The Government Had Three Votes to the Good.

OPPOSITION CHALLENGES VOTES

Maintains Messrs. Conmec, Stratton and Bowman Were Interested

[Special to The Advertiser.] Toronto, Ont., April 21. - The longdrawn-out Soo bill debate was ended tonight and a division taken, but the issue is not yet decided. The division was on the amendment that the bill be given a six months' hoist, and it resulted in a majority of 3 for the Government. The vote on the bill itself was not taken, on account of the objection raised by Mr. Whitney in connection with the right of Hon. Mr. Stratton and Messrs. Conmee and Bowman to vote on the bill. Mr. Stratton is vice-president of the Traders' industries, and at the morning session tomorrow the argument will be as to whether their cases will be taken up individually or collectively. If the former course is taken, they will have to refrain from voting on the point of order, but if the latter, two may vote on each point of order only, the member affected abstaining. this question is decided, division on the bill will be taken.

Mr. Tudhope (E. Simcoe), was called to Orillia by the death of his brother, and his vote was paired. When the debate on the Soo guarantee bill was resumed Mr. Domney read the contract between Messrs. Mr. Hanna denied being employed by allied interests of the Standard Oil

Mr. Conmee then read a letter from Foley Bros., which states that they had never performed any work Conmee and Bowman on a 10 per cent basis, and that all reports to the contrary were absolutely untrue. Chicago, April 22. - Peter Neidermeier, Gustave Marx and Harvey Van Dine, the notorious car-barn bandits. and confessed murderers of eight men, were hanged here today. Neidermeier was the first to die and his manner of death was unusual. He was so weak as the result of his recent attempt at suicide that the jail guards were forced to carry him to the scaffold. He was then placed in a chair and the drop sprung at 10:36. His body moved convulsively as he hung. Although it was first believed by the physicians that he was strangled, it developed that his neck had been broken. Twenty minutes after the drop fell, he was pronounced dead and the body was cut down.

Previous to the execution Neidermeier maintained the same sullen demeanor that had characterized him since he became a prisoner. While the death warrant was being read he snatched the document from the sheriff and stuck it in his pocket, making a sarcastic reference to his execution. He was truck, then carried down a flight of stairs to the scaffold. Marx, accompanied by two priests, was led to the scaffold, repeating a litany after the clergy. He made no statement. He appeared weak, but met death bravely, the trap being sprung on him at 11:17. He was pronounced dead at 11:34, his neck having been

ISTORY OF THE

Japs Against Attacking-Kori tz Was Blown Up.

Washington, D. C., April 22.—A report by mail from Captain Marshall, commander of the Vicksburg, giving an account of the engagement at Chemulpo, between the Japanese and Russian naval forces on Feb. 9, was received by the navy department to-day. He was notified by Admiral Uriu, commanding the Japanese forces, that hostilities existed between Japan and Russia, and was requested in case the senior Russian naval officer present refused to leave port "that he (Capt. Marshall) keep away from the scene of action in the port so that no danger from the action would come to his ships." Captain Marshall says the Variag and Korietz, however, moved out at 11:30 a.m. Captain Marshall gives the following speaks of the captain the following speaks of the captain that the captain that the following speaks of the following speaks of the following speaks of the captain that the following speaks of the captain that the following speaks of the captain that the captain tha shall gives the following account of

"At 11:50 a.m. was heard the report of the first gun fired by the Japanese squadron, but it was not until ten minutes after that the second fire was heard, and by the report from a heavy gun, the projectile striking in the water near the Variag. From then on until 12:40 p.m., when the last shot was fired by the Japanese, the engage-ment continued, both Russian vessels noving through a limited space to the northward and eastward of Yo Dolima and apparently keeping that island as much as possible between them and their enemy. This statement is made only from my own observation, and as it appears to me. About 12:30 p.m. both Russian vessels headed in towards their anchorage at full speed, and as they approached it was seen that the Variag had a list to port and appeared to be on fire aft on the port quarter. A number of Japanese were n pursuit until about a mile inside of o Dolima, but not firing, as the oreign men-of-war were directly in the line of fire, when they gave up the chase and rejoined their squadron

Captain Marshall says that on learning there were a number of wounded on board the Variag he sent a medical officer abroad to render assistance. and when it was reported that the Variag was sinking, two of their cutters' and the whaleboat, with boats from other cruisers, assisted in taking off her personnel and putting them board the Talbot and Elba. Russian engineer officers were taken aboard the Vicksburg and cared for or some time, and, adds Captain Marshall, "on my offering to have the have to be done to get it back, and Zafiro used as temporary quarters, they were taken to the Elba, where with Toronto they are going to conheir captain detained them and declined my offer with thanks." Continuing, the captain reported: "These two officers very freely stated that they themselves had opened valves in the engine and firerooms, with the object of sinking their vessel. The fire aft. he said, continued spreading, burning fiercely until the vessel rolled over and sank. During all that time, he says, there were frequently explosions and just before sinking, there were two explosions of gunpowder or other nitro powder, as we judged by the orange-colored flashes. As near as he could learn, the Variag's loss was 21 silled and 40 wounded, the bodies of the former going down with the vessel. The Korietz, Captain Marshall reports, was not hit, as far as he could learn, Vicksburg and the Zafiro until 1:30 p.m., during which intervals he never attempted to lower a boat or go to the assistance of her consort, when she anchored in shore off us near Observation Island. Later, she was abandoned by her officers and men in their peared to be some sort of conference was delivered on board the Japanese

Picturesque City Is Declared by Tourists To Be One of the Most Ideal Places of Far East.

Kandy, Island of Ceylon, April 21 .n'the railroad journey out of Colomoo, from the region of interminable plantations of cocoa palms, one mounts oast stations of astonishing names, gaining in altitude as he gains proiciency in putting the interminable lingalese syllables together. There can be no complaint made that British rulers have disregarded the native place names. One almost wishes they had, when he struggles to renember in order such arrays of syl ables as Heneratgoda, Polyahawela, and Rambukkana, and notes with admiration how they trip from the ongue of any foreign resident. At Rambukkana peddlers ran up and down the platform with trays of fruit, bread, cakes, and drinkables. while a delightful black person, with a bunch of golden cocoanuts in one hand and a strong chopping knife in the the real drink of the country for rupee cents the unbroken package. It was admirable, the deftness and sureness with which, with a few strokes ness with which, with a few strokes of his knife, he cut to the kernel, chipped out a bunghole, and handed it to the thirsty customer, who tipped it to his mouth and refreshed himself internally, and externally, also. A pint of cool cocoanut milk went down his throat by gulps, little rills ran back to body, and then he emptied another cocoanut, and took a third one into the train to sustain him for the remaining thirty thirsty miles of travel A second engine was put to the train at Rambukkana, and quickly the train began mounting along the shoulders of hills and darting through tunnels, until rice fields, in their checkered outlines and rippling terraces, dropped away and below, and mountain shapes and further blue hills appeared on the horizon. The air came fresher, as it came unchecked from further space, and cocoa palms tossed and thrashed their glittering fronds far beneath Yet, still the train mounted, and one looked down sheer precipices for hundreds of feet, to valleys yellow with rice stubble, and one seemed to look out for hundreds of miles to the fortheir sky lines. In thirteen miles the railway conquered the 1,400 more feet breathed a fresh, invigorating air 1,-690 feet above sea level. A quick run down to one station and uphill again to Kandy, and we were at the mounttain capital, the holiday spot and playground of Ceylon, one of the most attractive places in all the tropics. Under the green trees, in the clear, sparkling air of the uplands, the white and bright colors of the natives' dress seemed to add more picturesqueness than ever to the scene, and one could unceasingly congratulate himself on coming to Ceylon when it was flooded in sunshine, instead of in the streaming rains and dense mists that blurred its beauty a bit when I saw it years ago.

The heart of Kandy is an artificial lake filling the long oval hollow be tween high hills. The lake was con verted from paddy fields originally, enlarged by the Kandyan kings, but further enlarged, surrounded ornamental wall, and planted round with trees by a British governor. As royal palms, flame trees, tamarinds, and bo trees have grown, the beauties of the place have increased, and the drive and outwalk around the lake is the promenade of all Kandy. The famous temple of the Tooth and the old palaces, now converted to Government offices, are on one side of the lake, and directly opposite is the monastry, one of the oldest in Ceylon. Between the temple and the monastery there is a constant passing to and fro of yellow robed priests, some with black, some with white, and once one with a yellow umbrella, which precisely completed the picturesque scene. Villas surround the little lake: there are fine tennis courts in a grove of name trees at the upper end, and the British residents of Kandy are much o be envied by all the world. Arcadia and Paradise are terms freey applied to Kandy, and for years it has been in my memory one of the ideal, surely to be revisited, garden spots on earth. Beyond the famous temple, away from the lake, the Governor of Ceylon has a white palace, known as the Pavilion, and if ever there were a lovely spot in the world it is there

The Persian poem inlaid on the walls of the old palace at Dethi could as well be written in Kandy, for, "If on earth be an Eden of bliss, it is this, it is The gardens and grounds surrounding the Pavilion have had 70 years of careful attention, and the climate has done the rest. The palms are superb, the tamarinds are magnificent, and there are two enormous cotton trees on the lawn, now stripped of their foliage and dropping their last big, blood-red flowers, that are mon archs among their colossal kind. There are several amherstias in the grounds, and of all blossoming trees that namesake of Lord Amherst i surely the most uniquely beautiful. From a distance the amherstia might be a maple, or almost any common, compact, deciduous tree, but from every branch and twig there depend loose, shower bouquet bunches of large, coral red petals, relieved with touch of deep yellow at the tip, and loose-raying stamens and pistils. The great, loose blossom sways in the wind, wistaria blossom shortened but magnified twenty times, and the vivid, leep coral tones against the fresh follage hold the eye with amazed fasination. Here and there about Kan dy one sees other amherstias gay with heir beautiful, rich, red blossoms, and he wonder of it never palls. There are many small and less fanous temples in the neighborhood of Kandy, and one may visit a different one, each more picturesquely situated than the other, every morning for week. Except on the night of the full low places. The farmers claim that moon, one never finds any company of the fish reached the wheat fields owworshipers at these temples, every ing to the backing up of the waters shrine is securely locked, and one has in the township drains. to rout out a languid keeper or a lonesome priest to unlock the sanctuary.

WHEAT INJURED BY FISH Odd Suit For Damages Brought By

South Colchester Farmers. Windsor, Ont., April 22. - Mr. J. W. Hanna, the well-known lawyer, of this city, has been retained by some residents of the township of Colchester South, who have brought an action against the township for damages done to their fields last year by insufficient drainage. The case will come up to trial within a short time and the farmers are counting upon some evidence which sounds like a fish story, but they claim that the thing actually happened and believe it will be a great factor in proving that the drains actually overflowed their banks.

This evidence is to the effect that after the water had recided the farm-after the water had receded the farmfall wheat, which was quite well developed, waving in a manner not caused by the wind. Upon a closer inspection they found a large number of German carp sporting among the wheat and wallowing about in the puddles of water that remained in the low places. The farmers claim that

About Sanative Antiseptic Cleansing

And about the Care of the Skin. Scalp, Hair and Hands

Too much stress cannot be placed on the great value of Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent in the antiseptic cleansing of the mucous surfaces, and of the blood and circulating fluids, thus affording pure, sweet and economical local and constitutional treatment for weakening ulcerations, inflammations, itchings, irritations, relaxations, displacements, pains and irregularities peculiar to females. Hence the Cuticura remedies have a wonderful influence in restoring health, strength and beauty to weary women, who have been prematurely aged and invalided by these distressing ailments, as well as such sympathetic afflictions as anæmia, chlorosis, hysteria and nervousness.

Women from the very first have fully appreciated the purity and sweetness, the power to afford immediate relief, the certainty of speedy and permanent cure, the absolute safety and great economy which have made the Cuticura remedies the standard humour remedies of the civilized world. Millions of women use Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, for preserving, purifying and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening and soothing red, rough and sore hands, for annoying irritations and ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative, antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves, as well as for all the purposes of the tollet, bath and nursery. "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: Four years ago I was nearly dead with inflammation and ulceration. I endured daily untold agony, and life was a burden to me. I had used medicines and washes internally and externally until I made up my mind that there was no relief for me. Calling at the home of a friend, I noticed a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My friend endorsed it highly and I decided to give it a trial to see if it would help me. It took patience and perseverence for I was in bad condition, and I used Lydia E. Merchant Warned by Magistrate-Obstructing Walks -A Wordy War.

Mr. R. J. Young, a Dundas street merchant, was told by Magistrate Love this morning that he would be fined to the full extent of the law i he repeated what he said to P. C. Mon. aghan, when the latter was in the witless box, giving evidence that Mr Young had been guilty of a breach of the law in leaving packing cases or the sidewalk.

Mr. Young claimed that they were not there very long, and the obstructioned whether the policeman knew which were on the street. Policeman Monaghan went into the box and stated that the other boxes, that is those belonging to Mr. Young, had been on the sidewalk about four hours. Mr. Young said if the policeman "kept as much tab" on the people who broke plate-glass windows as he did in this case it would be better. The court objected, but Mr. Young ontinued to blame the policeman for allowing toys to stand around in doorways. The magistrate pointed out that many boys were fined for this. The board of management of the Western Fair—and, in fact every citizen interested in the welfare of the exhibition—will be pleased to learn that as a result of the representations made to the Government by Dr. Routledge, M. Dr. Routledge pressed the claims of the Western for aid for a new dairy build-

Chairman Moore, of the dairy committee of the Western Fair board, was seen this morning, and when asked how the board would deal with an offer from the Government of money for a dairy building, he said, that it would depend upon whether any strings were ttached to the offer. If, for instance, the Government offered say $10,000, conditionally, that the fair board spend an equal amount, then he was afraid the board would have to refuse, as they could not afford that much. The board, he was sure, would be willing added to the list of experts.

"Supposing the only string was that the Government would want the build-ing put up according to the plans of the department of agriculture?"

The Question Has Become a Live ing the consent of the people of the entire city, and not a single alderman One-Property Has Decreased in Value.

At the meeting of the board of works last night, Mr. Thomas Jeffery asked the aldermen the very pertinent question, "Is Assessment Commissioner erty this year for as much as last year?" Mr. Jeffery said he asked the question because property in the vilage was not now worth more than ne-half what it was before the flood. This is a very important matter, and one which is causing much speculation around the city hall. In some quarters it is said that West London property has not been assessed for anything like what it is worth, the city preferring to increase the suburb's assessment gradually rather than to On the other hand, if what the West Londoners say is correct, it will mean a big drop in West London's taxes for 1905. Around the city hall it is admitted that if a permanent breakwater were constructed, West London property would run up in value at a tre-mendous rate, and the city would be repaid in ten or fifteen years for its outlay through the increase in taxes. There is no disposition manifested to dispute the assertion of Mr. Jones that a permanent breakwater could be built for $20,000, and as it is pointed out that the city must spend at least $1,-000 a year on the present embankment, and with very unsatisfactory results, the city might as well go ahead at

RULE REVISION WILL DO GOOD

Being a Standing Joke for Many Years.

The careful revision to which the baseball playing rules have been subjected during the off season this year has produced a vast improvement in the code. This was entirely distinct in rear of the Grand Trunk depot, are from the annual revision by the rules committee to modify their effect or to introduce new regulations. For years the playing code has been a standing joke to grammartans, and a every prospect of a change being made. puzzle to many disciples of the game, because many rules have been retained in practically their original form. And there were many indifferent sections of the code. The oblect of the grammatical revision was to condense and simplify this mass of the rules in simple, direct language, which can be interpreted by any baseball enthusiast of average intelligence. There are, perhaps, one or two instances in the revised code where exact accuracy is sacrificed to save words. For instance, the rule which defines the legal position required of the winds up with the sentence: "He shall not raise either foot until in the act of delivering the ball to the If the umpires were to adhere to the letter of the law it would force a pitcher to throw to a base without raising either foot. But another section provides that in throwing to a base the pitcher must "step directly toward such base in the act of throwing." There is only an apparent conflict, or course, and any umpire would permit a pitcher to raise his foot in throwing to a base, but that conflict could have been avoided by the use of three or four more words in the first rule quoted. In the matter of the scoring rules there has been the greatest improvement, for the mag-nates used to let those alone; consequently, the old scoring code was many years behind the game. If the scorers of the country will read the new rules carefully there will be much greater uniformity in scoring this year. There will no longer be any excuse for the man who robs a player of a put out by making a note at the bottom of the score that somebody was put out for "interference," or an "infield fly" or a "third foul bunt," or practice of many for years past.
