FIRST EDITION. DROWNED IN A MUD HOLE. EXCITED MINERS. BEANS.

WILLIAM ERVINE STRAYS FROM HOME AND FALLS INTO A CARLETON HILL POND. An Hour's Wandering Through the New France Ten Weeks His Stray Years—He Drops from Exhaustion and is Drowned by the Inflowing Tide. This morning Messrs. Thomas Fitzgerald and Charles Russell found the body of an old man about ninety years of age, on the bank of the mill pond at the eastern end of the Bedouin works, Carleton. The body proved to be that of William Ervine, who wandered from his home last night and never returned by drowning in the mill pond.

Mr. Ervine was the father of Mrs. Matthew Russell, of John Street, Carleton, and has been living with her for a little over a year. He was slightly lame and has on several other occasions left home and gone wandering about the streets. A strict watch was always kept on him to prevent him from going astray, but between three and four o'clock this morning he evaded the watchful eye of his relatives and slipped from the house by raising what was thought to be a securely fastened window blind. On being asked what he wanted Ervine made no reply but sauntered out of the yard, moving in the direction of the mill pond, and almost immediately a crash of boards and a groan told Michael Hayes that the old man had fallen into the mud-hole below. The tide was fortunately out and thinking of no immediate danger to the unknown person, Hayes left his house to look for the man. In a short time officer Adams was found and he with Michael Hayes and a younger brother of the latter constituted themselves into a searching party. With the aid of a lantern, the body of the man was discovered and carried for nearly an hour but although the man's tracks were plainly discernible, he himself could not be found until five o'clock Mr. Russell's family had missed their aged relative and they set out on a vigorous search of the streets were scored in every direction but not until nine o'clock were the efforts of the searchers successful.

When found Ervine was lying across a large rock with his face hanging into the water and part of his body submerged. He had on a pair of trousers, a shirt and one sock. Ervine probably lay just where he had fallen for some time, and was drowned by the incoming tide. His body was removed to his late home by a hearse.

The age of the man is not definitely known but he himself has said that he was 75 years of age. He was a native of Lincolnshire, and has been in this country for some time. Coroner White did not deem it necessary to hold an inquest on the body.

Readers of the Gazette who have had occasion to journey from Parvostro to Economy, either by water or by land, will remember a group of islands situated midway between those places, the largest of which has an area of not less than 100 acres and which has been the scene of quite inaccessible. Their sides are almost perpendicular and at low tide they have the appearance of castles that for centuries have grown gray but still are adamant of the ravages of time. There is a story that many years ago the largest of these islands was inhabited and was the scene of a very shocking tragedy. Miss Sampson, who has had a very fine view of the Five Islands and their surroundings, seen by moonlight and has admirably reproduced the scene and all its weird effects. The canvas is sufficiently large to have enabled her to go into the details so minutely that one at all familiar with the locality is at once impressed by the faithfulness of the picture. The water is very limpid, the islands stand out with all the reality of nature, the cloud effects are very nearly perfect and the perspective is admirable. The full moon, having risen from behind the distant hills, sheds a soft and beautiful light along in ragged and fantastic shapes above the distant hills. The masses in which the artist has depicted the flood of light from the moon as breaking over the edge of the rolling dunes of the clouds, falling moltenly on the distant landscapes, shining through between the islands and spreading on the rippling tide below them speak highly for her ability to understand the subtleties of light and shade. And this is shown, too, in the dark, yet luminous shadows, and the soft, reflected lights so skillfully brought out on the shaded side of the islands nearest the station of the onlooker. The picture adorns the walls of the editor's room in the Gazette office and any lover of art who desires to view a really fine picture, one that grows on the spectator the longer it is looked at, is invited to come and see it. Miss Sampson is a native of Carleton, Me. but obtained her art education partly in this city and partly in Boston. She is a landscape painter of great excellence and many of her pictures have been sold for high prices in Halifax and other places in Nova Scotia and also in Montreal. She is at present engaged by a gentleman of Trenton to paint for him and some of her other paintings will be on exhibition in a short time.

A Strike Feared on the Erie. Erie railroad system is in a state of excitement as to what will be the next move of the federated trades. Officers of the road having refused to grant the demands of the men the most important of which is the ten hour limit for a day's work and overtime for all work beyond that time. A general strike is feared.

SECOND EDITION. STANLEY-JAMSON.

A LETTER TO THE TIMES COMPLAINING OF STANLEY'S CONDUCT. Jameson's Diary in Process of Preparation and Being Rapidly Filled—What it will show. London, Nov. 22.—The brother of Lieut. Jameson writes to the Times in bitter complaint against Stanley's attack on Lieut. Jameson after visiting his house and receiving his relatives' hospitality. He quotes Lieut. Jameson's diary in confirmation of the Lieut's own letter on the cannibal story. He says: "Asad Faris hated Lieut. Jameson thoroughly and was glad to slander him. The Lieutenant's diaries, he says, are being pushed as speedily as possible and will be published show that the revised man deserved a better fate. In conclusion his brother quotes a letter, 7th February last and approved by Stanley himself, testifying to the cheerful, noble, sunny and high merits of Lieutenant Jameson."

NOVATION SCHEDULE. A Wheat That Commanded—The Social-Commercial Committee. Montreal, Nov. 22.—The town council had instructed the police committee a week or so ago to obtain legal advice as to the jurisdiction of the stipendiary and sitting magistrates. Lawyer Barker, of St. John, was asked for advice and his reply received to-day states that the jurisdiction of the officers mentioned is all right.

Wm. Day, Lewistown, parish of Moncton, on trial for stealing fifty bushels of wheat was sent up for trial this morning. The plea entered under O. L. No. 39 being "not guilty" but the evidence was largely attended and a grand acquittal. There will be confirmation service in St. Paul's church tomorrow by Bishop Pellan.

CANADA'S EXPORTS. A Great Improvement During the Year—The President's Bank from British Columbia. Montreal, Nov. 22.—A comparative statement shows the Canadian exports for October to have been 2,000,000 in excess of October last. In agricultural products there is an increase of $1,200,000.

Mr. A. J. MacFarlane has returned home from Fredericton where he has been spending his vacation. At Waterford. A correspondent writes from Waterford, Kings Co. Nov. 21: The new Orange hall here, is finished and is to be opened in the afternoon, when a lot of his young cattle has to remain outside till he gets sheds built to shelter them.

Mr. Andrew McAfee and J. McAfee, merchants of this place, are doing excellent business in their line. A large number of men are in the lumber woods for the winter season.

John Billing dashed out the other day eight hundred bushels of grain; he has the field and largest lot of all kinds of poultry in this county. He has eighty geese, a large number of turkeys, together with a large number of chickens ready for market at Christmas time. He has over two tons of packed butter, which he intends to sell till the price improves. He has killed and salted nine large hogs and has a lot more fattening. He does not find time for all his cattle this fall, so a lot of his young cattle has to remain outside till he gets sheds built to shelter them.

Deputy Marshal Biggart dropped into his office at the corner of Wilkesby and Jay streets. The deputy, who had had a warrant for his arrest, signed by United States Commissioner R. Lincoln Benedict. Mr. Grace accompanied the deputy to the United States Court, where he was arraigned before Commissioner Benedict, charged with violating the postal laws, inasmuch as he sent the following postal card, containing a threat, to Charles E. Allen 462 Hancock street. "We shall wait for you no longer. If you do not appear in my office by Thursday we shall proceed against you without fail. Hereafter we shall adhere strictly to the letter of the law."

Assistant District Attorney Oakley visited Mr. Grace's office whether he wrote the card or not, but Mr. Grace declined to bite. He applied for an adjournment to prepare the services of his lawyer, Foster J. Bacon. This was granted and Commissioner Benedict released the deputy on recognizance in $100. The hearing is set down for Nov. 25 at 10 a. m.

A Famous English Woman. Lady Florence Dixie is one of the most-talked-of women in the United Kingdom. She has a head like a hand-saw, some boys, with wavy hair, full of threads of gold. Her features are bold, eyes, nose a little heavy, mouth, attractive and decided. Her complexion brilliant as a woman who lives much out of doors. The first time I saw her she was pointed out to me on a country road, riding a chestnut mare. As all the world knows, Lady Dixie uses a cross-saddle. Her habit was black, the short, divided skirt partially covering high riding boots of a natty description. Indoors she has equally the courage of her dress-former convictions. A very usual costume with her is white flannel blouse or skirt, with tartan kilts just covering the knees and long tartan stockings. To this she added when a friend introduced me to her library a loose shooting jacket and shoes with silver buckles.

Novelist Howells was able to set type when he was ten years of age. He was brought up in a printing house. Liverpool Cotton Market. Liverpool, Nov. 22.—Cotton trading, as in the New York market, was of a very quiet nature. Future closed quiet but steady.
