My Dear Sir,—In September last I contracted a severe cold which sottled upon my lungs quite seriously, affecting the left one. I had a very bad cough; accompanied by expectoration indicative of Pulmonary Phthisis. My strength decreased and spirits sank very low, and when I called upon you I was in doubt whether any medical treatment would avail in my case. Under your treatment I have already recovered my wonted strength and health. My strength has increased, my cough has ceased, and in every way I feel much benefitted by your retarment. Upper Canada college. Three of the masters who have for a long time been connected with the college are to be retired and superannuated: Mr. Wm. Wedd, classical master; Mr. James Brown, mathematical master; and Mr. Thompson. The places of these gentlemen will be filled on tha re-opening of the college after vacation. The long catablished institution of the "head boy" is to be discoutinued, and it is likely the "head boy" of 1882 will be the last whose name will be printed in gold letters to adorn the college walls. It is proposed to make a fairer distribution of the exhibitions, and the department of mathematics and classics will be "specialized" to a much greater extent than they are at present. The old commercial department will be revived. The suggestion recently thrown out that the college should be made a training school for high school masters is not likely to be carried out, though it is understood the minister of geducation is now perfecting a scheme for this purpose.

The death of Hablot Knight Brown takes from us the last of the old Punch artists, the contemporaries of Leech and Cruikshanks. "H.B." or "Phiz," gave up his connection with Punch on account of the attacks on his co-religionist Cardinal Wiseman in 1850. His beautiful society cartoons in the first volume of the Cornhill, will be remembered. These genial artists deserve gratitute for the high moral tone which they make traditional in Punch and the English comic papers.

NOTES ON LITERATURE

American literature as compared with that of England and France has a lack of productivity. There appear to be no successors to the generation of poets, the greatest of whom was Longfellow. There are a far greater abundance of good magazine writers, and journalism is of a much higher tone than forty years ago, but of great writers commanding a European as But remember they will not have the well as an American audience, we do not shelter of the bush against the freezing know one excepting the historian Parkman. THE NORTHWEST LAND QUES HION.

BY R. W. PHIPPS We were left heirs to a fortune-quite suddenly—and, as the manner is of unexpected receivers of legacies, we proceed to squander the portion that falleth to us. We did not know, till a few years back. what there was in the northwest. There laid a hundred millions of acres of land, rich as anything out of doors; and there for two hundred years mounted guard a British company keeping it for a fur preleast the measure of self-government which serve, while on many a mountain slope Irish this dominion has won. As to the disapproval of our course in this matter expressed by the English government, they have no longer any right to control the acts of our parliament and people. We do not live in Sir Charles Metcalf's days. The English government is welcome to express what it pleases, its disapproval is more of strong arms and needy men; here an ample space of fertile land; the means of transhipment and colonization were procurable. Why was not the groblem solved? Why were the people not placed upon the land? It was not a question of outfitthere were thousands ready to procure their own. It was not a question of passage money; the landless were not all moneyless; there were plenty and to spare

It might more properly be called a tiger -the tiger of rapacity and greed. There were these poor people; here were the chances of good homes for them all. What would you think of wreckers on the shore who should hurl back the drowning wretches into the sea if they could not pay is among the nineties, to turn a corner and it. The superannuation question is in an their footing? Or of firemen who would come suddenly upon a pretty lawn which unsatisfactory state, and it is difficult to not raise the ladder till those at the wintheir footing? Or of firemen who would dows made up the demanded sum? Or of any who, knowing that much land lay vacant, and that many poor people were coming to it, possessed of some small means to build, and plant, and live in that cold north land, should go to the government and say, "I want you to let me have a large portion of this land at a low price, that when these settlers come I may sell it to them at a higher price, and take from them the money wherewith they mean to cultivate and to can work for their neighbors, if they can the religious chiefs of the Mohammedan get work. And they can live in cheaper homes, or tear the sods from the earth and Mohammedan soldiers in her Indian build cabins; and they can wear, natheless the cold frost of that country, insufficient clothing, and they can eat insufficient food. And if some of them die, and all be long delayed I who write this, long a settler in the slain with his greed as surely as though would have conferred, with the other ad Poor souls, it was little choice they had, chances of growing crops, building houses, their axes with living for months on dry wretched clothes, the grain bags made into coats, the poor tools, the utter want ; and had known, as I have known, that had the lands of the country been given at the government price to settlers alone, and none other been allowed to buy up the regions nearer to the front, the bitter poverty and frequent deaths of the long years of early settlement would have never been-I think. I say, that some who look well pleased at land speculating gains would send them to the poorhouse. I never owned one cent of such money. I never will. We are told, and doubtless with much truth, that on the prairie settlers will not have to encounter the hardships of the bush. wind. They will not have the good maple of the forest to warm their houses and to cook their food. They will not have the tall pine to build their houses, nor the elm and ash for their tools, nor the red oak nor the cedar for their fences. They will have a climate infinitely more stern. One thing is said to be in their favor-they will not have to clear their land. Is that so great a difference? We used to get as much land as we chose cleared, fenced into tenacre fields with cedar rails that would last thirty years good, and ready to harrow in will not cost quite as much. When we consider that a prairie farm

Given fine | we send there now, and he will know full weather; indeed, the carts can travel anywhere. But it is not an excellent farming prospect if you have to take your fine weather when the team should be at work on the farm, to do your long distance hauling. There is one thing to remark, which you may see frequently in the newspapers, will tell you at what the speculator is making out of the farmer, and whether the poor settler is not contributing as much, from his hard earned toil, to fill the pockets of the speculator, as ever he did in the palmiest days of family compact land jobbery or near the front, is so much more valuable.

And this helt you will find all along the was less fitted to resist temptation than its line. Beyond it, further away from the predecessor. This drinking, even in mod eration, of fathers and mothers, or grand front, where the poor settler is shoved, is, then, that much poorer. But he should have had the first choice. The difference is earned by his toil-that he does not get it-that it goes to the speculator-is so much money out of the settler's pocketmoney he has to make up by the hard toil and unfair privations at which I have

was possible—very possible—to have done speaker stated how they were conducting without giving the syndicate any land at all. We paid in all about one hundred millions of dollars-the 25,000,000 acres counting for 25,000,000 dollars. To pay the odd fourth was in our power. I suggest it, to show what could have been done with our land, had we retained it. Had government simply said "No land shall be given to any but settlers-every settler shall be at liberty to settle on the nearest unoccupied land, or go farther afield if he choose; no man shall, as far as we can prevent, lay out town and give in lots to those only who are willing to build," what a different state of things would now have existed in the Northwest. The settlement would have been mostly formed in solid order; the near land fit for culture would have been taken up in contiguous and adjoining succession; the settin prospering as they otherwise might, still lers would have enjoyed the immense adif is a fair business transaction, and they vantage of association, and the vast waste need not buy of me unless they like. Let of strength and labor incurred in the weary. me have, please, a large portion of land ? age and constant travel of many miles back and forth between farm and settlement, backwoods, surrounded by speculator's between store and village, would not have lands, could take you to grave after grave been incurred. All the best land in the of those whom the land speculator had best places being given to the settlers. The message of hostility to England which he had shot them with his rifle. There vantages I have mentioned, such a supewas free land farther back, then, too. riority of opportunity on the settlers, such I think if some who are se ready to talk of barns and fences, and easily carrying farm making a good thing out of western lands produce to market, as would have done knew the privation early settlers often un. away with all fear of which is called lergo; if they had seen, as I have, men an exodus, and on the contrary, would who had been strong scarce able to swing have drawn many settlers who chose the States to our side of the border instead. bread and wild onions; had seen the All the sums speculators have made. amounting in cash and securities to many millions, out of the settlers, would have staid in the country, and have been applied to the improvement of the region and the production of crops. For the promised money counts as well as that paid : the settler, if he had got his land free, would be spending yearly on it the money he is now compelled instead to save for his yearly payment. It is not too much to say that this course would have doubled the products, the prosperity, and what is likely to be of very great importance to olde

Canada, the loyalty of the land.

Consider that no emigration agent is can be of one tenth part the real value of the assured prosperity of the settlement. That prosperity is your true emigration agent. It will send a constant stream of assuring letters across the sea, and bring in return as steady a current of well-to-do settlers. But under present and past management, what has been sent? This, that the Northwest is a place where the man of some means can do well in, but where the poorly equipped farmer has a hard row to hoe. what will follow? Why, reople far eff think it is "not much of a country," for, as they rightly remark, "people of means can get along anywhere, but give me a land where all can do well, for if I am poor I can do well, as the poor man is doing; and if I am better off I can do yet better than he," And so immigration has been very much checked compared to what might have been the case. Had we taken care that the settler should prosper, he would now be coming in shoals, with a good many dollars in his pouch, too. But we took care rather that the speculators should prosper, and he is coming with a vengeance -the air is dark with him ; yet he is but s bird of prey after all. When the matter is taken into calculation, what mighty and rapid results could have been obtained are clearly visible an expense, in this article alone, Take the amount of land granted to the The current issue of the Atlantic Month- and strips of speculators' land. thousand three hundred acre farmswill follow from the interlying blocks syndicate alone—it will give you eighty habitants. Say that our four or five mil-need fifteen millions. I have not the stathrough our hands, we should have the profit. Let any one read the blue book, and surely what Canada has lost by encouraging the speculator, iustead of the settler, in the Northwest.

But I must defer the remainder of this article till next week.

MR. HOWLAND ON TEMPERANCE His Remarks at Orillia-Drinking in Ton On Tuesday last a meeting of temperance workers was held in Orillia at which Rev.

Rural Dean Stewart presided. Among the speakers was Mr. W. H. Howland of days of family compact land jobbery or Canada company speculation. Look at the advertisements. Here you will see ranges of farm lands advertised at four thousand, six thousand, ten thousand dollars, which you know, by government prices, could scarcely have cost the speculotor, not long ago, as many hundred. What is the difference—what makes this saleable at such an advance? Just this—that this, being near the front, is so much more valuable. fathers and grandmothers, accounted for the fall of many youths, who had been well brought up, when they went out into the world, and began taking a "social class." THE SPORTING WORLD. THE CHAMPION'S NEW CHALLENGE TO THE WHOLE UNIVERSE.

> of the World-A Winnipeg Rowing Edward Hanlan, like Richard just before the fatal engagement on Bosworth field, the fatal engagement on Bosworth field, finds he is himself again. The champion is now in high feather and feels pretty cockey withal. He has made a proposal, which in addition to being novel, will attract much attention. Last night the champion in presence of a number of gentlemen and a representative of The World, expressed himself as follows: "I will row any five men in the whole world, two miles straightaway or two miles with a turn for from $1000 to $2000 aside. I will row these five men after a lapse of 48 hours (two straightaway of the strong straightaway of the strong $1000 to $2000 aside. I will row these five men after a lapse of 48 hours (two full days) of each other on any suitable waters on the continent of America. The challenge is open to the whole world." Ned further stated that if he could get on these matches in America he would forego for the present his intended visit to Australia. Here is a challenge that will make the crack oarsmen of the world scratch their heads. The champion says that he is not a bit particular on what water he rows. C. E. Fory will be well remembered in this city. Mrs. Fory, his mother, keeps a tried at Milton on Saturday paxt, including bands and many men, paying tribute to the memory of the prince of orange. The pictorial way the saturday paxt, including the street west street was the case against to winning and is now employed as a pressure was employed as a pressure was a little till becourt yesterday there was a little t city. Fory is an old pupil of Haman and has kept up the reputation of his famous teacher. The Winnipeg Sun speaks of Fory's late struggle with McKeown, a Winnipeg oarsman, as follows, when they rowed for $250 a side.

The struggle began on the regatta course, four miles with a turn, in best and best boats, at 4.30 o'clock. A large number of the friends of both men were on the ground,

These young carsmen have arranged another match as will be seen by the following: Winnipeg, July 6, 1882. In response to Mr. McKeown's challenge published this morning, I have to say that I will row him in a week for $100 a side, for the distance armed or four weeks hence for $250 him in a week for $100 a side, for the distance named, or four weeks hence for $250 or $500 a side. It would not pay me to go into training and wait for four weeks for a purse of $100, but if Mr. McKeown will accept the above conditions I am willing to sign articles and put up at any time.

The further test of hose was made in presence of the fire and gas committee at the Court street fire hall yesterday. The Jacket hose which stood a pressure of 900 pounds on Friday was tested to 700 pounds yesterday. The other hose stood: Eclipse 550, Baker 500, and the Eureka was persultant infectory. The committee decided boo, Baker soo, and the committee decided to purchase 1000 feet of the Eurekaland 400 feet each of the Baker, Eclipse and American double jacket hose.

A Sensation Exploded. An evening paper has been making hubbub out of an allegation that Miller, hubbub out of an allegation that Muler, lately sent from Toronto for three years for making a snake in Lee & Chillas' jewelry store, had been convicted in this city before and that the detectives failed to recognize him. The fact of the matter is that the police recognized him as a crook, but he had never been seen in this city before, nor had he ever been convicted in any part of Ontario.
