Directions for Halifax Harbour, taken from the printed Directions in the Custom-House at Halifax.

SAMBRO island and light house is in latitude 44 deg. 30 min. N. and longitude 63 deg. 32 min. W.

From the westward, bring the light to bear N. E. ; if it bears more easterly, stretch to the southward till it bears N. E. and as much more northerly as you please, there being no shoal or ledge to the southward ; then keep it open on your larboard bow ; give it more than a mile and a half birth, as much more as you please.

Note—The western ledges lie from the light S W distant two miles, the other W S W about one league ; the eastern ledges lie in a range nearly, some above water ; the outermost one mile and a half from the light, bearing from it E N E.

When the light bears north, distant about 2 miles, run N E 4 miles, then north will carry you to Chedabucto Head, at a proper distance clear of all danger.

When a-breast of Chedabucto Head, run N. $\frac{1}{2}$ W. for the south point of George's island.

When within $\frac{1}{2}$ a mile of George's island, you may enter the harbour west of it in 12 fathoms, or east of it in 15.

In passing between Sandwich point and Meagher's beach, run nearest the point, to shun a shoal which runs off S. W. from the beach.

There is also a shoal lying one mile south of Sandwich point.

Coming from the eastward, run for the light, and you cannot fail seeing Chedabucto Head as you open Halifax harbour ; the light being 4 miles distant from the Head to the S. W.

TO TRAVELLERS ;

For the information of Travellers between Windsor and Parrsborough, &c.

THE Parrsborough Packet sails regularly between Windsor and Parrsborough every week, from the 1st April to Christmas, viz. leaves Parrsborough on Monday, wind and weather permitting so as to be at Windsor on Tuesday; and will sail from thence the first high water that happens at or after eight o'clock in the morning of that day: the Packet frequently goes twice or three times a week when business requires it.

Time of going through the Falls.

THE Falls are level (or still water) about three hours and an half on the Flood, and about two hours and an half on the ebb, which makes it passable four times in 24 hours, about 10 or 15 minutes each time.—No other rule can be given, as much depends on the floods in the River St. John, and the time of high water or full sea, which is often hastened by winds, and in the proportion to the height of them.

ECLIPSES IN 1820.

There will be four Eclipses in the year 1820, in the following order.
 1st.—The first of the SUN, March 14th, at 9h. 7m. in the morning, invisible. 2d.—The second will be of the MOON, March 29th, at 2h. 32m. in the afternoon invisible. 3d.—The third will be of of the SUN, September 7th, in the morning partial and visible as follows: Beginning at 7 hours 40 minutes; greatest Observation 8h. 10m.; End at 8h. 46m.—Digits eclipsed 1½ on the Sun's North limb. 4th.—The fourth and last, will be of the MOON, September 22d, partial and visible as follows :—Beginning at 0h. 59m. morn. Middle, 2h. 27m. Ecliptic 8 2h. 33m. End of Eclipse 3h. 56m.—Digits Eclipsed 10 deg. 12 min. from ☽ Southern Limb.

♀ Venus will be Evening Star until the 30th of July, then Morning Star throughout the year.

♌ Conjunction, or planets situate in the same longitude. When a planet is in conjunction with the sun, or any other planet they pass the meridian at nearly the same instant ☐ signifies planets situate quarter of a circle, or 90 deg. distant; when a planet is ☐, or 90 deg. distant from the sun; if East from the sun, it will pass the meridian at 6 o'clk. in the evening, if West, at 6 o'clk. in the morning. ☽ This mark denotes Opposition of planets, or when they are half a circle distant; when the Moon is full orb'd she is in ☽ to the sun, and all planets when in ☽ to the sun, pass the meridian at midnight. Perigee signifies, when the moon or any planet is in that part of their orbit which is nearest to the Earth. Apogee, denotes a planet to be in that part of its orbit which is most remote from the Earth.—N. B. the ☽ when in her Perigee and Apogee, has a most visible influence on the Tides, the former having a tendency to elevate, the latter to depress them more than their usual height.

JANJARY hath 31 Days.

Each day flies round on pleasure's wing,
While converse bland the hour beguiles;
In social mood friend meets his friend,
And beauty culls its choicest smiles.

'Tis the gay morn of pregnant year,
That bears within its fruitful womb;
Events, which must to all impart,
A cheering or desponding doom.

1820

FEBRUARY hath 29 Days.

'Tis thus I've mark'd the boy, arriv'd
To years of youthful prime;
Have seen him pause and look around,
And mark th' events of time.

The world with all its busy haunts,
Struck his astonish'd view;
And each he met he thought a friend,
And hoped to find him true.

'Twas life's gay morn, gay was each scene,
And ev'ry prospect bright;
No ills he fancied;—none he new,
Nor fear'd th' approach of night.

MARCH hath 31 Days.

1820

Now though around the festive board
We meet in happiest mood,
And all within conspire to cheer
Stern winter's solitude.

The famish'd wretch, whom want, and years,
And sorrows have oppress'd,
Feels not the kindling glow of hope,
Illumè his faded breast.

Whilst wintry storms unheeded jowl,
'Mid drifting snows he strays;
Or else in wretched hovel hous'd,
His scanty meal displays.

See smiling Spring with modest mein,
Come dancing o'er the lawn;
Whist feather'd warblers from each spray,
Welcome the fragrant morn.

Sunshine and showers alternate reign,
And damp or cheer the scene;
And now dark clouds the sky deform,
And now is all serene.

Emblem of life!—Tis thus with man;
His days 'mid joys and sorrows glide;—
The prey of hope, or grief or bliss,
He floats o'er life's uncertain tide.

The youth who in his earlier years,
Tasted of Spring's luxuriant sweets;
Perchance enjoys dame Fortune's smiles,
Perhaps her sternest frown he meets.

It may have been, his hopes of bliss,
Vanish'd like morning's fitful dream;
His life may've been of tasteful thread,
And bright as ev'ning's transient gleam.

From bright'ning fields of ether fair disclos'd,
 Child of the sun refulgent Summer comes,
 In pride of youth, and felt through nature's depth :
 He comes attended by the sultry hours,
 And ever fanning breezes on his way ;
 While, from his ardent look, the turning Spring
 Averts her blushful face ; and earth and skies,
 All smiling, to his lot dominion leaves.

The bright Sun
Smiles, as if happy to behold once more
The Earth he blesses;— and delighted Earth,
As at a Father's glance of fond return,
Plings off the gloom that mantled her, and gay
Smiles upward to his smile. How swiftly flit
The shadows o'er that mountain's rugged top!
The forest, as it rises from the breeze,
Far backward shakes them from its branchy crest,
See how they course the meadow!—Now 'tis all
One brightness,—Save where 'neath, those clustering boughs
'That o'er the streamlet hang from bank to bank,
Hid from the noontide beam, they linger still,
And, listening to the watery murmur, breathe
Fresh coolness from the wave. Ere the bright orb
Had chas'd them to their bower, methought the scene,

Distinct and lovely in their shade,
 Was present all as now. The mountain rear'd
 High o'er the mist that circled the low cliffs
 Its rough majestic summit, like a throne,
 Where he who rules the storm might sit, and rest
 His thundering sceptre. On its side, the woods
 Reveal'd their dim recesses; and below,
 The copse and skirting meadow show'd the flowers,
 That, blooming there in rich luxuriance, fring'd,
 The wide green mantle. Ev'n the shadowy rill,
 Beneath those very branches, to our view
 Gave its light surge, that, o'er the willow's stalk
 Bent downward, ripped whiter mid the leaves!

In the thick City's smoke, can Beauty find
 A charm,—a solace for the charms resign'd?
 When, at soft noon, the river,—that had glów'd,
 A flood of sunshine, dazzling as it flow'd,—
 Bent, where the wood-hung rocks its course forbid,
 Sinks into sweeter shade, oft seen, oft hid,
 And airs so fresh are flowing that on high
 Their very breath would tell of waters nigh,—
 While through the air a thousand warblings run,
 And many a wing is glittering to the sun,

And on some shelter'd slope, where hillocks meet,
 Glad Echo answers to the lamb's first bleat,—
 O! loves she rather than such gloom, as falls
 Where the same windows front the same dull walls,—
 To see new weary idlers tread once more
 The mud or dust which crowds had trod before,
 Or the gay chariot loiter, as it waits
 Some fool she scorns, or envious flirt she hates.

Ah, soon shall autumn disappear,
Stern winter desolate the year,
And storms invade the skies.
So mahn the pageant of an hour,
Shines for a time in pomp and power,
And then unheard of dies.

Nor Beauty's bloom, nor regal state,
Nor the vain glories of the great,
Nor gold, nor glittering gems,

SIR ROBERT MAXWELL OF ORCHARDSTON.

Sir Robert Maxwell, of Orchardston, in the county of Galloway, was the descendant of an ancient Roman catholic family of the South of Scotland. He was the only child of a religious and bigoted recluse, who sent him, while yet very young, to a college of Jesuits in Flanders, for education, the paternal estate being, in the mean time, wholly managed by the boy's uncle, the brother of the devotee, to whom he resigned the guardianship of the property, in order that he might employ the remainder of his days exclusively in acts of devotion. In the family of Orchardston, as, indeed, in most great families of that day, the younger branches were but ill provided for, and looked to the inheritor of the family estate alone for the means of supporting their rank in society; the liberal professions, and the employments of trade, were still considered somewhat dishonourable; and the unfortunate junior, nursed with inflated ideas of his consequence and rank, was doomed in after life to exercise the servility, and experience the mortification of a humble dependant: In this case the culpable negligence of the father had transferred the entire management of a large estate to his younger brother, who was so delighted in the possession that he resolved to retain it to the exclusion of his nephew, the rightful heir at law. He consequently circulated a report that the boy was dead, and on the death of the old baronet, which took place about this period, he laid claim to the title and estate. In the mean time our young hero was suffering (but very reluctantly) the severe discipline of the Jesuit's college, his expences being defrayed by occasional supplies sent him by his uncle, which were to him represented as the bounties of the college, a story which he could not but discredit, as he had been placed there at an age too young to know distinctly either who he was, or whence he came; he was intelligent and docile, and was deemed of sufficient capacity to be done hereafter one of their own learned body, with which view he was educated. When at the age of 16, he found the discipline and austerities of a monastic life so ill suited to his inclination, that on a trivial dispute with the superior of his college he ran away and enlisted himself in a French marching regiment. In this situation he sustained all the hardships of hunger, long marches, and incessant alarms, and as it was in the hottest part of the war between France and England, about the year 1743, it may easily be imagined that his situation was by no means enviable. He fought as a foot-soldier at the battle of Dettingen; he was also at the battle of Fontenoy; and landed as an ensign in the French troops at Murray Frith during the rebellion of forty-five. He joined the rebels a little before the battle of Falkirk, marched with them to Derby, and retreated with them into Scotland. He was wounded at the battle of Culloden; and fled with a few friends to the woods of Lochaber, where he remained the greatest part of the summer of 1746, living upon the roots of trees, goats' milk, and the oatmeal and water of such peasants as he durst confide in. Knowing, however, that it would be impossible to continue this course of life in the winter; he began to devise means of effecting his return to France, perfectly unconscious that in the country where he was suffering the miseries of an outcast criminal he was entitled to the possession of an ample estate and a title. His scheme was to gain the coast of Galloway, where he hoped to get on board some smuggling vessel to the Isle of Man, and from thence to France. The hardships which he suffered in the prosecution of this plan would require a volume in their description. He crept through bye ways by night, and was forced to lie concealed among rocks and woods during the day; he was reduced almost to a state of nudity, and his food was obtained from the charity of the poorest peasants, in whom only he could confide. Of this scanty subsistence he was sometimes for days deprived; and to complete his misfortunes, he was, after having walked bare-footed over rocks, briars, and unfrequented places; at length discovered, seized, and taken before a magistrate near Dumfries. His name was Maxwell, which he did not attempt to conceal; he would have suffered as a rebel, had not his commission as a French officer been found in the lining of his tattered coat, which entitled him to the treatment of a prisoner of war. This privilege, however, only extended to the preservation of his life; he was confined in a paved stone dungeon so long, that he had amused himself by giving name to each stone which composed the pavement, and which in after life he took great pleasure in repeating and pointing out to his friends. An old woman, who had been his nurse in childhood, was at this time living in Dumfries, where he was a prisoner, and having accidentally seen him, and becoming acquainted with his name, his age, &c. felt an assurance that he was the rightful Sir Robert Maxwell. The indissoluble attachment of the lower orders in Scotland to their chiefs is well known; and impelled by this feeling, this old and faithful domestic attended him with the most maternal affection administering liberally to his distresses. After an interview of some weeks she made him acquainted with her suspicion, and begged leave to examine a mark which she remembered on his body. This proof also concurring, she became outrageous with joy, and ran about the streets, proclaiming the discovery she had made ! This rumour reaching the ears of the magistrates, enquiry was made, the proofs were examined, and it soon became the general opinion that he was the son of the old baronet of Orchardston. The estate lay but a few miles from Dumfries, and the unlawful possessor being a man of considerable power and a most vindictive disposition, most people, whatever might be their private opinion, were cautious in espousing the cause of this disinherited and distressed orphan. One gentleman however, was found, who, to his eternal honour, took him by the hand. A Mr. Gondy procured his release from prison, took him to his own house, clothed him agreeably to his rank, and enabled him to commence an action against his uncle. The latter was not inactive in the defence of his crime, and took every pains to prove his nephew to be an imposter. Chagrin and a consciousness of guilt however put an end to his existence before the cause came to a hearing, and Sir Robert was at length put into the peaceable possession of an estate worth upwards of two thousand pounds a year. He now began to display those qualities and abilities which had been but faintly perceptible in his former station: he discovered a generous mind, an intellect at once vigorous and refined, and manners the most elegant and polished; his society was courted by all the neighbouring gentry, and in the course of time he married a Miss Maclellan, a relation of the family of Lord Kirkcudbright; with this lady he lived in the most perfect happiness for many years. He joined in the prevalent practice of farming his own estate, and built a very elegant house on an eminence overlooking the Frith. An imprudent speculation in the bank of Ayr, however, compelled him once more to abandon the seat of his ancestors. He had reserved a small pittance, on which he and his lady lived the latter part of their days. This calamity he bore as became a man familiar with misfortune, and he continued the same worthy open-hearted character that he had ever been. The reduction of his fortune served only to redouble the kindness and cordiality of his friends. He died suddenly in September 1786, whilst on the road to visit one of them—the Earl of Selkirk. He left behind him no issue, but his name is still remembered with ardent attachment.

FINIS.
