The house of Lewis Graham, at Greenfield, was totally consumed by fire on the evening of the 26th ult. with all its contents (excepting one bed and bedding), including about $80 in money; no insurance. The occupants, three in number were absent at the time, some two miles away, and it is supposed that burning soot fell down the chimney igniting some wood that was stored in the fire-place, setting the sheathing of the room on fire.

A NOVA SCOTIA ABROAD.—The following we clip from the Buffalo County Herald, published at Mondori, Buffalo Co., Wisconsin.—"A pleasant family reunion took place at Mr. Robert Harvey's, New Year's day. Sixty-three of the family relatives were present—all in fact, except William Harvey's family, who lived in Dakota, and three of the grand children. It was an enjoyable time, and was undoubtedly replete with recollections of pioneer times, the adventures and privations, and the enjoyment and freedom incident to early life in a new country. We can add that Old Mr. Robert Harvey, in declining years can well feel proud of his numerous descendants. They are good citizens, enterprising, and a valuable class to society. May their next annual reunion find no vacant chairs, but contentment, prosperity and happiness from the white haired grand grand father to the prattling grand child."

Mr. Robert Harvey, referred to above is a native of this county and brother of Mr. Geo. Harvey of Grand Pre. He left here some forty years ago, and we are glad to learn of his success and of the high esteem in which he is held in the "far west."

Canning. Schr. Della Barry, Capt. Morris, run aground coming up the river. She sprang a leak and partially filled, damaging the goods to a greater or less extent. She was aground about two days before she was to float. She was from St. John, cargo laden. After discharging here she will go to Kingsport for repairs, thence to Wolfville and Hantport, having goods on board for these places. It was the first trip for her this season. She is now owned by Capt. Morris, who recently purchased her from Delos Holmes.

The weather is simply dreadful and the roads are almost impassable, consequently it is needless for me to add everything is dull and gloomy hereabouts.

The I. O. G. T. bids fair to flourish, new members being constantly added. Our industrial men appear to be struck with a fit of earnestness, and it looks as though something would be accomplished.

Waterville. Waterville has one Church, Presbyterian, beautifully situated in a grove of pines, near the R. R. Station; a grand Common school efficiently taught by Mr. Abner Chesley and Miss Kate Fisher; two good mills; a Lodge of Good Templars; a Division of S. of T.; two grist mills; four stores; one saddler's shop; four blacksmiths; Post and money-order office; Loyd & Co's. lumber yard; several gentlemen's residences; one hotel; a number of enterprising stock growers. Mr. Healey's pigs "are hard to beat," having killed a tully little one a short time since which nearly turned the scales at $60. Will Pines is the lucky owner of a prize broodmare and colt and Jersey cow. A number of fine orchards, which rank among the best in the Co., and the number might be easily very largely increased. The culture of small fruits is also engaged in to a considerable extent.

Bridgetown. For a long time Kentville has been noted for a large amount of rowdiness; but from accounts lately received it seems that it now has a rival that is likely to far eclipse it in that direction. The Temperance League and other temperance bodies in Annapolis county seem to have got discouraged in trying to keep rum down under the Scott Act, as there has been so many hitches and flaws found in the temperance laws enacted under the present government, and have about concluded to let matters take their own course. Consequently some half dozen places have been opened in Bridgetown for selling the fiend, Rum; and by the number seen on the streets daily under its influence they are driving a big business. Last Friday night two young roughs by the name of Hill and Grandland with others got drunk and concluded to take the town down. They went to Mr. Glenore's house, forced their way in and proceeded to smash windows, doors, furniture. One of them told Mrs. Glenore to prepare for death as she had only three minutes to live. She however managed to make her escape in her night clothes out of the back way to a house near. A young man sleeping in the chamber jumped out of the window nearly scared to death; and a negro-man in the house turned quite white with fear, but managed to escape them. Saturday morning Stipendiary Forsyth issued warrants for them, and Sheriff Morse lodged them in jail. They were brought up on Monday for trial and sent back to await their trial at the Supreme Court, to be held in Bridgetown in June next. And dame rumor has it that two fair damsels of that town met on the street one day last week, and after some sharp words in which one gave the other the lie, the one insulted immediately gave the other a slap across the mouth which sent her half way across the street. Now if there is any place in this civilized country that has been and continues to see the damnable consequences of rum-drinking more than this place we pity them. How long will the people of Nova Scotia continue to see their sons go to destruction by this great evil, Rum? I hope the people will wake up, and at the next general election send men to represent them in the House of Assembly who will pass laws prohibiting it being brought into the country.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editors of the ACADIAN. GENTLEMEN.—As Editors are supposed to be able to give information on all matters pertaining to good government and honorable treatment, I take the privilege of asking through your columns, First, if the Municipal Council has the right to charge Auctioneers a license? Second, if Municipal Councilors have superior right over others to ignore their own regulations or bye-laws, or in other words, to sell at public auction without first taking out a license as other persons are required to do? Third, is it fair or honorable for them to do so even if they are thus privileged? By answering the above questions you will greatly oblige, Greatly obliged, Auctioneer.

Choice Miscellany. THE ROSEBUD FROM HER HAIR. He dreamed of the fan in her fingers, And worshipped her thinnest curl, He was E. Bert, the son of the rector; She was Dorothy, the niece of the Earl...

From the roll and the roar of the cannon, Where the waves of the battle ran high To the white curtained bed of a cottage, They brought a young soldier to die...

Afar from the grave by the colar, While the snowflakes were falling without, A battle-centred leader was telling Of the fight, and the foe put to rout, He spoke of the sweep of the sabres, Of the rain of the pitiless lead...

A FREAK OF FORTUNE. The morning sky was all alight with flying clouds as Lettice Grayson coming into the barn, with a basket in hand paused a moment on the threshold and listened...

"I thought so," said she. "It's the tune he always whistles. I've caught him this time." Lettice was light of foot, and as she came softly on the bay-carpeted floor of the upper left, George Carton never saw or heard her, but worked steadily away at his canvas...

"Suddenly a hand came down with a quick, sudden emphasis on his shoulder. 'Now!' cried Lettice, exultantly, 'I know who it is that has been stealing all our eggs! I'll tell my uncle, and have you locked up! And—oh, my goodness me! I declare, I thought it was Joe Smithers, the farm lad.'"

"Upon my word," said he, "this is rather an unexpected interruption. So she suspect me of sinister designs upon the fresh eggs, does she?"

"He lay down in the fragrant hay, in a sort of graceful careless attitude, with hands clasped under his head, and looking dreamily up at the peaked roof, where the swallows came and went. And as he gazed he thought of Lettice Grayson's great glittering eyes and oval dimpled face."

"A rustic nymph," he said to himself; "a dryad in the wilderness. So she is the niece that old Farmer Bulkeley spoke about. Well, she will prove an additional attraction to the dull old farmhouse if once I can manage to make her acquaintance."

"But he saw Lettice no more. 'No, I can't, aunt,' said the girl; 'after the dreadful mistake I made, I never, never, can look him in the face again.'"

"Nonetheless!" said Aunt Bulkeley; "ain't we all liable to make mistakes?" "But some mistakes are worse than others," said Lettice bursting into tears. So the black-eyed hours disappeared from the farm, and Mr Carton had the old barn to himself once more.

"Oh, yes," said Aunt Bulkeley. "She's a bright, lively girl, Lettice is, with a deal of book learning at her fingers' ends but a deal too independent to live on her relations. And so she took a place at a milliners' in London. It can't suit her, but it's better than nothing. And she always spends her holidays here."

"The more Mr Carton thought about it, the sorer he was that Lettice had gone. 'I believe I should have liked that girl,' he thought. 'I should like to see her again.'" a sudden blush, "I shall be so busy fitting up my grand new house. And, first of all, you and Uncle Reuben are to come up and make me a long visit."

"This was the beginning of Lettice's new acquaintance with George Carton. She was an heiress now; he only a struggling artist. And the very first picture she bought, with Aunt Bulkeley to help her select, was a rustic scene—the interior of a great, dimly-lighted barn, with a big speckled hen brooding on a nest of pearl-white eggs, and a young man dreaming over his canvas near by. And the name of the picture was 'Patience.'"

Of course Mr Carton came to help hang it. Of course he came often after that. And Aunt Bulkeley smiled and nodded over her knitting.

"Young folks will be young folks," said she. "And I declare to goodness, I should feel a deal better satisfied if Lettice had a good husband to take care of her."

"Lettice," she ventured to say at last, "I've a sort of notion that Mr Carton likes you."

"Yes," said Lettice shyly; "I think he does. And I consented this morning to be his wife. And he has promised," added Lettice, "never to allude to that horrid day in the barn when I slapped him on the shoulder and accused him of stealing our fresh eggs."

"HEALTHY OUT DEKOTA WAY" "Healthy!" exclaimed the passenger from Dekota, "healthy out our way? Should say it was. Nobody ever dies out there. We haven't got time to die. Now, just to show you how we do things, let me tell you. Two years ago I offered to give the town in which I live a beautiful block of lots for a cemetery if they would fence the property and improve it. The citizens grabbed at the chance, the result of my generosity was a popularity that sent me to the Legislature. Yes, sir, I was elected by a majority of 27 over Silas Upham. Small majority! Should say not—27 out of a total of 113 votes is enough for any modest man. Well, they accepted my offer and held a meeting and raised the money. Just to have everything in order I made a trust deed of the property, conditional upon the block being graded, fenced, sidewalked, sewerage, set with shade trees, and in all ways out to the use for which it was designed by the donor, within one year from date. That was the language of the contract. What d'ye think of that for a speculation, eh?"

"I don't see where you made anything out of it, unless it was the seat in the Legislature."

"The Legislature?" he bowed. "I'm an honest man, I am, a public-spirited citizen, and I never made more than $600 out of the Legislature besides my salary. But that block, just think of it. It's the prettiest piece of property in the territory, and my residence is situated right in the midst of that nice little grove of trees, and—"

"But are there no graves there?"

"Nary a grave on the block, stranger. That was just the trouble. A few days before their year run out they tried to dig in the body of a pauper from the adjoining country, but they couldn't play no such a game on me. I went on to the other country and got out a habes corpus on that dead chap, and held him until the year was up. That's the advantage of living in a healthy country."

THE MONKEY TAKES THE PLACE OF THE SLAVE. Perhaps the only attempts which have been made to civilize the monkey is in Malabar, India. A fine species indigenous in this quarter is the Neighery langur. The natives here have fanning machines called 'the punka. In other days the punka, which consists of a movable frame covered with canvas and suspended from the ceiling, was kept in motion by a slave pulling a cord. An English officer conceived the idea of teaching the langur to do the work. He took one of the species and tied its hand to the cord, while by means of another cord the machine was kept in motion. The movement of the cord was up and down, and, of course, the monkey's hands being tied to it, went up and down, and the animal saw the machine move. Its master patting its head and feet it with candy, and the langur soon learned to think it was fun to work the machine.

When I was in Malabar securing specimens of this species, I saw thousands of them working the punka, the Indians having immediately put the animals in captivity when they saw their utility."

THE WONDERFUL HERRING. Prof. Dickmore, in a recent New York lecture, gave a couple of hours to the subject of shad and herring, and here are some of his interesting facts: Each pair of herring, he said, would ordinarily reproduce a family of 10,000 little herring, and so found are they that the annual catch of 3,000,000 doesn't pre-eminently diminish the supply. Were the nets used in catching herring by English fishermen stretched out in a straight line they would stretch across the Atlantic Ocean three times, and these nets would represent but about one half of those used in this able industry. No one has yet been able to find out where the herring breeds, but his cousins, the shad and alewife, are home bodies, and they seek always the rivers where they first came into being when they want to marry, settle down, and rear a family.

A lady writes: "I would not be without EAGAR'S WAFER OF RENNET in the house for double its price. I can make a delicious dessert for my husband, which he enjoys after dinner, and which I believe has at the same time cured his dyspepsia."

There are probably a hundred or more persons in this and neighboring towns who daily suffer from the distressing effects of kidney troubles, who do not know that Johnsons Anodyne Liniment is almost a sure cure. In severe cases great relief may be obtained, if not a perfect cure.

We notice that agricultural newspapers all over the country are now exposing the worthlessness of the large 25c packs of horse and cattle powders. We put the ball in motion and claim the credit of it. Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders are absolutely pure, and are the only kind worth buying.

P. Innes, General Manager. Wolveville, Nov. 13, 1885.

1886. The Western Book & News Co. wish in this to thank all who have favored them during the past 5 years for their generous patronage, and to wish them and all our fair Dominion a prosperous and happy year.

They would also call the attention of the public to the fact that they intend to keep their stock during the coming year Full, Complete and Good.

They are, in addition to the regular lines of School Books, Miscellaneous Books, and a large stock of Staple and Fancy STATIONERY, Blank Books, etc.,

They are only charging $1.25 each for framing "Crown Pictures" in 2 1/2 in. Rose & Gilt; $1.00 in 2 in. R & G; and 85 cents in 1 1/2 in. R & G—Gilt a few cents more. They are also framing the new picture,

"LITTLE SWEETHEARTS," in 2 1/2 inch Gilt for $1.50 each. They claim these prices to be from 20 to 50 percent less than the REGULAR retail prices of any other house in Nova Scotia.

They have two or three special lines of Note Paper at 20c and 25c for Five Quires, and Envelopes from 25c for 250 up to any price. They have an assortment of Winsor & Newton's OIL PAINTS in tubes, and Water Colors in cakes; also Academy Board and Prepared Canvas.

They have a few volumes of Bound Books which are slightly shop-worn, and are selling them at LESS THAN COST.

They have a good assortment of Reading and Recitation Books suitable for temperance and other societies.
