, when extra cars should have been put on, the regular large cars were taken off, and we were given an hourly service with a little tin-pot car only capable of holding fifty when crowded, with the result that dozens were left behind each trip, who, like myself, had to walk all the way to the Wharfedale road to get a city car. It is a scandal, too, that we should be deprived of an evening car during the long winter evenings, when so many would use it in order to go to some place of amusement. I should like to know how long we are to be subjected to this kind of treatment. Yours truly, LUCY PAGE, Springbank.

Church Will Work Amongst Russians

The question of undertaking mission work with the foreigners who are locating in London is becoming a live issue with the Protestant churches of the city. The quarterly official board of the Hill Street Methodist Church, at the regular August meeting, unanimously declared in favor of becoming a city mission to do work on English lines, among the Russians in the neighborhood of the church.

Week night classes for instruction in English will be organized, and work will be commenced early in October. A converted Russian, who is a member of Hill Street, and who speaks very good English, will assist in the work. Hill Street Church is almost centrally located in the district into which the Russians have come. As the congregation is comparatively small, they will have to look to the generosity of the Methodists in the other churches of the city to give them financial assistance in this much-needed undertaking, and the pastor, Rev. A. McKibbin, will receive subscriptions and contributions from those outside his congregation who are disposed to give to the mission. If sufficient assistance is forthcoming, it is also intended to give instruction in domestic science to the Russian women and girls. The pastor, who resides at 151 Colborne street, would also like to get into communication with any trained school teachers who could volunteer service one or two nights each week for this work, and any teachers who could give instructions in domestic science after school hours, as a good deal of the work will have to be voluntary.

Splendid Work Accomplished By London City Mission

Rescue Work That Has Grown From Small Beginning To Be a Powerful Influence.

How the Story of the Cross Has Been Told to All Sorts and Conditions of Men and Women.

Three years ago, on the 9th of November, there was opened for the first time in London, a religious work, known as the City Mission. It first opened its doors at 142 King street. There was found within the four walls of the Mission that night some of London's most prominent citizens, and also a number of distinguished city clergymen. The purpose of the Mission, according to the statement of the superintendent, Mr. H. E. Wilson, was to reach out a helping hand to the great army of delinquents, and raise them to a better life. Having felt the power of sin for many years, and also the mighty power of the gospel, which alone brings salvation to the drifting soul, Mr. Wilson felt that the only opportunity for these men was the salvation offered by Jesus Christ.

The Story of the Cross.
The Mission being open every night and inter-denominational in its aspect, and preaching only the old story of the cross in as bright and as sane a manner as it is possible to impart, has proven the only means whereby men and women who have gone down through sin have been lifted and given a new start in life.

At the opening of the Mission the seal of God apparently seemed to rest upon the service, as there was one conversion that night, and as a further indication of this work being owned of the Lord, was seen in the fact that during the first year there were three hundred and forty-six professed conversions, and in addition to that two hundred and fifty expressed a desire to lead a better life.

At the beginning of the second year a number of Christian churches, realizing the advantages of the Mission, formed themselves into a committee with a view to assisting Mr. and Mrs. Wilson in the noble work which they had sacrificed so much to start.

Has Helped Many.
The Mission deals with men and women from every walk in life, and with the assistance of the various church members and fellow-workers, the superintendent has been privileged to lead many a wayward man to the Master. There have come within the doors of the Mission during these three years, six thousand men and women, and for various reasons they have listened to the old story of the cross. And here they seek refuge from the hardships of a cruel world. There have been those who have come to us underfed; some have not had a meal for days; some are misunderstood, and many underbred; but all were bound on a common errand; some were victims of that old tragedy, "the elimination of the weak," and many were of the roaming element.

Space will not allow us to cite individual cases, but Supt. Wilson told of hearing many a heartbreaking story that could never be told to mortal ears, for only God, the individual, and the workers know of them. Suffice it to say that only the men and women that have been combatting with the storms of life can fully realize the fury of the world.

Story of a Cripple.

One Saturday night there was carried into the hall a man without legs, and when the offering was taken this man, who had apparently been selling lead pencils, and had in his pocket about six dollars in pennies and nickels and dimes, thought that he would ease his conscience by putting all his worldly possessions upon the plate, which he did, but after hearing the old story of the gospel, with tears streaming down his face and using his arms as crutches he found his way to the altar and there commenced for the first time to lead the Christian life.

Attracted by Singing.

On another occasion a man who was invited into the Mission, about the age of sixty, when the invitation was given for those to begin the Christian life, he, trembling and head to foot, said the song that we were singing, and attracted him in. He said he had not heard it for fifty years, and the last time he had it was when he was a lad in Sunday-school, in the town of Markham. His mother at that time having passed away, he was living a rough life, drifting all over the country, and after hearing the old story of the gospel, decided to begin a Christian life.

From Every Walk.
There have been among the many converts of the Mission, men and women whom one would not expect to find in such circumstances. That is to say, there have been men from every walk of life. There was a bank clerk, who through the desire for the wine cup, had lost position after position, but through the influence of the Mission, was led to a Christian life, and is respected by all, and holds a position in one of our leading offices.

The Helping Hand.
One day last winter there came to our Mission from the county jail, a man who came to our city a stranger, and through the indulgence of the wine cup was given a three-months' term. After being liberated, he found his way to the Mission, not having any warm clothing, because of the fact that he was put in during the warm weather. When he came out, it was a bitter cold day. The superintendent, knowing of his circumstances, spoke of the man before some of his workers, and the result was, one Christian young lady, who was working on a salary of $4.50 per week, volunteered to give $1.50 of her salary to provide a suit of underclothes for the man who had nowhere to go, no friends to look to, no bed to sleep in, and nothing to eat, and through further kindness which was shown by the workers, his heart was touched, and he said: "If this is the way you Christians live and the way you treat unworthy people, from tonight on I will live the Christian life, and never drink again."

Having heard such stories before from men who did not always make good, we did not pay much attention to it, but did what we could for the poor fellow at the time; but recently to our great joy, our friend, who had received kindness from our hands, gave his testimony in the Mission, that he had found employment, and has since been living a clean life. His countenance was so changed, his dress so altered, that he looked entirely a different man, and he gives the Mission credit for his changed life.

The Mission was opened for the men of the street, the men and women who need a helping hand. There is much philanthropy among the churches and among the people of London, but the man who has taken the downward path does not need charity; it is sympathy that he wants. The charity inclined of the city are giving of their wealth, but too frequently their personality is withheld. The work of the Mission consists mainly of preaching the gospel to broken hearts and sinful men. The workers visit the jail twice weekly, and through the kindness of Sheriff Cameron, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are permitted to visit the jail Friday afternoons. On Sunday morning there is a Sunday morning service conducted. The jail work has proven a great success as not a few have found peace and joy through the acceptance of the good news that is brought them. Many never think of a future life until they are sick or in trouble; then their hearts are very susceptible to the message which we bring them. Much of the work started in the jail is finished in the mission, for, on invitation, when liberated, the men come to the service. Then the Mission keeps them the first night out, and supplies a bed and breakfast, and will try on the following day to find employment for them, and in this way many are put on their feet again, not to be the less thought of.

Superintendent Wilson Made the Following Statement:

The Mission helps men to help themselves. It is not a winter resort for tramps, but a lighthouse with the door open to point them to a better life. We try to make the meetings as brief and interesting as possible, with instrumental and vocal music, believing that God blesses every legitimate means used to this end.

We hold a clean, sane service. We do not seek to build up any sect or party, or boost any denomination. In short, the Mission is the church down town which reaches the boys and girls and men and women on the streets whom the churches have not access to.

The Mission has now passed through the experimental stage, and we feel that it should be given a permanent place in the city. In order to do so the directors and superintendent desire to

OUR SATURDAY SHORT STORY

LOST ON DRESS PARADE

BY O. HENRY

Illustrated With a Drawing by Dom J. Lavin, the Famous American Artist.

Mr. Towers Chandler was pressing his evening suit in his hall bedroom. One iron was heating on a small gas stove; the other was being pushed vigorously back and forth to make the desirable crease that would be seen later on extending in straight lines from Mr. Chandler's patent leather shoes to the edge of his low-cut vest. So much of the hero's toilet may be intrusted to our confidence. Our next view of him shall be as he descends the steps of his lodging-house immaculately clothed; calm, assured, handsome in appearance the typical New York young chairman setting out, slightly bored, to inaugurate the pleasures of the evening.

Chandler's honorarium was $18 per week. He was employed by an architect. He was 22; considered architecture to be truly an art; and honestly believed—though he would not have dared to admit it in New York—that the Flatiron Building was inferior in design to the great cathedral in Milan. Out of each week's earnings Chandler set aside $1. At the end of each ten weeks with the extra capital thus accumulated, he purchased one gentleman's evening from the bargain counter of stingy old Father Time. He arrayed himself in the regalia of millionaires and presidents; he took himself to the quarter where life is brightest and showiest, and there dined with taste and luxury. With ten dollars a man may, for a few hours, play the wealthy idler to perfection. The sum is ample for a well-considered meal, a bottle bearing a respectable label, commensurate tips, a smoke, cab fare and the ordinary vicissitudes.

This one delectable evening culled from each dull seventy was to Chandler a source of renaissance bliss. To the society bud comes but one debut; it stands alone sweet in her memory when her hair has whitened; but to Chandler each ten weeks brought a joy as keen, as thrilling, as new as the first had been. To sit among bon vivants under palms in the swirl of concealed music, to look upon the habits of such a paradise and to be looked upon by them—what is a girl's first dance and short-sleeved tulle compared with this?

Up Broadway Chandler moved with the vespertine dress parade. For this evening he was an exhibit as well as a gazer. For the next sixty-nine evenings he would be dining in cheviot and worsted at dubious table d'hotes, at whirlwind lunch counters, on sandwiches in his hall bedroom. He was willing to do that, for he was a true son of the great city of razzle-dazzle, and to him one evening in the limelight made up for many dark ones.

Chandler protracted his walk until the Forties began to intersect the great glittering primrose way, for the evening was yet young, and when one is of the bean monde only one day in seventy, one loves to protract the pleasure. Eyes bright, sinister, curious, admiring, provocative, alluring were bent upon him, for his garb and air proclaimed him a devotee to the hour of pleasure.

At a certain corner he came to a standstill, proposing to himself the question of turning back toward the showy and fashionable restaurant in which he usually dined on the evenings of his especial luxury. Just then a girl scudded lightly around the corner, slipped on a patch of icy snow and fell plump upon the sidewalk.

Chandler assisted her to her feet with instant and solicitous courtesy. The girl hobbled to the wall of the building, leaned against it, and thanked him demurely.

Balfour Beats War Drum; Attack on Government

Former Unionist Leader Says Country Is On the Edge of Great Events—Urges Election Before Home Rule Bill Is Passed.

Mr. Balfour recently addressed a meeting of Unionists at Haddington on Saturday, and referring to the prospects of a general election, said rumors had reached him to the effect

That the Government inclined to defer the dissolution till after the home rule bill had been placed on the statute book but before it came into operation. This, Mr. Balfour added, was wildly imprudent and grossly immoral.

If the country was to be consulted let it be before home rule became law.

Mr. Balfour referred to the outset to the prospect of the next general election, and declared that he doubted whether it would be possible for the Government to delay an appeal to the country. There was no accident and no coincidence in the endeavor of the Government to pass into law three revolutionary measures during the period of constitutional interregnum.

"Though I am not too prone to think unduly ill of my neighbors," Mr. Balfour proceeded, "it is impossible to doubt that the Government, when they abolished the House of Lords as it was, and refused to bring into being a new second chamber which was to carry out the functions which they thought the House of Lords were not strong enough, or not in other ways competent to carry out, I say when they took that line they were endeavoring to suspend the constitution for the purpose of passing these laws over the heads and against the will and the considered judgment of the people."

"A Parliamentary Device."
"It was not a step in the great movement of constitutional progress. It was a Parliamentary device for carrying through home rule and other measures in order to keep themselves in power, and in order to do against the will of the people what they knew the people had twice rejected and what they well knew the people would reject again."

"Now these ingenious political expedients are all very well, until you are brought face to face with some of those elemental political forces which the Government have now come in conflict with in Ulster."

"I do not believe that when they thought of this plan they realized what the loyal feeling in the north-east of Ireland was. They supposed—and I am afraid that many of the constituencies in England and Scotland supposed—that no doubt Ulster was Unionist, but that Ulster Unionism was not of that type which regarded connection with this country and freedom from the domination of the rest of Ireland as a matter of life and death to them. The Government are now beginning to realize that that is so.

"I am confident they know, as I know, that the deep, unmovable, settled conviction of the men of Ulster is a thing which brushes aside all these fine-spun parliamentary contrivances which looked so clever two or three years ago."

"If that be the situation—and I do not believe that anyone who knows the facts doubts that it is the situation—what are the Government going to do?"

Before Home Rule Operates.

"They may dissolve before they attempt to advise the Sovereign to pass the home rule, M.L., or they may cherish the idea that they can defer the dissolution till after the home rule bill has been placed upon the statute book, but before it comes into operation, and if all the rumors that reach me be true they have hitherto inclined to the second of these two policies."

"But is it a possible or practical policy? Is it not wildly imprudent? Is it not grossly immoral?"

"If they dissolve before the home rule bill comes into law, I do not say that they will reconcile Ulster, but they will have removed this grievance from Ulster—that they will have made it impossible to say that Ulster is the victim of a revolution on which the people of this country were never consulted."

"Can they afford to take the stern which they will have to take if Ulster is to be coerced? Unless they have behind them at least the backing which the opinion of the constituencies of this country can give them I do not believe it is possible to undertake such a responsibility. I do not see how they can face, I won't say the verdict of history, about which I dare say they are tolerably indifferent—but the immediate

BEAUTIFUL ROUMANIAN PRINCESS COOKS, SEWS, RUNS A TYPEWRITER

This novel picture shows the prince and his sister, Princess Elizabeth, oldest children of the Crown Prince and Princess of Roumania, in peasant clothes. Though they have blue blood in their veins, titles affixed to their names, heaps of serving people to wait upon them and a palace to live in, they like to dress up as poor children occasionally. Both young people love the outdoors, and have been taught to do many useful things, as well as to grace the position to which they are born. Elizabeth, who will be nineteen Sept. 29, is said to be the most beautiful princess in all Europe. She is kin to almost every royal family in Europe, too. There is nothing unusually remarkable about being beautiful, some one may say. There are plenty of girls without titles right in America who may easily lay claim to beauty, too. Surely, but in the case of the lovely Princess Elizabeth there are brains and talent to be considered, too. Besides being pretty, she can sew well, cook, bake, ride, play golf, write stories and even RUN A TYPEWRITER. It is more than likely that she is the only princess in all Europe who has this accomplishment.

Things Noted During a Day's Shopping

A visit to the fashionable shops leaves one bewildered after a contemplation of the many accessories that the present day dress calls for. Everything is there to tempt the woman who loves pretty things, and to drain her pocketbook if not her bank account. There are wide-woven girdles of silk, in plain or two-toned effects, and in lovely colors at $3.75 or $4. They are particularly charming on girlish, slim, supple figures when they are crushed up and knotted at one side with a long fringe to finish off. Chiffon enters largely into the make-up of the new autumn blouses. A beauty in white plisse chiffon has a lining of plain white chiffon, and is finished by a narrow ruffle. Oddly enough it has a high collar, as have many of the new blouses. Another blouse is of sheer black lace softly draped, having a hemstitched vest of white chiffon and undersleeves of the white chiffon attached to the lace. Motor veils have become a necessity to almost every woman and the shops show exquisite things in these little accessories. They come in lovely printed chiffons, in crepe, in two-tone effects and in shot effects. Those in plain chiffon run from $1.50 to $3.75 and the printed chiffon veils from $1 and upwards. The pastel shades in veils are lovely, but there are quantities in brilliant colors and in the grays, browns and blues. Ribbons shown are darker than any shown for some months. The wide moire ribbons are beautiful, especially those in emerald green, and in the brick red shades. Many are of embossed velvet on silk backgrounds. The latest thing in face veils is a pale lavender in color patterned with strange black figures that seem to be only on the surface of the mesh. All the newest blouses have extra long shoulder seams or no shoulder seams at all, in kimono style. For practical wear in the morning the bishop sleeve is the favorite, but for afternoon wear all the newest blouses seem to have no sleeves at all. At the waist they are made so loose and baggy that they fall over the belt in folds that seem almost untidy. They are made of very supple and pliable materials and are almost always cut round at the neck. Fine linen shirt-waists, with pleated frills edged with heavy lace, are much seen and are very smart indeed.

SPLASH—SEAL IN THE ZOO DRAWS CROWD, SWIMS ROUND, THEN BOBS UP AND STARES

[BY AUNT GERTIE.]

SPLASH! SPLASH! SPLASH!
Between the shouts of excited children and the noise caused by some animal plunging into the water I managed to learn that the attraction in the big pond at the north end of the Zoo was a SEAL!
To be more correct, I should say that several seals were the object of special interest on this special day in question.
You see, there is something so knowing and so wide-awake about seals that grown-ups and children alike find enjoyment in watching them.
First they swim, around and around, in their pond homes, staying down way under the water.
Then they come suddenly to the top; half-climb, half-crawl on to a pile of stones, and STARE with great, hungry, wide-open eyes at anyone who chances to be watching them.
Seals are not unlike pigs in one particular at least. They always seem to be hungry.
The seal's home is in the sea. The seals that bear the beautiful fur for which women pay such a high price are found up in the Arctic and Antarctic regions usually.
Women were not admitted as students in German universities until 1905.

Black and White Plush

This is a stunning model by Nor-hand, of Paris. The skirt is of white plush, which will be the most popular fabric of the winter. The blouse is of black plush, with ermine, without the tails, on collar and cuffs. No dress will be complete this winter without a touch of fur on it. So you can cut up your old fur sets into dress trimmings and be right in the mode.

SILVER WEDDING GIFTS.
Your gift to the "silver wedding bride" need not be very expensive for there are innumerable small articles to be had now which were not in general use at the time of her first wedding. There is the domino sugar holder with the glass front to protect its contents from germs; the cream cheese dish—a small round dish having a little silver spade fitted into a groove at one side; the social tea tray with the glass bottom; the birth spoons for every month in the year, the wooden salad forks and spoons with silver handles and the bottle corks decorated with odd little figures in silver.
Any articles that are silver deposited are suitable for a twenty-fifth anniversary gift. The bride of mature years will be quite certain to appreciate the beauty and utility of a triple section relish dish, the parts of which may be removed and used separately. The same bride will like a water pitcher of hand etched glass with a deep border of silver deposit; frappe cups of sterling silver deposit on very thin glass; a water carafe of silver deposit with two glasses, the smaller one fitting into the larger one; jam jars and catsup bottles and bottle holders; candlesticks with and without handles; cases of silver deposit on blue or green glass or Lenox ware foundations, and atomizers with sterling silver tops and bottles chased with deposit.

Urges Women's Unions.
The Montreal Herald of yesterday contains an interesting account of an interview by a woman writer of the Herald staff with Miss Alice Henry, delegate of the National Women's Trade Union League of America, to the Labor Congress now in session in Montreal. The article states: "Quietly gowned, and with masses of snow-white hair, Miss Henry takes her place beside a table with a few of her woman labor magazines, and when the time comes, puts in her plea for women, for the betterment of whose conditions she is expending her best energies."
Miss Henry urges the organization in Canada of a union along similar lines to the one she represents. She is a firm believer in the solidarity of the working woman, and states that if organized into unions they would be strong enough to compel better sanitary conditions in factories and higher rates of pay.
Miss Henry, furthermore, is an ardent supporter of woman suffrage. "If women stopped to think, they'd see why never the vote would give us, because you can control labor conditions a great deal by electing a man who has a sincere interest in workers," she told the Herald scribe.

Miss Henry formerly lived in Melbourne, Australia, where she worked as a journalist on a daily paper for fifteen years. She is editor of the Woman and Labor Magazine.

Read what Kate Upson Clark has to say in the current number of Leslie's regarding immodest dressing:

Immodest Dressing.
"If girls and women expect to obtain happiness by wearing stockings, skirts and waists which expose as much of their bare skins as they can show without being arrested, they are going to be violently disappointed. Let them read almost any one of the great philosophers, ancient or modern, and they will find that, widely as they disagree on almost any other point, they will agree on this—that happiness is a 'by-product'—and that it seldom or never comes to those who seek directly after it, but results from working away day by day at that unattractive and commonplace thing we call duty.
"The wearing of immodest clothing leads just the other way from happiness."

White Ribbon Congress.
A women's congress of unusual size and interest will be the World's Convention, W. C. T. U., which is to be held late next month in Brooklyn, N. Y. At this congress some 2,000 women delegates from the four corners of the globe will be present, representing Egypt, Syria, China, and other eastern countries. Great Britain and many parts of Europe. It will probably be the greatest gathering of White Ribboners that ever assembled.
Among the delegates from Canada is Mrs. Gordon Wright, of this city. Dominion president, and a vice-president of the World's Union. This latter office entitles Mrs. Wright to a voice in all discussions of the congress.

Poor Bridget!
Bridget, who had administered the culinary affairs of the Morse family for many years, was sometimes torn between her devotion to her mistress and loyalty to the small son of the family.
"Bridget," said Mrs. Morse, in a tone of wonder, after an inspection of the storeroom, "where have those splendid red apples gone that the man brought yesterday—those four big ones?"
"Well, now, ma'am," said poor Bridget, "I couldn't rightly say, but I'm thinking if you were to find out where my lot of hot gingerbread is, I'd like them four red apples would be lying right on top of it, an' I'm only hopin' his little inside can stand the strain."

The Normal THE PEELING OF PEACHES.

To peel peaches arrange in wire basket and drop into kettle of boiling water and allow to stand two minutes. Lift out and plunge into pan of cold water. Plums and tomatoes may be peeled the same way. If peaches are to be canned in syrup put them at once into the sterilized jars. Fill the opening of the jar with cotton until ready to turn the syrup over them. One peach pit in each jar improves the flavor of the fruit.
In preparing to make jelly have all the necessities at hand—colander, wooden spoons, masher, measure, tumblers, sugar and cheesecloth bags. When preparing currants for jelly remove all leaves and large stems. Washed berries must be hulled or stemmed. Large fruits must be washed clean, then remove the stem and blossom end. Nearly all large fruits are better for having the skin left on. Apples and pears need not be cored, but quinces must be.

SUMMER HAIR TONIC

Parisian Sage, the Hair Renewer Is Now Sold All Over Canada.
Since its introduction into Canada, the sales of Parisian Sage have been phenomenal. This success has led to many imitations similar in name. Look out for them, they are not the genuine. See that "The Girl with the Auburn Hair" is on every package.
Parisian Sage is the quickest acting and most efficient hair tonic in the world.
It is made to conform to Dr. Sanger-bond's (of Paris) proven theory that dandruff, falling hair, baldness and scalp itch are caused by germs.
Parisian Sage kills these dandruff germs and removes all trace of dandruff in two weeks or money back; it stops falling hair and itching scalp and prevents baldness.
Remember that baldness is caused by dandruff germs, those little hard-working, persistent devils that day and night do nothing but dig into the roots of the hair and destroy its vitality.
Parisian Sage is a daintily perfumed hair dressing, not sticky or greasy, and any woman who desires luxuriant and lustrous hair can get it in two weeks by using it. Comes in large 50-cent bottles at all druggists and all drug or toilet goods counters. The R. T. Booth Co., Limited, Fort Erie, Ontario Canadian Makers.

Luigi, the Brick Cleaner, Is Heralded as a Second Caruso, But His Wife Is Sorry—She Fears "Those Fine Ladies"

[By Mary Boyle O'Reilly.]
Staff Correspondence.

Philadelphia, Sept. 2.—Luigi Gasparini, a middle-aged Italian brick cleaner, is believed to be an embryo Caruso. Speaking English with difficulty, ignorant of the art of music, his impromptu rendering of "Il Trovatore" caused Oscar Hammerstein to summon the unconscious tenor from his brick pile.

"Report to my chorusmaster," commanded the impresario. "He will fix you all right."

"Si, signor, but what about my 20 cents an hour for cleaning bricks?" demanded the thrifty singer.

"Those too quick changes, they are not good, no," explained Signora Louisa Gasparini as one who looks into the face of fear.

Anxiety and the pallor of a home-bound woman had refined her intelligence. The crowded room in which we sat was scrupulously clean. A basket of home-made cake and a straw-covered flask of chianti on the table proved the house mother's spirit of hospitality.

"Signorina, those too quick changes, they are dangerous, yes. Me, I feel it—here." One work-worn hand clenched against her breast. "We are not so poor as some. We have our health, our four children, our home and—and I fear. Why? Ah, it is hard to say. With a woman to feel is to know. My husband and me, we are of Parma—in Italy. You know that Parma, perhaps? Always from a boy my husband sing—sing—'Rusticana,' 'Il Trovatore,' 'Lucia.' Everybody know it is his joy to sing on the piazza—in the cantina—at the wedding. When he was but a young man, just himself, alone, it is not so bad, no. But after he is married, ah, then it is different. To sing is to waste one's time—to lose mooch money. I beg, but it is no good. Always Luigi goes when they ask him and—after a little—he sing—he sing—but he no work."

"Then I think, 'Patienza, what must I do to save my husband?' But I hold my peace. Pretty soon his voice is not so good. So I tell him, quiet and kind, 'Luigi, it is too mooch time make that roughness.' So he knows I say truth and he goes no more by the cantina, but comes home—home to me an' our ver small bambino. When that little one begin to walk and be nacey how his father loves him. Men are like that. Never do they play with the littlest baby until it can—notice. Then comes more bambino. After a time I see how Luigi forget himself for those small ones, working so hard, saving money, thinking out for tomorrow."

"Then we come here—to New York—looking for riches. Luigi has put in the bank one thousand lire ($200). We two, we talk together how that is ver mooch money. Pretty soon our chil-

"So I open a store. You see it. Not ver big, no. Just macaroni, cakes, oil an' like that—cheap, all for cash. The neighbors say always I have one ver good store. I laugh, but it pays the rent. So the children they go to school, every one, all four. Never will they talk dago. They are Americans. And Luigi, he have steady work cleaning the bricks. All day he can sit down in the sun and the pay is one lira the hour—how you say 20c. When it is night he come home, wash up, eat his supper. Me, I tell him about that ver small store. Sometimes he sing to me. Then we talk—talk of the children. Ah, Signorina, but we are happy—more happy even than in Italy. Sometimes my heart tell me it cannot last. Women are like that."

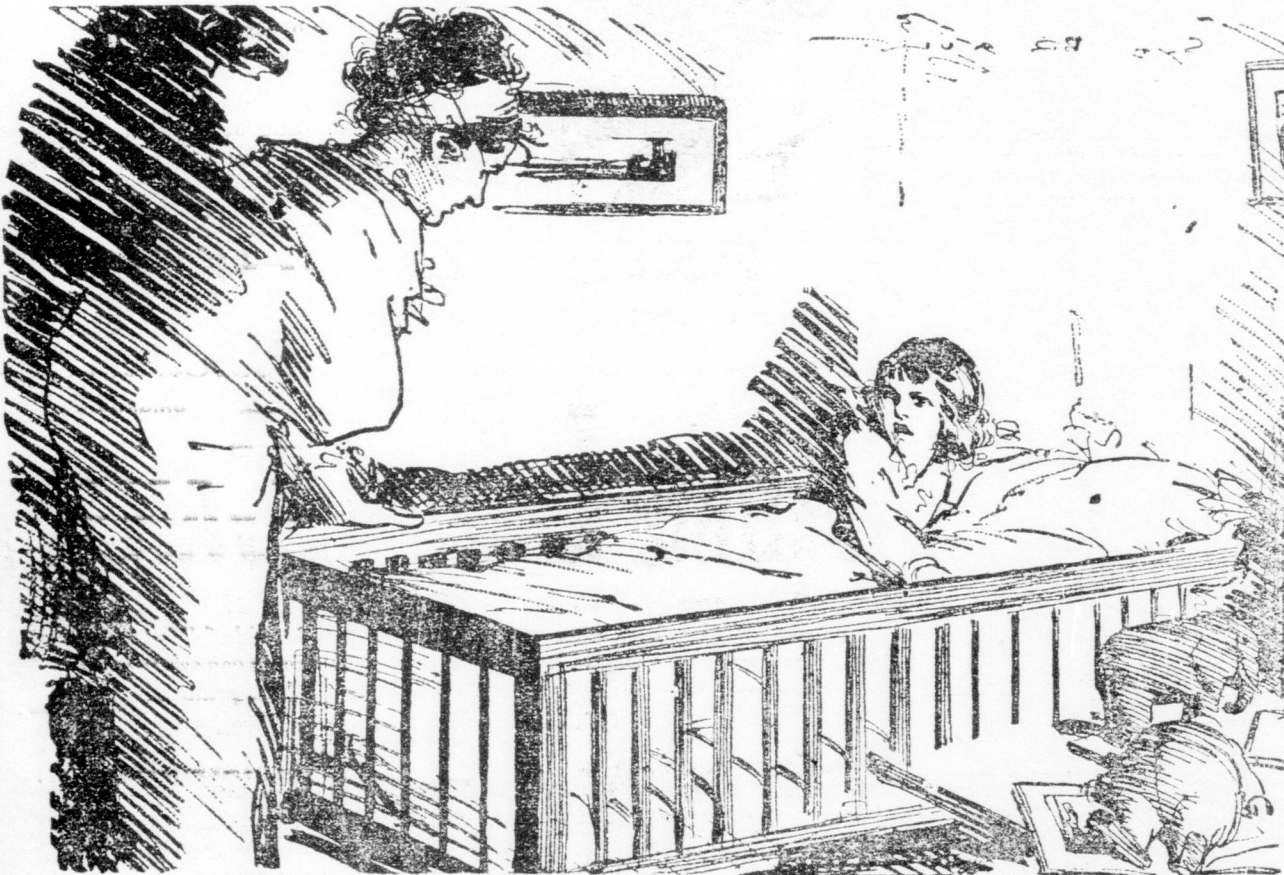

"Then—then my Luigi goes to work by the new opera house. From the first, he is different—restless. The theatre gets to love us any more?"

makes him remember how he wanted to be a singer. So he is sorry that he work for us all the years. "See, my life, it is wasted," he tell me—just like that. It is the next day that impresario heard Luigi singing. "Gasparini," the signor say, "stop work. Think for yourself. Be an artist. Pretty soon you will be rich—famous—your life will be worth living—all the world will know Luigi Gasparini—le belle donne (the fine ladies) will call 'Bravissimo' when you sing."

"And Luigi?"

"Ah, signorina, in a day he forget all those happy years. Me, the children, he no think for us the same as before. It is himself alone that counts. He no wanta work, he no care for that little shop. My heart tells me how, pretty soon, he no remember our home at all. What good for Luigi to sing in that new opera house if he is willing to leave me and the children—if he for-

Old Londoners Supplied With Excellent Music By Many City Bands

[London Correspondent New York Evening Post.]

To foreigners who have never visited it, London is pre-eminently the Dismal City. They picture it in their imaginations as a sordid mass of dull streets, in which whose inhabitants must escape from it for a season if they are to enjoy any of the innocent pleasures of life. It has nothing corresponding to the boulevards of Paris, because its climate is so horrible that no one can pass any time in comfort in the open air. Obviously, under this leaden sky and in this smoky atmosphere, people must shut themselves up to find any use for their leisure. This renunciation is, of course, part of the discipline that accounts for the more severe and un-congenial features of the British character.

One would like to try an experiment on someone who has hitherto been looking at London from afar off through the conventional foreign lane. Suppose that some evening this summer he were to be whisked away from his own home, blindfold, by aeroplane, and were to be dumped down, with the bandage off, on the Thames Embankment. He would be told that he was within a stone's throw of Charing Cross, almost in the heart of one of the busiest sections of London. He would find himself in a riverside park, laid out in attractive walks and gray with parterres of bright flowers. He would be a member of a brisk throng of nearly a thousand people, half of them sauntering cheerfully along the paths, and the other half occupying garden chairs grouped around a central bandstand, whose fairy lamps began to illuminate the scene as soon as dusk fell. The hum of street cars and the occasional rumbling of trains over Hungerford bridge would remind him that he was in the midst of a great city. But these sounds would be scarcely more than a pleasant obligation to the strains of the county council band.

The Quality of Music for a Penny. The quality of the music provided would probably surprise him. Last Wednesday evening, for instance, he would have listened to a program that began with the War March of the Priests from "Athalie," followed by Brahms' Festival Overture, Strauss' Leguener valse, and Tchaikovsky's Pathetic Symphony, after which there would be an interval of a quarter of an hour, and then another hour and a half—Elgar, German, Weber, Dvorak, etc.—to complete the evening's entertainment. For all this the only payment to be made would be one penny, the price of a copy of the printed program, carrying with it the use of a chair. Yet everyone is complaining nowadays of the cost of living!

Every evening during the summer from seven o'clock till ten, the London County Council—so often abused for being too prosaic and puritanical—offers the jaded Londoner this alleviation of his business routine. Four days in the week it provides also during the lunch hour a band concert in another part of the Embankment Gardens. Besides keeping up its own band of 116 instrumentalists, divided in three sections—one orchestral and two military—it hires a large number of other bands to give performances in the various districts of Greater London under its control.

Sixty-Five Open Spaces. There are no less than 65 parks, squares, commons, recreation grounds and other open spaces that receive a three-hour visit from one of these bands at least once a week. Not only suburban Streatham and Heston and Forest Hill, but dingy Bermondsey and Wapping and Whitechapel are represented on the list. All this is in addition to the arrangements for military band concerts almost daily in Hyde Park, St. James' Park, and other west end resorts which, being crown property, are under the administration, not of the London county council, but of a Government office.

Those who prefer a more "exclusive" recognition can pay their shilling and visit Earl's Court. Here, as also at the White City in previous years—for some reason or other this popular attraction is closed at present—the Londoner can enjoy his summer evenings not only in listening to open-air concerts in the Continental fashion, but in shooting the chute, speeding up and down the merry-go-rounds, and in tasting of less announcements of a more or less Coney Island type. One great advantage of both Earl's Court and White City over the Crystal Palace is their accessibility. Either of them can be reached from the center of London in a few minutes by underground electric railway or by motor-bus. A journey to the Crystal Palace, on the other hand, has been a matter that requires deliberation.

KAID HARRY MACLEAN, HERO OF MOROCCO, TO WED AGAIN

Scotchman Who Became Famous as Head of the Sultan's Bodyguard.

WAS HELD FOR RANSOM At Price of $200,000, But No One Would Pay It, and He Was Set Free.

The announcement of the engagement of Kaid Sir Harry Aubrey MacLean to Miss Edith Prendergast, V. C., recalls the exploits of the Scottish chieftain in the Moorish Empire. Soldier of fortune and adventurer of the best type, his career has been as spectacular as it has been glorious.

Forty years ago Harry Aubrey de Vere MacLean was an officer in Her Majesty's Sixty-ninth Regiment of Foot, poor, but with the best blood of Scotland in his veins. He was too poor to go the pace with his brother officers, so eventually he resigned his commission and went to Tangier.

He went to see the Sultan of Morocco, Moulay Hassan, a grim old warrior strong enough for himself, but worried about the succession of his heir, a puny, weak boy. There were pretenders to the throne who were waiting for the old Sultan to die to place force behind their claims. MacLean proposed himself to Moulay the United States, finally raised $55,000 to free Perdicaris. Raisuli captured other foreigners and held them, and MacLean sent word to him that he would meet him in the desert alone. MacLean went alone, but Raisuli took some of his men, and made MacLean a prisoner. The bandit demanded $200,000 for MacLean's freedom. He dropped this price several times, but no one would pay it, and after MacLean had been held prisoner for seven months he was turned free.

It was not long after this that MacLean returned to England and took a country home in Norfolk. MacLean's first wife was Miss Catherine Coe. He married her in 1882, and her social position was such that none of the European women at other Gibraltar or Tangier would consent to any social intercourse with her, in spite of her husband's influence and power. Sir Harry continued to live with her until 1905, when matters got so bad that he sued for a divorce.

Hassan as a commander and military instructor for the imperial bodyguard, who should be equipped with modern weapons. His proposal was accepted, and MacLean soon knocked his thousand fighting men into good shape. MacLean devoted himself for the next few years in putting down brigands and preserving order. Then the Sultan died, and there was an insurrection when the weak son, Moulay Abdel-Aziz, was put on the throne. MacLean put this down sharply, as he did several subsequent uprisings.

Meanwhile Raisuli and his bandits had been ravaging the northern section of Morocco, and in 1907 MacLean attempted to stop him. Raisuli had become world-famous in 1904, when he captured Don Perdicaris, a wealthy American, and held him for ransom. Morocco prodded by

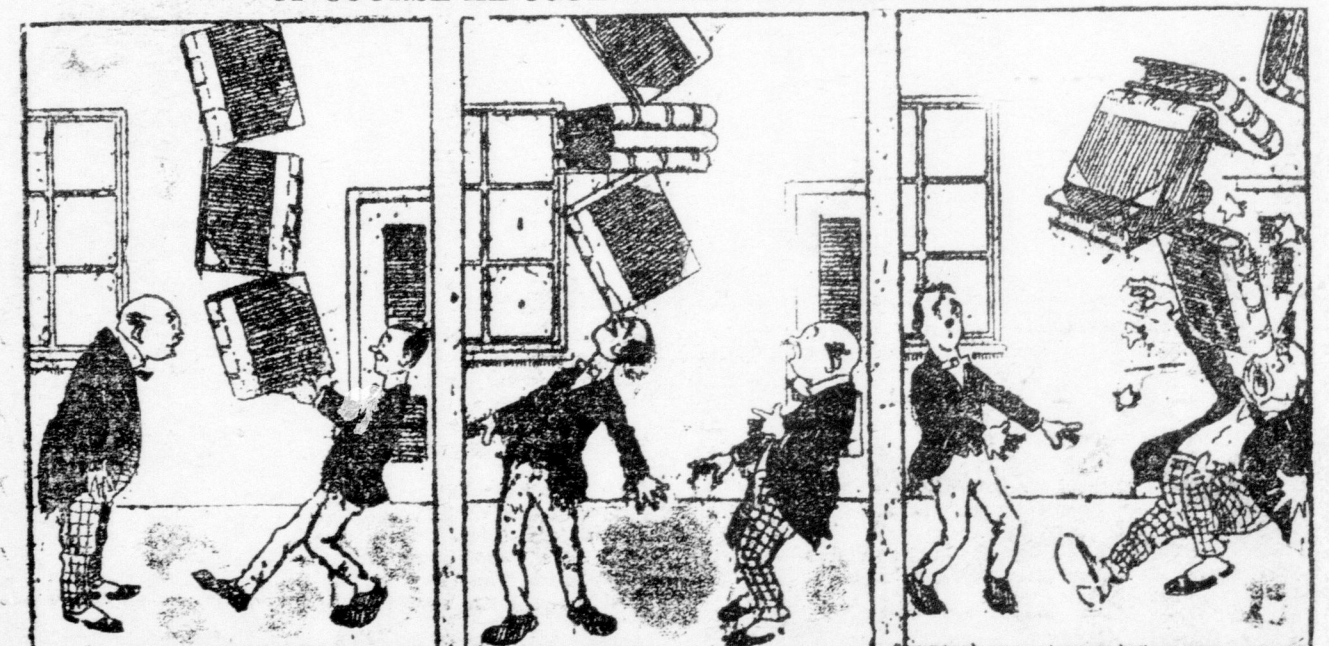

A garden patch in the town of Cariboo, Alaska. Many of the residents of Cariboo grow all their fresh vegetables during the summer months in their back yards. Root vegetables, cabbage, peas and the regular garden truck is easily grown, and of unusually pleasing quality and proportions. Also the common garden flowers. There are several farms in this portion of Alaska.

Most people are incredulous when told of the fine agricultural possibilities in Alaska, because they imagine that the country lacks sunlight.

The shortest day in Alaska is Dec. 22, when it has not more than two or three hours of sunshine. On March 22 the sun is shining 12 hours. On June 22 the Tanana Valley has from 21 to 22 hours of direct, vigorous sunshine and heat, and such crops as wheat, rye, barley, oats and potatoes are grown, matured and harvested in the four months of constant sunshine and heat.

During these months the Tanana Valley has three-fourths of the year's sunshine—has more sunshine than any point on the earth's surface south of it.

STORY OF EPPING FOREST WHERE FAIRIES DANCE AND PLAY

And People Sit Around Watching the Performance
---Tells How to See the Epping Fairies After a Pleasant Journey By Motorbus.

[By Muriel Harris, in the London News and Leader.]

In these days of enterprising municipalities it has often surprised me that the advantages of Epping Forest as a holiday resort are so little advertised. East London knows it, and parts of North London, yet to millions of metropolitans it might never have been. Yet you may find more beautiful country and as pure air in Epping as anywhere in England. It has the great advantage over Margate, say, that however many people go to it, you can get away from them whenever you want, seeing that they stray little or never from the beaten track. Last of all, it is the only place in England where you can still see fairies going about their daily business.

I know only three other places in Europe—there are, of course, none in America—where you may still meet the Little People. Two are in Ireland and one in Brittany, and each has the disadvantage that the fairy-nations who inhabit them are to the last degree shy and retiring; only to be approached with infinite precaution, and to be observed at a distance through field-glasses. With the Epping fairies it is different. Their most popular places of entertainment, so to put it, is within a hundred yards of a motorbus route, and still more curious is it to observe their absolute disregard of the crashing, rushing tornadoes that pass so very near to them. They have, again, a very decided sense of humor, of the kind that laughs at itself as well as others; those of Ireland are only impish, and frequently malicious; while the Bretons, perhaps, owing to resentment of a republican government, are moody and a shade mawkish, and horribly upon their dignity.

Follow Your Nose to Fairyland. There is no difficulty in the way of seeing the Epping Fairies. There are two routes by which to approach them from London. You may take the motorbus that goes to Epping Town—after a very pleasant journey of a couple of hours, or so—and if you want to see fairies you are probably a person with time to spare. You get down about a hundred yards after you have passed the crossroads that lead to Waltham Abbey and Loughton respectively. Then you have but to follow your nose through the trees and in less than a minute you are in Fairyland. Or you may take a tram to Waltham Cross—it will take you for miles along the route of the incredible John Gilpin past the Bell at Edmington, for instance—and you can occupy your mind in wondering at the prowess of the amazing steed that could bolt for forty miles an end without once faltering or slackening speed. If it had been a motor, now

When you get off the tram at the terminus and have looked at the Cross, which is not at all genuine, but quite sufficiently suggestive, you set out along the road that passes the gunpowder works and Waltham Abbey, and through Uppishire, a village which, while almost within shouting distance of the G. P. O., is yet one of the three most secluded in England. You follow the road down a hill with a common to your left hand, whereon are white geese and donkeys and cows, and the other appropriate incidentals to village life, and just when, if it be a warm day, you are wondering how much further you have to go, you find yourself at the bottom of a very steep hill, with straggling cottages upon your right. Go up the hill about half-way and you will find yourself at the verge of a dark wood. You will see a path, leading tentatively toward the right and upwards, just past the last cottage. Following it boldly, and before you have gone a quarter of a mile, you will be at the fairest about phitheatre, where all the most important revels are held. You cannot mistake the place, because it is set among very curious trees that have been topped or pollarded, or whatever is the arboricultural name for it, until their arms and legs and faces and bodies are more weird than even those that Mr. Rackham saw when on his way to call upon Queen Titania somewhere in Hyde Park.

The Beech With the Beautiful Soul. You will know exactly when to leave the path, because you will come to a very sturdy, stumpy tree that almost stops the way. It has an expression of determined malevolence; but that is only external; at heart it is as amiable a beech as ever lined up for the annual dance at midnight on the Eve of Saint John. Leave it on your right and go straight before you at right angles to the path for perhaps fifty yards, until you see a depression in the ground shaped like the bowl of a spoon, and with trees all around it. There you may sit down and rest, and in time you will see the fairies. A Sunday afternoon is as good a time as any for Sunday is their weekly holiday as it is ours, and they hold all their smartest pageants on Sundays. Just before dusk you may be absolutely certain of seeing them, but if you have a long way to go home and must leave earlier you need not despair. Even if you miss the pageant itself you will see all the preliminaries. The way those fairies get erecting a grand stand, for instance, for any of the court who happen to be in residence, would make some of our carpenters open their eyes and—frown.

While you are waiting you need not trouble to be quiet for fear of disturbing them. You can take a book, or a pipe, or a sweetheart, if you want to, and you can talk or laugh or sing as loudly as you wish. They will not take the slightest notice of you, whatever you do.

I was a little late last Sunday. I happened to have a sweetheart with me, and we had loitered on the way from the terminus, because he had never seen Waltham Abbey and had to be shown it and taken around to the meadows at the back and shown Harold's Bridge, which is supposed to be the oldest in England—and certainly looks it. We were both a little out of breath when at last we reached the spot, and perhaps a little irritable and it did not improve either of our tempers to find a family party there before us. There was nothing for it but to sit down in my usual stall, the outlying one, and watch the end of the amphitheatre—and wait until it should please the family to go away—which to all appearances might not be for hours. I was just about giving up in despair, when about ten minutes, when to my surprise a little procession of working fairies came into their amphitheatre by their usual entrance—a rabbit-hole under a tree just across the road from the stand. They did not take the slightest notice of the family and neither did the family of them, and though one of the children, the one who most needed a handkerchief, was staring straight in their direction, when all was ready in the Royal Procession came in and took their seats, and there began one of the most wonderful spectacles of your life. It was the pageant of the Epping Hunt.

The Fairy Pageant. The Epping Hunt, as everyone knows, was a historic one of the kind that has been going on for centuries, whereat the Lord Mayor of London hunted the deer with at least as much state and perhaps more magnificence than did the King himself in Windsor Forest. It was really a very serious and stately event, but apparently the fairies thought otherwise, and they burlesqued it most imitatively, so that the King, Charles XII., the Queen, and the Queen actually had to be slapped on the back—very gently, though—by one of her ladies-in-waiting. The Lord Mayor, of course, was a fairy, if rather on the stout side, and dressed in the most wonderful robes correct in every detail, even to the monogram on his pocket-handkerchief, though he could have been more than three inches high, horse and all—was continually tumbling off on one side and being helped on and tumbling off again on the other. So were all the aldermen—and the common councilors and the verderers and the yeoman pricklers—and even some of the ladies. I am sorry to say. And the end of it all was that the stag, who had been as much amused as anyone—except, perhaps, some of the hounds, who positively had to sit down on the ground and lol their tongues out for a good sixty-fourth of an inch before they could recover themselves—the stag, I say, put an end to it all by suddenly leaping on to the top of a stone jar, which had arrived with the family, and standing there, on the little neck that runs round the place where the cork ought to be, only the cork had been thrown away a long time before as of no further use, and looking down scornfully at the baffled efforts of the hounds and horses and aldermen to climb up the smooth sides of the jar after him.

That idea brings me to a very remarkable characteristic of these Epping Fairies. They have actually made themselves masters of the Fourth Dimension, and treat it as though it were a mere commonplace. When they wished it, for instance, a young family was not there. They galloped right through it, over and over again, and it was a very odd sight, indeed, to see the Lord Mayor on his chestnut steed dash straight through the old lady's black velvet doorman and go right through it, as though it were a tunnel and come out on the other side, followed by all his suite, without turning a hair. So it was with the stone jar; for part of the pageant it simply wasn't there; you rode through it and ran through it, and one alderman even fell off in the very middle of it, so to speak, and was lifted back into his saddle by four attendants. But as soon as it became necessary as a stage property there it was; the stag leaped to the top of it and the hounds tried to scramble up the slippery sides, and it was as solid as Snowdon and proportionately about as big.

It was the same thing with the fairies themselves, though contrariwise; they can let you see them or not, I mean, just as they feel inclined. I saw them easily enough and so did my friend—though he was a little ashamed to admit it at first, being employed in a bank—but not so the family. The family, indeed, got very angry with us at last, especially the father, because we were talking and laughing and pointing out things to each other, and he thought we were making fun of his family. I expect it must have seemed rather like it to them. He got up to argue the point, and as he did so I saw his great boot come down plump upon the Lady Mayoress—a very pretty woman, and quite as fair as the almost screaming before I remembered, but it did no harm—she just rode on through the foot as though it were not there, so I suppose it was not.

There are a great many other interesting and beautiful spots and sights in Epping Forest, and there may, of course, be other fairy amphitheatres, though I have not yet discovered them. At any rate, I know that if you have read as far as this you must be the sort of person whom the fairies would be quite willing should see them, and if you do it will only cost you a little more than going to a picture show. And if you take my advice, you will go by way of Waltham Abbey.

SCARING OFF WILLIE.

"Willie," said the waitress, cheerfully. "I have been thinking."

"Thinking of me, my precious?" asked Willie.

"In a way, yes," replied Gladys. "I have been thinking that, were you to marry me, everyone would say you only did it for the sake of my money."

But Willie was not abashed one whit.

"What care I for the base, unthinking world?" said he, gallantly, adjusting his immaculate gloves.

"Still, Willie, nothing shall part us. I will marry you or no one."

"My own Gladys?"

"And I will not have people saying unkind things about you, so I am disposing of my fortune to the missionaries. Why, dearest, why are you going?"

Willie looked back through the half-open door.

"I'm going to be a missionary," he replied.

SCORING OVER THE INTERRUPTER. A certain politician has the happy knack of being able to parry inconvenient interruptions with some smart retort that instantly squashes the opposition. He was speaking at a rather noisy meeting not long ago, and after a short time a big lump of wood was thrown at him. Fortunately the aim was bad, and it fell harmlessly on the platform.

"The speaker picked it up and showed it to the audience."

"Good heavens!" he exclaimed in tones of mock anxiety, "one of our opponents has lost his head!"

At a hotel hairdresser's, you know, I had just completed the operation of submitting to a shave, old chap, when it occurred to me that I might be manured. Brilliant idea; what? On confiding my desire to the chief barber, he introduced me to the young lady manicurist as follows: "Kick in, mister, and hang out your grappling hooks. This little Jane is the finest fin-vanisher in the burg, and she'll polish your claws till they look like church windows. Minnie, grab your old orange wood digger and primp the gent's card-trick apparatus. Hoist your mauleys, mister." My word!

VARICOSE VEINS CURED

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT. Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was not working so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Dr. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and reliable. I wrote them and got Free New Mexico Treatment. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $12 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $24 and never lose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment."

"ORANGE LILY SAVED MY LIFE"

These words or expressions having the same meaning are contained in hundreds of the letters I have received during the past year. Many were from women who had suffered agonies from falling of womb; others from women who had escaped dangerous surgical operations, as the tumors and ulcers had been removed by the action of Orange Lily; and others who had suffered from suppressed menstruation, leucorrhoea, painful periods, etc. For all these and the other troubles known in general as Women's Disorders, Orange Lily furnishes a positive, scientific, never-failing cure. It is applied direct to the suffering organs, and its operation is certain and beneficial.

As a trial offer, I prove its merit. I hereby offer to send, absolutely free, a box sufficient for ten days' treatment, to every suffering woman who will write for it. Enclose 2 stamps. MRS. FRANCES E. GURHAM, Windsor, Ont.

BOTH CURIOUS.

"Women's curiosity," said Mr. Gammer, "is a quality of mind beyond all human understanding."

"Yes," said Mrs. Gammer. "What made you think of that?"

"The actions of a woman I saw in the town today," answered Mr. Gammer. "She followed a man nearly half a mile just to read a placard that was fastened on his back. She spotted him in King street. That was really the end of the trip. I feel sure, from something she said to another woman, who was too fat to join in the chase. But when she caught sight of the blue poster tied to his back her curiosity got the better of her and she set out after him."

"He led her quite a chase along Manchester road, down Axon street, and through Chestnut Square, but she never weakened. She faithfully followed him, and finally got close enough to read the poster."

Mrs. Gammer reflected a moment. "What did it say?" she asked.

"It advised her to get her teeth pulled somewhere along Nelson street."

Mrs. Gammer thought again. "Where were you all the time she was trying to find that out?"

"Me?" said Gammer. "Oh, I was following the woman. I wanted to see if she finally caught up with the man."

Among the grass roots, soft and green, Once roamed a mottled Mantis lean, In search of things to eat. He never in his life had prayed Nor ever been the least afraid While hunting for his meat.

But one fine day there, happened this— There came to break in on his bliss A bold, bad highway bug. The Mantis paled and would have fled But knew he could not keep ahead Of such a fearsome thug.

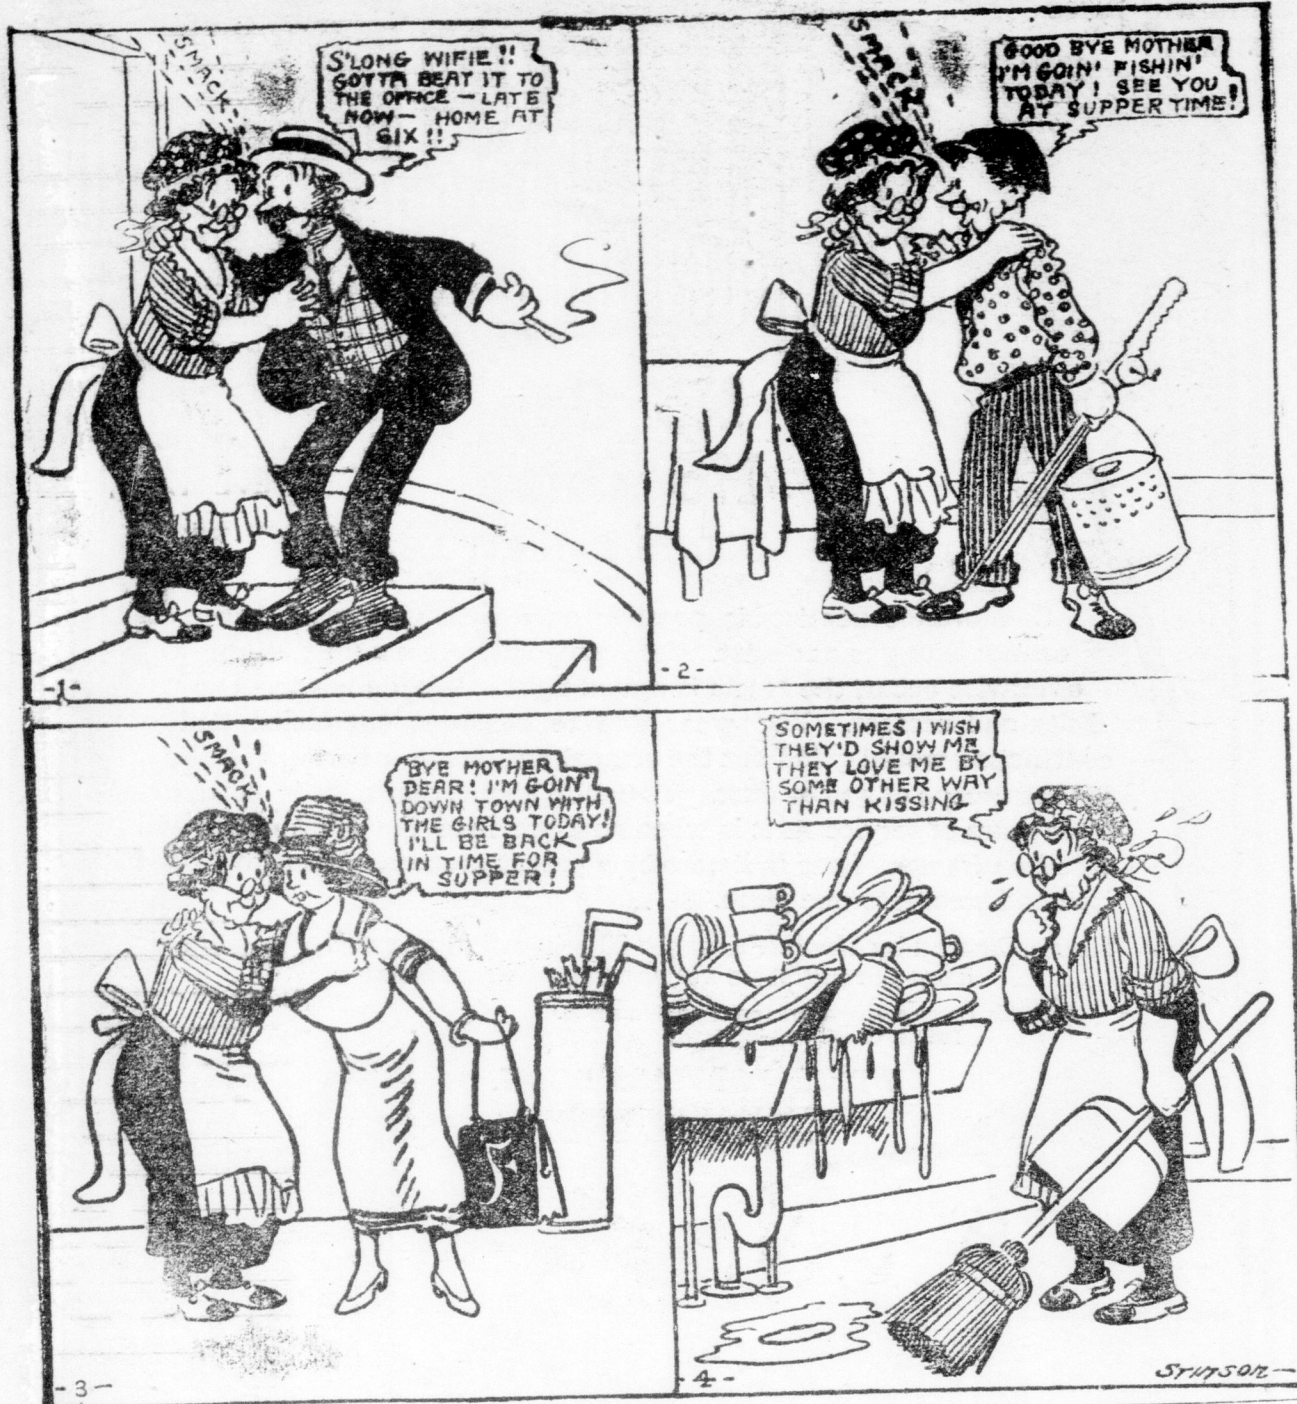

He begged the thief to let him go But robbers never do, you know. "If they get their spoils, The Mantis racked his brain in vain For some sly scheme to save the gain Of his long years of toil.

It came to him he heard folk say That praying sometimes saved the day. When everything seemed lost, In fact 'twas quite a common tale How praying saved a nightingale From death by winter frost.

So down he went upon his knees And prayed with him beneath the trees For safety from the thief. And sure enough an answer came That made the thug forget his game And howl with awful grief.

A toad with sly and slinking ways Had crept up close to end the days Of this bad highway thief. And thus the Praying Mantis learned When badly scared or much concerned To pray for quick relief.

Reminiscences of Hon. Alexander Mackenzie
One of the Purest of Public Servants

Veteran Pressman Writes Admiringly of the Former Premier—A Great Parliamentarian and an Honest Man—His Fine Character.

In his highly interesting and instructive series of articles in the Westminster, under the title, "Thirty Years in the Parliamentary Press Gallery," Mr. William Mackenzie writes: "Mr. Gladstone said that 'honor and character are the essence of this standard of Commons.' Mackenzie was the greatest Commons of his day. In his speech, proposing amnesty to those who took part in the Northwest Rebellion, he said that the affairs of the country should be consistently carried on with those 'principles of honor and national character which bind every administration no matter what they may be composed.' In a private letter to a member of his own party, who expressed dissatisfaction over patronage distribution and certain political acts of the administration, Mr. Mackenzie replied that he might be lacking 'in political wisdom, but never in moral rectitude.' These principles were closely adhered to, no matter whether it was in the heat of debate in the Commons, on the public platform, or engaged in the conduct of public business in his office in the Eastern Block. 'I am not lacking in courage, but I never yet had the courage to misrepresent any man,' was one of the thrusts he drove home to a certain member who was giving a garbled quotation from one of his speeches.

It is a matter of history that Mackenzie refused to see contractors who were tendering—or applicants for public contracts, although he was minister of public works. He regarded this to be a pure matter of administration coming entirely within the scope of the officers and engineers of the department. And he pursued this policy, notwithstanding that he worked laboriously over plans, specifications and reports, and was consequently conversant with the minutest details of all public works. When the contract was let he was ready and willing to hear and adjudicate any disagreement or difficulty that might arise between his officers and the contractors. At one time he was acting minister of marine, in the absence of the minister. A contractor, who was not interested in politics, was asked by the officers to carry out the work in a certain way that would greatly inconvenience him and would not be of the slightest public advantage. This contractor laid his case personally before Mackenzie, and asked if he would have to make the suggested changes. 'You are to do nothing of the kind; do it according to established precedent, as it is the best way to carry out a work of the kind,' said the Premier, in his usual emphatic way, which to those not acquainted with him might have seemed abruptness. Asked for this in writing, he handed it at once to the contractor, and that was the end of it. 'Such was the way Mackenzie did business,' said the contractor to the writer many years afterwards.

It was difficult to find work in those days, and a delegation waited upon him, asking for employment. After explaining the correct relations that existed between the Government and the people in this regard, he gave his private check for fifty dollars to meet their immediate necessities. Mr. Mackenzie never forgot that he came from the ranks of labor, although it was not his habit to appeal for support on that account. He was scrupulous about giving full and accurate returns for his labor in building stone walls as he was in after years on guard over the treasury. As a stonemason he was engaged on the construction of a section of the St. Lawrence canal. He refused to carry out a piece of work in accordance with the instructions of the Government engineer, because he regarded it as the wrong way to do it, and got his dismissal. Yet he had a high opinion of the engineer and the incident never interfered with their good relations when he became prime minister and head of the department. To newspapermen he was always courteous, if not very informative. A certain political rumor was published in an Opposition paper and one of the editors called on Mackenzie to ask for a reply. 'You just manufacture the explanation as you did the original item,' was the prompt, but somewhat curt answer. To the newspapers on his own side he was kind and courteous. The Globe and the Browns were ever at his back giving him a most unselfish support. There was always a section of the party that leaned more to Blake than to Mackenzie. 'The Liberal' newspaper, which had a somewhat short-lived career in Toronto, represented these. The late T. J. Richardson, one of the best shorthand writers and reporters that Canada ever had, said that Mackenzie was the only man in Parliament who could stand verbatim reports and do so. In fact, he had generally a good word for the newspapermen.

Three times he refused knighthood, believing that such titles were not in accord with the existing democracy in Canada. Lord Lorne made an earnest appeal to him to reconsider his decision, but it was fruitless. He had no narrow views upon the subject, as was shown by his recommending others for honors. About small things, which might be construed as affecting his personal honor, he was needlessly sensitive. Some of his colleagues and others attended a small party he and Mrs. Mackenzie gave in honor of the 25th anniversary of their marriage. Some of the guests brought small gifts and he was extremely annoyed. Indeed, his feelings reached such a point that he returned them the next day, stating that they made him miserable as long as they were in the house.

The fine character of the man and the stern adherence to principle, even at the expense of his own health, were well exemplified during the session of 1898. He was forbidden by his medical adviser to attend evening sittings of the House, but a question was then under discussion upon which he was exceedingly desirous to vote. The act of the Quebec Legislature for the settlement of the Jesuit estates provoked animated discussion in and outside Parliament and caused a great deal of religious and race discord, particularly in Ontario. There was a movement to supply advice, the Dominion Government to disallow the act. Mr. Mackenzie felt keenly the suggested interference with a province in a matter which was wholly within its own jurisdiction, a course, which, if pursued, would be destructive to the autonomous rights of the provinces. Consequently he wanted to show his resentment by vote since the his physically deprived of speech. The division was expected to be reached before midnight, and he quietly informed his staunch friend, Jim Trow, the chief Liberal whip, to call for him should the House divide before midnight. It was two o'clock when the division bell rang, and at that early hour in a cold, misty morning of March the old political-warrior, fragile in frame, and feeble in health, but with a distinct gleam of satisfaction on his countenance, entered the chamber on the arm of Mr. Trow, and received such a whole-hearted and non-partisan cheer that those who heard and witnessed can never forget. On being congratulated afterwards he merely added that he voted then as he did in the Letellier case, in favor of provincial rights.

I have seen Mackenzie full of fight and victory at the very best of Parliament; I have seen him putting forth his strongest efforts in the political field for a friend whom he knew well was to go down to defeat on election day. I have seen him when his whole party was almost annihilated by the votes of the people, and on the morning, undisturbed, though disappointed, he was nailing his colors to the masthead as if nothing had happened. I heard him coolly and quietly present to Parliament, instead of the party caucus, one early hour in the morning in 1890 his resignation, and the policy he has espoused, despite its non-acceptance by the people, with a determination and firmness of character and purpose born of conviction. I have seen him vainly trying to find speech to reply to his old-time antagonists, when, with only a word or so forthcoming, the House would, with one accord, applaud; I saw him in 1891, too ill to enter his constituency, where voters' lists were loaded up against him, and his chances of election almost hopeless; and I listened to his last words in Parliament, during the session of 1891, when, on occasion did I see him to better advantage than when he cast his vote, on the morning of the 29th of March, 1891, against interference with the legislature of the province of Quebec in respect to what he regarded as a purely provincial affair.

Mackenzie was greatly troubled because of his proposition to use the 'water stretches' of the Great Lakes in connection with the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway. When Sir Charles Tupper was making his announcement in Parliament in 1891, the company was going to put up a line of steamers on the lakes between Collingwood and Port Arthur, Mackenzie, from his seat, interjected with the words, Maddox—My wife didn't hear me coming in last night.

Paddox—I'll have to get some of those rubber soles, too.

'Water stretches.' It was as if an electric spark had struck the House, so speedily and spontaneously came the applause from both sides. Sir Charles diverted and paid a high eulogy to the one man in the Liberal party who had, he said, a policy, although Sir Charles did not agree with it, for the construction of the C. P. R., and who adhered to it, and the utilization of the 'water stretches,' now approved by the Government and the C. P. R., was part of that policy. Tupper never did anything by halves. He was as magnanimous as he was sometimes severe in his criticism.

In 1891 the Government representative at Paris was under fire in the Commons on a charge of drawing a big salary and doing nothing for it. This statement, no such appointment ever being intended, ever asked, or suggested, was the final and conclusive reply, which one would have imagined could have been given in the first instance. But such was his way. Two complaints, and two only, was he known to make. The one was against himself, the other against those whom he had either been a friend to or treated generously. He blamed himself for not having the general elections in June instead of September, 1891, although it is well known that he was pressed by a large number of his followers to take the course he did. Those who regard Mackenzie as being unending and determined to have his own way ought to be able first to make a distinction between what he considered 'principle or honor' and national character' and the procedure to be followed in any particular case. He yielded to the Maritime Provinces against any increase in the tariff to meet the financial stringency, and again to please some of the Quebec leaders, he postponed the date of the general elections from June to September. He thought at the time he was making a mistake in not determining upon June, and in after years he regarded it as a little short of a blunder. In fact he was of the opinion that if June had been selected the result

THE JUSTICE'S JOKE.

While Chief Justice Sir William Meredith was lately hearing a case he was disturbed by a young man who kept moving about in the rear of the room.

'Young man,' called out the Chief Justice, 'you are making a great deal of unnecessary noise. What are you about?'

'Your Honor,' replied the young man, 'I have lost my overcoat and I am trying to find it.'

'Well,' said the venerable Justice, 'people often lose whole suits in here without making all that disturbance.'

'I could never consent,' he said, 'to the Zollverein policy, for obvious reasons; light cannot conceive why anyone should object to reciprocal free trade secured by treaty, and not inimical to the interests of Great Britain as the heart of the empire. The utter failure of the National Policy and the enormous increase in the national debt are reasons why the present administration should not be supported any longer. Thousands of Reform votes were lost in the general election in 1897 because they thought I was wrong in my free trade policy. No doubt they acted conscientiously. Surely it is not asking too much that those should fall into line again, and carry with them a large number of hitherto Conservative votes.'

In Parliament he generally replied to Sir Charles Tupper, and loved to cross swords with Sir John. In reply to Tupper he frequently assumed a scolding tone, such as 'the honorable gentleman ought to be ashamed,' or the honorable gentleman was guilty of 'gross misrepresentation.' Answering Sir John he struck a sort of bantering attitude to begin with, but ended with all the hard hitting at his command. These differences were entirely political, for they were good personal friends.

One day Sir John asked if it were correct that a certain member of Parliament was to be appointed postmaster at Port Hope. 'I never heard of it,' replied Mackenzie. 'That's a Jesuitical answer,' retorted Sir John. 'Order,' snapped Mackenzie. 'I did not say it was wrong to give a Jesuitical answer,' replied Sir John. 'What did he mean,' said Mackenzie. 'I asked a question and the hon. member said he never heard of it.' 'How is that Jesuitical inquired Mackenzie. 'The hon. gentleman might have asked the Minister of Justice to give an answer,' suggested Sir John. 'I suppose he would have been able to answer it; but I will merely say that there is no truth in the statement, no such appointment ever being intended, ever asked, or suggested, was the final and conclusive reply, which one would have imagined could have been given in the first instance. But such was his way.

Two complaints, and two only, was he known to make. The one was against himself, the other against those whom he had either been a friend to or treated generously. He blamed himself for not having the general elections in June instead of September, 1891, although it is well known that he was pressed by a large number of his followers to take the course he did. Those who regard Mackenzie as being unending and determined to have his own way ought to be able first to make a distinction between what he considered 'principle or honor' and national character' and the procedure to be followed in any particular case. He yielded to the Maritime Provinces against any increase in the tariff to meet the financial stringency, and again to please some of the Quebec leaders, he postponed the date of the general elections from June to September. He thought at the time he was making a mistake in not determining upon June, and in after years he regarded it as a little short of a blunder. In fact he was of the opinion that if June had been selected the result would have been otherwise.

The other complaint was against certain members of the civil service. Sir Richard Cartwright in his Reminiscences deals with this matter. He says, 'We very soon found that we lived in a glass hive. Hardly a question could be discussed in council, and certainly no resolution arrived at, which was not known at once to our opponents. Nay, it was quite a common case for us to find that measures, which had not even been submitted to council were known to our enemies long before they were considered by the majority of the cabinet. The fact was that not only all the higher offices in the civil service, but practically all the subordinate places were filled with more or less zealous partisans of our opponents.' Cartwright and some of the other ministers wanted to replace some of those by men that they could trust, but Mackenzie would not consent to what he regarded as an introduction of the spoils system. It was not until his defeat, when he witnessed the demonstrations which greeted the turn of the victorious party, that he fully realized his surroundings. But while he felt keenly over those matters, and he frequently made mention of them, those who knew the man best would not believe that he could have acted otherwise should the opportunity have been given him to do so. Speaking in the House of Commons when Prime Minister, he said: 'No person has ever been dismissed by the present Government except for causes that rendered their continuance in office detrimental to the public interest. I would sooner resign office tomorrow than dismiss a man from the public service because of his political opinions.'

Sir Richard was the chief target for attack by the Opposition in the Mackenzie Government, and Liberals for a had no aristocratic Tory leanings, a man who was supposed to have joined their party because of a disagreement with his old chief on a question of political preferment. It was not until Cartwright was in opposition that he secured the united support of the party, and gained recognition as the greatest parliamentarian in Canada. His devotion to Mackenzie, from the first day he served under him until he breathed his last, was particularly marked and never wavered. As a testimony of his loyalty and devotion Sir Richard dedicated his 'Reminiscences' to 'the memory of Alexander Mackenzie.' In that widely-read book he says of his premiership: 'I am aware that justice has never been done him (Mackenzie) in respect to the difficulties with which he had to struggle.'

A SAFE TONIC FOR MOTHERS

WHO DO NOT RECOVER THEIR STRENGTH AS THEY SHOULD.

Every mother who fails to regain her health and strength after confinement needs a tonic. The years of weakness and suffering which so often follow are unnecessary and easily avoided. The fact that her strength does not return is a certain indication that her blood supply has been overtaxed and is impoverished. This condition is often met with when the mother takes up her household duties while she is still weak; when a complete breakdown results. The strength a weak mother needs can be quickly found in the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These Pills increase and enrich the blood supply, and thus bring health and strength to the exhausted system. Mrs. Robert Little says: 'I have nursed for upwards of twenty-five years, and I could relate many cases relieved and cured, through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In maternity cases, which I nurse, I always use them, and I know of no other medicine that so speedily builds up the mother at this critical time. I have also found them of great value in the case of young girls, and I can add that as for myself, they have saved me many a doctor's bill. I feel safe in saying they are the best tonic medicine I know of.'

Nursing mothers will find Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will give her just the strength she needs, and they will at the same time aid in keeping her child healthy. If you do not find these Pills at your dealer's, they will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont.

ALBERT SOAPS LTD., Mfrs. MONTREAL

NORMAN'S Stage Letter.

(Special Correspondence.)
For fifty cents a week, Mr. Small Salary and his wife may next winter hear all the famous operas, sung in one of the finest opera houses in the world, by artists second only to those of the Metropolitan and a few European houses.

Mr. Small salary may reserve his seats at the beginning of the season by paying half the season's total in advance. For 25-cents seats, this will be $12.50, as there are to be eighteen weeks. He will pay the other half Jan. 14. His weekly seats will be his own, sacred, private property, just as much as are Mr. Large Income's two-in-the-able down at the Metropolitan, at $12 per evening.

All this because several public-spirited members of the City Club, a civic welfare organization, decided a year ago that New York ought to have grand opera at prices within the reach of the masses. A conference was had with the big men of the Metropolitan Opera House. They offered their co-operation. The Metropolitan seats will be $3 down to $1.50 and the demand for the limited number of $1 and $1.50 seats has for many seasons far exceeded the supply.

So the Metropolitan directors were for popular-priced opera, figuring that it would little more than take care of their overflow. A company was formed, with a directorate composed of several of New York's richest and most influential men. Otto H. Kahn, head of the Metropolitan board, is one of them. They are going to finance grand opera at 25 cents to $2 a seat.

The spacious and magnificent new theatre, known as the Century during its past two years tenancy by the Liebers, was leased, and is now the Century Opera House. Milton and Sargent Aborn, long known as successful producers of popular-priced grand opera, in English, were engaged as managing directors.

Milton Aborn has spent the summer in Europe signing up singers. Not that the Century's artists are to be all foreigners. More than three-fourths of the people engaged are American-born, but most of them were in Europe, where American opera singers find the going much better than at home.

Miserable Plight of Students of Moscow Steeped in Poverty

200. Cuddled Together in the Latin Quarter, but Gloomy Garrets Have Produced Genius—Men Who Have Won Through.

Jean D'Auvergne draws a remarkable picture of what she calls "the cemetery of youth"—the Latin Quarter of the City of Moscow.

"To the average mind the mention of the Quarter Latin conjures up visions of Paris, with cheap dinners and smiling boulevards," she writes in the Morning Post.

"And yet the Latin Quarter has come to mean much more than this. It is cosmopolitan and common to all cities where there is a centre of art. It is not confined to Latin races or to Paris, for in its function as the cemetery of youth destined and ruined hopes it is Latin, Slav, American, and even Anglo-Saxon.

Poverty of the Students.

"In Moscow one sees this Latin or Artists' Quarter in its poorest, most degenerate form. As the chief artistic and educational centre of Russia, Moscow is the home of some twenty thousand students and artists, all drawn from different classes, but all united by the common bond of poverty; and the poverty is almost indescribable and unbelievable. The quarter of the ancient city of churches which houses these twenty thousand bears a certain resemblance to its Parisian counterpart.

"In Moscow, however, there is none of the warm comfort of Paris.

The streets are narrow, badly built, and uninviting, and the gilded cupolas of the churches only serve to accentuate the poverty of the surrounding blocks of hideous red brick. It is well to insist on this poverty of the Russian intellectual, for no man is more earnest or more self-sacrificing than the Russian student in his desire for education. Much has been written about the poverty of the French Bohemian, but his Russian brother is in a far worse plight. Among the students the average income cannot be higher than thirty roubles a month ($15), and many, indeed, have even less than this modest sum. And if, later on, success should come, it is generally won at the expense of all health and happiness. Then, too, there is no liberty of speech, no freedom of conscience, and the would-be pamphleteer or budding politician—every Russian is at heart a politician—lives in perpetual fear of police intervention, with its inevitable term of exile in Siberia. Education is cheap, and the generosity of the richer intelligentsia ekes out the modest budget of the future genius, but life on ten roubles a month is a horror that cannot fail to appeal to the weakest imagination. "In addition to the burden of poverty the Russian intellectual has to face the hardships of a severe climate—that climate which has already vanquished an army, and which more than anything else, perhaps, accounts for the pessimistic state of the Russian soul. In summer the heat and dust of a badly built city banish sleep. In winter the student goes afield in the threadbare uniform, bereft even of a sheepskin of the peasant. A small room shared with two companions, one meal a day at a low eating-house, numerous cups of weak tea, a complicated system of borrowing and sharing books and clothes, and a chastened pride which sanctions the most menial of tasks and even begging, alone make existence possible for the student of small means. For amusement there is the affection of some woman student as destitute and as miserable as himself. And, to add to the irony of it all, Moscow is the most expensive city in Europe, and the rouble, which is equal to 2s. 1d., goes no further than tenpence.

"One has only to stroll through the 'Malaya Bronnaya' on a winter's night to see the whole picture in all its nakedness. The miserable eating-houses, cheaper and even dirtier than those frequented by the drozdky drivers, are crowded with ill-clad, half-starved students who, but for their long-flowing locks and pale, high foreheads, might easily be mistaken for an army of beggars. The light of a dim gas lamp falls on the white face of a girl hastening to a lover's rendezvous. She has need of books. The room she shares with her artist friend will save her three roubles a month, and for three roubles one can buy the collected works of Gogol. All night long the street is full of phantom shadows; revellers returning home, drunken women and shouting men, and here and there a shivering student huddling himself from the cold and waiting like a vulture for some richer friend who will defray him the expense of a meal or offer him a resting-place at the foot of his couch.

"It is not a pleasant picture, but it helps to explain to the unknowing foreigner the decadence and moribidity of modern Russian literature. If education is cheap, it is dearly bought, and life such as this has little to offer in the way of compensation. It is unnatural, then, that amongst this class there should be despair, that suicide should be a fashion and self-salo a natural means of existence, that religion should be anathematized and virtue turned topsy-turvy? But if there is vice, there is courage as well.

Genius Out of Poverty.

"This home of impoverished intellectuals has given birth to a whole army of painters, poets, actors, singers, writers—great artists both in their productions and their lives. These are the men whose work, in spite of the stupendous difficulties of its completion, is the glory of Russian art, and has, indeed, given Russia a place of honor among the nations. It is not only the fact that they have succeeded that commands attention, but rather that they have succeeded where most men would have failed.

"This gloomy garret was the modest shelter of a poet. Here he grew the roots that gave him his daily bread while he was waiting for the chance in literature that was to bring him fame. In this poor tenement Dostoevsky suffered all the pangs of hunger. Here, too, behind bolted doors, Herzen preached his gospel of Socialism to willing hearers, until the police drove him into exile.

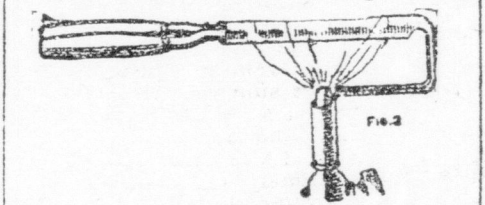

Men Who Have Won Through.

"Naturally enough it was the writers who suffered most, and for one who succeeded there were ten who went to the ground. When one looks at the list of Russian authors from Pushkin down to Balzac, there is hardly one who has come through the long struggle scatheless. In the early years of his life Andreff attempted suicide. Tolstoy fought with consumption and conquered nobly in the fight. Dostoevsky, Korolenko, Chernyshevsky, knew all the horrors of Siberia, and the handsome Garshin, the model of painters and the favorite of the Moscow women, ended his own life in a fit of depression.

"When all is said and done, the success of these men in adversity is proof positive of the vitality of the Russian race. Their work, even if one does not consider the limitations which have been imposed upon it, is a magnificent achievement, and the wonder is, not that Russia should have produced so little, but that she should have given so much that belongs to the very highest in art."

HANDY HEATER FOR CURLING IRON

There are few devices for heating curling irons over a gas jet that compare with this one that can be made at home out of metal tubing. The tubing should be made of a size that will fit the curling iron and the gas jet. It is cut out in the centre, one end being left to fit over the jet and the cut out part bent so that the other end, left whole for the curling iron, comes over the flame. By using a device like this there is no danger of getting soot on the iron and the heating is done very quickly.

A SAFE BET.

The colonel remonstrated with his subaltern time after time, but all in vain. The latter was a born, incurable gambler. One day, however, just about the time when he was transferred, his old colonel met the new one and gave the latter a word of warning. Only two days after he had joined his new regiment the young officer accused his new colonel of suffering from corns.

"My dear young fellow, I've never had a corn in my life."

"I'll bet you five dollars you've got one on each foot now."

"Done," said the colonel, and he took off his boots. No corns could be found, and the colonel got his money.

Just when the two colonels met he found that his old commander was told of all that had happened.

"Good heavens!" cried the old war-dog. "And he bet me ten pounds he'd have your feet bare before he had been in your regiment a week."

A Great Indian Ruler

Sir John Hewett Retires After 35 Years' Service—One of the Ablest English Governors Ever in Office.

Mr. Begbie's second article concerns Sir John Hewett, governor of the United Provinces, who has just retired after 35 years' service in India. "As unobtrusively as the bagman goes home to his carpet slippers and warming at the fire, the great Britain who has been a king in the east, returns to the blurred and nigard insignificance of private life in England," says Mr. Begbie.

"His high-sounding title drops from him; no sentry stands guard at his gate; no gorgeous private train waits for him at the railway station; no obedient aides-de-camp jingle spurs and warm his heels; no ministers of state announce his decrees to crowded council; no mighty princes crave audience of him. A London cabman insults him if he tender the legal fare.

"To have seen his excellency in a vast and glorious country of three hundred millions, and to become Nobody in a little gray island of forty or fifty millions, is a transition sharp, complete, and withal humorous.

"Sir John Hewett, admitted on all hands to have been the ablest Englishman of contemporary India, has proved his title to kingship. He has been King not merely because of the magnitude of his office, but because he has used the considerable faculties of his mind in most kingly fashion. He has eased the burdens of millions of poor people, he has organized trade and commerce over a vast area; he has enormously increased the prosperity and well-being of his province; he has strengthened the security of civilization; he has deepened the confidence of India in British wisdom, justice, and truth.

Wanted, the Best Men.

"Remember, the Government of 800,000,000 by a few Englishmen is becoming every day more difficult," says Sir John. "As education extends, the problems of administration change. It is utterly impossible to handle those difficulties from England. English democracy has not yet visualized India, the masses of this country are hardly conscious even of the romance of India. Unless the man on the spot is to be trusted, I say it is impossible for India to be governed by British democracy. What is the remedy? It is plain and simple. British democracy must send to India men it can trust.

"And now I come to a very serious matter. At present the civil service is on the down grade. India does not get our best men. The service is recruited by means of a competitive examination at which candidates for the home civil service appear. Formerly the highest candidates on the list used to choose India; nowadays those who get the right of choice usually exercise it in favor of the home civil service. The reasons are clear. In modern India the cost of living has greatly increased; the attractions of the service are not what they were; the romance and glory have departed; drudgery is considerable; and the House of Commons is an eager and in a ways a fair critic. I can say that the incentives to a career in India are nothing like what they were when I went out five-and-thirty years ago.

Be Just Always.

"Now, unless England sends some of her ablest young men to recruit the different branches of the civil administration, it will, in my judgment, become impossible to govern the country as it should be governed. Has England considered what it will mean to her security and her prosperity to have on her hands a misgoverned and a troublesome India? Has she faced that contingency?

"Sir John Hewett told me that his advice to young Englishmen going out to India is this: 'Be just always, be strict when it is necessary, never lose an opportunity to show you are human, be slow to promise, and when you have promised carry out your promise to the letter.'"

HECLA FURNACE

No Gas No Dust

FUSED JOINTS CANNOT LEAK

Comfortable heating is possible only with a Furnace that cannot leak gas and dust. At every joint where a leak might otherwise occur, the Hecla is sealed tight. We do not trust to bolts and cement. The wear due to constant expansion and contraction would grind out the cement and leave a series of leaks for the escape of gas or dust. To make a joint that will be as tight after years of service as it is when new, we fuse the steel sides and cast-iron frames of our radiators by a patent process. This welds the iron and steel into one piece.

Homes heated by Hecla Furnaces 20 years old are getting as pure air from the registers as when the Furnace was new.

And this Furnace saves one ton of coal in seven. Isn't it worth looking into?

PUTTING UP WITH PILGRIM FATHERS.

The American Ambassador's panegyric of the Pilgrim Fathers recalls a speech of one of its predecessors in the same office a few years ago. Mr. Choate, speaking at a dinner of the Literary Fund, paid a moving tribute to the heroic pioneers of the great Republic of the west, adding that the same tribute was due to the Pilgrim Mothers who accompanied them. "For we must never forget," concluded the speaker, "that those heroic women not only had to put up with the same trials and hardships as the Pilgrim Fathers, but they had also to put up with the Pilgrim Fathers themselves!"

ILL-PAID INTELLECTUAL WORKERS.

"The lesson which I read in the proceedings of the Menial Congress is that it is time for Britain to make a change in the treatment of its intellectual workers if it wishes to retain a high place in the respect of the civilized world," says Sir Ronald Ross in the Nation.

ROMANCE OF A PEERAGE

Ex-United States Soldier Succeeds to Title and 38,000 Acres—His Sensational Disappearance.

The death, which occurred recently at French Park House, County Roscommon, of Lord De Freyne, recalls one of the bitterest land feuds which ever occurred in Ireland, and also a romance of the British peerage.

Lord De Freyne, who succeeded his father, the first baron, in 1868, when he was 13 years of age, owned nearly 38,000 acres, including 33,120 in County Roscommon. The peerage is a British one.

The feud between Lord De Freyne and his tenants commenced in 1902, when the tenants on the Frenchpark estate, dissatisfied with the contrast between their condition and that of the tenants on the neighboring estates, purchased by the congested districts board, entered into what was known as the associated estates combine, paid their rents into the account of the trustees of the association, and defied the landlord.

Hundreds of Evictions.

Hundreds of evictions followed, and the sheriff was kept busy on the estate for weeks, an army of police being located in the district. Several of the more prominent officials engaged for the tenants were prosecuted and imprisoned.

Then followed Lord De Freyne's famous action against the members of the Irish party for influencing his tenants from paying him rent. This was finally withdrawn. The land act of 1904 brought a cessation of hostilities.

In 1905 Lord De Freyne signed the agreement with the congested districts board to sell to them on terms agreeable to all concerned. As soon as the announcement was made known an immense bonfire was lighted on a hill, and almost immediately answering signals were to be seen from all the surrounding hills.

New Peer "In the Ranks."

The new peer is the Hon. Arthur Reginald French, whose disappearance in 1905 was the sensation of the year. After a search lasting over weeks, it was found that he was serving as a private—or "enlisted man," as it is termed—in the United States army. He landed in New York on Jan. 16 of that year, and it was understood by some of his fellow-travellers that he was going to New Mexico to join his uncle, Captain French. His own thoughts, however, were at first turned to the Northwest Mounted Police of Canada. Three days later he suddenly left his hotel, leaving his luggage there, and his rooms still unrelinquished. Nothing more was heard of him, and it was feared that he had been robbed and "shanghaied" or perhaps murdered. His uncle, hearing nothing of him, proceeded to Denver, and called to the British consul-general, who asked the New York police to circulate his description. He was found at Fort Slocum, on Long Island Sound, just outside New York, where he was serving in the well-known Eighth Regiment. He had enlisted for three years, and told an interviewer he liked it. Fort Slocum, he said, was a fine place. The men were good fellows and the officers "knew their business."

As a private the new peer drew a salary of £2 12s a month. He was greatly surprised to hear that his disappearance had caused a sensation, saying he had already taken means to inform his relatives of his whereabouts. The Frenches of former days revelled in wealth. Peter French—a mayor of Galway in 1576—had so much of it that he ordered £5,000 to be spent on a monument for his grave, while another member of the family left £1,000 for his funeral, and was "waked" for three days and nights by the whole county.

said, "It twisted when I fell." "Does it pain you much?" inquired Chandler.

"Only when I rest my weight upon it. I think I will be able to walk in a minute or two."

"If I can be of any further service," suggested the young man, "I will call a cab, or—"

"Thank you," said the girl, softly but heartily. "I am sure you need not trouble yourself any further. It was so awkward of me. And my shoe heels are horridly common-sense; I can't blame them at all."

Chandler looked at the girl and found her swiftly drawing his interest. She was pretty in a refined way; and her eyes were both merry and kind. She was inexpensively clothed in a plain black dress that suggested a sort of uniform such as shop girls wear. Her glossy dark-brown hair showed its coils beneath a cheap but of black straw whose only ornament was a velvet ribbon and bow.

A sudden idea came into the head of the young architect. He would ask this girl to dine with him. Here was the element that his splendid but solitary periodic feasts had lacked. His brief season of elegant luxury would be doubly enjoyable if he could add to it the lady's society. This girl was a lady he was sure—her manner and speech settled that. And in spite of her extremely plain attire he felt that he would be pleased to sit at table with her.

These thoughts passed swiftly through his mind, and he decided to ask her. It was a breach of etiquette, of course, but oftentimes wage-earning girls waived formalities in matters of this kind. They were generally shrewd judges of men; and thought better of their own judgment than they did of useless conventions. His ten dollars, discreetly expended, would enable the two to dine very well, indeed. The dinner would, no doubt, be a wonderful experience thrown into the dull routine of the girl's life; and her lively appreciation of it would add to his own triumph and pleasure.

"I think," he said to her, with frank gravity, "that your foot needs a longer rest than you suppose. Now, I am going to suggest a way in which you can give it that and at the same time do me a favor. I was on my way to dine all by my lonely self when you came tumbling around the corner. You came with me and we'll have a cozy dinner and a pleasant talk together, and by that time your game ankle will carry you home nicely, I am sure."

The girl looked quickly up into Chandler's clear, pleasant face and speech. Her eyes twinkled once very brightly, and then she smiled ingenuously. "But, we don't know each other—it would be right, would it?" she said, doubtfully.

"There is nothing wrong about it," said the young man, candidly. "I'll introduce myself—permit me—Mr. Towers Chandler. After our dinner, which I will try to make as pleasant as possible, I will bid you good-evening, or attend you safely to your door, whichever you prefer."

"But, dear me!" said the girl, with a glance at Chandler's faultless attire. "In this old dress and hat?" "Never mind that," said Chandler, cheerfully. "I'm sure you look more charming in them than anyone we shall see in the most elaborate dinner toilette."

"My ankle does hurt yet," admitted the girl, attempting a limping step. "I think I will accept your invitation, Mr. Chandler. You may call me—Miss Marian."

"Come, then, Miss Marian," said the young architect, gallily, but with perfect courtesy; "you will not have far to walk. There is a very respectable and good restaurant in the next block. You will have to lean on my arm—so—and walk slowly. It is lonely dining all by one's self. I'm just a little bit glad that you slipped on the ice."

When the two were established at a well-appointed table, with a promising waiter hovering in attendance, Chandler began to experience the real joy that his regular outing always brought to him.

The restaurant was not so showy or pretentious as the one farther down Broadway which he always preferred, but it was nearly so. The tables were well filled with prosperous-looking diners, there was a good orchestra, playing softly enough to make conversation a possible pleasure, and the cuisine and service were beyond criticism. His companion, even in her cheap hat and dress, held herself with an air that added distinction to the natural beauty of her face and figure. And it is certain that she looked at Chandler, with his animated but self-possessed manner and his frank blue eyes, with something not far from admiration in her own charming face.

Then it was that the Madness of Manhattan, the Frenzy of Fussy and Feathers, the Bacillus of Brag, the Provincial Plague of Pose, seized upon Towers Chandler. He was on Broadway, surrounded by pomp and style, and there were eyes to look at him. On the stage of that comedy he had assumed to play the one-night part of a butterfly of fashion and an idler of means and taste. He was dressed for the part, and all his good angels had not the power to prevent him from acting it.

So he began to prate to Miss Marian of clubs, of teas, of golf and riding and kennels and cottillions and tours abroad and threw out hints of a yacht lying at Larchmont. He could see that she was vastly impressed by this vague talk, so he indorsed his pose by random insinuations concerning great wealth, and mentioned familiarly a few names that she handled reverently by the proletariat. It was Chandler's short little day, and he was wringing from it the best that could be had, as he saw it. And yet once or twice he saw the pure gold of this girl shine through the mist that his egotism had raised between him and all objects.

"This way of living that you speak of," she said, "sounds so futile and purposeless. Haven't you any work to do in the world that might interest you more?"

"My dear Miss Marian," he exclaimed—"work! Think of dressing every day for dinner, of making half a dozen calls in an afternoon—with a policeman at every corner ready to jump into your auto and take you to the station, if you get up any greater speed than a donkey cart's gait. We do-nothings are the hardest workers in the land."

The dinner was concluded, the waiter generously feed, and the two walked out to the corner where they had met. Miss Marian walked very well now; her limp was scarcely noticeable.

"Thank you for a nice time," she said, frankly. "I must run home now. I liked the dinner very much, Mr. Chandler."

He shook hands with her, smiling cordially, and said something about a game of bridge at his club. He watched her for a moment, walking rather rapidly eastward, and then he found a cab to drive him slowly homeward.

In his chilly bedroom Chandler laid away his evening clothes for a sixty-nine days' rest. He went about it thoughtfully.

"That was a stunning girl," he said to himself. "She's all right, too. I'd be sworn, even if she does have to work. Perhaps if I'd told her the truth instead of that razzle-dazzle we might—but, confound it! I had to play up to my clothes."

Thus spoke the brave who was born and reared in the wigwags of the tribe of the Mannhattans.

The girl, after leaving her entertainer, sped swiftly cross-town until she arrived at a handsome and sedate mansion two squares to the east, facing on that avenue which is the highway of Mammon and the auxiliary gods. Here she entered hurriedly and ascended to a room where a handsome young lady in an elaborate house dress was looking anxiously out the window.

"Oh, you madcap!" exclaimed the elder girl, when the other entered. "When will you quit frightening us this way? It is two hours since you ran out in that rag of an old dress and Marie's hat. Mamma has been so alarmed. She sent Louis in the auto to try to find you. You are a bad, thoughtless Puss."

The elder girl touched a button, and a maid came in a moment.

"Marie, tell mamma that Miss Marian has returned."

"Don't scold, sister. I only ran down to Mme. Theo's to tell her to use mauve insertion instead of pink. My costume and Marie's hat were just what I needed. Everyone thought I was a shopgirl, I am sure."

"Dinner is over, dear; you stayed so late."

"I know, I slipped on the sidewalk and turned my ankle. I could not walk, so I hobbled into a restaurant and sat there until I was better. That is why I was so long."

The two girls sat in the window seat, looking out at the lights and the stream of hurrying vehicles in the avenue. The younger one cuddled down with her head in her sister's lap.

"We will have to marry some wad," she said dreamily—"both of us. We have so much money that we will not be allowed to disappoint the public. Do you want me to tell you the kind of a man I could love, sis?"

"Go on, you scatterbrain," smiled the other.

"I could love a man with dark blue eyes, who is gentle and respectful to poor girls, who is handsome and good and does not try to flirt. But I could love him only if he had ambition, an object, some work to do in the world. I would not care how poor he was if I could help him build his way up. But, sister dear, the kind of a man we always meet—I could not love a man like that, even if his eyes were blue and he were ever so kind to poor girls whom he met in the street."

BOVRIL TAKEN

An amount of Bovril proportionate to the small black circle has been proved to produce an increase in flesh and muscle corresponding to the large circle, showing the Body-Building Power of Bovril to be from 10 to 20 times the amount taken.

This diagram illustrates the remarkable body-building power of BOVRIL.

In a series of remarkable experiments upon human subjects, conducted under high scientific control in a well-known British Physiological laboratory, it was proved that Bovril is not only itself a great strengthener, but that it also possesses the peculiar property of enabling the system to extract from other foods nourishment which would otherwise be wasted. These experiments conclusively proved the body-building power of Bovril to be from the amount taken.

10 to 20 times

Bovril is the concentrated goodness of the best of beef. It is a wonderfully warming winter beverage; it builds up the weak constitution and strengthens the strong one; it guards against the grip; it checks colds and chills; it is cook's right hand in the kitchen; it is nurse's first-aid in the sick-room. DESERVED HIS TIP.

A gentleman who frequently visited Ireland generally stopped and dined at the same hotel in Cork. On his arrival one day he perceived a written notice on the looking-glass in the luncheon room which ran as follows: "Strangers are particularly requested not to give any money to the waiters, as attendance is charged for in the bill." The waiter, who had attended on him at dinner, seeing him reading this notice, said: "Oh, mister, sure that don't concern you in any way. Your honor was never made a stranger of in this hotel."

THIS FINE OLD GENTLEMAN ANSWERED 187 LETTERS IN REGARD TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

People in All Parts of Canada Wanted to Know More About These Wonderful Tablets Made From Fruit Juices.

N. JOUBERT, ESQ.

"I heartily recommend 'Fruit-a-tives' to all who suffer from Constipation and the painful consequences—Piles. I am now over 74 years old and suffered for over 25 years with constipation and Piles. I tried all kinds of remedies, saw the doctors and took their medicines but nothing cured me. About four years ago I tried 'Fruit-a-tives'—found they were doing me good. Then I procured an additional supply and was much gratified at the wonderful good they did me. After taking four boxes I felt well—my bowels were regular and the Piles had disappeared.

My wife was troubled for three years with Asthma, and Eczema on the hands, which made her hands almost useless. The doctor gave her several ointments to use, none of which had any effect. He also advised her to use rubber gloves (she wore out three pairs). I persuaded her as a last resort, to try 'Fruit-a-tives'. The effect was marvellous. Her hands are cured and the Asthma has also left her. We both attribute our present good health to 'Fruit-a-tives'.

Whether it was the fine, honest, straightforward face that inspired confidence or the simple language, which rang true as a silver bell, that made so many people think over this letter, is hard to say. But the fact remains that one hundred and eighty-seven persons have written Mr. Joubert to inquire more fully about 'Fruit-a-tives'. And this delightful old gentleman who is now 74 years old—happy in his release from pain—grateful for his cure—took the time to answer every inquiry. Take his advice and try 'Fruit-a-tives'.

LORD HALDANE'S IMPRESSIONS OF UNITED STATES AND CANADA

Struck by Zeal for Higher Education—Britain Must Wake Up—A Call to Arms.

The Lord Chancellor, Viscount Haldane, gave a very interesting interview to the Daily Telegraph special correspondent on the journey from Montreal to New York.

"What has impressed you most during your visit to the States and Canada?" I asked Lord Haldane, who, without a moment's hesitation, replied that he had been most impressed by the remarkable evidence he had noticed on every hand of the general interest awakened in the cause of higher education.

Awake to Higher Education. In New York Lord Haldane visited the noble Columbia University, occupying 33 acres of ground in the most valuable district of New York City, and representing gifts, of which the flow has never ceased, of millions and millions of dollars given by private citizens.

"It is enough to make a Britisher despair," he said, "or rather to grit his teeth, with increased determination, when he sees the example set him by Columbia University, with 11,000 students, which is larger than Berlin, the students representing admirable material and the teaching staff a splendid body of men."

Lord Haldane emphasized that the case was similar as regards higher teaching in Montreal.

"Here you have the superb McGill University, provided by the munificence of Sir William Donald and Lord Strathcona, in this tremendous, almost insuperable sense New York and Montreal are setting an example which England must follow."

The Reason Why. What, I asked, was the reason for this extraordinary development in North America? Lord Haldane attributed it to several reasons. First, the conviction on the part of leading and representative men that the future of a country really depended on a scientific educational base; secondly, to the munificent gifts of private citizens; and, thirdly, to the popular opinion, which had been aroused and the widespread desire of American and Canadian youths to avail themselves of the abundant facilities provided for their benefit.

His lordship said that his present visit had confirmed and deepened his conviction that the United Kingdom educationally had no time to lose. "If we are to keep pace with teaching on that side of the Atlantic," and the sooner Britishers realize that their supremacy as a nation in many ways, and more particularly their commercial and industrial supremacy, depends finally on higher education and the power of organization which it brings, the better it will be for the country and the empire generally."

The Problem for Britain. The number of young Americans and Canadians now receiving higher education was the most striking thing Lord Haldane had seen on that side. It had been a positive revelation to him, he said, and he would fall short in his duty if he failed to report to his fellow-countrymen on its significance.

There are no reason for absolute alarm so far, but the time had come when the United Kingdom should face the problems squarely and see that the educational pace was accelerated. Public opinion in America and Canada had been informed and roused on the question of the diffusion of higher education as the United Kingdom unfortunately had never been stirred. There was a splendid mission and a wonderful field for some great newspaper in England to arouse public interest on a matter which so vitally concerned our best interests.

Keep Pace or Fall Behind. "One thing is certain: the United Kingdom must either keep pace with other countries or drag behind. It might be said that New York was not typical in an educational sense, and stood alone. That isn't so, because there is the same record educationally in pretty well every state, even in states so remote as Wisconsin and Louisiana. In those cases where the American millionaire has been backward in establishing higher teaching, the state itself stepped in and supplied the deficiency."

The lord chancellor sounded his call to arms educationally in words and a tone that bespoke his intense personal earnestness and deepest conviction.

A FUNNY SLIP.

While English-speaking members of parliament have been interested in their French-speaking colleagues in the mastery of both languages, occasionally the latter make amusing slips, particularly in the quoting of English sayings. One day, when Hon. Edouard Levesque, himself a master of both languages, was engaged in one of his periodic bouts with Hon. Louis Philippe Pelletier, his successor as Postmaster-General, Ferdinand Joseph Robitoux came to the rescue of the minister. "Whenever the honorable member for Rouville opens his mouth," Mr. Robitoux, gravely informed the speaker, "he puts his foot in the mud."

46 TONS, 19 STORIES UP.

"The shades of the builders of the Pyramids might have been interested onlookers at the sight of iron girders weighing forty-six tons each going up nineteen stories to the top of a building being erected in New York City. This is said to be the first time that girders of this weight have been lifted to such a height," says the Outlook.

RESCUE WORK THAT HELPS

get the work before the churches, London is a rapidly growing city. It now has a population of nearly 600,000. The same as in other cities, the downtown district becomes the centre for the crowd; the place where the wandering boy and wayward girl find their associates that help them along their downward career. It is to cope with this circumstance that makes us feel the importance of making the work of the Mission permanent. In order to make this work permanent it must be supported financially. The superintendent, while in business was able to lay by enough so that he has been a very little tax on the Mission during its existence; but it is not to be supposed that a work of this kind can be very successful where there is not able to satisfactorily compensate those who give their time to its furtherance.

The plan is, that in connection with the special meetings which are now in progress at the Mission, to have Mr. Colegrove present the claims of the "Church Down Town" at a mass meeting next Sunday at the Majestic Theatre, and raise funds to insure the work for another year. At Kalamazoo, Mich., a city of perhaps 10,000 less population than London, in a similar meeting last October, the people subscribed $4,000 for the next year's work. At Grand Rapids, Mich., a city perhaps as large again as London, they subscribed nearly $8,000 for the carrying on of the downtown work. If London will put $3,000 into the work of the City Mission this year, the management will be able to cope in a very fair way with the financial problems. Though the Mission has no indebtedness yet, the superintendent has received less than $700 for his three years' work.

verdict of their fellow countrymen, on whose favor ultimately their political fortunes must inevitably depend.

Verdict of the Country. "If they put off asking the country until after the home rule bill has become law what do they gain by it if the country is really in their favor?"

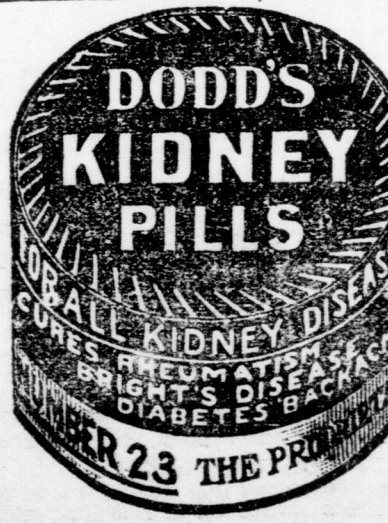

"If the country has home rule at heart the country would say so if we had an election next month, and if the country is against home rule can you conceive any policy so atrocious as to refuse the opportunity to the country to say so until every kind of inconvenience, and possibly every kind of disorder, has resulted from the illegitimate delay which the Government themselves have interposed between the legislation and the question put to the constituencies?"

"Evidently if they put off the election, as is prophesied by some of their supporters, it means that, supposing the country is anti-home rule—as I for my part believe it is—supposing it to be anti-home rule every conceivable difficulty will be placed in the way of carrying out the policy which the country will have deliberately endorsed. How are they going to justify that? It is evidently impossible to justify it."

"If the country is let it be consulted at all upon home rule, let it be consulted before home rule becomes law. In that way, and in that way alone, will the Government avoid the gravest responsibility which any government in this country has ever had the courage to take upon itself."

Government's Position. "I do not see what the Government gain by the delay. It is a few months more of office possibly, but if the country really desires home rule their position would be strengthened ten thousandfold and their period of office indefinitely prolonged by the country's opinion and getting a favorable verdict."

"If the country hates this home rule bill as much as they hate the two home rule bills that preceded it, then can we imagine a more shameless proceeding than that of deferring to put the question to the country till all the passions are aroused in Ireland both in the south and the north, till all the administrative inconveniences which must inevitably

HER BABY WAS BOTHERED WITH DIARRHŒA FROM THE TIME SHE WAS BORN DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY CURED HER

MRS. THOMAS SKALING, Schreiber, Ont., writes: "My little girl, who is now nearly four years old, and is as healthy and strong as can be, was bothered with Diarrhœa from the time she was born until she was over two years old. The doctor in the hospital, where I was when she was born, did everything he could but did not get it stopped. Just as soon as I got out myself, I got a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and gave it to her, off and on, whenever she needed it, and I never had a doctor in the house once, for it would always check it without any bad after effects, and in time cured her altogether. I always keep it in the house, as I have never found anything to compete with it for Diarrhœa."

"When you ask for 'DR. FOWLER'S' be sure you get it, as some of these no-name, no-reputation, so-called strawberry preparations are being sold on the reputation built up by 'DR. FOWLER'S.' To insure getting the genuine, see that the name of The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont., appears on the yellow wrapper. Price, 35 cents."

Traditions of British Liberty. "I do not admire the present Government; I do not think they have shown either caution or statesmanship in their policy, and as regards the constitutional question, grossly unscrupulous, and I have never hesitated to make that opinion known. But after all, they are men brought up in the traditions of British liberty. They have had the training of
