

The Diary of A Lonely Man

I am one of the busy workers of this world, worse luck! Not that I should ever wish to be idle...

Sometimes I have wild ideas about equalizing the distribution of property—forgetting how rich I was not so very long ago...

I imagine to myself a life free from the grind of office work and its detestable monotony...

I saw her—there is but one woman in all the wide world for me—last night spent the tenth of my weekly wage going down to visit her...

It seemed almost as if I had brought away a portion of her sweet presence. I have lived in a seventh heaven of imagined sweets...

Almost I have dared to hope she loves me!

The reaction has come. The joy of yesterday is succeeded by the depression of to-day. What have I to do with love—!

I must cease going to see her. It unsettles me and makes me more miserable in the long run...

There was a couple in the train to-night as I came home that attracted my attention. The man, a stalwart sailor, dressed and groomed with all a sailor's neatness...

The girl was small and pale, but plump and not bad looking. She was neatly dressed in a dark coat and skirt and a plain felt hat...

I fell to wondering who and what they were and whether they were connected with each other or only fellow-passengers...

Happy pair! I am filled with envy. Like the dog in the manger, I am loth that others should enjoy delights which are denied to me.

It is one of the few amusements of my life to watch my fellow-passengers during my short daily journey to and from the city...

I traveled home with one of them to-day—a small, fair girl, who wears a red cloak and a coquettish tam-o'-shanter of the same color...

music case. To-night she had a friend with her—a tall, fair boy, well made and manly for his years...

I have been miserable all day, tortured-haunted with visions of what might have been had fortune continued to smile on me...

The train was crowded when I came home to-night. It had been raining, and the carriage reeked of damp and the faint smell of rain-soaked clothes...

In her anxiety to shield the child she had allowed the rain to fall unchecked upon herself, and I shivered involuntarily as I looked at her wet garments...

The temptation has gone, and I am inclined to think that poor woman was one of the angels of God who are sometimes sent to open our eyes.

We poor workers who pass our time in the midst of London's loneliness are thrown in upon ourselves for companionship...

I can only remember one thing on which I can hang my hopes. It is nothing much, only a little tender look she gave me as I put her into her carriage after a dance...

The girl with the red cloak was on the platform to-night, and with her tall, fair youth the train was late and they were pacing up and down, and I heard snatches of their conversation as they passed me.

So they were really engaged. That accounted for the bright color in her cheeks and the glad sparkle in her eyes. I was glad for them both, and glad she was not the mix I once suspected.

"The train came in at last, wearing the look of self-complacent satisfaction which locomotives generally assume on very foggy or dark nights, as if they were proud of having pierced the obscurity in safety.

Happy pair! I am filled with envy. Like the dog in the manger, I am loth that others should enjoy delights which are denied to me.

I feel almost inclined to tear up this foolish page, for fear other eyes may fall upon them and I may be dubbed sentimental, for I have a true Englishman's dislike of being excited with sentiment.

THE ATMOSPHERE CLEARED (Written for The Catholic Register.) If the readers of The Catholic Register will recall your correspondence's letters of some four, five and six weeks ago...

This evening while I waited for the train I paused by the bookstall and became absorbed in the specimen pictures of a new publication on the recent war.

I do not know if I answered I held open the door of a first-class carriage for her, and then would faint have turned away, for sudden pleasure is sometimes akin to pain...

I have no time for pleasure seeking, I replied reluctantly at last. You said your evenings were all yours free, she reminded me reproachfully.

I turned away speechless. I knew she did not believe me, and to her I could offer no other excuse. "You are ill, you look so pale and worn."

"I can give you no other reason," I stammered, still keeping my face averted. I felt her eyes travel over me from head to foot...

"Dick, why don't you tell me the truth?" Then, as she came nearer, prompted by her steadfast love, she whispered shamefacedly: "I have enough for both."

"They have silenced my scruples, and now my troubles are at an end, have passed like a tale that is told. The weary tide of workaday life will go on as usual, the endless throng of busy workers plod on as before...

Two young girls were talking the other day of a mutual friend. "I don't see how Catherine can endure a summer in that out-of-the-way corner of the world!"

Of all traits of character there is one more conducive to happiness than the capacity of enjoying simple pleasures. This is not the less true because my young neighbors and others like them find it old-fashioned and ridiculous...

Both girls laughed in duet, but the undertone of their merriment was not pleasant to my ears, although it set me thinking.

All this must sound very queer in the ear of the stranger. It is of a nature to establish very unenviable reputation for our country abroad. The Premier has scarcely returned from the strength-sapping ordeal of his important European visit...

CANADA AND IRELAND

Judging by the splendid proportions and enthusiasm of the Association Hall meeting on Monday evening, a full report of which we publish to-day, the call which Mr. Joseph Devlin on behalf of the United Irish League, and Hon. Edward Blake, as a member of the Irish Parliamentary Party, are making upon the Canadian sympathizers with Home Rule will be generously met.

CANADA IS TRUE TO THE CAUSE OF HOME RULE

Who put an end to that condition of things? For nearly eighty years insurrections took place in Ireland periodically. Men arose in holy indignation at the condition which rendered such things possible.

MEN ON MOUNTAINS—CATTLE IN FAIR FIELDS

In the Westport Union there is a population of 37,381 people. Out of 5,323 tenants within that Union 3,141 occupy farms with an acreage varying from five to ten acres.

THE MARCH OF PROGRESS

Why, they secured millions of dollars from the unwilling hands of successive British treasurers, for uplifting the people and creating a condition of things that would give them happier conditions, sweeter lives and better environments.

IRELAND IN UNITY

Ladies and gentlemen, what do we see in Ireland to-day? We see for the first time since Ireland's Protestant patriot Wolfe Tone (applause) formed Irishmen into a growing organization, we see to-day what another Protestant patriot and poet dreamed of when he said:

THE REMEDY AND THE MEANS

This is the condition of things in Ireland to-day. It is to remedy this condition of things that we are striving to-day—what is left of us on Irish soil. We have the money with which to fight this battle.

IRRESISTIBLE POWER OF THE MOVEMENT

Ladies and gentlemen, if this be so, and who can deny it, what force in England, or in Ireland, can stand against the irresistible power of a mighty movement of Protestants and Catholics alike, when joined as they never were joined before in the sacred cause of restoring the land of Ireland to the people of Ireland? (Applause) I know that in large centres of population like this it is almost impossible, even in Ireland, to interest people in this land question in the provinces. But, ladies and gentlemen, agriculture is the staple industry of Ireland.

RIGHT OF SELF-GOVERNMENT

If this be so, and who can deny it? Why should we be denied similar conditions in our own land? I have never yet met an Irishman in America who has not declared to me in the fullness of his soul that given equal opportunities in Ireland to the opportunities that are offered in America and he would gladly live in Ireland even if the results were not so beneficial there as here.

AN IMPERIAL PROBLEM

English statesmen are coming to realize that the strength of their empire rests on the satisfaction of the people who are embraced in that empire. (Applause) There can be no progress and there can be no satisfaction so long as the Irish people are denied the liberty of self-government.

APPALLING STATISTICS

Ladies and gentlemen, so appalling have those figures been to careful students of Irish affairs, that only two months ago an Irish Unionist member of Parliament, an anti-Nationalist and a Scotchman (laughter)—I don't make those references in any insulting sense.

THE REMEDY AND THE MEANS

This is the condition of things in Ireland to-day. It is to remedy this condition of things that we are striving to-day—what is left of us on Irish soil. We have the money with which to fight this battle.

Senate in Washington I have gone to the cities and small towns in every part of the United States of America. What have I found? In every great progressive community Irish statesmanship, Irish genius, Irish power for government and every qualification that can go to build up great and progressive communities (Applause).

INFLUENCE OF THE KING

I believe that a better time is coming, I believe that out of these sacrifices noble opportunities will be embraced by farseeing British statesmen. Already we believe the King himself has stepped in (loud cheers) and has exercised that wise influence which I believe he has with a most beneficial result.

A SUBSCRIPTION OPENED

- At the conclusion of Mr. Devlin's address, the chairman asked the audience to open a subscription to the funds of the United Irish League, and within a few minutes the following sums were announced, with other collections amounting to about $900 in all.

HON. EDWARD BLAKE.

A Grand Ovation and a Powerful Address. Hon. Mr. Blake was received with intense enthusiasm, the audience rising and giving cheer after cheer, while the band in the balcony also discoursed an Irish patriotic air.

prisonment, (cheers), we do not complain in indignity, because our movement has been built on centuries of similar sacrifices, but what we do say and we do ask you to consider is, is it possible to ask the Irish people to be as loyal as you are here under free institutions, when such things are impossible in the land?

unfortunate necessity imposed upon Mr. Dillon of not keeping his engagement through illness, but I am glad to say that only this morning I received a letter from him, not by his own hand, that the doctors gave definite assurance that his illness is no longer serious, and that, although it is absolutely impossible for him to write, let alone to speak, we have no reason for any longer anxiety with reference to his recovery. (Applause.)

CANADIAN GOVERNMENT AND HOME RULE.

And my friends, to whom I referred, have never forgotten the policy of the Canadian Government in reference to the question of self-government for Ireland, which, of course, eliminated more than once in a formal and authentic expression, sometimes by practical unanimity, and always by overwhelming majorities, drawn from both political parties in favor of the Union.

BELIEVES IN CANADIAN FIDELITY

I am not disposed to believe that anything which occurred in the interval—1882 to 1886 and 1887, and this time—has changed your idea, or altered the convictions of the people of Canada with reference to the blessings of freedom and self-government (loud applause).

interval a Government has been formed. A Parliament has been elected, and a measure carried by the House of Commons in that sense. (Applause.) But we are told that the situation is changing somewhat. Suggestions are made in the Irish domain is not what it was and that some faint hearts, who supported the measure of Home Rule in the past had changed their opinions.

GLADSTONIAN HOME RULE RE-MAINS.

It is true that we regarded the principle and the general provision of the Gladstonian measure as a compromise of the extreme national demand of Ireland; it is equally true that we accepted that compromise, and it is equally true, so long as any proposition of that description is offered, naturally our attitude is the attitude of those who wish well for the country, but equally true that there has been any withdrawal on the part of the Irish people of their willingness to accept that compromise again. (Applause.)

Although the medicine business should, above all, be carried on with utmost conscientiousness and sense of responsibility, the unfortunate fact is that in no other is there so much fraud and deception. The anxieties of the sick and their relatives are traded upon in the most shameful manner; impossible cures are promised; many preparations are absolutely worthless, and some are positively dangerous to life.

IRELAND PERFECTLY CRIMELESS... But everybody admits that in these things Ireland is crimeless to-day, and the questions are questions of boycotting and that sort of thing. I will give you one instance. The City of Dublin is proclaimed under the crimes act and its inhabitants deprived of the rights of free men.

Archbishop Langevin on the School Question... Montreal, Nov. 27.—Archbishop Langevin, of St. Boniface, who has spent several months visiting the different parishes of the Province of Quebec, with a view to increasing the interest of the French-Canadians in the Northwest, was to-day for home.

GREAT MEDICINE—Tontl, one of the pioneers of French Canada, lost a hand and wore an iron hook as substitute. He was in the habit of boring the ears of refractory Indians with this iron hand, and they have remarked that it was "great medicine."

In all purely Irish affairs the will and intelligence of the Irish people shall be the governing power. Just in the same way as in purely colonial affairs colonial opinion is supreme. Lord Rosbery's speech about an independent Parliament, No Parliament would be worth having unless in the management of its own purely local affairs it was independent of the constant, irritating, meddling and ignorant interference of some outside authority.

EMIGRATION TO AMERICA... Take another contrast, the very circumstance that drives the Irish out of their homes and spreads them all over the world, that very circumstance which drives them out produced these best impulses and feelings to which I have referred, and it also produced this result, that the great bulk of that emigration went not to a country under the flag of England, but went to a country largely because it was not under the flag of England, and in that country they got the real freedom of which they boasted.

TALK ABOUT LOYALTY... This talk of loyalty is a rebellion in the country. I was four years old at the time, and I remember the ladies of the family being engaged in the work of making caudles against the work of William Lyon Mackenzie. I do not believe in any objection to not being disloyal when you have been disloyal, or when you have been disloyal to a constitution, the very parts of which, are of which you have not the least enjoyment.

MR BLAKE'S OWN POSITION... I did not join the Irish cause on questions deep and vital as they were in regard to the land and education and taxation or other matters of that description. My belief was that justice done Ireland by the granting of autonomy that the Empire would reap the fruits of that justice.

HOW TO PROMOTE LOYALTY... He had learned that the way to make people loyal, contented and friendly was to give them something to be loyal to, contented with, and friendly towards, and he therefore acted wisely and prudently in the substance, if in some respects not in the form, offered that solution of the Irish question.

INADEQUACY OF ENGLISH STATESMEN... And I know no argument more conclusive in itself of that inadequacy than the contrast made between the island which rules and the island which is ruled. At the time of the union the whole population of the two islands, it is now one eighth, representing a loss of 12,000,000 or 14,000,000 people in the interval, a loss to Ireland of the natural increase of a fertile people.

HOME RULE OF PRIME IMPORTANCE... Can there be conceived a question of more transcendent importance to the British Empire? I believe the great rule of life is to put yourself in the other fellow's place.

TRAGEDY OF IRISH HISTORY... I maintain that there is no tragedy affecting the people in modern times which can be compared to the endurance to which the Irish people have been put, no loss of wealth by ruin, no spilling of blood on the battlefield could ever compare with the long spell of agony of one hundred years that the Irish people have undergone.

THE IRISH OMNIPRESENT... There is no country in the world where there are no Irishmen, and there are many countries in the world where the Irishmen are an influential factor in the public and industrial life of the country they live in.

AS TO MAJORITY RULE... In free countries majorities rule, sometimes they are narrow and I am told there is an example of that here (Laughter.) I have a natural remembrance about it because I cannot help recalling that about 31 years ago I turned out a Tory Government and installed a Liberal Government.

Fate and Marriage

By Clara Mulholland.

For human bliss and woe in the frail thread of human life are all so closely twined...

The following afternoon Mrs Danvers sat alone in the back parlor of her old-fashioned house in Rathgate street, Canterbury...

say, much as it would pain me to part with her, that you should take her home and teach her to love you.

CHAPTER XIV

It was evening, a beautiful, brilliant evening in June, and as Miriam Danvers passed restlessly from room to room, through the little conservatory, out over the lawn, and into the rose garden at the side of the house...

of lances," he said, starting out of the window. He could not bear to look at the little pale, plain face with its big, pathetic grey eyes and dark complexion...

"I was looking, but you weren't," said the little girl with whom he had collided, her soft pink cheeks growing a good deal pinker as she flashed an angry glance at him from a pair of lovely blue eyes.

"Beryl, mother's waiting," called a boy's voice, and without another word the child ran away. "Beryl—a pretty name and an exquisite little vixen," thought Lord Linton, sinking into a corner of the railway carriage.

Presently a carriage was heard in the drive, the hall-door bell rang, and a moment later a light step tripped out over the gravel path on to the grass, and Margaret, tall and graceful in her simple dark blue serge, threw her arms round Miriam's neck.

"Perfectly. There wasn't a hitch anywhere, as far as I could see. His Lordship was more frequently away than at home. What with races and dinners and clubs, his own family saw little of him."

"Does she look unhappy, then?" "Dear me, no. Only stonily indifferent. He goes his way, she goes hers. Why do people marry to live in such a dreary fashion?"

It was Margaret's turn to change color now. "I rather think because a certain friend of his," the girl answered in a low, even voice, "Lord Ravensford by name, did me the honor of admiring me, and asking me to be his wife."

ancestors... His mother, like mine, may have been a farmer's daughter."

"My darling! Love was the one thing I could give you without stint in your early days." "And well have I thriven on it, My father," laughing, "says I do you great credit. He even told me the other day, that I had grown quite presentable, and had lost the plebeian look that used to distress him."

"I can never forget that your mother's birth was inferior to his own, and so fancied that your looks lacked refinement." Her aunt said, looking at her with admiring eyes. "What has made him alter his opinion so suddenly?"

OBITUARY
DEATH OF ABBE COLIN, SUPERIOR OF SULPICIANS.
A Montreal despatch says: Abbe Colin is dead.

The announcement will cause grief sorrow among the people of Canada and a great portion of the United States.
Since 1871, Abbe Colin has been connected with the Grand Seminary in this city where most of the priests for the Canadian and American dioceses are trained.

For some years, he has been ailing, but still his vigorous mentality overcame bodily illness. It was only a few days ago that his companions of the Order noticed that the head of their order was falling.
The end came shortly after eleven o'clock Friday night. Lying in his simple furnished room at the Seminary building on Notre Dame street, surrounded by a number of his sorrowing subjects in the religious order, the reverend father passed away to his reward.

In 1864 he became pastor of Notre Dame Church, while serving in that capacity he occupied the pulpit on the most solemn and important occasions, and there he gained that great reputation as a sacred orator which has remained with him throughout his life.
In 1871 he became professor of Canon Law at the Seminary, and from that day to the time of his death, he took the greatest interest in the work of the great institution, and Catholic priests the world over testify to his ability as a teacher, and to his wisdom as an adviser.

it Rome. He caused the erection of that Seminary in 1855, and has watched over its interests with fatherly care ever since. Each year the most successful theological students of the Montreal Seminary and of other seminaries throughout the country are sent over to take post graduate courses in the Canadian College, under the direction of the most experienced professors of the old world.

The establishment of the Polytechnic School and of the French Literature Course at Laval University are also due to Abbe Colin, who carried out under his administration the building of the Seminary of Philosophy on the Mountain slope, in 1892.
Among his most remarkable oratorical efforts were his address to the Pontifical Zouaves, on their return to Canada from Rome in 1871, his sermon at the celebration of the golden jubilee in the priesthood of his predecessor, Rev. Abbe Bayle, and the funeral oration over the remains of the late Mgr. Abbe Bourget. He has also left many other remarkable works, which are preserved with care by the fathers of St. Sulpice.

Two years ago, despite the illness which the work and privations of his many years of pastorate and teaching had brought upon him, he went to Rome, where the head office of the Order is situated. He was then made Superior of the Order throughout North America.
The funeral will take place at Notre Dame Church. It will be of the simplest kind.

ABBE COLIN'S SUCCESSOR.

"There is every reason to believe," said Rev. Father Filiatrout, of the Seminary of St. Sulpice, "that Rev. Father Lecoq, who holds the position of Director of the Grand Seminary of Philosophy and that of Assistant Superior of the Sulpician Order in Canada, will receive the appointment of Superior left vacant by the death of Abbe Colin."
Father Lecoq is well known in this city, and is thoroughly conversant with the duties that were so ably fulfilled by the late Abbe Colin. Father Lecoq is about 65 years of age, and has been a resident of Montreal for more than a quarter of a century.

SUDDEN DEATH OF DR. J. A. McCABE.

Ottawa, Nov. 30.—The news of the sudden death of Dr. John A. McCabe, Principal of the Normal School, one of the leading Catholics of Ottawa, as well as one of the foremost educators of the Dominion, was heard here to-day with a shock of regret.
Two weeks ago to-morrow Mr. McCabe was married to Miss Sims in St. Patrick's Church. This morning Dr. McCabe in the same sacred edifice suddenly expired. The sadness of this occurrence has caused the deepest sympathy throughout the city.
On Tuesday last Dr. McCabe and his bride returned to town, and this morning appeared at High Mass at St. Patrick's. Dr. McCabe had just taken off his coat and gloves when he reeled and fell in the aisle. He was lifted up and carried into the sacristy, where Rev. Father Whelan, recognizing that death was near, administered the last rites of the church. In five minutes all was over. Dr. Troy, who had been sent for, arrived very promptly, but the patient was past all earthly aid. It then became Father Whelan's melancholy duty to announce to the waiting congregation that Dr. McCabe had answered the last dread summons. The bereaved widow was conducted to her home by her father, Mr. R. A. Sims, and is prostrated by the shock. Dr. McCabe had nearly reached the age of seventy, but to all appearances was hale and hearty. He has two sons, one of whom resides in New York. The deceased had administered the affairs of the Normal School for many years with conspicuous ability, and was highly respected in this city.

THE FUNERAL.

Ottawa, Dec. 2.—The funeral of the late Dr. McCabe took place this morning, and was attended by many of the leading citizens of the capital.
The chief mourners were Mr. John McCabe, of New York, son of the deceased, and Messrs. R. A. Sims and Gerald Sims, Hon. R. W. Scott, and Hon. F. R. Latchford and John Heney were among those present, also Rev. Father Crinion, of Dunville, representing the Grand Council of the C. M. E. A. of Canada, and Rev. Father O'Reilly, Oakville, a lifelong friend of the late Dr. McCabe.

DEATH OF FATHER BRODMAN, BERLIN.

Berlin, Nov. 27.—Rev. George Brodman, the well-known parish priest at St. Clement's, died suddenly in Berlin at 11.30 this forenoon. Death was due directly to heart failure. He came to Berlin on Wednesday noon, intending to remain at St. Mary's parish house until this morning and then proceed to Guelph to attend an annual conference of the clergy of this district. During the afternoon he felt unwell and said he feared a return of a former illness. Dr. Cline was called in and administered medicine that afforded relief for a time. Towards evening the pain became more severe and during the early part of the night Rev. R. Lehmann remained up with him. Rev. W. V. Klopper relieved Father Lehmann early this morning. At that time Father Brodman was asleep. He did not wake for some hours and then he moved about in bed. He was unconscious and could not be roused. Rev. W. V. Klopper administered the last rites of the church. Dr. Cline and Dr.

Lackner were hurriedly sent for, but when they arrived they saw it was too late and in a few minutes the vital spark had fled. The end came in a peaceful sleep.
The interment took place on Saturday at St. Clement's, R. I. P.

TO INCREASE THE POWERS OF A FLOURISHING SAVINGS BANK.

An application is now being made to the Parliament of Canada for a charter for a bank to be called "The Home Savings Bank of Canada," and when the charter is issued the new bank will take over the assets and liabilities and business of the Home Savings and Loan Company, and be under the same management as that of the present company.
The reason of the change is that the Home Savings and Loan Company has outgrown the borrowing powers of its present charter, and finds it necessary to get the powers it requires under the Banking Act. The Home Savings and Loan Company is one of the most successful and useful, as well as one of the oldest savings institutions in Canada, for its deposits have reached the sum of $2,500,000, and represent the savings of over seven thousand persons. All classes and ages are numbered among them, besides a great variety of societies and organizations, religious and business, and clubs, lodges, etc. It is one of the oldest, for some twenty-three years ago the Home Savings and Loan Company took over the business of the Toronto Savings Bank, an institution begun in 1854, and continued until 1879, when it merged into the Home Savings and Loan Company, so that the new "Home Savings Bank of Canada" will represent the old Toronto Savings Bank, and many of the accounts of the depositors of the old Toronto Savings Bank will be in the books of the new bank without any break, excepting the name of the institution.
It is expected that the new bank will begin business early next year, with a paid-up capital of $1,000,000, and a reserve fund of one-third, or $333,333. The stock of the Home Savings and Loan Company will become stock in the new bank, the company shareholders receiving the full benefit of the one hundred per cent. reserve fund of the company, one-half of the reserve fund together with the amount paid on the shares being turned into paid-up capital of the bank, and the remaining half of the reserve fund continued as a reserve fund on this new capital. The balance required to make up this capital of $1,000,000 will be readily subscribed. It is important to notice what is stated above, that the management of the new bank will be practically in the same hands as that of the old. Naturally the increased holdings of stock will imply an increased directorate to represent the additional capital, but the old customers and depositors of this long known and popular savings institution will have the satisfaction of knowing that their interests will be safe in the hands of those to whom they have long been confided.

CHILDREN FOR ADOPTION.

There are at present ready to be placed for adoption in good Catholic homes five children, three girls and two boys, from ten months to two years of age; also ten other children from two to eight years of age. In homes where the children are fully grown or where there are some one of these children would make himself or herself welcome if given an opportunity. Apply William O'Connor, Inspector Neglected and Dependent Children, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

THE BLESSING OF ST. FINNAN'S BELLS, ALEXANDRIA.

On Sunday afternoon last the blessing of the new bells for St. Finnan's Cathedral, Alexandria, was performed.
The order of services was as follows: The Rosary, followed by short discourses in English and French, by Rev. Father Moeche, following which a collection was taken up. This opportunity being given for the people as well as to Bishop Macdonnell, much is due with regard to having the bells placed in the Cathedral.
Following the collection, the Pontifical Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was given by Bishop Macdonnell, after which the blessing of the bells proper, was performed.

PAIN IS A PUNISHMENT.

Pain is a protest of nature against neglect of the bodily health, against carelessness regarding the physical condition. It steals in at the first opportunity and takes up its abode in a man and it is sometimes difficult to eject it. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil will drive it out in short order. Pain cannot stay where it is used, but immediately goes away.
