Quite Sudden Death Following Legal Suit

Mrs. Enoch Ramey, died quite suddenly at her home, Halifax road, Thursday, says an exchange. She was a witness in a case at the court house, Wednesday, in which she was personally interested. When she returned home that night she was seized with apoplexy, from which she passed away as above mentioned.

It is a sad story, part of which has already been told in these columns. It was a case of betrayal of confidence in connection with the making of a note. The note was for less than $50, or the amount due a certain person by Mr. and Mrs. Ramey was less than $50. They, Mr. and Mrs. Ramey, trusted the man they owed to fill in the amount. The note was cashed in by a local bank and when it came due the first intimation Mr. and Mrs. Ramey had of the fraud. The note was sued and judgement secured by the bank.

The case on Wednesday was an examination into the affair. Mrs. Ramey was naturally excited over the matter.

Much sympathy is expressed for the bereaved husband.

Terrific Boiler Explosion

St. Thomas, Ont., Oct. 12.—One man missing, the electric light works wrecked, the town in total darkness, a large shoe factory burned to the ground, and every building in the place more or less damaged, is the dose that the town of Aylmer received tonight as a result of a terrific boiler explosion in the lighting plant. The explosion took place at 7.15 o'clock, and in less time than it takes to tell the story, the buildings and machinery were reduced to a useless mass of ruins, and the only system of lighting the town was put out of commission. The only man in the building at the time was Harry Fisher, the engineer, and as no trace of him has been found, it is feared he was blown to atoms.

Fire followed the explosion and destroyed the Brandon Shoe Factory, a wooden structure, which reduced the entire factory buildings together with the contents and machinery to a smouldering heap of ashes. This factory employed about 100 hands, and was one of the mainstays of the town.

Barns and other small buildings in the vicinity, also caught fire, and burned fiercely, threatening for the time owing to the high wind prevailing, the whole town. The heat was so intense that the firemen were unable to get anywhere near the fire to be effective. The cause of the explosion may never be ascertained as the boiler was blown into a thousand pieces.

Northcliffe's New Mills Costly but to Open

Brilliant festivities, costing $25,000, accompanied the opening of the Northcliffe paper mills at Grand Falls, Newfoundland, on Monday, Oct. 11. The guests included the Premier, Catholic Archbishop, the Bishop, Methodist minister, and the present Cabinet, the former ministry and the leading merchants with ladies arrived at noon. At the official dinner held in the ball room of the mills, four hundred and thirty covers were laid. The Governor, Premier, Justice Emmerson, President Deaton of the mills, and Hon. Mr. Harvey, representing the Legislature who spoke dealing with the possibilities for the country of future similar industries. Saturday morning a special train took the guests on an excursion tour to Botwood Harbor which is to be the shipping port for the mills. At noon the company dined on a thousand operatives and their families. In the afternoon athletic sports were held. In the evening there was a grand concert for the guests and work people during which the mills will be formally opened.

In the development of the pulpwood and paper enterprise, Lord Northcliffe's company has spent more than $6,000,000 and has established a plant that is excelled in size only by the paper mills in Millinocket, Maine.

This new town of Grand Falls has sprung up in a wilderness in the centre of Newfoundland. It is situated on the Exploits River, a stream which has its source in a chain of lakes in the southwestern corner of the Colony and flows in a northeasterly direction emptying into Notre Dame Bay on the northeast coast.

At a party given at the hotel where the great mill has been erected there is a heavy fall. The work of damming the river was an engineering problem but it was finally accomplished at great expense and an immense waterpower developed.

Work was then begun on the erection of a series of mill buildings. These are now completed and are equipped with the most modern machinery. Hundreds of men will get employment in the mills here while thousands of lumbermen will find work in the lumber tracts in the vicinity of Milltown, owned by Lord Northcliffe and his associates. To house these men and their families, comfortable and attractive dwellings have been built, churches, schools and a library are under construction, a hotel has been erected and a municipal water and sewerage system is in operation.

Wreck of a Life of Promise, End a Nameless Grave

A story of singular pathos and heart interest was told by W. R. Geldert at the temperance meeting in Granite Rock Division Hall in Carleton Place, on Tuesday evening, says the St. John Sun. It left with his listeners a mental picture of a lonely and a moral the significance of which could not be misunderstood. In the early eighties when Regina, which last year had 10,500 inhabitants was a village of tents and an occasional wooden shack, and when Nicholas Flood Davin was there publishing the Leader and living in a tent, the incident occurred. Into a tent where Mr. Geldert with others lived, there entered three young men with a bottle of brandy. They invited him to drink, but he refused, for he had abstained for several months and knew that if he drank that evening he would forget his resolutions and before twenty-four hours would probably hit the trail for Winnipeg and a prolonged spree. One of the young men, well educated and with bright prospects, was 26 years old, and a splendid specimen of manhood, weighing 219 pounds. He was a native of the lower provinces and of good family. The young men emptied the bottle, and went out, and in some way secured some peddler's whiskey, which they also drank. Mr. Geldert was away from the tent for a time, and when he returned he found the young man especially referred to had been carried in, unable to walk.

Mr. Geldert looked down on him, and from the nature of his breathing felt that a doctor should be summoned. The others objected, on the ground that the mounted police would hear of it and jail them if they did not tell where they got the whiskey.

A little later, however, Mr. Geldert insisted upon getting a doctor, and the latter was found and brought to the tent. But even at the moment of his arrival the young man's life went out. The liquor had been the cause of his death.

It was Mr. Geldert's sad duty to write the news to the young man's relatives. Just back of Regina, on a slope where the first white man's grave, had been opened but a short time before, the body of this young man had been laid to rest. With his own hands, Mr. Geldert erected a small wooden fence around the two graves, to protect them from the trampling of the cattle.

That fence has long since disappeared, and the graves have been levelled with the surface of the ground. They are unmarked.

"Some day," said Mr. Geldert, "as Regina spreads itself over the surrounding area, a workman digging, may wonder whose they were and what his fate. I could tell them of the untimely end of a splendid specimen of manhood, in whose heart beat hopes as high as beat in the heart of any young man in your city today. He lies in a nameless grave, the victim of that which has destroyed so many in the very flower of their manhood."

Teachers Receive Certificates for Military Training

Nearly fifteen hundred certificates of proficiency as instructors in the new physical and military training course, have been awarded to teachers throughout the Province. About sixteen hundred teachers took the examinations this year, and a very large percentage of them passed. Considering that this is the first of this course, the Department of Education is very well pleased at the showing made. The teachers of the Province were given three years to qualify when this course was added to the curriculum, but judging by the attendance at the various training classes in the past year, that length of time will not be necessary before all the teachers have passed the required examinations. Applications have been received by the Department within a few weeks for the formation of several new cadet corps throughout the Province.

REV. A. J. MACDONALD REPORTS INTERESTING SESSION OF PRESBYTERIAN SYNOD

Upon the first Sabbath after his return from the Synod of the Presbyterian church of the Maritime Provinces, which met in St. John, Oct. 5-7, Rev. Mr. MacDonald devoted the morning service to a consideration of one or two items of the Synod docket.

The first item reviewed was Tuberculosis, Dr. Porter, of Toronto, the organizer and lecturer of the association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis being present, delivered an address. He stated that last year 100,000 of this disease in U. S., and 13,000 in Canada. These required attention and care so that it is safe to estimate that the lives of 60,000 Canadians were effected last year. The time is not very long past when the great majority of men believed that this was a scourge heaven sent. The parents were tubercular and therefore the children must be. Thanks to Dr. Koch and others this is now known not only as a preventable disease but as curable in the earlier stage. The disease is infectious but not contagious.

Dr. Porter was followed by Dr. Walker, of St. John, Pres. of Province Association, who said that out of 748 deaths in the city last year, 105 were consumptives. The Provincial Association hopes to carry on an active campaign to make known the nature of this disease—How it can be prevented and cured.

The object of bringing such a subject before the Synod was to make its members a channel by which the gospel of cleanliness, sunshine and fresh air might be preached in the congregations and homes represented. The gospel of Jesus Christ is intended to love the soul of man. But it reaches further than this. It affects the man, body, soul and spirit. To that anything that so closely touches the well being of man as the anti-tubercular movement can not be uninteresting to the preacher of the Gospel of Christ.

The second item dealt with was the report of the Committee on Moral and Social reform. Progress was reported from all the provinces. The church was not only interesting herself in the anti-tubercular movement but also in the things that affected the morals of the people. Efforts were put forth to suppress obscene literature, post cards, pamphlets and native post cards, pamphlets and papers. The influence of moving picture shows was discussed. The demoralizing effect of throwing on canvas brutal and vulgar scenes was being felt. The time may not be far distant if it has not arrived already when a censor for moving picture shows ought to be appointed.

In this report reference was made to amendments to the criminal code, which shall be asked for at the next session of the Dominion Parliament.

The race track fraternity, driven out of many states of the Republic to the South, had flashed into Canada, and had found a safe refuge because the criminal law was defective. As long as these men keep moving along the street, or track they can carry on the business of gambling. Should one of these fraternity stand under an umbrella or a tree or by a post to carry on their business they are criminally guilty. The manifest intention of this law is defeated and amendments will be sought.

Another amendment will be sought to make the White Slave Traffic more difficult. Twenty of the nations of the world are united to suppress this evil, by which 60,000 women are held in the most terrible of all bondage. Our Canadian laws forbid Mormonism—no man can have more than one wife. Yet practical Mormonism exists for a man may have no legal wife, yet live in practical Mormonism with two or more. A man may have a living wife, not divorced, yet may live and bring up a family with another. Legislation will be sought which will make these things criminal.

The recommendations before the Synod which caused the most discussion were the following:

(1) That the municipal enforcement of the law be supplemented when necessary by government.

(2) Provincial prohibition.

With respect to the first recommendation enforcement was not sought instead of municipal. It was not a question which was better or worse. In the judgement of the committee and of the Synod municipal enforcement supplemented by government when necessary would procure the better enforcement of the law.

Two instances were cited where this combination had been effected, namely in the city of St. John and in Kent, N. B.

The position of the great majority of the Synod was this: The Church and State are twin institutions, not wholly separated or separable. Each has its province, spiritual and secular. It is not the business of the Church to seize the reins of State, or rule by power of sword, yet it is within her province to approach the state with recommendations that are intended to effect the moral welfare of the people. The Church acknowledges that people cannot be legislated into morality but claims that law should protect the people and make it as difficult as possible to do wrong.

NAILING THE FLAG

Asked as to how he nailed the flag to the pole, Commander Peary said that what he actually did was to place the remnant of the flag Mrs. Peary had made for him fifteen years before in a bottle which he left at the apex of the earth.

With the lapse of time and with the advent of other objects of affection—her Cornelius Van der Awe, for instance, this love passage was dropped from Miss Chittenden's memory, especially as she had never heard from the recreant Roderick till he was brought rudely to her recollection by the receipt that morning of a fateful letter. In this document Mr. Roderick Fitz-george advised her briefly that, owing to several unhappy circumstances, he was forced to leave for the far west and, being lightly supplied with funds, would be grateful if she could spare her devoted lover a hundred dollars for the journey.

In case she found it inconvenient he still had in his possession a dozen letters which would not look well if printed in the newspapers. In case she did find it convenient to make the loan, which, knowing her generous nature, her correspondent did not doubt, she was first to tie a piece of white string on the left post of the Renwick's front gate as a signal of assent, then open the library window at 8 o'clock on Friday night, when Mr. Fitzgeorge would enter, exchange her letters for the sum above mentioned and bid her an eternal farewell. If Miss Chittenden played him false—of which perchance the thought—a friend had copies of said correspondence which would immediately be published, together with the garbled details of the former romance, a condition undesirable for a lady so widely known in the social world. The letter ended with the hope that Miss Chittenden was enjoying good health and spirits and that she might persuade herself to meet him on Friday, as requested.

To say that Miss Imogene was terrified would be putting it mildly. Her resulting condition bordered upon complete collapse, mental and physical.

"Oh, Harriet, Harriet!" she sobbed. "Whatever shall I do?" "My dear," returned her friend as she bathed the sufferer's temples with cologne. "It is perfectly simple. You need give yourself no uneasiness. Father will quietly put the matter in the hands of the police. We will then tie the white string on the gatepost, and when this wretch enters the library window he will find himself in the arms of our officers, and we will not only have the letters, but the man."

Miss Renwick's eyes flashed upon wisdom and sound common sense, yet to the frightened Miss Imogene it was the worst possible thing to do. She felt certain that if caught the man would put his threat into execution and expose the copies of her letters to the eager gaze of society. To prevent such a happening she would gladly pay five times the sum demanded. Therefore she decided hysterically that Harriet's plan was out of the question.

"Oh, Harriet, dear," she wailed, "you don't know how silly my letters were, and I'd go through anything to get them back again. Why, the pet names I called that creature—good gracious, Harriet—they were positively mushy!"

"What did you call him?" asked Miss Renwick, humorously interested in this phase of the romance.

"'Boddy-poddykins' was one," confessed the debutante, with a vivid blush. "Then there were a whole lot more like that and worse—really, darling, I'd rather die than let even to you. I should be of shame if Mr. Van der Awe or Lord Croylard or any one knew."

Miss Renwick smiled, while the indiscreet Juliet went on tiring her handkerchief into hard, wet knots.

"I've just got to see him, Harriet. I know I shall be just scared to death; but no matter what you say, I'll not allow you to tell a single solitary soul, and if I'm found dead on the library floor in the morning nobody will care anyway—so there!"

The sufferer's state now became so alarming that her friend was forced to suggest another plan. It was against her better judgment, but something had to be done at once, for otherwise Miss Imogene would never be in a condition to act the part of the bird in the play that evening.

"Imogene," she said sternly, "stop crying this instant and listen to me. I believe you will do a very wrong thing in seeing Mr. Fitzgeorge in the middle of the night, but of course I have no right to interfere against your wishes. I am older than you, and I tell you candidly I don't like it. How much money have you with you?"

"Fifty dollars, and I'll give him jewelry enough to make up the balance."

"That won't be necessary. I'll lend you whatever you need, and if you still insist upon seeing the man I will go down with you."

their screams would quickly summon aid. The more Miss Imogene thought of it the more excited she became, declaring finally that she would gladly pay $100—which somebody else had earned for her, by the way—just for the fun of the thing. She felt now that she had exaggerated the possibility of danger, as the wretched, disgraceful man was after money only and would go away instantly he had received it.

"You see," she explained, "he shows his intentions are not bad by his very letter. If he had asked me to meet him outside in the dark somewhere I shouldn't have dared, but coming here into the library where we can call for assistance, surely that he means no harm."

"But suppose he should not come alone?" suggested Miss Harriet. "But he will," the other continued. "Besides, you and I will stand in the door on the opposite side of the room, and the moment we see two men instead of one, why, then, dear, we'll just begin to scream 'Fire' or something like that, and then we can say we heard a noise and came down. Oh, Harriet, precious, do go and find a piece of white string!"

Miss Renwick was not convinced. She did not lack courage for a woman, nor had she any actual fear of this man, who was clearly an ordinary petty blackmailer who tried to make profit out of an innocent schoolgirl's foolish correspondence. She could not imagine any other motive for his coming, inasmuch as the library window would be opened by an inmate of the house and closed and locked again immediately after his departure. Yes, clearly it was blackmail, and if Imogene had her letters returned intact perhaps it was the easiest solution after all.

"What sort of a looking person is this Mr.—'Boddy-poddykins'?" she asked, with a smile.

"Now, please do not call him that," begged Miss Imogene. "It makes me feel like such a silly. Side face he is very handsome, you know, but full face—well, there is something the matter with one of his eyes."

"How do you mean?" she answered doubtfully. "He is looking at you all the time, you understand, but his eye seems to be pointing somewhere else. I think they call it a cast."

"Oh," said Miss Renwick. "Uncle Michael told me never to trust a person with a cast in his eye!"

"Did he?" asked the debutante. "I wonder why. Oh, well, I'll never trust one—never again. Now, come on, precious, and let's tie the string on the gatepost!"

CHAPTER XVII. UPON this eventful Friday, which might justly be termed "black" by the various persons connected with this narrative, two more gentlemen mentioned herein had occasion to use the telegraph lines vigorously.

The first was the Hon. Mr. Frank Kinwail, member of the upper house of the Texas legislature and chairman of the state improvement committee thereof. Contrary to Mr. Renwick's positive statement, the distinguished legislator had not gone back to Australia. Instead he had quietly stopped over in Washington, held close communication with several mighty officials, then wired frantically to his most trusted lieutenant, the vice chairman of the state improvement committee at Austin, in a cipher code. These communications were imperative orders concerning the passage of a certain deep water harbor bill.

The Hon. Mr. Kinwail while in New York had held several conferences of a delicate nature, including that "lunch" at Sherry's and other meals of a similar character elsewhere, and now deemed it expedient to be far away from the capital of Texas during the passage of the said harbor bill; therefore he gave the matter absent treatment, so to speak, though his meek associates on the committee carried out their leader's instructions to the letter. They had enjoyed no dinners in New York, but they were confident in a certain hope of at least partaking of the dessert vicariously through Mr. Kinwail.

The other person interested in telegraphy was the heavy hearted Mr. Bill Williams, himself en route for New York. Half a day before he reached Buffalo he received a dispatch from his son Richard, and for a quarter of an hour he was radiantly happy; then he received a second one couched in the same words, and it puzzled him, especially in the earnest warning to return to Texas at once and watch his harbor scheme. At Buffalo he received a sheet of yellow envelopes which resembled a fine poker hand, in that there were four of them—all of the same kind.

In highly ornate language the cattle king expressed his belief that a trick was being played on him by his enemies, so he left the train and sought the nearest telegraph office. His friend, Mr. Luger, had failed to state the name of the hospital in which the son lay dying, and Mr. Bill Williams had not seen in the San Antonio papers the dispatch about his son, so the father wired all the hospitals in New York for information and lost three hours' time in waiting for answers. He received a number of replies from various institutions, eight of which disclaimed all knowledge of the patient. The ninth advised him that Mr. Richard Williams of San Antonio, Tex., was truly confined in St. Luke's hospital and that his condition was not so favorable, owing to an increase of fever. Bill Williams was convinced some crafty trick was being hatched, but he hoped later on to settle with the hen. Meanwhile, whatever happened, he must go to his boy. He sent one more telegram and then hastened on to New York by the next train.

This telegram, addressed to Mr. Richard Williams, was received at St. Luke's hospital, and a pretty, fresh checked nurse took it to Lord Croylard's room.

"A telegram, Mr. Williams. Shall I open it for you?"

"Please," said the earl, with the listless indifference of a very sick man. "I dare say it is some beastly business matter. Read it."

The girl complied, reading as follows: Buffalo, N. Y. Mr. Richard Williams, St. Luke's Hospital, New York. Cheer up, Dickie. Will be with you tomorrow morning. DAD.

Lord Croylard stared at the unfamiliar young lady while he fumbled fruitlessly for his monocle among the folds of his nightshirt.

"Rot!" he observed in languid disgust. "Haven't got a dad, you know. Some silly ass is trying to come a cropper."

The nobleman then turned on his pillow and closed his eyes, while the fair attendant looked thoughtful, took the patient's temperature and made a memorandum—the effect that his mind had begun to wander.

Meanwhile matters at Irvington were dragging along unsatisfactorily. The last rehearsal of the play had resulted in a spirited quarrel between Miss Imogene and her dismal fiancé, Mr. Van der Awe was a champion of realism, even on the stage. He considered the height of absurdity for a passionate lover to imprint kisses upon his adored one's theatrical wig near the region of her left ear.

"But, good gracious me!" stormed the indignant bird, with a dangerous snap in her big blue eyes, "don't you have enough realism when we are alone? If you think I'm going to let you kiss me before all those people you are very much mistaken. Now, one more word and we'll leave out that part altogether, sir! No, don't speak to me! Don't come near me! I think you are perfectly hateful and I think I'm more than I can understand. So don't tempt me!"

The argument had become somewhat one sided, so the dismal one retreated from the field of action, crestfallen, but unconvinced on matters pertaining to realism. He was a practical young man, however, and decided to kiss the wig in the region of its wearer's left ear for the present. Later—ah!

Richard had made several desperate attempts at a tete-a-tete with Miss Harriet, but found her nervous, distrustful and unsympathetic to his advances. She acted as though some shadow of impending trouble lay upon her mind, so the Texan gave up in despair, took a short lesson in British etiquette from the much subdued Bills and then went for a solitary horseback ride.

His deception could not be kept up much longer, for troubles were gathering above him like Longfellow's soaring vultures, and he fancied he knew one sick and wounded to pieces, that would shortly be pecked to bits, hoof and hide. And yet, no matter what happened, he would brazen it out to the bitter end. If he could only win the girl before the inevitable crash, then nothing else would matter—nothing!

Shortly after dinner the final preparations were made for the evening's entertainment. A tiny stage had been constructed at one end of the double drawing room and was provided with handsome plush curtains designed to slide upon a wire—when they worked properly, which was infrequent—which when opened revealed a dainty interior scene. The drawing room was arranged with chairs to accommodate the guests, who began to arrive shortly after dinner, and Restmore soon became a sparkle of lights and laughter. A gong announced the opening of the theater doors, and the audience crowded in, took their seats and waited with a flutter of excitement.

MINARD'S LINIMENT RELIEVES NEURALGIA.

Shying in Horses

Young horses which are being, or have just been, broken in are very generally apt to shy more or less at various objects and sights until they have become thoroughly familiar with and used to the road or street. Nor is it in any way surprising that they should shy more or less frequently in these circumstances, seeing that they are unfamiliar with many things they meet. Such natural nervousness gradually but quickly wears off, as a rule, and the shying ceases. No importance need, therefore be attached to this form of shying in a young horse, as it is but natural and quite temporary in character only.

There is, however, a right and a wrong way of treating this kind of shying. The right way is to be gentle to the young animal when it shies, to allay its nervousness by speaking to it quietly. If it will not pass an object or shows much fear of it, the young horse should be coaxed to it with patience, so that the animal may have the opportunity of familiarizing itself with it and of smelling at it. Once having done this, and being convinced that its fears are groundless, the young horse will no longer evince any fear of it, and the next time will probably take very little notice of it.

Patience and kindness are all that is needed under the conditions. Unfortunately but too frequently, the horses are punished with the whip, jolled in the mouth with the bit, and roughly spoken to, being forced past the object by sheer rough treatment, the result being that the animal's fears are much increased, that its temper is upset, and that increased trouble is experienced next time it shies at something of which it is afraid, or which is unfamiliar to it. Such treatment is eminently calculated to spoil the young animal, being apt either to cow it or to rouse its temper and obstinacy. In some cases young horses actually become confirmed bad shyers in consequence of such wrong and senseless treatment.

A TRIUMPH OF CIVIC REFORM

Montreal is to be very cordially congratulated on the election which took place at her limits last Monday. A most corrupt civic administration was swept away. The number of Aldermen is to be reduced by one-half. A Board of Control will be elected. Great satisfaction is expressed by the better class of citizens. For years past corruption prevailed in every department under the control of the Aldermen. Montreal has not had as wholesome a shaking up for the past fifty years. It is gratifying to find that French as well as English and Irish voted for the change, and Protestants and Catholics stood side by side. It was a genuine "smashing of Tammany." Presbyterian Witness, Sept. 25.

CURE THAT OBSTINATE SORE

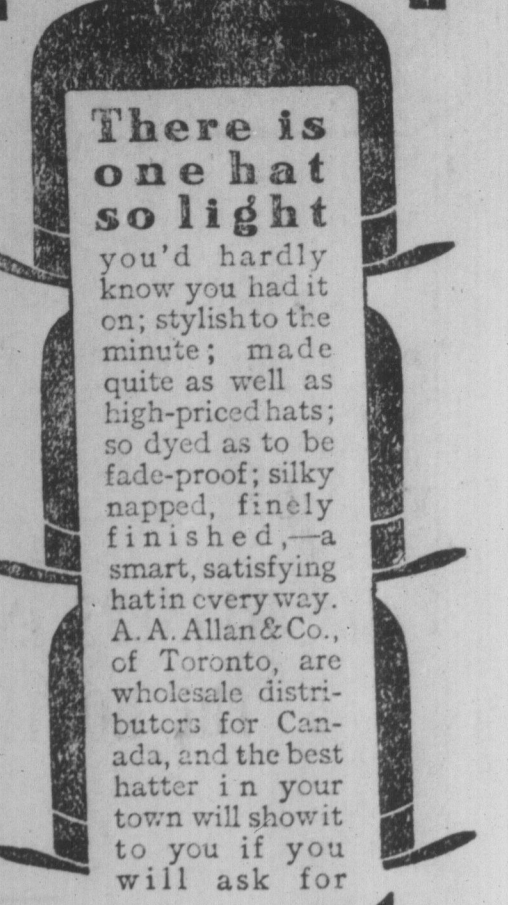

Where Ordinary Salves fail Zam-Buk Succeeds.

Chronic sores which cause trouble by "breaking open," may be cured by Zam-Buk, as well as recent injuries and diseases, if you suffer from some old sore—hidden, perhaps, but none the less painful for that—don't dally, apply Nature's healing essences as provided in Zam-Buk. Mrs. I. E. Ash-ton, of 111, Vickers St., Fort William, tells how valuable Zam-Buk is as a family balm. She says: "We first used Zam-Buk for cuts and bruises, etc., and found it so satisfactory that my husband started using it for a chronic sore. For a long time he had been bothered with an old sore on his leg, and had used various preparations, yet nothing had permanently cured it. He began applying Zam-Buk balm, and was very soon agreeably surprised to notice a great improvement."

"It was only a matter of a short time before Zam-Buk had thoroughly cleansed the sore of all foul matter and healing commenced. It is now some months since the sore was completely closed, and there is no likelihood of its breaking out again."

"Since then my baby, eighteen months old, has been cured of eczema on the scalp by Zam-Buk. This eczema came in red pimples, and it rubbed or scratched, formed it into sores. The child was very fretful from the irritation of the scalp, but whenever Zam-Buk was applied it seemed to bring the greatest relief. Frequent applications were effective in clearing all traces of the disease from the baby's scalp in a short space of time. I feel it my duty to give the credit where due, and I cheerfully recommend Zam-Buk to all sufferers from chronic sores, bad leg or eczema."

Zam-Buk is Nature's own healing balm, being composed of pure herbal essences. It is a sure cure for burns, ringworm, ulcers, cuts, burns, bruised sores, chronic wounds, bad leg, piles, festering sores, chapped hands, cold-sores, frost-bite, and all skin injuries and diseases. Drugists and stores everywhere sell at 50c. a box or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto; 3 boxes $1.25. You are warned against harmful imitations represented to be "just as good"

ONE TOUCH LACKING.

When the Bell telephone had been completed and perfected the inventor did not know for a certainty for several years that he had won the success for which he had so long striven. But he had constructed an instrument which would receive and transmit the sound of the human voice and there it lay before his eyes and within his grasp, lacking just one very slight touch of the hand!

All that was required was to turn a screw in a certain direction a few times and the triumph would be known. But the inventor turned the screw in the opposite direction, and several years elapsed before he found out just how to administer that final touch which would disclose perfection.

Like one who was groping in the dark the inventor worked on until he got at last touched the right spot. The Bell Co., Toronto; 3 boxes $1.25. You are warned against harmful imitations represented to be "just as good"

Recommended As An Ideal Remedy

W. S. BOND, Esq.

Lloydton, Ont., March 10th, 1909.
 "For some years I have been greatly troubled with headaches and indigestion, brought on by stomach disorders, constipation and biliousness. I had tried many remedies with only indifferent success, until 'Fruit-a-tives' came to my notice. Being a general store-keeper, I was selling a good many 'Fruit-a-tives' to my customers and, remarking how pleased they were with the results obtained from using 'Fruit-a-tives,' I decided to try them and, I might say, the effects were almost magical. Headaches and biliousness disappeared and to-day I recommend 'Fruit-a-tives' to my customers as 'An ideal remedy.'
 "I might also add that about three years ago I was laid up with LUMBAGO AND SCIATICA—couldn't get out of bed or lift one foot over the other. A good treatment of 'Fruit-a-tives' cured me of these pains and banished the Sciatica and Lumbago so that to-day I am as well as ever and can lift anything necessary."

The Disposal of Household Waste

ly supplied by the atmosphere. This, of course, means more trouble than is taken now, but how many things we do now at a cost of time and labor that we would gladly abandon if we dared. The method of disposal recommended would improve the appearance of many an untidy and menacing back yard not only in the country but in the city as well. No foul or offensive smell or odor should be permitted to exist in connection with the disposal of household waste. Sanitary engineers consider that an unsavoury smell is generally the first evidence of something wrong and that traced to its source the evil is nalf cured. We do not realize the danger nor do we readily accept the dictum of scientific men that flies are the direct evidence when not forced upon us.
 The permanent officials of each municipality should know what is wrong in important sanitary matters which affect the very life of those who employ them. Where there are not permanent officials the municipal council should take the matter in hand.

THE PEOPLE MUST BE EDUCATED.

We owe it not only to ourselves but to our neighbors to give them the benefit of any special experience. Knowledge or education we have in such matters. Many a family is walking deliberately in serious danger depending on eyes which look but do not see. A short pamphlet in simple language distributed by a municipal council may be revelation to an ignorant housekeeper and may be the means of saving many lives. Municipal authorities who neglect that part of their duty relating to public health are taking a serious risk. It is their duty and privilege to educate, encourage, compel and make regulations for the general good.

The health officers of the province who are doing a great work need the council always at their back. Better provision is needed for teaching boys and girls at school the simple, sanitary measures advocated here. When one knows the why and the wherefore it is much easier to remember and to apply. At the school age the mind is more retentive. Even if they do not teach their parents they will soon be the householders themselves. Undoubtedly the time will soon arrive when every house and premises in the province will be inspected frequently by a competent official in the interest of public safety, for in matters concerning health it is no unusual experience to find that the people must be protected against themselves.

EASILY COAXED.

The new school-teacher had a talk with Mrs. Hobart one day in regard to discipline. "I don't see how you manage Bobby as well as you do," said the teacher. "I like him, but he's such a mischievous little fellow, and he will not mind, yet every one says he minds you. I wish you'd explain it to me."
 "Well," said Mrs. Hobart doubtfully. "I'd just as soon tell you, but I'm afraid it won't help you much. You see, I kind of coax him."
 "Coax him!" echoed the teacher.
 "Yes," said Mrs. Hobart. "that's what I do. I say to him, 'Now, come, Bobby, wouldn't you rather be mother's good boy and have griddle-cakes and sirup for supper and play games till eight o'clock than have just plain bread and milk that's been through the separator and go to bed right after it, with the curtains drawn so you can't see the stars?'"
 "I can most always coax him that way."
 "Once in a while, if he's real set to be naughty, I'll say, 'See here, Bobby, which'd you rather have—mother fry you some doughnuts or cut a little willow switch, not so very little, either?'"
 "I can coax him that way sure if the other fails."—Youth's Companion

RAILWAY YARNS

This story told by a commercial traveller after a trip through Southern Canada: "Being impatient to get out of a sleepy little town, I hurried to the station. After a while an object slowly emerged from a distance and slunk up alongside. I boarded the solitary coach and, after a tedious wait the engine began to gasp feebly, the old coach creaked a little, but the train did not move. I was about to get out to see what was the matter when the forward door of the coach was suddenly flung open and a head popped in. 'Hey, you,' said the engineer, leaning at me, 'climb off till I get a start, will ye?'"
 The man with the glassy eye and preternaturally solemn demeanor put down a coin at the ticket office and demanded a ticket. "What station?" snapped the agent. The would-be traveller steadied himself. "What stations have you?" he asked, with quiet dignity.

EMPTY GALLANTRY.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, in a recent address advised young women never to marry men who did not believe in universal suffrage.
 Mrs. Belmont, in a later amplification of this advice, said:
 "Choose a husband as you would choose a friend. It isn't gallantry you want—it is sympathy and appreciation. These gallant men are very seldom appreciative; they are very seldom, indeed, of much account. Their gallantry, as a rule, takes the silly, empty form of Mr. Buggins."
 "Mr. Buggins came home from the club one night in his usual condition and Mrs. Buggins said to him:
 "'William, I'm ashamed of you!'
 "Mr. Buggins gallantly answered, as he tried to light a fresh cigar from the stub of his old one:
 "'Better my wife—hic—should be shamed of me than I should be—hic—shamed of my wife.'"
 HONEST JOB

In the south a few years ago there was a shiftless colored boy named Ransom Blake, who, after being caught in a number of petty delinquencies, was at last sentenced to a short term in the penitentiary, where he was sent to learn a trade. On the day of his return home he met a friendly white acquaintance, who asked:
 "Well, what did they put you at in the prison, Rans?"
 "Dey started in to make an honest boy out'n me, sah."
 "That's good Rans, and I hope they succeeded."
 "Dey did, sah."
 "And how did they teach you to be honest?"
 "Dey done put me in the shoe-shop, sah, nailin' pasteboard onto shoes to leather soles, sah."

INTRODUCING THEM

Kirsty McDougall, who lived in a remote Highland parish, had a visit from her Edinburg nieces, who were to spend a week or two with the old lady. She determined to show them on Sunday at the ancient village of Lochaber. The young ladies wore costumes of the purest snowy hue. At the point of his sermon the

The Work Horse

There is no study in horseflesh more profitable, and no experience more useful, than the knowledge of how to handle, manage, and care for the every-day working horse. The man who trains the fast trotter, or who looks wise as he tells you a lot of non-sensical lore about the capabilities of some galloper on the big race tracks, has not got as sure a thing as the man who knows how to get the most in labor out of the work horse, while taking the least of vitality and condition out of him at the same time.

Here are two cases. One farmer drives his horses hard while at work, whips them from morning till noon, and from noon until night, on mower harvester, plow or cultivator, and at night throws them some food, after allowing them all the water they will drink, and then leaves them until he needs them again. This man needs a lot of horse power to till his farm well, if indeed he does so. His horses look worse after he has worked them for a while. When winter time comes, if he wishes to sell some of them, he has either to take a lower price, or else expend a lot of feed to get them into condition. Such a man cannot get them to look any better so long as he drives them. He must therefore stand them in the stable in idleness until they are fat enough to sell. Another farmer works his horses slowly and carefully. He never excites them more than is necessary in the accomplishment of their labor. He does not need to drive them fast; all machines made for agricultural purposes now-a-days will get a full day's work out of a team without doing that. A six foot mower and a seven-foot binder with other implements in proportion, do not need to be hurried across a field in order to get a full day's work done in a day. Often during the day, if he should wish for a rest himself, he is assured that his horses are resting, too, for he will try and let them have a mouthful of water, will go and pull the collar back from the shoulders, and is more apt to pat their necks than to kick their ribs.

They are worked carefully, and well fed and tended. Even in the hardest work such a team will lose little or nothing in condition, and in the times of lighter work will readily fatten up. They are ready for the buyer to come along any time, and they look well enough to get the money.
 There is about one hundred pounds of difference in the sizes to which the two systems of treatment will arrive under the two systems of treatment, and there is at least one hundred more between the conditions in which they will probably be found. The Clydesdale or Shire-bred colt, which is never hurried or made to trot with its loads will grow faster and continue to grow longer than if chased around at the faster gait. He will also be a faster walker, and will go at his work in a more contented manner if never unduly excited. On the other hand, as he has never been asked to do more than he is well able to do, there is in his manner a greater measure of quiet eagerness, which does not waste energy, but only makes it more available for the work of the farm.

 AN EASY SOLUTION

In one of Boston's primary schools the other day the head master of the district presented a problem for the scholars that would require the use of fractions. He expected the answer "I don't know." The problem: "If I had eight potatoes, how could I divide them among nine boys?" One bright looking youngster raised his hand. "Well," said the master. "Mash them," promptly replied the young mathematician.

"The mon ca'd me a leari!" snorted an irate Scotchman to a friend. "And ye didn't knock him down!" retorted the other.
 "Nae, nae, mon! The warst of it was that he proved it!"

 "It isn't that, but I don't want the neighbors to think I'm a wife-beater."

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 20th, 1909.

—Canada will make her formal Thanksgiving for the blessings of harvest on Monday next. Among the nations none has more cause for gratitude than our own. Where is there a country more blest than Canada? Rich in natural resources, rich in harvest, in forests, in minerals, in fisheries, in fertility of soil and salubrity of climate, rich in men of brains and honor, rich in all that counts for progress in a young and growing nation, surely she should raise a universal voice of praise and thanksgiving.

A departure has been made in choosing Monday as the date of Thanksgiving. This will be generally approved. Some objection is made that clergymen will find it wearysome to have the day following Sunday and that it will be more difficult to get a church congregation.

This question is disposed of by a writer in the Presbyterian Witness in what we consider an admirable suggestion as follows:—

"We celebrate Easter as a day

"In reference to your recent article on Thanksgiving Day, would it not be the better way for the ministers and elders to arrange to have the Thanksgiving service and sermon on Sunday, and make of it a genuine, hearty, united rendering of thanks by the whole congregation.

"We celebrate Easter as a day of religious rejoicing, and we make of the day after, a day of national rejoicing. Now it would be equally appropriate for us to have a Thanksgiving Sunday with religious services, a united rendering of praise and worship to Jehovah by the congregations, followed on Monday by a day of national rejoicing.

"The reasons for this are that people are much averse to attending preaching services two days in succession. Next, we of the country, have not been trained to take our holidays under orders. Every man is a law unto himself, and if harvesting and other work should be pressing, we render our thanks from the field or shop. Again for the women of the household, Thanksgiving day means boundless work. Many women go to Thanksgiving services who should be at home, resting from strenuous exertions. Others are unable to get there even by the most ardent effort. To how many of these a Sunday Thanksgiving sermon would be a delight."

The selection of Monday makes the holiday more convenient for family reunions, without which no Thanksgiving is quite complete as an institution. The general observance of the day would be greatly facilitated by following the suggestion given herewith.

—Our Port Lorne reporter takes a humorous view of our protest regarding scarcity of butter and eggs. A sense of humor is an effective offset to disappointment but usually something more than a humorous view of the situation appeals to the consumer who may have to sit down to a butterless and eggless breakfast table. Unfortunately the condition of affairs this season is not exceptional. Good butter and fresh eggs are not luxuries but necessities and if the Valley farmer would give his hens and cows the same attention he gives his apple trees he would supply a demand in the market stronger than the demand for fruit which may in a sense be considered a luxury, while dairying and poultry raising as profitable pursuits hold their own with orcharding if, as we suggested, the same degree of scientific knowledge is applied.

One reason why Carpenter-Morton Roofing is getting so popular is because it is so easy to put on and wears after it is on. You don't have to keep fussing with it. It does not break through like a lot of cheaper roofings on the market. Once it is put on, it stays on, and it lasts and wears. N. E. Chute local agent.

BALTZER—McNAYR

A very pretty wedding took place on the 18th at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Whitfield McNayr, Lawrence town, when their daughter, M. Verna was united in marriage to Mr. Orlando H. Baltzer. A large number of friends were present to witness the ceremony which was impressively performed by Rev. H. G. Mellick, pastor of the Baptist church in Lawrence town. Following the ceremony a bountiful luncheon was served after which the happy young couple drove to their home at Port George, followed by the good wishes of their many friends. The bride received a large number of nice presents; tokens of the high esteem in which she is held.

The usual union Thanksgiving service will be held in the Methodist church on the 25th at 11 a. m. The usual custom of a stated service and sermon will be departed from.

There is talk of opening a large open-air skating rink this winter. Mr. A. R. Bishop, we are informed, will also re-open his skating rink which was so popular last winter. Mr. Bishop should be asked to combine and manage the larger rink, as his experience last year would be of value.

Fire drill was held in the school house on Monday afternoon and a trial made of the fire escape. The second story was emptied in six minutes. The house occupied by Lawson Gilliett, at Granville Ferry was burnt down on Tuesday morning of last week, the family narrowly escaping in their night clothes.

The New Glasgow Enterprise says: Wm. Hugh McKenzie, of Bridgetown, Annapolis Co., a former Pictou Co. man, sent this week to the Aberdeen Hospital, a fine barrel of No. 1 Gravenstein apples.

Less promising reports regarding apple sales, have been received. The Shenandoah arrived in London with gravensteins in very bad condition. A local dealer reports sales at six to ten shillings a barrel. The Durango's cargo to Liverpool was also in bad condition.

Sunday Schools of the Church of England, the world over, celebrated Children's Day last Sunday. The day was fittingly observed in St. James' church by a children's service with appropriate address by the pastor, in which the children heartily participated. At the evening service the sermon took the form of an address to parents.

A young man going over the river about eleven o'clock last Saturday night, after doing some shopping in town, was rather unpleasantly accosted in the total darkness near J. H. Hicks & Son's furniture store, by two men who demanded money. The young man replied "I have no money. You're mistaken in your man," and they let him pass. Query: Was it a joke?

Crew of Theresa Wolf Rescued in the Nick of Time

Portland, Me., Oct. 17.—After working at the pumps for 18 hours the captain, mate and four seamen of the three-masted schooner Theresa Wolf, light from New York to St. John, were taken from their sinking vessel by the crews of the Popham Beach life saving station, early this morning.

The Wolf sprang a leak at midnight last night. The crew worked desperately, pumping all night. This morning they were about to launch their only boat when the spanker boom fell and crushed it. A signal of distress was hoisted to the mainmast top.

Although the vessel was 15 miles at sea, Capt. Anson Oliver, who was sitting on the piazza of the Hotel Rockledge, saw it with his glasses and notified the life-savers. Capt. Spinney and his crew with their boat in tow of the tug Seguin, which luckily was coaled up, put to sea. Those rescued are Capt. Joseph Smith, Mate Harry Owen, Seamen Frank Gomez, Peter Jackson, Neils Anderson and Michael Smart.

D. A. R. HELD ITS ANNUAL MEETING

London, Oct. 9.—The annual meeting of the Dominion Atlantic Railway Company was held yesterday, Friday, October 8th. President Ronald was in the chair; with him were his colleagues, Vice President Denny, and General Manager Giffins.

Several resolutions were passed unanimously, and the steady progress of the company was warmly appreciated. President Ronald referred to the widespread depression caused by the disturbance of business in the United States since the fall of 1907. He trusted tourist business would now show a much larger development. Vice President Denny spoke of his satisfaction with the management and of the condition of the property, regarding which he had personally convinced himself by a close study of the business on the spot. General Manager Giffins thanked the proprietors for their cordial vote of thanks to his brother officers and himself.

Granville Ferry

Some fifty folk of the Baptist church and congregation assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Parr on Saturday evening last, 16th, and held a reception for their newly inducted pastor, Rev. G. P. Raymond. Mrs. Stella Eaton, of Granville Centre, presided at the organ while a number of Gospel Hymns were sung. Ice cream, pie and cake were served during the evening. Pastor Raymond in a few well-chosen remarks expressed his thanks for the kind and friendly manner in which the people received him and hoped this bond of friendship may grow stronger between pastor and people.

Mr. Lawson Gilliett who lost all his household effects and clothing by fire recently, through the kindness of his many friends has been enabled to start housekeeping again under fairly comfortable circumstances. Mr. and Mrs. Gilliett are very grateful for the liberal aid given them by the people and feel that mere thanks expresses their gratefulness in a very small way.

SAVING OF PROPERTY.

It may seem late in the world's history to speak a word in praise of slavery, but even that hideous institution had one good feature that has been lost sight of in the march of liberty and progress. Under slavery human beings were property, and if slavery had continued it is undoubtedly that many of the problems that still await solution would have been solved long ago. Because hogs, sheep horses and cows are property, the care of their health has become the subject of much excellent legislation. Destructive diseases are stamped out promptly, sanitary conditions of living are made compulsory, and the condition of animals is rapidly becoming all it should be. If human beings were still enslaved they would have profited equally with animals in the advance of science. Meetings of slave-owners would now be considered papers on such questions as "The Prevention of Croup in Children," and "The Best Treatment for Stone Bruises," because such scourges as tuberculosis would have been stamped out on account of their destructiveness to property.

WHY NOT BE FRIENDS WITH OUR NEIGHBORS?

Why should not Canadians be as proud of the United States as of their own country? Why amplify? Why show that the Anglo-Saxon civilization is a common heritage—that their great names, Washington, Franklin, Hamilton, Jefferson, Webster and Lincoln are products of the same soil, the same skies and the same institutions that produced Chaucer, Ben Johnson, Shakespeare and Milton, who belong as much to them as to us?

If the world is ever to grow bigger and greater, it will not be aided by shouting out "foreigner," "treason," "sedition," and other childish epithets, but by knitting closer together all the branches of the Anglo-Saxon family, including that country that holds the ancient home of the race, Normandy and Britany, and making them one people, forgetting the mistakes, the narrow selfishness and jealousy of the past, and moving forward with the solidarity of one man in the path of good will and progress.

White linen coat suits will have collar and cuffs and belt and tie of chamolais skin or of bright green leather.

A long coat such as the one illustrated is an absolute necessity for the woman who is going to travel about much this summer. It can be made of pongee or similar material or from linen and lightweight cloth. As seen in the cut the coat is of pongee trimmed with collar, cuffs and pocket laps of black satin. If full length is not desired it can be cut off three-quarter style, although the long coat is more graceful and becoming and serves a greater number of purposes.

THE DISPOSAL OF HOUSEHOLD WASTE

The following paper on "The Disposal of Household Waste" was read by City Engineer Doane at a meeting of the Union of Nova Scotia Municipalities held in Halifax:

In the large city the disposal of household waste is under the constant supervision of expert sanitary officials and trained inspectors, yet it is not in the country alone that better provision is necessary for the protection of the general health of the community. Where there is a good sewer system and a modern method of garbage disposal it might be expected that the sanitary conditions would be almost perfect. Nevertheless, in the country, town and city modern scientific progress has compelled us to realize that danger lurks in what heretofore was considered perfectly safe.

Self-preservation is the first law of nature and the maintenance of perfect state of health is absolutely necessary for safety. While a man may not be "his brother's keeper," his safety depends not only on the sanitary condition of his own premises, but on that of his neighbor. The control of such matters is in the governing body or municipal council, and no council in country, town or city is doing its duty which does not use to its utmost limit the power placed in its hands to prevent one man from taking the life of another. Such language applied to the subject under discussion may seem more forcible than justifiable, but when we are compelled by scientific research and experiment to believe that flies and mosquitoes can and do carry and spread the most dangerous diseases, municipal authorities must awake to a realization of their grave responsibilities.

Constant improvements are being effected so that a great deal that found favor some few years ago would not be tolerated for a moment now that further light has been let in on the subject.

CRUSADE AGAINST THE HOUSE FLY

The United States department of agriculture has started a crusade against the common house fly and is carrying on extensive experiments to determine the best way of banishing it from the abode of man. The fly has been found to be not only a nuisance, but a menace to man's health. Its hairy body carries both disease and death. Many epidemics which sweep over communities in the hot season have been traced to the fly. It lays its eggs in filth and breeds there: it brings into the house the bacteria which spread in filth. As it moves about now crawling over putrid matter, now over the butter, sugar and other food, again falling into the milk, cream, molasses or soup, flying from the lips of the sick to the lips of the healthy, it is said to be more dangerous to modern society than were the wild beasts to primitive man.

The high mortality among the children in the congested districts of closely crowded together, where about a city or town where families are huddled together, where food is often kept in living rooms, is due to a large degree, so scientists now say, to the fly. Infant diseases chiefly prevail in the hot season when the flies abound. Dr. J. T. C. Nash, in the Journal of the Royal Sanitary Institute, giving his experience as an English health officer, says that the fly is responsible for the death of many children because of polluting the milk which they drink.

"It is a matter that has been entirely overlooked," said another eminent doctor recently, "but we now know that the common house fly is an agent of importance in carrying the germs of typhoid fever. It was formerly believed that the germs were only carried in water, milk or other liquid food. Flies both breed and feed in places where the germs are to be found, and flying into our house, no doubt often carry the germ and deposit them on our food."

DISEASES CAN BE TRANSMITTED BY THIS

There is also evidence that cholera and plague, and tuberculosis can be transmitted by flies. Yellow fever has been stamped out by preventing the access of mosquitoes and its breeding places.

The causes of zymotic disease are external to the human body, and each type is found to possess its own specific germ from which it is generated and which must be introduced into the human system in order to produce the disease. These germs appear to be world-wide in their range though certain descriptions more particularly affect certain localities, and only await favorable conditions of environment to develop their latent dangerous character.

There are three channels by which such poison can be introduced into the body, viz.: by air, water or food. It is, therefore, very necessary to guard all three from any possibility of contamination, notwithstanding the fact that a variable amount of such poison may be and often is taken with impunity. This is due to the provision of nature which enables the human body to protect itself to some extent from the deleterious matter thus introduced, to throw it off from the system by those channels provided for the secretion and waste products, and if unsuccessful in so doing it is due either to the existence of conditions in the body itself which defeat this action, or to the virulence of the poison to be combated.

Very great strides have been made of recent years in sanitary science due to the fact that serious outbreaks of zymotic disease at various times have necessitated careful investigation, the cause, as a rule, being traced to inattention to sanitary principles, involving defects either in the system of waste disposal adopted or in the apparatus employed.

WASTE THROWN OUT TO CARE FOR ITSELF.

Household waste as disposed of at suburban or detached houses, or where there is no system of sewerage or similar method of disposal creates the most favorable breeding places for flies and mosquitoes.

Household waste includes ashes, excremental matter, peelings, bones, fat, grease, scraps, heads, tails and entrails of fish, fowl and game, bed-room and kitchen slops, paper, cans, bottles, rags, sweepings, boots, rubbers, etc. While some provision is generally made for the disposal of excremental matter, all the other is thrown on the ground to take care of itself, with the natural result—putrefaction and ideal breeding homes for flies and mosquitoes.

Mosquitoes breed in stagnant water in pools, ponds or elsewhere. Every can and bottle thrown out which will hold water, is, after the first rain-storm, if other conditions are favorable, the possible home of a colony of embryo mosquitoes. Ashes or road earth should be used to fill up hollows in which pools of water lie and the cans and bottles should be buried where the bacteria in the soil can purify them before they can cause any damage.

Where there is no sewer system and aseptic tank or filtration system is beyond the financial reach of the householder, a more economical method of disposal of excremental matter must be adopted. The solid excrements may be taken care of by constructing either an earth or an ash closet. In the application of the dry earth system sufficient dried earth garden loam or sometimes coal or wood ashes are mixed to absorb foulness, keep down odor and prevent putrefaction. Such earth closets work quite satisfactorily with very little attention. If placed out of doors the earth closet need not be far from the house if properly constructed. It should be located, however, where it will be impossible to pollute the water of any well. The outer structure should be strong and substantial with a good roof to protect it against rain or dampness. It should be well lighted, well ventilated, not too much exposed to the rays of the sun, and it is better to have it screened from view and from prevailing winds. It should be kept in perfect repair and, more important than all other requirements, flies should be kept out of it. To insure this where there are children there should be a spring on the door. In no case should the accumulated deposit be left uncovered or exposed, containing as it frequently does, the germs of dangerous diseases. While the foregoing necessary requirements are not observed as a rule, no very expensive change would have to be made at the average detached house in order to comply with such regulations.

THE HOME

TIPS OF FASHION

Coque feathers are to be very popular. Satin and silk hats are to be worn again. Large jet buttons will be used on coats. The shepherdess shape hat is going to be worn. Younger girls still cling to the Windsor hat. Crocheted buttons are more in the style than ever. Black satin revers and cuffs are to remain in style. The all-black hat still retains much of its popularity. Zibeline, serge and the chevrons are popular for coats. The military cape is much used for driving and motoring. Bronze slippers are quite stylish for evening housewear. The so popular empire green has found its way into footwear. Nothing masculine is now fashionable in the feminine outfit. Toques and turbans are to be worn by young and old this fall. Rather new are the sailor collars on long separate coats. There has been some abatement in the use of buttons on dresses. There is an ever-increasing tendency toward the skirt that is draped. Street suits are to continue much as they have been in general design. As regards material and colors in the fall styles, black reigns supreme. Blouses opening at one side have started a fashion for one-sided jabots. Quills are much used to trim walking hats. They are very long and very odd. Travel hats of the lightest possible make of felt have made their appearance. Ottoman cloth—a woollen material with a slightly raised rib—is very fashionable. An interesting revival is the cross-over bolero made of silk and bordered with fringe. The crop of buckram hat shapes would indicate that the covered hat has come once more. There is an increased popularity of the skirt with the deep hip yoke, joined to a pleated flounce. Trim, high stocks are taking the place of Dutch and Eton collars in popular favor for the autumn.

NOT EVERY NURSE KNOWS

That orange juice with cracked ice can often be taken by a patient who can retain nothing else. That orange juice, being laxative, is excellent in most sick rooms; it is sometimes even prescribed for typhoid fever patients. That chocolate, though nourishing, often causes dyspepsia when digestion is weak. That the nervous patient should have eight or nine hours of sleep. That sleep will be slow in coming if the sick person is allowed to receive visitors just before bedtime or listen to exciting reading. That one should never ask a sick person, "What can I do for you?" That dainty service often counts more than quality or variety in the invalid's meals. That the nurse should never save steps when the patient's appetite is capricious. A small portion often tempts where a larger one nauseates. An extra trip to the kitchen is better than heaped-up trays. That the sick room should never be made a thoroughfare or the gathering place for the family. That, if possible, a patient should be reduced to fever degrees. That he should be induced to give up tea and coffee during convalescence. In a weakened condition they are apt to induce nervousness and sleeplessness. That having a patient hold her breath will often prevent a spasm of coughing. That toast water is a soothing and healing drink during attacks of bronchitis. That persons subject to rheumatism or weak heart should not take baths that are ice cold.

WELL KNOWN HOTEL KEEPER USES AND RECOMMENDS CHAMBERLAIN'S COLIC, CHOLERA AND DIARRHOEA REMEDY.

"I take pleasure in saying that I have kept Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in my family medicine chest for about fifteen years, and have always had satisfactory results from its use. I have administered it to a great many traveling men who were suffering from troubles for which it is recommended, and have never failed to relieve them," says J. C. Jenkins, of Glasgow, Ky. This remedy is for sale by W. A. WARREN, BRIDGETOWN, A. E. ATLEE, ANNAPOLIS ROYAL, and BEAR RIVER DRUG STORE.

ONE WOMAN'S STRIKE

As I pondered, sad and weary Once upon an evening dreary, O'er the basket with the mending from the wash the day before, As I thought of countless stitches To be placed in little breeches, Ross my heart rebellious in me, as it of had done before, At the fate that did condemn me, when my daily task was o'er, To that basket evermore, John, with not a sign of motion, Sat and read the Yankee Notion, With no thought of the commotion Which within me rankled sore, "He," thought I, "when day is ended Has no stockings to be mended; Has no babies to be tended, He can sit and read and snore: He can sit and read and rest him: Must I work thus evermore?" And my heart rebellious answered, "Nevermore, no, nevermore." For though I am but a woman, Every nerve within is human, Aching, throbbing, overworked, Mind and body sick and sore, I will strike, when day is ended, Though the stockings are not mended, Though my course can be defended, Safe behind the closet door Goes the basket with the mending, and I'll haunted be no more, In the daylight shall be crowded all the work that I will do, When the evening lamps are lighted, I will read the papers too.

TOILET NOTES

For Tired Feet.—A few drops of vinegar in the water you use for bathing the feet will give great relief. If they ache too, try a few drops of ammonia or a little borax. For cracked lips.—Honey and glycerine, mixed in equal proportions is an excellent remedy. It should be applied every night till the cracks are thoroughly healed.

A GOOD STOMACH

Means Good Health, Cheerfulness, Ambition, Persistence and Success. Mi-o-na will cure your dyspepsia or any other stomach trouble by building up the flabby walls and making the stomach so strong that it will digest food without pepsin or other artificial aid. In other words, Mi-o-na cures dyspepsia by removing the cause. S. N. Weare is the agent for Mi-o-na in Bridgetown and says to every reader of Monitor-Sentinel whose stomach is weak, who has indigestion or dyspepsia, that Mi-o-na is guaranteed to cure or money back. The price is only 50 cents a large box, and one box is all you need to prove that you are on the right road to health and happiness. Mr. Geo. Linder of Corner Mill and Park Streets, Elmira, Ont., says: "For about ten years I have been severely troubled with stomach trouble and indigestion so bad that I could not retain my food after eating. I could not eat meat, or scarcely anything, and had headaches and constipation. I secured a package of Mi-o-na with the result that now after having taken two boxes, I am entirely cured and can eat anything, digest perfectly and am feeling fine. Mi-o-na also overcame my constipation. I am only too glad to publicly endorse and recommend Mi-o-na."

GUNNING FATALITY AT SYDNEY ON SUNDAY

Sydney, Oct. 11.—A serious gun accident occurred near this city Sunday afternoon. Three young men, Harry Ritchie, Hardy Dory and Norman F. McQueen had been out parting shooting in the woods along the North Sydney road about five miles from the city. Returning, they skirted the edge of the forest with the intention of coming into the city after dark. While lying upon the ground, young Ritchie turned over upon his gun and in some unaccountable way, his toe caught the trigger and the gun was discharged, the shot entered his back and making a hole as big as a man's forearm. With the cry "I'm shot" he turned over and within fifteen minutes, was dead.

What is the best way, Mr. Retailer in which you can persuade the buying public into coming to your store for the many good things you have provided for the holiday trade? You've got to decide, you know. They're going somewhere for such things. How are you going to induce them to come to you?

The other fellow is after them—sure. What means does he employ? Can you improve on his methods? One of his weapons is newspaper space, and you cannot afford to discard that. It should be your aim, however, to make better use of it than he does. It may be likened to a firearm. One man takes the space—the raw material—and evolves a popgun, the report of which sounds loudly in his own ear because he is so close to it. Another takes a similar material and produces modern quick-acting gun that brings down the game in vast numbers at every discharge. Is yours a popgun or a Maxim?

CHILD DIED IN FATHER'S ARMS.

A Wolfville despatch says: Further details of the drowning accident of Boot Island in Minas Basin show that after the boat went they all clung for a while to the sides and Mr. Martin who was encumbered by a heavy coat started to swim towards the shore and his son followed him. The others called to him not to leave them and he turned back and asked where his wife was. Mrs. Stivers said: "Over near me." So he swam round where she was and just then the boat gave a lurch and she lost her hold and sank. Then Mr. Martin let go and also went down. The boy and girl held on some time longer, but were eventually swept away. Mr. Stivers held his little girl in his arms but before they got ashore she died. The water had gone over her so often that she was actually drowned in his arms. She was their only child, and the mother, bruised and battered in body, is almost broken hearted with grief. Three bodies have been recovered. Robert Martin, Percy Martin, his son aged 14, and Gertrude Stivers.

Who drives the horses of the sun Shall lord it but a day; Better the lowly deed were done And kept the humble way.

The rust will find the sword of fame The dust will hide the crown; Ay, none shall nail so high his name Time will not tear it down.

The happiest heart that ever beat, Was in some quiet breast, That found the common daylight sweet, And left to Heaven the rest.

Mr. E. P. Hanson, Mill Owner and Lumberman of Tusket, N. S., says, "For several winters past I have been carrying on a large lumber business in the New Brunswick woods. In making up our supplies we never forget a case of Empire Lintment. We simply cannot do without it. Our men use it constantly for colds, sprains, chaps, etc., and it never fails. In the stables our teamsters say that for colic, distempers, swellings or sprains it gives results quicker than any other remedy they have ever used. Mr. Hanson further states that he does not hesitate to say that Empire Lintment leads the Lintment world for effectiveness in making cures."
