THE HEIR

OF

Lancewood

CHAPTER XLIX.

"I will tell you," she replied, "because it will be better for you to hear it from me than from any one else. That boy is Sir Oswald Neslie, heir of Lancewood."

Lord St. Just started; it seemed to him for a moment that he had been shot through the heart. Then he said in a low voice—

"Oswald Neslie? I thought he was dead!"

"So did I—so did every one else—but he is living and well."

"Stay," said Lord St. Just. "You have taken me by surprise; I am bewildered—lost—I cannot believe it. The heir of Lancewood! Great Heaven, Vivien, what does it all mean? Did you know that he was living? Tell me."

"I will tell you all," she replied. And, standing there, erect and queenly, more beautiful in her pallor and her shame than he had ever seen her, Lady St. Just told the whole story. He listened to it, his face grew white. When it was finished he looked at her.

"May Heaven forgive you," he said, slowly.

"I did not mean it to be done, Adrian. When I spoke to Gerald Dorman as I did, I was bewildered, driven half mad by all that was going on at Lancewood. I hardly thought that he would take me at my word so quickly. Believe me, I honestly thought the child was drowned."

"You might have thought so when such was reported to be the case—but afterward, Vivien, when you knew all!"

"Then I sinned more willfully, more deliberately than at first. I have not been happy, Adrian. Sin has not prospered with me. Yet I have not looked upon it as a sin so much as a deed done for the good of Lancewood. People may say what they will, the son of a strolling player has no right there."

"You seem to forget yourself," said Lord St. Just, gravely. "The boy may be the son of a strolling player, but he is also the son of your father, Sir Arthur Neslie."

"But he resembled his mother," she cried eagerly; "even his face was like hers in those days—he was like her, too, in character then. Gerald Dorman's training has doubtless done much for him. Believe me, I never thought of him as my father's son. To me he was always Valerie's boy, an interloper, the evil genius of Lancewood. I had many excuses—the place was getting into evil odor every where—it would have gone to ruin in his hands. I loved my home so dearly, Adrian—you cannot enter into my feelings."

"I can imagine the depth of your love from the gravity of your sin," he said. Then he took her hands in his. He looked at them long and steadily.

"What have you done, little hands?" he said, "with the honor entrusted to you?"

CHAPTER L.

Lord St. Just was literally overwhelmed. He was not a hard or stern man—he was lenient, merciful, considerate. He could make excuses and allowances; he was slow to condemn. But his wife's confession horrified him—he could not recover from the impression that it had made upon him—he could not realize it; that the noble lady he had worshipped as the pattern of all womanhood had been guilty of what she had revealed was to him incredible. Still he could make allowance for it. For her passionate love of home, for her intense pride in it, for her horror of all desecration of it, for her dislike of the gay French woman and her friends, for her dread of seeing the fine old place ruined, he could allow, but he could not understand, how so noble a woman could have erred so terribly.

"What have you done, my darling," he said, sadly, "with the honor entrusted to your keeping?"

"I have sinned to preserve it," she replied.

"And in sinning you have lost it," he said. "The deed you have done brings greater shame to the Neslies than all Valerie's gayeties, low friends, and dissipations. You have betrayed your father's trust, Vivien; you have tarnished the honor of your house far more than Valerie ever did. You have held Lancewood by fraud, which is what no Neslie ever did before; you have, in plain and simple language, committed a gigantic theft, for which the law could punish you most terribly. You have defrauded an innocent child of his rights. You have taken advantage of the fact that he was fatherless—in plain words again—rob him. Strip your story of all false sentiment, of all sophistry, and the fact lies before you that you stole Lancewood from a child. Family pride, love of race, will not hide or extenuate such wickedness."

He spoke gravely, sternly, and every word seemed to fall like fire on her heart. She saw her sin stripped of all sentiment; she stood face to face with it now for the first time—for the first time she saw that it really was a base, cruel fraud on a helpless child. Before this she had looked upon herself rather as a victim; now she saw the base, horrible nature of her wickedness, and Vivien St. Just cried out with terror.

"I must undo it all, Adrian!" she exclaimed. "I must undo it all—once. He must go back."

"Thank Heaven," said Lord St. Just, "that I hear you say so. Yes, my darling he must go back at once."

He saw her kneel down and bury her face in her hands while she wept aloud; he heard her murmur words of little Arthur—little Arthur and Lancewood. He knew how terrible the ordeal was for her. His eyes grew dim with tears as he remembered her passionate pride in and worship of the boy who was to have been Arthur Neslie of Lancewood.

"You have sinned greatly," he said, "and your atonement must be complete. It must be speedy and entire, Vivien; the boy must go back without loss of time."

All her pride had left her now, she had sunk sobbing on her knees; she was no heroine, but a criminal; her head was bent in lowly self-abasement, in lowly contrition.

"It is all over, my little boy," she said—"all over."

"No, dear child," she answered; and she thought to herself there were troubles greater than death.

She parted the soft, shining curls on his forehead. What a lovely face it was—so noble, so fair! What a noble lord and master he would have made for Lancewood! It was all over; the home she had fought for, struggled for, sinned and suffered for, would be the prey of the spoilers once again, and she could not help it.

That same evening, after all their visitors had left them, Lord St. Just

Vigorol

A SPRING TONIC.

The latest medicine on the market is the Great French Tonic VIGOROL. Every home should have it. VIGOROL tones the whole system. Run-down men and women can be made strong and healthy. It tones you at once. That tired, dragging, sleepy feeling is removed, and you become bright and cheerful. The blood is purified, pimples and blotches are removed and a clear skin is the result, and life becomes worth while. Do you need toning up? Well, then get a bottle of VIGOROL at all drug stores.

Lord St. Just sat still, wrapped in thought. The sound of the gong striking for luncheon recalled him to every-day life. He went to his wife and kissed her fondly.

"Vivien," he said gently, "you must rouse yourself—we have to live our lives, dear. We must eat, drink, sleep, walk, talk, no matter what we suffer, what we endure. Raise your face to mine, darling wife."

She looked at him with weeping eyes.

"I do not make light of your error, my wife," he said; "it was a terrible one. But you are ready to undo it, ready to atone for it. I can enter into your feelings—I know how you loved your home—but, my darling, I cannot understand your sin. What I want to say to you is this—you shall not repent of your trust in me. I will take the whole matter in hand—I will so arrange it that, while the young heir shall be restored to Lancewood, you shall be screened. Your share in the transaction shall never be known. You will trust me to accomplish this?"

"Yes," she said, and, raising her face to his, she went on: "You are too kind to me, Adrian. I am all unworthy; I do not deserve it."

But he answered—

"My darling, you are still on your throne—the queen of all womankind for me. There is no creature living who has not done wrong, who has not yielded to temptation, who has not sinned more or less gone astray. Your sin was, after all, a kind of virtue gone to seed—an intense pride in your name, family, and race; it had its origin in what is really a virtue. It was not of the common order of sin, although, my darling, it was the sin of a life-time. Now, we must go back to the duties of life; they will be all the better fulfilled since we have resolved upon doing right, cost what it may. I will tell you this evening all that I have arranged to do."

But Lady St. Just did not go to her room to dress; he saw her go to the nursery—and he followed her, lest in the madness of her misery she should say something of which she would afterwards repent.

He need not have feared. Nurses and children looked up surprised when she entered, looking so pale and stately. She dismissed the servants, and then took the child Arthur in her arms.

"It is all over, my little boy," she said—"all over."

"No, dear child," she answered; and she thought to herself there were troubles greater than death.

She parted the soft, shining curls on his forehead. What a lovely face it was—so noble, so fair! What a noble lord and master he would have made for Lancewood! It was all over; the home she had fought for, struggled for, sinned and suffered for, would be the prey of the spoilers once again, and she could not help it.

That same evening, after all their visitors had left them, Lord St. Just told his wife what he had decided upon.

"To begin with," he said, "it would be advisable, before taking any steps to install Oswald as heir of Lancewood, to study the boy for a time, to see what he is like before placing so magnificent a fortune in his hands—not that there should be any unnecessary delay in making him master of Lancewood, but that it would be well to note his tastes and habits, so as to know better how to deal with him."

"What I propose," continued Lord St. Just, "is this. We are going to King's Rest; let us ask him, as your visitor, to go with us—to spend, we will say, the summer vacation. Do you agree to that?"

"Yes," she answered.

"Then," went on Lord St. Just, "when he is at King's Rest, and free from all school restraint, we can watch him, we can talk to him, we can give him some valuable lessons, we can teach him the respect and reverence that is due to the name of Neslie; and, when he is quite imbued with our sentiments, we can tell him the truth."

"How much shall you tell him?" asked Vivien.

"As little as possible," replied Lord St. Just. "I shall write to his mother, telling her that the boy has been restored to us by the people who stole him. I shall send a statement to all the leading newspapers that the child was stolen, not drowned, and that he is now restored to his relatives. The affair will excite comment, no doubt; but it will only be a nine days' wonder, and then it will die away."

"But Valerie will want to know more."

"I shall refuse to tell her more. I do not think she will care; much of her interest in Lancewood was died, she is the Comtesse de Caloux. Indeed, I believe she will be so pleased to come back again that she will ask few questions."

"But the world—the world!" sighed Lady St. Just. "I fear we shall not escape slander."

"The world will say but little about the matter, managed as I shall manage it. There will be a little wonder, a little talk, and then all will be forgotten. Of one thing you may rest assured, Vivien—the world will never attribute to you any share in the abduction; the fact that the restoration of the young Sir Oswald deprives our son of the estate will exonerate you even in the minds of the most suspicious."

She turned to him and placed her hands on his shoulder.

"Our own son," she said, "our little Arthur—what shall we say to him if he asks you in the future about this?"

"My dear Vivien, there is a question of greater importance still. What shall we say to the Great Judge if we permit this injustice to go on?"

"You are always right, Adrian," she said, her hands falling listlessly by her side.

EVERYDAY ETIQUETTE

"If place cards are used at a dinner it is necessary to tell the guests where they are to sit," asked Mrs. Newley-wed.

"Each guest is supposed to find their own place by walking around the table until they see a card with their name on it," said her aunt.

An Irishwoman and Her Ten Soldier Sons.

(From the Ulster Guardian.)

In the little town of Lougha, Co. Galway, there lives an Irish mother whose heart is peopled with many sorrows. Her name is Mrs. Fury. She is a mourning widow, who deserves to be chiselled in marble like the mourning widows of the great Serbian sculptor, Mestrovic. This is her incredible story, a story the like of which I have never heard or read in all the annals of war. Her husband, now dead, was a soldier in the Connaught Rangers, one John Fury. He served in that famous regiment for twenty-one years, and died, full of years and honor, in 1903. A year ago on the 2nd August, Mrs. Fury gave all her sons to the cause of the Allies—no fewer than ten strong men. The story of her ten heroic sons is without precedent or parallel in the records of war ancient or modern. Homer himself never had such a story to sing.

To begin with, there is Michael Fury, a reservist with nine years' service in the Royal Irish Rifles. When the war broke out he went back to the colours, and at this moment he is fighting in Flanders. Another son, Edward Fury, is also a soldier in the Royal Irish Rifles. He fought in the desperate fight at Mons. He was severely wounded in the breast and is now in a Dublin hospital. All her other eight sons followed in the footsteps of their gallant father, and enlisted in their father's regiment, the Connaught Rangers. I am told that one battalion of this renowned regiment has been completely wiped out in Flanders and has been merged in the other battalion.

Of Mrs. Fury's eight sons in the Connaught Rangers five have died on the field of battle in Flanders. Malachy Fury was killed on April 7 at Ypres. Martin Francis Fury was killed somewhere in France or Flanders, no one knows where or when. Willie Fury was killed somewhere in France or Flanders, no one knows where or when. Henry Fury was killed somewhere in France or Flanders, no one knows where or when. Willie John Fury was killed somewhere in France or Flanders, no one knows where or when. The bare news of the death of these four sons came to their mother of many sorrows, together with a letter of formal sympathy from the King and Lord Kitchener. Mrs. Fury does not know how they died or where or when. All she knows is that they gave their lives for their King and country, and the great good cause—somewhere in France or Flanders.

I have accounted for five of Mrs. Fury's sons, serving in the Connaught Rangers. What of the other three? Martin Fury served in the Connaught Rangers in India. He was called up from the Reserve and was invalided out of the service. Thomas Fury was a soldier in the 2nd battalion of the Connaught Rangers. He fought in the great retreat from Mons, was captured and is now a prisoner of war somewhere in Germany. John Fury, after serving for four years in the Connaught Rangers, was wounded at Givenchy. It was from the lips of John Fury that I heard the whole story of the Furies.

John Fury is a handsome young Irishman, clear of eye and clean of limb. He is twenty-two years of age. I was a few days ago the guest of Colonel Lewin, D.S.O., commanding the 3rd reserve battalion of the Connaught Rangers at Kinsdale. There in the barracks he did me the honour of introducing me to John Fury, a straight, upstanding young warrior with a shattered arm. Very simply and very modestly John Fury told me the story of his wounds. The Connaught Rangers were in the firing-line at Givenchy. John Fury was chosen to carry under fire a message from his company officer to his commanding officer. He delivered the message and was coming back. The Germans threw a grenade into the trench. John Fury is left-handed. He instantly picked up the grenade and was in the act of throwing it back at the Germans when it burst, wounding Captain O'Callaghan, killing two men and shattering John Fury's left arm. "Captain O'Callaghan," said a brother officer, "has died since then—we all knew him—we called him 'Daisy' O'Callaghan."

As he told his story, John Fury stood up straight as a dart, with his left arm in a sling. There he was, still in the old barracks with his comrades, still suffering, still in pain.

Greatly marvelling at his stoical fortitude, I said to him:

"Did you know that you were risking your life when you picked up the grenade?"

His answer was a simple and soldierly answer.

"If it had not been thrown back," said he, "there would have been twelve or thirteen of us killed in the trench. I knew it was my duty."

Could words be nobler? "I knew it was my duty." In those simple words is crystallised the whole story of the gallant Furies. It is the story of the British Army. It is the story of the Irish regiments in the British Army. Private John Fury has received no reward for doing his duty.

Nor does he ask for or expect any reward. But everybody who reads his story will say that if any soldier has earned the V. C., Private John Fury has earned it. For his own sake, for the sake of his famous regiment, for the sake of Ireland, for the sake of his brave dead father, for the sake of his heroic mother, and for the sake of his five dead brothers, I hope the King will pin it on his gallant breast.

There is more to tell. John Fury has a sister. She is the wife of Sergt. O'Neill, who is also in the Connaught Rangers. What of old Mrs. Fury? Her son told me that she refused to allow a word about her sufferings and sacrifices to be printed in the newspapers. I hope she will forgive me for telling her heroic story. Her son was asked if there was anything that could be done for him. His only wish was to be with his mother on the anniversary of the day in August upon which all the house went to war. She was dreading that day, and he was afraid she would not live through it and its tragic memories.

It is not for me to say what the nation ought to do in order to show Mrs. Fury and her sons its pride and its gratitude. It can hardly do too much. The telling of their noble story is enough. I know what the Germans would do if they had a story like it to cherish.

Prince Louis and Mr. Churchill

The Order to the Fleet—Official History of a Fateful Day.

The Press Bureau has been requested to communicate to the Press for publication the following letter from H. S. H. Prince Louis of Battenburg to Mr. Churchill:

Kent House, East Cowes.

Aug. 12, 1915.

Dear Mr. Churchill—I notice from the newspapers that the unauthorised publication of a private note of mine concerning certain action which I took when in charge of the Admiralty on July 26, 1914, has been made the basis of various strictures on you. I greatly regret this, since you as First Lord and I as First Sea Lord acted during this critical time in perfect harmony and with absolute mutual trust, as is shown by the following statement of what occurred at the Admiralty on that day:

"The news from abroad on the morning of July 26 was certainly, in my opinion, very disquieting; and when you called me up on the telephone from Cromer about lunch-time, I was not at all surprised to hear you express the same view."

"You then asked me to take any steps which in view of the foreign situation might appear desirable."

"You reminded me, however, that I was in charge of the Admiralty and should act without waiting to consult you. You also informed me you would return that night instead of next morning."

"After making myself acquainted with all the telegrams which had reached the Foreign Office and considering the different steps towards demobilisation which in the ordinary course of events would have commenced early next morning, I directed the Secretary as a first step to send an Admiralty Order by telegraph to the Commander-in-Chief of the Home Fleets at Portland to the effect that no ship was to leave that anchorage until further orders. For the time this was sufficient."

You fully approved of this when you returned, and we then in perfect accord decided upon the further orders as they became necessary day by day.

LOUIS BATTENBURG.

Household Notes.

If you are going away from home for a few days, leave your potted ferns, etc., with water in their saucers, so that they will not dry out.

"All odors end here," is the inflexible rule of charcoal. If the charcoal is made red-hot and then cooled. The odor of kerosene lamps can be stopped by putting one teaspoonful of fine table salt into each lamp. The salt should be changed once a month.

A leather bag can be made to look almost new again by first washing with a little warm soapy water, then drying and brushing with the white of an egg.

Potatoes are not so apt to rot if the cellar is not kept too warm. Sprinkle air-slaked lime among them and cover them lightly to keep the light away. Difficulty is generally experienced in the cutting of new bread, but if the knife is first dipped into hot water you can cut the new bread as evenly as the state. When churning it is sometimes difficult to make the butter gather. Try putting a little soda in the cream. It will cause the scattered bits of butter to collect. To prevent salt from becoming damp and lumpy when filling the bottles add several grains of rice; these will absorb the moisture and the salt will keep dry and free.

The Grand Duke's New Command.

The puzzle of the day is the cause of the removal of Grand Duke Nicholas from his command in West Russia to the command in Asia Minor. At first sight, it would appear that his removal is due to the great drive backs which the Russians have been sustaining for the past three months from the Baltic to Bukovina. It is true that Warsaw has been surrendered and many fortresses have either fallen or been abandoned, but Nicholas has been as successful as General Joffre and French were twelve months ago in the West in extricating his forces from peril, and preventing the Russian armies being crippled. Furthermore military experts praise the skill with which these retreats have been conducted, and it has of old been held that the ability of a commander is tested to the utmost in retreat, and the whole operations have been on a scale, when guns and ammunition and modern appliances are taken into consideration, which has never been exceeded and yet the Russian armies in face of months of retreat before a superiority in munitions present to-day an unbroken front, and these facts have been performed under the direction of the Grand Duke. The facts suggests that we should look elsewhere for enlightenment as to the cause of the removal of a commander-in-chief, in whom foreign military experts have still full confidence. The need of opening of the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus to the mercantile marine of the Entente offers a solution of the puzzle. There are now two Russian wheat crops ready for removal, the harvests of 1914 and 1915. Russia needs guns, arms and munitions from America and her Allies. An uninterrupted fair way from the Black Sea to the Mediterranean must be provided and as speedily as possible. Even should success speedily attend the efforts of General Ian Hamilton and Admiral Roebek to force the Narrows of the Dardanelles, that success would not provide the uninterrupted fair way from the Black Sea to the Dardanelles would have to be occupied and the Bosphorus would still remain to be forced. If the news received yesterday of the Bulgarian Premier's statement is correct, there is no present hope of a Balkan League being formed to move on Constantinople and the Bosphorus, and doubtless the Entente has been providing for this contingency. There will be a need of a million or two Russians on the shores of the Bosphorus, the Sea of Marmora and the east of the Dardanelles to reduce the Turkish army to impotence and to secure a safe transit through these waters. Russia can provide the men required, and Russia has not been idle in making preparations in this direction. Her warships have been active in clearing the Black Sea of Turkish steamers, a necessary preparation for the success of landing Russian troops in Asia Minor and bringing up the Caucasian Army to the neighbourhood of the Bosphorus, the Sea of Marmora and the Dardanelles. We shall look for mighty events in these quarters during the next few months and shall not be surprised if Asia Minor and the European Turkey becomes the most active theatre of war during the fall and winter. It is probable that this is the explanation of the Grand Duke's transfer to Asia Minor.

Wedding Bells.

TAYLOR-PENNEY.
A quiet but very pretty wedding was solemnized at the bride's residence, 174 Pleasant Street, last evening, when Miss Mabel Louise Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Taylor, was united in the silken bonds of matrimony to Mr. Frank Penney, son of Captain George and Mrs. Penney, Carboneau.
The bride looked charming in a gown of cream meshalena silk and carried a bouquet of chrysanthemums, sweet peas and maiden hair fern, as she entered the drawing room leaning on the arm of her father, to the strains of the Wedding March played by her cousin, Miss Flo Pike. She was attended by her sister, Katie, who wore a gown of sage blue silk with bouquet of pink chrysanthemums. Mr. Theo. Penney, brother of the groom, ably performed the duties of best man. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. N. M. Guy, pastor of George Street Methodist Church. After the ceremony, the newly wedded couple with their friends repaired to the dining room where supper was partaken of. The health of the bride and groom being proposed by the Rev. Mr. Guy was ably responded to by the groom. The groom's present to the bride was a gold pendant set with emeralds and pearls. The happy young couple left for William's Hotel, Forest Pond, where the honeymoon will be spent. Presents received being costly and numerous, including several cheques, testifying to the esteem in which the happy young couple are held.

Shot-Guns in War.

That shot-guns should be largely utilized in modern warfare is the contention of a number of military experts. It is pointed out that such guns would be particularly useful to sentries at night-time, as an intruder might more easily be crippled and captured by a spreading charge of heavy shot than by a single bullet. Moreover, a person moving quickly might often be missed by a shot from a rifle, whereas a snap shot from a shot-gun in semi-darkness could not fail to find its object. It would also be advisable to arm sentries in this country with shot-guns instead of rifles, if only to avoid a repetition of such unfortunate incidents as the death of innocent and unoffending persons who, through indiscretion, deafness, or other reasons, failed to obey the challenge of a sentry.

In the trenches, shot-guns could be used with marked effect. Ex-Sergeant F. Dest. R.E., points out in the "Field," that where our trenches are within gunshot range of the enemy's trenches a shot-gun, loaded with about 48 grains of powder and 1 1/2 oz. of big shot, with about 25 pellets, would be of much more value than the rifle, as during a night attack, either for attack or defence in semi-darkness, a single charge would hardly fail to inflict serious wounds on one or more of the enemy.

"I remember reading," says Ex-Sergeant West, "of the late Colonel Fred Burnaby's exploit in the hollow square, when attacked by the Arabs in the Sudan, where he used his 12-bore with terrible effect."

"There are doubtless very many men in the ranks, such as game-keepers, who would like to handle their favorite weapon in the trenches, and one shot at any distance from 20 to 60 yards in the night would probably do more execution than ten shots from a service rifle."

What Britain is Doing.

The Chicago Daily News contains a striking tribute to the part Great Britain has played in the war, and shows how she is bending her energy to a colossal task. The article is of especial interest as showing the British feeling which has taken the place of the antagonism to Britain in the early days of the war. Here, says the Chicago Daily News, are some of the things Britain is doing:—

- "1. Holding the sea for the ships of her allies as well as for her own."
- "2. Protecting the coasts of her allies as well as her own."
- "3. Struggling in co-operation with the French to smash the Turks and win the Balkans for the allied cause."
- "4. Rendering great aid to French and Belgian troops in resisting the terrible onslaughts of the Germans on the allied left wing in the west."
- "5. Making loans and supplying munitions to nearly all her partners in the war."

"6. Pursuing a financial policy in south-eastern Europe likely to promote the cause of the nationalities."

"7. Putting into the field more than ten times as many men as she ever promised."

"8. Guarding her own soil and people against an invasion, which, if it came—and it is believed to be far from impossible—doubtless would be the most savage, the most unpardonable ever known. With how many men? Well, with enough. To hear some people talk, one would suppose that upon Britain were laid the duty of defending every hand that her own."

"9. Britain's wealth and sea power and military power are the one sure safeguard against the triumph of Germany's unparalleled war machine. Without Britain's help France and Russia certainly must have been crushed. Without Britain's whole-hearted participation in the war, who will say that Italy would have ventured to challenge the mighty and merciless German coalition? With Britain out of the struggle, would there have been any hope of the Balkan States daring to move?"

"And Britain—never forget it—was not compelled to go to the aid of France. Come what might, the most that Britain ever promised France were six divisions—120,000 men. She was not in honor bound to send a single soldier more. She could have stayed out of the war. Germany had begged her to stay out of the war. Disgraced she might have been—as Britons think, must have been—if she had left Belgium and France and European liberty to their doom."

"But she could have done this. Few nations are without disgraces, without historical pages that they fain would obliterate. Britain was not attacked, France and Russia were attacked. Britain might have awaited the onset—as America is awaiting the onset. Britain might have stood clear, might have husbanded her resources of men and money, might swiftly have prepared, even might have loomed over the stricken adversaries in the end and claimed the hegemony of Europe for herself."

"Britain did not do so. She threw her trident into the scale. She threw her sword into the scale. She threw her gold into the scale—and she is incalculably rich."

"She threw into the balance her impressive racial record, her prestige, her unrivalled diplomatic skill. She threw—is throwing—will throw into the balance the whole puissance of her empire."

"And all for what? For the principle—the fruits of the principle—the liberty of the individual against the despotism of the state. Britain, one can believe, may be the author of some acts of which she is not proud—may have done some things to cause her, looking back upon them with full light, to wish they had never been done. But in this war this old and proud democracy is unfolding, applying a material strength and a moral principle that for countless ages after this conflict is still to be shining undimmed amid the first glories of history."

WHAT THE NAVY COSTS.

Everyone recognizes that whatever money is expended on the Navy, it is money well spent; but some of the items in the Blue Book which has just been published, containing the annual accounts for shipbuilding and dockyard transactions for the financial year 1913-1914, will probably startle some readers.

The total cost of combantant ships on the strength at the present time is given at $174,166,488, and the gradual growth of naval expenditure is seen from the following statistics relative to the votes for dockyards and ships:

1889-90	£14,800,055
1900-01	29,938,529
1910-11	40,410,336
1913-14	48,732,621

Here is the money spent on some ships which have been mentioned during the progress of the war: Iron Duke, £1,899,915; Lion, £1,970,815; Queen Elizabeth (unfinished cost) £1,417,566; King George V., £1,778,133; Ajax, £1,796,945; Queen Mary, £1,958,797; Princess Royal, £1,967,973; Tiger (unfinished cost), £1,462,457.

Some return, however, is obtained from the sale of old ships. The Royal Oak fetched £26,450, the Royal Sovereign £40,000, and the Ramillies £42,300. Three submarines were sold for £410, £360 and £405 respectively.

There are also some interesting figures given in the Blue Book concerning the new aerial service. During the year 1913-14 £244,294 was expended on airships, biplanes, monoplane and seaplanes. The airships under construction were Nos. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 15, and the highest cost of any one ship was £32,444.

Spirits of salts is found best for cleaning a badly-stained sink. Pour it on and rub well with a string mop. Do not let the spirits come in contact with the hands, as it is poisonous.

Reprehensible Conduct

Just as the Red Cross Liner Stephano pulled off from her pier last night the large gathering of people on Harvey's Wharf was put in darkness by some "practical joker" who turned off the electric light. He repeated it three times. But the crowd stopped moving until the lights came on again or accidents might have occurred. The Custom officials around workmen of the premises helped to prevent anyone from going into the water. There was much indignation expressed over the reprehensible act.

Germany, Day By Day.

Intimidating American Banks—No Loans to Allies.
(By Frederic William Wile, in Daily Mail.)

Germany is now intimidating American banks. Categorical information to that effect has just reached me from a prominent banker in the Middle West. It is of timely interest in view of England's project to float a short-term loan of £100,000,000 in the United States for the purpose of stabilizing the exchange market. Banks in Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, and other Middle Western cities in the German-American and pro-German parts of the country are now receiving letters from provincial banks and bankers reading as follows:

"We are interested to know whether your bank is concerned, directly or indirectly, with the financing of the Allies in the European war in the way of subscribing to their loans or otherwise affording them the advantages of the American money market. Unless we receive your reply within five days we shall assume that the answer to our question is in the affirmative, and shall be governed accordingly."

My informant explains that these "inquiries" originate exclusively in either German or Austrian quarters, or quarters under German or Austrian control. In case the metropolitan bank so addressed acknowledges that it is "financing the Allies" the result is the withdrawal of the inquiring bank's account. Deposits of American banks consist largely of the accounts of country banks, for whose "business" there is keen competition. My correspondent adds that the German scheme appears to be engineered from central agency in the east.

THE FRESHMAN

By GEORGE FITCH
Author of "At Good Old Swish"
The annual freshman crop of this country is now about ready for picking. Like oranges and other tropical fruit, freshmen are picked when they are green. One hundred thousand young men will enter the colleges of the land this fall and very few of them will know enough to refrain from buying season tickets for chapel when requested to do so by polite sophomores.
They will apply to the janitor for enrolment in his Greek classes and will try to buy brides for Latin ponies and will perform many other quaint and amusing tricks. It is pitiful to think that young men brought up in tender families should know so little.

take the valedictory and other honors for amusement and go to Congress and the Senate in order to wipe out the memory of their sad college days.

And will the kid-finished scions of aristocracy scorn them then? NO, dear friends. They will speak of them lovingly as "My old college chum," and will go to visit them in Washington and will even borrow money from them if the stock market has back-fired.

This is a truly noble spirit. We should never look with scorn upon a cabinet minister or a bank president because he was once a scatter-footed freshman with red wrists and a taste for Latin instead of for fox-trots.

Girl's Record Swim.

Miss Eileen Lee, daughter of the lock-keeper at Teddington, who a few days ago swam from Richmond Bridge to the Tower Bridge (sixteen and a half miles) in record time, yesterday set herself the seemingly impossible task of swimming up river from the Tower Bridge to Richmond and then back as far as possible. She nevertheless succeeded, doing the eighteen miles to Twickenham in record time, and then swam back to Kew Bridge. A distance of twenty-one and three-quarter miles was thus covered in 6 hrs. 38 min. Many creditable long-distance swimmers have been accomplished in the Thames, but these have always been made on the down tide, which materially assists the swimmer. Miss Lee progressed at the rate of twenty-eight strokes to the minute. Her previous swim from Richmond to the Tower Bridge took 4 hrs. 33 min. 45 sec., but yesterday she lowered these figures by 3 min., swimming afterwards to Twickenham in 5 hrs. 6 min. 5 sec., before starting on her return journey.—Daily Mail, Aug. 24.

BEFORE AND AFTER.

"To gain a smile from your starry eyes, I'd stay a dragon," the lover cries. "I'd dip the sea from your ancient bed, I'd scoop the snow from your mountain's head, I'd grab a star from the spangled sky to light your toddle by. I'd catch a whale, though it's fierce and fleet, and proudly lay it before your feet. Whatever a mortal man can do, will be done by me, dear love for you." Oh, the fair-maid falls for this tommyrot, and off to the parson then they trot, and the good man says, "You are man and wife; I have sentenced you, and your term's for life." The passerby, when a year has flown, may hear the passionate husband groan: "The minute I step within these doors, you have a list of a thousand chores. There is no rest for a weary soul; you want some water, you want some coal, I should be mowing the ding-donged lawn, or pulling weeds till the light is gone, or pruning trees with a butcher knife—a man's a chump when he takes a wife!" Oh, girls who plan to be happy fraus, beware the man who is long on vows!

Supreme Court Decisions.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"She is one of those people who give supreme court decisions." The above, produced by Molly, the little stenographer lady, is the description of a certain woman in our town who seems to be generally unpopular. She is a rather pretty woman and an unusually capable one. She unquestionably means to do about what is right. She is kind and generous in her way, and yet, as I said before, she seems to be pretty generally disliked. Why? Because, to quote Molly, "She is one of those people who give supreme court decisions."

In other words she has a habit of saying everything in such a way that she seems to be making a final decision.

From Mosquito Bites to Woman's Rights.

It matters not what the subject may be—the best cure for mosquito bites, the right of the woman suffrage question, the proper age for children to go to school, the reason for the higher cost of living—she is always ready to give her views upon it, and she always gives them as a decision, not as an opinion.
Often what she says is worth considering, but she manages to arouse such antagonism by her manner that her hearers are seldom willing to consider it. As one woman says, "I'd change my views for the sake of being on the opposite side."
Of course everyone has a right to hold an opinion on all subjects and (within limits of breeding and de-

A Quotation That Has Helped.

In our family we have a Biblical quotation which we are always ready to produce for the benefit of any member who seems to need it. It is from the twelfth chapter of Job. His friends have been giving what Job evidently resents as supreme court decisions and the long-suffering one finally becomes somewhat impatient and remarks sarcastically: "No doubt but ye are the people and wisdom shall die with you."
We find that quotation most effective. Perhaps you will, too.

Oval-shaped gift frames of the old-fashioned type are now being brought down from their hiding places and used to frame embroidery. In this manner they make handy trays.

402nd Day of the War Latest From the Front. Messages Received Previous to 9 A.M.

OFFICIAL.
LONDON, Sept. 9. The Governor, Newfoundland: Zepplins again raided the Eastern counties and London last night, dropping bombs which caused some fires. Casualties amounted to twenty killed and eighty-six wounded, the majority slightly.

The French Government report violent fighting in the Argonne. The line was maintained against desperate enemy attacks with asphyxiating shells. French aircraft bombarded the station at Challemagne.

The Russians report stubborn fighting and a new position occupied on the Upper Styr under enemy pressure. Further south at Tarnopol the Germans were defeated losing eight thousand prisoners and several guns. The Italian offensive at Cadore is temporarily checked by formidable natural obstacles.

PREPARING FOR GENERAL ATTACK.
SOFIA, Sept. 9. According to information received from reliable sources the Allies are now concentrating large forces, including heavy landing artillery, for a new general attack on the Dardanelles. The presence of mine sweepers at Seddul Bahr, near the entrance to the Straits, is regarded as foreshadowing increased activity including a vigorous bombardment of the outer Dardanelles forts.

ZEPPELIN CASUALTIES.
LONDON, Sept. 9. The raid of the Zepplins last night is described by the Pall Mall Gazette as "the Londoner's first glimpse of war at close quarters." The Evening Standard speaks of the coolness shown everywhere, but warns the public against the noticeably widespread and dangerous disposition to regard the affair as a species of spectacle. It suggests that in addition to the Zepplin, which within limits is a terrible instrument of war, there is also the danger of anti-air craft guns, therefore the public would be well advised to take the aerial visitors more seriously than they did last night. Official references to the Zepplins approached the port of London more closely than on any previous occasion. Twenty persons were killed, and eighty-six injured in last night's raid. These figures were given out officially to-day. The German airships flew over the Eastern Counties of England and the London districts.

RUSSIAN VICTORY NEAR TARNOPOL.
PETROGRAD, Sept. 9. The brilliant victory won by the Russian army near Tarnopol is regarded here in the nature of a fitting celebration of the assumption of the chief command of the Russian armies by Emperor Nicholas and as an omen of success to come.

GERMANS MAKE VIOLENT ATTACK.
PARIS, Sept. 9. There was very violent fighting last night in the Argonne region, according to an announcement this afternoon made by the French High Command. The Germans attacked the French lines with great ferocity, but with one exception these lines everywhere held fast. The French took some prisoners.

LONDON BUDGET.
LONDON, Sept. 9. The Crown Prince is making another determined attempt to break through the French lines in the Argonne, according to a Berlin official statement, and succeeded in taking trenches over a front of two kilometers (one and one quarter miles), and to a depth of from 300 to 500 metres, capturing 2,000 prisoners, 48 machine guns, 64 mine throwers. The French, both in their midnight report and again this afternoon, admit that the Germans gained a partial success, but declare that in most instances they were thrown back with heavy losses.

This is the second attempt of the German Emperor's heir to gain a victory in this region within the last three months. Although on each occasion he gained a small amount of ground, he is apparently as far from his objective this time as on previous occasions. Fighting was in progress all yesterday and throughout the night, and was still going on when the last report was issued. This is doubtless the German reply to the artillery bombardment which the allies kept up for fifteen days, but which now seems to be dying down, and without any infantry attacks following it, as had been anticipated. Instead, except for heavy extraction south of Arras, bomb throwing seems to have taken its place. Along the Eastern front things are moving more slowly again, after the Russian offensive in the southeast, in which they claimed a substantial victory had helped to loosen matters up. From the Gulf of Riga, Olita and south of Kovno, the Germans state the situation is unchanged, while on their centre from that point and beyond Pripet marshes they continue to advance. On the whole the Russians appear with fresh supplies of ammunition, to be making a better stand. They are aided, doubtless by rains which are turning the roads, especially in the region of Pripet and its affluents, into quagmires.

ARTILLERY STRUGGLE AROUND ARRAS.
PARIS, Sept. 9. (Official.) An artillery struggle continues around Arras and in the region of Roye and Champagne front. In the Argonne, enemy attacks have not been renewed. The day was marked by violent artillery duels. Cannoning has likewise been quite spirited in Woivre, the forest of Apremont, and Bois de Montmaré.

AUSTRIANS ENTER DUBNO.
LONDON, Sept. 9. A despatch to the Central News from Vienna, says it is officially announced that the Austrian Landwehr Cavalry has entered the fortress of Dubno, of the Lutsck-Dubno-Rovno triangle of fortresses.

AUSTRIAN ENVOY DISMISSED.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 9. Ambassador Penfield, at Vienna, was instructed by cable to-night to inform the Austro-Hungarian Government that Dr. Constantin Dumba no longer is acceptable as envoy to the United States, and to ask for his recall.

Secretary Lansing has formally announced that his action was the answer of the American Government to Dr. Dumba's explanation of his intercepted letter to Vienna, outlining his plan for handicapping plants in this country who are making war supplies for the Allies.

BUSHIRE OCCUPIED BY BRITISH.
LONDON, Sept. 9. Because of the killing of two British officers near Bushire, in Persia, and the failure of the Persian Government to punish the tribal chiefs concerned in the affair, who, it is declared, were assisted by some German agents, a city of upwards of 15,000 population, on the Persian Gulf, was occupied by the British, without opposition, on August 8, according to advices received by Reuters. The Persian Central Telegraph line has been cut since August 15th, and that road from Bushire has been completely blocked.

GERMANY'S NOTE RECEIVED.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 9. Germany's note re the sinking of the Arabic was received late to-day. The State Department officials will not consider it until to-morrow. Arrangements for its publication will be made later. The note, outlined in Berlin news despatches, says that the commander of the submarine believed that the Arabic was about to ram him. It also expresses regret for the loss of any Americans, and proposes a means of reparation.

THE SUBMARINE TOLL.
LONDON, Sept. 9. (Official.) The ships lost for the week ending September 8th, number ten, of gross tonnage 37,326; fishing vessels, four, tonnage 194.

GERMANS BOMB PARIS SUBURBS.
NEW YORK, Sept. 9. A cable to the Evening News from Paris says: German aeroplanes flew over the suburbs of Paris early to-day dropping a large number of bombs. The extent of the damage is not yet known.

NOT UP TO EXPECTATIONS.
LONDON, Sept. 9. Lloyd George told the delegates to the Trades Union Congress, whom he was addressing, that notwithstanding all the efforts that had been made to speed up the work of turning out war munitions, only fifteen per cent. of the available machinery was being worked on night shifts. The country is not doing its best he declared. The Minister said the Government had under consideration eleven new additional arsenals, two hundred thousand more men were required. The Government, he added, cannot equip the army at this time unless the unions suspended during the war all restrictions barring unskilled labor and all restrictions tending to prevent a maximum output. Therefore there must be no stoppage. Lloyd George said the surplus profits of the firms engaged at munitions work would go to the treasury to finance the war.

Labor, he said, had kept its compact in many instances honorably, but in far too many cases it had failed. If resolutions continue to be passed saying certain labor shall not be employed it will make straight for disaster. Upon the future attitude of labor depends the issue of the war.

BERLIN'S REPORT OF RAID.
BERLIN, Sept. 9. The Chief of the Admiralty Staff has issued the following report: Our naval airships, attacked during September 8th and 9th with good results, the western part of the city of London, the great factories near Norwich and the harbor works and iron works of Middlesboro. There were heavy explosions and numerous fires were observed. Our airships were heavily fired at, but all returned safely.

GENERAL FRENCH REPORTS.
LONDON, Sept. 9. Field Marshal Sir John French, Commander-in-Chief of the British army in the field has sent the following report of recent operations: There has been no change in the situation since my last communication. There has been 'muzzing' activity on both sides without any important result. Our artillery and that of the enemy has been active on the east of Ypres. Elsewhere on our front conditions are normal. A German aeroplane was brought down by rifle and machine gun fire on Sept. 1st, falling close behind the German lines to the southwest of Hooge. A second German aeroplane was brought down by one of our fighting machines. It fell behind the enemy's lines opposite the southern portion of our front.

FREE FIGHT OVER THE WAR.
OTTAWA, Sept. 9. Argument over the war in the city market place to-day ended in a free fight among a number of men of Russian, Austrian, French and other nationalities, and knives were freely used. O. Carisee is in hospital stabbed in the chest, and Joe Carson is suffering from a badly slashed arm. Several arrests were made.

NOT ADVISED OF ZEPPELIN RAID.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 9. As late as three o'clock this afternoon no despatch had been received by the State Department from Ambassador Page, regarding the Zepplin raid on London, and officials did not know whether any American had been harmed or endangered. As the raid was over, a section where many Americans gather, there was some apprehension.

There were no Americans among the Zepplin air-raid victims, the American Embassy and American Consulate reported this afternoon.

HALL BOY CONFESES.
NEW YORK, Sept. 9. Owney Tullis, a Russian Finn, hall boy in the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Nicholas, who met her death last night at the hands of masked men, was arrested after he had confessed, in the police station, to having played a part in the crime. Although the burglars stripped their victim's fingers and ears of diamonds and other jewels worth ten thousand dollars, they failed to rifle the strong box of her safe, in which she kept gems valued at from two hundred thousand to five hundred thousand dollars.

JEWISH NEW YEAR.
LONDON, Sept. 9. More than 2,000 Jewish soldiers are here on leave from the front to celebrate the Jewish New Year's Day in London, among them being several Canadians. Though they will be back in the trenches for the Attonement, they will rigorously observe the feast.

War Worries.

How to Keep Smiling.

"While the stress of war-time is being well borne by the great majority of men," writes a medical correspondent, "there are probably more cases of nervous breakdowns than usual. This is not surprising in the circumstances. But of all those who go under, three-fourths might have saved themselves by taking timely precautions.

"The first thing to do when troubles grow heavy is to cultivate a habit of cheerfulness and resignation. People think this cannot be done, but it can if the effort is persevered with. Some men try to forget worries in overwork. This is one of the commonest causes of mental failure. Have the strength of mind to lie down, close the eyes, relax the muscles, drive all thoughts of business out of the mind, and concentrate on some pleasant experience. Make yourself a nest of pleasant thoughts," was Ruskin's advice.

"Some men try to find relief in alcohol. This is even more harmful than overwork. Two hours' exercise in the open air should be the daily rule; many a fit of despondency may be cured by a game or a long walk. Abundance of sleep is an imperative need; no one should spend less than eight hours in bed or less than seven hours in sleep. The worried man is apt to be irregular with his meals, and consequently he suffers from indigestion."

Meeting at the Episcopal Library.

ARCHBISHOP ROCHE MAKES PROPOSITION.

In answer to the invitations sent by circular, the Committee—every member being present—appointed by His Grace Archbishop Roche to deal with financial matters in relation to the Archdiocese met at the Episcopal Library last night. His Grace presided and explained the objects of the meeting. The address in the main dealt with the standing of the Committee, the financial problem and the appointment of an executive committee. The committee represented all classes and would be a means of intercourse between the Church authorities and the laity, meetings will be held as often as desirable to review matters considered by the Executive. In dealing with the financial problems His Grace pointed out that the Cathedral is in need of repairs; an extension of the girls' school in the city is essential; there is need for church extension, the Cathedral and St. Patrick's being insufficient to accommodate 10,000 and 5,000 people, respectively. He proposed that a central chapel be erected with a resident priest and presbytery. This will be one of the first matters the Executive will consider. The committee pledged its support and co-operation in all undertakings of the Archbishop. The Executive Committee will consult directly with the Archbishop and includes the following gentlemen:—

Right Hon. Sir E. P. Morris, Mr. Justice Emerson, Hon. M. P. Cassin, John Harris, J. D. Ryan, Jas. Ryan, J. J. Murphy, Messrs. C. O'Neil, Conroy, John Barron, M. Connors, W. J. Ellis, J. M. Kent, M. J. Kennedy, F. J. Morris, George Shea, Inspector-General Sullivan, C. E. Meahan, J. V. O'Dea, J. F. Parker, J. J. Tobin.

After the appointment of the Executive, Dr. V. P. Burke thanked His Grace for the interest displayed by him regarding education, especially in view of his desire to improve the girls' schools. His Grace replied in brief reference to the day, the 60th anniversary of the consecration of the Cathedral, after which the meeting closed.

Wedding Bells.

MURPHY-KIELEY.

St. Patrick's Church was the scene of a pretty wedding last evening. The contracting parties were Miss May Kieley and Mr. T. J. Murphy, the Rev. Fr. Pippy officiating. The wedding march was rendered by Mrs. T. J. Jackman as the bridal party entered the church. The bride, who was charmingly costumed, was attended by her sister, Miss Kitty, and Miss Nellie Callahan, who were also neatly dressed. The groom was supported by Mr. J. Feehan. The groom's present to the bride was a cheque, to Miss Callahan a pearl pendant and Miss Kieley a gold bracelet. A reception was held at the residence of the bride's mother after the ceremony. Then the bridal party left for Williams Hotel, Forest Road, to spend the honeymoon. The Telegram joins in the congratulations extended.

402nd Day of the War TO-DAY'S Messages.

ANOTHER RUSSIAN VICTORY.

PETROGRAD, To-day.—An official communication made public here, announces another big success for the Russians in Eastern Galicia. Following their reported victory at Tarnopol, it is stated that southwest of Trembowla during the days of the 7th and 8th the Russians took prisoners, 150 officers, 7,000 men and that the Poles retreated hastily towards the River Stripa. The communication adds that the Russians have captured since September 3rd on the Sereth front a total of 332 officers, over 17,000 men and a great quantity of guns.

NEAR A GREAT SUCCESS.

LONDON, To-day.—Lord Robert Cecil, Under-Secretary of Foreign Affairs, in a speech at Croydon, last night, expressed his firm belief that the Dardanelles expedition was near a great success, which will have an enormous effect in all parts of the world.

CONCERN FELT BY LONDON PAPERS.

LONDON, To-day.—Great concern is expressed by the morning papers over the changes in the Russian higher command. It is considered natural, however, that at a time of such national gravity the Czar should assume supreme command, as he is both the spiritual and lay head of the Empire in a way not easily understood in Western Europe. As the Times editorial says, if the Emperor takes the field in person, it is to overcome at the same time the foes of Russia at home and the embattled foes who are striking at his sovereignty. The Czar's action reveals the gravity of the hour, says the Times. He typifies Russia more fully than any other European country is personified in its Sovereign. He is head of the army and of the church, possessor of supreme political power, the living emblem of the national resolve. His decision is worthy of a great sovereign, with trusted military advisers at his side, and upon them will devolve the practical execution of his commands, but his instinct as ruler may well prove sounder than any cautious calculations, which might have withheld him from facing the political and military perils of the battlefield. Such a monarch may well instill new confidence into his sorely tried troops and steel their hearts afresh for a victorious conflict with a redoubtable enemy. The Times military expert also applauds the Grand Duke's strategy in having reunited his northern and central armies successfully and passed the moment of greatest danger. The correspondent says he cannot believe the removal of the Grand Duke implies any change in the conduct of the campaign. He says, short of some serious mistakes which the Grand Duke has hitherto shown no signs of making, Russia can now carry on an orderly and quiet retreat, fighting where they please, and for as long as it pleases them until the wet season imposes a halt on their enemy. The Petrograd correspondent of the Times thinks the appointment of General Polivanoff, Minister of War, as Premier, will be announced soon, and points out that

FATAL-GASOLINE EXPLOSION ON BOARD SCHOONER HIAWATHA.—CAPT. CLARKE AND TWO SEAMEN DEAD—TWO OTHERS IN HOSPITAL—ALL NEWFOUNDLANDERS.
HALIFAX, N.S., To-day.—The schooner Hiawatha, of Burin, Nfld., was burned to the water's edge here this morning after an explosion. She was laden with oil and gasoline for Newfoundland and was to have sailed to-day. Captain Clarke and two seamen, Hooper and Saunders, are dead. Two others, Farrell and Curley, are in hospital badly burned. Mate Hussey escaped unhurt. All belong to Newfoundland.

Cleared of a Serious Charge.

At the instance of a prominent mercantile concern, a commission agent was arrested under warrant, charged with misappropriation of the proceeds of a debenture. It appears that the agent was given three debentures to sell. He disposed of them and returned the monies for two. Not putting in an appearance to account for the third, the owners became anxious and a deposition was sworn out for the arrest of the agent, who appeared in the magistrate's court to-day before Mr. Hutchings, K.C., who read the charge mentioned above to the accused. Then the complainants decided to withdraw the charge, being satisfied that there had been no misappropriation. Thereupon the accused was discharged.

THE GRIP ON THE DARDANELLES.

We are engaged upon an operation at the Dardanelles which will continue us to try to the utmost the endurance and tenacity of the fighting men of the British race and of the Indian regiments and the troops of our brave allies. It is some satisfaction, however, that even the Germans are beginning to understand that our grip upon the Dardanelles, however limited at present, will never be relaxed until victory is attained. In that spirit the attack on the Dardanelles will be pursued until the passage is won and our warships steam within sight of Santa Sophia.—London Times.

A Race For Life.

(Katherine Parr McColeman.)

The following incident occurred in the month of March, in the year 1888. There was at that time many thousands of acres of forest where even the most daring hunter had never camped. Settlers were few and far between. On the borders of this wild tract one great difficulty was the building of roads, but after a fairly passable road was put through a section, the land was soon taken by prospective farmers.

Winter hung on unusually late this year. Cattle and other stock were beginning to experience what half rations in food meant. It was not an uncommon occurrence during those long, cold nights to hear the long, drawn-out call of a timber wolf, urging his comrades to join in some raid on a farmer's barn yard, or to give chase to a deer.

We were a family of six children. Our nearest neighbor lived about five miles away, consequently, not much visiting was indulged in. One Sunday morning, to our great delight, our neighbor, his wife and daughter (a child of perhaps ten years), came to spend the day. They had walked and arrived before the sun began to melt the snow intending to remain until evening, when again the roads would be frozen and a full moon would make walking home fairly comfortable.

Horses were scarce in those days, oxen being cheaper and easier to keep. My father had recently purchased a fine young team of horses, splendid for driving, as well as on the plow. My father suggested that if they would remain until about nine o'clock, (when the roads would be well frozen, he would drive them home, and we children would have a sleigh ride. This plan was agreed upon, and the evening slipped away all too soon.

We started out merrily—the grown-ups in seats in front, and we children burrowing in a pile of straw in the back part of the sleigh, enjoying the jingle of a new string of bells that was the pride of our hearts.

After an hour's pleasant ride, we arrived at our friend's house. The horses were blanketed and we all went in to get warm and drink a cup of hot milk before starting for home.

Soon we were on our way again enjoying every moment of that wonderful sleigh ride—when away to the south the long, piercing cry of a wolf was heard, and immediately it seemed that the whole forest was ringing with their awful howls. I heard my father exclaim, "My God!" and from that moment we knew it was a race for our lives.

There were three of us children in the sleigh—a brother and sister—both older than I. Our ages were perhaps, twelve, ten and eight years. My sister, the eldest, covered my brother and myself with straw and told us to lie flat under the seats. The horses seemed to understand our terrible danger and fairly flew over the road. From the first alarm there was no need to urge them. I saw the sparks of fire flash from their hoofs as they bounded forward.

We were more than two miles from home when we could see the dark bunch of fiends about half a mile behind us. "We hardly dared to speak, when Mary, my sister, said: "When I jump out don't tell father—let him keep right on; it will take the wolves a few moments to eat me—that will delay them and you will be safe. How we begged her not to do it! I clung to her and said that I would throw myself out after her, while my brother declared that he would certainly scream to father.

Meanwhile the wolves seemed to be gaining on us. When less than a mile from home we heard the report of a rifle, then the second report assured us that our brave mother had heard the terrible chase and had taken measures to help us. As we drew nearer home, we saw a large fire—just where we would turn into the barn yard. (A wolf is very much afraid of fire and will not go near it.)

My father had the first Winchester repeating rifle in that locality, and was very proud of them. As soon as mother realized our danger, she became almost frantic, and not being over-familiar with fire arms, hesitated to use them. To build the fire, however, was her first thought, as by so doing she hoped to stop the wolves until we drove into the barn; then she filled her apron with cartridges—saw that the magazines of both rifles were filled—took both guns and ran out just in time to throw one gun to my father, and together my father and mother held that pack of at least 30 wolves at bay until they scattered, leaving nine dead, while two more were found the next morning a short distance away.

The horses were cared for, the barn and stables were closed for the night, and as we all gathered around the kitchen fire, not much was said, but a wonderful thankfulness on my mother's face as she said: "Children, your prayers, and then to bed."—and Gun for September.

Lessen Your Living Expenses!

"Be economical," is the cry in England, and this slogan has the same significance in Canada. We all must economize. There is more actual waste in our dress expenses than any other item. When a garment becomes soiled we throw it aside, when for a few cents it could be restored to original freshness and beauty by Dry Cleaning.
A saving of at least 35 per cent. in the expense of dressing is possible by using the processes of Dry Cleaning and Dyeing.

Our agents will gladly give you full particulars.
