FRENCH DEPUTIES WILL RATIFY TREATY.
PARIS, Aug. 28. Ratification within a short time of the Peace Treaty with Germany, now before the Chamber of Deputies seems probable, despite the views of some elements that France is guaranteed insufficient military protection by the document; but the ratification vote will not conclude the debate of the Treaty. After the pact has been ratified, motions of regret embodying objections to such clauses or documents as have met with criticism will be presented, thus re-opening the debate.

LENINE SEEKS PEACE.
COPENHAGEN, Aug. 28. Nikolai Lenin, Russian Bolshevik Premier, has sent a delegation to Kishinov for the purpose of negotiating peace between the Russian Soviet Government and Roumania, according to a report received here from Budapest to-day.

AUSTRALIAN POLITICAL OUTLOOK.
LONDON, Aug. 28. (Reuter's)—Outlining the general situation in Australia which confronts Premier Hughes, the Sydney correspondent of the Times states that the Premier finds the political situation very uncertain. The mixed driving force which had been assembled for the necessities of the war had expended itself now and the Nationalists are displaying a decided desire to reconstitute themselves on new lines. Already there is evidence in West Australia, South Australia, Victoria and New South Wales that the farmers, and perhaps the returned soldiers, will create new parties closely identified with the producing interests, while the employing class shows a strong disposition to revert to conservatism. At the same time the Labor Party has ejected from its ranks all known extremists. As the State and also the Federal Parliaments approve proportional voting, future elections will possibly substantially alter the present representation of the Nationalists. Disintegrating influences are also markedly present in the State Legislatures, nevertheless Premier Hughes holds a commanding position in the Federal arena and remains unchallenged, and in view of the fact of the breakdown of former Premier Watts through ill health, the Premier is certain to remain in office until the elections. His party, however, contains disruptive elements and he may be compelled to seek a new alignment with the moderate labor wing which associated with advanced Liberals, would give him control of a new radical party. Many big problems, with the high cost of living, profiteering, heavy taxation, industrial strife, soldiers' grievances, tariff revision, Bolshevism and Naval expansion, as the urgent constitutional problems, coupled with friction with the States and Myriad reconstruction problems, Premier Hughes will have to satisfy a whole continent which starts with the idea of getting all it wishes and believes that he is to have many millions from the German indemnity to distribute. His greatest danger is profiteering and unless he can scotch this evil, even his tremendous prestige may vanish in a single day. Premier Hughes will require to be a superman in order to survive the political strife which will accompany reconstruction.

Speeding Must Stop.
Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir,—Your paper, the People's Paper, struck the right note in its vigorous and timely denunciation of Auto speeding in last evening's issue. It is now up to the Inspector General to do his part. Half doped individuals are driving cars in this town whose recklessness is well known. They would be locked up in safe keeping in a well conducted City but here they are looked upon as gay young men who must have their fling. The public is about fed up with this thing, and if it is allowed to continue there will be something doing very shortly. You ask what examination has a driver of a car to undergo. Well he goes up with his car and waddles around before the Inspector General looking the picture of a harmless youth, but as soon as he secures the license he lets her go for what she's worth.
In granting licenses the character of applicants should be taken into account. We have a certain class of would-be sports driving cars in this city who think it a joke to frighten people on the road. The police must know those gentry. The public knows them and officers of the force know them, too, or they are asleep. Let me thank you, Mr. Editor, for your timely action.
Yours truly,
WATCHMAN.

DO YOU KEEP YOUR TOOLS SHARP?

RUTH CAMERON

The big thing about him is that he always keeps his tools well sharpened.

So said the Authorman in regard to a man we both admire.

One might gather from that eponym that the man was a workman of some sort. As a matter of fact, he is a commercial traveller, and the Authorman meant by his "tools," his charm of manner and the pleasing appearances which have helped him to carve out a successful business career.

He is Not Goodlooking But Appears So. And by keeping these tools sharp, the Authorman meant that he had always made the most of them and kept them at their highest efficiency.

He Uses Every Ounce of Himself. I have heard another man who has also followed his career with interest, say of him that he uses every ounce of himself. I don't know but what this is an even better way of putting it than the Authorman's. It strikes home more sharply.

So many of us think we could do great things if only we had beauty or a bigger opportunity in life or some distinct gift. But how do we know that we would have made good use of the beauty, the opportunity, the gift?

Yet Stevenson Said—

Are we using every ounce of what was given us? Are we keeping the tools by which we have to carve out our careers as sharp as possible.

One thinks of Stevenson as a man with a great literary gift, yet Stevenson once said (I quote from memory) "Few people have done as much with so little gift as I."

Are you using every ounce of yourself or are you letting half of what you might be, lie idle?

THE HAPPY GOALS.

Oh I have lived and I have loved and I have danced along. Full many a day that I have known was honey-sweet with song; I've journeyed where the roses bloomed, be-diamonded with dew, And I have trod the troubled paths where tangled briars grew.

Had I not fared the mountain side, had I not felt the rain, Had I not struggled through despair the summit to attain I should not know how sweet it is at evening's setting sun To feel the thrill that comes to him who sees a duty done.

The brightest eyes are those that that shine though bitter tears they've wept. The gladdest hearts are those which prove the faith which they have kept; And he that wears the scars of grief yet hides them neath a smile Knows just how sweet the peace that comes in life's bright afterwhile.

FEAR OF EVIL.

WALT MASON

Oh, to-day is bright and sunny, it is happy to the core; I have fifty cents in money and a standoff at the store. My old auto, with its tank full, chugs along to beat the band; I have reason to be thankful—blessings are on every hand. But I'm thinking of tomorrow as I loaf around to-day, and I'm wagging that sorrow will come sniping down my way. It's the nature of us critics to be gazing out ahead, betting on a dose of bitters, figuring on grief and dread. Oftentimes I sit and wonder why Dame Nature made us so, why we cannot tear asunder from presentiments of woe. We are thinking at the wedding, when Lucretia marries Mike, of the rough and rocky sledding that the bride and groom must strike. And we think, when youths are dancing, with a light fantastic heel, of the time when they'll be prancing to the soup-house for a meal. In our brightest Eldorado, where the tambours gaily thrum, we are thinking of the shadow of the evil days to come. When the joyous music quickens, we can hear the prophet cry, "Eat and drink and raise the dickens, for to-morrow you must die." Always there's the dread of evil to disturb the human soul; in the wheat there is the weevil, in the doughnut there's the hole.

The Tramp Comes Back.

With the gradual restoration of peace conditions, tramps are reported to be reappearing on many roads. The period of demobilization has mobilized them; after having been mysteriously stabilised during the war, they are once more drifting along their accustomed channels, to the renewed annoyance of the settled population. Their disappearance during the past four or five years has been one of the most curious of the minor social phenomena of the time.

"The casual wards and the 'beggar's bushes' on the heath will again become the daily and nightly receptacles of these dismal figures, whom the accustomed control of the police will no doubt prevent from becoming a serious menace," says the Times, discussing, "The return of the Vagrant." But in any vision of a brighter England the elimination of these waste products of humanity must take its place. It is almost hopeless to attempt to reclaim adult vagrants, the arguments in favour of hiding them, should be regarded with great mistrust. Out of sight is out of mind.

"A demand for driving vagrants off the roads and streets is often due to a desire, not to improve their condition, but to be rid of a visible offence. Most vagrants are well acquainted with the law as it applies to themselves, and have too little energy and initiative to transgress it seriously. So long as they keep within its bounds, there is no sufficient justification for forbidding them to follow the only life for which they are fit. On the other hand, the most vigilant efforts must be made to prevent their children from following in their footsteps; and where the law is found, in practice, to be insufficient to secure them a healthy upbringing and proper education, it should be strengthened.

"Much false sentiment prevails about the charms of vagrancy and the benefits of sleeping under the stars. The stars do not always shine, and there is no benefit in sleeping in the rain. The first need, in dealing with this question, is for the educated public to clear its mind of the notion that tramps are alluring and romantic creatures of finer clay. George Borrow laughed at his gipsies in his sleeve, whereas too many of his readers take them seriously. Most vagrants, moreover, are far inferior to gipsies of the type which Borrow described, alike in mind, morals, and physique. Vagrancy is a brutalising existence, which few of those who have indulged it have lived for long."

C. C. C. Camp.

The Annual Sports Day Athletics in connection with the C.C.C. camp, took place at the camp grounds "Powerscourt," Manuels, on Wednesday afternoon and although the weather conditions were unfavourable in the city for sports the weather was in better form at Manuels and the sports were held without any interference from weather conditions excepting the usual "rain showers" so prevalent in our climate. Many visitors from the city and elsewhere attended and were received by the camp Commandant, Capt. J. J. O'Grady and camp officers Capt. and Adjutant Leo C. Murphy, Capt. Wm. Clare and J. M. Greene, Lieut. J. P. Lang and Regt. Sergt-Major G. Galgay. The programme of sports were varied and interesting and the contests were very close throughout. Amongst the visitors were Revs. Fr. Kelly, P.P., Manuels and Rev. Fr. Wilson of St. Patrick's Parish who showed themselves most deeply interested in the proceedings. Owing to other duties at Flat Rock His Grace Archbishop was unable to attend, but on Monday afternoon accompanied by Rev. Fr. Kelly His Grace honoured the Brigade by paying an impromptu visit to the grounds where he inspected the camp and was shown through by the camp Commandant. The Christian Brothers and Rev. Dr. Greene also visited the grounds and had the pleasure of seeing the lads at work and play. The programme of sports opened with the famous war dance of the Boy Scouts under Assistant Scoutmaster Robert Furlong, in which Indians, Negroes, etc., were well represented dancing around the camp fire. Capt. L. C. Murphy and J. M. Greene acted as judges and starter and herald of the sports while Capt. Clare was at his post as football referee. In the first race the contest Bugler Stephen Russell showed himself up as a splendid sprinter and a future prospect on the race track. Although but 16 years of age, he won both the Intermediate and Senior hundred yards' dash in remarkably quick time, while Scout Halley won the Junior dash. In the relay race a most exciting contest took place between the Boy Scouts and Cadets, the Cadets winning by a slight margin, Halley giving Russell a most gamy fight at the finish, the winning team were Ptes. J. Kooley, J. Murphy, Q. M.S. Clancey and Bugler S. Russell. In the 220 yards' race, Russell again distinguished himself, and in the closest contested race for the day he finished a few feet ahead of Kooley, who also ran a great race. In the football five the boy scouts, comprising the three Halley brothers, Hubert, Raymond and Gerald, with Scouts Bob Kent and Gordon Higgins, had an easy victory over the Cadet Juniors. They then tried conclusions with the Senior Cadets (all returned veterans) and had the pleasure of bringing home victory after an exciting contest, thus winning the football five championship. The Bell Island five were unable to attend much to the regret of the camp officers, who had looked forward to their participation in the sports. An exhibition of drill and figure marching was gone through by the full strength under Capt. O'Grady, the marching being particularly good, particularly among the smaller boys. Tea hour arriving, the remainder of the sports was postponed, and the lads partook of a hearty meal, all their appetites being well sharpened after the strenuous contests of the day.

On Thursday afternoon Rev. Fr. Pippy, the Chaplain of the Corps, motored from Pouch Cove to Manuels, and inspected the camp grounds, expressing himself as much pleased with the arrangements.

THE RAID.

Late last evening the Camp was the scene of an interesting military operation, when an attack was launched on the tented area. The attacking party, under Captain Murphy, assembled just before sundown, and as the evening advanced the forces got into position in the woods on the northern, eastern and western sides of the camp. Fifteen bombers with powder bombs and two sections of riflemen streamed from the trees when the "advance" sounded, and the boys in camp were completely surprised at the suddenness of the attack. They rallied quickly, however, and under Capt. Greene, Clare and Lang, took up a position; but the "moppers up" had bombed out the tents, and, having occupied the ridge on the northern end of the camp, commanded the situation. The affair was well carried out, and splendidly executed, and the Camp Commandant congratulated the men on the manner in which they acted during the operation. The greatest secrecy was observed, and the Cadets caught the spirit of the adventure from the beginning, and acted like veterans. To-day the main body proceeds to St. John's, and the camp breaks up this evening, the pioneers returning by tomorrow night's train. The Camp Commandant, Capt. J. J. O'Grady, desires to avail of this opportunity to express his sincere gratitude to Mr. Jas. F. Parker for several prizes in connection with the sports; Dr. F. W. Burden for cash donation to the priest; Mrs. M. K. Greene, for chocolates, and Mr. G. McGuire for a case of oranges for the men.

The Tragedy of Beauty.

LOVELY WOMEN WHOSE ATTRIBUTES HAVE SNARED THEM TO DISHONOR AND SHAME.

Bohemia had hardly recovered from the shock of Billie Carleton's untimely death, when the West End was suddenly horrified to hear of a tragedy hardly less terrible—the suicide of another outstanding beauty, Mrs. Atherton.

Say what one will, there cannot be the slightest doubt that to scores of women beauty in the long run is nothing more or less than a curse. Just as in the far-off days it was a curse to Cleopatra, or fifteen hundred years afterwards to Mary Queen of Scots, so it has been through all the stages of human history.

From a Scottish Village.

Near the village of Davidson's Mains, Midlothian, stands a school-house which for a number of years visitors came from far and near to have a peep at, it being the place where another famous beauty received her early education—Evelyn Thaw. A beautiful child she was, attracting universal attention, even when only ten or twelve; but how many of those who looked approvingly on her budding loveliness could have guessed at the appalling tragedy that was soon to cloud the very dawn of her womanhood—a tragedy embracing the murder of the American millionaire, Stanford White, the sensational trial and sentence of Harry Thaw, and the wrecking of a life, which a few years previous was brimful of nought but the highest hope.

Take the case of one of those extraordinary beauties the Gunnings. So exquisitely beautiful were these fair sisters, it will be remembered, that when they walked out in the London parks, they were provided with an armed escort to keep the crowds from inconveniencing them. Yet in spite of the worldly advantages their beauty procured for them—for one the heart of a duke, for the other that of an earl—tragic in the extreme were the last days of one of these wonderful women.

When in the course of years her beauty began to fade, she took to artificial means to improve her appearance, and in the end so poisoned her system that her life was despaired of. The woman who was all sunshine and happiness when the world was at her feet, could no longer bear up when the adverse winds of circumstances howled round her castle walls.

The Friend of Nelson.

"Now that I can no longer be beautiful, let me die," was one of her last utterances; not surely a very exalted or inspiring declaration to come from the lips of one fast approaching death.

Though she has been in her grave nigh on a hundred years now, people have not ceased to rave of Lady Hamilton, the friend of Nelson, the enchantress of the painter Romney, the woman who, from poverty and obscurity, rose to such fame and power as to count in her train some of the most distinguished men in Europe. How many are aware, however, that at the very time when her beauty was at its very height, the fair Emma wrote to Greville that she was so objectly miserable that she proposed returning to Scotland, even if she had to walk barefooted through the snow, determined first to put an end to her life, and after that, her own?

One of the loveliest women of her day was Elizabeth Lindley, the girl who eloped with Sheridan. "The Beauty of the Bath" was the name by which this wonderful woman was known in her younger days, yet at one time so aggrieved was she by the attention of a suitor with whom she wished to have nothing to do, that she, in spite of her youth and beauty, actually attempted to poison herself.

What more exquisite-looking woman than the Red Widow, tried a few years ago in Venice amidst scenes of such phenomenal sensation? What more awful power than hers, however, for the destruction of the men with whom she came in contact? Her whole life was a record of tragic events, of love, despair, murder, and self-destruction.

Even Royalty Cannot Escape.

No one looked on Charlotte Corday but raved of the unequalled charm of her face and figure, her rich masses of auburn locks, her splendidly-shaped lips, her wonderfully-spirited expression. Yet what more horrible end could woman possibly go to than Charlotte Corday? Surely head more fair was never forced upon the blade of the guillotine?

Born in very different circle from Charlotte Corday, Marie Antoinette was another famous beauty whose life ended in a pitiful tragedy, and in more recent days what of that beautiful friend of Queen Victoria, the late Empress of Austria? Singularly unhappy all her life was that fair daughter of a proud race, but her sudden assassination at the height of her power came as a terrible blow to all those associated with her.

To these one has only to add the name of the Countess of Castiglione, the friend of Napoleon III, who, when her surpassing loveliness began to vanish, locked herself up in a solitary mansion into which she would not allow such a thing as a mirror to be brought in any circumstances, and one can readily perceive there are limitless occasions upon which the possession of exceptional loveliness, as already stated, has been nothing more or less than a perfect curse.

Gentlemen,—Ever since coming home from the Boer war I have been bothered with running fever sores on my legs. I tried many salves and liniments; also doctored continuously for the blood, but got no permanent relief, till last winter when my mother got me to try MINARD'S LINTMENT. The effect of which was almost magical. Two bottles completely cured me and I have worked every working day since.

Yours gratefully,
 JOHN WALSH.

Furness Line Deal Completed.

(Halifax Chronicle)

It is announced at the Furness-Witby Co. offices here that the company has completed the purchase of the Wm. Thomson & Co. steamship business at St. John and will take over the Thomson office there September 1st, and retain the services of the staff, Mr. C. B. Ledingham being appointed local manager at St. John. Mr. Joseph Corey, for years chief clerk in the Furness Witby offices here, relieves Mr. Alex. Montgomery of the management of the company's business at St. John's Nfld., and Mr. Montgomery becomes assistant manager to Mr. J. E. Furness in the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland. ### Motor Boat on Long Trip.

Arthur Boutilier has returned from a motor boat trip to Newfoundland. The trip was made in the motor boat Lion, which was formerly owned by some local sportsmen. He was accompanied by W. T. Matthews, a representative of Wood and McConnell, Sydney, who owns the boat and will use it in Newfoundland waters for business purposes. The Lion is a 35 foot boat and is equipped with a 16 h.p. Acadia engine. The Lion is said to be the second boat of its size to cross the Gulf of St. Lawrence. These two men deserve great credit in successfully making a long sea journey in such a small boat.—Glace Bay Gazette.

Football League Meeting

A meeting of the Football League was held last night at the offices of Hon. W. J. Higgins, all the teams being represented. The matter of a series of games with the Grand Falls team was discussed and it was decided to wire the players of the Paper Town as to their coming here. After the contest in the city, arrangements will be made for the return games at Grand Falls. The League is now contemplating running off a series of games on the "knock-out" system for a new trophy to be known as the Victory Cup. This series would easily be run off in a fortnight and, no doubt would be heartily welcomed by players and public alike. The medals won in the League games of 1915, 16 and 17 have now arrived and the other two sets will be here soon. It was decided to distribute all together at one big presentation to be held at an early date and which will likely take the form of a smoker.

Obituary.

MRS. EDMUND TUFF.
Serena, beloved wife of Edmund Tuff, passed away suddenly at her residence, Hayward Avenue, on Wednesday night. Deceased was a daughter of the late James Crumme, formerly of Western Bay, but had been residing in St. John's for a number of years. During the evening Mrs. Tuff was out walking with her husband and on returning home was seized with a sudden pain and expired within a short notice. She leaves a husband, three daughters and four sons to mourn, to whom deep sympathy is extended. The funeral took place this afternoon from her late residence, 51 Hayward Avenue.

ORDEE'S PRINCIPAL LEAVES.

Carbonear Garden Party

The Garden Party, in aid of St. Patrick's Church, which was postponed from Wednesday to the following day, Thursday, was very successfully conducted. The various committees accomplished their duties with great zeal and tact, and spared no pains to endeavor to please their many patrons. Delicious and satisfying teas were daintily served by the young ladies in charge of the wants of the inner man. At this most pleasing work they were engaged during the major part of the evening. The receipts from this source were highly satisfactory. The entertainment of the youth of the gathering was not overlooked. Shooting, races of various kinds, tug of war, supervised by some of the gent's committee, added to the pleasure of the contestants and admirers alike. The Catholic band discoursed sweet music during the evening, which helped in a great measure to the enjoyment of the occasion. Among the many visitors were noted His Lordship Bishop March and some of the Clergy of the diocese, who apparently were very pleased with the efforts of the highly esteemed pastor, Rt. Rev. Mons. McCarthy and his able and obliging committee, to make them pass a pleasant and happy hour. It was a handy idea to have the party in the grounds of the Church. The surroundings were most pleasing to the most discriminating eyes. Great credit is due Mr. McCarthy for the taste displayed in the ornamentation of the Church property. The Rt. Rev. Mr. McCarthy and his energetic committee desire to heartily thank all friends who generously helped in donations and otherwise to make the 1919 Garden Party the finest success it was. Financially, it stands second to none of its predecessors. Summarized, it left nothing to be desired.

Ex-Kaiser Pleads Innocence.

CONSIDERS HIMSELF PRIVATE GENTLEMAN WHEN TOLD OF PROBABLE TRIAL.

Amerongen, Holland. — "By what right would they force me to submit to this indignity—to be the object to be stared at and ridiculed by a vulgar crowd? For what crimes am I to be tried? I am innocent of any but the crime of endeavoring to maintain peace when I was threatened on every hand. Cannot my enemies be content with the victory they have won without thus trampling upon the vanquished and the fallen? My one wish is to end my days as a private individual, to live the life of a private gentleman, free from the fetters of statesmanship."

Such were the first words the ex-Kaiser uttered when, in the castle at Amerongen, he learned of the decision of the Allies to place him upon his trial in London? he asked, "save to satisfy the idle curiosity of the English—to pander to their natural vanity."

It was Dr. Rosen, the most intimate friend of the ex-Kaiser, now like his royal master an exile in Holland, who broke the news of the Allies' decision. The ex-Kaiser had retired for the night when the doctor reached the castle, and Count Bentick and the new arrival sat discussing the possibility of an attempt to free the Kaiser.

When it was known that the Kaiser had completed his breakfast the information was conveyed to him that Dr. Rosen desired an audience. There were five persons present at the audience, which lasted close upon an hour. The company were the ex-Emperor, the Kaiserin, Count Bentick, Dr. Rosen and the count's secretary.

"Of What Am I Accused?"

Dr. Rosen was deeply affected, for, after bowing to the ex-Kaiser and kissing the hand of the Empress, he commenced by informing the Kaiser that he had grave news to impart.

"These are grave times," returned the ex-Kaiser, "but I am now a free and independent person, but would to God I could see the Fatherland placed in happier circumstances. Why is it you have come to me at this hour, Rosen?" he asked. "Does the Fatherland need me?" he added as a conclusion.

"The Fatherland needs you, sire," returned the doctor, "but I have come to inform your majesty of what the enemies of the Fatherland are now plotting."

"This concerns my person?" asked the ex-war lord. "Come, Rosen," he said boldly, "tell me of it. I promise that the plot shall not worry me greatly."

"Your majesty, the Allies have declared their intention that the Kaiser shall be placed on trial in London."

At first Wilhelm appeared dazed, and could scarcely appreciate the significance of the doctor's words.

"One might have expected this," said Wilhelm slowly and gravely. "I am not surprised that it should have been the British who have decided this. Is there no limit to their vanity, to their audacity? What are the crimes of which I am accused? By what right would they submit me to this indignity—to be the object to be stared at and ridiculed by a vulgar crowd? Surely I have suffered enough. I am innocent as you know of any crime, save that of striving continually in the cause of peace, and to make the Fatherland a nation to be admired and esteemed. On every hand I was surrounded by enemies who sought the ruin of Germany. This is completed now, and I am about to be tried." Wilhelm laughed a harsh bitter laugh but his face was deathly pale.

The ex-Kaiserin appeared overwhelmed at the news. She rose and approached her husband whispered to him. Her words had an almost instantaneous effect upon the ex-Kaiser, who, straightening himself and looking proud and defiant as ever, said, "Why should I submit to this? I am a free individual, and have been granted the hospitality of Holland. Holland will protect me from the enemies who seek my further degradation."

"I Am Ready."

"If Holland fails your majesty there are hundreds of thousands of true Germans who are ready to die for your majesty." It was Dr. Rosen who spoke, and the Kaiser hearing him smiled. "Thank you, Rosen," he said simply. "I know I have still many friends who are ready to aid me, but I would have no further bloodshed. If I can further the cause of the Fatherland by my death then I am ready and happy. Though I am no longer Kaiser, my one thought is of my people and my land.

"Your life shall never be taken," exclaimed Rosen, "such a sacrifice is not demanded of your majesty."

"I have seen the wording of the treaty which has been signed," returned Wilhelm calmly. "I can read the meaning of those words. They may try me for offences which they conjure up, and the penalty will be death, at the best banishment to some desolate isle, as in the case of Napoleon. There is no limit to the audacity of the British, and the English have not even more than do the British."

"But your majesty there is a way to avoid this. It has already been pointed out to your majesty," said Rosen.

"I know, I know," returned the Kaiser, "but why should I leave this place, where I am content to remain? If I followed the desire of some who are my most loyal supporters and friends I should but still further compromise the position, and bring further distress upon the Fatherland. I have chosen to be a private gentleman, and as such I would end my days in happy surroundings in Holland. If I am not allowed to pursue the pathway I have chosen—one which I am convinced is the best for the Fatherland—then I must submit to the conquerors."

In the Hands of God.

"You shall not be made the victim of their hate," said Rosen, but Wilhelm merely smiled, and said, "They call it justice. Leave me now, Rosen; I must read this speech, which by this time will be printed in the newspapers, and will consult you before any definite steps are taken. I am resigned, and place myself in the hands of God, who will protect the innocent." Although the Allies' decision was not by any means unexpected by Wilhelm, the fact that the decision had been announced came as a severe shock to him, and for all his apparent calmness, he suffered mentally.

against any attempt to hand the ex-Kaiser over to the Allies. It is now contended that the ex-Kaiser is a free man, at perfect liberty to leave Holland should he desire, since he is not accused of any criminal offence, but merely is to be charged with moral offences under the League of Nations. Doubtless if pressure is brought to bear upon Holland, the ex-Kaiser will be handed over, or he may even go so far as to voluntarily surrender himself to the League of Nations. But, it is far more probable that the ex-Kaiser will have been smuggled out of Holland by the Prussian militarists, who have vowed he shall never be placed on his trial, before this is actually accomplished.

Mercantile Football.

At the Tannery Grounds last evening, Marshall Bros' team defeated Ayre and Sons' eleven by a score of one goal to nil, after a fast clean game. Mr. Jones, of Ayre and Sons, was referee, and the winning players were—N. Moore, D. Wells, S. Rowell, A. LeDrew, F. Cluett, W. Boone, T. Eldridge, A. Kennedy, R. Coleman, T. Whelan, and F. Brown.

During the game Moore and Brown were slightly injured, but resumed play after a few minutes. Much interest is now centred in the clerks football and already five teams are in line, Ayre & Sons, Marshall Bros. Baird's, Steer Bros., and Bowring Bros. Lively games are looked forward to, and it is not unlikely that the next season will see a lively series of mercantile contests. Last evening's game was the third of the series.

Veterans' Badges Arrive

The new badges for members of the G. W. V. A. have arrived and may be obtained from Acting Secretary Matthews at the office of the Association for 50 cents each. These badges are in the form of St. George's Cross, except that the cross is of claret, the Regimental colour instead of red. The flag itself is the emblem of the Navy and in the centre is the crest of the Regiment, a Caribou Head, with the letters G. W. V. A. in the corners. The badges are done in enamel and are very pretty.

New Climate Aim of Newfoundland.

Big Dominion Is Planning Scheme to Keep Back Ice From Arctic and Produce Balmier Weather.

St. John's, N.E., Aug. 17.—Newfoundland is contemplating changing its climate. The impossible of a decade ago is the every-day affair of to-day, so why shouldn't a country change its climate if it doesn't like it?

The climate of Newfoundland although by no means a very cold one, would be changed if a breakwater were built across the Straits of Belle Isle, between the island and the main land and the cold Labrador current were shunted out into the Atlantic ocean. Such a dam is being seriously considered. It would cost an immense sum of money but engineers say it presents few difficulties.

The Labrador current at present is the chief factor in moulding the climate not only of Newfoundland but of the maritime provinces of Canada and of New England. Coming down from the Arctic ocean, it pours through the Straits of Belle Isle and, circulating around the Gulf of St. Lawrence, washes with its cold flood the coast of Newfoundland, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Then passing through Cabot Strait, it turns south and sweeps along New England. Its strong southward flow acts as a cold wedge which piles the Gulf Stream away from all these coasts and shuts that ocean river, bearing the warmth of the tropics, off northeastward across the ocean.

If the Bell Isle dam is built the Labrador current would be blocked out of the Gulf of St. Lawrence and, sheering off southeast, would miss the mainland and continue to effect only the northeastern coast of Newfoundland. The Gulf Stream then would ease in against the continent and, flowing into the Gulf of St. Lawrence, warm all the surrounding shores and islands.

The Gulf Stream is responsible for the mild winter climate of England and northern France. England is farther north than Newfoundland. If after cooling off in its long passage across the northern seas, the Gulf Stream is still such a factor in tempering England's climate, it would have an even greater effect, it is believed, in tempering the winter climate of eastern Canada and New England.

The climate of Newfoundland is not as cold as that of Canada or many parts of New England, but the Islanders are not satisfied and are of the opinion that if the project were realized its influence would be felt far inland. The mouth of the St. Lawrence river is in the same latitude as southern Alberta. Yet while the St. Lawrence ports are blocked with ice in winter, there is only light snowfalls on the prairie farm lands of southern Alberta and livestock graze out of doors all the year round. Alberta is an illustration of the effect of a distant warm sea current. Its wonderfully open winters are due to the chinook winds which, warmed by the Japanese current that washes the shores of British Columbia, filter across the Rocky Mountain ranges.

Under present conditions, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Quebec and Prince Edward Island are fine farming countries and their output in farm products, especially fruits and livestock, according to statistics of the Canadian National Railways, compares favorably in bulk with that of other parts on the Dominion. But with a warmer climate, agriculture would be wonderfully stimulated. The value of land would be enhanced by billions of dollars.

St. Lawrence river ports, through which a great part of Canada's export trade in wheat passes, would remain open all winter and a tremendous accession of wealth would result to the nation from this unrestricted, all-the-year-round commerce. Montreal, as a result, would suddenly loom as a potential trade rival of New York.

New industries would spring up everywhere. Population would be vast ly increased. The Bell Isle project would change not only the climate but perhaps the future destiny of Canada and of Newfoundland, and the entire northeastern coast of North America. Newfoundland is contemplating the creation of vast shipping ports along her coast which are now hardly feasible because of the presence of icebergs in the Atlantic and drift ice from the Arctic. A railway over the breakwater to Canada is also planned.—Charleston American.
