COUNTERFEIT five and ten cent pieces

RELIGION and advertising are the two greatest forces in the world to-day. Religion is the greatest power we know of to heal the wounds, cure the ills and inspire the hope of the spiritual man.
Advertising is the panacea for all the ills of the commercial man.

THE hay fever season is near at hand.
In a few days when the pollen is in the air, we shall be greeted by the sneezing chorus. Hundreds of sufferers will be taken themselves to the high altitudes or to sea voyages. Thousands, of others, less fortunate, will stay at home, to bear red-eyed, watery-nosed, wheezy-lunged testimony to the rigors of their ailment.
The man who discovers a home specific for hay fever may not save as many lives as another; but his name will go thundering down the ages as that of a giant in his day and generation.

THE new goods are fine at SWIFTS'.

A TOWN, unlike a city, is no place to foster jealousies and nourish contentions.
All should learn to know that whatever will conduce to the welfare of a town cannot injure her citizens. The disposition made manifest by her citizens point to her downfall or her rise. The character of the people make the town not her structures, towering houses, domes and monuments, and when people lose interest in the promotion of their town they need not hope to thrive. Harmony among the people of a community is indicative of its progress. Farmers cannot be at variance with one another and prosper; merchants cannot, churches cannot, nor can any similar organization or community.

made and sold for the year and the company has orders on hand for three thousand cars. The company is employing about 1,200 hands who are turning out forty autos a day. The Model T touring car made by this firm can now be purchased for $850. Ray Morningstar, Arkona, is the agent for this district.

SUFFERED EVERYTHING

For Years, Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Canadian women are continually writing us such letters as the two following, which are heartfelt expressions of gratitude for restored health:

Glanford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and never found any medicine to compare with it. I had ulcers and falling of womb and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully for years until I began taking your medicine. I also recommend it for nervousness and indigestion."—Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ont.

Chesterville, Ont.—"I heard your medicines highly praised, and a year ago I began taking them for falling of womb and ovarian trouble. My left side pained me all the time and just before my periods which were irregular and painful it would be worse. To sit down caused me pain and suffering and I would be so nervous sometimes that I could not bear to see any one or hear any one speak. Little specks would float before my eyes and I was always constipated. I cannot say too much for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, for there are no medicines like them. I have taken them and I recommend them to all women. You may publish this testimonial."—Mrs. STREPHEN J. MARTIN, Chesterville, Ontario, Canada.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

One of the sweetest occupations of old age is recalling the scenes and occurrences of one's youth. So try to store up as many pleasant recollections as possible for a future supply. Among the happiest will be found those of the good we did for others, and the innocent fun we enjoyed.

Scotland is now asking for home rule by a native parliament. It will not be surprising if, before the first quarter of the present century ends, local parliaments are established in Ireland, Scotland, Wales and England for the management of purely local affairs with a general parliament in London controlling general interests and foreign relations.

With the increased prosperity of Canada comes the usual increase in divorce cases. Thirty-six applications for divorce were granted by Parliament last session. The year previous there were only 16 cases granted, in 1910 there were 12, and in 1909 six. Toronto easily leads as the divorce centre of Canada, as of the 36 applications granted no less than 17 were from the Queen City. The "high living" the "high gaming," and the "high flying" are contributory causes of trouble between man and wife. The man and wife who are all-in-all to each other in the struggling days find many causes of irritation as they mount the social ladder with increasing riches.

A bill is in preparation to present to the Legislature at its next session whereby corporations will have to bear more of the tax burden. The institutions which are most likely to be affected are banks, loan companies, trust, telephone, telegraph and express companies, gas and electric light steam and electric railway. It is claimed the prosperity of these companies is directly attributed to public patronage, and should bear a just share of the public tax burden.

Subtle flattery is not a lost art in Alberta, as we gather when we read in a newspaper from that province: "Mrs. Herbert Taylor, who is a pleasant and estimable woman, and who can bake the finest cake ever made, having sent us some, and therefore making us a judge, and who has a family of nice, clean, polite children, and who plays the piano beautifully and who gives lessons to a few fortunate pupils in our little city, had a tooth pulled on Friday."

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

How Long Will You Live?
A life table measuring the health conditions, based on the mortality in three years, 1909 to 1911, inclusive, has been prepared by the Department of Health, New York City. In 1882 a similar life table was prepared under the direction of the late Dr. John S. Billings.

The compilation shows that thirty years ago a child under 5 years could expect to live 41 years, while a child at that age at present may look forward to a future lifetime of almost 52 years, an increase of almost 11 years. The life of a child between 5 and 10 years has been prolonged from 46 to 51. A person of 25 to 30 had an expectancy of life 30 years ago of almost 32.6 years. At present the expectancy is 34.3, an increase of 1.7 years.

Persons between 40 and 45 years had an expectancy of life of 23.9 years a generation and a half ago, and at present one of 23.4 a decreased expectancy of six months. At all ages above 40 years there is a constantly increasing diminution of the duration of life varying from 6 months at 40 to 3 months at 85 years.

The table shows the expectancy of life is greater among females than among males up to 40 years. Above 40 the reverse is true. Eighty-nine per cent. of the saving of life is before the twentieth year of age, and especially among children under 5 years.

The remarkable decreases in the mortality from diphtheria and croup, measles, scarlet fever and smallpox, under 5 years account for this comparatively tremendous prolongation at ages under 5 years.

The increased mortality above 40 is attributed to certain diseases that affect the heart, kidneys, stomach, liver and intestines. The death rate from cancer, heart diseases and kidney diseases has increased within a generation. Accompanying this increased mortality has been an increase in the consumption of spirituous liquors and nitrogenous articles of food, which the circular says means too much drink and too much meat.

It is reported that the succulent oyster, the most delectable product of marine life is growing scarce. What do we care? Possibly one reason why the order has gone forth requiring all soldiers in the Canadian training camps to wear moustaches is to give the young officers a chance to relate their hair-breadth escapes.

The royal matchmakers of Europe are kept busy arranging a matrimonial alliance for Princess Patricia. This is a matter likely to be decided by H. R. H. personally, and until she intimates her intentions little attention need be paid to idle conjectures.

Harry Lauder conducted the service in a Bristol church the other Sunday. It would be hard for Harry to keep from making a mental estimate of the "siller" in the contribution boxes when they were handed in.

It is not uncommon for many men to forget how much they owe, but in these days of money famine, when people are straining their memories to recall any possible asset, it is surprising to read of the thousands of dollars laying unclaimed by depositors in the banks. Sympathy is wasted on these "absent-minded beggars."

After you pay cash for an electric run about you have to charge the batteries.

How to Forget the Heat
A Montreal lady gave a luncheon last week to forty laborers who were employed in putting down an asphalt pavement in the neighborhood of her home. She might have sat quietly behind the awnings and complained of the heat, but she thought of others. The best way to endure the hot weather is to forget about it. This can best be done by thinking of others who are in a more trying position.

No success is worth anything that is won by thrusting down others or taking unfair advantage of them.

A PURELY VEGETABLE PILL.—The chief ingredients of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are mandrake and dandelion, sedative and purgative, but perfectly harmless in their action. They cleanse and purify and have most healthful effect upon the secretions of the digestive organs. The dyspeptic and all who suffer from liver and kidney ailments will find in these pills the most effective medicine in concentrated form that has yet been offered to the suffering.

HOG BRISTLES.

The successful swine breeder must be a close observer. The man who sticks to hogs, whether they are high or low, will come out right in the end every time.

Much of the success with hogs depends upon keeping them free from lice.

A growing pig needs plenty of room, but for fattening small quarters are best.

Well bred, well selected pigs make more profit on the food eaten than scrubs.

The Ohio experiment station has found that rape is one of the very best forage crops for hogs.

You must help the hog lift by giving him good care and feed if he is to be a mortgage lifter.

ROOTS AS HOG FEED.

An Abundance of Green Feed Cheapens Pork Production.

If you are not fortunate enough to own a patch of several acres fenced with good woven wire you may still plan to furnish your hogs an abundance of cut feed and roots during the season of short grain supply, writes a Kansas hog raiser in the American Agriculturist. At this time you have a number of pigs, if the sows were bred for spring farrow, and in no other way can you hasten their growth so cheaply and satisfactorily as by providing plenty of succulent feed during the first six months of their growth. Rape, green oats, rye, alfalfa and clover are among the first available for cutting and feeding green. Sorghum does not grow readily until settled warm weather;

er; hence, although it is very valuable later on, it will not do to depend on early in the season.

One of my neighbors who always made good in the hog business kept his hogs in a dry lot. This plan, however, is not to be recommended if there is any way to prevent it, as it necessitates extra labor at a time when labor is at a premium in other lines of farm work. This man always planted an acre or two, depending on the number of hogs he kept, in sweet corn. This he began to feed, stalk and all, when the grain began to set. When this was all gone he usually had some early corn ripening. Early in the summer a small patch of oats furnished succulent feed until the oats crop was ready to harvest, and by that time sorghum was ready to fill in the gap between the oats and sweet corn.

The late spring of 1912, with its cold rains and clammy soil, was not conducive to even sprouting of corn and Kafir; hence the sweet corn crop on my farm was cut short, and I did not have much sweet corn with which to supplement my pasture during the dry season. I had, however, a good sized patch of mangels intended for winter feeding, and I used these instead. It seems strange that farmers, as a rule, do not seem to realize the value of these roots as stock feed. For six or seven years I have raised them for hogs, poultry and cows, and each season finds me wishing I had planted more. The main objection to them is the amount of work required in raising the crop, but they are such heavy yielders a small plot produces a large amount of rich feed.

Milking Capacity of Sows.

The difference in the milking capacity of different sows is as wide as in cows, as would readily be recognized if sows were in the habit of being milked as cows are. When the milking is done in an experimental way the difference becomes manifest. According to the Wisconsin experiment station, the average milk yield from mature sows ranges from 4.1 pounds to 5.8 pounds daily, but in experiments made with four sows the highest yield made in one day was 8.7 pounds, while the lowest was 1.2 pounds. These figures indicate how wide may be the difference in the milk yield of different sows. The number of pounds of milk given, however, does not afford a fair idea of the work the sow actually does, for the milk is about twice as rich as that of the ordinary cow. In the experiments referred to the average composition of nine samples of sows' milk was: Water, 80.35 per cent; fat, 8.24 per cent; solids not fat, 11.41 per cent.

Calves in Summer.

When calves are born in the spring it is better to keep them housed during the summer than to turn them out to grass to fight the flies and to withstand the hot rays of the sun, says Hoard's Dairyman. Calves raised in a clean, shaded barn will do much better. At a very early age the calves consume very little, if any, grass. The ideal way is to have the calves born in September and October. The first few months of a calf's life it requires considerable personal attention, and during the winter months especially there is more time to devote to the stock than in the busy summer months. When spring comes the calf is six or seven months old and can be turned to pasture to advantage. It is past the period when it needs very much close attention. If the grass is good and plenty of water supplied, the calf will largely look after itself.

Bacon Production.

To produce good bacon it is best to have grazing for the hogs. To raise hogs in a pen is costly. Many kinds of grazing can be provided, even if one's farm is small. It is possible to soil hogs as other animals, and it is economical to do so. Originally the hog was a grazing animal—and he still is, if given a chance.

A POB TO ASTHMA.—Give Asthma half a chance and it gains ground rapidly. But give it repeated treatments of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy and it will fall back even faster. There is no half way measure about this remedy. It goes right to work and drives asthma out. It reaches the inmost breathing passages and leaves no place for the trouble to lurk. Have it by you for ready use.

"Father grows younger every day." And his new photograph hits him to a "T". The old portrait taken twenty years ago, made him look so serious and old-fashioned—not a bit like he really is. We wouldn't part with it of course. But isn't it splendid to have a picture of him as he looks today. And father says that he's glad he gave in and had it made—that having your picture taken is far from an unpleasant experience nowadays.

Union Stock Yards, Aug. 5.—The run here to-day totalled 144 cars, containing 2,298 cattle, 1,288 sheep, 2,110 hogs, 206 calves and ten horses.

Following the holiday, today's opening was a little slow, but even at that it was a great deal brisker than last week's closing. After two weeks of gradually declining prices, cattle took a jump to-day, and registered an increase of fifty cents over last week's closing prices. The stock was also of a better grade than has been shipped in during the past two weeks, and as a result trade was better. There was very little improvement in cows, that market remaining about steady with last week. Sheep also brightened up and while there was a fairly large run it was not excessive for the opening day, and this market gained about twenty-five cents. Lambs and calves, however, were just about the same as last week, though in all probability they will both brighten up before the close. After selling at a very high price for two weeks, hogs finally took a drop. This week the drop was from 15 to 25c. After such a sensational sale as the hog market has had for the past two weeks, there was bound to be a drop.

Choice butcher's cattle sold from $6.25 to $9.50, medium from $5.50 to $6.00, and common from $4.50 to $5.00. Choice butchers' cows went from $5.15 to $5.50, medium from $4.50 to $5.00, and common from $3.25 to $4.00. Butchers' bulls ranged from $3.00 to $5.50, canners and cutters from $2.00 to $3.00, and milkers and springers from $4.00 to $6.50, according to quality. Good feeders sold from $2.25 to $5.75, and heavy feeding bulls from $3.75 to $4.25. Calves (good veal) brought from $5.00 to $7.00, and common from $3.50 to $4.50. Spring lambs went from $7.00 to $7.50, and common from $4.00 to $4.50. Light ewes sold from $5.00 to $5.50, heavy ewes from $4.00 to $4.50, and bucks and culls from $3.00 to $3.50. On the hog market quotations were, f. o. b., $9.65, fed and watered, $10.10, and weighed off cars, $10.25.

Children With Defective Sight

A letter received by Mr. Gardiner, Principal of the Ontario School for the Blind, from the Superintendent of the American Mission School for the Blind at Bombay, India, mentions that the estimated number of blind people in India is 500,000, of whom certainly no more than 500 have had any opportunity for an education or training along industrial lines. Reports from many places in the United States, as well as from many European countries, indicate that blindness is decreasing in the most highly civilized communities, largely as the result of greater knowledge, and more attention to preventive measures, on the part of physicians and nurses. While the returns of the last Dominion census on this subject have not yet been tabulated and published, there is reason to believe that a similar statement is applicable to Canada. Nevertheless it is probable that there are now—as there always have been—many young people in Ontario who ought to be enrolled as pupils in the School at Brantford, but are not. Some parents of blind children have never heard of the School; others are sensitive about letting it be known that their children are afflicted; many, from what might be described as excessive affection, do not like to be separated from their children, even for the children's good. To get into communication with the parents of those for whose benefit the School is maintained, the Principal depends largely upon the kind intervention of municipal officers, teachers, ministers and municipal boards, and he will be glad to get from any reader of the Guide-Advocate the name and postoffice address of any person under twenty-one years of age, who is blind, or whose sight is so defective that attendance at the local Public School is not practicable. The methods in use at Brantford, good English education can be acquired by the sightless, and instruction also given in such trades as are available to enable the blind to become self-supporting. There is no charge for board, tuition or books. Address H. F. Gardiner, Principal O. S. B., Brantford.

Inwood's civic holiday is on Tuesday, August 19th.

Confession of a Girl Graduate

A Story For Commencement By EDITH V. ROSS

When I was a little girl there was a boy in the high school of whom great things in a scholarly way were expected. He not only stood first in his class, but showed an originality that astonished the teachers. Alan Broadwell was his name, and at the time I first heard of him and his remarkable brain he was fifteen years old. His was then prepared to go to college, but his father would not permit him to go until he was two years older.

I was then thirteen, the age when a girl throws away her doll and begins to aspire to things less childlike and more womanlike. I had two brothers, Tom and Jim—Tom a year older than Alan, and Jim a year younger. One May morning, when I was sitting on the porch reading a romance, Alan Broadwell came in at the gate and asked if Tom was at home. I told him that Tom was in the house and I would go and find him.

"I PUT MY HANDEKERCHIEF TO MY EYES," though I was a child to him, he was a good deal to me—a tall, handsome, intellectual boy—and I would have given a year of my life for a single word or even look indicating his slightest interest in me.

When Alan was graduated at college he was made assistant professor of English literature at his alma mater. The university was a co-ed institution, and when I became twenty I entered for a degree. My brother Tom had gone far away, and Professor Broadwell, who was just entering upon his duties as an instructor, was not aware that there was such a person as myself among the students. I did not make myself known to him, and I had so changed that he did not recognize me.

When my class reached a point where we were required to write essays we handed them in for inspection and correction to him. If there was a facility for anything in my dull brain it was for scribbling. At school my compositions always received the highest mark. When I wrote my first essay as a college student I took especial pains with it—pains in two ways, the one to treat my subject as well as possible, the other to make a lot of errors in the construction of sentences. In explanation of this I will say that students go to college for different purposes. Usually they go to get an education. Some go to have a good time. I went for the purpose of emulating Professor Broadwell. By making the substance of my essay good I would attract his attention. By putting in a great many errors I was likely to have them pointed out to me by the professor.

lined here and there with little triangles under them. Indeed, the whole essay looked as if a daddy longlegs had waded through pool of ink, then strolled over the paper. "One of the first rules of rhetoric," the professor went on, "is that the opening paragraph should be pointed and not too long. It should catch the attention of the reader and direct it toward what is to follow. I would divide your first paragraph here." And he put the tip of his pencil on one of his P's with the wrong side foremost. "I also observe," he continued, "that in a number of instances you have ended a sentence with a preposition, which is inadvisable. I would recommend you to learn the difference between 'shall' and 'will.' You have invariably used them incorrectly."

"Oh, yes, you can. It's very simple when you once catch the idea." He went on to explain it to me, using the familiar illustration of the man in the water who intended to shout "No, one will save me; I shall drown," but said instead "No one shall save me; I will drown." Then he gave me the grammatical rule for it all, and when he had finished, if I were drowning and should act in accordance with my understanding of his explanation, I would certainly forbid any one to help me. But I didn't tell him so. I simply looked as if it were all clear to me.

He was certainly very kind to give me all this information, and if I had had any conscience I should have been ashamed of myself that nine-tenths of it was unnecessary, I having made the errors on purpose. I thanked him at the end of his instructions and said that I would profit by them, which was deceptive, for I intended to make other mistakes in my next essay that would bring about a similar interview.

And so I did. On the second occasion of my being called upon to remain after lecture for instruction the professor complimented me even more highly on my handling of my subject than before, but he seemed to be much distressed on my deficiency of handling the English language. "You confuse the verbs 'to lie' and 'to lay,'" he said, "the one meaning to recline, the other to place some thing." He gave me the grammatical construction, then asked me to give him an example. I said, "I would have lain the book on the table."

He looked at me with a mingled pity and distress and went over the ground again, which was what I wished him to do, for I had made the blunder purposely. At the end of his second explanation he asked me for another example. I said, "I laid down to rest." At this he grew impatient and spoke sharply to me, whereupon I put my handkerchief to my eyes to conceal tears that I could not shed. At this he spoke to me not only gently, but I was rejoiced at perceiving tenderness in his voice.

"Pardon me, Miss Brown," he said; "I will not be so impatient with you again. Doubtless you will learn all these points in construction in time. I have been anxious that you should acquire them because you are one of the best writers in your class. I will not call your attention to them again, but leave you to pick them up as you proceed." "You mean that you're tired of trying to teach me," I whined. "Not at all; not at all, I assure you. If you prefer it I will continue."

"I do prefer it," I said, drying eyes into which I had succeeded in forcing a bit of moisture. Then, taking my essay, I went to the door, the professor politely opening it for me, I maintaining my jocular countenance till it had closed behind me. Then I congratulated myself that I had made considerable advance toward obtaining the degree that was nearest my heart—M. A. L., or mistress of the art of love.

I blush now, years after I was aiming at this degree, at the devices, the expedients, to which I resorted. During the period that I was handing in essays to Professor Broadwell I continued a pretended obtuseness at his instructions that they might be repeated over and over again. I put off telling him that I was the sister of his boy chum, that I had acted the part of messenger for him when I was a little girl and that during his visits to Tom had never once looked at or spoken to me except as he would to a child.

One day Tom came from his faraway home and visited me at college. He had lost track of Broadwell, but, faking up a college bulletin, saw his name among those of the faculty. "Upon my word!" he exclaimed. "My old friend Alan Broadwell is here as assistant professor of English literature." "Is he?" I said indifferently. He ran away to find his chum, and that evening I was introduced to the professor as Tom's sister. There was real surprise expressed by the professor and than sprung by me. By this time I had made a different impression upon my victim from that of a child, and from that time I was treated with the additional consideration of Tom's sister. I became under the professor's instruction proficient in the use of the English language and gave him credit for having infused a knowledge of the subject into my dull brain. When my college career came to an end I told Professor Broadwell that I should rely on him for advice with regard to my commencement oration. It was not that I wished to make a creditable exit from the university on taking my degree, but that I might take that other degree of M. A. L. before leaving him a prey to other women, and I was quite sure that I could bring him to a proposal while consulting with him upon the subject matter of my oration. It required half a dozen consultations to enable me to select a subject, half a dozen more to decide upon its treatment and a couple of dozen more to consider changes in the text after it had been written.

The evening before commencement we were sitting side by side, my manuscript before us. There were no interjections, no ptoohks, no crased P's, for the production was finished and ready for the next day's use. The professor, instead of making a ptoohk with his pen on the manuscript, made one with his arm around my waist.

Then I was happy, for I knew that in addition to the degree of B. A. that the press would hand me on the morrow I had attained that of M. A. L., so much nearer to my heart.

IT WILL PREVENT ULCERATED THROAT.—At the first symptoms of sore throat, which presages ulceration and inflammation, take a spoonful of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. Add a little sugar to it to make it palatable. It will allay the irritation and prevent the ulceration and swelling that are so painful. Those who were periodically subject to quinsy have made themselves immune to attack.

LUCKY YOUNGSTERS. Some of Britain's Little Heirs to Vast Tracts of Land. Who is the luckiest youngster in Britain? Examination of the peerage reveals many interesting cases of boys of tender years who will one day inherit vast riches, estates, and great family honors, the most fortunate, perhaps, being the five-year-old Earl of Arundel and Surrey, the son of the Duke of Norfolk, who is heir to both his father's and mother's estates. The Duke of Norfolk owns 50,000 acres in some of the fairest English counties, his rent roll exceeding a quarter of a million a year, while the Duchess of Norfolk—Baroness Herries in her own right—owns 18,900 acres.

The duke is one of London's great landowners, owning a considerable slice of the southeast side of the Strand, and according to a competent authority, the rent roll of this land a couple of decades ago was $52,000. New buildings in Norfolk and Surrey streets have immeasurably augmented the rent roll, which has probably increased threefold in value. A year previous to the birth of the Earl of Arundel and Surrey a son was born to the Marquis of Bute, "the unheralded king of Cardiff," as he has been called, whose father left the enormous fortune of £6,000,000. His son and heir, the Earl of Dumfries, a bright little youngster of six years of age, will inherit vast estates which cover 117,000 acres, in addition to many titles. Lord Bute is the wealthiest peer in Scotland, although he does not possess quite so many acres as the Earl of Dalhousie, who came into the title, an income of over £50,000 a year, and about 138,000 acres of land, when a boy of nine. His son and heir is Lord Ramsay, who was born in 1904.

Two more instances of vast fortunes which will descend to lucky youngsters, not only from their fathers, but also from their mothers, are afforded by the cases of the Marquis of Blandford, son of the Duke of Marlborough, who is now sixteen years of age, and Viscount Mandeville, son of the Duke of Manchester, who was born eleven years ago. The Duke of Manchester owns some 70,000 acres of land, and is also possessor of four country residences, two in England and two in Ireland. His wife, Miss Helena Zimmerman, daughter of an American railway magnate, whom he married in 1909, brought much wealth to the Manchester family. With two exceptions the Duke of Marlborough is the smallest of dual landowners. He possesses about 26,500 acres of land, the revenue being given at £35,000. Quite a number of heirs to large estates were born in 1894, the same year as the Prince of Wales, and such names as Lord Whitechapel, grandson and heir, after his father, to the duke-don't, Buteleach, Queensbury, occur to one readily, says The Ladies' Field. The duke is easily the biggest landlord in Britain. He owns 460,000 acres, mostly in Scotland, and much of it is barren land. The Earl of Hillsborough, born in 1894, son of the Marquis of Downshire, will inherit some day 120,000 acres. A great many acres of his future property are in Ireland and some in Berkshire.

GEO. CHAMBERS.

"Staff of Life" Shown to be of Little Use

Professor T. B. Wood, of Cambridge, England, lecturing at the Royal Institution, exposed the pretensions of bread. The "staff of life," he said, "has been masquerading as a valuable food on the strength of the protein it contains, but it has now been discovered that half of that protein is composed of glutaminic acid, of which the human system requires but a minute quantity, while the remainder is split up into a dozen or fifteen other products of considerable value to animal life, but which are necessarily found in bread only in almost infinitesimal proportions. In order to obtain sufficient quantities of the latter on a bread dietary, the system would have to cope with a vast amount of waste glutaminic acid."

"What we want to encourage people to do," Professor Wood declared, "is not to worry about eating this kind of bread or that kind of bread, but to mix other things with their bread in order to get protein better suited to animal requirements than is this extraordinarily lopsided protein which is derived from bread."

The Holidays

It is peculiar, but nevertheless true that children greet the advent of the holiday season with much the feeling of gratification common to the prisoner who is paroled. To draw a definite line of demarcation between innate aversion of school and aversion justified by school conditions is impossible, yet we cannot help but feel that hereditary influences, if they are as strong a force as represented, are largely responsible for the status of school in the mind of the child.

All educational efforts of recent years have been directed with a view toward making school life attractive to the pupil, for only those lessons learned under pleasant auspices can be of the utmost value in after-life. Despite the strides that have been made in the direction of popular education we still have a preponderating majority of boys and girls who spend countless hours in anticipating the arrival of the next holiday season and in forgetting what they have learned when the vacation does arrive. Our school system is not much at fault. It is merely the assertion of youth's aversion to discipline and restraint.

The Humble Hen

Honour the humble hen and her illustrious husband. Quietly, clucking over thoughts that man cannot fathom, she goes softly about the barnyard or chicken yard, thankfully assimilating the various bits of nutrition or gravel that attract her attention. In the proper season she betakes herself to her nest and there exercises to the full the instinct that prompts her to bring into being those fluffy little objects that go about shouting "peep" and pecking vainly at everything in sight, "just like mother."

When the boarding house table calls for its Sunday sacrifice, it is the hen who offers herself as a balm to the palates of the homeless.

When the dark maw of the cold storage warehouse opens, it is the hen who furnishes the eggs to fill that emptiness, and her eggs that rest in mute, inglorious certainty within that darkness, knowing if they know anything at all, that whatever their age, they will once more appear to the world in the guise of freshness and bring a price undreamed of even in the glory of their youth.

Man owes much to the hen. Were there no hens, no man would be hen-pecked. He might even have to be duckpecked. And think of the ignominy and discomfort of that! Were there no hens, the man whose garden falls would have to find some other excuse than that most convenient one of the neighbors poultry. Were there no hens, the sufferings of the victims of hen fever could never be assuaged. Were there no hens how could the children have chickenpox and thereby escape for a few days the thralldom of the schoolroom?

From early youth to old age the hen is the companion or the occasional food or a bane or a figure of speech for mankind. She may not be the mother of henlady's, but she is a mighty figure in our daily life. She is worthy of praise and protection, care and comfort.

Honour the humble hen—and her illustrious husband.

The excesses of our youth are drafts upon our old age, payable with interest about thirty years after date.

The man who makes hay when the sun shines doesn't have to borrow his neighbor's umbrella when it rains.

Variations in the Test

Frequent experiments have shown that one single test of a cow's milk is not reliable as an indication of what percentage of fat her milk normally contains. A great many well known causes affect the test, also some causes that are unknown at present even by the closest students. This "variation in the test" is one of the puzzles of the cow's individuality and because of these puzzling variations it is advisable to take composite samples at intervals so as to ascertain the average test.

Some recent painstaking investigations at one of the dairy research stations in England with seven cows for two days, even covering such details as a separate test of eleven successive pints, three times a day, from the four quarters of the udder, show that while the average test with the cows giving thirty pounds of milk per day was 3.6 per cent, the variation was all the way from only six tenths of one per cent up to nine and a half per cent of fat.

This is clear proof of how misleading one single test may be. If the real earning capacity of each individual cow is to be computed, it must be on the basis of her annual production of milk and fat less the cost of feed; regular weighing and testing give that knowledge which every factory patron should have of each cow he keeps.—Department of Agriculture.

Every man who inherits wealth has a long start of those who begin life with their muscles and brains.

Have you noticed that when a man is always cheerful and helpful, nobody ever thinks it necessary to ask him if he is a Christian.

The most glad thing in the world is that few of us fall very low; the saddest that, with much capabilities, we seldom rise high.

Perseverance and tact are the two great qualities for all men who would mount, but especially for those who have to step out of the crowd.

Such is the destiny of great men that their superior genius always exposes them to be the butt of the envenomed darts of calumny and envy.

Constant application to pleasure takes away from the enjoyment, or rather turns it into the nature of a very burdensome and laborious business.

It is a great thing to have a big brain, a fertile imagination, grand ideals, but the man with these, bereft of a good backbone is sure to serve no useful end.

Religion Up-to-date

O Lord, I come to Thee in prayer once more;
 But pardon that I do not kneel before
 Thy gracious presence—for my knees are sore
 With too much walking. In my chair
 I'll sit at ease, and humbly bow my head.

I've labored in Thy vineyard, Thou dost know
 I've sold ten tickets to the minstrel show,
 I've called on fifteen strangers in our town
 Their contributions to our church put down.

I've baked a pot of beans for Wednesday's tea,
 An "Old Time Supper" it is going to be.

I've dressed three dollies for our annual Fair,
 And made a cake which we will raffle there,
 Now, with Thy boundless wisdom, so sublime,
 Thou knowest that these duties all take time.

I have no time to fight my spirit's foes,
 I have no time to mend my husband's clothes,
 My children roam the streets from morn till night,
 I have no time to teach them to do right.
 But Thou, O Lord, considering my cares,
 Will give them righteousness and heed my prayers.

Bless the bean supper and the minstrel show,
 And put it in the hearts of all to go.
 Induce all visitors to patronize
 The men who in our program advertise.
 Because, I chased those merchants till they hid,
 When they would see me coming—yes! they did.

Increase the contributions to our Fair,
 And bless the people who assemble there,
 Bless Thou the grab-bag and the gypsy tent,
 The flower table and the cake that's sent,
 May our whist club be to Thy service blest.

The dancing party gayer than the rest,
 And when Thou hast bestowed these blessings—then,
 We pray that Thou wilt bless our souls,
 —Amen.

THE WESTERN FAIR

September 5th to 13th

The Western Fair of London, Ontario, will this year without doubt surpass anything ever before attempted by the Association. For months past preparations have been going quietly on for the great Exhibition, and when the time arrives it will be found that everything is in first-class condition. Enquiries of all kinds are coming into the general offices and the indications are that the buildings, although enlarged this year, will be filled to overflowing. The space in the Main Building is already about allotted. It is expected that the Agricultural and Horticultural Buildings will be crowded, as the Fruit exhibits from the different counties will be quite large and very attractive. The Women's Institute throughout Middlesex County will no doubt make a very attractive display in their competition.

Prize lists, entry forms and information of all kinds regarding the Exhibition will be given on application to the Secretary, A. M. Hunt, General offices, Room 302 Dominion Savings Building, London, Ontario.

McCormick—Johnston

A very quiet wedding was solemnized in the Anglican Church, Inwood, Tuesday, July 29, when Bertha, the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Johnston, became the bride of Joseph P. McCormick.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by Miss Lou McCornick, while the Rev. N. Farney, of London, officiated in tying the nuptial knot.

The bride was attired in a gown of white duchesse satin trimmed with heavy lace and pearls. Her only ornament was a pearl and olivine necklace, the gift of the groom.

Luncheon was served at the bride's home and the bridal party left on the evening train for Sarnia en route for Medicine Hat, where they will make their new home. The bride travelled in a suit of navy blue whip-corn and a smart tuscany hat.

The many handsome gifts, from far and wide, of which the bride was the recipient, shows the esteem in which she is held, and the young couple's many friends join in wishing them a long and prosperous married life.

COMPARE THEM

Best English and American Bands at Canadian National Exhibition

With the Irish Guards Band and Patrick Conway's Band both giving three concerts daily at the Canadian National Exhibition, lovers of band music will be able to compare the best English and American bands. The Irish Guards are undoubtedly the most popular of the Guards' bands and that means the most popular of European military bands, while Conway's band has succeeded Gilmore's band as the popular favorite in the republic to the south of us. These two bands make the greatest musical attraction the Canadian National has ever offered its patrons.

The Seacabee

The Great Ship "SEACABEE," now running daily between Cleveland and Buffalo, has created a sensation with the traveling public, and is attracting to that popular lake route, a vast number of travelers who break their railroad journey at either city to take the delightful lake trip and at the same time inspect her mighty engines, her magnificent interior decorations, her complete wireless telegraph system, wonderful electric illumination scheme and other interesting features.

The "SEACABEE" is largest and most costly passenger steamer on inland waters of the world—length 500 feet, breadth 88 feet 6 inches, 510 staterooms and parlors, accommodating 1500 passengers, equalling in sleeping capacity the largest hotels in the country. She can carry 6,000 people—the population of a good sized town.

Her Main Saloon, Lounge, Atrium, Main Dining Room and Buffet are all in the highest type of decorative art.

All railroads tickets reading between Cleveland and Buffalo are good for transportation on C & B Line Steamers, and those traveling either east or west, should not miss the opportunity of taking the restful lake ride afforded by the splendid service of this line.

A stiff fine was levied on a Filbury man last week for attempting to dispose of rotten eggs. The law is very strict in regard to the sale of impure food, and imprisonment can be added to the more flagrant abuses.
