

POINCARÉ MINISTRY GOES DOWN TO DEFEAT

Hon. Forbes Godfrey Praises Work of London Hospitals

FRENCH RADICALS HAVE OVERTHROWN POINCARÉ REGIME

Premier's Party Will Be in a Minority of at Least 50 in the New Chamber of Deputies—Hernott For Premier.

WAR RECORDS NO LONGER CONSIDERED

Associated Press Despatch.
Paris, May 12.—The official results of yesterday's elections show that the Poincaré cabinet has lost its majority in the Chamber of Deputies.

The final results, with only sixteen seats missing, show that M. Poincaré will be in a minority of more than 50 votes in the new chamber.

Returns from 361 seats, more than half the number in the chamber, show that Premier Poincaré has been placed in a minority of 35 votes by yesterday's elections. This, however, does not necessarily mean that M. Herriot, the Radical, will be next premier even should the present ratio of gains for the parties of the Left continue for the 233 seats still to be heard from.

GOVERNMENT CLAIMS.

The government claims that 49 out of the 186 Radicals elected are dissident and will vote with the government in matters of foreign policy. Even if this is correct, however, the government will still remain in the minority.

Herriot for Premier.

A discrepancy between previous semi-official figures, showing the Republican Socialists as electing 32 members, and the official figures, giving them 29, is explained by the fact of the close affiliation of that group with the Radical Socialists, the foreign office classifying its members somewhat differently than the semi-official agency. They are all, however, against the government.

There are many difficulties to be surmounted. Before an arrangement can be made between the United Socialists and the Radicals, the former must agree to support M. Herriot unconditionally. For their part the United Socialists will insist upon most important representation in the Radical cabinet, and their demands may prove unacceptable to M. Herriot.

As the returns came in, political observers pointed out that a swing in the balance of the chamber, bringing into power a "premier of the Left," might affect the tenure of office of President Millerand, who was a great proponent of the bloc national in 1919.

Faced with the constitutional obligation of the counting legislation, which was claiming to be in his confidence declared he would prefer to resign rather than become a "rubber stamp" for a majority with which he was not in sympathy. In this eventuality election of a new chief of state by the senate and Chamber of Deputies would be necessitated.

One outstanding result already visible is that war records are no longer a preponderant factor in French politics. Former Minister of the Interior Malvy, who was banished during the war for five years, is returned to the chamber, carrying his ticket with him, while General Decastellau, victor of Grand Couronne, and the savior of Nancy in 1914, was beaten.

Ruhr Ministers Returned.
Andre Marty, Communist, imprisoned for surrendering his ship to the Bolsheviks in the Black Sea, is elected for Seine et Oise, while Jean Longuet, grandson of Karl Marx, was also returned.

Andre Le Fevre, former minister of war, Prince Joachim Murat, descendant of the King of Naples, and Gaston Vidal, former under secretary for physical education, were among the other prominent defeated, while former Ministers Delbet and Colrat and M. Franklin-Bouillon, negotiator of the Angora treaty, were successful.

In the Poincaré cabinet, "the Ruhr ministers," M. M. Maginot and Le Trouquer, were returned, as were M. Lefebvre du Prey, minister of justice, and Louis Marin, minister of liberating regions. Raoul Perat, president of the chamber, was also re-elected. Marcel Caehin, the Communist leader, was successful. Sadi Lecointe, flying ace, was defeated.

Former Premier Poincaré and his wife were also returned.

CANADIAN TOURISTS NEED SPECIAL PERMITS

London Motor Club Secretary Advised of Ruling at U. S. Border Points.

Citizens motoring to Detroit and other American border cities will be compelled to make out special permit forms on the American side before being allowed entry, Secretary Ed. Bernard of the London Motor Club has advised.

The regulation governing this has been in existence for ten years, but was never enforced. If the motorists return by a different route, separate forms must be made out. The Niagara Falls chamber of commerce is protesting the regulation, claiming it will seriously interfere with summer traffic, but it is not expected that the decision of the United States custom authorities to enforce the act will be changed.

RAYMOND POINCARÉ, premier of France, whose government was defeated in yesterday's elections. His government will be in a minority of over 50 votes according to latest returns.

LONDONER'S MARVEL AT HOSPITAL'S EQUIPMENT

Many Pay Visit to Institutions On the First Hospital Day.

SIZE IMPRESSIVE

Insight Into Great Work Being Carried On Is Received.

The first Hospital Day ever held in London in which the various hospitals in London and vicinity participated in was a decided success, despite the failure of the sun to shine its brightest, which necessitated the calling off of several outdoor preliminaries planned by a number of the institutions, but, regardless of this fact, the many citizens that took advantage of the first privilege extended to them was an assurance that Hospital Day will become a permanent fixture in London.

Long before the hour set for the general public to visit the institutions many filled the corridors of the hospitals, waiting eagerly for the chance to learn something of the greatest asset to the life of any community. Obliging internes and nurses acted as guides during the afternoon, and the public was shown through the institutions in groups, while explanations were given as to the various departments and the part it plays in hospital life.

The hospitals taking part in the event were: Victoria, St. Joseph's, Westminster, Ontario, Bethesda, Queen Alexandra, and the War Memorial Children's Hospital.

Source of Attraction.
Westminster Hospital proved to be the attraction for many, and the visitors marvelled at the magnitude of the institution, having little realized that London was the center of one of the largest military hospitals in Canada.

Victoria handled its share of the public in a most cordial manner, and the recently added ward and equipment of the hospital were the main features of the attraction.

At St. Joseph's Hospital the infants' ward was the media for a large throng of visitors, and here little baby boys and girls laughed with glee in delight at the visit from the grownups.

Many of the girls in the secondary schools of the city were shown through the hospitals, and were impressed with the ideal surroundings under which the nurses train. Bethesda Hospital, the new maternity home of the Salvation Army in South London was favored with a large number, and the addition of this new hospital to London is rapidly winning its way into the hearts of the people.

The Ontario Hospital and its officials marvelled at the interest shown in the work of that institution.

In all the only regret that the officials who had charge of the affair have is that the time was limited, and next year it is hoped to have the hospital open the entire day.

Many distinguished medical men were in town for the occasion, including Dr. Forbes Godfrey, minister of health.

Godfrey Hopes To Reduce Present Price of Insulin To Be Possible For All

Minister of Health Addresses Members of Rotary Club at Luncheon.

VISITS HOSPITALS

Praises Work Being Carried Out For Sick of the District.

Although Hon. Dr. Forbes Godfrey, minister of public health and labor in the provincial government, had covered but two of the city hospitals on his Hospital Day inspection when he addressed the Rotary Club at their regular luncheon today, the report prompted by these was most enthusiastic.

Hon. Dr. Godfrey was introduced by Hon. Sir Adam Beck, with whom he has been associated for many years in the provincial government, and with whom he has a common interest in the work among tubercular patients in the province. While Sir Adam has made the Byron Sanatorium the object of his particular attention, Hon. Dr. Godfrey has been working on the problem for the entire province, since he was first elected to parliament, and he announced to the Rotarians that his maiden speech in the provincial legislature had been on the subject of tuberculosis, as well as the great bulk of his pre-election addresses.

Between the two portfolios which he carries at the present time, Dr. Godfrey stated that he was able to find a great many points of contact. Labor was essentially interested in the progress of the department of public health. Steps taken by the provincial government to put the advantages of modern medical science within reach of the average workman were of vital interest to labor. Insulin had been placed within reach of all as the result of the efforts of the provincial department, and Dr. Godfrey announced that at the present time he hoped to bring the cost down from a cent and a half to one cent.

Dr. Godfrey was warm in his appreciation of the ground already covered in his hospital tour. He congratulated the city generally on the loyal support of the various medical institutions, and was particularly emphatic in his appreciation of the local Institute of Public Health in connection with the university, and its contribution, not only to the city, but to the entire province.

Question of Organizing Such an Institution To Be Decided Tomorrow.

NEW FIELD OPEN

Inspection and Re-Discount Would Come Under Its Jurisdiction.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Ottawa, May 12.—The establishment of a central bank is to be proposed in a resolution to come before the banking and commerce commission of the House of Commons tomorrow. The resolution, of which notice has been given by J. T. Shaw, Independent member for Calgary West, proposes to transfer to this bank the functions of re-discount, now being carried on by the minister of finance under the finance act. It has also been suggested that the central bank might have charge of a system of bank inspection.

Another phase of the banking problem to come before the committee is the proposal of L. J. Ladner, Conservative, South Vancouver, for the guarantee of savings deposits. Mr. Ladner urges the establishment of a special class of savings accounts, deposits in which would be guaranteed. The hearing tomorrow is expected to be the opening of an active banking problem in which the recent disclosure before the Home Bank committee are likely to figure largely. The evidence taken before that body has been printed and is available for the members of parliament.

WOMEN HAVE YET TO LEARN FRIENDLINESS GETS SERVICE

Might Well Take Pattern From Businessmen in their Dealings With Household Helpers and Employees in Shops and Public Restaurants.

"BIGGER THE MAN, THE SIMPLER THE APPROACH"

By JULIA HOYT.
I think that all women, in their dealings with others, whether for them or who wait on them in stores, can take a lesson from businessmen. Big businessmen seem to get good service from their employees, and have comparatively little trouble with their office workers, their assistants in business.

This is largely because businessmen treat their employees as associates; they make their assistants feel that they are working with the boss, not for him. If more women would adopt this attitude toward their household helpers and others who render them services, I think there would be less talk of "the servant problem," and every one concerned would be happier. Yet this does not mean a loss of self-respect on the part of the employer.

How many times have we heard it said of businessmen: "The bigger the man, the simpler he is to approach." It's the small man who is imperious and who puts on airs. By the same token we can say it of the woman who has others rendering service to her, whether in the home, the shops or at a public restaurant.

Kindness Brings Service.

I think there are many persons who get bad service all their lives and who do not realize that they are getting it merely through their own stupidity and faulty attitude. We all know that money can buy service, but only service of an inferior kind. The person who is kind and considerate to those serving her will get a sort of service in return that no money in the world can buy. Any one who has the idea that it is smart to be overbearing, impolite and arrogant to persons in stores and other public places is making a great mistake. There is nothing that more quickly shows ill-breeding than this. From the exhibition of this attitude one gets an insight into a person's character, as well as into her bringing up or background. I only need to see someone unkind or embarrassingly rude to a salesman or servant for me to wish to avoid them as much as I possibly can.

But, leaving aside the feelings of the employee, how stupid and shortsighted it is of the offender. It is always a confession of lack of confidence in one's self to be patronizing and "superior" to others. It is the same trait that makes some persons ashamed to be seen talking to some one they do not think quite smart or fashionable, when they would be perfectly willing to talk to that person in private.

There are a few simple principles of conduct for dealing with those who work for you. Simple and obvious as they may sound in the telling, they are all too seldom followed by women. At least that has been my observation.

Mistakes To Avoid.

The first is: Never, unless unavoidable, correct anyone's mistake in the presence of other persons. Remember what was wrong and draw it to the worker's attention later. If this is impossible, if the correction must be made at once, then do it as quietly and unobtrusively as possible. We all know that there is nothing more humiliating than to have attention drawn to our mistakes before many people, yet I have seen alleged "society ladies" scold waitresses at tea parties because they had forgotten this or that trifle in the service.

The second point of sanity is this: Never have an interview with those who work for you if you are in a temper; this is not only on your account, but much more on your own. It is very difficult to keep one's self-respect when angry, and certainly we cannot expect others to respect us at a time when we are not respecting ourselves.

In all kinds of work, I believe that a standard of discipline must be created by the person who is in the position of directing, and that a respectful attitude toward that person must be taken by the people who are being directed. This does not mean subservience, it simply means efficiency. To mention as an instance something which is close to me (and is as good an example as any), no matter how well we may know our theatrical director in hours outside of rehearsals, we must observe an attitude of respect and obedience to his orders when at work on the stage preparing for a dramatic production.

MRS. M. FISHBEIN, who received an acclamation last night when she was re-elected president of the Hadassah Chapter.

I do not see how it can be otherwise between women and servants in their homes, and between women and the millions of public servants in the stores, shops and hotels of this continent. I, for one, would be glad to see more mutual respect between women and those who work for or wait on them.

Mrs. Leslie Calbeck (formerly Miss Audella Westlake) was the guest of honor Saturday evening of a surprise party, given at her home, 1112 Wilson avenue, by 25 of her friends. During the evening she received a shower of linen and later games and music were enjoyed, followed by supper. The shower was arranged by Mrs. J. J. Pratt.

Mrs. T. H. Walker and Miss Phyllis Walker of Detroit, who are guests with Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Johnston, of Fernside street, are motoring home Wednesday, and will be accompanied by Miss Shirley Johnston and Miss Connie Givins. Miss Johnston and Miss Givins will be guests at the Club dance Friday evening, in Detroit.

Mrs. Cl. T. Campbell was signally honored yesterday when the Odd-fellows of the city, on parade on the occasion of their 105th anniversary, stopped at the home of Mrs. Cl. T. Campbell, wife of the late Dr. Campbell, past grand sire of the order, and presented her with an armful of beautiful flowers, a gift in memory of her distinguished father. A large number of out-of-town visitors also made personal calls on Mrs. Campbell yesterday.

Mrs. Harry Gibberd, Mill street, gave a jolly birthday party Friday afternoon in honor of the twelfth birthday of her daughter, Barbara. The supper table was attractively arranged with spring flowers and centered with a birthday cake. The young guests included Beth Hargreaves, Lucy Downham, Eleanor Greene, Lillian Clements, Marion Douglas, Frances Williams, Mary Tillman, Phyllis Butchart, Edith Bell, Doris Kennedy and Dorothy Coleridge.

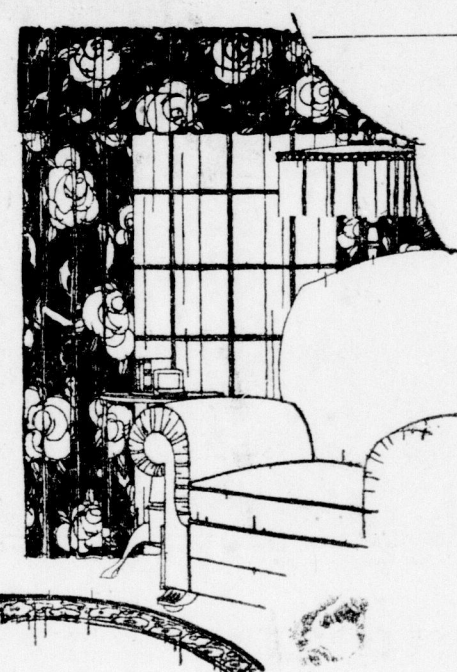

A charming reception was held at the Wellington street Y. W. C. A. Saturday afternoon in honor of Miss Shun of Hong Kong. During the afternoon the guest of honor gave an informal little talk on Y. W. C. A. work in China. The guests were received by Mrs. Donald McLean, Miss M. Morton and Miss J. E. Moore, and at the tea hour, Mrs. Frank White and Mrs. A. E. Miller presided over the tea cups. An enjoyable program was presented, including violin numbers by Miss Edith James and vocal solos by Mrs. H. B. Elford and Miss Beatrice Brown.

Dr. and Mrs. L. P. Shanks, Talbot street, and their son, Walter, are sailing from New York on May 27, and will proceed direct to O'Brienau. After spending the summer traveling in Europe, Mr. and Mrs. Shanks will take up their residence for a year in Baltimore, Professor Shanks having received a year's leave of absence from the Western University staff to pursue research work at the Johns Hopkins University. Professor Shanks was recently awarded one of the Johns Hopkins research fellowships from that university, thus bringing a distinction honor to London.

The regular weekly recital of the pupils of the Institute of Musical Art presented the following pupils last Saturday morning: Helen Shuttworth, Ethel Fullerton, Kathleen Milligan, Hilda Siskind, Rose Matthews, Ida Rosenthal, Eleanor Bendie, Pini Matthews, Jeanette Robertson, Everett Case, Marjorie Box, Ruth Kearney, Margaret Coates, Marie Lewis, Shirley McCormick, Martin Burrows, Evelyn Runnalls, Grace Tambling, Norah Pruss, Grace Bayley, Pearl Lipovich, Veronica Wilson, Tom Conley and Betty Bending. with a hint of the glorious summer days that are coming. Let the spirit of summer enter your home in the form of brighter colors in draperies and upholstery.

Nothing will add so much to the appearance of a drab and colorless room as a bit of bright drapery here and there.

An English drapery chintz that is full of color; it comes in blue, rose, gold and green, as well as in some very light patterns. It is soft and consequently drapes wonderfully well. This is an extremely good value for the money.

WINDOW BLINDS

From point of service and appearance these blinds cannot be bettered at the price. They are made from good stout fabric that will stand an unusual amount of wear and the rollers are very strong. The color is a rich, dark shade of green that lends an air of coolness to the room.

VOILES

They never seem to lose their popularity and this season the colors are brighter and daintier than ever. This particular line of voiles are of a very fine weave and the patterns and colors are the season's newest; the designs are floral with some of the new broken plaid effects, too. They are 35 inches wide.

GINGHAMS

A fine line of imported Gingham. They are of Scotch manufacture, which means that you'll get the very best of wear, and of course the colors are also lovely. The popular plaid and striped effects are here as well as the plain colors. They're 32 inches wide. This is a real value in gingham.

39c Yard

Another line of Voiles of a little better quality in satin stripes and floral designs and some Roman and candy-stick stripes. There are some rather unusual color effects that you really should see. They're an unusual value at this price.

What Is the Greatest Domestic Virtue?

Dorothy Dix

Says It's Being Pleasant To Live With

Not Even a Vamp-Proof Husband or a Beautiful Wife Spells Married Bliss—But the Husband or Wife Who Makes Life One Grand, Sweet Song Is the One Pleasant to Live With.

that all was well with her beloved son. The gods had vouchsafed him the greatest earthly blessing, the kind of a wife whose price is, indeed, above rubies.

For, when all is said, the greatest of all domestic virtues is to be pleasant to live with. It is the dispositions, not the morals, nor the looks, nor the brains, of the high contracting parties that make marriage a success or a failure, and determine whether the participants are to be happy or miserable. Which is the reason why many a saint with a grouchy temperament and a two-edged tongue gets hauled into the divorce court, and why many an easy-going sinner leaves behind an inconsolable widow or widower.

A young husband, speaking of his bride, said to his mother: "She is so pleasant to live with."

Whereat the mother breathed a prayer of thanksgiving, for she knew it is curious but true, that things that count so much before marriage matter very little after marriage. Before marriage we put great stress on personal pulchritude, on mental brilliance, on suave and charming manners. We are allured by a beautiful face. We are fascinated by a witty and entertaining conversationalist. We are charmed by those who have graciousness and poise, but after marriage we grow tired of looking at even a living picture, and we soon cease to see beauty in it if that is all there is to a person. Nobody can perpetually scintillate in the family circle and they would bore us to death if they did. Nor is there any place for the grand manner in everyday home life.

So all the graciousness and accomplishments and talents go into the discard, and that thing that is of vital importance is just the disposition of the one with whom we have to live day in and day out, in good weather or bad, in prosperity or adversity, in sickness or health.

Of course, viewing the matter from an ethical standpoint, a wife is glad that her husband is a man of probity, whose word is as good as his bond, and that he is spoken of as "Honest John Jones." But the knowledge that her husband is incorruptibly honest does not make it any easier for Mrs. John Jones to get money out of him if he is a tightwad, nor does it take the sting and humiliation out of her having to pander him for carfare, nor keep her from hating him on the first of every month when she tremblingly presents him with the monthly bills and goes through the scenes that ensue.

The thing that would make for her happiness would be for him to be pleasant to live with, for him to be fair and generous about money and for him to give her what he could afford without haggling over it.

It is a gratification to a woman to know that her husband is no phylanderer, that vamps would vamp him in vain, and that he would rather have a toothless hag of a stenographer who could spell than the peachiest flapper who was not on speaking terms with the dictionary.

But faithfulness is of small avail in making a wife happy if her husband apparently regards her as nothing more than a piece of useful household furniture; if he never shows her any tenderness or affection or gives any sign that he still cares for her.

The thing that would make her go down on her knees and thank God for having given her heart's desire in a husband would be for him to be pleasant to live with, for him to keep up the love-like attentions of their courtship days; for him to still give her kisses that had a thrill to them, instead of having the insulting, clammy flap of a cold buckwheat cake; for him to tell her that she grew more beautiful to him and dearer as the years went by, and that his lucky day was the day he got her for a wife.

A woman rejoices in her husband's success in business. She is proud to know that he is respected in the community, but she can be utterly miserable if he has a surly and a grouchy disposition; if he never speaks at home except to find fault, and if the family lives in terror of doing or saying something that will bring on a municipal burst of temper.

The husband who makes life a grand, sweet song to his wife is the man who is pleasant to live with; the man who is sunshine and strength in a home; who is cheerful and good-natured; who jollies his wife and pets his children, and at the very sound of whose key in the door everybody brightens up and begins to smile.

And precisely the same thing is true of wives as of husbands. The good wife is not necessarily the best woman, or the best cook, or the best housekeeper, or the best manager, or even the woman who loves her husband best. Many a woman who would gladly die for her husband nags him so that he would be willing to die to get rid of her. Many a woman who saves every cent of her husband's money is equally economical of her consideration for him.

Many a woman who possesses all of the virtues has none of the amenities of life.

The perfect wife is the woman who is pleasant to live with, no matter whether she can cook, or has the bargain complex, or is a highbrow or a lowbrow. She is the woman who is cheerful and good-natured; who is reasonable; who is a good sport; who is appreciative and contented, and who can say a thing once and let it go at that.

That is why being pleasant to live with is the great domestic virtue.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—Brody wants to know why ugly girls dress better than pretty ones? A FAITHFUL READER.

ANSWER:

They don't, but they should. An ugly girl could do a great deal to make herself easy on the eyes by wearing lovely clothes and doing her hair in a becoming manner, for when we speak of a woman as being good-looking we mean that she has made a pleasing impression upon us by graceful lines and lovely colors.

But homely women nearly always look as if their worst enemies had picked out their clothes, and that their hats were a deadly revenge taken upon them by their dearest foes. Perhaps they feel that they are not going to be beauties, anyway, so cultivating pulchritude isn't worth the time or money it takes.

On the other hand, pretty girls know that even a living picture is enhanced by a gold frame, and so they devote time and thought to their clothes. Watch any mirror in a public place and you will see that the pretty girls primp twice as long before it as the homely ones do.

By No Means Allow Your Bowels To Get Constipated.

If you allow your bowels to become constipated you will have bilious attacks, sick headaches, coated tongue, foul breath, sallow complexion, specks floating before the eyes, whites of the eyes dull and yellow, heartburn, water brash, etc.

Keep your bowels regular by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, as by doing so you will be able to keep well and have no more trouble with your liver.

Mrs. I. Rubin, Halbrite, Sask., writes: "I was very badly troubled with constipation, often had bad headaches, my tongue was coated, and I felt anything but well."

SLOWLY POISONED!

Neglect of the liver results in self poisoning! Not as quickly, perhaps, but just as surely as if you drank poison out of a bottle. If the liver is not doing its work of helping digestion, eliminating waste from the bowels and purifying the blood, you will always be troubled with sick headaches, nausea, biliousness, gas, sour stomach and constipation.

Cleanse and tone your liver! Put your system in condition so you feel your very best again! Try just one spoonful of Dr. H. S. By BEN HECHT.

INSTALLMENT I. CHAPTER I. Velvet Souls.

In the freight face of Julien de Medici appeared like a gray and scarlet mask of ennui. He was waiting for his host, Victor Ballau.

Except for the crackling of the dining wood, the room was still. Cowed shadows reared witch-like shapes across the walls and ceiling. It was night outside. Wind quarrelled with the stone buildings. Removing his eyes reluctantly from the burning logs, De Medici glanced at the darkness of the empty room. Life studied the shadows with frightened eyes.

He was a curious man of 30. An aristocratic ugliness marked his face. A striking and bizarre figure, poised, precise and seemingly of another world, he lived chiefly in his eyes. They were narrow and black, symmetrical to a point of artificiality. But under the parenthesis of the brows lived a startling man. Shadows frightened him. Opened doors chilled him. Yet his immobile face smiled derisively.

"Fear," he thought. "It's like a disease."

He smiled again as if amused at the emotion disturbing him. "Ghosts," he continued to himself. His eyes were on the opened door in the shadows at the end of the room. "Ghosts walk around inside me."

And he fell to thinking of an old subject—the ghosts that prowled the mysterious corridors of his soul.

De Medici—ah, what a name! A sarcophagus of evil.

He recalled with a shudder the excitement of the critics who had written about the opening of his play at Victor Ballau's Theatre two weeks ago.

De Medici smiled at the memory of the words. A bit redundant and in the grand style affected by romantically hungry puritans writing for the press. He continued recalling the words.

For here again is the De Medici touch. Prince Julien, who witnessed the premier of his first drama—"The Dead Flower"—is a gentleman of exemplary habits and enviable charm. A dreadful humor pervades this amazing work. Its characters are etched with a Satanic deftness refreshingly new for the stage.

Prince Julien of Broadway has born rowed the soul of his great-grandmother with which to write his first drama.

His earliest memories were those of fear. Windows, silences, doorways, recesses, lights far away, candle-light in a mirror, winds howling, hidden noises—these were things of which he had been in terror as a boy.

It had been that way with his father, the Prince Julien of the Paris ateliers—an indifferent artist, a violent-tempered black-haired man who had died at 40.

Years after his death De Medici understood the tragedy of the man who had been his father. Rake and scoundrel, he had fed raving in drink, memory of debauches and black deeds had survived him.

Left alone in the care of a senile uncle, the boy Julien had stumbled upon a different direction for flight—literature. He had come into his estate at 15. At 18 he had chosen America. France was too familiar. Its ancient roads, the dark corners of Paris, the very air he breathed haunted and frightened him.

Now, after 12 years, he had matured into a nervously brilliant man, engagingly cynical, egotistic as a child and subtle-minded as a Jesuit.

His friends found him, however, neither arrogant nor perverse, despite the startling and often horrible plots and ideas which came from his pen. None, not even his few intimates, had even intruded upon his secret, had ever glimpsed behind the charming and stenciled smile of Prince Julien.

A step in the corridor leading to the room lifted the tension under which he sat. Victor Ballau at last. He stood up to greet his host.

There was no longer hint of fear about him. His narrow eyes smiled. His teeth glittered in the wide mouth as he laughed.

"Toasting myself like a martyr at your fireplace, Victor," he said. The two men shook hands. Ballau was a man of 55, gentle-spoken, restrained of manner, and in his very bearing, a connoisseur of life. His hair was gray. He was tall and stood erect.

"You made quite a picture by the fireplace, Julien," he said. "Glad you get to look more and more medieval. Florence come in yet?"

"No, thank heaven."

CHAPTER II. In the Taxi.

"I've been thinking it over," Ballau began talking as he re-entered the room carrying bottle and glasses on a tray. "If you're in with me, Florence, the thing to do, I fancy, is to tell her so. I should avoid making your proposal of marriage to her a discussion on economics or a debate on whether a woman's place is in the home. . . . or on the stage."

"Yes, I think you're right," De Medici answered. "With your permission, I'll decide the young lady and save up my debates for some future breakfast table."

To a gay and worthy happiness for you and her," said Ballau, raising one of the glasses.

His voice had grown soft, but his eyes, as De Medici smiled back to him, turned away. The young man had replaced his glass and, despite himself, felt again the curious pressure that had haunted him a half hour before.

"There's something else," whispered Ballau in his ear. "I shall we go down to the theatre for the performance."

Ballau smiled refusal and De Medici bowed slightly.

"I'll see you tomorrow, then," he said, and walked from the room.

Lowering himself into the chair in which De Medici had sat, Ballau opened a book. His eyes, however, were unable to keep to the page. They closed as if in reverie, and again the weariness and pain that De Medici had noted darkened his face.

An hour later, pale, gaunt and hollow-eyed, appeared in the doorway. "Mr. Ballau," she said in a dull voice.

He opened his eyes and stared at her in confusion. He had been dreaming. "Will there be supper after the theatre tonight?" she asked.

"No, Jane," he murmured, "you can turn in."

The Next Morning.

De Medici turned his eyes from the trumpeting geometries of the skyscrapers and looked at the young woman beside him.

"We're an intrusion," he said close to her. The crowds drifted tensely around them. "Paolo and Francesca," he smiled, "murmuring in Bedlam. Can't we go somewhere?"

His lean face regarded her dreamily as she answered.

"The morning is wonderful," De Medici stared excitedly at her. Her presence delighted and warmed him. De Medici restrained the ecstasy that threatened to start him stammering. She was to go. Her body, luxurious and vibrant under the silver cloth of her dress, bewitched him. He was in love. But more than that, the flamboyant life of the girl, the gay and dominant poise of her manner, her voice, her head exhilarated him in a curious way.

"Let's go to father's office," she said. He found it difficult to object. Nevertheless he blurted an objection. "Impossible. I've set my mind on a cab. It's distinctly modern."

"But a fearful waste of money," the girl smiled.

"Ah," De Medici murmured, "then you do love me."

"Of course," she answered. They stood silently in the press of the crowds, moving down Fifth avenue, their fingers touching. De Medici's eyes grew misty. He felt curiously at peace, as if he had escaped forever the dark things beside him.

"We'll take a cab anyway," he said finally. Then, as the girl raised her luminous face to him, he grew buoyant.

Prince Julien, the cynical and tormented survivor of an evil race, had vanished.

"I've a lot of speeches I've always wanted to include as a part of my first and last proposal. We'll get into a cab and I'll propose."

"Dearest," he whispered, "I adore you."

She nodded, still avoiding his eyes. Then, "When do you want to get married?" she asked.

De Medici extricated himself from his emotions.

"Tomorrow," he answered calmly. "That's too soon. I'll have to tell father first."

"I've told him all about it," he smiled.

"What did he say?" she asked.

Health Restored by The Fruit Treatment

Fourteen years ago, Mr. James S. Delgaty, of Gilbert Plains, Man., was a nervous wreck. His system was shattered by Nervous Prostration, and he was reduced in weight from 170 to 115 pounds.

He wrote on May 15, 1917, "Every medicine I tried proved useless until a friend induced me to take 'Fruit-a-tives.' I began to mend at once. After using this fruit medicine for three months, I was back to normal. I have never had such good health as I have enjoyed the past six years. We are never without a box of 'Fruit-a-tives' in the house."

Writing again on September 27, 1923, Mr. Delgaty says, "I stand by my letter to you in 1917—I still recommend 'Fruit-a-tives.'"

"Fruit-a-tives" is a complete fruit treatment—being made of the juices of fresh ripe fruit and tonics.

25c and 50c a box—6 for $2.50—at druggists or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives, Limited, Ottawa—Adv.

Ignoring the change in her voice, De Medici answered.

"He gave me some advice. He advised me against starting any arguments with you."

Florence turned her eyes to him. They were burning and enigmatic.

"Curious," he thought. "She's like him. She hides something."

"What did he say?" she persisted. Then: "Excuse me. We'll tell him and have him announce the engagement. He'll love that."

Her face was again gay and dominant. De Medici nodded.

"I'll telephone him," he said quickly, and tapped on the driver's window.

The driver was talking. De Medici removed his eyes bewilderedly from Florence.

"What is it?" he inquired.

"I think there's a telephone in that drug store," the driver repeated.

De Medici stepped out of the cab. Several minutes later he returned, smiling broadly.

"What did he say?" she asked as he sat down beside her.

"Going to announce it tonight. Says he'll summon a gathering worthy of the event."

The driver put in an apologetic appearance.

"Where to?" he asked.

"I think we'd better go back to the theatre," Florence murmured. De Medici gave the direction.

When they were in front of the theatre De Medici held her arm.

"When shall I see you again?" he asked.

"I promised to have dinner with Freda this evening. Why don't you go and help father arrange his party and call for me after the performance tonight?"

De Medici nodded. He appeared to have grown speechless. He looked with infatuated silence at the girl. Then, with a sigh, he bowed, removing his fedora, and placing it cavalierly over his heart.

"Until we meet again, beloved," he whispered, and, turning, walked away.

The girl stood where he had left her, her dark eyes following his figure until it was lost in the crowd. An expression of despair had come to her face. Sorcery and uncertainty seemed to claim her. She stepped forward as if to recall the vanishing Julien. Then, changing her mind, she turned and walked to the

JAMES BENNETT LEARNS HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF

Fined $50 For Disorderly Conduct—London Woman Freed by Court.

RIVER BANK SETTING

History repeats itself, even in police court, James Bennett found out this morning. James had an eye on another man's wife down in Windsor five years ago. In fact, he was living with her and her two children until the C. A. S. of that city stepped in and landed him in police court, and later in the Ontario Reformatory for six months.

The woman, who was sentenced to six months in the Mercer Reformatory, was taken shrieking from the Windsor police office promising to "get" her husband when she got out. The husband, a quiet, hard-working man, has a good job in London, and his wife has been living with him for some time. Bennett had a job in Hamilton, decided to go back to Windsor, but instead of letting the C. N. R. carry him through to his destination, he tarried in London.

Sergeant Last and Constable Clipperton made a tour of the river bank in the vicinity of Hill street on Saturday night and caught Bennett and his former lady love in a regular movie fadeout embrace. It was not the end of the film for them, however. They were given a ride in an old patrol to Carling street, locked up and charged with disorderly conduct.

The case was held in camera this morning. Bennett being led out of the magistrate's office wiping large beads of perspiration from his brow. He was fined $50 and costs, while the woman was allowed to leave with her husband.

AVIATOR'S WIFE URGES GIVING UP WORLD TRIP

in Portage Bay, I was supremely confident that they would be found. The second time they were lost I felt the same way, but I must admit, now that everything is all right again, it was a terrible strain.

It is needless to say that it is a tremendous relief to me and my son John to know that the major and Sergeant Harvey are safe. I do not think it will be possible for them to continue in the world flight, but if I know Major Martin as well as I think I do, he will want to join the others.

Desolate Country.
Lieutenant Commander Hilliard, commander of the destroyer Hull, which rescued Major Martin, told me that the country over which the American fliers had to cross and the particular stretch of coast where the major's plane was wrecked was desolate, absolutely beyond description.

"I am overjoyed to learn the details of how my husband and his mechanic made it to get back to the comforts of civilization."
"Just as soon as I can get word to Major Martin I am going to ask of him that which I know will be the greatest sacrifice to make. I am going to ask him never to fly again. It will be hard for him to accede, because he loves flying. But the strain of the last few days has been too much for me to ever let him return to it again. Major Martin has proved his stamina and courage. He will want to carry on, but I shall insist that he quit the air subject."

FIREMAN RESUMES DUTY.
Norman R. Grover, a new member of the fire department, who injured his foot when he fell from the hayloft at No. 4 station last week, returned to duty today. Grover was confined to his home for several days.

REMAINS AT FOUR.
The number of new men added to the fire department still remains at four, and according to Chief Aitken all are showing up well. Two of the men have been placed in outside halls, while the other two are still doing duty at the central hall.

It is likely that two or more will be added this week.

MOTORMAN'S KEEN EYESIGHT SAVES DRUNKS FROM DEATH

Quartet Who Sought Steel Rails as Pillows Get Rude Awakening.

TWO ARRESTED

Quick Work by "Old 27" Pilot Performed on Saturday Night.

Four men lying in a drunken stupor across the gleaming rails of the Springbank line in the vicinity of the sewer farm Saturday night owe their lives to the watchfulness and quick work of Motorman Arthur Rockett, the veteran pilot of "Old 27," the Springbank squeaker.

The men had wandered down the Springbank line and finally decided to "sleep it off" with the steel rails for a pillow. "Old 27" was at the Byron road just about that time, and was all set for the fast trip to the city, because it was her last appearance at the loop for the evening. No time is lost on the 11:30 trip to night, and Mr. Rockett was giving the old car the last notch of speed when he approached the curve in the tracks at the sewer farm. The powerful headlight blazed on the four prone forms, and in the twinkling of an eye Motorman Rockett jammed on the brakes and threw the car to a stop. He was none too soon for the ancient equipage came to a grinding stop but a few feet from the first man, who was peacefully snoring. The crew yanked the men out of the car and proceeded to the city, where High Constable Wharton was notified.

Two of the men were scared into a state of comparative sobriety and had departed for pastures new when the constable arrived. The other two were taken to the city and fined $10 and costs when they appeared before County Magistrate Hawkshaw this morning.

FOUR "FLUSH" DRUNKS PAY THEIR FINES TODAY

Taxi Driver Given Another Chance After Promise To Reform.

Four drunks, flush with money, paid the $10 and costs prescribed by law for being found in a public place in an intoxicated condition. One man was fined $10 and costs, when he was too drunk to make appearance, promised to "straighten away" if given a chance. It appeared that he had been driving a taxi and was more than fearful his license would be taken away from him.

"I'm not satisfied with your word," informed Chief Birrell. "I'm through with you," the accused. "It's the first time I've been in jail for ten years." "I'm not through," declared the commissioner if you have an objection. "I don't drive when I'm drunk," came back the prisoner. Magistrate Graydon decided, however, to give the man another chance to make good his promises.

FRENCH RADICALS DEFEAT POINCARÉ

Legues were among those defeated. An analysis of the official figures shows that if the dissident Radicals who supported Premier Poincaré in the preceding chamber continued to vote for him he would have about 275 votes out of the total of 584, the full membership of the chamber, while the opposition would muster 225, with 18 seats yet to be allotted.

Experts in parliamentary affairs express the opinion that the 49 dissident Radicals will find it necessary to join the other Radicals in the organization of the chamber, with the result that the bloc of the left would be increased to 341.

Poincaré Will Retire.
Persons close to the premier say there is no doubt that his fastidious loyalty to the constitutional procedure will lead him to retire. Ordinarily the president of the republic would ask the premier to resign if the National bloc was defeated. He cannot do so, however, until the chamber is organized and the new government installed.

The Radical party of former Premier Caillaux and Edouard Herriot, which was defeated by the bloc National four years ago, again became the strongest group in the chamber, with 186 votes, while the Socialists, whose greatest strength in preceding years was 101 in 1914, will number 111 in the new chamber. The communists will have at least 24 seats, making the entire strength of the extreme left of the chamber 135.

Other well-known deputies re-elected were André Fallières, son of the former premier; Louis Klotz, former finance minister, and Louis Dubois, former president of the republic.

FRANCS TAKE SLUMP.
Canadian Press Despatch. New York, May 12.—Defeat of the Poincaré ministry in the French election, reviving talk of the premier's resignation, brought an abrupt decline of 45 points in the price of French francs at the opening of today on the local exchange market. From a level slightly above six cents, to which the franc dropped last week, the rate fell today to 5.51 cents. The franc then rallied moderately as good buying support was encountered. Sterling declined more than a cent to below $4.86. Interbank bankers with German connections asserted that the retirement of Poincaré, an extremist in German policy, might reasonably be expected to hasten on a reparations settlement.

S. WATERLOO MEMBER MAY OPPOSE BUDGET

William Elliott, M. P. Influenced by Attitude of Two Ministers.

Canadian Press Despatch. Galt, May 12.—William Elliott, M. P. for South Waterloo, who was home for the week-end, said today that he was hesitating about voting for the budget because two cabinet ministers, Hon. Charles Stewart and Hon. W. R. Motherwell, had said the budget was the first step towards the abolition of protection, and therefore looking after the interests of his constituency, which included workingmen, manufacturers and farmers, he was considering where that policy would lead. He was in favor of a low tariff, just as low as would let industries succeed. He said he would vote a tariff. He predicts that the next federal election will be the greatest Canada has ever seen on the tariff. He favored a permanent tariff commission, and said there was no doubt the budget would carry.

MRS. A. J. CAISSIE IS TOLD HUSBAND NOW IN WINDSOR

Massachusetts Woman Thanks Chief Birrell For Efforts of Police.

WITHOUT FUNDS

Mrs. Andre J. Caissie of Fitchburg, Mass., who came to London 22 days ago in search of her husband, a veteran of the war, left for Windsor this afternoon, having obtained information that her husband was in that city, presumably following the occupation of a butcher.

Mrs. Caissie paid a farewell visit to the office of Chief Birrell this morning to thank him for the efforts he has made to locate her husband. "I find out that he left London before I came here at all," said Mrs. Caissie to The Advertiser. "He was here for a long time, and then he got a job with a gang of C. N. R. men at Longwoods. He left there for Windsor ten days ago, I am told, and I hope to find him there or in Detroit."

While in London, Mrs. Caissie was staying at the Metropole and waiting for a short time and then with the Sisters of St. Joseph. She stated she was without funds, but that Monseigneur McKeown had provided her with enough money to reach Windsor. Her daughter, Mary Cecile, a pretty child of five, accompanied her mother to the police station this morning. The youngster speaks nothing but French, her mother stated.

Miss Emma Bonser was responsible for Mrs. Caissie coming to London on a hunt for her husband. Miss Bonser met him on a boat plying between England and the United States, and a friend told her of Mrs. Caissie who was living in Fitchburg. Caissie left his house in Canada a year ago, stating he would write when he got a job and a home for her.

The woman cannot understand her husband's actions, and hopes that when they meet the atmosphere will be cleared. She still loves him, she says, and is willing to live with him once more.

HENDERSON REFUSES TO REINSTATE MEN

The Home Secretary Decides Against Policemen Who Went Out on Strike.

Associated Press Despatch. London, May 12.—The appeals made last week to the home secretary, Arthur Henderson, for the reinstatement of the members of the London police force who went on strike in 1919 because of the order forbidding the formation of police trade unions have been refused. Numerous organizations urged the home secretary, who is directly responsible for the control of London's police, to have the strikers taken back on the force, and after several days' consideration of the matter the minister has decided against the men.

Yukon Ice Jam Smashes Docks

Heavy Damage Results As the River Begins To Break.

Associated Press Despatch. Dawson, Y. T., May 12.—The vanquished floes of the big ice jam ran down the Yukon River Saturday and crashed into the docks, leaving tangled ruin. The huge platform of White Pass was opened by the force of the impact, the engine house, the boiler room and the engine itself were smashed. The ice jam was not broken up until the morning of the 11th, when the building now hangs precariously in the air.

The dock at the rear of the Bank of Commerce was also smashed, but the bank was not damaged. At Selkirk the big ice jam extends as far as the eye can see. The Stewart is open at Mayara.

A generous patron of both the theatrical and musical arts, Mrs. Harris was also one of the capital's greatest philanthropists. She was born in Cobourg, Ont.

MEET ON MAY 19.

Associated Press Despatch. Paris, May 19.—At the request of Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain, Premier Poincaré has consented to advance the date of his visit to Chequers Court for a discussion of the reparations question from May 20 to May 19. This will allow a more ample time for the conversations between the two premiers.

PHOSPHORESCENT GOLF BALLS SOLVES WORKMAN'S PROBLEM

Enthusiast of the Royal and Ancient Game Points Way Out of Difficulty.

SOME OBSTACLES

In refutation of what is a fairly general cry that golf is not a workman's game, a well known enthusiast of the royal and ancient game in the city states that while there is some objection to the civil golf course on the ground that the average workman has no time to play until it is too dark to see, there is a solution for the trouble, namely phosphorescent golf balls. "By this means," he said, "you can play the game perfectly well in any degree of light or lack of light. I myself have played the game some years ago in Greenland in the long winter months, when there was practically no light at all, and I found that the loss of balls was no greater than when I am playing on the links down here in old Ontario. Of course we had to have small phosphorescent patches on the backs of our coats so that the players at a tee could see where the chips in front were but there was no casualties in this way."

Some Objections.
"Of course," he continued, "there was the objection that once in a while a fellow would take a swipe at a dead fish or at Peary's brass buttons that he had dropped or at something that, but that was really no harm done, and it added to the fun and excitement of the game. I myself held the record for the Greenland International meet of 1912, when I went clear across the arctic circle in 15,000 shots, but that was the only game in which I was thoroughly extended."

"The flight of the phosphorescent balls was easily seen either in the fairway or in the rough. I remember once I drove a ball in a crevasse up there, and though it was dark, I saw it as it came out of the hole. I had to climb down of course and it took me a couple of weeks and about 200 to get out, but the other partner and he had to get an Eskimo and a row boat and just as he was about to play his ball the bear got nasty and I had to get the phosphorescent game has great attraction in many ways and I can heartily recommend it to Londoners on the civil golf course if they feel that they are not getting their feet as worth by playing all day. It allows the busy workman to get in a few rounds even after the day's work is done and is a matter of fact a most refreshing relaxation from the glare of the movies or the brilliance of the average office. MONDAY, MAY 12, 1924.

Giving Men a New Start.

The report of Alfred E. Lavell, commissioner for the extra-mural employment of prisoners in Ontario, is a human sort of document. It is the record of a step taken for two purposes, (1) that the family of a man convicted in court should not suffer unnecessary hardship by reason of their means of support being cut off, and (2) an effort to make the convicted person get back and take his or her place as a useful member of society.

The cases where men break faith are small in number, when compared to the men who live up to the trust placed in them. In 1923 permits to leave prison and start over again were granted to 218 men; of this number only three committed crime again and were re-sentenced; two broke the O. T. A.; six escaped and three of these were recaptured. Over 200 of the 218, in the words of the report, "gave little or no trouble of any kind while outside and played the game fairly throughout the year."

The earnings of paroled men in 1923 were over $50,000. That amount went to the support of their families, and saved them from becoming public charges or forced to rely on what charity might come their way.

One or two typical cases are representative of many referred to in the report:

"A Canadian born in 1886. A clever mechanic. Home partly paid for. Was convicted of theft and given from nine to twenty-four months. If much of the sentence were served actually inside a reformatory the family would lose all. On recommendation of the board of parole he was, after six months, granted a permit with the promise of parole provided his behavior on permit had been satisfactory. His trouble was liquor. After three months he fell; was placed in the jail by me for some weeks and again allowed out. His behavior after that was such that it was considered right to parole him in December and he has since done well, the home has been saved and the family provided for."

"(e) Convicted of theft and given twelve to twenty-four months. Has a wife and five children. A permit was granted him after four months. His behavior was such that he was eventually paroled. He is doing well."

Apart from any sentiment that is likely to overlook hard facts, this looks like good business. It is the constant tug of a common sense plan to pull the man back to the place from which he slipped. The appeal of the family, the home, the children—it is a strong one. Other things may come in and break it down, but the magnet is still there, and it gives the authorities the instrument they want to work with.

A good man will slip at times, but that is no reason for keeping him down. The worthy thing is to pick him up, give him a pat on the back at times, and let him show what he can do on a second chance. The records of the board doing this work prove that it can be done. Reclaiming husbands and fathers, and putting them back at the head of families, is a work that has a grip and an appeal for any man.

Let These Senators Keep Out.

It is remarkably strange that so many of the attacks made against the Canadian Nationals can be traced back to Conservative origin.

Senator Taylor of New Westminster, B. C., is calling for an investigation of the company's affairs on the Pacific Coast at a time when the investigation is going on.

Senator Taylor claims he knows nothing of the inquiry, but the facts are against him. Sir Henry Thornton picked two of the best and most disinterested men he could find to go and investigate. One of them discussed the matter with Senator Taylor. They advertised in the papers of British Columbia that the sessions were going to be held, and invited statements and testimony. What more could possibly be done? Yet Senator Taylor bestirs himself to call for an investigation. He awoke at the wrong time.

Fired from the same flame of a passionate dislike of the Canadian Nationals, Senator Bennett calls for a special committee of senators to be appointed to inquire into the finances and expenditure of the Canadian National Railways. By way of explanation, it is said the senators are impelled, "in the interests of the great governmental utilities, that there should be definite information as to the liabilities and assets, and also as to expenditures. The inquiry will not be a persecution, but a fair, generous, exhaustive examination to place the road on a proper financial basis."

It is hard to classify that attitude. It is one of two things: (1) It is either good enough to laugh at, or (2) it is positive impudence and an exhibition of vanity and conceit that needs to be squashed.

The Canadian National Railways are not going to be victimized to suit the political stupidity of Senator Taylor or Senator Bennett. They are serving the interests of the enemies of the road when they call for investigations; they are further serving the same end when they complacently assume the attitude that a committee of slumbering senators shall come forth and set the Canadian Nationals right financially and morally.

These meddling senators should be told plainly to mind their own business.

More Power For Ontario.

Sir Adam Beck welcomes Hon. George P. Graham as chairman of the Canadian commission to confer with the U. S. authorities regarding international waterways.

The Dominion commission must of necessity work closely with the Hydro-Electric Commission sion of Ontario in developing power from the St. Lawrence. It is right that they should work together. They can have but one purpose, and they are serving the same people.

This section of Ontario desires that eastern Ontario receive the same benefits from publicly-developed power as are now enjoyed by western Ontario.

The power is there, as it was at Niagara, waiting to be harnessed. It should be put to work, because its present waste by reason of non-development is not good business.

It has been abundantly demonstrated that publicly-developed power is feasible and good. It is doing more than any other agency to make Ontario less dependent on the coal mines of United States.

And it must be accepted as a foregone conclusion that the water powers of Ontario are the property of the people, and that they have prior and inalienable rights when the time comes to tap them. It is a monopoly, and must so remain.

Must Opposition Always Oppose?

When Hon. Arthur Meighen spoke at Windsor a few days before the budget was brought down he predicted that the Progressives would be bitterly disappointed in that document; there would be no reductions at all. His policy was the same as that of Sir Henry Drayton, who moved an amendment to the budget in 1922, charging that the Liberals had not carried into effect their election platform. He had anticipated sweeping tariff reductions, but they were not present. Therefore the Conservatives opposed the budget.

In 1924 there were reductions made in the tariff. Although barred from making an amendment, the Conservatives will oppose it because of the reductions made.

It presents a peculiar situation—opposing a budget in 1924 because it did not make reductions; opposing it in 1924 because it does make reductions.

The National Railways were brought together largely under a Conservative government. They took the only course open in a situation that was not one bit removed from being desperate; their action was in the right direction, but they were fearful when election time came that Mr. King would be dominated by Montreal interests to the point of undoing all this work. They told the people of their fears, and sought to create an impression that the safety of the National lines was in a continuation of Conservative rule and nothing else.

But the government changed; the position of the National lines was further solidified and strengthened by the new government.

The premier became the leader of the opposition. He undertook the role of critic; he intimidated several times that Sir Henry Thornton would be well advised to quit making speeches and get down to business. The opposition to branch lines comes from the Conservatives now; Conservative senators want an investigation of the whole system. Sir Henry Drayton demands details in opposition that his party when in power never gave to the House.

Yet it is the way of oppositions. It is their business—or they seem to think it is—to oppose what a government proposes.

If a government takes up where another left off, and is prepared to make use of any policy of its predecessor, then that policy must be opposed. It is a real political somersault, but it must be done.

The Only Honorable Course.

A request for a large deposit from the Dominion government to save the Home Bank was not considered by Premier King.

His attitude should have been the attitude of every person in public position.

If such a course had been followed by every government official it would not have been possible to bribe people to prolong the life of the already defunct bank.

The longer it lived the greater was the wreck that ultimately crashed down on the depositors and shareholders.

The Government Is Right.

Premier King made it plain in parliament that it was the policy of the government to make permanent the existing pension and bonus to amputation cases resulting from war injuries.

The Advertiser believes this to be the proper course, and one that should receive the support of every member of the Canadian parliament.

There is need for economy, but the country can practice it on those more able to stand it than the men who were wrecked in the nation's service.

Note and Comment

Rotarians are interested in the Hobby Fair, and the barbers in the bobby fair.

If the premier of Ontario knows when the vote on the liquor legislation is going to take place he should say so.

A lot of men are applying for positions as brakemen on the C. N. R. A number of politicians and senators at Ottawa are already working on this job.

A young man near Brussels, to stop an aching tooth, split the molar open, then took a red-hot harpin to kill the nerve. Using such gentle methods, he ought to make a great dentist.

The Home Bank people who hit Premier King for a loan from the Dominion had about the same luck as depositors who have been applying to the Home Bank for one ever since August 17.

The town fathers of Thamesville have resorted to the curfew bell at 9 o'clock, at which time all under 16 must retire to their homes. That may work all right in Thamesville, but it would be harder in London, where so many of the 30 class are decked to resemble 16.

BEATRICE BAREBACK'S ADVICE TO THE LOVE-LORN.

Dear Beat,—I am very much in love with a girl. But because I have some moles on my nose she won't marry me. What shall I do?
Answer—Have the moles removed by an electrician. Then have a mole-skin coat made of them and give it to the girl.

Dear Beat,—I am one of those unfortunate married women that is dangerously fascinating to men. I am so beautiful that men make my life unbearable by constantly chasing me and giving me gorgeous presents. Indeed, I am so popular that often I have nearly half of my dances taken at parties.

The milkman, the butcher and the coalman are all crazy about me, especially the coalman. He never speaks and never looks at me, but I can tell by the way he scratches his head that my presence stirs him profoundly. Every time he comes in I am terrified. Just yesterday I heard him whistling down the cellar. I knew he was just trying to lure me down there, so I went down. As soon as the love-sick man saw me he jumped out the window and ran away. Apparently he was afraid his emotions would get the better of him to such an extent that he might kiss me.

Why am I so cursed with this terrible charm? If my husband knew the looks that coalman gives me he would return from Siberia, where he fled the day of our marriage, and kill him.

Answer—Your case is exactly like my own, Cleo. All my life I have been chased by men. All my girl friends have had the same experience. They claim they simply cannot keep men away from them. But that, my dear, is the price we women must pay for our beauty.

Dear Beat,—I am one of the army of hard-working, neglected wives who have nothing to live for. My husband is so cruel and inconsiderate that he goes to the club once every six months and leaves me all alone with seven maids and a butler. Yesterday he refused to increase my pocket money from $10,000 to $12,000 a year, and told me that I would have to be less extravagant.

There are two ways out of this agony—divorce and suicide. Which do you advise?

Answer—Poor little neglected wife. At first thought I was going to suggest a divorce from your brute of a husband, but, on the other hand, I think there is a better way. You must remember that $10,000 a year pocket money, although a paltry sum, will at least keep you in shoe laces. No, Neglected Wife, I advise you to avenge the cruel wrong by baking some plaster of paris doughnuts for your husband some night. He will eat them and get terribly ill. Then he will realize what a jewel you are, and may reform.

Dear Beat,—I am a very handsome young man. How can I get into the movies?

Answer—You can get into the movies usually by giving the girl who takes in the tickets an occasional box of chocolates.

About Keepin' Hens

The garden's planted row on row, the lettuce, beets and carrots, too, the onions headin' the process, and startin' now to scramble through. It is a pleasant sight to see them things a-growin' as they do, me thinkin' that for ten days now my farmin' work is well nigh through.

Beside that patch there dwell the hens, some white, some black, some thin, some stout, and every half hour of the day the bloomin' things is bustin' out.

The coop wherein they spend their days is fashioned in a wondrous plan, a thing more crude to stand the gale was never reared by livin' man. Piano box, a packin' case, four cedar posts, ten yards of wire, what more would settler ever ask, what further should ten hens require?

There was a hammer and a saw, two pounds of nails, much skill and thought, and hour by hour the buildin' grew, like most earth's greatest things is wrought.

But every half hour of the day them hens is always bustin' out, when one has found an openin' there she to the others gives a shout—and then they climb out through a hole to see just how the garden goes, and if in doubt about the thing they start to excavate the rows.

'Tis then I rush and get some feed, a mutterin' words what's bad and strong, and coax them jail-birds back again and lock 'em up where they belong.

Once more I wield the hammer there, and bar the spot from whence they fled, and threaten that the next time out I'll shove the axe across their head.

And then I turn to read a spell, the life of some outstandin' men, when comes the shout that makes me jump, "Your hens has busted out again."—ARK.

Find Your Master

HAPPY any man who has found a real master.

For a true master does not cramp you, reduce you to slavish imitation, dominate, absorb, so that your personality is lost in his. A real master helps you to find yourself.

A true master sets you free. No more interesting human relation exists than that of teacher and pupil, master and disciple. All our lives we are following somebody, sitting at someone's feet, accepting the most vital decisions without a question from one in whom for some reason we believe.

We begin as school children. Those who have taught school can say that there is hardly a more pathetic moment than that where one stands for the first time before a group of little faces looking up to him as from distant depths for wisdom and guidance, which he knows only too well he sadly lacks. From that teacher there will come some spiritual essence that is going to remain with those pupils their life long.

WHEN we grow up we are still at one school or another. Our capacity is limited; all we can do is to attend to our business; we have no time nor ability to think out great questions for ourselves; hence in politics we follow Smith, and in art Brown, and in literature Jones, and in religion Robinson. As for ourselves, we have to make a living.

A great deal that is written, therefore, about our duty to do our own thinking is impractical. We simply cannot. It will be much more sensible to advise the average person to select intelligently his own masters.

There are some independent souls who rebel against the idea of any master at all. They would not follow anybody. They set up the totem pole of their own ego and worship that, if anything. This may be fine. Usually it is foolish.

No fetish is so dangerous as liberty. No road ends more surely in the bog of mediocrity and unconscious imitation than independence road.

For the surest way to individuality is to choose the right master. It is he who discovers you to yourself. He develops your inborn powers. He does not bind you. He makes you to be born again. So Socrates cryptically calls himself a "mid-wife." He did not tell his disciples what to think. He enabled them to find out what they really thought themselves.

To the Editor

From Mr. Lethbridge.

Member for West Middlesex Believes Committee Sincere in Their Search For Information.

Editor of The Advertiser:—Sir,—My attention has been drawn to an article in your morning issue of May 7 under the caption of "Ontario Tories Are Out to Assist Ottawa Brothers," and "The new agricultural committee goes out to gather ammunition to fire from the big guns at Ottawa."

The article goes on to say "At least such was gathered by The Advertiser last night from J. G. Lethbridge, the member from West Middlesex." I wish to say that such a statement is absolutely incorrect. The suggestion came to me from the reporter.

My reply was that the chairman of the committee thought we should have nothing to do with the tariff question, but the opinion of all the committee seemed to be we could not prevent farmers from expressing their views on the question. As a member of that committee I wish to say that I believe the sole purpose and object in the appointment of the committee was to find a solution for the farmers' problems, and I believe every member of that committee is absolutely sincere in his efforts to solve the difficulties now surrounding agriculture.

Over a Hundred Million Dollars Gone and Forgotten

OF the 8,725,000 horsepower generated every day in Canada, 55 per cent is steam power generated from fuel—coal.

And to produce their share of this horsepower Ontario and Quebec in 1923 imported 14,500,000 tons of bituminous coal at a cost of a hundred and nineteen million dollars.

Every other province in Canada produced their steam power with Canadian coal almost exclusively.

Why should Ontario and Quebec not use Nova Scotia coal for steaming—the same kind of coal used from the Ottawa river to the Atlantic sea board?

Why should not that hundred and nineteen millions of money be spent in Canada among our own people, to build up our own coal mine industry, to build up our Canadian communities?

Consider the purchasing power of $119,000,000 in household necessities, clothing, shoes and food. Think of the $119,000,000 new business distributed among the manufacturing industries of Canada. And remember that $119,000,000 has left the country forever—no Canadian will ever again finger one of those dollars.

And on top of this 119 millions for steam coal, Canada spends a greater sum for heating coal.

If you would like to give a little study to this coal question, we have prepared an interesting booklet, "Coal, The Big Factor in Canadian Economics," which will be mailed upon receipt of this coupon.

Terriers and Preston Seniors Open Inter-County With Victories

GUELPH AND TWIN CITY NINES LOSE INITIAL ENGAGEMENTS

Wolves Blanked 4-0 by Preston—Terriers Win 5-3.

GRAHAM SHAKY

Special to The Advertiser.
Galt, May 11.—The champion Terriers opened the Inter-County League season here Saturday by registering a 5-3 victory over their old rivals, Guelph Leafs, before a crowd of 3,000. For the first time of the season it was a good exhibition. While good and bad baseball were mixed up, nevertheless the game was interesting throughout.

The local nine went on the field with only one new face on the team. Lynch at third base, while Guelph presented four new men. Terry at third, Lesage at short, Paquette at second and Johnson in center. While the Leafs outlived the Terriers 13 to 8, getting three doubles, they were outplayed defensively, and they failed to hit when it counted. Galt, who was Guelph's seven errors, six went to the three new infielders, Lesage having a trio.

Friendly Graham received the pitching assignment, and the little fellow was far from being right. He went well for the first five innings, allowing but one run and six hits, but in the sixth he weakened, and in the seventh was touched for three doubles in a row for two runs, tying the score. However, the Terriers came right back, Oliver winning the game with his triple, the longest hit of the afternoon, with one on base, and made sure of the win by adding another in the eighth.

The feature was the fine game turned in by Lefty Goyer, even if he did lose. While touched for eight hits, he did not issue a free ticket, and struck out eight. His control was the best. Graham struck out three, walked two and struck out one wild pitch. All of the Leafs hit safely except Paquette, Lesage, Terry, J. O'Connor and Goyer, each getting a pair. The winning feature was a double play unassisted by Himes in the ninth. Himes started at bat for Galt with three hits, while Oliver had a pair.

Prior to the game there was a parade, and the 1924 season was officially ushered in by Mayor Willard taking the mound, with Col. Oliver behind the plate, and Wm. Elliott, M.P., at bat. Aid. J. E. Gardiner umpired.

The score:
Guelph 001 000 200—3 13 7
Galt 100 200 110—8 8 6
Goyer and Little, Graham and Oliver.
Umpires—Hallinan, Toronto, and Jackson, Hamilton.

WOLVES BLANKED 4-0.
Special to The Advertiser.
Kitchener, May 11.—The Kitchener and Waterloo Wolves were blanked 4 to 0 by the Preston Riverdies in the opening game of the senior Inter-County season here Saturday. It was a good game of ball, with the pitching of Woods for Kitchener featuring and the fielding of the Preston club being airtight.

Woods allowed only six hits and struck out 12 men, yet he was shut out, due to the timely base blows of the Preston team, four of their six hits figuring in the scoring. Every time the Kitchener team threatened the Preston infield came through with a new player to stop the rally, and twice runners were pegged out at the plate. Mellaby, the new second baseman for Preston, made two neat catches, while McAvoy at short also turned in a good game. The latter, though, got a lucky double that drove in two Preston runs when Toletski misjudged his fly in the fifth. The only other extra base hit was got by Sammy Kleahn of the home club, it being a long double. The attendance was 1,100, the best here for some time.

By innings:
Preston 100 020 010—4 6 6
Kitchener 000 000 000—0 9 2
Batteries—Archibald and Almas, Woods and Ziegler.

TAYLOR-FORBES TAKES PROVINCIAL LOOP OPENER

Special to The Advertiser.
Guelph, May 11.—Taylor-Forbes had everything their own way in the opening game of the provincial soccer league Saturday, when they disposed of Lynden 7 to 1. In the first half play was fairly even. The count at half-time was 2 to 0. In the second half Canton, one of Lynden's star players, sustained a painful cut in the eye, when struck in the face by the ball necessitating his retirement and leaving the visitors one man short. The home team ran in four goals in this half, while it took until a few minutes before full time that Lynden notched their only count.

Diamond Dust

Prenderkast was released by Manager Jack Beatty Saturday. Prenderkast formerly pitched for Tilbury in the Kent County League and was among the best amateur pitchers. Barbelon was left behind when the team went to Muskegon Saturday.

Barbelon had an almost impossible task of breaking into the infield when Sandquist showed so well with the stick and Naleway and Gehring were secured from Detroit. Beatty, however, considers Barbelon has possibilities and will likely farm him out.

There seems to be a slight impression following Saturday's game that Empire-Chief Lu Pye and his co-workers no sooner rid of masks and pads than they adopt tin cups and black goggles as the next disguise.

President Heard said yesterday that he received numerous complaints from the fans. Some said that they'd never go to see another game that Pye or Doolin worked.

"Two fans," said the prexy, "went so far as to say that it looked as if somebody was trying to drive the two Canadian cities out of the league."

Harris called the pitch for Pye when he walked away from the plate towards the bench. But Doolin followed with some second-story work in the eighth, when Gehring hit into a near double play at second. Hegedorn, taking the peg at second, didn't come within three feet of fouling the bat. He didn't need to. Empire Doolin no sooner saw the ball going to second than he turned his back to watch the play at first.

Double umpiring doesn't, apparently, bring double vision.

VEHICLES' STREAK OF WINS BROKEN

Hams Pile Up Seven in the Seventh To Win Saturday.

Special to The Advertiser.
Hamilton, May 10.—Wayneburg's wild streak in the seventh inning of today's game with Saginaw enabled the Clippers to overcome a one-run lead and pile up seven runs to 3, with most of the runs coming as the result of the pitchers' wildness. Saginaw scored three in the fifth, when Schelberg lost control, after having the Aces eating out of his hand previously, and the locals came back in their half of this frame to score two and drive Messenger from the mound. McCallum and Wayneburg were the relieving pitchers, but whereas Mac held the Bashang crew safe for the remainder of the game, Wayneburg went only two innings before the top lot all idea of location.

GOLF
AS CHAMPIONS PLAY IT

SELECTING A MASHIE
PAY ATTENTION TO THE LAY.

RIGHT WRONG
HEEL OF CLUB SHOULD TOUCH GROUND—POINT CLEAR OF GROUND. IT SHOULD NOT LIE FLAT.

DO NOT SELECT CLUB WITH TOO MUCH LOFT OR YOU WILL FORCE STROKE FOR DISTANCE.

What points should a player consider in selecting a mashie that will suit his style of play?

Answered by JOHN BLACK.

In selecting a mashie the player should pay particular attention to the lay of the club. The mashie should rest on the heel, and have the point of the club clear of the ground. If you select a mashie that is too flat, and which rests on the point when you make the stroke, the club will turn in your hands, and the ball will go in the right. Care should be taken in regard to the loft. Do not select a mashie with too much loft, or you will be forcing the stroke to get the distance. The shaft should be stiff, and not too thick, so that you can feel the head of the club. The weight of the club should be about thirteen ounces.

L.A.A. NINE ORDERED WORKOUTS EVERY NIGHT

Meet Lucan in Opening Game At Tecumseh Park Saturday.

Chairman Frank Hornsby, of the L. A. A. Baseball Sub-Committee has issued a call for all aspirants to report at Tecumseh Park every night this week at 5:30, for workouts in preparation for next Saturday's opener here with the Lucan Irish Nine. Coach Dinsmore has found that he has such a wealth of good material that he is going to have difficulty in making a final selection of the lineup, and, therefore, he urgently requests that every man be on the job and display his wares at every practice, so he can have a thorough knowledge of every player's ability, as well as have the regulars in tip-top shape when the opening song rings.

Arrangements are being rapidly completed for the usual opening day ceremonies as well as a parade prior to the game.

The prices have been fixed at 25 cents for general admission, and 10 cents for the grandstand, inclusive of tax.

C. McDougall has been appointed business manager, and will work with all members of the committee in handling the affairs of the club, exclusive of the playing end, which will be left entirely in the hands of the coach.

All indications point to a most successful opener, as the Irish Nine, in as many days, have always been popular with London fans, and can always be counted on to have one of the best amateur ball clubs in this section of the country.

Roy Jenkins has been appointed official scorer for the club, which means that this end of the team will be well looked after, judging by his work of last season.

Decide To Postpone Actual Operation of Liquor Act Over Week-End.

Canadian Press Despatch.

The permits were ready, and a large stock of liquor was on hand, but other staffs were so busy adjusting their sales systems that it was decided to postpone the actual operation of the act until Monday.
