WORLD'S LARGEST STEAMSHIP

Maiden Voyage of the Steamship "Vaterland" to the Port of New York

(Scientific American)

With the launching of each "largest" steamship it was customary, a few years ago, to say of her that the limit of size had been reached, and that in future there would surely be a return to more moderate dimensions. To-day, we hear no such prognostications; for the dimensions so far from diminishing, give promise rather of increasing. It was less than one year ago that the steamer "Imperator" of the Hamburg-American Line—the first ship to exceed a length of 900 feet, her length on deck being 909 feet, and her displacement 52,000 tons. This week sees the advent of the "Vaterland" of the same company, a huge ship, which exceeds the "Imperator" in length by 41 feet, in beam by 2 feet, and in displacement by no less than 6,000 tons.

The "Vaterland," which was built at the yards of Blohm & Voss, Hamburg, is 950 feet in length, 100 feet in beam, and she displaces 58,000 tons. We are informed by the company that during a trial cruise of over two days' duration she averaged a speed of 25.8 knots, her turbines developing 90,000 horse-power. In view of the fact that she was announced as a 23-knot ship, this is certainly a most surprising result, although the great work which has been done by her builders in the construction of high-speed German armored cruisers propelled by similar motive power, all of which greatly exceed their contract speed, should have prepared the public for very fine steaming results in this vessel.

Tags, the "Von der Tann," designed for 25 knots, made on a recent trial 28.1 knots; the "Moltke" and "Goeben," designed for 27 knots, on recent runs made, respectively, 28.7 and 28.6 knots. The motive power of the "Vaterland" is broadly similar to that of the cruisers, consisting of four turbines driving four propellers.

As compared with the "Imperator," which was built at the Vulcan Works, the "Vaterland," to the eye of any but the expert, looks to be practically identical, her increase in length of 41 feet being scarcely perceptible on a ship of such great dimensions. Her under-water form, however, and the construction of the hull at the stern are quite different, the "Vaterland" having what is known as a cruiser stern, with a balanced rudder which is entirely below the waterline. The form of the "Vaterland" also differs greatly from that of the "Imperator," the successive water planes aft being fuller than those of the earlier ship. We understand that the changes in her model, as compared with the "Imperator," had much to do with the high speed which she achieved on her trial. A feature which adds to the appearance of the ship is absence of the monster eagle which is carried at the bow of the "Imperator." An eagle makes an appropriate figurehead on a clipper-ship, but it is inappropriate and quite inharmonious when placed at the top of a straight stemhead such as characterizes the modern transatlantic liner. The shield and scroll work of the "Vaterland" are in better taste.

The "Vaterland" is constructed with both longitudinal and transverse bulkheads, the longitudinal bulkheads forming the inner walls of the coal bunkers, and serving as an inner skin. All the walls of the passenger decks have been coated with special fire-proof material. The bulkheads are of unusual stiffness, and the openings in them, where they pass through the passenger accommodations, are closed by fireproof glass doors, thirty-nine in number, which will withstand a temperature of 1,000 degrees. The staircases are so enclosed with fireproof inclosure. A special fire department, composed of trained fire fighters, devotes its entire attention to fire protection. It occupies a special cabin, where all the fire alarm signaling devices are centered. There are more than 450 fire annunciators throughout the ship, which would instantly indicate a dangerous rise of temperature. A complete system of automatic fire sprinklers, comprising 800 water jets, is distributed throughout the crew's quarters. A special fire fighting device employing chemicals in place of steam is operated by the firemen. There is also a complete system of fire hose and pumps. The fire fighting installation fulfills the strictest rules laid down by the German building and police authorities. The "Vaterland" carries eighty-four lifeboats, including two motor lifeboats, which more than accommodate all on board.

The several cabins of the "Vaterland" have been designed by the leading decorators of Europe; and the great liner with its paintings, sculptures, and decorations affords an interesting study of the decorative arts. The grand dining saloon, which seats 800 guests, is finished in white and gold, its ceiling being supported by Ionic columns. In contrast to this the Ritz Carlton is carried out in mahogany and walnut decorated with heavy garlands in bronze. The smoking-room is paneled in Flemish oak in low tones, while the main lounge, which may be converted into a ball-room, is decorated in warm red tones. The art treasures include paintings by old Italian masters as well as work of many notable contemporary artists. On the main staircase hang two landscapes by the Venetian artist, Giuonanna Battista Pittoni (1691-1767). Four large canopies by Laresses adorn the main saloon; and a portrait of King Ludwig of Bavaria, by Baumgartner, will be found in the ladies' saloon. The smoking-room is enriched by two marine studies by Prof. Schnars-Alquist, while a great panoramic study, by Kolmsperger, adorns the cupola of the dining-room.

The Truro Sun says there is a seemingly well founded rumor that the Dominion Government is about to dispose of the Windsor Branch Railway, Windsor Junction to Windsor, a distance of 32 miles, to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, and that later on the company will extend to Halifax, some say to Dartmouth, by the purchase from the Government of the branch line that place. It is no secret that the big company have looked over prospective terminal sites on the Dartmouth side of Halifax Harbor.

Appalling Loss of Life on New Brunswick Coast

At Least One Hundred Fishermen Perished and the Property Damage Will Amount to Hundreds of Thousands

St. John, N.B., June 10—Stories of appalling loss of life on the northern coast of New Brunswick still continue to drift in here, and the latest reports place the human toll at 100 souls, at least, and the damage to shipping and property on the coast amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars. On account of the poor telephone and telegraph service in that district details of the disaster have been hard to obtain, but it has been practically ascertained that nearly every fishing village on the Caraqueet and Shippigan coast has paid heavily in lives and property.

A report from Bathurst tonight, said that an official of the Caraqueet railway had been over part of the district affected, and he placed the loss of life at something above 100. This estimate, he felt, was very conservative. He had heard of fishing schooners which were seen anchored off Shippigan and when visited were found to be without a remaining member of the crew. In some instances only one man was left to tell of the fate of his companions.

According to his account schooners were driven ashore in large numbers and in many cases the male portion of families were almost completely wiped out, for it was the custom for a father and his sons to man a boat and carry on the fishing trade by themselves.

The people lost were mostly French, and their villages were down close to the seashore and far from the centres of civilization, and on this account it was almost impossible to collect details.

A correspondent was in telephone communication with Caraqueet tonight and learned that nine lives were known to have been lost, and other persons were missing, but it would not be known for several days how great the number would total.

Four schooners were driven ashore there. Another small boat in which there were two men was also gone. Eleven bodies had been found there and it was expected that many more would be washed ashore along the coast.

From Shippigan, the report was that thirteen lives were known to have been lost, but it was expected that the total would be greater. Communication with other places along the coast could not be established, but from reports received at Shippigan it was evident that the loss of life has been very great.

There was a big run of fish on at the time the gale struck, and every available man was out following the fish. From Shippigan alone it was said that three hundred men had been out in the gale, and so far only about half had returned, but it was hoped that many of them had survived the gale.

The people of the northern part of the Province are anxiously waiting for further details of the calamity, but it is expected that several days more will elapse before full data will be available.

Farmer's Excursion to Truro

The College Management at Truro are making every arrangement to provide an interesting and profitable day for the excursionists who are expected from the Valley on Friday, June 19th. Of course, they have not lost sight of the fact that this is to be "A Day's Outing" and that the principal benefit will come from the pleasant social time spent on the College lawns and in the buildings.

However, some little idea is given in the succeeding paragraphs of what the excursionists may expect to see and learn of an educational character.

The Farm Department, under the management of Prof. Trueman, in its splendid condition, and the live stock never looked better. Among the new horses added to the College stud since the last excursion is the International First Prize Clydesdale stallion Lord Ullin (Imp) generally regarded as the finest individual stallion of the breed that has ever been in Nova Scotia. The cattle too are in splendid shape and well worth coming a long way to see. The people will have every opportunity to see the cows that have reacted to the tuberculin test and to secure all information in regard to tuberculosis and other diseases of cattle. Mr. Trueman is making a specialty of the production of sanitary milk products and has some very interesting exhibits which will prove valuable to those who are engaged in dairying.

The Horticultural Department, under Prof. Shaw, has been greatly enlarged during the past year. Those who are interested especially in vegetable and flower growing can profitably spend the whole afternoon going through the greenhouses and gardens.

In the entomological and Plant Disease Department, Prof. Brittain will have some very interesting material and will discuss insect pests and plant diseases and give demonstrations along this line. Mr. Brittain has recently carried on experiments in regard to the more economical use of Black Leaf Forty and similar preparations, which are well worth inquiring into.

In the Botanical Department, Prof. Smith is preparing an attractive exhibit and will be available during the whole day to answer questions and discuss matters in regard to his special subject.

Prof. Landels will have an exhibit of tile and drainage machinery of unusual interest. He will also discuss with the farmers the matter of free surveys of farms for drainage purposes. Mr. Landels is in charge of the drainage machine and will take the opportunity of discussing with the farmers the matter of drainage of farm lands with this machine.

The Poultry Department has never been in as good condition as at the present time. The hen brooders and colony houses are proving a great success and every poultry fancier should make a point of seeing the hundreds of healthy chickens that have been reared under artificial conditions.

There are other features at the College which have not been referred to in the foregoing but enough has been said to indicate that every person should find something of interest at the Agricultural College.

Ottawa Letter

Dear Sir:—Once more I presume the pen to write a line for "The Monitor," Annapolis County's leading Journal, and to begin, I first will mention the local campaign that is on now and on which people will vote on the 29th, inst. Probably just such a peculiar campaign was never waged in this or any other province of Canada before. For many years Ontario has waged a fierce fight against the liquor traffic, and has succeeded in a large number of ridings in carrying local option. In this campaign, the opposition leader has adopted as one of the main planks in his platform—"Abolish the Bar," and the Temperance Alliance has called upon all true temperance men and women, to support Mr. Rowel in this policy, so now it remains to be seen just how far the people will put principle before party. One thing is sure, if the constituencies do not give a very pronounced vote in its favour it will so encourage the brewing and distilling interests that the temperance cause will be materially set back.

Personally I do not take much stock in the "Abolish the Bar" cry. In theory it is grand, and without doubt no greater blessing could be conferred upon the people than to get out the pernicious habit of patronizing bar rooms. And if the agitation is continued by the churches and the temperance organizations, it will ultimately be accomplished. Whether it will prorogue or adjourn has not yet been decided upon. The government is very anxious to get the Canadian Nothern Aid Bill through, and also the Civil Service improvement Act, both of which are laid over for the time being. Also the Redistribution Bill. So it is just possible they may come back to put them through and some think they may appeal to the people, but all this is mere conjecture. As people have a penchant for trying to guess what the party in power intend doing, and as the government have the happy faculty, as a rule of keeping their good intentions to themselves, it is certainly largely guess work on the part of the public at large.

Ottawa is certainly looking its best now. Our various parks, which are so beautifully and artistically laid out, are very attractive to the eye; also all our beautiful drive ways which are lined by all kinds of foliage. Beautiful flowers, put there under the guidance of an expert landscape artist are much appreciated and patronized.

The weatherman during the month of May and so far in June has given us ideal weather. May dry and warm, and June with sufficient rain to keep vegetation advancing very rapidly, so good crops are generally predicted. A year ago now the country far and near was deluged with caterpillars, and they devastated acres of foliage, but fortunately this year there are hardly any to be seen and the people are in a very thankful mood in consequence.

There is the usual activity in the building line. Many large buildings are being erected for business purposes, and many improvements are noticeable all over the city.

The sad affair of the loss of the beautiful steamer "The Empress of Ireland," cast a deep gloom over our fair city, for on board were many Ottawans, bound for Europe, and very few of them were saved. I knew some of them personally. One of the saved was the head book-keeper of the J. R. Booth Co. He and his wife were both saved. They jumped from the steamer and were in the icy water of the St. Lawrence for over an hour before being rescued. Another of our leading citizens, Mr. A. Seybold, was saved but his wife was lost. They went down together hand in hand when the ship sank, and it was due to an explosion of the boiler under water, which blew him to the surface, that he was saved. But the explosion separated him and his wife, and he received severe scalds upon his arm and side. He is still in a precarious condition. His wife was picked up dead and brought to Limouski and there identified by some one who knew her and the body was forwarded to Ottawa for interment.

Oh, what a sad funeral! These visitations of Providence are hard to understand. It is just possible there was carelessness on the part of one or the other of the ships. I trust an impartial investigation will show just where the blame belonged. I feel now I have made this letter already too long so must cease scribbling. Trusting you may find this of sufficient interest for publication.

I remain as ever,
H. W. N.

Prof. J. William Hart Was Shot Dead

Granville Ferry, N. S., June 10—News has been received of the tragic death of Prof. J. William Hart, eldest son of Rev. J. R. Hart, of Granville Ferry. Prof. Hart was shot and instantly killed while doing his duty.

He had recently taken a position with a millionaire company, the Jekyll Island Club, Brunswick, Ga. His family expected to join him there as soon as the schools closed in Athens, his former home.

Accompanied by two men, friends from Athens, he had gone to Jekyll Beach, turtle-hunting. When the party arrived at the beach they found one of the coastguards hunting outside the territory allotted to him. Prof. Hart ordered him off, attempting to enforce the regulations of the Island. The guard thereupon drew a revolver and shot him in the head. The body was taken to Athens, Ga., where a large and impressive funeral was held, hundreds of friends crowding the church to pay a last tribute to the deceased.

He is survived by a widow, formerly Miss Dykeman, of Fredericton, and four children.

He had an exceptional career. Soon after graduation from Guelph Agricultural College he went to South Carolina where he was on the faculty of Clemson College. He then went back to Kingston, Ont., as head of the School of Agriculture. Later he spent some years at the University of Illinois, as a member of the faculty, and then went to Brazil as head of the first agricultural college of that South American republic.

Soon after leaving Brazil he went to the University of Georgia, being engaged by the State College of Agriculture and Government Bureau of Animal Industry jointly. He was a recognized authority in two countries on dairy and silage subjects. This position he gave up a month ago to take one with the millionaire company of Jekyll Island.

The news of his death has cast a gloom over Athens, where he was prominent in educational, church and social circles.

Parochial Mission at St. Mary's, Belleisle

An event unique in the history of St. Mary's is to commence next Monday evening, when a series of Parochial Mission services will be inaugurated.

The Mission is to be conducted by the Ven. G. R. Martell, M.A., D.C.L., Rector of Winkson, and Archdeacon of Nova Scotia. U

The Service on Monday evening will commence at 7.45, when the Rector will commend the Archdeacon to the people and entrust the conduct of the Mission to him. Thereafter there will be services daily throughout the week:—
8 a. m. Holy Communion and Interecession.
8 p. m. Mission Service.

The following letter, issued by the Missioner and circulated some time since, explains the object of the Mission:—

Christ Church Rectory
Windsor, N.S., May 15, 1914

To the People of Belleisle:—
My Dear Friends:— I am writing you a short letter concerning the Mission to be held in your community, beginning on June 22nd.

The intention of holding such a Mission is forcibly expressed in our Litany:—
"To strengthen such as do stand; to comfort and help the weak-hearted; to raise up them that are fallen that through true repentance, they may find pardon and reconciliation, and that, by the Grace of the Holy Spirit, their changed lives may be lived according to God's Holy Word."

I am writing to ask your help in this great work, and your help in these definite ways:—
First,—To pray daily for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon your community.
To pray daily for the missioner that he may be guided by that same Holy Spirit to speak the word with power and conviction.
To speak often to each other of the coming Mission.
To put aside all other engagements for the nights on which the Mission will be held and come, beginning at the beginning.
To expect great things from God.
To look for rich blessings from Him who "will give more abundantly than we desire or deserve."
Working together in the ways suggested, we surely shall receive rich gifts from our God, and the whole community will feel the spiritual uplift that comes from a Mission prepared for by earnest prayer and faith in the power and love of a living Saviour.
Brethren pray for me.

Sincerely Your Friend
G. R. MARTELL

It is hoped these special services may prove a blessing to the entire community, and to this end all persons of every denomination are earnestly asked to pray for the Mission and to attend the services.

There will be no collection excepting on Sunday, June 28th, when a thank-offering will be asked for the defraying of necessary expenses. Hymn books will be provided and a hearty welcome extended to all.

Empress on Her Side in 180 Feet of Water

Quebec, June 8.—Further progress towards the recovery of the bodies which are imprisoned in the wreck of the Empress of Ireland off Rimouski, was rendered impossible when a strong easterly gale sprang up to-day. Divers had previously descended from the Canadian government steamer Druid, and sought out the best means of access. They found the Empress lying on her side in 180 feet of water.

A determined effort will be made to release the bodies as soon as possible, this task having been entrusted to Mr. Wetherspoon, the wrecker who was engaged to float the Royal George when she went aground, but here more than a year ago. Embalmers are also on the spot to prepare the bodies for burial as soon as they are brought to the surface.

FIFTY BODIES HAVE NOT BEEN IDENTIFIED

Montreal, June 8.—Mr. Wm. Stitt, General Passenger Agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who returned from Quebec to-day, stated that there were still approximately fifty bodies which had not been identified. These he said had been most carefully embalmed and would be kept in vaults as long as possible. In the meantime every possible mark which might lead to ultimate identification has been recorded. This, in conjunction with the wide dissemination of the particulars of the disaster, it was hoped, would lead to the recognition of a number of bodies at present unidentified.

You Can Have a Wealth of Beautiful Hair

Nothing equals an aureole of beautiful hair as a frame for a pretty face. Without a background of nice hair a really pretty face frequently becomes plain and, with it, unattractive features assume life and beauty.

Every woman can increase her natural charm by using Newbro's Herpicide. Herpicide makes hair beautiful. The dandruff germ saps the vitality of the hair. Herpicide applied intelligently and regularly checks this destruction of hair life and prevents the hair from falling out, giving it a snap and luster, a soft, silky fineness which can be acquired in no other way.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1.00 sizes is guaranteed to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

Applications may be obtained at the best barber shops and hair dressing parlors.

Rev. Richie Elliott preached to an appreciative audience in the Baptist Church on Sunday morning. In the evening a full church listened with much interest to Miss Mable Archibald, a returned missionary. The subject matter was "Light and Shade in India," and the contrasts were vividly drawn. Miss Archibald is a delightful speaker, showing by her manner how deeply she is interested in the welfare of our kindred in India. Her sense of humor makes her a very happy speaker to listen to. That she is an editor of a paper for women, tells of her deep interest in moral and social reform movements. If you get a chance to hear her don't fail to attend.

Edison is Figuring Out a Big Problem

Philadelphia, June 8.—Thomas A. Edison said in an interview preceding the dinner of the National Electric Light Association now in convention in this city that he was working on a new problem the derivation of electricity direct from coal. He is confident of success.

Mr. Edison came here by automobile from his home in Menlo Park. Immediately after his arrival he took a short nap and then received a newspaper representative. "You want me to tell you the problem I am studying now?" he said. "Well it is to make electricity direct from coal. It has been accomplished twice but not so that it can be applied commercially. It is a vast problem and too deep to attempt to explain except to say that it will be accomplished."

Mr. Edison displayed much interest in the application of electric power to flying machines and in doing so disclosed the fact that he looked to nature for inspiration in his work. He said: "Several days ago I was taking a walk in my garden and I saw a bee flying among the plants. The bee was making wonderful speed through the air. This gave me a thought; nature often does. I had the bee captured and took its measurements. I found it had a wing about one inch long and a body that weighed approximately 7,000 times as much as the wing. This showed that the bee got the power to raise itself in the air only by the speed of its wings. The wings of a bumble bee must beat the air more than two hundred times a second. I am trying to get a battery of extremely light weight and some day aeroplanes may duplicate the feat of the bumble bee."

Seven hundred members of the Salvation Army sailed from New York on Saturday morning on the White Star Line steamship Olympic for the International Congress of the Army in London. Twenty of the delegation, originally booked to sail on the Olympic, gave up their passage as a result of the Empress of Ireland tragedy. The others, though saddened by the news of the catastrophe, cling to their purpose of making the voyage. The delegation was headed by Commander Eva Booth. Of the 700 Salvationists 400 were second cabin passengers and the rest went in the steerage.

Brilliant Spectacle in Albert Hall

Ball and Pageant Commemorating the Centenary or Anglo-American Peace Was a Grand Fete

London, June 10.—The ball and pageant in Albert Hall tonight commemorating the Centenary of Anglo-American peace provided the most brilliant spectacle seen here for a long time. Many of the notable people of the London social world were present, together with a large number of American and Colonial visitors.

Among the former American women who took part in the procession were the Duchess of Marlborough, the Countess of Stratford, Viscountess Maidstone, Lady Decies, Lady Herbert, Lady Lowther, Lady Barren, Lady Randolph Churchill, Lady Lister-Kaye, Lady Hadfield, Mrs. John Astor, Mrs. Harold Baring, Mrs. Oliver Brett, Mrs. Lewis Harcourt, the Hon. Mrs. Bingham, the Hon. Mrs. F. E. Guest and Mrs. Henry Coventry.

There was a marvellous display of historical costumes, and the music had been especially written or adapted for the fete.

Mrs. H. W. F. A. Williams had charge of the costuming of the Indians, and when the representatives of the various tribes led off the great procession it could be seen that special efforts had been made to attain historical and artistic accuracy in their highly decorative dress.

VIRGINIAN SETTLERS

The Virginian settlers wore Elizabethan costume, which contrasted with the sober but equally picturesque dress of the Pilgrims of the days of Cromwell. The Dutch of New York State followed in their quaint garb, and Louisiana French appeared with powdered wigs and panniers, the color scheme embracing the different shades of heliotrope.

The group representing the signatories of the Treaty of Ghent appeared in the sober small clothes of the Georgian period.

The English procession was more modern, but by the use of the insignia of the Rose and Oak proved distinctive. Scotland, arranged by Lady Tullibardine, was represented by women wearing white dresses with sashes of the different clans; the men wore the kilt.

Canada was in gold and white, symbolic of corn and snow. Australia was in red, white and blue, with several historic characters represented.

THE IRISH SECTION

The Irish section, arranged by Lady Drogheda, featured the Harp and the Shamrock. Wales, arranged by Lady Mond and Viscountess Maitland, displayed two distinct costumes, that of Ancient Wales, and the costume of the primitive priestesses, and druids, with green wreaths and gilded crowns of oak leaves.

THE NEW ZEALANDERS.

New Zealand appeared in the national Maori costume, while diamonds and gold were the feature of the dress of the South African group.

Columbia and the United States, in the modern pageant, had a representative from each State, chosen by the Duchess of Marlborough; Cora, Countess of Stratford; and Mrs. Lewis Harcourt. Each lady wore a standard with the coat of arms of her state, and some of the individual costumes were extremely novel in design.

All of the processions were arranged with the idea of color harmony and, as no women were admitted whose costume did not pass scrutiny as blending with the general color scheme, the effect was brilliant and dazzling.

During the procession in front of Columbia illustrating the making of America, special music adapted from the melodies of the Elizabethan, the Stuart, and the Georgian periods was played.

The new Cunard liner, Aquitania, is to carry a motor tugboat, equipped with a wireless installation, which, in time of emergency, will be able to take the life-boats in tow. Blankets, food and medical stores are to be carried in the lockers of the tug boat. The boat has been in the Thames, and it attracted much attention from people on the embankment.

A Modern Noah

By Gordon R. Jones, Junghsien, China

Did it ever occur to you that Noah was one of the greatest men of old? My respect for Noah has gone up immensely since I came to Junghsien and commenced working as a builder. Our Mission Council stationed me here to complete a hospital and a residence, and, as I have said, my respect for Noah has gone up. Because Noah was a builder. He built the ark. Moreover, if our modern ideas of the geography of his time are correct, he did it with Oriental workmen. Previous to attempting building myself it had never occurred to me the building of the ark was such an important part of the story, but since I have tried my own hand at it I see things from a new point of view. In my case, however, it is not an ark. Noah was a mighty man.

You have got to go at it and build one to appreciate what a remarkable piece of construction a house is. If you have never done it, you would be surprised at all the mysteries which lie hidden among the bricks and timbers of an ordinary dwelling.

In the first place there is the matter of getting the materials. If it happened to be Junghsien where you are building, you will soon find that everything has to be carried in by human carriers. The bigger the piece of timber to be carried the more men I counted over twenty men carrying a big beam the other day. Ordinary boards are brought in by single carriers with the boards arranged in a sort of "A" frame over their shoulders. Brick are brought by single carriers in baskets slung one from each end of a carrying pole which goes across one shoulder. Thirty brick is a good load, and as carriers are not plentiful, you can estimate for yourself how long it must take to get in enough brick for a house using one hundred and thirty thousand brick, say.

Having the materials brought in is not so much of a problem as is the buying. A dealer comes to see me who wishes to sell some building material. The last thing in the world he would think of doing would be to state the price he really expects to get. He mentions a price a great deal higher than his "real" price, and an hour is spent "arguing price." At the end of the hour he has agreed to sell at the very price he had settled in his own mind before he came, in all probability. The price being agreed, he must have a considerable advance of "agreement money." I offer him lump silver but the price of the lumber, or whatever he was selling, has been agreed in "cash" (about 2,600 to one dollar Canadian money) so we must argue the price of the silver. The price of silver, that is its value expressed in "cash," varies daily and over a great range. Prices have varied in ten years between 1,200 and nearly 2,000 cash for an ounce of silver.

Buying materials occupies a great deal of time and is of great importance, as the dealers will charge as high a price as they dare. A man must use his wits at all times, but more particularly he must know what prices have been paid in the past for materials in the same place. Fortunately for me a lot of building has been done in Junghsien and prices have been fairly well standardized.

The materials all having been secured or arranged for, the actual work of construction comes next. This is done, of course, by Chinese workmen on day wages. Gangs of carpenters, masons and laborers are employed with stone masons and painters as required. Each gang has a head man who is a sort of foreman. I said "sort of a foreman" advisedly, as these headmen think it no part of their business to prevent their men from loafing. They act more as go-betweens with the men on the one side and the "foreigner" on the other. They are adept at one thing, which is giving a perfectly satisfactory (to themselves) statement of how it was a piece of work happens to be done in just exactly the way they had been told not to do it. The explanations, however, are not always quite to the satisfaction of the foreigner.

For instance, Mr. Li is my head carpenter. His men had been putting glass in windows. I come along and find a pane smashed. I call Mr. Li, who presently saunters leisurely along. "What have you to say about that?" I ask, pointing to the broken pane. Mr. Li regards it carefully for some time, and then remarks in a tone which suggests that this is an entirely satisfactory explanation, "It's broken, isn't it?" Now there is no denying the fact that the glass is broken, but can you wonder when I say that building is a good test of a man's patience.

The wildest optimist could not call a Chinaman a fast workman. A good day's work for a bricklayer is 300 brick. I am not familiar with figures at home, but it seems to me with modern efficiency methods a Canadian bricklayer lays something over ten times that much in a day. Viewed from this point of view, it might seem that the labor item would be a heavy one in building. The wages, however, are very low. A carpenter receives 145 cash a day, a mason 130 cash and a laborer 105 cash. (Junghsien wages are about the lowest in the West China.) To put this into terms of Canadian money, one dollar would pay a carpenter's wages for three weeks, that is, eighteen working days. It would pay a brick mason for twenty days as a laborer for five days.

These workmen would come at daylight and work till dark. They would require half an hour each for breakfast and lunch, which meals would be carried in from a shop by a caterer. They would expect also a "rest and smoke period" of twenty minutes about 10 a.m. and another about 4 p.m. Of course a Chinese workman will rest and smoke every other chance he gets. If you left him to himself he would make this rest period extend from 6.30 a.m. till 6 p.m., but he is officially allowed these two periods. A large gong is beaten to announce the beginning and end of meal hours or rest periods. The builder must be constantly "on the job," if he expects to have any work done at all. A Chinese workman has some standards which would seem strange to a Canadian. I have heard of people whose standard was "do anything you like but don't get caught." A Chinaman goes one beyond that. He would put it, even if caught in the act, he will deny that he did it. For instance, I will, of course, allow no smoking inside the building by the workmen. I enter a building where a carpenter is at work. He is smoking. He sees me coming and sees that I see him smoking. He puts his bamboo pipe down behind him. I come along, confiscate the pipe and remark, "You were smoking while at work." "Oh, no, I wasn't," he replies. No one else is working in that room and I point this out to him showing him also the tobacco which is still afire. "Who was smoking, then?" I ask. "Oh, it was another man who went away just before you came." This explanation seems satisfactory to the Chinese mind even though he knows I saw him smoking and that nobody else was anywhere near him. Junghsien is the first station of our Mission to have a complete "plant" of foreign style buildings. Other stations have more buildings, but no other station has its entire plant.

What War is

A United States Sailor's Humble Revelations.

(Ottawa "Citizen.")

If drunkenness were once again to become an essential accomplishment, if a law were passed establishing compulsory drinking service, if international disputes were settled by a competition in drunkenness, with the world advanced to its present stage of intelligence, the drinking would not be done with a light heart, or a waving of flags, drum-beating, and patriotic singing. The evil effects of intoxication are too well-known. But the degrading effect of taking an actual part in killing, in the bayonet charge, in blowing fellow men with a rifle, in blowing them to pieces with powerful explosives, and afterwards burying or cremating the dead, is not advertised to the world. Books have been written on the subject, but they are not taught in school. In the recent action between American and Mexican fighting men, the press found space for current rant about bringing civilization into Mexico. The other side of the picture is given in such private letters as the following, published in the Chicago "Tribune."

It is from William A. Leohrl, described as a first-class gunner aboard the battleship "Utah." Describing the action at Vera Cruz, Gunner Leohrl writes in part, as follows: "We more than got peppered by the Mexicans. All those beasts are good for is pot shooting. By pot shooting is meant climbing up high buildings and then firing down on us out of windows. We no sooner had our battalion together than we started in. It did not take long when—bang—down goes one of our fellows with a bullet clear through his head. Death was instantaneous. That worked us fellows up to a savage mood. Kill! Right and left. We put the field guns in the middle of the streets and let fly. We had mercy on nobody, which was proper. Nobody showed a bit of cowardice. Murder and plunder was all we wanted, and we more than gave it to them. For every one of our fellows killed we shot down like dogs about ten Mexicans. It was rather hard for me to kill at the start, but when the fellow next to me was shot through the chest I became as savage as the rest. The fellow that was shot next to me let me out a piercing cry and died in about thirty seconds. . . . Firing ceased about 10.15 p.m. on Tuesday. We had about 150 prisoners of which we court-martialed about eighty and shot, then the same night. That's biz. Show no mercy is our policy now. We took the prisoners and made them dig trenches for us around the entire city. Made them clear the streets of the dead and pull around our three inches, etc. But we never torture them. We kill them just as fast as they show themselves, but never torture them. They would torture us if they were given the chance. We have plenty of grub, as we get a fresh supply from the ship every day. You have no idea how fast we kill them off. Perhaps you would like to know what we do with the dead ones. We take a horse and a wagon and fill the wagon with bodies and drive to the outskirts of the city. There we go to an oil tank, sprinkle crude oil on them, and put a match to the pile. Up goes the whole works. What the flames do not consume the buzzards do."

Such is the ennobling effect of war; quite comparable with the uplifting influence of drunkenness.

The Business Outlook

While caution is still being exercised and no great increase in buying is reported, the business outlook in Canada and the United States is decidedly better. Indications are that building operations as far west as Winnipeg will be on a larger scale than last year. Points west of Winnipeg still feel the effects of over speculation, but the present indications of a good grain crop will have its effect there. Eastern crop prospects are excellent, a late spring having been followed by good seeding weather and timely showers.

Bankers and others who have their fingers on the financial pulse are still advising caution, although decidedly hopeful for the future. It is generally admitted that conditions in the Maritime Provinces are better than in any other part of Canada. The Financial Post of Canada remarks that in the case of one of Canada's largest industries, whose commodities are placed with farmers, the collections realized on paper maturing average 92 percent in Quebec, 80 percent in Ontario, and 45 percent in the West.

Farmers and others are gradually reducing their liabilities. Mortgage rates are somewhat easier, but those with money to lend are exercising great discrimination. Although no decided business change is looked for until after the holiday season, the country is eliminating from its business system the excesses to which in a measure present dullness is due.

Cape to Cairo Railway

The railroad from Cairo to Cape Town was one of the principal projects of Cecil Rhodes for the development of Africa, and, while at one time looked upon as a dream, is now in a fair way of being finished. It is to connect the railway systems of Cape Colony and other British possessions in South Africa with the railway system of Uganda and the Valley of the Nile. It is not yet completed, but is expected to be in three or four years. The line northward now extends into the Congo, more than 2,900 miles from Cape Town, to where trains run regularly. From Cairo it extends to a point 1,400 miles south of Khartoum into the Sudan. By using the great African lakes for steamers, less than nine hundred miles need to be laid for completion.

Dreadnoughts' End in Sight

Liberals of Britain Acclaim Sir Percy Scott's Declaration

London, June 6.—The problem which the English newspapers discuss this morning is: Has the time come for the abandonment of the construction at such enormous expense yearly of marine dreadnoughts?

There is no doubt that the Radicals welcome Sir Percy Scott's declaration that the warfare of the future will be conducted by airships and submarines with delight; because its acceptance by public opinion means the abandonment of the wild naval programmes which have crippled the great maritime nations of the world.

But there is, as always, this doubt: If Great Britain should decide upon reform of her shipbuilding programme by constructing more submarines and more aeroplanes, would the other countries follow suit.

"GOLDEN AGE OF STUPIDITY."

The Radical "Daily News," the chief mouthpiece of the advocates for a reduction of armaments, welcomes Sir Percy Scott's letter as endorsing its constant contention that the dreadnought period was the golden age of stupidity.

Despite the fact that the Navy League asserts that Sir Percy Scott is premature, the "Daily News" declares that there is sufficient basis to move away from the old formula which in the past have meant the crippling of the Empire's finances, the needless entanglement of the Empire in foreign alliances, and the imperilling of the safety of the British Isles.

ADVICE TO MR. CHURCHILL

The "Daily Chronicle," also an advocate of a moderate naval policy advises Mr. Winston Churchill, the first Lord of the Admiralty, to go easy with his shipbuilding programme, "because there is a sound core for Sir Percy Scott's reasoning, though his deductions may be too sweeping."

The "Daily Express," one of the advocates of an advanced naval programme, advises strict caution before a studied and studied policy is abandoned, whilst the "Daily Mail" says that "the weapons of yesterday and of to-day should not be scrapped by speculative theories."

The incident gives rise to discussions as to the occasion for a complete revision of the naval policy of the Empire.

CALL FOR IMPERIAL CONFERENCE

The opinion is growing here that, in view of the difference of opinion between the Admiralty and the self-governing dominions, the time is rapidly coming when there should be another Imperial conference to discuss how best the outlying section of the Empire can do their duty to the Motherland.

If, as Sir Percy Scott says, dreadnoughts have gone out of date, there may be occasion for discussion as to how else the Dominions can give their aid.

The Winnipeg City Council recently sent a telegram to Premier Borden, urging a check put on immigration until times are better, and also a more liberal expenditure of public money.

"The World Magazine" New York, has an article on a new treatment for tuberculosis, which deserves a wide circulation. This treatment was first recommended by an Irish physician. He was led to the use of it by the testimony of a young man who was afflicted with tuberculosis of the bones of the leg and foot.

A celebrated lady singer met with an accident which prevented her from meeting an evening's engagement. A newspaper (not the Monitor) announcing the accident added that she would be able to appear the following evening in three parts.

The bride wore a beautiful charming gown of pink tulle and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The groom was supported by Mr. L. Lingley, of St. John. A recent issue of a Quebec paper gives the following particulars of a large shipment of builders' supplies to a firm in that city, the head of said firm being Mr. Fred L. What is probably the largest single shipment of builders' supplies to come to the Province of Quebec, Montreal not excepted, is now being discharged at the Breakwater from the steamer Mercedo, of Glasgow. This large cargo is valued at and consigned to Mr. F. L. Wade, of Prunseau & Co., dealers in building materials and construction supplies. Among other goods, the cargo consists of some 700,000 building and fire brick, 10,000 lengths of 4-inch drainage pipe, 7,000 lengths of 6-inch pipes, 2,000 lengths of 8-inch, 1,000 lengths of 12-inch, and a quantity of 15 and 18-inch pipes.

TORTURED WITH RHEUMATISM

Could Not Walk, Until "Fruit-a-lives" Completely Cured Him

CRATHAM, ONT., April 3rd, 1913. "I am a veteran of the Crimean War and the Indian Mutiny, volunteering from the Royal Artillery into the Royal Engineers, and served under Lord Roberts during the Indian Mutiny, and am a pensioner of the British Government. Fierce hand-to-hand fighting and continual exposure, left me a great sufferer from Rheumatism, so much so that my legs swelled up, making it impossible for me to walk. My bowels were so constipated that I only had one passage a week until I got to using "Fruit-a-lives". They cured me of both the Rheumatism and Constipation. In my regular employment, I walk thirty miles a day and enjoy perfect health. No more Rheumatism or Constipation. You are at perfect liberty to publish this letter if it will be advantageous to "Fruit-a-lives".

Napoleon in Elba

(Manchester Guardian)

Napoleon must have felt relieved when he landed safely in Elba in this month of May one hundred years ago. The journey from Paris, after the Treaty of Fontainebleau had settled his future, was the most humiliating experience of his life hitherto. South of Avignon he found an infuriated people. He was stoned, cursed, and threatened with death in village after village. Nearing Aix, he was so alarmed that he donned the livery of a postboy and rode as such, half choked by the mistral dust, to the inn of La Calade. Many painted representations of him have come down to us, but nothing so pregnant with suggestions as this one. Little wonder he was white with rage, and had aching bones that evening at the dinner table. The next day he was too sore to be a jockey again, but shades of Moscow and Wagram—sat with the Austrian Commissioner in a Russian general's cap and cloak and an Austrian uniform. At Frejus, on the British frigate "Undaunted," he could breathe comfortably, but the short voyage to Elba over, he still had to take possession of his crumb of Kingdom. The French general in command at Porto Ferrajo at first menaced him with the guns of the citadel. Certain of the ship's company returned from shore with disquieting tales of the Elban excitement. Napoleon meanwhile paced the "Undaunted's" deck in a sailor's sou-wester—another fine subject for canvas—and waited until General Dalesme was persuaded to surrender the island. There followed a state entry—Napoleon in a green coat, white breeches, shoes with gold buckles, and his famous cocked hat. The crowd hustled him to church and a TeDeum; thence, very cross about the hustling, to the Town Hall, where, in an arm-chair wreathed with paper roses, he received the trembling dignitaries of the island. His reign as King of Elba had begun.

PLANNING RETURN TO FRANCE

At St. Helena he declared that even before reaching Elba he had planned his return to France. It was his own secret, if so. More probably, it was one of the many fibs with which he then regaled the world. In those first months at Elba he seemed almost ridiculously in earnest about his little Kingdom. A two-storied white house in the capital became his place, and was upholstered with a host of functionaries, like the Tuileries. Bertrand was Grand Marshal on a salary of 20,000 francs, and there was an Imperial lamp lighter at 1,500 francs.

As if to convince Europe that he was reconciled to his fate, having settled himself in his town palace, Napoleon bought a country house outside Porto Ferrajo, made a hermit's hut in the mountains the nucleus of a camp for the dog days, and arranged for two other residences elsewhere. It astonished many of the tourists whose visitation he suffered so wisely to discover him feeding poultry like a peasant, absorbed in a game of quills, or playing blind-man's-buff with the Elban young ladies.

More fortunate, he received them in his bedroom under a ceiling painted with crosses of the Legion d'Honneur and the bees of his Elban flag. From his simple iron bedstead a tranquillizing view of the Mediterranean and Italy was at his disposal. A charming spot for dreams, memories, and the indulgence of memorable hopes, by night or by day. These hopes for a time seemed centred upon his wife, Marie Louise, and his little son, whom Elba was always being urged so expect, but never came. Perhaps there would have been no Waterloo if they had come. Marie Louise's unfaithfulness hurt Napoleon deeply, and his public mortification in the matter may well have been yet another spur towards the attempt of the Hundred Days.

NAPOLEON'S MOTHER

Elba's potential queen in her stead was Napoleon's remarkable mother, Letitia Bonaparte. The English brig "Grasshopper" brought her to Porto Ferrajo on August 2, and having fascinated the "Grasshopper" crew by the dignity with which she graced a sofa on deck, snuffbox in hand with an interval of agile scrambling upon a gun carriage for an early view of her son's palace, she landed in a temper with Napoleon for being absent from his capital. Her diamonds and four-poster bedstead of state, inlaid with gold, followed her from Rome.

Elba had rather more than the shadow of a Court now, and poor Colonel Campbell, the English Commissioner, with the "piercing eye, artificial smile, watchful ear, scarred brow artistically concealed by a silk handkerchief, faultless uniform, and elegantly correct English manners" soon found his trials increased. On November 1 Pauline Bonaparte rejoined her brother. A more important event for Napoleon was the opening of the Congress of Vienna on the same day. Talleyrand's wish to have him removed to the Azores, a West Indian island, or St. Helena might now develop into a decree. Napoleon professed to think otherwise.

St. Helena, he said, was particularly out of the question, inasmuch as the English were little likely to risk bringing him so near to India. Equally absurd was his declaration that he could defend himself in Elba for two years against a united Europe.

BAMBOOS CITY HIS WATCHER

Such wild talk soothed Campbell, who reported to his Government that Europe's prisoner was degenerating both in mind and body. The caged lion's placid submission to the importunities of the tourists seemed another indication of his desirable senility. A hundred visitors would come ashore in a day, and some of them returned to shipboard not only with marble busts and other bric-a-brac mementoes of the lion, but with full diaries about the gracious interviews and conversations with which the lion had indulged them. Latterly however, Napoleon was not so free with these favors. He received warnings that he was to be assassinated. A Corsican caught skulking in the San Martino garden admitted that he was there for the purpose.

Napoleon gave him a lecture and nothing worse. But this kind of thing was not good for his nerves, and in the same fatal month of November, having fallen asleep at his desk one evening, he roused to the entrance of a servant, whom he instantly shot dead. Beyond question he was now deeply engaged in hoodwinking Europe's official spy in his midst and preparing for his last great adventure.

A SUDDEN FLITTING

Little doubt the problems of finance hastened his departure. During his first months in Elba he was a magnificent spendthrift. Europe's 2,000,000 francs and his island's revenue of about 350,000 francs would have been ample for his public and private needs. The 4,000,000 francs he brought with him were, he said to be kept for an emergency—meaning, maybe, the emergency. It exasperated him exceedingly to find that this reserve fund had in a few months diminished by one-half. His War Estimates alone for 1815 amount to 1,015,000 francs. Expenses were cut down right and left, and money sought in all directions. Salaries were paid only half in cash, the other half in bills on the treasury of France. He sold carriages and horses scrap-iron from the fort and much else; and he shocked taxes, the Elbans with unexpected which in certain districts he could collect only with an armed force.

Spring comes betimes to Elba, and 1815 was still young when Napoleon proceeded to throw much blinding agricultural dust in the eyes of his keepers. He jugged about his island on a mule teaching his lazy subjects how to grow cabbages, radishes, onions, turnips, and as an especial boon, the potato.

Work on the roads, which are his enduring legacy to Elba, was resumed. For sport's sake and the good of his larder, he enclosed a preserve for rabbits and hares, with "six hounds, a whip, and two or three horns" as his hunting pack. For his summer pleasure of 1815 in the mountains he ordered a portable house to be built, and on February 21 inspected it and haggled about its cost. The next day he busied himself over his island's salt-pans and the contracts of a shore road to Porto Longone. And then it was time to drop all masks. His opportunity had come.

GOOD BYE TO ELBA

His little fleet had been clandestinely victualled, and orders were now issued that it was to be ready to sail on the 24th or 25th. Campbell was on the Continent the more conveniently to pass on to his Government his rousing suspicions about his captive. At Florence he conged them to one of the British representatives from Vienna, who laugh, and retorted: "You may tell Bonaparte that he is quite forgotten: no one thinks of him now." Nothing could have more helpful for the plans of the "quite forgotten" little man himself, expect a blowing wind for his ships' sails. This privilege came late on Sunday the 26th. He was a transfigured man all that day, from the nine o'clock morning Mass, which followed a night spent in the writing of "proclamation" for France, until the imperial barge bore him by lamp light to his flagship, followed by the echoing "Evvivas" of his Porto Ferrajo subjects on the quays.

There was a dead calm at that time but about midnight a southerly breeze became a gale outside the bay. It swept him back to the France he thirsted for, and held the British frigate that was his island's watchdog powerless in Livorno.

Some tourists visited the Mulini palace the next morning, and found Napoleon's bath water standing as he had left it the previous day, also a map of France on a table, stuck with large-head, tell-tall pins.

"TIME DISTRIBUTOR"

If there is one business that can claim to be unique it is surely that of "time-distributor," pursued by a lady who calls every Monday morning at Greenwich observatory, adjusts her chronometer by the standard clock there and then makes a tour of a large number, of suburban clockmakers and other shopkeepers, leaving the correct Greenwich time en route. The business was founded many years ago by the lady's mother, says the "Daily Chronicle" (London), who obtained special permission from the astronomer-general, and the present "time-distributor," who has been sixteen years on her rounds, still derives a modest income from it, despite the cheap facilities for electrical synchronizing of clocks throughout the metropolis.

MOST TRAVELLED STREET

According to a London police report, the short bit of street known as Hyde Park Corner, in London, is the most travelled in the world. The average on week days is 3,726 vehicles per hour, which means more than one a second. The total is subdivided as follows: Automobiles.....1,500 Carriages (horse-drawn)... 990 Bicycles..... 570 Autobuses..... 366

How Chloroform was Discovered

One of the most helpful discoveries ever made by men of science was that chloroform will send anyone into such a deep sleep that the surgeon can operate upon the body without pain. By the discovery of this, more than sixty years ago, men and women have ever since been saved from terrible pain that must have caused death. The doctor with whose name the discovery of this power of chloroform is always associated was Sir James Young Simpson, of Edinburgh who first used and popularized the drug; but it is now said that the suggestion to use chloroform was made by Dr. Simpson by Dr. Waldie, of Linlithgow, Scotland, who was accidentally assisted by an inquisitive dog, a pet spaniel, belonging to his neighbor.

The neighbors were great friends when Dr. Waldie was experimenting with chloroform and giving his results so Professor Simpson. One night when the neighbor was leaving the doctor's house, he said: "I think my dog was with me."

"Yes," said the doctor, "and there he is," pointing to the dog lying stiff and apparently dead under the table. "He is dead!" exclaimed the neighbor. "No," said the doctor, examining him: "his heart beats quite strong. He has been smelling that saucer I put there for a mouse. He is quite insensible. If you cut him to pieces he would not feel it. He will come to himself in about an hour and he will be all right to-morrow. I will look in and see him."

Lord Kitchener's Influence

While driving one day in Egypt, Lord Kitchener noticed an old man in the street whom he recognized as an acquaintance from the Sudan. The Consul General ordered the driver to stop, and invited the old man to take a seat in the carriage. So the two drove together, through the town, to the place where the Sudanese wanted to go. A few days later the dark friend of Lord Kitchener was seen hovering about the British Agency. At last an officer asked him what he wanted.

"I should so much like to drive out with Lord Kitchener once more," the old man replied. "You see," the Sudanese answered, naively, "after my friends and acquaintances saw me sitting at the side of Lord Kitchener, they came to me one after the other, and from one I received five pounds, and from others one pound, and forty plasters from the very poorest. They all believed that I could speak in their favor to El Lord. And," the old man added, "I should very much like to see that happen all over again."

A HOUSE FOR LAYING HENS

A plan of a permanent laying house for poultry, with brief description and an estimate of material required for the house as planned, is contained in pamphlet No. 5 of the Poultry Division of the Live Stock Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. This plan has been specially prepared for use in the Province of Prince Edward Island by W. A. Brown and T. A. Benson; however, it includes a number of features which in the opinion of the writers, could be advantageously adopted throughout the greater part of the Dominion of Canada. Copies of this pamphlet may be obtained free upon application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

THE STRENGTH OF INSECTS

That the strength of insects is prodigious is demonstrated by the experiments of French naturalists, especially M. Fabre. It appears that the smallest insects are, for the most part, the strongest proportionally to their size, and that all are incredibly strong when compared bulk for bulk with vertebrates. A horse can scarcely bear two-thirds of its own weight, while one small species of June beetle is able to lift 99 times its own weight. Were the strength of man in proportion to that of the beetle, it is pointed out, he could play with weights equal to ten times the weight of a horse.

TENNYSON AND THE "TIMES."

Two cents would have relieved the poet Tennyson of one of the minor annoyances of his daily life. Lady Taylor once took a friend to see the poet and was rather coldly received. On Lady Taylor rallying him on his manner he said: "Madam, I am a poor man, and as I can't afford to buy the 'Times,' I have it from the stationer. He charges me two cents for it, which entitles me to keep it an hour. Why will people select just that hour to come and call on me?" Keep Minard's Liniment in the house

The Rat's Migration

At all times rats are more or less gregarious creatures, but they are far more so in the winter than in the spring, summer and autumn. During the colder months of the year they congregate in the warmest and most comfortable quarters they can find, where young and old of both sexes dwell in amity. On the approach of spring, however, a regular migration from winter to summer quarters begins. There is no longer any necessity to seek protection from the cold, and, besides that, the breeding season is at hand. At such times an entire change comes over these erstwhile friendly communities, and since the rat, however much it may shun light in disturbing others, hates disturbance of any kind itself, quieter and less crowded quarters must be sought.

In towns, of course, where there are so many buildings to which rats can gain access without much trouble there is very little difficulty in finding suitable breeding quarters close at hand, but in the country each pair—or family party of rats, as the case may be—is in the habit of going far from the winter home in barn or stockyard, with the result that in a very short time they are spread over a wide area, and fresh colonies keep springing up in every direction.

The effect of this upon the farmer's crops is very serious, and that is why at this season of the year, when the rats are on their travels a special effort should be made to destroy them. It is a very much easier matter to exterminate rats during the season of their migration than when they are installed in their winter strongholds. Also, in the breeding season the rat, in common with all other creatures, is far less suspicious than at other times, and may be taken by simple methods which under ordinary circumstances would fail. At this season, for example, the wire-cage-trap will catch rats by the dozen where at other times it is practically useless—first, because these travelling rats are always more or less hungry; and, secondly, for the reason that once a female can be induced to enter it, every male rat in the neighborhood will step inside, to pay his addresses to her.

A LOYAL CLASS

An English professor who had been a fellow student and friend of Edward VII. when he was the Prince of Wales, was appointed honorary physician to His Majesty shortly after he became King.

The professor was very proud of this, and wished his students to know of the honor conferred upon him. So he wrote upon the blackboard in his classroom: "Prof. Baker is pleased to inform his students that he has been appointed honorary physician to his Majesty, King Edward."

The professor shortly left the room and when he returned to meet another class he could not understand why they should be so much amused at what he had written. Later, however, he discovered that someone had carefully added to his announcement the following: "God save the King."
