OFFICIAL REPORT

OF THE DEBATES

OF THE

HOUSE OF COMMONS

OF THE

DOMINION OF CANADA

SECOND SESSION—TENTH PARLIAMENT

---

6 EDWARD VII., 1906

VOL. LXXIV

COMPRISING THE PERIOD FROM THE EIGHTH DAY OF MARCH TO THE TWENTY-FOURTH DAY OF APRIL, INCLUSIVE

OTTAWA

PRINTED BY S. E. DAWSON, PRINTER TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY

1906

MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

OF THE

RIGHT HONOURABLE SIR WILFRID LAURIER

P.C., G.C.M.G., K.C., D.C.L. (Oxon.)

AT THE OPENING OF THE

SECOND SESSION OF THE TENTH PARLIAMENT

1906

CABINET FORMED JULY 13, 1896

President of the Privy Council (Premier)	Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER, P.C., G.C.M.G., K.C., D.C.L. (Oxon.)
Minister of Trade and Commerce	Rt. Hon. Sir RICHARD J. CARTWRIGHT, G.C.M.G.
Secretary of State	Hon. R. W. SCOTT, K.C., LL.D.
Minister of Militia and Defence	Hon. Sir F. W. BORDEN, K.C.M.G., B.A., M.D.
Minister of Agriculture	Hon. SYDNEY A. FISHER, B.A.
Minister of Finance	Hon. W. S. FIELDING.
Minister of Customs	Hon. WM. PATERSON.
Minister of Marine and Fisheries	Hon. L. P. BRODEUR.
Minister of Railways and Canals	Hon. H. R. EMMERSON.
Minister of Inland Revenue	Hon. W. TEMPLEMAN.
Minister of Public Works	Hon. C. S. HYMAN.
Minister of the Interior	Hon. F. OLIVER.
Minister of Justice	Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH, K.C.
Postmaster General	Hon. RODOLPHE LEMIEUX, K.C., LL.B.

Clerk of the Privy Council ..... JOHN J. MCGEE.

OFFICERS OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Hon. R. F. SUTHERLAND	Speaker.
Mr. CHARLES MARCIL, M.P.	Deputy Speaker.
Mr. T. B. FLINT	Clerk of the House.
Mr. J. B. R. LAPLANTE	Assistant to the Clerk.
Lieut.-Col. HENRY ROBERT SMITH	Serjeant-at-Arms.

OFFICIAL REPORTERS.

ALBERT HORTON ..... Chief Reporter.

STEPHEN ABBOTT
E. JOSEPH DUGGAN
J. O. MARCEAU
THOS. P. OWENS
ALPHONSE DESJARDINS
A. C. CAMPBELL
GEORGE SIMPSON
R. C. DUNBAR } Reporters.

CHAS. W. BOYCE ..... Assistant to Chief Reporter.

ALPHABETICAL LIST

OF THE

MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS

SECOND SESSION, TENTH PARLIAMENT

1906

ADAMSON, A. J.—Humboldt.
ALCORN, GEORGE OSCAR—Prince Edward.
AMES, HERBERT B.—Montreal, St. Antoine.
ARCHAMBAULT, JOSEPH ELOI—Berthier.
ARMSTRONG, Joseph E.—Lambton, E.R.
AVERY, MELZAR—Frontenac.
AYLESWORTH, HON. ALLEN B.—York, Ont., N.R.

BARKER, SAMUEL—Hamilton, East.
BARR, JOHN—Dufferin.
BEAUPARLANT, AIMÉ M.—St. Hyacinthe.
BÉLAND, HENRI SÉVÉRIN—Beauce.
BELCOURT, HON. NAPOLÉON ANTOINE—Ottawa.
BENNETT, WILLIAM H.—Simcoe, E.R.
BERGERON, JOSEPH G. H.—Beauharnois.
BICKERDIKE, ROBERT—Montreal, St. Lawrence.
BLACK, JUDSON BURPEE—Hants.
BLAIN, RICHARD—Peel.
BLAND, LEONARD T.—Bruce, N.R.
BOLE, DAVID WESLEY—Winnipeg.
BORDEN, HON. SIR FREDERICK W., K.C.M.G.—King's, N.S.
BORDEN, ROBERT LAIRD—Carleton, Ont.
BOURASSA, HENRI—Labelle.
BOURBONNAIS, AUGUSTIN—Soulanges.
BOYCE, ARTHUR CYRIL—Algoma West.
BOYER, GUSTAVE—Vaudreuil.
BRABAZON, Gerald H.—Pontiac.
BRISTOL, EDMUND—Toronto, Centre.
BRODER, ANDREW—Dundas.
BRODEUR, HON. LOUIS PHILIPPE—Rouville.
BROWN, JAMES P.—Chateauguay.
BRUNEAU, ARTHUR AIMÉ—Richelieu.
BUREAU, JACQUES—Three Rivers and St. Maurice.
BURROWS, THEODORE ARTHUR—Dauphin.

CALDWELL. THOMAS BOYD—Lanark, N.R.
CALVERT, WILLIAM SAMUEL—Middlesex, W.R.
CAMPBELL, ARCHIBALD—York, Ont., C.R.
CARNEY, MICHAEL—Halifax.
CARRIERE, LOUIS A.—Lévis.
CARVELL, FRANK BROADSTREET—Carleton, N.B.
CASH, E. L.—Mackenzie.
CHISHOLM, THOMAS—Huron, E.R.
CHISHOLM, WILLIAM—Antigonish.
CHRISTIE, PETER—Ontario, S.R.
CLARE, GEORGE A.—Waterloo, S.R.
CLARKE, ALFRED H.—Essex, S.R.
CLEMENTS, HERBERT S.—Kent, W.R.
COCHRANE, EDWARD—Northumberland, Ont., E.R.
COCKSHUTT, WILLIAM F.—Brantford.
CONMEE, JAMES—Thunder Bay and Rainy River.
COPP, ALBERT J. S.—Digby.
COSTIGAN, HON. JOHN—Victoria, N.B.
CRAWFORD, JOHN—Portage la Prairie.
CROCKET, OSWALD S.—York, N.B.
CYR, JOSEPH ERNEST—Provencher.

DANIEL, JOHN WATERHOUSE—St. John (City).
DELISLE, MICHEL SIMÉON—Portneuf.
DEMERS, L. PHILIPPE—St. John and Iberville.
DERBYSHIRE, DANIEL—Brockville.
DESJARDINS, SAMUEL—Terrebonne.
DEVLIN, EMMANUEL B.—Wright.
DUBEAU, JOSEPH ADELARD—Joliette.
DUGAS, FRANÇOIS O.—Montcalm.
DYMENT, ALBERT EDWARD—Algoma East.

ELSON, PETER—Middlesex, E.R.
EMMERSON, HON. HENRY R.—Westmoreland.
ETHIER, JOSEPH ARTHUR C.—Two Mountains.

FIELDING, HON. WILLIAM STEVENS—Shelburne and Queen's, N.S.
FINLAY, JOHN—Peterborough, E.R.
FINLAYSON, DUNCAN—Richmond, N.S.
FISHER, HON. SYDNEY ARTHUR—Brome.
FITZPATRICK, HON. CHARLES—Quebec County.
FORGET, RODOLPHE—Charlevoix.
FORTIER, EDMOND—Lotbinière.
FOSTER, HON. GEORGE EULAS—Toronto, North
FOWLER, GEORGE W.—King's and Albert, N.B.

GALLIHER, WILLIAM ALFRED—Kootenay.
GANONG, GILBERT W.—Charlotte.
GAUVREAU, CHARLES ARTHUR—Témiscouata.
GEOFFRION, VICTOR—Chambly and Verchères.
GERMAN, WILLIAM MANLY—Welland.
GERVAIS, HONORÉ—Montreal, St. James.
GIRARD, JOSEPH—Chicoutimi and Saguenay.
GLADU, JOSEPH E. O.—Yamaska.
GORDON, DAVID ALEXANDER—Kent. E.R.

GRANT, GEORGE D.—Ontario, N.R.
GREENWAY, THOMAS—Lisgar.
GUNN, BENJAMIN B.—Huron, S.R.
GUTHRIE, HUGH—Wellington, S.R.

HAGGART, HON. JOHN GRAHAM—Lanark, S.R.
HALL, R. R.—Peterborough, W.R.
HARTY, WILLIAM—Kingston.
HENDERSON, DAVID—Halton.
HERRON, JOHN—Alberta.
HUGHES, JAMES J.—King's, P.E.I.
HUGHES, SAMUEL—Victoria and Haliburton.
HUNT, AYLMER BYRON—Compton.
HYMAN, HON. CHARLES S.—London.

INGRAM, ANDREW B.—Elgin, E.R.

JACKSON, SAMUEL JACOB—Selkirk.
JACKSON, WILLIAM—Elgin, W.R.
JOHNSTON, ALEXANDER—Cape Breton, South.

KEMP, ALBERT E.—Toronto, East.
KENNEDY, JAMES BUCKHAM—New Westminster.
KNOWLES, WILLIAM ERSKINE—Assiniboia, West.

LACHANCE, ARTHUR—Quebec Centre.
LAKE, RICHARD STUART—Qu'Appelle.
LALOR, FRANCIS RAMSAY—Haldimand.
LANCASTER, EDWARD A.—Lincoln and Niagara.
LANCTÔT, ROCH—Laprairie-Napierville.
LAPOINTE, ERNEST—Kamouraska.
LAURENCE, FREDERICK A.—Colchester.
LAURIER, R. CHARLEMAGNE—L'Assomption.
LAURIER, RT. HON. SIR WILFRID, G.C.M.G.—Quebec, East.
LAVERGNE, ARMAND—Montmagny.
LAVERGNE, LOUIS—Drummond and Arthabaska.
LAW, BOWMAN BROWN—Yarmouth, N.S.
LEBLANC, OLIVER J.—Kent, N.B.
LEFURGEY, ALFRED A.—Prince, P.E.I.
LEMIEUX, HON. RODOLPHE—{Gaspé. / Nicolet.}
LENNOX, HAUGHTON—Simcoe, S.R.
LEONARD, J. E. EMILE—Laval.
LEWIS, EDWARD NORMAN—Huron, W.R.
LOGAN, HANCE J.—Cumberland.
LOGGIE, WILLIAM STEWART—Northumberland, N.B.
LOVELL, HENRY—Stanstead.

MACDONALD, EDWARD M.—Pictou.
MACDONELL, ANGUS CLAUDE—Toronto, South.
MACLAREN, ALEXANDER F.—Perth, N.R.
MACLEAN, ALEXANDER K.—Lunenburg.
MACLEAN, WILLIAM F.—York, Ont., S.R.
MACPHERSON, ROBERT GEORGE—Vancouver City.
MCCARTHY, LEIGHTON GOLDIE—Simcoe, N.R.
MCCARTHY, MAITLAND STEWART—Calgary.
MCCOLL, JOHN B.—Northumberland, Ont., W.R.
MCCOOL, CHARLES ARTHUR—Nipissing.
MCCRANEY, GEORGE EWAN—Saskatchewan.
MCINTYRE, GILBERT H.—Perth, S.R.
MCINTYRE, WILBERT—Strathcona.
MCKENZIE, PETER H.—Bruce, S.R.
MCLEAN, ANGUS A.—Queen's, P.E.I.
MCLENNAN, ANGUS—Inverness.
MARCIL, CHARLES—Bonaventure.
MARCILE, JOSEPH EDMOND—Bagot.
MARTIN, ALEXANDER—Queen's, P.E.I.
MARTIN, THOMAS—Wellington, N.R.
MAYRAND, HORMISDAS—Maskinongé.
MEIGS, DANIEL BISHOP—Missisquoi.
MILLER, HENRY HORTON—Grey, S.R.
MONK, FREDERICK D.—Jacques Cartier.
MORIN, JEAN BAPTISTE—Dorchester.

NORTHRUP, WILLIAM BARTON—Hastings, E.R

OLIVER, HON. FRANK—Edmonton.
OSLER, EDMUND BOYD—Toronto, West.

PAQUET, EUGÈNE—L'Islet.
PARDEE, FRED. F.—Lambton, W.R.
PARENT, GEORGE—Montmorency.
PARMELEE, CHARLES H.—Shefford.
PATERSON, HON. WILLIAM—Brant.
PERLEY, GEORGE H.—Argenteuil.
PICHÉ, CAMILLE—Montreal, St. Mary's.
PICKUP, SAMUEL W. W.—Annapolis.
PORTER, EDWARD GUSS—Hastings, W.R.
POWER, WILLIAM—Quebec, West.
PRINGLE, ROBERT A.—Stormont.
PROULX, EDMOND—Prescott.

RATZ, VALENTINE—Middlesex, N.R.
REID, JAMES—Restigouche.
REID, JOHN D.—Grenville.
RIVET, LOUIS ALFRED ADHÉMAR—Hochelaga.
ROCHE, WILLIAM—Halifax.
ROCHE, WILLIAM J.—Marquette.
ROSS, A. C.—N. C. Breton and Victoria.
ROSS, DUNCAN—Yale-Cariboo.
ROSS, JEAN AUGUSTE—Rimouski.
ROUSSEAU, JEFFREY ALEXANDRE—Champlain.

SAVOIE, FRANÇOIS THÉODORE—Mégantic.
SCHAFFNER, FREDERICK LAURENCE—Souris.
SCHELL, JACOB T.—Glengarry.
SCHELL, MALCOLM S.—Oxford, S.R.
SEAGRAM, JOSEPH E.—Waterloo, N.R.
SIFTON, HON. CLIFFORD—Brandon.
SINCLAIR, JOHN H.—Guysborough.
SLOAN, WILLIAM—Comox-Atlin.
SMITH, ERNEST D.—Wentworth.
SMITH, GEORGE—Oxford, N.R.
SMITH, RALPH—Nanaimo.
SPROULE, THOMAS S.—Grey, E.R.
STAPLES, WILLIAM D.—Macdonald.
STEWART, ROBERT—Ottawa.
STOCKTON, ALFRED AUGUSTUS—St. John City and County.
SUTHERLAND, HON. ROBT. FRANKLIN—Essex, N.R.

TALBOT, ONÉSIPHORE ERNEST—Bellechasse.

TAYLOR, GEORGE—Leeds.
TELFORD, WILLIAM PATTESON—Grey, N.R.
TEMPLEMAN, HON. WILLIAM—Victoria City, B.C.
THOMPSON, ALFRED—Yukon Territory.
TISDALE, HON. DAVID—Norfolk.
TOBIN, EDMUND WILLIAM—Richmond and Wolfe.
TURGEON, ONÉSIPHORE—Gloucester.
TURRIFF, JOHN G.—Assiniboia, East

VERVILLE, A.—Maisonneuve.

WALSH, ROBERT NELSON—Huntingdon.
WARD, HENRY ALFRED—Durham.
WATSON, ROBERT JAMES—Parry Sound.
WHITE, HON. PETER, Renfrew. N.R.
WILMOT, ROBERT D.—Sunbury and Queen's.
WILSON, NORMAN FRANK—Russell.
WILSON, URIAH—Lennox and Addington.
WORTHINGTON, ARTHUR NORREYS—Sherbrooke.
WRIGHT, AARON ABEL—Renfrew, S.R.
WRIGHT, WILLIAM—Muskoka.

ZIMMERMAN, ADAM—Hamilton, West.

ALPHABETICAL LIST

OF THE

CONSTITUENCIES OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS

SECOND SESSION, TENTH PARLIAMENT

1906

ALBERTA—John Herron.
ALGOMA, EAST—Albert Edward Dyment.
ALGOMA, WEST—Arthur Cyril Boyce.
ANNAPOLIS—Samuel W. W. Pickup.
ANTIGONISH—William Chisholm.
ARGENTEUIL—George H. Perley.
ASSINIBOIA, EAST—John G. Turriff.
ASSINIBOIA, WEST—William E. Knowles.

BAGOT—Joseph Edmond Marcile.
BEAUCE—Henri Sévérin Béland.
BEAUHARNOIS—Joseph Gédéon Horace Bergeron.
BELLECHASSE—Onésiphore Ernest Talbot.
BERTHIER—Joseph Eloi Archambault.
BONAVENTURE—Charles Marcil.
BRANDON—Hon. Clifford Sifton.
BRANT—Hon. William Paterson.
BRANTFORD—William F. Cockshutt.
BROCKVILLE—Daniel Derbyshire.
BROME—Hon. Sydney Arthur Fisher.
BRUCE, N. RIDING—Leonard T. Bland.
BRUCE, S. RIDING—Peter H. McKenzie.

CALGARY—Maitland Stewart McCarthy.
CAPE BRETON NORTH AND VICTORIA—A. C. Ross.
CAPE BRETON, SOUTH—Alexander Johnston.
CARLETON (N.B.)—Frank Broadstreet Carvell.
CARLETON (O.)—Robert Laird Borden.
CHAMBLY AND VERCHÈRES—Victor Geoffrion.
CHAMPLAIN—Jeffrey Alexandre Rousseau.
CHARLEVOIX—Rodolphe Forget.
CHARLOTTE—Gilbert W. Ganong.
CHATEAUGUAY—James P. Brown.
CHICOUTIMI AND SAGUENAY—Joseph Girard.
COLCHESTER—Frederick A. Laurence.
COMOX-ATLIN—William Sloan.
COMPTON—Aylmer Byron Hunt.
CUMBERLAND—Hance J. Logan.

DAUPHIN—Theodore Arthur Burrows.
DIGBY—Albert J. S. Copp.
DORCHESTER—Jean Baptiste Morin.
DRUMMOND AND ARTHABASKA—Louis Lavergne.
DUFFERIN—John Barr.
DUNDAS—Andrew Broder.
DURHAM—Henry Alfred Ward.

EDMONTON—Hon. Frank Oliver.
ELGIN, E. RIDING—Andrew B. Ingram.
ELGIN, W. RIDING—William Jackson.
ESSEX, N. RIDING—Hon. Robert Franklin Sutherland
ESSEX, S. RIDING—Alfred H. Clarke.

FRONTENAC—Melzar Avery.

GASPÉ—Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux.
GLENGARRY—Jacob T. Schell.
GLOUCESTER—Onésiphore Turgeon.
GRENVILLE—John Dowsley Reid.
GREY, E. RIDING—Thomas S. Sproule.
GREY, N. RIDING—William Patteson Telford.
GREY, S. RIDING—Henry Horton Miller.
GUYSBOROUGH—J. H. Sinclair.

HALDIMAND—Francis Ramsay Lalor.
HALIFAX—William Roche. Michael Carney.
HALTON—David Henderson.
HAMILTON, EAST—Samuel Barker.
HAMILTON, WEST—Adam Zimmerman.
HANTS—Judson Burpee Black.
HASTINGS, E. RIDING—William B. Northrup.
HASTINGS, W. RIDING—Edward Guss Porter.
HOCHELAGA—Louis Alfred Adhémar Rivet.
HUMBOLT—A. J. Adamson.
HUNTINGDON—Robert Nelson Walsh.
HURON, E. RIDING—Thomas Chisholm.
HURON, S. RIDING—Benjamin B. Gunn.
HURON, W. RIDING—Edward Norman Lewis.

INVERNESS—Angus McLennan.

JACQUES CARTIER—Frederick D. Monk
JOLIETTE—Joseph Adélard Dubeau.

KAMOURASKA—Ernest Lapointe.
KENT (N.B.)—Oliver J. LeBlanc.
KENT (O.), E. RIDING—David Alexander Gordon.
KENT (O.), W. RIDING—Herbert S. Clements.
KING'S AND ALBERT (N.B.)—George W. Fowler.
KING'S (N.S.)—Hon. Sir Frederick W. Borden K.C.M.G.

KING'S (P.E.I.)—James J. Hughes.
KINGSTON—William Harty.
KOOTENAY—William Alfred Galliher.

LABELLE—Henri Bourassa.
LAMBTON, E. RIDING—Joseph E. Armstrong.
LAMBTON, W. RIDING—Fred. F. Pardee.
LANARK, N. RIDING—Thomas Boyd Caldwell.
LANARK, S. RIDING—Hon. John Graham Haggart.
LAPRAIRIE-NAPIERVILLE—Roch Lanctôt.
L'ASSOMPTION—R. Charlemagne Laurier.
LAVAL—J. E. Emile Leonard.
LEEDS—George Taylor.
LENNOX AND ADDINGTON—Uriah Wilson.
LÉVIS—Louis A. Carrier.
LINCOLN—Edward A. Lancaster.
LISGAR—Thomas Greenway.
L'ISLET—Eugène Paquet.
LONDON—Hon. Charles S. Hyman.
LOTBINIÈRE—Edmond Fortier.
LUNENBURG—Alexander Kenneth Maclean.

MACDONALD—William D. Staples.
MACKENZIE—E. L. Cash.
MAISONNEUVE—A. Verville.
MARQUETTE—William J. Roche.
MASKINONGÉ—Hormisdas Mayrand.
MEGANTIC—François Théodore Savoie.
MIDDLESEX, E. RIDING—Peter Elson.
MIDDLESEX, N. RIDING—Valentine Ratz.
MIDDLESEX, W. RIDING—William Samuel Calvert.
MISSISQUOI—Daniel B. Meigs.
MONTCALM—François Octave Dugas.
MONTMAGNY—Armand Lavergne.
MONTMORENCY—George Parent.
MONTREAL, ST. ANTOINE—Herbert B. Ames.
MONTREAL, ST. JAMES—Honoré Gervais.
MONTREAL, ST. LAWRENCE—Robert Bickerdike.
MONTREAL, St. MARY—Camille Piché.
MUSKOKA—William Wright.

Nanaimo—Ralph Smith.
NEW WESTMINSTER—James B. Kennedy.
NICOLET—Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux.
NIPISSING—Charles Arthur McCool.
NORFOLK—Hon. David Tisdale.
NORTHUMBERLAND (N.B.)—William Stewart Loggie.
NORTHUMBERLAND (O.) E.R.—Edward Cochrane.
NORTHUMBERLAND (O.) W.R.—John B. McColl.

ONTARIO, N. RIDING—George D. Grant.
ONTARIO, S. RIDING—Peter Christie.
OTTAWA CITY { Hon. Napoléon Antoine Belcourt. / Robert Stewart.
OXFORD, N. RIDING—George Smith.
OXFORD, S. RIDING—Malcolm S. Schell.

PARRY SOUND—Robert James Watson.
PEEL—Richard Blain.
PERTH, N. RIDING—Alexander Ferguson MacLaren.
PERTH, S. RIDING—Gilbert H. McIntyre.
PETERBOROUGH, E. RIDING—John Finlay.
PETERBOROUGH, W. RIDING—R. R. Hall.
PICTOU—Edward M. Macdonald.
PONTIAC—Gerald H. Brabazon.
PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE—John Crawford.
PORTNEUF—Michel Siméon Delisle.
PRESCOTT—Edmond Proulx.
PRINCE, (P.E.I.)—Alfred A. Lefurgey.
PRINCE EDWARD—George Oscar Alcorn.
PROVENCHER—Joseph Ernest Cyr.

QU'APPELLE—Richard Stuart Lake.
QUEBEC, CENTRE—Arthur Lachance.
QUEBEC, EAST—Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, G.C.M.G.
QUEBEC, WEST—William Power.
QUEBEC (County)—Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick.
QUEEN'S, (P.E.I.)— { Alexander Martin. / Angus A. McLean.

RENFREW, N. RIDING—Hon. Peter White.
RENFREW, S. RIDING—Aaron Abel Wright.
RESTIGOUCHE—James Reid.
RICHELIEU—Arthur Aimé Bruneau.
RICHMOND (N.S.)—Duncan Finlayson.
RICHMOND AND WOLFE (Q.)—Edmund William Tobin
RIMOUSKI—Jean Auguste Ross.
ROUVILLE—Hon. Louis Philippe Brodeur.
RUSSELL—Norman Frank Wilson.

ST. HYACINTHE—Aimé M. Beauparlant.
ST. JOHN (N.B.), City—John Waterhouse Daniel.
ST. JOHN (N.B.), City and Co.—Alfred Augustus Stockton.
ST. JOHN AND IBERVILLE—L. Philippe Demers.
SASKATCHEWAN—George E. McCraney.
SELKIRK—Samuel Jacob Jackson.
SHEFFORD—Charles H. Parmelee.
SHELBURNE AND QUEEN'S, N.S.—Hon. William Stevens Fielding.
SHERBROOKE—Arthur Norreys Worthington.
SIMCOE, E. RIDING—William H. Bennett.
SIMCOE, N. RIDING—Leighton Goldie McCarthy.
SIMCOE, S. RIDING—Haughton Lennox.
SOULANGES—Augustin Bourbonnais.
SOURIS—Frederick Laurence Schaffner.
STANSTEAD—Henry Lovell.
STORMONT—Robert A. Pringle.
STRATHCONA—Wilbert McIntyre.
SUNBURY AND QUEEN'S (N.B.)—Robert D. Wilmot.

TEMISCOUATA—Charles Arthur Gauvreau.
TERREBONNE—Samuel Desjardins.
THREE RIVERS AND ST. MAURICE—Jacques Bureau.
THUNDER BAY AND RAINY RIVER—James Conmee.
TORONTO, CENTRE—Edmund Bristol.
TORONTO, EAST—Albert E. Kemp.
TORONTO, NORTH—Hon. George Eulas Foster.
TORONTO, SOUTH—Angus Claude Macdonell.
TORONTO, WEST—Edmund Boyd Osler.
TWO MOUNTAINS—Joseph Arthur C. Ethier.

VANCOUVER (City)—Robert George Macpherson.
VAUDREUIL—Gustave Boyer

VICTORIA (B.C.)—Hon. William Templeman.
VICTORIA (N.B.)—Hon. John Costigan.
VICTORIA AND HALIBURTON, (O.)—Samuel Hughes.

WATERLOO, N. RIDING—Joseph E. Seagram.
WATERLOO, S. RIDING—George A. Clare.
WELLAND—William Manly German.
WELLINGTON, N. RIDING—Thomas Martin.
WELLINGTON, S. RIDING—Hugh Guthrie.
WENTWORTH—Ernest D. Smith.
WESTMORELAND—Hon. Henry R. Emmerson.
WINNIPEG—David Wesley Bole.
WRIGHT—Emmanuel B. Devlin.
YALE-CARIBOO—Duncan Ross.
YAMASKA—Joseph E. O. Gladu.
YARMOUTH—Bowman Brown Law.
YORK (N.B.)—Oswald S. Crocket.
YORK (O.), C. RIDING—Archibald Campbell.
YORK (O.), N. RIDING—Hon. Allen Bristol Aylesworth.
YORK (O.), S. RIDING—William F. Maclean.
YUKON TERRITORY—Alfred Thompson.

SELECT Committee Appointed to Supervise the Publication of the Official Reports of the Debates of the House.

BERGERON, J. G. H.—Beauharnois.
BUREAU, J.—Three Rivers and St. Maurice.
CLARKE, A. H.—Essex, S.
ETHIER, J. A. C.—Two Mountains.
GERVAIS, H.—Montreal, St. James.
GUTHRIE, H.—Wellington, S.
HUGHES, S.—Victoria and Haliburton.
JOHNSTON, A.—Cape Breton, S.
KNOWLES, W. E.—Assiniboia, W.
LOGAN, H. J.—Cumberland.
MACPHERSON, R. G.—Vancouver City.
MCCARTHY, M. S.—Calgary.
ROCHE, W. J.—Marquette.
SCHAFFNER, F. I.—Souris.
TAYLOR, GEO.—Leeds.

Chairman :—H. GERVAIS—Montreal, St. James.

ERRATA.

VOL. I.

Col. 995, between lines 27 and 28, insert 'Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior).'

Col. 1103, 17th line from foot of column, heading: 'Rifle Ranges, Kemptville, N.S.,' should read: 'Rifle Ranges, Kentville, N.S.'

Col. 1688, lines 30, 31, 32 to read as follows: 'a fitting opportunity to witness the progress and development accomplished in Your Majesty's possessions on this continent,'

House of Commons Debates

SECOND SESSION—TENTH PARLIAMENT

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THURSDAY, March 8, 1906.

The Parliament, which had been prorogued from time to time to the 8th day of March, 1906, met this day for the despatch of business.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at three o'clock.

Mr. SPEAKER. I have the honour to inform the House that I have received the following communication from the secretary of His Excellency the Governor General.

Ottawa, March 7, 1906.

Sir,—I have the honour to inform you that the Governor General will proceed to the Senate Chamber, to open the second session of the Tenth Parliament of the Dominion of Canada, on Thursday the 8th instant, at 3 o'clock p.m.

I have the honour to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,
(Sgd.) J. HANBURY-WILLIAMS, Colonel,
Governor General's Secretary.

The Honourable,
The Speaker of the House of Commons.

A message was delivered by the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, as follows :

Mr. Speaker. His Excellency the Governor General desires the immediate attendance of your honourable House in the Chamber of the honourable the Senate.

Accordingly the House went to the Senate Chamber.

And the House being returned.

ELECTION PETITIONS — JUDGMENT OF THE SUPREME COURT.

Mr. SPEAKER. I have the honour to inform the House that I have received from the registrar of the Supreme Court of Canada the judgment of the said court in the matter of the appeal in the Wentworth election case, by which the judgment of the Honourable the Chief Justice of the Common Pleas and of the Honourable Mr. Justice Teetzel, sitting as election judges, voiding the said election, was affirmed and the appeal dismissed.

In conformity with chapter 9, section 46, of the Revised Statutes, I issued my warrant to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery to make out a new writ of election for the said electoral district.

CONTROVERTED ELECTIONS.

Mr. SPEAKER. I have also the honour to inform the House that I have received from the judges selected for the trial of election petitions pursuant to the Dominion Controverted Elections Act, certificates and reports relating to the elections

For the electoral district of Compton ; and For the electoral district of Sherbrooke ;

by which the elections for the said electoral districts have been declared void.

In conformity with chapter 9, section 46, of the Revised Statutes, I issued my warrants to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery to make out new writs of election for the said electoral districts respectively.

ELECTION CASES APPEALS.

Mr. SPEAKER. I have also the honour to inform the House that I have received from the registrar of the Supreme Court of Canada judgments and decisions of the said court in the matter of the appeals made from the decisions of the trial judges in the Lower Courts relating to the following elections :—

For the electoral district of North Cape Breton and Victoria ;
For the electoral district of Pictou ;
For the electoral district of Cumberland ;
For the electoral district of Shelburne and Queen's ;
For the electoral district of King's, N.S.;
For the electoral district of Halifax (two judgments) ;

by which the appeals in the first four cases were allowed and in the three latter ones the appeals were dismissed.

ELECTION PETITION DISMISSED.

Mr. SPEAKER. I have also the honour to inform the House that I have received from the Honourable Mr. Justice Lemieux and the Honourable Mr. Justice Hutchinson, two of the judges selected for the trial of election petitions, pursuant to the Dominion Controverted Elections Act, a certificate and report relating to the election petition for the electoral district of Stanstead, by which the petition in the said matter was dismissed.

VACANCIES.

Mr. SPEAKER. I have also the honour to inform the House that, during the recess, I have received communications from several members notifying me that the following vacancies had occurred in the representations, viz.:—

Of Walter Scott, Esq., member for the electoral district of Assiniboia West, by resignation ;

Of John Henderson Lamont, Esq., member for the electoral district of Saskatchewan, by resignation ;

Of the Hon. Sir William Mulock, K.C.M.G., member for the electoral district of North York, Ontario, by the acceptance of an office of emolument under the Crown ;

Of Colin F. McIsaac, Esq., member for the electoral district of Antigonish, by the acceptance of an office of emolument under the Crown ;

Of Thomas George Johnston, Esq., member for the electoral district of West Lambton, by decease ;

Of the Hon. J. Raymond Prefontaine, member for the electoral district of Maisonneuve, by decease ;

Of Geo. Riley, Esq., member for the electoral district of Victoria City, British Columbia, by resignation ;

Of Daniel D. McKenzie, Esq., member for the electoral district of North Cape Breton and Victoria, by the acceptance of an office of emolument under the Crown;

I accordingly issued my several warrants to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery to make out new writs of election for the said electoral districts respectively.

I have also received to-day the resignation of Peter Talbot, Esq., member for the electoral district of Strathcona.

I have accordingly issued my warrant to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery to make out a new writ of election for the said electoral district.

NEW MEMBERS.

Mr. SPEAKER. I have further the honour to inform the House that, during the recess, the Clerk of the House received from the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, certificates of the election and return of the following members, viz.:—

Of William Chisholm, Esq., for the electoral district of Antigonish ;

Of Fred. F. Pardee, Esq., for the electoral district of Lambton West ;

Of Ernest D. Smith, Esq., for the electoral district of Wentworth ;

Of the Hon. Allen Bristol Aylesworth, for the electoral district of North York, Ontario ;

Of Aylmer Byron Hunt, Esq., for the electoral district of Compton ;

Of Arthur Norreys Worthington, Esq., for the electoral district of Sherbrooke ;

Of George Ewan McCraney, Esq., for the electoral district of Saskatchewan ;

Of William Erskine Knowles, Esq., for the electoral district of Assiniboia West ;

Mr. SPEAKER.

Of Alphonse Verville, Esq., for the electoral district of Maisonneuve.

MEMBERS INTRODUCED.

Hon. Allen Bristol Aylesworth, member for the electoral district of North York, Ont., introduced by Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. Mr. Paterson.

William Chisholm, Esq., member for the electoral district of Antigonish, introduced by Hon. Sir Frederick Borden and Mr. Sinclair.

Ernest D. Smith, Esq., member for the electoral division of Wentworth, introduced by Mr. R. L. Borden and Mr. Henderson.

Frederick F. Pardee, Esq., member elect for the electoral district of West Lambton, introduced by the Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier (Prime Minister) and Hon. C. S. Hyman (Minister of Public Works).

Aylmer Byron Hunt, Esq., member elect for the electoral district of Compton, introduced by Hon. Sydney Fisher (Minister of Agriculture) and Mr. Henri Beland.

William Erskine Knowles, Esq., member elect for the electoral district of West Assiniboia, introduced by Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier (Prime Minister) and Hon. Frank Oliver (Minister of the Interior).

Arthur Norreys Worthington, Esq., member elect for the electoral district of Sherbrooke, introduced by Mr. R. L. Borden, and Mr. J. G. H. Bergeron.

George Ewan McCraney, Esq., member elect for the electoral district of Saskatchewan, introduced by Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier (Prime Minister) and Hon. Frank Oliver (Minister of the Interior).

Alphonse Verville, Esq., member elect for the electoral district of Maisonneuve, introduced by Mr. J. E. Leonard and Mr. Armand Lavergne.

FIRST READING.

Bill (No. 1) respecting the Administration of Oaths of Office,—Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, (Prime Minister).

SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

Mr. SPEAKER. I have the honour to inform the House that when the House did attend His Excellency the Governor General this day in the Senate Chamber, His Excellency was pleased to make a speech to both Houses of Parliament, a copy of which is as follows :—

Honourable Gentlemen of the Senate:

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

In again summoning you to meet for the despatch of business, I am glad to be able to congratulate you on the prosperity prevailing throughout the Dominion.

The severe bereavement which Queen Alexandra has sustained through the death of her father, the King of Denmark, has occasioned much sorrow throughout the empire, and I am satisfied that the warm sympathy of the people of Canada will be readily extended to Her Majesty.

It afforded me much pleasure as the representative of His Majesty to take part in the inauguration of the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan as constituent members of the confederation. The universal rejoicing on the assumption of provincial autonomy everywhere visible was gratifying to witness, and I venture to say that in no part of the world could a more contented population be found. The universal sentiment was one of abounding confidence in the future.

The bountiful harvest with which we have been blessed in the past season, together with the continued development of our industries and transportation facilities, have so stimulated business in all parts of Canada and have given such an impetus to our exports and imports that the trade both with the United Kingdom and foreign countries for the current fiscal year gives promise of being the largest on record.

The flow of immigrants seeking homes in the three prairie provinces still continues, and from the present outlook the number will be in excess of any previous year, and it is gratifying to note the increasing proportion from the British Isles.

A treaty on behalf of Canada has now been concluded between the United Kingdom and Japan which it is confidently hoped will largely increase our trade with the people of that progressive empire. When the formal documents have been received they will be laid before you.

The rapid destruction of our forests now going on will, unless the operations of the lumbermen be prudently regulated in the future, and a system of reforestation adopted, result in grave consequences—affecting the uniform flow of our rivers and limiting our valuable water powers to a few months in the year. A Bill will be submitted for your consideration empowering the government to set apart forest reserves on lands under its control.

In accordance with the offer made by my ministers to the government of the United Kingdom, the imperial treasury has now been relieved from the cost of garrisoning Halifax, and arrangements are in progress for taking over the defence of Esquimalt, and hereafter detachments from the Permanent Force of Canada will have charge of both those important stations.

You will be invited to consider the propriety of making such a change in the fiscal year as will bring it more in harmony with the active business season.

The result of the investigation into the administration of leading life insurance companies in the neighbouring Republic has naturally created some uneasiness in the public mind as to the condition of Canadian companies. A commission has therefore been issued to inquire into and report on the management and financial standing, not only of companies holding Canadian charters, but also of all companies doing business under license in Canada.

Satisfactory progress is being made in the exploration and surveys of the Eastern Division of the National Transcontinental Railway, and it is expected that contracts for the construction of two important sections embracing together about 400 miles will shortly be executed.

The interim report of the Canadian section of the International Waterway Commission will be laid before you. The work of the joint commission has been somewhat delayed owing to a doubt as to the jurisdiction of the American section. The great development of commerce on the waters dividing the two countries and the opportunities for the generating of electric power at many points necessarily evolve questions which can only be dealt with by international arrangement or by treaty. At Niagara the commission will have to consider how best to preserve the scenic effect of the falls, while not unduly restricting the use of the flow of the Niagara river so valuable for power purposes.

A report has been received from the Transportation Commission containing several important recommendations; the document will be laid before you.

The legal experts appointed to revise, classify and consolidate the public general statutes passed since the revision in 1886 have completed their task, and it is expected that the volumes will be ready for distribution before July.

A measure for the better observance of the Lord's Day will be submitted for your consideration.

You will be invited to consider among other subjects Bills to amend the Railway Act, the Fruit Marks Act, an Act respecting Usury and also the Dominion Elections Act.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

The accounts for the past year will be laid before you ; the estimates for the nine months embracing a portion of the proposed fiscal year terminating on the thirty-first of March, 1907, will be submitted for your approval at an early day.

Honourable Gentlemen of the Senate:

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

I invite your earnest attention to the several subjects I have mentioned and to the general business that will come before you, and I trust your deliberations will be guided by wisdom and moderation.

Right Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) moved :

That the speech of His Excellency the Governor General to both Houses of Parliament of the Dominion of Canada be taken into consideration on Monday next.

Motion agreed to.

SELECT STANDING COMMITTEES.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER moved :

That Select Standing Committees of this House for the present session be appointed for the following purposes :—1. On Privileges and Elections. 2. On Expiring Laws. 3. On Railways, Canals and Telegraph Lines. 4. On Miscellaneous Private Bills. 5. On Standing Orders. 6. On Printing. 7. On Public Accounts. 8. On Banking and Commerce. 9. On Agriculture and Colonization—which said committees shall severally be empowered to examine and inquire into all such matters and things as may be referred to them by the House ; and to report from time to time their observations and opinions thereon, with power to send for persons, papers and records.

Motion agreed to.

REPORT PRESENTED.

Report of the Joint Librarians of Parliament for 1905.—Mr. Speaker.

ADJOURNMENT—AUDITOR GENERAL'S REPORT—INSURANCE COMMISSION.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Carleton, Ont.). Before the House adjourns I would like to ask the Prime Minister when we may expect the report of the Auditor General. It would have been a great convenience to the members, on this side of the House at least, as well as a very great advantage to the public service generally, if we could have had that report at an earlier date. It is perfectly obvious that it must be in the hands of members for a certain time before they can properly consider estimates that are brought down. In the ordinary course this session would have been called early in January. I suppose we shall have some explanation later on as to why the date of opening has been delayed so long, but if the House had opened at the usual time, early in January, it would certainly have been a very great inconvenience, it would have caused great delay of public business if the report of the Auditor General had been delayed until the present time. If the report could have been brought down earlier for the purpose of a January session, I fail to understand why it could not have been brought down earlier for the purpose of a March session, and I would like very much, if the Prime Minister is able to afford any explanation, that that explanation should be given now, together with information as to when we may expect the report.

I would also like to ask the Prime Minister to lay upon the table of the House the Commission which has been issued to certain gentlemen for the purpose of conducting an investigation into the operations of insurance companies in Canada. We have, it is true, what purports to be a copy of it furnished to the public press, but I think it is desirable that, for the benefit and information of the House, we should have an exact copy of the Commission laid upon the table of the House, at the earliest possible moment and it would be desirable also, I think, that the House should be furnished at the earliest possible moment with information as to whether or not it is the intention of the government to authorize, or to pay for out of the public exchequer, the services of counsel, in connection with the investigation.

It seems possible that the investigation might fail to satisfy that public uneasiness which has been referred to in the speech to which we have listened to-day unless some step of this kind were taken or authorized by the administration.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Mr. Speaker, I have to remind my hon. friend (Mr. R. L. Borden) of the practice which he knows as well as I do myself and to state that I am not in a position to give him any information or to give him the reason why the report of the Auditor General has not been presented to parliament this afternoon. My hon. friend is aware that the Auditor General is bound to present his report within a certain period. As the session has been called late perhaps we may anticipate that there will no excuse whatever if the report is not presented within the time—in fact I have no doubt it will be presented within the time prescribed by parliament and perhaps the Auditor General will avail himself of the time which is given to him to gratify parliament with an early presentation of his report.

I take this opportunity to answer at once the reflection of my hon. friend as to the late period at which the session has been called. The reason, is known to the government, but it is better perhaps that I should give it exactly as it is. Parliament is aware that during last session it was announced that a thorough investigation would be made by a competent commission appointed to inquire into the working of the tariff with the view of ascertaining whether or not certain changes were necessary and to what extent the tariff was satisfactory to the people. The members of the House are also aware that the commission started early in its work, or a few weeks after prorogation. After having held one or two sittings in Toronto—I think it was—they went to the new provinces beyond Lake Superior, but the people at that time were so busy with the harvest that, upon the representations made, it was thought preferable to postpone the sittings of the commission in the West for a few weeks. The commission resumed their sittings as early as possible under such circumstances and prosecuted their work without any intermission at all except that which was unavoidable until the latter days of the month of January. Parliament was convened immediately after the commission had closed its sittings. In fact parliament was summoned on the very day ofter the last sitting of the commission in the city of Ottawa. It would have been utterly impossible to have convened this session earlier than it has been called together. That is the explanation of the time at which parliament has been called and I think it will be found to be a reasonable one.

I may say to the House, and I have to convey to it a very sad piece of information, that it had been our intention to have a revision of tariff during this session, but the House is aware of the fact that my hon. friend the Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) some few weeks ago,—in fact, almost immediately after the tariff commission had concluded its sittings—met with a very painful accident, an accident of a more serious nature than was thought at first. He has been confined to his bed for three weeks now and it is not expected that he can get out of the house for three or four weeks more if indeed at that time. Under these circumstances, the Minister of Finance being unable to give to the work of the tariff commission the attention which he had intended and which we had expected him to give to it, we have come to the reluctant conclusion that it will be impossible to have a revision of the tariff this session. What we propose, therefore, is to have, if possible, a very short session. We do not propose to introduce any legislation except such as is absolutely unavoidable, to have the Supply Bill passed and to summon parliament again early in the month of November to deal not with the general business of parliament but with the special question of the revision of the tariff. The fiscal year it is proposed to bring to the month of April instead of to the month of July. The present fiscal year will not conclude until the month of July and therefore it is not expected that the general business of parliament—the reports and so on—can be ready in the month of November, but we anticipate fully that it may be ready early in January and we shall ask the House, when we call it again in November, to deal with the question of the tariff.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What I understand is that the fiscal year will begin on the 1st of April or rather conclude on the 31st of March and that estimates only for nine months will be voted this year ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes ; in fact, that is hinted in the speech from the throne and we shall introduce a measure to change the end of the fiscal year from June 30 to March 31. I think my hon. friend asked me also about the instructions to the commissioners.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The insurance commission.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes. They will be laid before parliament on Monday next. In regard to another question which has been asked by my hon. friend as to whether or not the commission will be authorized to employ counsel, it is provided already that there shall be counsel to carry out the investigation and to assist the commissioners in the carrying out of the investigation. The counsel who has been selected by the government, I think, will be found acceptable to both sides of the House and to the country generally—Mr. Geo. F. Shepley, K.C., of Toronto. I do not think it would have been possible to have selected a more competent man and the instructions which have been given to Mr. Shepley are that he is authorized to employ any additional counsel he may think fit to assist him in the work.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. Would that include actuaries ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I am not aware that it includes actuaries. But the instructions to Mr. Shepley are to get all the assistance he desires and which is necessary to have as thorough an investigation as is possible, in fact, such an investigation as will satisfy my hon. friend (Mr. W. F. Maclean) himself.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN (South York). Mr. Speaker, I desire to say now that I protest against the government taking away the undoubted right of parliament to name the commission that ought to investigate the insurance question. Recently, in the state of New York, when the legislature was not in session, the governor of that state took advantage of the law and instead of appointing a commission issued a commission to members of the legislature, the representatives of the people, to make an investigation. They made a very thorough investigation of this question and when parliament was almost in sight of its annual session I contend that it was the duty of the government to await the meeting of this House and to come to this House and say that they intended to appoint a special committee of the House to investigate this insurance question. I still believe that a parliamentary committee is better for the purposes of an investigation than a formal commission like the royal commission which has been appointed to investigate the insurance question. We all know what royal commissions have been in the past. They are limited in their scope, they have resorted to the methods of the courts, whereas, if we had a parliamentary committee with the fullest scope that could be given to it in this direction, it could elicit the facts under the ordinary rules of business. I do not see that this action of the government is one to be approved; rather is it to be condemned and especially to be condemned on the part of liberals who always contended that royal commissions were objectionable and that parliamentary committees were the proper tribunals to investigate matters of this kind.

As to what the right hon. leader of the government (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) has said as to a November session, I believe the great bulk of public opinion will be favourable to it. Certainly a great many of the members in this House will not object to a session in November. As far as that announcement is concerned I have no objection to raise, but I do now, on behalf of 400,000 policy holders in this country who own 800,000 policies, protest against this method of investigating the affairs of the insurance companies of Canada in view of the revelations made in the state of New York and in view of the excellent work done by the committee of the legislature. I protest against that investigation being handed over to a royal commission instead of being reserved to a parliamentary committee.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 4.15 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY, March 9, 1906.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

SELECT STANDING COMMITTEES.

Right Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister), moved.—

That a special committee of seven members be appointed to prepare and report, with all convenient speed, a list of members to form the select standing committees ordered by this House yesterday, such select committee to be composed of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. R. L. Borden, Mr. Paterson, Mr. Hyman, Mr. Haggart, Mr. Calvert and Mr. Taylor.

Motion agreed to.

INSURANCE COMMISSION.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. By command of His Excellency the Governor General, I beg to lay on the table a copy of the Order in Council adopted on the 28th of February ordering an investigation into life insurance and a copy of the commission issued to the commissioners appointed under said order.

ADJOURNMENT—INQUIRIES FOR RETURNS.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER moved the adjournment of the House.

Hon. GEO. E. FOSTER (North Toronto). Before the House adjourns I would like to ask the government, or, at least, two of the members of the government, if the returns ordered last spring, or early in the summer, and which we were not so fortunate as to have brought down before the close of the session, but which the ministers promised should be made ready during the interim, have been prepared and are ready to be laid on the table. One of these returns related to the Department of the Minister of Public Works. It was quite a lengthy report. For the preparation of it the minister asked a considerable time, which, of course, was not unreasonable. I asked the hon. gentleman, if possible, to have it ready before the beginning of this session. I presume that it is now ready and will be laid on the table soon. The other return related to the Department of the Interior. The motion for this return, passed last year, was for a list of those to whom timber licenses, leases, &c., had been granted. I hope that this will be brought down very early. I would like also to ask the Minister of the Interior (Hon. Mr. Oliver) if he is ready to lay on the table or will soon be ready to lay on the table, the report on the scrip inquiry, and whether the evidence taken at that inquiry is to be placed at the disposal of members.

Hon. C. S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works). I may say in regard to the return to which the hon. Mr. Foster refers that I will be ready to lay it on the table of the House on Monday.

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). The papers in connection with the scrip inquiry are ready to be brought down, and can be laid on the table at any time.

Mr. FOSTER. Will the evidence be included?

Mr. OLIVER. It has not been printed. It is bulky, and it is not desirable that it should be printed, unless by the order of the House.

Mr. FOSTER. It will be presented to the House ?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes, if the House so wishes. The report in regard to the timber licenses, will be laid on the table within a very short time.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Carleton, Ont.). In this connection, I would suggest to the Prime Minister that the system of the House is not very thorough. A return may be ordered at the instance of some hon. gentlemen and it may not be brought down during that session. At the following session, the gentleman by whom the motion was made may not be a member of the House. The return may be ordered in the last session of parliament, and, it may be forgotten altogether and not brought down. It would seem to me to be a comparatively simple matter to have laid upon the table of the House, at the beginning of each session, a list of the returns ordered during the previous session and not brought down, so that members would have the information, and also the attention of the different departments would be brought to the circumstance that certain orders of the House have been complied with. I do not know what the system is with regard to this matter, or whether it is treated in any systematic way. But if not, I would venture to suggest to the leader of the House, and to you, Mr. Speaker, that some amendment might be made, so that the information might be before us at the commencement of each session.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. There has been no system up to the present time. Every member who moves for papers is supposed to look after them, and, hitherto, that seems to have been sufficient. Sometimes a member may forgot, or the occasion for which he required the information may pass, or public interest may not warrant the production of the papers. But, if the papers are really required in the public interest some member is generally ready to look after them. The Secretary of State is the minister who takes charge of these matters. The work, I think, is done very thoroughly. Up to this time there has been no system, except that which I have described, if it be a system.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Would it be possible for the Secretary of State to furnish us with that information for the last two sessions ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). A return in which I was interested was moved for at a comparatively early period last session, and was afterwards referred to. It was important, in my opinion, that the information should be brought down. The return had not been brought down by the dying days of the session, and I do not know whether it has been brought down yet or not. When an order is made for a return of that nature, the return ought to be brought down during the session, unless extremely strong reason is given to the contrary.

Mr. FOSTER. Yesterday the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) made inquiry with regard to the Auditor General's Report. It did not seem to me that the answer of the Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) on that point was very satisfactory. The right hon. gentleman having the oversight of the whole business of the House and, of course, being most anxious that that business should be proceeded with the fullest information possible and as rapidly as possible, one would think that he would have noted the absence of such an important document as this and would have made inquiry with reference to it. I am not sure whether he has done so since yesterday's reminder or not. In any case, I submit that the excuse offered is not a good excuse for the failure to bring down this report—simply that it is not legally required to be produced until fifteen days after the opening of the House. The ex-Auditor General, a man of great experience, who was very many years in office, said that there was no difficulty at all in having the earlier portions of that report out before the end of the year and in the hands of the members, and the whole report could be ready by the first of the year. As the government made a change in that office, it is to be supposed that they changed it for the betterment of the service and increased rapidity of the work, and that it could not have been difficult—at least, need not have been difficult —for the new Auditor General to have had his report ready for members of the House. I was anxiously looking for it for months, I expected to get the first instalment of it about the last of December or along in January, so that I could have it studied up. But now it appears from the Prime Minister's communication with his officer that it is impossible for us to have it in due time, and that it will have to be crowded in with all the other hurried work of the session. I wish the Prime Minister would look after these things a little better.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Well, Mr. Speaker, I wish to repel the soft impeachment of my hon. friend (Mr. Foster) that I have been neglectful of the supervision which he thinks I have over the officers of the government. My hon. friend knows from long experience that the Auditor General is not an officer of the government, he is an officer of parliament, and I have no more control over the Auditor General than my hon. friend has himself.

Mr. FOSTER. A very good theory.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. But I have to say this, that I have spoken to the Auditor General, and he tells me he expects that part of his report will be ready on Monday, and the other part in a very few days. I do not know what will be the practice of the present Auditor General, but I may say of the previous one, that I often asked him to bring his report down to a certain period, say the 1st of January, or the last of December, or to some definite period, and to reserve anything that might be necessary for a future instalment. But the late Auditor General always insisted upon carrying on his report week by week until the very eve of the session. I do not know what will be the practice in this respect of the present Auditor General, but I have had the pleasure of meeting him, and ascertaining from him that the report will be ready in due time, and I think it will satisfy the curiosity of my hon. friend.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. All the same, we remember that it is nearly eight and a half months since the close of the last fiscal year, and one would suppose that was a sufficiently long period in which to prepare and print that document, and furnish it to members of parliament before this. If the proposal of the government is carried out, to terminate the fiscal year on the 31st of March and to begin the session early in November, a proposal with which I heartily concur, as I stated last year, that will give the Auditor General seven months in which to prepare his report and have it ready for the commencement of parliament. Well, not only seven months, but nearly a month and a half more have elapsed, yet we have not the Auditor General's Report, so it is clear that for the future that gentleman must make haste more rapidly than he has done during the past. I venture to think that the House should endeavour to ascertain why it is that this report has been so long delayed this year.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 3.20 p. m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY, March 12, 1903.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

DOMINION ELECTIONS ACT, 1900, AMENDMENT.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 2) further to amend the Dominion Elections Act, 1900. He said: This Bill is practically the same as the one introduced by me towards the close of last session. It is designed to accelerate the bringing on of by-elections in case the administration of the day does not see fit to act within a given time.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS ACT AMENDMENT.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 3) further to amend the Act respecting the House of Commons. He said: This Bill is supplementary to the one which I have just introduced. For the purpose of accomplishing the desired result, it was necessary that the two statutes should be amended, and I thought the best course to follow was to introduce a separate Bill for the purpose of amending each statute.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

CRIMINAL CODE, 1892, AMENDMENTS.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 4) further to amend the Criminal Code, 1892. He said: The main provisions of this Bill are in fulfilment of a promise which I made towards the end of last session to introduce legislation with respect to the practice of members of parliament and of legislatures receiving rewards for their services in parliament or in a legislature, or in the departments of the government. I believe that the Minister of Justice proposes to introduce a Bill along similar lines. This Bill which I am now introducing deals incidentally with several other matters. It provides that the members of the Board of Railway Commissioners are persons holding a judicial office within the meaning of section 131 of the Criminal Code. It also makes certain provisions with respect to section 133 of the Criminal Code, providing that the enactment contained in that section should extend to and include the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, and persons holding the office of such commissioners from time to time.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

DOMINION CONTROVERTED ELECTIONS ACT, AMENDMENTS.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 5) further to amend the Dominion Controverted Elections Act. He said: The immediate occasion of the introduction of this Bill is a recent decision of the Supreme Court of Canada by which the existing law has been interpreted as preventing further proceedings upon an election petition, if it is established upon preliminary objection that the petitioner has been guilty of hiring a team for the conveyance of voters to the polls. A curious anomaly of the law as it exists at present is, that under a judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada, and under the law as interpreted by them, a petitioner who has been guilty of very much grosser corrupt practices, who has been guilty of bribery, personation, or any offence of that character is not disqualified from carrying on a petition; but if, instead of any of these acts, he has committed the less serious offence of paying 25 cents or 50 cents to convey a sick voter to the poll, he is absolutely debarred from becoming a petitioner, and any petition filed by him falls to the ground. I think it is undesirable that the law should remain in this condition, and therefore I am introducing this Bill. I may say in this connection to the Prime Minister, or to the Minister of Justice who, I believe, have under consideration some amendments to the Dominion Controverted Elections Act, that I should be very happy indeed to have this Bill referred to a committee of which I have given notice on the Order Paper, or to some similar committee, in order that the whole question of the prevention of corrupt practices, and of further important amendments of the Dominion Controverted Elections Act, should engage the attention of that committee and the attention of the House of Commons and of the government, before the conclusion of the present session.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

THE RAILWAY ACT, 1903, AMENDMENT.

Mr. E. A. LANCASTER (Lincoln and Niagara) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 6) in amendment of the Railway Act, 1903. He said: This Bill is required to correct what, I think is an unintentional piece of legislation passed in 1903, whereby as the law now reads, a land owner, in case of an arbitration by a railway company, is precluded from expediting proceedings, and getting the matter determined. Before 1903 either party, the land owner or the railway, could expedite the proceedings, could apply to the proper court for the appointment of the arbitrators and get the matter wound up. By some peculiar wording of the statute as consolidated in 1903—one can hardly tell how it crept in, but these things happen—the judges are now deciding in Ontario, and I think deciding correctly on the letter of the statute, that only the railway company can expedite the proceedings. Manifestly that is an injustice to the land owner. This Act is to rectify that and allow the land owner and the railway company the same rights in regard to expediting the proceedings.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

CERTIFICATES TO MASTERS AND MATES OF SHIPS.

Mr. E. A. LANCASTER moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 7) to amend the Act respecting certificates to masters and mates of ships. He said: This is the Bill that I introduced last session, later in the session than otherwise would have been done because of an objection made to the Bill as I first introduced it. The Bill as it is now introduced was not debated last session. It is principally to provide that masters and mates in inland waters shall be British subjects as it is provided that masters and mates of American vessels shall be United States citizens, in order to give the Canadians the same protection against American citizens as the Americans have against Canadian citizens. It provides secondly that the examiners of these masters and mates shall be competent lake navigators instead of non-professional men as they are or may be now.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

THE RAILWAY ACT, 1903, AMENDMENT.

Mr. E. A. LANCASTER moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 8) in further amendment of the Railway Act, 1903. He said: This is in effect the Bill on which we had a lot of discussion last session, the Bill which the Minister of Justice was kind enough to call my hardy annual. The hardy annual is hardier to-day because the rights of the people are being trampled on more than they were then, and I presume it will continue to grow hardier every year until it is properly dealt with. The Bill is not exactly in the same words as last session; it is drawn in a different form in order to meet every objection then raised to the Bill except the main one that the people are not entitled to the protection. That objection I ask this court to overrule.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

THE RAILWAY ACT, 1903, AMENDMENT.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN (South York) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 9) to further amend the Railway Act, 1903. He said: This Bill is similar to a Bill which I have introduced on more than one occasion in this House. It provides that the charges of the express companies shall come under the jurisdiction of the Railway Commission. It provides also that the telephone companies and the railway companies shall only be allowed immediate damages in cases where a railway company has to admit the wires of any telephone company. The third clause provides for a maximum two cent passenger rate on all railways in Canada.

THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF COMMONS ACT, AMENDMENT.

Hon. CHARLES FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 10) to amend the Act respecting the Senate and House of Commons. He said: This Bill proceeds on the lines indicated by the hon. the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) a moment ago respecting the Bill which he obtained leave to introduce, except that he is proceeding by way of amendment to the Criminal Code, while I proceed by way of amendment to the Act respecting the Senate and House of Commons. However my hon. friend sees the propriety of submitting this Bill as well as the other to the committee which I hope to see appointed when it is asked for by my hon. friend (Mr. R. L. Borden) or myself.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

MONEY-LENDERS ACT, AMENDMENT.

Hon. CHARLES FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 11) respecting money lenders. He said: This Bill is precisely the same as the Bill which was passed in the Senate in 1900. It protects borrowers from being subjected to exorbitant rates of interest. It will be found on examination that this Bill proceeds practically on the lines of the Bill introduced in England some where about 1900.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

THE LORD'S DAY.

Hon. CHARLES FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 12) respecting the Lord's Day. He said: By way of explanation I would like to say that in the action of the Attorney General of Ontario and the Hamilton Street Railway, the Privy Council, in July 1903, held that the Ontario Act to prevent the profanation of the Lord's Day, treated as a whole, was beyond the competency of the provincial legislature to make. It was therefore deemed advisable to make legislation by this parliament which undoubtedly has the power to legislate in the form in which this Bill is introduced. The Bill prohibits sales, the prosecution of ordinary work or business, excursions, games for prizes, the opening of places of public amusement for which an admission fee is charged, to advertise any performance or other thing prohibited by this Act. The provincial Acts now in force in any province shall remain in force.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

JUDGES OF PROVINCIAL COURTS.

Mr. HAUGHTON LENNOX (South Simcoe) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 13) respecting the judges of provincial courts. He said: This is a Bill to amend an Act which was introduced and passed last year by which we increased the salaries of judges of the provincial courts. During the discussion it was stated that the judges would not after that engage in arbitration. It has been found that in some instances the judges have not understood the Act in the way that evidently the government intended it should be understood. This Bill is to prevent the practice of judges engaging in arbitrations other than those assigned to them by the government or cases of that kind. The Bill I now introduce provides that this shall not apply to any arbitrator who has actually entered upon his duties before the passing of this Act, not that it would create any complication, because generally there is provision in the instrument or Act under which arbitrators act that would prevent any difficulty—but inasmuch as it might be a hardship to some gentlemen who are at present engaged in arbitrations. It may be said, it was said last time, that judges as honourable men would not act. I do not know that there is anything dishonourable in a judge acting under the law as it exists, and the judges evidently assume that the law allows them still to act as arbitrators. This is to prevent that.

There is also provision in the Bill to enable us to get returns, more particularly in reference to the duties performed by county court judges, so that parliament will be in a position to secure what has been announced as the policy of the government or at all events that the distribution of the business will be more equitable than it has been in the past.

ADDRESS IN ANSWER TO HIS EXCELLENCY'S SPEECH.

The House proceeded to the consideration of His Excellency's speech at the opening of the session.

Mr. WILLIAM ERSKINE KNOWLES (West Assiniboia), Mr. Speaker, it is not without much mental perturbation that I rise to address you on an occasion such as this. I would, Sir, that I were able to speak as I should wish, and as I feel this occasion demands from me. I must, in the first place, express my gratification at, and my appreciation of the honour that has been conferred upon me in my being asked to assume this task, which I now have in hand. I desire, however, to take it rather as a recognition of the importance of western Canada in this stage of the nation's history, and especially as a recognition of the importance of that great constituency of West Assiniboia, which I have the honour to represent.

There are, Mr. Speaker, a great number of paragraphs in this speech from the Throne, but it is my purpose to speak to only a very few of them, and, that the time of this House may not be unnecessarily taken up, I shall without delay address myself to those two or three announcements in the speech which it is my purpose to refer to. I purpose, in the first place, making some remarks on the subject of life insurance, a subject which is attracting a great deal of attention throughout Canada at the present day, and a subject which will, no doubt, attract a great deal of the attention of this parliament during the present session. I submit, Sir, that the whole theory of life insurance is good. The philosophy of men endeavouring to make provision for their widows and orphans is doubtless sound. But the danger is that in the stampede for business and in the mad rush for personal gain, certain persons may forget the primary end of life insurance, and may make their own personal ends primary to that which in itself should be primary. The danger is that they may be tempted to make the end which should be secondary the primary purpose of their exploitation of the life insurance business. There is nothing surer than that we cannot have life insurance unless we are willing to pay for it, but I submit it is one of the first duties of this parliament to see that when men do pay for life insurance they shall get genuine life insurance. It is incumbent on this Canadian parliament charged with the duty of safeguarding the best interests of the Canadian people, to see that the widow is not left destitute and that the orphan is not robbed of the rightful provision which may have been made by a prudent father. I doubt if there is any subject which this parliament can take up for consideration which is the foundation stone of a greater number of Canadian homes and hearts than is this very subject of life insurance. I believe it is at the bottom of the confidence and assurance, not of thousands, not of tens of thousands but of hundreds of thousands of Canadian homes at this present hour. And Sir, I trust that this Royal Commission which has been appointed by the government will address itself to the duties which are placed before it, conscious of the enormous responsibilities which rest upon it, desirous of using every power which is placed in its hands to the end that that commission may attain the object which this government had in view in appointing it. Some of the life insurance companies have been good enough, Mr. Speaker, to come forward and voluntarily offer their assistance to this commission. For my humble part I view their readiness askance. If a judge were upon the bench and if some person were to be tried by him—and life insurance in Canada is now on its trial—if some person were to be tried, or if some corporation were to have its system investigated and that corporation should suggest to those appointed to investigate, what part of its career should be open for investigation, I should think that would be a most anomalous condition and open to grave suspicions. I trust that this life insurance commission will be guided entirely by its own motives, entirely by its own judgment, For my part, I think no more of the life insurance system in Canada from the fact that certain life insurance kings have come forward and stated their desire to help this Royal Commission on insurance. There have been suspicions aroused in this country because of the sad exposures which have been made of the insurance business in the state of New York. I believe it is wholesome that such exposures have been made, for if there be any fraud in New York or if there be any fraud in Canada the sooner we know it the better. And I am not so sure that there may not be fraud in Canada. If the opportunity has presented itself to insurance men in Canada just as it presented itself to insurance men in New York, I would be very slow to expect that all the insurance men in Canada are so honest and so high in their idea of honour and principle that they would let escape the chance to make themselves personally rich. I trust the members of this insurance commission will address themselves to their task, not with the desire to make good fellows of themselves with the life insurance men, but rather for the purpose of finding fraud, rather expecting fraud, and if you look for fraud it is only in that way you will find fraud if fraud there is. It is impossible at this juncture to say what legislation may eventually be presented to the House on this matter. I doubt if such legislation has yet been decided upon by this government; in fact the very importance of the commission consists in this, that the report which they shall make will form the basis and give the data upon which legislation will be presented to this House in due course of time.

There is another paragraph in the speech from the Throne which I as the representative of a western constituency am especially desirous of referring to. His Excellency has, I think, most naturally expressed the pleasure he had when visiting our western provinces in September last; I say most naturally, because surely when we recall the fact that from the year 1867 down to the first of September, 1905, the great purpose of confederation was awaiting its consummation, and that only on the first of September last that consummation was attained; it surely, Mr. Speaker, was most natural that His Excellency should find great pleasure in being present at the birth of the new provinces. The weather, Sir, was beautiful on the day of the inauguration ceremonies. I am happy to say that the weather in the western prairies is almost always beautiful—unfortunately my voice is poor to-day for I have been under the doctor's care ever since I came east. We had present on that occasion distinguished personages ; distinguished personages who too seldom visit the west, and who, I trust will come oftener. We had on that occasion cordial harmony among all the people of the western provinces ; a harmony too soon to be rent asunder by a political warfare so bitter and so passionate that I suppose Canada has never seen its like. We had our children there in thousands raising their voices in the prairie air, singing their Canadian songs so beautiful and with such ardent youthful patriotism. I am not at all surprised, Sir, that His Excellency should be touched with the scene, and that he should in the speech from the Throne give vent to the pleasure which he felt on the occasion of his visit to the cities of Regina and Edmonton. And, Sir, I am here to-day to say that every man, woman, and child in Alberta and Saskatchewan have as happy a remembrance of the visit of His Excellency as he has of his visit to us. Sir, we are pleased to know that in the highest position in this country we have a man who takes such a vital interest in the West; an interest which I am sure is well deserved. The day will never come when any visitors will be more heartily and gladly welcomed within the borders of Saskatchewan and Alberta than will be His Excellency and his gracious partner in life whenever they wish to honour us with their presence. I have said Sir, that it was a most happy occasion. There was harmony and peace on that early September day, but I am sorry to say that that harmony was soon rudely broken.

I am sorry to have to say, Sir, that scarcely had the smoke of that departing train vanished on the horizon of the prairie than men came into our midst to begin a religious agitation; and I am bound to say that this outbreak of bitter religious hatred did not arise among ourselves. It was brought in from the east. We, in the west are not responsible for that. We are capable of looking after our own religious affairs, Mr. Speaker. We worship at our own shrine, use our own prayer book, and teach our children as we wish; and we desire no interference from men in any eastern province. When the day comes that we are in such consummate ignorance that we need their assistance in religious matters, we shall be happy to ask for that assistance. Mr. Speaker, I make no apology for bringing this matter before this House. It is true that it was a provincial election which we were launched upon; but I am sure that all the western members of this House, both Liberal and Conservative, will bear me out in saying that the issues threshed out in that campaign were not provincial issues, but Dominion issues. The issue was the Autonomy Bills that were passed in this House by the hon. members now present. We heard scarcely a word about provincial politics. We discussed and voted upon the measures called the Alberta Act and the Saskatchewan Act respectively. There were a great many amusing features in that campaign. I never saw a country so full of legal men. I have heard section 91 of the British North America Act learnedly discussed in prairie school houses by men who never held a law book in their hands. I have heard the opinions of Canada's greatest legal lights rudely traversed and these men declared to be in error. I am sorry to have to say that there was a darker side to that campaign. I am sorry to say that in the discussion of the Alberta and Saskatchewan Acts we were called on as Protestants to rise as our forefathers did in the days of old, when the Armada set out to attack the shores of England. We were reminded of the thumb screw and the rack. It was a campaign of monstrous intolerance. All those who had anything to do with the Dominion government were described everywhere as men banded together to rob the western people of what they held dearest. Agitators came from the east to attack the dearest treasure of a man's soul, his religion, and to use it for the most base and contemptible purposes. Mr. Speaker, I am reflecting on no political party in Canada, I have every respect for a good Liberal, and I have every respect for a good Conservative : but we were up against a thing called the Provincial Rights party, from which may the good Lord ever deliver us. That campaign, however, came to an end, and the ballots were at last taken. The Liberal party has never desired any other tribunal than that of public opinion; it knows no court of appeal other than that of the polling booth, whether in the great cities of the east or on the lonely prairie of the west; and to that tribunal we appealed, into the polling booth we went and out of fifty seats that were contested in the Northwest the Liberals won forty and our opponents ten. Since then we have had by-elections in the constituencies of Saskatchewan and West Assiniboia. In Saskatchewan the Liberal candidate was elected by acclamation, and in West Assiniboia, which I have the honour to represent, the Provincial Rights Association met and the Conservative Association met, and they decided to bring no man into the field. It has been said that the present Liberal government of Saskatchewan won power through the influence of the back townships; but in Western Assiniboia we have the three largest cities, any one of them larger than any other town in Saskatchewan—Regina, Moosejaw and Medicine Hat; and yet our opponents met in convention and decided to put nobody into the field. As I have said, Mr. Speaker, I mak no apology for bringing this matter into this House, because it was a Dominion issue which was fought out in that campaign; and, as the late election was held by virtue of the legislation of this House of last session, it might be in order for me to report respectfully to you that the two infant governments of Alberta and Saskatchewan have commenced their duties under the most happy auspices. In Alberta we have a cabinet which leaves little to be desired, one that is both capable and strong. Indeed, our only objection to it is that it is too strong, because the opposition is composed of only two members, the leader and the whip. In the province of Saskatchewan we have a government which, in proportion to the size of the House, is more strongly entrenched in power than the present government of the Dominion; and that government is presided over by a man who I believe has the affection of almost all the members of this House. Whether he has the affection of all or not, I am sure that he has the admiration and respect of every member of this House, and I am happy to report that he and his cabinet, one of whom was also an estimable member of this House, are addressing themselves to their duties with that same industry and efficiency which they manifested in the performance of their duties as members of this House. After all is said and done, after the elections in Alberta and Saskatchewan, which, as I have said, resulted in the return of forty Liberals to ten opponents, and after the by-elections which went by acclamation, I believe I am free to say to-day —and I believe that many of those who do not see eye to eye with me in political matters will bear me out—that this school question which was used in the Northwest Territories as a tool for purposes of the most base and contemptible kind, has been sunk into the limbo of forgotten things.

His Excellency also makes reference to the prosperity of the country and to the immigration which has taken place. I am happy to say that the immigration which promises to flow into our country in the present year is likely to be larger than any we have yet seen. There are many coming to us from Continental Europe, and this is an immigration which particularly impresses itself upon our eastern provinces, as they pass through them from our Atlantic ports. But there is another large inflow which I do not believe hon. members from the east fully appreciate. In the town in which I have the advantage to reside, the good city of Moosejaw, we have now a twice-a-day train service from the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis, and every day two trains are crowded with agriculturists of the very best type from the adjoining republic coming to settle on our western prairies. This large and valuable element is perhaps not so much appreciated by hon. members of this House and its importance not so fully recognized as it deserves to be, because these people do not pass through our eastern cities as do the immigrants from the European continent; but it is one whose value in the building up of our country we cannot too much appreciate. Here let me say a word with regard to the Doukhobors and Galicians against whom we have had cast so many slurs in past years. I desire here to give my testimony to the fact that these Doukhobors and Galicians are men who are wringing out of our Northwest Territories the money that goes east and helps to build up eastern manufacturing industries and enables eastern capitalists to invest in automobiles and other luxuries which are the perquisites of wealth. Let those who are so ready to criticise and cavil at my fellow citizens, the Doukhobors and Galicians, come out to the Northwest and they will there see for themselves what honest industrious citizens these immigrants make —citizens who would not be a discredit to any country.

Sir, the Dominion of Canada has nothing to-day to complain of. Our west is enjoying unprecedented prosperity, and the outflow of that prosperity is shown in the many prosperous factories which are doing business in the east. Our western crop last year of wheat amounted almost to one hundred million bushels, and that crop we had great difficulty in moving to the sea-board. Our farmers would come almost at daybreak to the grain elevators and wait until daybreak the next day and even then could not always succeed in getting their wheat unloaded. Yet we find faint hearted people who say that we do not need another transcontinental railway line. Sir, that line cannot be built one day too soon. In my humble opinion it should have been constructed five years ago. Until that line is in operation, there will be no chance of relieving the great congestion in traffic under which we are suffering. The west, Mr. Speaker, is to-day only on the threshold of its greatness. We have as yet only one transcontinental line completed and the country served by that line is as yet but sparsely settled. In a few years we will have three through lines; and the development which the country will then have reached very few people at present really can realize. Let the men of the east go on building more manufacturing establishments because we shall need all the products they can supply. The capitalists and manufacturers of the east are, as a rule, unable to-day to realize the great possibilities of the west. You must live in that country, Sir, before you can begin to realize the great demand which is bound to come from the settlers on our vast prairies for everything the industrial centres of the eastern provinces can supply. I am happy to say that we have every reason to believe that under the new minister of the Department of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) who now so ably and acceptably presides over that department, the prosperity we enjoyed in the past will continue. That prosperity which heaven's smile has awakened in the west has come to stay, and we shall soon see that great country take its place side by side with the east. Out on our broad prairies, Liberals and Conservatives alike, English speaking and men of other races, Doukhobors and Galicians—all who dwell under that prairie sky desire to go on marching from day to day faithfully, honourably and persistently until they attain the height of Canada's national greatness. Sir, I beg to move that a humble address be presented to His Excellency the Governor General in reply to the speech from the Throne.

MR. WILLIAM CHISHOLM (Antigonish). It is with much diffidence, Mr. Speaker, that I rise to second the motion of my hon. friend from Western Assiniboia (Mr. Knowles), that an humble address be presented to His Excellency in reply to the speech from the Throne. When I was asked by the right hon. and revered leader of the government (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) to undertake this task, I hesitated, much as I appreciated the honour, because I felt conscious of my utter inability to fittingly do justice to the occasion. But inasmuch as I regard the invitation as a special compliment to the province from which I come and the constituency which has honoured me by having recently chosen me as its representative in this parliament, I felt that my duty compelled me not to persist in my reluctance. Besides I was further encouraged to undertake this responsible duty by my confidence that hon. members on both sides will favour me with that kindly indulgence which the House always extends to new and inexperienced members. When I tell you, Mr. Speaker, that last Thursday afternoon was the first opportunity I ever had of witnessing, even as a spectator, the deliberations of this House—or for that matter the deliberations of any parliament or legislature—you will, I am sure, sympathize with me in my inexperience and view my shortcomings with all the greater leniency. I therefore cast myself on the indulgence of this House when I attempt, in my humble manner, to offer a few observations on the speech from the Throne. Before proceeding to do so, however, I desire to say that the hon. gentleman who preceded me has dealt so exhaustively and in such eloquent and felicitous language with the salient features of the speech that but little remains for me to do except re-echo the sentiments he so happily and forcibly expressed.

It must be gratifying to hon. members on both sides, and to the country at large, to know that Canada is making such great progress and enjoying such marked prosperity. The gigantic strides which our young nation has made in every avenue of business, since the advent of the present government to power, has attracted the attention, and indeed the admiration, not merely of the United Kingdom and the neighbouring Republic, but of the whole civilized world. As Mr. Alfred Mosely has said in the London 'Times,' Canada is today the brightest jewel in the empire. No country, sir, has a happier, a more contented or a more prosperous population than Canada possesses. Every branch of industry—agricultural, manufacturing and commercial —has felt the throb of progress during the past ten years and developed to an unprecedented extent. Our agricultural productions have surpassed our most sanguine expectations, and for these products our farmers have received greater prices on the whole, than ever before. In our cities and towns the throb of machinery and the busy hum of industry greet the ear. Our manufacturing establishments have extended and prospered as they never did before. Indeed the great difficulty which our manufacturers experience is in keeping pace with the demand and coping with the increased business they are called upon to perform. At no time in our history have our working men been more busily employed or received better pay. Only by a comparison of the statistics of our country from time to time can we estimate and properly appreciate the progress we are making. However, I do not propose, Mr. Speaker, to run the risk of trespassing beyond the limits of the patience of this House by presenting an array of figures. As a rule figures are dry and unattractive, although those I would present on this occasion should be interesting inasmuch as it is the happy, pleasing tale of our country's progress and prosperity they unfold.

While assuring you that I do not purpose to enter into any statistical details, I desire to submit a few facts and figures illustrating our country's progress. When I tell you that in 1896 our exports and imports were $121,000,000 and $118,000,000 respectively while in 1904 they had increased to $214,000,000 and $259,000,000 respectively, and that since the latter date there have been proportionate increases, we gather sone idea of the progress we are making. Take agricultural exports: For the seven months ending January last, our agricultural exports amounted, in round numbers, to $84,000,000; for the corresponding months of the previous year, these exports were $66,000,000, an increase of $18,000,000. Is it any wonder that a broad, happy smile suffuses the honest countenance of the farmer? Take also the case of the manufacturers: For the seven months ending in January last, the manufactured goods exported from Canada were $13,250,000, while for the corresponding period of 1904-05 they amounted to $12,000,000. Is there any sorrowful wail in the announcement of these figures ? Do these figures show that the manufacturing industries of our country are languishing, paralyzed or tottering into decay ?

In our mining industries we observe similar development. The production of our mines for 1905 showed an increase of $1,800,000 as compared with 1904, and this despite a reduction of about $2,000,000 in the Klondike. Applying the usual tests for determining the country's development we find that the business of Canada has increased during the last ten years two-fold. Ten years is a short time even in the lifetime of a man ; ten years is a very short time in the history of a country. Yet, in ten years we see this splendid increase.

Let us compare the total trade of the country at different times. In 1896 our total trade was less than $240,000,000. During the year just closed our total trade exceeded $500,000,000. Even if we make no progress in the next five months over the corresponding five months of the past year we shall still have reached the sum of $514,000,000 in our total trade for the year. Another gratifying fact that I might mention is that in its trade per capita Canada occupies third place among the countries of the world. Belgium and England are in advance of us, but Canada makes a good third. These figures should inspire us with pride in our country and should fill us with unbounded confidence in our future.

Nor has this progress been confined to one particular part of the country. In every province of the Dominion there has been general prosperity. The honourable mover of the address referred to the great prosperity of the west. I may be pardoned if I speak of the condition of affairs in the east. A very substantial measure of prosperity has been enjoyed during the past year by the people of the maritime provinces and especially the people of Nova Scotia. In the east a new city arose a few years ago, the city of Sydney. I was surprised to learn, as I did from an article in the Maritime ' Merchant,' that, within a radius of 18 miles of Sydney, 17,112 men were employed with a monthly pay-roll of $765,049. It may not be unknown to you Mr. Speaker, that a few years ago the Cape Breton towns were in a semi-comatose and decadent condition. Thanks to the wise policy of the local legislature of Nova Scotia and the generous encouragement of this government, the scene has been changed. The Dominion Coal Company was established there some years ago, and its establishment marked the beginning of a new era of industrial prosperity for Cape Breton and for Nova Scotia. After that came that gigantic enterprise the Dominion Steel Company. With its geographical situation with the conditions that obtain industrially—coal and ore iron being found out on the spot—there can be no doubt at all that other industries will soon spring up in that quarter, making for the wealth and prosperity of our Dominion. Sydney, I may say to you, is to-day but in its swaddling clothes as an industrial centre. Yet you will be surprised Mr. Speaker to know that more money orders were issued last year from that office than from any other office in eastern Canada. The older cities of Halifax and St. John fall behind Sydney in that respect. In referring to the local conditons in the east, I do so in no sectional spirit, but as giving a sample brick of the progress and prosperity enjoyed from one end of Canada to the other—it is the same pleasant story from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Mention is made in the speech of the gratifying progress made in connection with the Transcontinental railway and the surveys of the eastern division of that line. It is gratifying to know that already 395 miles of the eastern division have been laid. Although the western section is not under the directional control of the government, yet as it is an integral part of this grand enterprise, it is interesting to note that already nearly a thousand miles of the western portion has been placed in the hands of the contractors. The importance of this railway it is impossible to over estimate. It will make for the greatness of Canada not only materially but sentimentally as well, for it will have the effect of cementing the different provinces of the Dominion. The fathers of confederation recognized the importance of such means of promoting this sentiment of unity, for, at the time of the union in 1864, it was made a condition of confederation that the Intercolonial Railway should be built to connect the eastern and the western provinces as they then stood. In like manner, when this transcontinental railway shall have been completed, there will be a unification of the provinces of Canada and this growing national spirit will be intensified.

As to the importance of this transcontinental railway it is unecessary for me to make any comment. Now that the tide of immigration has set in toward our shores, now that we are receiving this influx of settlers from England, Scotland, Ireland and the United States, the imperative urgency of this road becomes apparent. The honourable mover of the address fears that it has come too late. Let us hope that such is not the case. When that road is built, and when the vast trade that has been developed between the eastern countries, such as China, Japan and India, and the European countries, finds a highway across Canada, this transcontinental railway will be taxed to its utmost capacity. The eastern portion of Canada, Nova Scotia, as the long wharf of the Dominion, will then become the loading and unloading ground for this great world traffic.

In connection with the question of immigration, I wish also to say that it is most gratifying indeed to find such a large number of Americans coming over to this country to make for themselves here happy and peaceful homes. They are a most desirable class of settlers, they are thoroughly familiar with the conditions which confront them on their arrival, and it is gratifying to know that those who have already come into this country have taken kindly to our institutions, and that they are making the very best class of settlers that we have. Whilst we all have an abiding faith in Canada and her institutions, and have the fullest confidence in her ability and capacity to absorb and assimilate all nationalities and all classes that may come to her shores, and that they will become good peaceable and contented citizens generally, all working together towards the common goal—the making of Canada into a great nation—still it is most satisfactory to know that a very large proportion of the immigrants we received during the past year were of British origin; and there is good reason to hope that still larger numbers of this class of immigrants will avail themselves of the splendid opportunities open to them in this country. Every steamer from the old country is loaded with immigrants from England, Scotland and Ireland. The immigration buildings at St. John and Halifax are indeed busy scenes when these steamers arrive. Cars loaded with colonists are being sent out westward conveying this immense immigration that is coming to our shores. Instead of our present population of six or seven millions. I do no hesitate to predict that in another decade Canada's population will reach fifteen, twenty or twenty-five millions.

Reference is made in the speech from the Throne to the taking over of the garrison at Halifax by the Dominion government, and making provision for the defence of Esquimalt. Sir, these are matters of historic interest. For one hundred and fifty years Halifax has been garrisoned by imperial troops. The last of these troops left our shores a few days ago. In some quarters we hear it alleged that Canada is recreant to her duty in the matter of defence, that she does not seem ready to assume her proper share of responsibility in contributing to the army and navy. It is indeed said that we are sponging on the British government in accepting the protection of her army and navy while refusing to contribute to their support. Mr. Speaker, nothing could be more incorrect. It is true we are not contributing directly to the imperial exchequer, but we are doing our duty, we are paying our way. Whilst we are grateful to Great Britain for the protection her army and navy affords us, and whilst we appreciate all that Great Britain is doing for us in that respect, still we do not by any means receive this protection as a charity or as a gratuity. We have done our duty manfully and well. Those who misrepresent Canada by saying that she does not bear her just proportion of the burden of national defence, I would refer to the speech of Sir Charles Tupper before the British Empire League in Ottawa in 1898. On that occasion he alluded to the fact that at the time of confederation, when commissioners went across to the old country to negotiate with the imperial authorities, the commissioners being Sir John A. Macdonald, Sir George Brown and Sir George Etienne Cartier. They discussed the relations between Canada and the imperial authorities, or rather the obligations that Canada should assume with respect to her defence ; and an agreement was made in writing that if a million dollars a year was spent by Canada on her militia, England with all the power of her army and navy, would be ready to assist Canada on all occasions and to protect her interests. Well, Sir, what has Canada done ? Not only has she spent a million dollars a year on her militia, but she has done far more. In building the Canadian Pacific Railway, without one dollar of imperial aid, Canada has contributed towards imperial defence, because Great Britain is now able to send troops over the Canadian Pacific Railway to man her fleets on the Pacific ocean. Without the Canadian Pacific Railway she would be unable to do so. The importance of the Canadian Pacific Railway in that connection was then pointed out by Sir Charles Tupper, and it has also been recognized by the Hon. Joseph Chamberlain in some of his speeches on imperial federation. But Canada has done more than that. She is now building a national transcontinental railway, and the benefit which the Canadian Pacific Railway has been to Great Britain in the manner I have alluded to, will be doubled by the building of the Grand Trunk Pacific. More than that, Canada has shown that she is ready and willing, when the occasion occurs to assist the mother country, and assist her most generously, as she did on the occasion of the South African war, when Canada sent thousands of her men to reinforce the imperial troops. Therefore, I say, that to-day we find that Canada is doing her duty, not, as I said before, by contributing directly to the imperial exchequer, but by taking upon herself a portion of the burden of defending this country, and by relieving the British government from the cost of garrisoning Halifax and Esquimalt. The cost of garrisoning Halifax and of providing for the defence of Esquimalt will be in the vicinity of a million dollars. It will cost about $800,000 to feed and maintain the men and another $200,000 to maintain the fortifications ; so that we are really relieving the British government to the extent of an additional million dollars annually by taking over these burdens. Canada does not take over these burdens as a matter of duty, but does it in a spirit of affection, does it cheerfully and of her own accord.

Mention has been made by my hon. friend who moved the address (Mr. Knowles) of the happy conditions that obtain in the new provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan. I am sure that every loyal Canadian will rejoice that so large a measure of peace and contentment prevails in that new country. Every other province in the Dominion cordially welcomes the entry of these new provinces as constituent members of confederation. It has been alleged in some quarters that a great deal of dissatisfaction exists in that country in consequence of the school clauses in the Autonomy Bills. The result of the by-elections for the federal house, the result of the local elections for these new legislatures—these should be a sufficient answer to the pretension that there is dissatisfaction in that country. These show clearly that the grievances alleged to exist there are simply figments of the disturbed imaginations of morbid newspaper men who are desirous of stirring up strife and sectionalism. But, Sir, if further proof were required of the happy condition that prevails in these new countries this is found in the third paragraph of the address from the Throne. There can be no mistaking the language that is there used. His Excellency in the speech from the Throne says :

> In no part of the world can a more contented population be found.

It is true that generally the speech from the Throne mirrors the opinions and views of the government, but in this particular instance that is not the case ; this particular paragraph is the testimony of the representative of the Crown who was out there himself, who saw for himself the conditions that exist and who knows whereof he speaks. It is gratifying, I say, to find such testimony, such conclusive testimony, of the peace and contentment that there prevail, and it augurs well for the future of these great provinces that such a condition should exist. The time was, and not very long ago, when the toiling masses seemed arrayed on the one side against the manufacturers on the other, when the rouge and the bleu viewed one another with suspicion if not with positive aversion, when Lower Canada and Upper Canada seemed jealous of each other. But that time has happily gone by, such sentiments are fast disappearing, in fact have already practically disappeared. We all recognize and understand the proper signification of true Canadianism. We realize the fact that if Canada is to be the great country that she is destined to be and that we all hope she will be, this prejudice and intolerance must cease. About a year ago we were threatened with one of those political religious storms that have done so much in the past to mar the progress and prosperity of our country. But the embers of intolerance could not be fanned into flame. The spirit of the nation was sound to the core.

I say it is particularly gratifying to know that in these new provinces of the west such a happy condition prevails. Vain are the hopes of those who hope to make this a great country unless the different nationalities which inhabit it live in peace and harmony. We have begun to appreciate the fact that in a country with a mixed population such as is ours, all cannot think and believe alike. But we respect each others opinions—call them prejudices, if you like—nevertheless. There will be bickerings and misunderstandings it is true ; but if the destiny of the country is to be successfully worked out it must be in a proper spirit—the spirit of generous forbearance, of toleration and mutual consideration.

I wish also to refer to the clause in the address which states that a measure to provide for the better observance of the Lord's Day will be introduced. It is gratifying indeed to find that such a Bill is to be submitted to this House. The due observance of the Lord's Day is a matter in which every citizen of Canada should be particularly interested, for if Canada is to be a great nation we must build on a sound basis, and a fundamental requirement is that a proper regard be had for the Christian Sabbath. Whilst our country cannot be legislated into morality, yet it is desirable that the sentiment, the principle of the recognition of the Lord's Day should be established. I have much pleasure in seconding the address which has been moved.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Carleton, Ont.) Mr. Speaker, it gives me a great deal of pleasure to extend my congratulations to the mover and seconder who have just spoken. In very well chosen and sometimes eloquent words they have addressed themselves to the task of proposing that this formal address be presented to His Excellency in response to the speech from the Throne. With nearly everything that these gentlemen have said I am sure that we will all be disposed to agree. Let me say, particularly to the hon. gentleman who moved the address, that I greatly regret that he was not in the House during the past session so that he might have been able by his eloquence and ability to urge upon this government and the leader of this government that the people of the west are able to take care of their own religious questions. I venture to think that possibly if we had had his presence during the past session he might have been inclined to put forward that doctrine with some qualification. It is also a little remarkable that so large a portion of his address should have been devoted to a subject which he describes as consigned to the limbo of forgotten things. I am glad indeed to learn from a gentleman as familiar as he is with conditions in the west, that the character of the immigration is so satisfactory. So far as the Galicians are concerned, my own personal observation, on the last occasion when I visited the west, confirms what the hon. gentleman has so appropriately stated. I have no personal knowledge with regard to the Doukhobors to whom he has also alluded. I might be permitted to say that if it is necessary to have an automobile in order to enable one to properly appreciate the good qualities of these settlers I regret that I am not in a position to class myself among those who have that privilege.

The hon. gentleman who seconded the address is from my own province and my congratulations to him are also hearty. He has given us some statistics which are very gratifying indeed in so far as they show the growth of the country. He referred to the broad, happy smile which overspreads the honest countenance of the farmers of this country. I do not think it is so broad or happy as the smile which overspread, I believe, the countenance of the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright), when some of these same farmers were urging on his colleagues, the Minister of Customs and the Minister of Finance, the importance of adherence by the Liberal party to the fiscal principles laid down in the Ottawa platform of 1893.

I desire before making certain observations on the matters referred to in the speech from the Throne, to express my very deep regret and the regret of gentlemen on this side of the House, at the loss we have sustained in the lamented death of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, the Hon. Raymond Préfontaine. Those of us who differed from Mr. Préfontaine on public questions recognized his great ability, the sincerity of his devotion to public interests, and especially the strong personal character and force which was behind the administration of his department, and which I believe would have done very much to bring about a better condition of things along the great St. Lawrence waterway. Mr. Préfontaine was a man of strong character; he was a man of strong opinions, he was fearless in the expression of his opinions, and I am sure that not one member of those who sit to the left of Mr. Speaker ever at any time felt the slightest personal feeling against him. We all liked him, we all recognized his ability, and we join with gentlemen on the other side in expressing our very great regret indeed that he should have been cut off in the vigour of his manhood, in the prime of his life and in the midst of the very great work in which he was then engaged. The occasion of his death led to the government of the French Republic recognizing this country and the public men of this country in a manner for which we all feel grateful. That recognition, not only by the French government, but by the British government as well, is deeply appreciated by every citizen of Canada regard less of his political opinions. It afforded a happy opportunity for the manifestation of that friendly spirit, that entente cordiale which exists now and which I hope always will exist between the republic of France and the British empire to which we own allegiance.

I will not refer at great length to the cabinet changes which have taken place during the recess. We have lost the presence in this House and in the government of Sir William Mulock; a man of very great experience in public life, a man of very great ability, a man between whom and myself—although we had some occasionally vigorous passages in parliament—there was never anything but the most friendly feeling. We have in his place the new Postmaster General; and I may be permitted, I suppose, to take the opportunity of congratulating my hon. friends opposite from the province of Ontario upon the touching proof of esteem and appreciation which they have thus received from the Prime Minister. This is strikingly evidenced by the fact that not one of them was regarded by the right hon. gentleman as competent to take charge of the Post Office Department. There are among these hon. gentlemen on the other side a great many men of experience in public life; men whom we on this side of the House at least have regarded as competent and capable to preside over almost any department of government. I regret that our opinion in that respect must be modified by the attitude of the Prime Minister towards these gentlemen. We all recognize the very great ability of the present Postmaster General (Hon. Mr. Aylesworth); a very eminent lawyer indeed, second, I am led to believe, to no man in Canada in his position at the bar. But, I have yet to learn that the duties of the Postmaster General require especially the services of a very eminent counsel, and I would have supposed that some of the able business men opposite would have perhaps been quite as competent to fill that very high position as my hon. friend, who I am sure will give every satisfaction to the public interest in discharging the duties of that office. The duties of the Post Office Department are undoubtedly important, but is there any reason to believe that any one of the fifteen or twenty gentlemen whom I see opposite—or whom I might see if they were in their places—would not have been just as competent to discharge the duties of Postmaster General as the hon. gentleman who has been selected for that office.

We deplore a little the late hour at which this session has been called. My right hon. friend the Prime Minister has alluded to the unfortunate accident which has happened to the Minister of Finance. I desire to express my very great sympathy, and also the hope that we may soon see that hon. gentleman in his place, in his usual good health and able to attend to public business. I accept the statement of the Prime Minister that owing to that unfortunate accident it is impossible to proceed with the revision of the tariff this session; although one might, I suppose, come to the conclusion, and not unreasonably, that after an interval of some seven or eight months the government might have arrived at a conclusion with regard to the tariff and might have made a revision this session notwithstanding the accident to the Minister of Finance. However, as I said, I accept unreservedly the statement of the Prime Minister and I shall make no further comment with respect to that particular subject.

But, if the government have not been able to come to a conclusion on the tariff in time to enable them to revise it at this session—I may say in passing it has been the same story now for five years ; that the tariff would be attended to at the next following session without the slightest possible shadow of a doubt—if the government have not been able to come to a conclusion on the tariff the Minister of Agriculture (Hon. Mr. Fisher) has been able to come to a conclusion upon a very important public question and has been able to announce a complete and absolute change from the policy of the government as laid down, not more than four years ago in a state document, and as reiterated by the Prime Minister in his recent speech in Toronto. I say, there must have been a complete change of policy on the part of the government, or else the Minister of Agriculture must be plunged in the most hopeless ignorance of what his own colleagues said at the colonial conference in 1902. We know that the Minister of Agriculture keeps pretty closely in touch with all public affairs and therefore we cannot attribute ignorance to him. Let us see what the Minister of Agriculture stated. I have one or two brief extracts from a speech which he delivered in Montreal on January 27, 1906, and I take the report of his remarks from his own organ the Montreal 'Herald,' in order that there may be no possible doubt about what he did say. He said :

> You know that when we gave a preference to Great Britain we did not ask for anything in return. That is the true principle upon which a preference should be given. What is given should be given free and spontaneously. When you come to making a bargain, when you come to haggling over conditions, you create all sorts of discordant notes, you create difficulties and you create friction, you create jealousy and you create suspicion.

We shall see a little later on when we come to quote from the language of his colleagues at the Colonial conference, whether this is not a most direct and forcible criticism upon the carefully thought out memorandum which was presented by the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance on that occasion. But that is not all. 'We farmers,' he says—I will not refer to the three tailors of Tooley street ; that is an old story :

> We farmers of Canada want no preference in the British market. . . . Our agricultural products require no preference in the English market. . . . I am going to say frankly as a farmer and Minister of Agriculture, that I am rather glad that England has decided not to give us a preference.

Then, further on, he said :

> England has not adopted a preference for Canada, and I think she did right.

The Minister of Agriculture, the Prime Minister and other members of the government have reiterated time and again the principle that so long as this remained a political question in Great Britain no opinion should be expressed one way or the other by public men in this country as to what Great Britain should do. There has been a general election in Great Britain—is the Minister of Agriculture so absolutely ignorant of political history as to believe for one moment that that question has been ended in Great Britain by the late election ? Yet before the echoes of that election have died away he ventures to stand up and assert, not only as a farmer but as Minister of Agriculture, that we do not want any preference from Great Britain, and that he is very glad that the people of Great Britain have given the verdict which they did, and that he for his part thinks that Great Britain has done right. If Great Britain has done right, it is not for the reason that the members of the administration of which he is a member did not ask Great Britain to take the opposite course. Let me read a resolution unanimously adopted by his colleagues who represented this government at the Colonial conference, and let us see how far it accords with the statement made by the Minister of Agriculture in his speech at Montreal. I will not allude to the circumstance that Col. Howard Vincent, on a certain festive occasion in this city when speaking of the campaign for preferential trade within the empire on which he had entered, was bidden Godspeed by the Minister of Agriculture. If it were not for the well known temperance principles which actuate that hon. gentleman on all occasions, I would be inclined to suppose that for once he had departed from his usual custom, and that he should not be held responsible for what he said on that occasion. But let us see how far the colleagues of the hon. gentleman are in accord with the principles which he has laid down on this great question in his recent speech at Montreal. Here are the words of his colleagues embodied in a resolution passed unanimously at the Colonial conference of 1902 :

That this conference recognizes that the principle of preferential trade between the United Kingdom and His Majesty's Dominions beyond the seas would stimulate and facilitate mutual commercial intercourse, and would, by promoting the development of the resources and industries of the several parts, strengthen the Empire.

And further on :

That the Prime Ministers of the colonies respectfully urge on His Majesty's government the expediency of granting in the United Kingdom preferential treatment to the products and manufactures of the colonies, either by exemption from or reduction of duties now or hereafter imposed.

You could not have a stronger or more express contradiction than that between the words of the Minister of Agriculture at Montreal and the words to which his colleagues unanimously gave their concurrence in the resolution which I have just quoted. But, Sir, we have more than that. We have a separate memorandum put forth at that Colonial conference embodying not the views of all the colonies, but the views of Canada alone as expressed through her responsible ministers present at that conference. Here is the language of that memorandum :

While urging that the benefits of the preference were such as to entitle Canada to the desired exemption from the duties on food products in the United Kingdom, the Canadian ministers stated that within certain limitations they were prepared to consider the request of Mr. Chamberlain for further concessions in return for the desired preference in the markets of the United Kingdom.

And a member of that very government who put this forward as embodying the views of the Canadian government and the Canadian people, sees fit, whether with or without the mandate of his colleagues I do not know, to absolutely contradict and dissent from the words which I have just read in his presence and in the presence of this House. Further on :

The Canadian ministers stated that if they could be assured that the imperial government would accept the principle of preferential trade generally, and particularly grant to the food products of Canada in the United Kingdom exemption from duties now levied, or hereafter imposed, they, the Canadian ministers, would be prepared to go further into the subject and endeavour to give to the British manufacturer some increased advantage over his foreign competitors in the markets of Canada.

Meanwhile the Canadian ministers determined to present to the conference a resolution affirming the principle of preferential trade, and the desirability of its adoption by the colonies generally, and also expressing the opinion of the prime ministers of the colonies that His Majesty's government should reciprocate by granting preferential terms to the products of the colonies in the markets of the mother country.

Over and over again, not only in the resolution to which Canada was a party, but also in the separate memorandum of the Canadian ministers, was a policy set forth absolutely different from that which the Minister of Agriculture has propounded at Montreal. The memorandum went on to say :

The Canadian ministers desired to have it understood that they took this course with the strong hope and expectation that the principle of preferential trade would be more widely accepted by the colonies, and that the mother country would at an early day apply the same principle by exempting the products of the colonies from customs duties. If, after using every effort to bring about such a readjustment of the fiscal policy of the empire, the Canadian government should find that the principle of preferential trade is not acceptable to the colonies generally, or the mother country, then Canada should be free to take such action as might be deemed necessary in the presence of such conditions.

I assume under these circumstances that the Minister of Agriculture has already in his pocket a request from the Prime Minister to give up his portfolio. There can be no question as to the policy which has been pursued by the government in at least one instance, and under less aggravated circumstances. I will not quote the speech of the right hon. the First Minister, nor his letter to the Hon. Mr. Tarte in full; but I shall quote just one sentence from the Prime Minister's letter, dated Oct. 21, 1902:

To remain a member of the government, and at the same time advocate a policy which has not yet been adopted by the government, was an impediment to the proper working of our constitutional system.

Well, Mr. Speaker, if it was an impediment to the proper working of our constitutional system that Mr. Tarte should have advocated a policy which had not yet been adopted by the government, how much more is it an impediment to our constitutional system that a minister of the Crown should publicly declare himself as absolutely opposed to a policy which has been set forth in a most solemn and constitutional document, and which has since been affirmed by the First Minister ?

But this is not the only instance we have had during the recess of new constitutional departures by ministers of the Crown. My hon. friend the Postmaster General found it necessary to address several public meetings in a by-election which made him member for North York. In doing so he made some rather important announcements, and was corroborated, with regard to some of these announcements, by another minister of the Crown, the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Hyman). Speaking at Newmarket on the 3rd November, 1905, as reported in the Toronto 'Globe,' the Postmaster General said, regarding certain measures passed at the close of the recent session :

But I do think there is one feature in regard to which amendment may well be looked for, and it is in regard ot the system of pensioning ex-ministers of the Crown. As I said before was not there, and I am not personally responsible, but I want to say on this occasion as a minister of the Crown or speaking as an individual, that personally I am opposed to the whole superannuation system. I can see personally no more reason why a public servant should have a superannuation allowance than any farmer who is working hard all his life, or blacksmith or merchant, should have a superannuation allowance.

Well, it is rather a novel constitutional theory that because a minister of the Crown accepting office did not happen to be in the cabinet at the time a certain measure passed, he is not responsible. I have always regarded it—I have the authorities under my hand, but will not go to the trouble of quoting them—as an elementary constitutional principle that any gentleman accepting a position in the cabinet, whether here or in Great Britain, made himself absolutely responsible for the measures that cabinet had passed and their actions with regard to these measures. There can be no question about that. My hon. friend the Postmaster General may have some warrant for his statements—I do not know about that—but I think it is a matter as to which we should have some explanation from the First Minister.

Then my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Hyman), speaking at Sarnia, said, as reported in the Toronto 'News' of the 14th November, 1905 :

> Sir Wilfrid Laurier, seeing the Indemnity Bill is unpopular with the people, has given his promise that it will be reconsidered at the next session when measures will be taken to have it satisfactorily amended.

Again, an hon. member of this House, the hon. member for West Lambton (Mr. Pardee) said, speaking at Oakdale, as reported in the 'Globe' of the 18th October, 1905 :

> He believed the pension clauses of the Bill were a mistake, and he was totally opposed to them. If elected he would work and vote for their repeal, and he understood the government would see to the revision of the Act in this respect early next session.

I bring these matters to the attention of the government and the country in order that we may have some proper understanding as to constitutional usage, as understood by the government, with regard to such matters. I have only this further to say respecting the subject alluded to by the Postmaster General—and it was alluded to by myself when speaking in the same by-election and in the by-election at Wentworth—that I should be very glad indeed to have the whole question opened up and the subject thoroughly discussed ; and in that discussion I should be most happy to have that particular measure in which I am supposed to be most personally interested taken up in the very first instance. If there is to be criticism upon the measures of last session, it seems to me that the best criticism lies in this, that they were passed so late in the session, and that they received no adequate explanation and justification. Let them be justified now or repealed. I believe that so far as the indemnity to members is concerned, it can be justified. I am prepared to discuss that question on the floor of the House. The pension measure was drawn hurriedly and not well considered. I agree with my hon. friend the Postmaster General that there are some features of that Bill which ought to be amended, and will give my support to amendments of it in that regard. And if there are any charges or statements to be made with regard to this measure, or with regard to the circumstances under which it was passed, it is right that those statements and those charges should be made here on the floor of the House in the presence of the gentlemen who are affected by them ; and I trust that we shall have that full, free and open discussion which will enable any hon. gentleman in this House to bring to the attention of parliament and the country any circumstances or features of the subject which he may think require condemnation by this parliament and the people.

I do not propose to revamp the discussion of last session with regard to the Autonomy Bills. I then took such ground with regard to those Bills as I thought right and in the public interest. That ground has been described and characterized in various ways. In some quarters it has been characterized as bigoted, in other quarters it has been characterized as anaemic. I think it was presented to this House with a fair measure of clearness, and I do not think there was any bigotry in the hearts of the members who supported the propositions made from this side. But referring to the establishment of the new provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan, there is one matter upon which I desire to say a few words, and that is the extraordinary series of incidents which led to the passing over of the man who had been prime minister of the Territories since 1891, and who had been a member of the Territorial council or legislature from 1888 to 1906. Mr. Haultain's record in the Territorial government received, I think, on every occasion, a practically unanimous endorsement by the people of the Territories. On the last occasion on which he appealed to the people, he went to them on the issue of provincial autonomy. They declared themselves in favour of the proposal that they should be established into new provinces. The government took up that question in January, 1905. Mr. Haultain was summoned and came to Ottawa. The Minister of Justice (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick) who had, largely, the care and preparation of the measures that were brought down, is in his place. I speak in his presence and he will correct me if I am inaccurate in what I am about to say. Mr. Haultain, in connection with the preparation of these mesaures, gave the government the benefit of his great experience and great ability; not only that, but he placed at their disposal the Territorial officers, so that every possible aid might be afforded to this administration in the preparation of these Bills. He did this generously and fairly and properly;—so great was his regard for the proprieties of public life, so complete his observance of the reticence which the conditions imposed upon him as a gentleman that, while that discussion with the members of the administration went on, he absolutely refrained from any communication with me or with my political friends as to the nature of that measure. He was opposed to certain provisions of the measure; and he had a right, as prime minister of the territories—nay, more, as a citizen of this country—to have his own opinions as to the wisdom of those provisions.

And what happened? Two provinces were established. Mr. Haultain took up his residence in the province of Saskatchewan. He had been prime minister of the Territories for fifteen years; he had been a member of the Territorial council for nearly eighteen years. Yet the lieutenant governor, whose chief adviser he had been for many years in that great country, saw fit to pass him by and to call a member then enjoying a seat in this House and who had not been a member of the Territorial legislature, at any time, I believe. Ignoring Mr. Haultain, the lieutenant governor called to the office of prime minister the gentleman to whom I have referred. I say that was not generous treatment, it was not fair nor even decent treatment, of Mr. Haultain. And I say, further,—and I say it of hon. gentlemen opposite to their faces—that I do not believe that this would have been done by Lieutenant Governor Forget except for interference from these hon. gentlemen. There may be a denial of that, but I venture to think that that denial will not be generally accepted by the people of Canada. The lieutenant governor, it seems to me would never have ventured to take the course he did with regard to Mr. Haultain if there had not been some dictation or some interference from those is power here at Ottawa.

What does it mean, if my assumption is correct? The office of lieutenant governor is an important office under the constitution. Is that office to be degraded, so that it shall become a mere part of the party machine? Is the lieutenant governor to co-operate with the government officials and the ballot thieves who steal elections? I venture to think that, of all the incidents by which the present administration will be judged, there is none that will more redound to their discredit in years to come than this ignoring of Mr. Haultain.

And we have the Minister of the Interior (Hon. Mr. Oliver). He is not in his place. I wish he were; I would like to make one or two observations in his presence in regard to his attitude during that election. He went into the new provinces, taking the ground that he was bound to interfere in the elections, because, as he said, his department had been attacked. How his department could be attacked in a provincial election in Alberta and Saskatchewan, I fail to understand. But if we wanted any denial of the statement of the Minister of the Interior, we could not have a more express and specific denial than that which has been given to-day by the member who moved the address, and who said that the discussion was upon subjects, with which the Department of the Interior is in no wise concerned. The Minister of the Interior went into these provinces, and, both by precept and example, he encouraged his officers to treat with the most absolute contempt a resolution which had been most unanimously passed by this House during a previous session. This resolution covered nothing new; it was simply an embodiment of a principle which had been acted upon by this government over and over again since it took office in 1896, a principle which had been declared over and over again by the Prime Minister himself when dealing with the interference of public officers in political affairs. This resolution was as follows:

> That whilst it is desirable that every official in the employ of the government of Canada should enjoy perfect freedom of political opinion and the untrammelled exercise of his franchise in accord therewith, no official should be engaged or be permitted to engage in partisan work of any description in the election of a representative to a provincial or Dominion legislature.

That resolution, accepted by both political parties, accepted by the Prime Minister, was passed by the House—much to the regret, as I observed at the time, of the Minister of the Interior. And what did the Minister of the Interior say about it in an interview in the west? Before reading that to the House, let me call the Prime Minister's attention to the way in which that principle has been enforced in the past with regard to Conservative officials. Over and over again, public officers have been dismissed by the present administration upon the statement of a member of this House that they had spoken or canvassed in favour of a political party. One man in the constituency I formerly represented, the city of Halifax, was dismissed upon the representation of Mr. Benjamin Russell, now a judge of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, that this officer at a public meeting, had asked him a question with regard to the Manitoba school question. This is what the Minister of the Interior said: They have the power of speech, and therefore they are entitled to express their political opinions. They are entitled to express them to homesteaders ; they are entitled to express them to men under their control ; they are entitled to go upon public platforms and express them ; they are entitled to express them as presidents and officers of Liberal organizations.

That is the idea of the Minister of the Interior as to the way in which a solemn resolution of this House, unanimously passed, should be observed by himself and by his officers in the west. And these officers felt very much encouraged. We do not know how many feats of daring they performed ; we do not know to what extent their efforts along certain lines have prevailed in the west. But we know that the curtain has been lifted just a little in one or two places, and we have a slight idea of the wonderful things which the officers of the Interior have accomplished in bringing about that endorsement of the government which has been referred to to-day with so much fervour by the gentlemen who moved and seconded the address to His Excellency. Two of these men, John F. Nelson, fishery inspector, and Charles Sutherland, Indian farm inspector, were polling officers, officials of the government of this country. Encouraged, I presume, by the precepts of the Minister of the Interior to which I have just alluded, they became polling officers, and they went just one step in advance of anything that has ever been perpetrated in the way of election frauds, even under the administration which has been in power since 1896. I do not know whether these men have been dismissed. Can the Minister of the Interior tell me whether they have been ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). Does the hon. gentleman want an answer ?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Yes.

Mr. OLIVER. Well, one of the gentlemen was not in the employ of the Department of the Interior, therefore he was not dismissed. The other gentleman was in the employ of the Indian Department and he has been dismissed.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I presume that the same course will be followed with him as was followed with the postmaster at Thessalon, and with the Indian Agent at Macleod. In three months we will find this gentleman whose services certainly deserve to be rewarded, promoted to another post, at a better salary, and still enjoying the patronage of the government of this country. That is the course which has been taken in a recent instance by this government with regard to public officials. Well, these gentlemen did not go through some of the usual formalities in ballot swindling which have been carried out by the tools, or the employees, of the Liberal machine in Ontario; they did not go through the formality of manipulating or switching ballots, they conceived a much more brilliant idea. They were dispatched to the back townships, from which the Prime Minister of the Territories announced that he expected a very strong support indeed, and he got it. The back townships were what he relied upon, and those men were determined to see that the back townships duly supported him. A ballot box was taken with them; the journey to the north was long and wearisome, and these gentlemen stopped by the wayside in some small community. They marked one hundred and fifty ballots or thereabouts, for the Liberal candidate, they did not give the Conservatives, the Provincial Rights candidate, the benefit of a single ballot; and they returned shortly after the election with the news of a magnificient sweep in the north in the cause of good government. The Minister of the Interior seems to imagine that he has done a remarkable thing in dismissing one of these men, that he has accomplished the wonderful feat in dismissing him. Is this man at large? Is he still walking as a free man in the Northwest? With whom is the administration of justice vested in that country ? So far as it is not vested in the provincial government, it is vested in this government, and one would think that when one of their own officials, although acting upon the precept of a minister of the Crown, had seen fit to commit a fraud of that kind, justice would not be slow to pursue him. For what reason have not some steps been taken to bring these men to justice ? This government, I presume, will throw the responsibility upon the provincial government, a government headed by the gentleman who has been eulogized so highly to-day by the mover of this resolution. Then the provincial government will say, I imagine, that as this man was an officer of the Dominion government, it is fitting that this government should take measures for his speedy and condign punishment. But it is the same old story. The Prime Minister smiles. I venture to think, Mr. Speaker, that this is not a matter for merriment.

Sir, we have had in this country a pretty long history of ballot frauds. We remember that a man by the name of Pritchett swore that he was employed by the Liberal machine to commit countless ballot frauds, not only that, but to train others to commit them. He went to the United States. He was supported there for a certain time by a salary, the source of which I do not know—I am not sure whether any hon. gentleman on the other side of the House could give us any information on that subject. He was supported there for a time, and when his salary did not reach him with the accustomed regularity, he came back to Canada. He made affidavits in the United States. We asked the government why they did not prosecute him, and the answer was that he had made the affidavits in the United States, and they were not the subject of a criminal indictment in Canada. He repeated the statements on oath in Canada, and still he was not indicted. Well, no prosecution has been taken against him from that day to this, he is still at large in this country. He has, in effect, challenged the late Ontario government and the Dominion government to take proceedings against him, but no step has been taken to that end. In the riding of West Huron one man, beyond doubt, switched twenty ballots at one poll. I was a member of the committee which investigated that matter. That man was a criminal beyond question. He was an officer of this House, he was a deputy returning officer, it was admitted that he was an officer of this House; but from that day to this he has gone scot free. My hon. friend who now represents Beauharnois (Mr. Bergeron) brought to justice certain of these scoundrels in the St. James Division, Montreal. Justice then did bestir itself, this administration bestirred itself, but it bestirred itself for the purpose of releasing from custody those men who had been committed to prison by the courts. I venture to think, Mr. Speaker, that this is not a subject for mirth, it is a subject for grave inquiry. These tools are not often punished. They seem to regard themselves as absolutely safe provided their party friends are in power and are in control of the administration of justice. The name of Canada should be famed throughout the world for the proper administration of criminal justice. Outside of these election frauds, I believe criminal justice is well and truly administered in Canada. But when has any government since 1896 whether at Ottawa or at Toronto, up to the recent change of government in that province—when has any government set its forces at work for the purpose of punishing these election frauds ? The answer is. never, one exception, namely, that this government, in 1896, used funds from the public treasury of Canada to attack their political opponents in the province of Manitoba. I will leave to the Prime Minister and to the Minister of the Interior to explain why it is that these officials of theirs who have been guilty of this astonishing and unheard of fraud, should be now walking as free men in the west without any apparent fear of any criminal prosecution being brought against them ?

There is one other subject, Mr. Speaker, upon which I desire to say a few words, and it is with regard to matters mentioned by the hon. gentleman who moved the address (Mr. Knowles). He referred to the insurance investigation. I do not look at that subject exactly in the way in which the hon. gentleman presented it to the House. I am not inclined to look askance at insurance companies. When they come forward and ask us to conduct a thorough examination, I think that is exactly what we might expect of honourable men who know that they have nothing to fear. I do not propose to be an alarmist in regard to this subject; I propose to consider none of these men guilty until they are proved to be guilty, and I do not for one moment suggest in advance that there has been anything wrong with regard to the conduct of insurance companies in Canada. But I think it was decidedly unwise for the government to forestall action by parliament just on the eve of calling parliament together. Public uneasiness has been referred to. It would have been proper, I think, for the government to consult the representatives of the people among whom that uneasiness exists and to learn from them something of the ideas of the people with regard to the investigation which should be carried on. The government have seen fit to depart from what I think would have been a wise course ; they have seen fit to constitute a commission, and I desire now to raise my protest against the appointing of judges of this country to positions of that kind. I do not think it is in accordance with the statute which we passed last session. I have not a word to say against Judge McTavish. I do not know him intimately, I have but a passing acquaintance with him, but I believe him to be an honourable man and I have no doubt he is a man of ability. I have not one word of criticism with regard to him except one, possibly, that I shall mention a little later on; my criticism is of the system and not of the appointment of Judge McTavish. We passed in the closing hours of the last session of parliament a statute in which we placed these words :

> No judge mentioned in this Act shall directly or indirectly, as director or manager of any corporation, company or firm, or in any other manner whatever, for himself or others, engage in any occupation or business other than his judicial duties, but every such judge shall devote himself exclusively to such judicial duties.

Now if this investigation is to be of the thorough character which we believe it will assume, how is it possible for Judge McTavish to devote himself exclusively to his judicial duties ? It is true there are words in the preceding part of the section which must be held on a strict legal view to control the words I have alluded to, but I venture to say that the government has contravened the spirit, if not the letter, of this statute by appointing Judge McTavish. My hon. friend the Minister of Justice spoke of this practice two or three years ago and he deplorel the appointment of judges to positions of this nature. I deplore it ; I do not think it is a good practice. If we have to appoint judges in Canada to positions of this kind, if we cannot find men at the bar or in business in Canada to assume these duties and to receive the confidence of the people that they will act fairly and uprightly, then there remains only one alternative; let us appoint the judges, but let us provide by statutory enactment that any duties of this character shall be part of a judge's judicial functions and that he shall receive no salary or emolument from the government of the day by reason of accepting a position of that kind. I do not believe it is necessary to go that far; I believe men can be found in Canada, men absolutely honourable and possessing the confidence of the people of this country who might be appointed to those positions instead of judges. For my part I desire to place on record my protest against appointing judges. We have had some experience of it in the past, and the result of that experience has not been a beneficial one. We have had judges in the province of Ontario appointed to deal with matters highly controversial in a political sense and, I say this with regret, but I am obliged to say it, the practice, which has been pursued of appointing judges in Canada to positions of this kind has lowered and has not raised the standard of public respect for the judiciary. If there is one thing in this country that we desire to maintain unimpaired more than another it is the standard of the judicial bench and the standard of public respect for the judicial bench. I have not one word to say against the bench of Canada, but the next worse thing to a bench that is not to be trusted is to have implanted in the minds of the people any possible suspicion of the men who sit upon the bench to judge the people of the country with regard to their lives and to their property.

Now for that reason I regret the appointment of Judge McTavish to that position. I might, if I saw fit, say a word or two with regard to some judicial appointments which this government have made. I do not desire to do so, I refrain from doing so simply for the reason that I think there is no worse feature which could possibly be brought into our life than the public idea that the bench of Canada is not what it ought to be. But I will say in passing that I sincerely trust that the government of this country in making appointments in the future will have less regard to partisan service and more regard to proper standards of learning and efficiency, than on some few occasions in the past. I do not desire it to be understood that I condemn the appointments of this government to the bench as a whole. They have made many excellent appointments to the bench of this country but they have made some few which have not my approval and have not, I believe, the approval of a great many men of their own party in the ranks of the profession to which I belong.

There is another observation with regard to this commission which I would like to make, and I do so with all possible respect to the gentleman whom I propse to mention. Mr. Langmuir of Toronto is a gentleman whose personal acquaintance I have not the honour of enjoying. He is, I believe, an able and honourable man, a man of spotless character. I understand he is a man of good ability and of thoroughly honourable and spotless character in every way, but he is the managing director of a corporation which has twenty-one directors and out of these twenty-one directors sixteen are directors of insurance companies. Now I do not think this is fair, either to the public or to the insurance companies, or to these gentlemen who are interested in the way I have mentioned. One of the directors upon that company is my friend the member for West-Toronto, Mr. Osler, and I believe, in fact I know, that Mr. Osler regards the appointment of Mr. Langmuir as very unfortunate for the reason that Mr. Osler is one of the directors of a corporation of which Mr. Langmuir is managing director and is also himself a director of an insurance company. The evil of the appointment is this, if there is nothing wrong in the transactions of the insurance companies of Canada—and I intend to believe there is nothing wrong until something wrong is proved—if there is nothing wrong in the transactions of these insurance companies, then it is not fair to the insurance companies themselves that a gentleman occupying a position of that kind should be appointed because the public unrest may still continue in view of the fact that he is closely in touch with the interests which would be so seriously affected if any wrong doing were disclosed. And on the other hand if there is anything wrong in the transactions of the insurance companies of Canada then certainly it is not right that a gentleman should be appointed who is so closely in touch with the interests which are to be investigated.

I only say this word further, in conclusion, that I sincerely trust that the language of the commission has been made so absolutely clear that as to render impossible the course which was pursued in the West Elgin investigation, of which commission Judge MacTavish was a member. With all possible respect to the three judges who constituted that commission, and believing sincerely that they acted according to what they deemed right, nevertheless I feel constrained to say that on that occasion at least they took a very narrow view indeed of the scope of the investigation which was committed to their charge. Mr. Finlay McDermott was the man whose seat had been stolen; admittedly stolen by the same methods as those to which I have alluded. He went before that commission and desired to be represented by counsel in the investigation of the very ballot frauds which had brought about his defeat for the time being. I looked over the record of the proceedings to-day. The judges in the first instance thought he could not interfere in the investigation; they said: there are Mr. G. H. Watson, K.C. and Mr. R. A. Grant, and these gentlemen will conduct the investigation, and if you have any information as to these frauds entrust it to Mr. Watson and Mr. Grant, and they will deal with the subject very satisfactorily. What charming and refreshing simplicity, to say the least. Later on, I believe, that counsel for Mr. McDermott was allowed to intervene but only in this way; he was not permitted to examine the witness in the ordinary way but the commissioners said to him: If you have any question to propound to a witness, propound it to us first and we in turn will propound it to the witness. Just imagine Mr. Hughes in New York conducting an investigation along this line.

I trust that the terms of the commission have been made so absolutely explicit that the investigation will not be handicapped by any such methods as those to which I have referred. The appointment of Mr. George F. Shepley is a good appointment; he is a very eminent counsel, a very able and honourable man. I have just one word to say about that; Mr. Shepley was appointed by this government in connection with the West Hastings ballot frauds and I have good reason to believe and I do believe that Mr. Shepley's initiative was very much handicapped by the instructions he received. He took very little initiative on that occasion. I am not saying that by way of criticism of Mr. Shepley because it is needless to say that he would carry out his instructions well, but it is desirable that his instructions with regard to this insurance investigation should be made public in order that we may know whether or not he has instructions to take the initiative and to make a very thorough and a very complete investigation, and a very able investigation too as he undoubtedly is competent to do. He is conducting the investigation as counsel and we ought to know that his instructions are such, that if that investigation is not carried out with the thoroughness and vigour which have characterized the investigations in the United States, the people of Canada will know whether to hold Mr. Shepley or the government responsible.

There are other matters in the speech upon which I might comment but better opportunities probably will occur later in the session, and I do not desire to detain the House. Sufficient it is to say that our wish is to aid the government in expediting business. The tariff has been eliminated from the matters which we are to consider. If the government will expedite the work by being ready, by being prompt, by bringing down their measures without any unnecessary delay, they will find us ready to second their efforts. Let them display business methods, let them not indulge in delay and procrastination, and they will find gentlemen on this side of the House disposed to assist them in every way in bringing about an early completion of the public business of this session.

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister. Mr. Speaker. The House has listened with marked interest to the addresses which have been delivered by our two young colleagues who have placed in your hands the resolution now before us. It is at this moment my very great pleasure to offer them my congratulations and to welcome them to this House. Both my hon. friend from West Assiniboia (Mr. Knowles) and my hon. friend from Antigonish (Mr. Chisholm) succeed gentlemen who during their parliamentary career won for themselves a large share of the esteem and respect of the members of this House. My hon. friend from West Assiniboia spoke warmly of his predecessor in the representation of that constituency. Those who have been associated with Mr. Walter Scott will agree that if my hon. friend (Mr. Knowles) did pay him a warm tribute of esteem, that tribute was fully justified. Mr. Scott impressed himself on this House by his ability, by his industry, by his courage, and by the devotion which he manifested upon all occasions to these western interests of which he was especially the representative. Indeed, such was his devotion to the interests of the west that he thought it due to himself to renounce the seat which he had in this House so that he might be able to give to the new province of Saskatchewan the whole of his ability, his energy, and his devotion. I am proud to say, notwithstanding the little slur which has been attempted by my hon. friend (Mr. Borden) that the people of Saskatchewan have responded nobly to the appeal of Mr. Scott. In this connection I would say that I am surprised—I say it deliberately—I am surprised at the attack the hon. the leader of the opposition thought fit to make on the lieutenant governor of Saskatchewan. My hon. friend (Mr. Borden) did not hesitate to say that for his part he had no doubt, nay more, that the whole of the people of Canada were satisfied that the lieutenant governor had been interfered with by this government, and perhaps by myself; and that unless there had been such interference he would have called Mr. Haultain and not Mr. Scott. I have only this to say to my hon. friend, that in throwing out that innuendo (it was not an accusation) against the lieutenant governor of Saskatchewan, he simply gives evidence that he does not know at all the character of the lieutenant governor of Saskatchewan. If he knew that gentleman as I have known him for more than thirty years, ever since he and I, we being of the same age, were in the city of Montreal; he as law student and I as a young lawyer, the leader of the opposition would know that any attempt to interfere with Mr. Forget in the discharge of his duties would have been met with a strong rebuke, no matter whence that attempt to interfere came. Mr. Forget could not have followed any other course than that which he followed. I have only to recall the facts which are familiar to all, to justify my statement that Mr. Forget could not have followed any other course in calling for an adviser to aid him in carrying out the government of that province. Mr. hon. friend (Mr. Borden) spoke of the attitude taken by Mr. Haultain when he was summoned to this House to help us in framing the constitution of the new provinces. I give all credit to Mr. Haultain for having assisted us and for having gone on with us so far as we were disposed to go on with him. But every one knows that as soon as a question arose as to which we could not agree with Mr. Haultain, and as to which we had to take issue with him, from that very moment Mr. Haultain ceased to give us his views and the benefit of his opinions, and from that moment he became an intense partisan. Everybody knows that Mr. Haultain thought fit—I am not questioning his motives—to take part in the struggle during last session in the by-elections in London and North Oxford. And every one knows also, that the language he made use of in both constituencies left no doubt at all that if he had the power he would do everything he could to destroy the constitution which we have given to the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Under these circumstances why should the lieutenant governor call to his counsels as his chief adviser a man who, instead of being in sympathy with the constitution which had been given to the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan, was openly avowing his intention of putting a ruthless hand upon it? Under such circumstances the lieutenant governor would have been worse than a criminal—I do not hesitate to use the word—if he had not called to his counsels somebody who was disposed to have everything in the new province made as harmonious as possible. It was his duty to see that there was harmony in the land, and not discord; and therefore the lieutenant governor, though he was a friend of Mr. Haultain of many years' standing, could not do otherwise than to call to his counsels a man who would advise him to work the constitution harmoniously for the benefit of all. The response of the people has been the best justification of the action of Mr. Forget. My hon. friend knows as well as I do that as a constitutional governor he is not limited in any way in his choice. There is only one limit upon his choice, he can choose whom he pleases provided his choice is endorsed by the people of the province. He was subject to no other restriction, as my hon. friend knows as well as I do, because he does not charge against Mr. Forget that he has done anything unconstitutional, but something which was not generous or fair. Well, Sir, I leave it to the members of this House to say whether Mr. Forget should have been so generous as to call an enemy of the constitution instead of a friend of the constitution.

Then, my hon. friend thought it advisable to cast some slurs upon the verdict of the people. True it is, there were twenty-four or twenty-five elections, in which I think seventeen members were returned as supporters of Mr. Scott; and it turns out that in one of these elections there was some fraud committed, and that one of the returning officers who were guilty of this fraud was an officer of this government. He was dismissed; but my hon. friend is not satisfied with that, and says he should have been prosecuted. My hon. friend knows as well as I do, and he acknowledges it, that it is not the duty of this government to prosecute offenders, that we are not charged with the administration of the law, but that this duty devolves upon the province. Therefore, if there has been an offence committed, whether the offender is an officer of this government or an ordinary citizen, he is to be prosecuted not by us but by the Attorney General of the province of Saskatchewan. My hon. friend said, however, that because he was one of our officers we should have prosecuted him, and he recalled some instances in which he alleged we had been negligent of our duty. Why did not my hon. friend refer also to the fact that during the last election, which took place in the month of November, 1904, when it was brought to our attention that certain offences had been committed against the electoral law and against the rights of the people, we did not hesitate to prosecute and to appoint counsel to look after the prosecutions? The gentleman who was appointed for that purpose was Mr. Shepley, to whom my hon. friend has just alluded. When frauds were proved to have been committed in Lanark and Frontenac, the guilty parties were not brought to justice, and officers were appointed by this government to see that the law was observed. But the elections which took place in the Northwest were not our elections, but provincial elections. Had they been elections of ours, we might have thought it proper to have appointed counsel to look after the observance of the law.

My hon. friend has also referred to the fact that in the electoral division of St. James some frauds were committed, and that one of the offenders who was brought to justice and convicted was afterwards released. For my part, I am very glad that the hon. gentleman has brought that matter again to the attention of the House. It will teach us the lesson henceforth that when petitions are brought to us for the release of prisoners we should scan very carefully the names on these petitions, so as to make sure that there are not among them the names of any of the prominent friends of my hon. friend. Perhaps my hon. friend is not aware that on the petitions presented for the release of the man who was convicted in St. James' division for irregularities were to be found the names of some of the most prominent of his followers who are sitting not very far from him at the present time.

My hon. friend also alluded to the fact that we are this year meeting at a very late date. I am sorry to say that this is the case; indeed, spring is already upon us. But I think we can manage to have the blessing of prorogation before the summer will be upon us. This is perhaps all the more reason why the session should be short; and if we are diligent, if our measures are ready, as I believe they are, and if the gates of eloquence are not too widely opened, there is no reason why we should not prorogue at a time when we can go to the country and see the apple blossoms in bloom. If I read correctly a speech made by my hon. friend a little while ago, we may be kept here till the snow flies, because he said he rather expected the session to last six months. Well, Sir, I hope that on a reconsideration of the subject my hon. friend will come to a decision more in accord with the ordinary dictates of humanity.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I did not say six months. I said to the first of September; but in saying that I placed reliance on the promise of the government to introduce tariff legislation. It was my misplaced confidence in the government's promise that lead me to make the statement.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. If my hon. friend, when he spoke thus, had in his mind the promised tariff legislation, now that he is certain that this legislation will not take place, but will be referred to another session, perhaps he will allow us to dispose of the business of this session in due time, so that we may have the other session about the time the snow flies.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I will not only allow you, but help you.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. If my hon. friend keeps his word, the session will close in good time, because I am happy to say that all the legislation we have to submit to the House is ready for submission.

My hon. friend has also referred to the absence of Mr. Fielding. The accident to the Minister of Finance has unfortunately turned out to be more serious than was at first supposed, and it is not expected that he can appear in this House before many weeks are over. In the meantime we shall have to proceed without him ; and barring the question of the revision of the tariff, I think we can make reasonable progress. Were it not for the absence of my hon. colleague, I would say that we are meeting under the most auspicious circumstances. Kind Providence has been as usual very generous. We have had an abundant crop, fine weather to harvest it, a beautiful season in which to ship it, and above all we have had good prices. I did not observe that my hon. friend was very enthusiastic on this subject. He passed over it very quickly and gingerly. Perhaps the cause of this reserve on his part was that under the present regime good times have become a matter of course. Or perhaps the old feeling still prevails. There was a time indeed when it was an accepted doctrine of the Conservative party that Divine Providence could not by any possibility be with the Grits and that the Conservative party alone had the instinct of government. In one of the recent elections which took place in the province of Nova Scotia, there was an argument on this point between a Grit and a Tory. The Grit was modest. He did not claim anything for the present government. All he claimed was that for most of the time Providence was kind to the Grits. The Tory would not admit that, but said that all things considered, Providence had been acting very strangely. Next to agriculture which has been very flourishing, trade and commerce has been making great progress. Our imports have continued to increase, and our exports, which last year were rather depressed, have since developed great energy. It is almost certain that during the present year the trade of Canada will pass the 500 million mark. In this connection it is very satisfactory to know that not only is our trade increasing in the old channels but is also finding new channels ; and I am glad to be in a position to say that the treaty with Japan, which has been referred to by His Excellency, was signed on the 31st of January. That treaty is of immense importance to us, in view of the recent discovery made in the province of Alberta. There a discovery has been made far more important than that of gold and diamonds. That semi arid country which was supposed to be only fit for grazing, has been found well adapted for the growth of fall wheat, and no doubt in the Orient we shall have a ready market for the new product, thus saving the long haulage by the Atlantic coast.

Mr. FOSTER. Will the right hon. gentleman give a little explanation as to the treaty with Japan ? I know there was a treaty framed by Great Britain in 1894. Is this an entry for Canada under that same treaty or is it an absolutely new treaty ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. It gives us all the advantages which accrue to Great Britain under the present treaty. In this matter as well as in others Canada is forging ahead. It is obvious that Canada is to-day becoming the great attraction to all civilized races. So marked is our superiority in this respect that we are exciting the jealousy and envy of some other countries which also have lands to settle. We have no quarrel with anybody nor do we desire to have any. We rely on our own superiority and are satisfied to rely on that alone.

My hon. friend has referred to certain words which were made use of by my hon. friend the Postmaster General. I have only this observation to make in that connection. There is solidarity amongst all the members of the government. They must all conform to the one standard, but no one expects that all individual members of the government shall think identically upon all subjects. At least we do not expect it on this side. It may be that on the other side, all minds are built alike and cast in the same groove, but that is not the case with us. When however there is question of framing a policy for the government, that policy cannot be framed unless there is giving and taking among the different members. Liberals have more difficulty in drawing conclusions and framing policies than is experienced on the other side. The Tories have a happy faculty of following like sheep wherever they are led. But judging by my own experience as leader of the party on this side it is very difficult to get members of the government and the party generally to take that easy view that every man must follow blindly as he is led. We have greater difficulty in reconciling opinions, and there may be occasions when it is only after long effort a man will surrender his own views for the public good. Any other method of framing a policy and carrying it out cannot succeed with us. Our men are allowed to keep their own opinions, but they must submit to the view of the majority when it comes to be a question of adopting a general policy. My hon. friend the Postmaster General said nothing else when he referred to the vexed question of the indemnity and pensions. I had a conversation with my hon. colleague upon that question before he made the remarks which the hon. gentleman quoted, and I told him that my view was that the legislation we had adopted last year was perhaps susceptible of some revision and amendment. Not for the moment will I question the principle, but will reserve that for another occasion, but even admitting the principle of the pension adopted last year, it may be that in many respects the legislation may be improved upon. So far I agree with my hon. friend the Postmaster General. Let me add that I agree also completely with my hon. friend, the leader of the opposition, upon this point namely, that it is better these matters should be threshed out manfully before the House. There is no excuse whatever for any hon. gentleman refraining from expressing his opinion when he has the opportunity of doing so and afterwards airing his grievances when it is too late for him to affect the action of parliament. But I have to take some issue with my hon. friend regarding some remarks he made on the admission of the Postmaster General into the cabinet. My hon. friend expressed his surprise that I had chosen the Postmaster General from abroad when I had the opportunity of making a selection from among the members of this House. Well, Mr. Speaker, I was very sorry to lose my hon. friend (Sir William Mulock.) But when I lost his services, I thought we could do no better than call to the council of the nation such a man as my hon. friend, the present Postmaster General, (Mr. Aylesworth). It is true that there were at least twenty men on the floor of this House quite able to perform the duties of his office and continue the great work inaugurated by Sir William Mulock. But no doubt there is a difference between the Grits and Tories on this point. If my hon. friend had been in my place, he would have found a great scramble among his friends in the House for the position and he would have been beset on all sides by his supporters in parliament anxious to serve their country in a cabinet position. But that was not the case in the Liberal party. I was left perfectly free to act as I thought best in the interests of the country, and all the supporters of the government submitted at once and gracefully to the decision I took and the choice I made. All approved the choice and showed themselves ready to rally behind my hon. friend the Postmaster General.

Mr. FOSTER. I would suggest that we should take an intermission and laugh.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. This is a free country, and I shall not attempt to prevent my hon. friend (Mr. Foster) from laughing if he thinks this a laughing matter. He thinks it laughable that able men should submit to be passed over in favour of some other man. It is not the custom of my hon. friend so to read his duty—everybody knows it. And there was the reverse of laughing in those days.

Now, my hon. friend (Mr. R. L. Borden) referred to another subject—the insurance commission. He takes issue with the action of the government on this point. He thinks that we should have proceeded differently, that we should have consulted parliament. Sir, our action is before parliament. Let me say, first of all, that, if we have appointed that commission, it is because I believe that such wrong doing has taken place here as in the state of New York. I believe the Canadian Companies are unimpeachable; I believe they are honest, and that the investigation will show it. But, Sir, the insurance companies should be like the wife of Ceasar, they should be above suspicion. There is no doubt that there exists in the public mind a certain hesitance, a certain disposition to believe that things are not quite all right in insurance, that it is possible that money may have been diverted as it was diverted by the insurance companies in New York. It is of importance, and of the greatest importance, that these things should be cleared up, that the investigation should go to the bottom of the whole question, that every man who has a grievance should be able to bring it up and that there should be an absolutely thorough inquiry into this subject. That is what we have in mind. What did the hon. gentleman mean by saying that we should have consulted parliament? What should we have done? It was suggested the other day, and may be suggested again, that we should have had an inquiry by a committee of this House. Let me suggest to my hon. friend that a commission such as we have appointed can probe the whole system of insurance with greater efficiency than could a committee of this House. If you have a parliamentary inquiry, it must take place here in Ottawa, whereas a commission can go to Montreal, Toronto or any place else. It can inspect the offices of the company. The commissioners can walk into the office of a company and ask that everything be placed before them. In this way they can make an investigation far more thorough in its nature than any investigation that could be made here in Ottawa. My hon. friend is not easy to satisfy. It is very difficult indeed to satisfy him. He is not satisfied with our choice of Judge MacTavish or Mr. Langmuir. By his position as a judge of the land, Judge MacTavish is prevented from being a director of any company, or having anything to do with the administration of any company. Mr. Langmuir is a business man and is connected with several companies. What I would like to ask my hon. friend who attacked the choice of Mr. Langumir—though he admits him to be, as everybody knows he is, a most honourable man, a man of unimpeachable character—is, whether he believes, that if we are to have an inquiry taken part in by a business man, we could find a man who is not connected with some company? The thing is preposterous. In this age every business man of prominence is connected as director with one, perhaps with several companies. When you have chosen men of unimpeachable character, such as Judge MacTavish and Mr. Langmuir, it seems to me that you have provided for the very best inquiry that could be had. Such is, at all events, our object, and I have every reason to feel confident that the result will be commensurate with our intentions. But if this inquiry turns out to be unsatisfactory, if it does not search every hole and corner, if it does not probe every part, if it leaves anything undone which should have been done, then, Sir, it will be time enough to look for another inquiry. But, I have every reason to believe that, with the strong character of the commission which we have appointed, the inquiry will be thorough and the light of a complete investigation will be thrown upon the operations of the insurance companies. And that is what we want. We want to have the light thrown upon these matters. If there are offenders who should be exposed, or if on the other hand, as I believe, the administration of the companies is thorough and honest, the truth, whatever it may be, should be known.

I have only one word to say, because I would like to close the debate if possible—and that is to thank my hon. friend for the kind words he has spoken of the late Mr. Préfontaine. The hon. gentleman has spoken truly. Mr. Préfontaine, was a strong minister, a strong character. At the same time, he was peculiar in this, that, while he ruled with a strong hand, he was of the gentlest possible disposition. No man approached him but was satisfied that in him he found the gentlest of men. Yet, once he had made up his mind, he went steadily. And he did good work for the country. His death was attended with dramatic incidents second only to those which attended the death of Sir John Thompson in Windsor Castle. Mr. Préfontaine died in the land of his ancestors. But even this unfortunate incident, this loss to a people composed of the descendants of French and English ancestors, may result in good in leading to a still greater rapprochement between England and France.

I welcome my hon. friend's disposition to help us in carrying to completion the work of the session. He will find us ready with our work, and with little legislation to lay before the House. And with the assistance of the opposition, there is no reason why the session should not be concluded in less than three months.

At six o'clock, House took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at eight o'clock.

Hon. GEO. E. FOSTER (North-Toronto). Mr. Speaker, I do not propose to take up the address in consecutive order. Some parts of it have been very exhaustively and thoroughly dealt with, and it is not worth while spending time in multiplying words upon those particular parts. There are, however, two or three points in connection with the address which I think might be mentioned. The first is with reference to the treaty with Japan. A person who was not acquainted with the history of this matter might very well have supposed from the speech, and from the remarks that were made, that this was a brand new treaty made with the young and rising empire of Japan, and for which the government should and might very well take to themselves special credit. Well, when one looks into it, it all simmers down to this, that it is but the late confession of a blunder, it is but the tardy attempt to retrieve a mistake, to say the least of it, made many years ago. The fact of the matter is, Mr. Speaker, that in 1894 a treaty was made with Japan by the British government. As with many other treaties made by the British government with foreign nations, there was a possible inclusion of the different colonies of the empire. For many years the British government have made provisions for the inclusion of the different colonies, but have always left it open to the colonies themselves to say whether they wished the provisions of the treaty to be applied to themselves. Well, Sir, when this government came into power that treaty was already made, and a limited period was fixed for the inclusion of Canada in those benefits, and the limited time during which this choice or option might be taken had not expired. This government, Sir, at that time, I suppose, carefully looked into the matter, and they came to the conclusion that they would not be included in the treaty, and consequently would not share in its benefits. For what reasons they came to that conclusion, I do not know. But such was the conclusion come to, and from 1896-7 up to the present time, Great Britain, and Germany, and France, and the United States of America have all had all the benefit that flowed from that treaty, or similar treaties whilst Canada has been absolutely debarred from any of those benefits. Some two years ago, I think it was, we on this side of the House drew attention to the fact that there was still a possibility that Canada might be included within the provisions of that treaty. Then and then only this government woke up, then and then only it stirred around, and after the lapse of two years they come to us with what is styled a treaty with Japan. Well, Sir, if there is one reason now why this treaty should be hailed and acclaimed with delight and with applause, as I believe it should be, there were ten reasons ten years ago why it should have been adopted and its provisions taken advantage of by this country, simply because ten years of added benefit over and above what this country can now obtain would have been obtained by intercourse with that country at a period of time when, probably, its demand upon such products as Canada could have afforded would have been even greater than they will be in the years to come.

Well, Sir, in this matter of trade which was alluded to by the right hon. leader of the government, the prosperous features were portrayed, that part of the shield was held up to this House and to the country. I find no fault with that. Whatever bright and prosperous features there are to this country in its trade development, we on this side of the House are most heartily glad to see and to appreciate. But there are some things that might be said with reference to the general trade policy and the general trade practice of this government which probably are not so bright, and would not produce so much satisfaction. This government came into power on a very well defined basis of denunciation of the policy of the government that preceded it. In certain general broad lines the preceding government's policy was wrong, it should be replaced by a policy which would be better and bring larger results. One thing that was especially denounced was the large amount of trade that was being done with the United States of America as compared with the smaller amount that was being done with Great Britain, more particularly in reference to imports. Well, Sir, this government has been in power from 1896 until to-day, and how stand the balance and contrast of trade as regards the United States and Great Britain? That our imports from the United States have increased by leaps and bounds, last year nine and a half millions greater than they were the year before, and from 1896 an increase of one hundred and fifty eight or one hundred and sixty per cent in our dutiable imports from the United States of America. There have been increases in imports from Great Britain as well, but relatively and by percentage tested, they have not been nearly so great as those from the United States. Take the other side of the equation, and consider what we export to the United States. The percentage of goods which we export to the United States, or in other words that the United States buys from us is immeasurably less than the percentage of goods which we buy from the United States, and shows no tendency to increase but rather the opposite. On the other hand Great Britain buys from us more and more, but we buy from her less in proportion and in relative contrast than we do from the United States of America. Therefore, in these essential particulars, no stroke of policy made by this present government seems to have bettered the conditions with which they found so much fault when we were in power and when they were in opposition.

Well, further than that, they have exhausted themselves in efforts in one direction, as before they exhausted themselves in criticism with reference to our inability to get any kind of reciprocal trade with the United States of America. These gentlemen have not succeeded. They have tried, they have acknowledged their failure ; therefore in this respect their policy has been no improvement upon the policy of their predecessors. The conclusion that you must reach is that in ten years of effort and ten years of their policy not one single foreign port has been opened to the increase of Canadian products on any more favourable basis than it was before these gentlemen went into power. With all their resources and all their protestations of their power, they have not been able to break down the tariff walls of a single foreign country or to introduce into a single foreign market one single product of Canada on a more favoured basis than before 1896. But, trade is increasing. Yes. But it is altogether a false assumption that it has increased because of the better trade policy of the present government. It has increased in spite of their lack of enterprising trade policy. It has simply been the expression of the productiveness of the Canadian soil and of Canadian industry flowing in 99 per cent of the instances along the very same channels that this trade sought before these gentlemen came into power. They have not discovered the lands, they have not revealed the fertility of these lands, they have not developed the lands; every great used line of transport which we have had during ten years and which we have to-day was laid by their predecessors and was in going order when their predecessors gave over the reins of government. They have projected some routes of transport since, but up to the present their new routes of transport, developed along exactly parallel lines to the old, have not contributed one-hundredth per cent of the volume of traffic from the products of our lands and industries which have found their way into foreign markets. That is at least a sobering thought that these gentlemen might keep close at hand. To listen to the mover and the seconder of the address one would have thought that until the Grand Trunk Pacific was originated and put into course of fulfilment, that Canada had no great lines of transport in the west or in the east. One of these gentlemen was so enthusiastic as to say that the Grand Trunk Pacific was five years too late, and that when it was completed, there would be an end once and for all to anything like congestion of transportation for our products. Will that gentleman simply look at the map of Canada and follow it. Will he look at the lines of railway and transport from the lakes out into the western country, and trace upon it the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific. Will he look at, side by side with the proposed new line, the almost innumerable lines of transport which already permeate that country and will he not come to a somewhat sober conclusion as to what a very small part the Grand Trunk Pacific, when it is completed from the lakes to the rocky mountains, will play in carrying the mighty stream of products that is to be taken out of that country and brought into that country in the course of trade. Why, Sir, in this as in everything else there is an attempt to float into magnificent proportions what after all is but a very small part of the mere machinery of transport that Canada possesses. When this immense Transcontinental Railway was brought in full flush before this country, where was it supposed to go and what was it supposed to do ? As an apology for the immense credits and expenditures of money by this country for this project, the Prime Minister and all his followers led the people to suppose that a great new unentered and hitherto undeveloped territory was to be opened up by the Grand Trunk Pacific. He, and the others, at that time seemed to have the idea—and the country adopted the project under the inspiration of that idea—that this road was to go outside of the beaten track and that it was to open up a new and undeveloped area in our Northwest. Look on the map at the located line on which the tenders are called for and on which contracts will be given. It traverses no new and undeveloped portion of Canada's great Northwest. Leaving the city of Winnipeg it gets to Portage La Prairie in some way or other, close beside or over the tracks of railways already built and running. Leaving Portage La Prairie it traverses the great Northwest through a garden, within ten or at the most fifteen or twenty miles from railways to-day running and serving the country very well indeed. Build it to Edmonton along its present located line and it is powerless to move a single bushel of wheat or take in a dollar's worth of product outside of a stretch of country some ten or fifteen miles on each side which is bounded at the present time by the Canadian Pacific Railway or the Canadian Northern, in territory which these two railways could have well served, and served without the addition of a single dollar's expense to Canada. Therefore, we must be sober in our statements with reference to the Grand Trunk Pacific. A good work it will do, but as to what it can do and will do in comparison with other roads, is altogether another question. The idea that it was to open up a new and undeveloped Northwest is entirely mythical; it is absolutely false, and yet the measure was adopted by parliament under that false assumption. Had it gone further south it would have tangled itself up with lines already built. Before it could have opened an undeveloped but rich tract of country it had to get north of the Canadian Northern Railway into that vast stretch running up into the Peace river, the opening up of which would have been some excuse for the extension of the credit of the country to it and for the millions of dollars that Canada gives towards the completion of that road. So much with respect to this transport question.

Nothing was said about the finances of the country. In the speech from the Throne, in the speech of the Prime Minister, the state of our finances was passed over very lightly. Do gentlemen opposite ever stop to think of the years into which they are heading; of the tremendous financial responsibilities which they are soon to take up, and for ten years to continuously carry, whether this country be prosperous financially or whether it be in depression. Do they know they are marching into the teeth of a financial problem which should make every staid and shrewd financier almost tremble at the thought of the weight and magnitude of the obligations. But these gentlemen opposite are perfectly light hearted. They are making no preparation for the coming day which may try men's souls in this Dominion. They are heaping up ordinary expenditures by the million of dollars each year; they are heaping up the ordinary capital expense by the million dollars each year and they are marching into the teeth of five or seven years to come when they shall be obliged to go into the money markets of the world for $147,000,000 to take up old and maturing debt, and for at least $100,000,000 for extraordinary capital expenditure on railway account. This is no light task. With all the sails set and all the gales favouring during the last ten years, we pitch our hopes high indeed and we make a big draught upon favourable anticipations if we look to see the ten years following equally as flourishing and equally as expansive in the way of both revenue and of production. It is not possible to suppose that will be the case in this country of ours, and yet in these ten favourable years what single apportionment of the funds of this country, what single measure of precaution has been taken towards laying the foundation for the years of stress which are just now upon us in the way of money raising, and for contingencies which every reasonable and sensible man must acknowledge are possible to come across our path. What provision made? None. But, an increasing extravagance in the expenses, an increasing prodigality in laying about for methods upon which money can be spent and spent in great amounts. Why, Sir, as an example, your Minister of Finance stood by his chair last year, six days after the financial year had passed, when he required to make no estimates because the year was over, when not a single dime more could be spent than had been contracted for and had been already spent and charged to the year which had just passed;—he brought his estimate of revenue, his estimate of consolidated expenditure, his estimate of capital expenditure, his estimate of increase of debt, and he laid them before us after the year had absolutely expired, and when his calculations ought to be within a few dollars and cents of the exact truth of the case. And he said: My revenue this last year has been so much, my consolidated expenditures have been so much, my expenditures on capital account have been so much and my increase of the debt has been so much. To-day the accounts are printed and before us, and he was only one million dollars out in his consolidated expenditure reckoning, and he was only four million dollars out on his capital expenditure, and his increase of debt as printed by himself, is five and a half million dollars, while his statement, six days after the financial year had expired, made it but one and a quarter million dollars. What are we to think, Mr. Speaker, when such loose, absolutely loose methods are in vogue to-day in the accounting department, the finance department, above all others, which will allow, after the expiry of the financial year, such gross miscalculations hitherto unexplained. Well, Sir, I said we are approaching years when much has to be accomplished from a financial point of view. You may strain the revenue to a certain extent but there is a point beyond which it will not answer to your touch. When in the few years that have passed you have strained the revenue of this country up to a grand total of some seventy million dollars or more, nearly doubling it in that time, what sane man expects that with our population and our development, great though it is, we can expect the same buoyancy in the revenue for the next ten years. Lightly indeed my right hon. friend passed over what might have been the statements made: that whereas, in 1896 we the Liberal Conservative government took $28,000,000 of taxation out of this country, last year he took $54,000,000 out of the country—whereas in 1896 our total expenditure was some $41,000,000, last year the total expenditure was $78,000,000. Oh, but they say: the people don't feel it. Let us get right down to the idea that there is not one dollar of that $71,000,000 that you raised as revenue last year that did not come out of the people's pockets. There is no other place for it to come from. It is not whisked out of the atmosphere by some wizard's touch. It is not absolutely earned by some operation other than the toil and sweat of the individual labourer. The fact remains, that whereas in 1896 we took a moiety of toll from the sweat and labour of the people, you last year took double the amount, and you took it out of the balance of their earnings to the amount of $78,000,000 spent. $72,000,000 of that taken out of the pockets of the people. That makes about $15 per head of our population or nearly $90 for every family in this country that you took out of the residue of their earnings over and above their living expenses. That money came from the people, and the drain is enormous, and the drain to-day is double what it was in 1896.

Now, Sir, what have you to do? In the next four years $134,000,000 of debt matures, and you will have to go into the money markets of the world to raise that sum; in seven years' time you are to raise $147,000,000; and in addition to that you are to raise at least $100,000,000 for the great railway expenses upon which we have entered. $247,000,000 with a treasury increasing as buoyantly from the revenues of the people as it has increased in the last ten years, and with times as buoyant and as hopeful the world over, might not be a task which would be too hard to accomplish; but what man is going to become sponsor for ten more years of plenty and equal buoyancy of revenue, ten more years of equal prosperity in the world and the world's money markets, to those we have seen in the past? $247,000,000, and of that only $47,000,000 is available in the sinking funds of the country. $200,000,000 is new money to be found; and, Sir, if bad years do come—and they may come and they will come, and it is the prudent financier who takes contingencies into thought—if they do come, and these obligations, which are absolutely inevitable, come upon us, there is a time for heart-searching, I think, in store for this country, which may alter somewhat the views of these gentlemen who lightly and airily talk about raising $247,000,000, or taking it out of their own pockets if the country cannot raise the money.

One word with reference to the insurance commission. There is no need of my saying what has been better said by the gentlemen who have preceded me. I agree entirely with the view of my hon. friend (Mr. R. L. Borden) by my side. I will not go quite so far as the right hon. gentleman (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) who spoke this afternoon. I am bound to believe that Canadian business men and bankers and insurance men are doing their work well and doing their work honestly. I am not going to be one of those who raise the scare of suspicion and take for granted what has not been proved, even though on the other side of the line most outrageous things have been brought to light which no one would have suspected, before the Armstrong committee got in its work. I do not believe we are built that way on this side of the line. I do not look for disclosures of that kind. The government have chosen their policy of a royal commission. There is another commission that might have been made—an inquiry by parliament itself. The government have taken their line, we will hold them to it; we will watch the investigation they cause to be made, and parliament will stand here to censure them and their commission if it does not do its full work, and to supplement it if necessary by the powers of parliament, which are ample for that purpose. But, Sir, there is one strange comment on the all-knowingness of this administration that occurs to my mind just now. On the Supreme Court bench in this city there is an able and distinguished judge, and just the other day a letter over the signature of that able and distinguished judge appeared in the public prints, and the kernel of that letter was an emphatic and absolute and wholesale denunciation and reprobation of some legislation which took place in 1899—legislation by this cabinet a member of which this learned judge at that time was; and that letter recalled to me an incident that took place in the committee history of this country. In 1899 a very influential man came to the Minister of Finance and to the government and opened up a scheme for the loosening of investments. The traditions of the Finance Department had been stern and strong. This proposal was to open up investments in which there was a great deal of prospective danger. The matter was threshed out in the committee, where I myself opposed the proposal, and appealed to the Minister of Finance to stand by the traditions of the Department of Finance, and to hold the reins firmly upon the manner and method of investments. I had the committee with me. Whether I had the Minister of Finance with me or not I do not know, but member after member of that committee not belonging to my own party rose and backed my assumptions and backed my belief. At the next meeting of the committee the very men who had spoken with me before found new light, and the influential gentleman was backed by a cordon of supporters which swept away the old boundaries as though they had been chaff and opened up the investments which this distinguished judge on the Supreme Court to-day condemns and deplores. If there be any trouble in insurance work in this country, the main part of it will be found to be on the line of its investments—that I am quite certain of—rather than on the line of its general management otherwise.

Much has been said about the Northwest provinces. I quite agree with the passage in the speech which speaks of the entry of these territories into the sisterhood of provinces of this Dominion, with prospects bright, with tremendous resources developed and undeveloped. That was a great occasion when those territories took upon themselves their majority and joined the sisterhood of provinces. Bright were the skies, the sun shone brilliantly, the weather was all that could be desired. Men's hearts were happy and their hopes were pitched high. It is a great thing when a young man puts on the garment of his majority. Happy for him if his ideals are noble and his principles are good, and the auspices under which he starts are honourable and just.

So with reference to these two provinces, one side of the shield is bright and beautiful; and happy would it be for them if the circumstances surrounding the inception and progress of those Territories into statehood had all been as favourable and as fair. But what were the circumstances? Sir, the mover of the address started out by saying that to the harmony of the natal day, there succeeded all the horrors of internecine strife. What a pity that we had not the sage advice of this gentleman before us last year in this House, which he gave us in that one pithy sentence to-day, when he said that the Northwest Territories were quite able to look after their own religious matters without any interference from the outside. If only this Nestor had been present with his advice in 1905, and that advice had been taken, to the harmony and the beautiful prospect of the natal day there would have succeeded none of the blackness and strife and trouble which followed. But, Sir, from the very first the auspices were cast sinister. In the election which preceded the granting of a charter to those provinces, the matter was kept as much as possible a profound secret, so that the people of those territories themselves had no opportunity of making their voice and their wishes known in that respect. Members were elected to this House on issues entirely different and foreign from that issue. That of itself was a wrong beginning. It would have been far better if the administration had been open and above board with the people of those provinces and have conferred with them before they made their choice of representatives at the polls. But they did not take that course. They allowed the people to vote in ignorance of what took place immediately afterwards. The charter was concocted secretly and sprung upon this House in the absence of the responsible minister. It was received in rebellion. Revolution broke out. One minister resigned. Others came to the very verge of resignation, and there was wild dismay in the camp. Why? Simply because the measure brought down, and intended to be forced through, surprised alike the representatives and the people of that province. Much has been said with reference to the disposition of Mr. Haultain and his course regarding that matter. The right hon. the First Minister attempted to-day to justify the course of the administration and the course of the lieutenant governor in passing over Mr. Haultain and choosing some other person. The minister's apology and defence was a weak one. Let us investigate it for a moment. Why should Mr. Haultain have been passed over? Was there any more loyal man in the Northwest? Was he at least not as loyal as Mr. Scott? Was he not at least as capable as Mr. Scott? Was he not infinitely more experienced than Mr. Scott? Had he not the trust of his people, evinced in a manner in which it was never evinced towards Mr. Scott? Had he not the latest mandate of the people of the territories? With that mandate he came down to the capital and placed all his resources at the disposal of this government in order to perfect the character of the territories, whose mandate he held and whose representative he was. Himself and his colleague came down together, and together they placed their best information in the hands of the government. At what point was there divergence? Only when violence was attempted to the constitution by the administration at Ottawa. Then and only then. But was Mr. Haultain the only man to be condemned when he made opposition to that? Were others who opposed it not to be condemned as well? Mr. Scott has been lauded; his judgment has been extolled. Let us take it all as right and just and a reasonable estimate; but let us look at Mr. Scott, as he really felt, and not as we saw him in this House. Almost the very moment that he was making a certain face in this House, after he had gone out from this chamber, he sat down and wrote confidential letters to his friends in Regina, in which he reveals the real situation and the real man. Sidelights are some times very important lights. Let us see what sidelights Mr. Scott throws upon this. Well, Sir, Mr. Scott's opinion of the government is refreshing. He says:

> My own opinion on this occasion is that the matter has been bungled almost unpardonably, but I am none the less clear in my own mind as to the proper course to pursue.

Speaking of the separate school situation, he went on to say:

> It was impossible to evade the issue. To leave the subject wholly within provincial control was bound to be objected to by Roman Catholics, because they were bound to look then very quickly and see the last vestige of their separate schools disappear. Laurier had induced Quebec to swallow twice—in 1896 and again in 1899 over the South African business. Neither Manitoba nor Ontario thanked him very emphatically on either occasion.

That is an insight into Mr. Scott's statesmanlike quality of mind. With him the right and justice of a thing is nothing. The point to be considered is will the thank offering of subservient be gained.

> In the present case, the hierarchy would have too much reason behind their contention. I don't for a moment think that the case for separate schools is legally or constitutionally binding——

That is a new light from Mr. Scott. When he faced this House, his speech was quite the opposite—'We are standing upon the rock of the constitution.' That is where the Prime Minister stood; and Mr. Scott clambered up beside him. That is where the rest of them stood. But, in his lucid moments, unbosoming himself to his friend, he says: 'I do not for a moment think that the case for separate schools is legally or constitutionally binding.' And he goes on:

> —but morally the case is pretty strong, and in my view it would be simply now beyond all reason to expect Laurier to induce Quebec to swallow the third time when the weight of the moral argument was strongly against him.

Right, constitutional right, the truth of the matter, the justice of the case, is not involved—it is a question of swallowing, and of how often a man should swallow and the exact moral question involved which may justify him in refusing to swallow again.

The truth about Mr. Sifton's resignation and the situation here for ten days past is told as nearly in the Leader dispatches—which I did not send, but had cognizance of—as can be told. I do not believe——

Now, this is rich.

I do not believe that Laurier or any member of the cabinet, beyond Scott and Fitzpatrick, thought other than that section 16 of the Bill simply provided to continue existing conditions. We Northwest members advised this provision——

What provision ? 'The continuation of existing conditions.'

And we were told that our advice would be followed.

And so 'none but Scott and Fitzpatrick ;' these were the sinners, the one with white locks in the Senate and the other with curly black locks in the House. These were the two men who knew the inwardness of that clause 16 and who imposed upon their unsuspecting colleagues in the cabinet and their equally unsuspecting colleagues from the Northwest. But there was misgiving.

Laurier's speech indicated nothing further to me—and I followed him closely—even in face of the fact that the reference to revenues and school lands funds made me nervous as furnishing a handle for suspicion.

Scott and Fitzpatrick had walled them up against the Red Sea.

But the one saviour was near. The oft-heralded, the swift-flying saviour, coming from the hot springs in the centre of the far west, arrived in time to let these poor benighted cabinet ministers, and these equally benighted followers from the Northwest loose from the clutches of Scott and Fitzpatrick. Who was it ?

Sifton's analyzing acumen quickly picked out the meaning of the clause which, without question would remove the separate schools from public regulation. I am convinced myself that if Sifton had been a man keen to remain in public life he could have had the thing changed without resigning, but he contends the opposite. The difficulty since found in obtaining modification seems to justify him, but, on the other hand, it is quite possible his action aroused a resentment which would not have been such a factor otherwise.

There you have the veritable Walter Scott, beleaguered by the arch plotters Fitzpatrick and Scott—fighting in vain against the enslaving clause and saved at last by Sifton.

What a different face he puts on in this House. Philip drunk or Philip sober—which?

Now, Sir, the Prime Minister finds no denunciation too strong to hurl at Mr. Haultain for standing up against that clause 16. His own trusted lieutenant, the man whom he chose—say what he likes—to lead the fight and carry the province in favour of his pet project saw the very same danger that Mr. Haultain saw, and he 'swallowed,' whilst Mr. Haultain stood to his principles and his convictions. Now, it is a perilous thing for this country when the Prime Minister makes the statement or maintains the proposition that the lieutenant governor or the director of the lieutenant governor shall refuse to call a man to form a cabinet because he does not accept in a party sense or in any other sense, his own private view. And that was the sin of Mr. Haultain, and for it he must be passed over. He believed that the constitution was violated, that the British North America Act was being stretched beyond its true intent. As a loyal subject he declared his determination to see to it that that was decided by the highest court in the land, and for that action his long years of experience, the trust of his people in him, all these things which would have caused him to be selected, were swept aside and a gentleman who had had no experience and had no mandate from the Northwest was chosen to take his place and to inaugurate the machinery for the election. And what else took place ? Before the elections were brought on the constituencies were made to order and made for a purpose. The premier was made to order, and made for a purpose. The Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) went to the Northwest to order, and he went there for a purpose. The whole machinery of the official life of the country was directed to the work; and that was done for a purpose; and from the beginning to the end it worked ruthlessly, shamelessly, outrageously, even to the violation of the most sacred right of the citizen, the right to deposit his ballot and to be represented in the councils of his country, even to the dragging of the courts into the dispute and placing them upon the side of the robbery of ballots and defiance of the people's rights. From the beginning to the end—that base and sordid end—the same spirit and impluse is to be noted. From the Prime Minister at the first to the ballot thief at the last, all are links in the same chain, joined together for the accomplishment of the same purpose.

Sir, the Prime Minister is not here. But I think that, as he was walking home tonight and thinking over what he had said here this afternoon, he must have admitted to himself that he was a most consummate 'jollier.' Do not I know, do not you know, Mr. Speaker, do not we all know, that he attempted no serious answer to the positions which were urged with such force by my hon. friend the leader of the opposition? All very nice as a jollier, but for a constitutional ruler, the head of a great party, the head of a so-called Liberal party, to treat these matters in that way was not serious, was not in keeping, I hardly dare to say that it was not becoming, but it does put itself, to my mind, in that way. He excused the Minister of Agriculture on what ground ? Now, the right hon. gentleman knows himself that never did a minister make a more serious blunder than did the Minister of Agriculture. His own colleagues sitting about him know it, feel it in their hearts. The common sense of the country sustains the very same position. And yet the minister comes up and says: Oh, we do not go in for pedantic solidarity, we are not built that way. We have our differences of opinion, and whilst we think alike sometimes, we think differently at other times. But, Sir, why is it that what is sauce for the goose is not sauce for the gander? In making the comparison I do not urge it to its literal fulfilment; but what I say is this: What is sauce for Mr. Tarte as a minister of the cabinet ought to be sauce for Mr. Fisher, ought it not?

Now what was the head and front of the offending of Mr. Tarte? Mr. Tarte essayed to be honest; whether he always succeeded or not I am not bound here to decide. But for that once I will bear testimony that so far I could read his purpose and his action, he essayed to be honest, and to drag his own fellow members out from the miserable web of deception they had woven about themselves into plain, honest Anglo-saxon truth telling. Who does not know, and who did not know that the cabinet whose head the right hon. gentleman is, has, since 1896, administered the trade and tariff matters of this country on the basis of protection as a principle? Who does not know that it would be insulting anybody's intelligence to say the contrary? A number of them thought that they could go on for ever practising protection but professing free trade, even in carrying out an active policy. Mr. Tarte was not built that way. He said: Gentlemen, say what you mean and be truthful; if you won't, I will. And so he argued for protection. In what these gentlemen were carrying out, there were differences of opinion as to degrees, but as to principles there was none, in so far as carrying out their policy was concerned. Now, Sir, because Mr. Tarte stood upon the platform of the country and argued for fuller protection for certain things, Mr. Tarte is told by the Prime Minister that he must get out of the cabinet, and he went out. Mr. Fisher as a farmer is one thing, Mr. Fisher as a Minister of Agriculture is another. In which role he is the most effective, I am not bound just now to say. But, Sir, if ever there was a policy solemnly affirmed, it was the policy that this cabinet, in a place even more sacred and authoritative than in this House of assembly, reiterated, namely, in the interprovincial or colonial conference in London, when all the colonies and the empire were together. They solemnly placed themselves on record as in favour of the preference, of giving it by the colonies, and the asking of it in return by Great Britain. And yet, Sir, after repeated statements of that kind, pledges as clean, and as clear cut, and absolute as could be, one of their number rises and, on a public platform, says that as a farmer and as Minister of Agriculture he is glad that Great Britain has not given a preference. He believes it would work harm if she did, and he enters the fight now actively begun in Great Britain, throwing his weight, not as a farmer —which would not be very strong, not simply as plain Mr. Fisher, which would not be very much stronger, but as a member of a Canadian cabinet speaking to the people of the British isles,—throwing his weight against the policy of a preference. Was there ever a plainer contravention of the solidarity of a cabinet? And the answer of the Prime Minister, with all respect, is a trivial answer, an answer which does not answer, and which was not meant to answer, but it was the best that could be done after the rare blunder made by the Minister of Agriculture.

Well, Sir, other members talked besides the Minister of Agriculture. We have had another minister who has opened his mouth and spoken, none other than the Minister of Militia (Sir Frederick Borden), the representative of the war forces of this country. At a meeting in the city of Ottawa he delivered himself of a most surprising declaration for a cabinet minister of a colonial government, the government of a colony forming part of the empire to which we belong. What was his statement, Sir? In discussing the question of contributions and help in the protection of Canada and the protection of the empire, after having made several statements with which we will not quarrel with him, he makes this rather astounding statement:

> He dissented from the view of the lecturer on the Monroe doctrine, and stated that behind that doctrine were the guns and warships of the United States, and the land power of 80,000,000 souls. Surely if that doctrine meant anything, it meant that Canada was safe from foreign aggression, it meant that neither Germany, or Russia, or any other foreign power would for one moment, whether England were strong or weak, be permitted by the United States to place a hostile foot in this country. That might not be the law of nations, but it was the law of power, and there was no disguising the fact that the United States had told the world that that was their policy.

Now, Sir, boiled down to one single statement, what is it? That we as a country place our dependence for the inviolability of our territory, not upon our own strong right arm and preparedness to resent insult and aggression, not on the might and power of Britain from whom we sprang and to whom we owe allegiance, but upon the grace and favour of a foreign, and may be at any time, a hostile power. The Minister of Militia of Canada has no better word to utter in this budding era of national sentiment and self dependence which is becoming every day stronger in Canada, he has no better word to give to the people of Canada than this: By the grace and favour of the United States we may be kept from being swallowed up by the European powers. But did the Minister think one single inch further and ask himself what power would shield us from the aggressiveness of that other foreign power, not in Europe or Asia or Africa but upon this continent and close beside us? It might not be the law of nations he says, but it is the law of power, therein is its terrible menace. The law of power and to be executed to ward off any foreign power from Europe and prevent it getting a foothold on this Canadian soil, but what is to ward off the foreign power on this continent, if the law of power only is involved, from taking the law of power into its own hands and crushing us. What sentiment could be less manly, what sentiment could be less national, what sentiment could be less self-respecting than a sentiment that we must owe to powerful neighbours our immunity from harm and foreign aggression from all others but have no defence and no security against those neighbours themselves if at any time they wished to become the aggressors. I think you may search the annals of countries through and through—the premier is fond of saying that Canada is a nation—you may search the annals of nations through and through and I doubt if you can find an expression made by a dominant member of the government or cabinet of any nation which equals for craven heartedness the expression used by my hon. friend the Minister of Militia. If the United States with its guns and warships is to be our security why not go the whole hog, why not get rid of our fortifications and defences, why not get rid of our military schools, and our little standing army and our bands of teachers and trainers and our militia itself and even the minister himself? And why, if the all-sufficient guarantee is the guns and the warships and the navy of the 80,000,000 of people who are close beside us here should we not pay protection to the United States?

Now, Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to pursue this any further. I wish merely to say in conclusion, in answer to the taunt that harmony is a property or quality unknown on this side of the House but that it is regnant and exuberant on that side of the House, that there is another side light which shows a little different estimate from what the Prime Minister gave today. It is quite true that in choosing his Postmaster General it was a matter of internal economy amongst the party and the rulers of the party. They arranged that as suited them best. Harmony he said, prevails. One other solution of that might be that the only way to secure harmony amongst the members of the family already in was to take one already out and bring him in over the heads of all. I make a present of that as a possible solution of the course which was followed. But is it all harmony within? Another man has talked, no less a man than the Liberal whip, the member for North Ontario, who unburdened himself at a certain time with astonishing frankness and what does the Liberal whip say? Now I suppose that next to the Prime Minister himself the whip is the important man. The internal economy of the party is all at his disposal, he is close to its heart, he listens to its conscience, he lies down with it in slumber, and rises with it when it wakes, and there is no moment of its dreams or of its waking activities that he is not present as tutor and nurse and confidant and director and so when the whip speaks let us all listen. Harmony exuberant, overflowing, like the mellifluous atmosphere of some southern region, laden with fragrance and instinct with beauty. Yes, but Mr. Grant says:

> We feel great regret on account of Sir William Mulock's retirement. Sir William has held the confidence of the Liberals of the old school.

So there are two kinds of Liberals and that conduces to harmony, to have two bands in one party, especially to have a school of old Liberals and a school of youngsters, it being supposed that old Liberals have some principles and some regard for decency whilst the young ones are more iconoclastic, or socialistic or something of that kind. There is one important point, there are two schools in the party and there is consequently great inducement to harmony. I deplore the passing of Sir William Mulock, as well as Mr. Grant, but I am more sorry for one thing than any other, I am sorry that when Sir William Mulock's sun hoisted itself out of this political atmosphere and took its westering course towards its final setting that it had not done so in the full glory of its pristine principles. I am sorry that it allowed itself to be submerged into a bank of dull nasty mist and cloud of patronage and that a $10,000 office seduced him from his allegiance to the principles which he held so doughtily and so strongly. But his health was bad and of course although it was hard work to conduct the post office here, and to fight the new school of Liberals in the party it was easy work to take up a law practice, thrown aside for 22 years and study up all the cases and the procedure that had taken place in that interim and become a working judge on a hard-worked bench. That was child's play, a sort of sanitarium moral and physical, in which Sir William Mulock was to recruit shattered forces and recover his wonted health.

Mr. Grant goes on:

> We, the Ontario Liberal members, are very much dissatisfied, although we have confidence in Hyman and Aylesworth. But Mulock cannot be replaced.

There is still no mention of Paterson.

The present cabinet, Mr. Grant claimed, was not satisfactory to himself and other Liberal members. One objection is that there are old men administering departments, such as Customs——

Ah, now we have it.

—such as Customs, &c. The only members of the cabinet from Ontario in whom we have confidence are Aylesworth and Hyman. I am speaking as Liberal whip for Ontario in making the statement that the only ones we recognize as worthy of our confidence are Aylesworth and Hyman. 'The Liberal members are becoming tired of tip-toeing into ministers' rooms,' and of the dissatisfaction in general he said that 'a radical section of the Liberal party commanding a larger support in the House of Commons than is generally supposed, is prepared to act, and act soon, against present conditions.'

There are eighteen Liberals from Ontario prepared to act in an independent attitude during the coming session.

The session is here. Shall we at last have that which never before has been seen, that much to be desired prospect of 18 Liberal members acting independently on that side of the House behind the Liberal government.

The member for North Ontario said that if the government proposed a higher tariff he for one would vote in opposition to it.

Was there any other reason than a sprained ankle so unfortunate, that the tariff is not brought down this session? Has the Liberal whip issued a warning, and must four or five or six months be allowed to placate the Liberal whip in order that a proper kind of tariff may be ventured without disastrous consequences.

The Ontario Liberal members had not been satisfied with the way the Grand Trunk Pacific project had been handled. Mr. Grant expressed also their want of confidence in the Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick, whom they considered to influence the actions of the chairman of the Transcontinental Railway Commision. This chairman, Mr. S. N. Parent, was a law partner of Mr. Fitzpatrick and is entirely at the bidding of Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick, and the Ontario Liberals fear that there will be certain arrangements regarding the Grand Trunk Pacifi made which will not redound to the credit of the country.

And finally Mr. Grant declared that the Liberal government was fast becoming a bureaucracy. Now, these heart thoughts, developed in a moment of extreme candour after they had been pent up so long that they must come or something worse would happen; these are made now the property of the right hon. gentleman and he can reconcile these with the great harmony which he says exists on his side of the House.

Hon. SYDNEY FISHER (Minister of Agriculture). I shall not follow my hon. friend (Mr. Foster) in the banter in which he has indulged with regard to the comparative solidarity of the parties in this House and in the country. I shall leave to my colleagues the defence of their own utterances, but I cannot refrain from suggesting to my hon. friends opposite that if they wish to find solidarity in a political party in this country, let them come in to the field in an election in any one constituency or other territory of this Dominion or in any province of this Dominion, or in any general elections, and they will, now, as in the past, find a solid Liberal party on whose unity their attacks have no effect and no influence. These gentlemen opposite have had abundant opportunities since the last session of parliament, they have had election after election, in the great new provinces of the west, in the province of Ontario where they boast themselves to be so strong, in the province of Quebec at which they look with longing hopeful eyes, but in which they can have no chance and no show at all; down in the maritime provinces where Nova Scotia declared itself against them in 1896, in 1900, and solidly and unanimously in 1904; in all the provinces of Canada they can make no impression on the solidarity of liberalism notwithstanding their blandishments towards the electors, and notwithstanding their attacks on the present government and on its policy. I shall not dwell upon this, and I do not know that I would have risen at all but for one or two remarks which perhaps call for a little correction from myself in regard to certain utterances I have made on a recent occasion and which seem to have attracted far more attention than I expected from gentlemen opposite and from those who seem to sympathize with them; remarks which have also attracted attention from those who sympathize with the views which I then expressed. The leader of the opposition quoted verbatim the remarks which I made on that occasion, and which I also take from the Montreal 'Herald' and which are to this effect:

Now, as to our own interest, I am going to say frankly as a farmer and as Minister of Agriculture, that I am rather glad that England has decided not to give us a preference.

I do not think I said: 'as Minister of Agriculture.' I believe I said: 'not as Minister of Agriculture.' I know I intended to say: 'Not as Minister of Agriculture,' and I know that several gentlemen who were present and with whom I have discussed this question since have informed me that the words which I used were: 'Not as Minister of Agriculture.' I also know that the context indicates that I intended to say that. I find a little further down in the same report of that address that I did say:

Speaking absolutely my own personal opinions, I say, I think in the recent decision England has done right.

I wish now, Sir, to make the correction in regard to this publicly as I have done privately on many occasions since. I was not speaking for the government, I was not laying down a policy for the government of Canada ; I was discussing questions which are not to-day an issue in the political arena of this country. I was discussing the relationship of this country to the other parts of the empire, addressing a group of young men in the city of Montreal who were interested in economical and social subjects, and addressing them on an occasion when these particular questions were no longer an issue in any political contest. I did studiously refrain, as I believe it to be the duty of a public man in Canada, from entering into political contests in other self-governing parts of the empire, for I believe it is right and best that we in Canada should let the other self-governing parts of the empire decide their questions for themselves without our trying to exercise pressure or to interfere in their political contests, just in the same way as I should expect the other parts of the empire and the public men in these other parts of the empire to refrain from trying to exert pressure on the people of Canada in their political contests. I think this explanation is due to myself as well as to those who seem to have taken an interest in my remarks. I will only add, Sir, that I believe that in speaking as I did I fairly represented and expressed the views of the farmers of Canada on this question.

Some hon. MEMBERS. No.

Mr. FISHER. Hon. gentlemen say 'no'; —well, they can have their opinions and I can have mine, but I will give my reasons for thinking that I did so. During the past six months or so I have travelled from one ocean to the other through this Dominion; have attended large gatherings of farmers in British Columbia, and have met the farmers in Alberta, in Saskatchewan, in Manitoba ; I have attended the great agricultural conventions of Ontario, of Quebec, and the maritime provinces. I have mingled with these men on all occasions they have met together to discuss their interests and their affairs ; I have discussed with them everything they brought up on these occasions ; I have watched to see what it was they wished to discuss, and I say emphatically now, that on no occasion was this question of a preference in the motherland for our products brought up or discussed by the farmers in any way.

Mr. HAGGART. How do you know their opinion then ?

Mr. FISHER. Because I give the farmers of this country credit, that if they feel strongly on a question, and if they have opinions to express upon a public question they will express their opinions with no uncertain sound and in no uncertain voice.

Mr. COCHRANE. And you thought, because they did not express their opinion, that they agreed with you.

Mr. FISHER. My hon. friend need not be too hasty; my hon. friend must not put words into my mouth. I do not try to force my opinions on other people, and I do not jump to the conclusion that everybody agrees with me.

Mr. COCHRANE. But you did.

Mr. FISHER. My hon. friend is a glorious example of the contrary—he never agrees with me.

Mr. COCHRANE. Well, the Minister of Agriculture must be another example. He came to the conclusion that because they did not express their opinions they agreed with him.

Mr. SPEAKER. Order.

Mr. FISHER.—Again my hon. friend is jumping to conclusions, and is putting those conclusions into my mouth.

Mr. COCHRANE. That is the only foundation you had to base your speech on.

Mr. SPEAKER. Order.

Mr. FISHER. But I have another reason for thinking I am correct. We have had a tariff investigation lately in this country. We have had a commission which has visited all the important centres of Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific. I am glad to say that on many occasions the farmers of Canada have taken the opportunity of going before the commission and presenting their views and discussing their interests, and I have no doubt that on many occasions they have discussed the question of the preference which Canada extends to imports from the mother country and have expressed strong views in regard to that preference; but I have never heard or noticed in the press reports of one single instance of the farmers of Canada suggesting before that commission that the question of a preference in the motherland should be connected with our preference, or that our preference should be made dependent upon a preference in the motherland. I have searched carefully to see whether anything of that kind has occurred, and I have asked the members of the commission who heard the representations of the farmers in all parts of Canada and they can not recall one single instance when the farmers of Canada brought that question before them or discussed it or presented any views with regard to it.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Does the hon. gentleman then conclude that the farmers of Canada are opposed to the policy of the government as set out in the resolution of the Colonial conference and in the memorandum of the Canadian government which I read this afternoon ?

Mr. FISHER. No, I do not. I am prepared to say that so far as the preference in the motherland is concerned, the farmers of Canada are to-day supremely indifferent to it. As it has been reported that the farmers of Canada and the people of Canada are practically taking the mother country by the throat and saying to her, if you do not give us a preference in your markets, our loyalty to the empire will be weakened, and your refusal will tend to disrupt the empire, I mean to say that the man who undertakes to say that of the people of Canada, I care not who he is, is casting an insult on the people of Canada and is not worthy of their confidence. The people of Canada are an integral part of the empire, and whatever any other part of the empire may in their wisdom consider to be best for them to do Canada remains to-day in the empire and is willing to remain a part of the empire.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. May I ask the hon. gentleman to whom he is referring when he makes that statement

Mr. FISHER. I am referring to many representations and discussions which have occurred ; I do not care to refer to any particular occasion or individual. My hon. friend knows that that impression has been sought to be created in the minds of the English people on the occasion of the recent election, and by men who have not been so careful to abstain from intervention in that election as I have stated I was and as the public men of Canada generally have been.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I am not going to discuss this question. As I have said, it is not a question at issue before any people of the empire so far as I know. The hon. gentleman says the question is not settled in England. I cannot say what the future will turn out; but I venture to say that to-day it is settled with no uncertain sound by the common sense electorate of the British Isles.

I had not intended to prolong this debate. I will only say a word or two with regard to what my hon. friend for North Toronto (Mr. Foster) said with reference to the Japanese treaty. My hon. friend, not intentionally, I am sure, slightly mistook the facts with regard to it. A treaty was made between the British empire and the Japanese empire in 1894, a commercial treaty which, as my hon. friend said, it was open to the self-governing colonies to adhere to or not as they saw fit. That treaty was signed in 1894. For nearly two years afterwards the Conservative government was in power in Canada and did not adhere to the treaty. The two years expired in less than a month after we came into office in 1896. Our attention was drawn to the fact that we still had the opportunity to adhere to the treaty. At that time the question of the favoured nation clause in various commercial treaties as applied to Canada was in some doubt, and there was a discussion going on in regard to it. Therefore when we discussed this matter we felt that as the favoured nation clause was one of the clauses of the British-Japanese treaty, it was inadvisable for us to hamper ourselves and Canada in future discussions on trade maters by adding another country to those in which the favoured-nation clause as applied to Canada was in force. We therefore declined to take action with regard to the matter. The time expired for the adherence of Canada to that treaty, and from that day until quite recently we had no power to adhere to the treaty. My hon. friend seems to think that it was open to us at any time during the nine of ten years that have elapsed since that time, to become parties to the British-Japanese treaty. That is not the case. After the time had once expired we could not adhere to the treaty except by the agreement, and the grace, I might say, of the Japanese.

Mr. FOSTER. Which would have been accorded at any time.

Mr. FISHER. That might be or might not be. The government took the occasion of my visit to Japan to open up the question to the Japanese government. I brought the question before the Foreign Minister of Japan. Quite favourable views were expressed by him as to the desirability of our entering into favourable treaty arrangements. As my hon. friend knows perfectly well, such negotiations have to be carried on through the imperial authorities. With very little delay indeed those negotiations were opened. They were somewhat prolonged owing to the war in Japan and owing to the question as to whether our new arrangement with Japan should be a simple adherence to the British people or a separate treaty on the same lines. Eventually it was decided that it should be the latter. The result has been that quite recently His Majesty the King and the Emperor of Japan have signed a new treaty—a treaty which is entirely independent of the British-Japanese treaty, but which is practically on the same lines. Speaking from memory, I think I am safe in saying there is no difference in provisions between the two treaties.

Mr. FOSTER. They both have the same most favoured nation clause.

Mr. FISHER. Yes.

Mr. BRODEUR. There is no difference in the responsibility Canada assumes.

Mr. FISHER. No, none in the responsibility of Canada or Japan. I give this information so that the House may be in possession of the actual facts. They are a little different from what my hon. friend himself explained a little while ago.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The hon. gentleman has not explained why the government ceased to give weight to the considerations which at first caused it not to accede to the treaty.

Mr. FISHER. Because that question was settled long ago. When the preference to Great Britain was established and the Belgium and German treaties were denounced, the question of the applicability of the most favoured nation clause to Canada was practically settled and there was no longer any doubt.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. It was open to this country to accede to that treaty long after the Belgium and German treaties were denounced, was it not?

Mr. FISHER. No, we never could accede to it since about August, 1897. We had to enter into new negotiations with Japan as the period during which we could adhere to the treaty expired then and we had no opportunity of acceding to it.

Mr. STOCKTON. Do I understand the hon. minister to say that the people of this country took no interest in the question of preferential trade relations between the mother country and the colonies? If that be the statement he made, is he aware that the legislature of New Brunswick, two sessions ago, passed unanimously a resolution in favour of such trade relations?

Mr. FISHER. I do not think I said that. I said that the farmers of Canada were not worrying over a preference in the motherland for their food products because they have a preference there to-day. They are selling all their goods there profitably and are so busy producing those goods that they are not worrying over the way they are sold in Great Britain.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN (South York). If the hon. gentleman thinks the farmers of this country are not worrying to get all they can in the British market, to get the full advantage of the preference, why did he within the last six months withdraw the bonding privileges under which Canadian packers imported American hogs into this country and slaughtered them and sold them in England as the products of Canada.

Mr. FISHER. If the hon. gentleman wishes me to answer, I think I can tell him.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. When the hon. minister says that the farmers of this country are not worrying about the English market and do not want all they can get in the English market, his own conduct belies his words because he has been withdrawing that bonding privilege in order that Canadian shippers may have the full advantage of the English market.

I wish, Mr. Speaker, to discuss for a few moments the address which has been moved this afternoon and as this is the opening of the session, I take this occasion—seeing that no one else has taken it—to welcome here the gentleman who has just been elected from Maisonneuve as the representative of labour in this parliament. It is time that the labouring people of this country elected more of their own class to parliament, and I hope the good work has only begun, and that not only Montreal will send more representatives of labour to this parliament but also Toronto and other cities. Something happened in England quite recently. That was a general election in which democracy triumphed, and the greatest thing in connection with that triumph of democracy was the election of a great number of labour candidates. Among them there was elected a man named John Burns—a man who has been identified with municipal ownership of the great utilities of England, and the Liberal party in that country when the opportunity came to them, made John Burns, this representative of labour, a prominent member of the cabinet. In Canada, however, the Liberal party are ashamed of the principle of public ownership. They repudiate it and take the side of the trusts and great corporations against labour.

There was another significant thing in that election in Great Britain and it turns on an important question discussed this afternoon. One of the characteristics of that election was this, that the late government was destroyed because it saw fit to attempt to coerce the great nonconformist body of England in the matter of education. Too little attention has been paid in this country to that phase of that election, but the great fact remains that the Conservative government which saw fit to coerce the nonconformist body in England in the matter of education was destroyed and put completely out of office as no other government has been for many a day in the motherland.

We have been told by the first minister and others that there is practically no program for this session and that we are to be here for a very few weeks. We are to go away and come back in the fall and complete our labours, and the labour we are then to undertake is simply the revision of the tariff. But what are we here for? Are we here to transact the public business of the country or not? Are we here to earn that large appropriation which has been made by parliament for the payment of members, namely, three-quarters of a million dollars? Is that appropriation now to be paid to the members of this parliament when apparently, from what has been said this afternoon, there is nothing for us to do. And there is nothing for us to do simply because one member of the government happens to have met with a personal affliction. I do not think we are here under any such understanding. The people of this country expect us to transact the public business, and there is any amount of public business which requires to be attended to. Hon. gentlemen opposite say that there are but a few unimportant Bills to be dealt with and then parliament will be dismissed to meet again in the fall. Well, that is not the understanding I have with my constituents. They have sent me here to look after their interests. They think there are a great many questions of the highest importance which ought to be attended to and grievances which ought to be remedied, but, according to the statement made this afternoon, there is nothing for us to do. That is not the opinion of the country. Go where you will and you will find a number of important grievances which the people want remedied and to which I have called the attention of this House from time to time. So far perhaps my efforts here have met with but little result. But they have set the people thinking, and if we cannot go on with the tariff, there are other things we can deal with. Last session the government appointed a special committee to consider the telephone grievance. A member of the government took charge of the investigation and practically gave a pledge to parliament that the government would rectify this grievance. Although he is no longer in the cabinet, the government are bound by his pledge. What has happened to that committee ? I do not believe it expired last session. Perhaps it is almost in existence yet. We have the statement made in North York by a gentleman who is now a member of the cabinet, that it was the intention of the government to continue that inquiry.

Are these grievances of the people in connection with the telephone service not to be righted? This telephone question is only one—there are many others. The people of the United States to-day are greatly concerned over the passenger rates charged by the railway company. The other day the state of Ohio passed a law providing for a two-cent maximum passenger rate. Indiana is following ; Pennsylvania and Wisconsin are also following; nearly every state in the union has this matter of passenger rates up for consideration. New York and Michigan had already passed such a law. And the same question is up in this country. At meetings everywhere it has been discussed. The people wish to see passenger rates reduced to a maximum of two cents a mile. They wish to see the Canadian railways, which give to their traffic originating in the United States this rate of two cents a mile, give the same to the traffic originating in Canada, And that suggests another great question in which the people are deeply interested. The people think that the express companies' rates should be regulated by the Railway Commission. Has this parliament no time to discuss that question, seeing that it is not to discuss the question of the tariff? Surely that question is worthy the attention of parliament, and I intend to bring it before parliament this session. I do not see that the fact that the Minister of Finance has met with an accident is a reason for parliament suspending its functions. Too much attention is paid in this House to persons and not enough to the people whom we represent. The people have sent us here to look after their interests. They did not tell us that if this man or that man did not happen to be in his place parliament was to suspend operations; they sent us here to attend to the public business. I trust that the position taken by the government to-day that we are here to do business only if a certain minister happens to be in his place will not be acted upon as it was set forth this afternoon, but that we shall deal with the questions that concern the people.

There is another thing about which the people of this country are thinking a great deal, and that is this : While this parliament has power to deal with banking, with insurance, with railways and with a great many other things, and is expected to deal with them, it approaches them too much from the point of view of the corporations who happen to be engaged in these lines of business, and not from the point of view of the people who have to do business with the corporations. There is the railway, and there is the man who pays the freight or fare upon the railway; and, apparently, this House never has time to put through any railway legislation except that which is in the interest of the railways. We have not time to regulate passenger rates; we have not time to regulate the actions of telegraph and telephone companies; we have not time to regulate the banks in the interest of the people. These great corporations are growing enormously aggressive. They have forgotten their true place and are simply trying to make the most they can out of the public while trying to chloroform parliament and prevent any action here that will compel them to do their duty to the public fairly. Take the case of the banks. The banks of this country are most successful; perhaps they are too successful. They have built up enormous reserves, and do not seem willing to allow the country to enjoy the prosperity that they enjoy. This parliament passed a law that the issue of Dominion notes ought to be increased. For some reason, the government have not made use of the power so given. If the government issued more of these national notes, they would get the benefit of the circulation. But, in some way, the banks have managed to prevent the increase of the circulation of government notes to the extent of the power that the parliament has given to the government. In the same way the banks have been restraining the issue of government postal orders. In many ways, they have managed to take more advantage to themselves and give less to the people than they ought to do in view of the great franchises they enjoy. Then, take the telephone companies. They propose to increase their capital stock, and yet, in the face of that, they refuse to give the service they ought to give to the people and the interchange of business that they ought to give to the independent company. They make an improper alliance with the railways because of which no independent telephone company can have access to a railway station. Grievances of this kind in connection with all these great corporations are being presented by the people daily. And yet we are told that parliament is not disposed to take up any of these matters because the Minister of Finance happens to have met with an accident. We are not doing justice to those whom we represent when we abandon our functions and fail to deal with public grievances. We have the opportunity to take up these matters, but the idea is coolly announced that we are merely to have a few weeks discussion on trifling matters, that nothing is to be done, that we are to go away in the summer and to come back in the fall, and that then only the tariff is to be discussed. If that is the view the Liberal party take of the duty of parliament, I think they make a great mistake, and I believe the people will insist on parliament dealing with the actual grievances that exist.

We had a good deal of discussion this afternoon about the coercion of the west. I am still of the opinion that the Autonomy Bill passed last session was neither constitutional or in the interest of the country, and I hope and trust that Mr. Haultain, who has been so much discussed here this afternoon, will find a way in the legislature of the Northwest to have that question re-opened and that it will finally be taken to the Privy Council for adjudication and final settlement. I do not know whether there is any truth in the story that is going about, but I have heard it stated that the government intend at an early day, by petition or otherwise, to ask the imperial government to validate these Acts of last session. If that is so, I greatly regret it. I trust that nothing of this kind will be done, but that Mr. Haultain and those who agree with him will find him a way of getting the matter before the Privy Council. I believe that the Bill was unconstitutional, that its unconstitutionality was shown last session, and I hope a test of its validity will be made.

An hon. gentleman from the west speaking here this afternoon denounced the people of the east for interfering with the religion of the people of the west. I do not know to whom he refers, it was a double edged argument that he used. But I can say this, that the people of the east, if they interfered in any way with that question, did so in order to protect the rights of the new provinces in the west. They were not imposing anything upon them, they were trying to secure to them their rights; and those quotations that were read here this evening all go to show what Liberals themselves thought of these Autonomy Bills that went through last session. They were not in the interest of the west, they were not in the interest of the provinces of the east. A good old verse of the Bible says 'Who so breaketh through a hedge, a serpent shall bite him', and I believe that those who broke through the hedge of the constitution and coerced the people of the west, will yet encounter the bite of the serpent in that respect.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I want to come to what is perhaps the most important question of this session, that is the appointment of an insurance commission. The other day, for a moment, I expressed the opinion that I did not think the government did a wise thing when they appointed a royal commission to investigate complaints against the insurance companies, when parliament was about to meet within a very few days. The government now see the importance of that investigation. A while ago it was quite apparent that an effort was being made to avoid an investigation, a full investigation, into the conduct of Canadian insurance companies. We know that in the state of New York where these grievances were first exposed, a commission of the legislature investigated them, and we know that that investigation was thorough. We also know that in this country where we have had investigations by royal commissions, they have not been thorough, but on the contrary they were largely invented for whitewashing purposes.

Now, what happened in the state of New York in regard to these insurance companies. It was proved, first, that ninety per cent of all the insurance policies issued in the United States were of the kind known as profit sharing policies. The same thing obtains in this country. The finding of the New York commission was that the profit sharing policy, the policy which covers ninety per cent of those issued in that country, and also covers ninety per cent of those issued in this country, is a bad policy, is a policy that cannot be justified, and has given rise to all that extravagance and wastefulness which has taken place in the States, and which is taking place in Canada. These profit sharing policies are based on the idea that if you pay practically one-fifth more of premium into the insurance company, you will, according to the contract they make with you, share in certain profits that may accrue from that policy and investment of the premium. But it is a bargain which Mr. B. B. Osler once said in court in Ontario, one side has not to carry out. Whether those profits are paid, whether they are divided between the policyholder and the company, is absolutely within the rights and judgment of the company to decide. As a consequence, while ninety per cent of the policy holders have been paying for these profit sharing policies, and paying one-fifth more of their entire premiums in order to share in the profits, they have not shared in them, and to that extent enormous sums of money have been used, have gone into the reserves, have not been divided among the policy-holders who paid that money and who were entitled to them.

Another thing that was proved by the Armstrong investigation, and which is also true in Canada is this, that nepotism had crept into the administration of insurance companies in the United States, that the general managers appointed their friends and relatives to immense salaries, and put them in the enjoyment of immense commissions in connection with the insurance companies. The same thing has happened in Canada. There is one insurance company in Toronto, the president of which announced the other day that he had an immense salary out of it; that one of his sons had $20,000; that another drew a commission the net amount of which, he said, was less than $20,000; but it is supposed by some people to be $60,000 or $70,000; and that the $80,000 paid a year out of the policy-holders' money in dividends went largely to that one family because they controlled the stock. It has always been admitted here in Canada that an unnecessary increase of capital stock in one great insurance company, in several insurance companies, has taken place. And while gentlemen say here in the House that they do not know that anything wrong has taken place in Canada, sufficient has come out within the last three or four weeks to justify me in saying that there is not a grievance which has been exposed in the United States in connection with insurance companies which does not exist in this country, outside of the charge of contributions to political party funds. So that while statements are made that Canadian companies are probably free, these statements are not borne out by the facts; on the contrary I believe and I am sorry to have to say it, that an investigation will prove, and Sir Louis Davies' statement made the other day also bears it out, that it is high time that the insurance companies of this country were investigated. I think they ought to be investigated here on the floor of this House. A parliamentary committee could sit even if the House was not in session, and a parliamentary committee could bring out all the facts here better than they can be brought out by a royal commission. The Canadian companies were summoned to go to New York, and they had all their papers prepared and were ready to go to New York. In the same way they could come here, and we could get out the real facts much better by a parliamentary committee and in a businesslike way, than can be done by a royal commission adopting the rules of procedure of the courts.

Now, another thing that has come out in connection with the Canadian companies is that, as was stated by Sir Louis Davies in his letter, a complete change has taken place in the character of the investments made by insurance companies. They were limited some years ago to municipal and government bonds and investments of that kind. All that has been changed, and the insurance companies are to-day using the trust funds that the company have control of, using them for investment in companies the securities of which are of such a questionable character that a new term has been coined to express them, namely, that silent assets have to be given with the bonds in order to get trust companies to buy them. Now, I say it requires the immediate attention of parliament when we find these insurance companies having the savings of the people to the extent of a hundred million of dollars, placing a large portion of that money in investments which carry what they call silent assets. In order to sell the bonds they must give a big block of paid-up stock. I make another statement in connection with the administration of Canadian insurance companies. It will be found, if the examination is thorough, that in some way large blocks of this paid-up stock that went with the sale of the bonds, went into the pockets and into the hands of those who are connected with the directors, and that subsidiary companies are controlled by the directors of some of the insurance companies in this country. So there is not a thing that was exposed in connection with insurance in New York that has not been already found to exist in this country, and if it has been found to exist in this country this parliament, instead of hurrying up and getting through, should remain here if it remained until next Christmas in order to correct these grievances in connection with insurance and the way to correct them and the quick way to get out the facts is by a parliamentary committee and not by a royal commission as has been proposed by the government.

Now just let me give two or three facts that bear out in a very pronounced way what I have been saying.

The bulk of the money in the insurance companies belongs to the policy-holders but you would think from the way the shareholders were discussing this thing the other day at their meetings that they owned this money. Now all this money in insurance belongs to the policy-holders, a very trivial amount belongs to the shareholders and yet the shareholders have assumed to themselves the absolute control of this money paid in by the policy-holders. There is $100,000,000 of it in Canada to-day, there is not $2,000,000 paid in by the shareholders, and the great movement in the United States and the finding of the Armstrong Commission is in some way to get back control of that insurance money into the hands of the policy-holders instead of leaving it in the hands of the shareholders as it is in the United States and as is here to-day.

The policy-holders' money represents the savings of the people actually handed over to the extent of $150,000,000 and 800,000 policies, representing 400,000 policy-holders and over $700,000,000 of capital. The money invested is the life blood of a large portion of the nation's activities. There are two parties in this field of investment, the shareholders and the policy-holders. Broadly the shareholders govern. There is only one mutual company in Canada and the policy-holders pay the money which keeps the thing going and which makes the shareholders' money very lucrative. The policy-holders have hardly any voice in the management. The Canada Life has six policy-holders directors who have no voice in anything relating to the capital stock of the company. The profits to policy-holders have decreased and the expenses have increased. Why should the premiums of old policy-holders be drawn on for wild chases after foreign business. It costs very little to take care of the policy-holders premiums already paid. The profits made with his money are going into extravagant expenses. Look at this table of the Canada Life :

	Premium income.	General expenses.	Expense percentage on premium income.
	$	$
1896.....	2,025,716	355,810	17.5
1904.....	3,043,178	921,600	30·2
Increase....	1,017,462	565,890	.....
Per cent increase....	50 p. c.	159 p. c.	.....

Agents' commissions on—

Deferred dividend.....	65	p.c.
Non-participals..	45	"
Renewal profit policy.....	7½	"
Renewal non-profit policy	5	"

Can any man in this country justify the president of a life insurance company or a member of his family taking 7½ per cent every year of the renewal premiums on policies in the company ? Now that is a scandal that exists in this country to-day, namely that the president of one of the largest companies in this country, between himself and his own family takes 7½ per cent on the renewal premiums of the policies of that company as commission every year. There are contracts of that kind existing and the policy-holders of this country do not know it. Yet it has been admitted and admitted in an indirect way but I say insurance of that character cannot be justified. It is not in the public interest; on the contrary it is a money making scheme for capitalists who choose to get into that business. It gives them control of immense sums of money and puts them in a position to use those funds, perhaps legitimately but also to use them for their own personal advantage as they have used them. It allows them to underwrite questionable securities as the insurance funds of this country have been used and in view of that fact why should we come here in parliament and refuse to take up a question of that kind ? Why should we hurry up and get through when things of that kind have to be investigated and have to be rectified ? The policy-holders have paid for profits which the companies have earned, but not distributed, except in very small proportion, to the policy-holders. Promises to the policy-holders have not been carried out. Ninety per cent of the policies issued in this country are of that specious kind ' with profits ' according to the Armstrong Commission in New York these deferred dividends are bad in principle and ought to be prohibited. I have already pointed out that 90 per cent. of the policies in this country are of that kind, and that they ought to be immediately abolished

Subsidiary to this exploitation of these trust funds there has grown up a practice of what is called in the United States associated corporations for doing business with insurance companies. Those who control these investment companies also control insurance companies and by reason of this improper exploitation the reserve of insurance companies there has developed the practice of putting the trust funds of insurance companies in schemes that have not been justified and are of a purely speculative character.

The underlying principle of insurance must be that these trust funds must be invested only in gilt edged securities as all trust funds are. Instead of carrying out that principle, the president of the Sun Life boasts that he looks askance at government and municipal bonds, and prefers those enterprises which have been enormously watered and in which common stock is given with the bonds which may later turn up in the insurance company's books as silent assets. Now there is the president of the second largest insurance company in this country, the Sun Life of Montreal, who says he looks askance on the investment of the policy-holders' millions in government and municipal bonds, and prefers to invest those millions—and he has in his charge, I think, over $30,000,000 of policy-holders' money—in all kinds of traction companies which are highly watered, and give free paid up stock with the bond issue. Is that in the interest of the policy-holder of this country ? Is that discharging the duty of a trustee in connection with these funds, that these directors are supposed to discharge ? I do not think it is and I think it is high time that parliament, in the interest of the policy-holders, should undertake to regulate the shareholders and those who control and manipulate these insurance companies in Canada so that the statement that has been freely made here to-day that there is not much wrong with the Canadian insurance companies is hardly borne out by the facts, but on the contrary we have the evidence of Sir Louis Davies, we have the admissions made by those who are in control of these insurance companies that things are taking place which ought not to take place and that it is the duty of parliament to see that the law is changed forthwith and that better protection is provided for the public.

Another thing that came out in connection with insurance in the United States and is coming out here now in this country is that the inspector of insurance appointed by the state to overlook these companies, and we have them, failed to do his duty.

Can we say that the inspector of insurance in this country has done anything better than they did in connection with the American companies. For, if the inspector of insurance in this country had done his full duty he would never have allowed any company in Canada to have invested in bonds which carried with them silent assets. It was only because of the action of one policy holder in Toronto that it was brought out that Canadian insurance companies were putting the money of the policy holders into these questionable securities. A great many things to cause alarm to policyholders have taken place in Canada, and these things are of a character which ought to compel this house to immediately take up this question and to remove all these grievances in connection with insurance.

I want now to speak on the question of the increased indemnity which has caused a good deal of discussion in the country. I have no hesitation in saying that the people of Canada condemn that measure in all its aspects as it was passed here last session. The promise was made in North York, if I am to believe the Toronto 'Globe', that some kind of an amendment would be made this session. The 'Globe' said.

> We are glad to receive from Mr. Aylesworth the emphatic asurance given to the electors of North York, that it will be his duty next session to see that the question is reconsidered and that the weight of his powerful advocacy will be against these features of the legislation condemned by public opinion.

After the challenge that was thrown out here this afternoon, standing in my place I say, that the public opinion of this country has condemned all those measures in regard to indemnity to senators and members of the House of Commons and pensions and everything else that were passed here last session. I have watched very carefully the trend of public opinion in regard to it. Any number of meetings have been held all over this country, and everywhere the people have condemned this increased indemnity. I stand here and make the confession that I am as much responsible as any one else for the passage of that Bill last session. It is true that I did not vote against it. I must accept my full responsibility for my conduct in connection with it. But I have come to see that a great many people in this country condemned these measures of last session first and foremost because the people think that that increased indemnity to members of parliament was given as a reward by the Liberal party to its followers for imposing coercion on the people of the west. That is the view held largely in the province of Ontario to-day. But there is another reason why the people condemn it. It certainly was open to condemnation also because it was rushed through the House at the tail end of the session, and it was so rushed through because of some secret conference that took place between certain representatives on both sides of the House. And the way was greased for that measure which has been so generally condemned, by the signing I am told of a secret round-robin. The public opinion of Canada condemns that salary grab not only because it was rushed through at the tail end of the session, but because it was the result of a conference of members on both sides of the House and because it was supported by a secret round-robin. Now, I was no party either to that arrangement or to that round-robin, but I must accept my full responsibility for that measure. I trust, however, that the Bill introduced this afternoon by the Minister of Justice to amend the Act relating to the Senate and House of Commons is intended to carry out the pledge that the Postmaster General gave to the people of North York, and which the Toronto 'Globe' took to mean that the objectionable features of that legislation would be repealed this session. I will tell hon. gentlemen another reason why the people condemn that measure. They condemn it because the men who appeared before the people in the election of November, 1904, were willing to accept the honour of being members of this House at the then existing indemnity. Not one candidate who appeared before the electors stated that the indemnity was insufficient and as the people say: They were all glad to take the job at $1,500 a year. And the very first session after that election we get up in this House and we propose to increase our indemnity by $1,000 a session. That is what the people of Canada condemn. This same question of indemnity was up the other day in the British parliament and a great many thought the time had come when the members of the British parliament should be paid some remuneration. But in every one of the speeches made on that occasion there was the remarkable characteristic that they all referred to what the indemnity ought to be in the next succeeding parliament. All the members of the British House who spoke admitted that they had come to parliament on the understanding that there was no indemnity to members, and therefore if there should be any change in the law that change should come into effect only when the present parliament had expired. The very same principle was enunciated in a remarkable way by Mr. Balfour, the late Prime Minister. We all know that until very recently the Prime Minister of England had a place away down in the order of precedence. It has now come out that the King in his wisdom thought the time had come when the Prime Minister should take his proper rank in all state functions, and he suggested to Mr. Balfour that the Prime Minister of England should rank next to the Archbishops of Canterbury and York. And while Mr. Balfour agreed with the King and believed that the Prime Minister should rank as His Majesty desired, yet he begged His Majesty that the rule should only apply to his successor. That is the principle which should actuate the members of this House in any matter connected with the increase of their indemnity. That is the principle we should have carried out if we wanted to increase the salaries of members of parliament. If we thought it was well it should be done, we should have enacted that the law should not come into force until after this parliament, and until the people had an opportunity of expressing their judgment upon the matter.

Now, there is not a man in this House who can go before the people and justify that increase in view of what has taken place in England. We should have referred the matter to the people; we should not, immediately after a general election, where not one man raised his voice in favour of such an increase, have increased the indemnity in the very first session. Hon. gentlemen on this side of the House will find that it will cause them more trouble than it will cause hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House, and I will try and give them a reason for that. Since we met here last session there have been eight vacancies on the other side of the House, and, with the exception of two deaths, six of these vacancies were caused by hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House taking office. When the five years of this parliament have expired, nearly every man on that side of the House will have taken office and gone into retirement, and the members of the opposition will be left to face the people as the men who passed the Indemnity Bill and will have to take the responsibility for it. It will never pay an opposition to sit down with the government party when such things as I have referred to can take place. In that election a lot of fresh Liberals will come before the people of Canada as candidates, and they will actually stand before the people and condemn that indemnity grab which the wicked Conservatives passed in 1905. I want to tell gentlemen on this side of the House another and a worse feature of that indemnity grab. It bears this construction, that that vote was designed by some clever manipulator in the interest of the government and the government party to silence criticism and discussion of these Indemnity Bills of last session. When I recall the conduct of the Minister of Justice in connection with them and how he smoothed all the ways to get the Bills through, I believe that he had gone to some expert in casuistry who told him that if he wanted to tie up the opposition for good, the way to do it was to get them into some scrape of this kind, in connection with something that concerned their honour before the people of this country—to get them into some position where they would not be able to go before the people for a year. Whether that was really done or not, all we know is this. that in the recess, by reason of the public indignation over this salary grab, hardly a member of parliament has dared to face his constituents and discuss either the Autonomy Bills or the salary question. There has been a silence in the country throughout the recess. Hardly any member has gone back to his constituents; hardly any member has discussed public questions, and in nearly every case where a member has attempted to discuss public questions, instead of discussing such questions as the Autonomy Bills, the discussion turned to asking the member what about the salary grab. So that we have had a recess with very little public discussion; and now we are to have a session without a discussion of any public question whatever. We have asked the people to increase our indemnity from $1,500 to $2,500 and we are to do no business; we are not to consider the public questions in which the people are interested. The Minister of Finance is ill and cannot take his place in the House, and we are to have a short session. Why did we increase our indemnity if we are not prepared to discharge the public business? All the people will ask is that. What can we say? So I trust that the Bill which the Minister of Justice introduced this afternoon has a clause in it repealing all these votes. If it has not, I intend to move an amendment in this House to that effect, and I intend to show the courage of my convictions in regard to it which were called in question in this House this afternoon. So that hon. gentlemen will have an opportunity in connection with that measure of placing themselves on record on this question. I claim no credit whatever for myself in this matter. I am just as much besmirched, if you use that word in connection with it, as any other member; but I do now see the iniquity of the proposition, and I am willing to abide by the verdict of the people in regard to it, and have it repealed because it was wrong and because it was not a fair deal with the people who sent us here to represent them. That is what I have to say in connection with this matter. I did go to my constituents in connection with it. I gave them my views of it. Substantially I told them what I have told the House here to-night, and I found that my constituents disapproved of the proposition; and I could not see my way, in view of that, to take the money for my own use. I do not intend hereafter to take that money for my own use, I think the people of this country do not approve of our taking it. When we put the measure through we did it in defiance of an understanding with the people that we were satisfied with the indemnity as it then was, and that if we saw fit to increase it, we should have provided that the law should go into force only after this parliament ceased to exist. So I trust that after all the expressions of public opinion that have taken place, and all the fencing that has been made on this question, hon. gentlemen will have the courage to repeal that law and to square themselves with the people who sent them here to represent them.

Mr. HAUGHTON LENNOX (South Simcoe). Mr. Speaker, I did not intend to say anything on this question; but, in view of the somewhat extraordinary position taken by the hon. gentleman (Mr. W. F. Maclean) who has just taken his seat, I think it is due to myself as a member of this House to say a word or two. I want to say distinctly that the hon. gentleman himself is the best judge of whether he has been besmirched or not; but for my part, I was in my place when these votes were taken, and I do not believe that I have been besmirched or that my honour or my duty to my constituents has been injured in any degree. As regards one proposition, discussed at that time, in common probably with many other members of the House, I did not feel that I was in a position at the moment to discuss it—that is, the question of the retiring allowances to ministers. My reason for not discussing that question at that time was that I had just returned from New Brunswick, I think on the day the question was introduced, and it came to me as an entirely new question.

I knew there was a policy existing in Britain with regard to the matter; and without having had an opportunity of consulting the authorities as to just what the law in Britain was, I did not feel myself justified in then entering upon a discussion of the question. I realized—what some hon. members do not always perhaps so fully realize—that the affairs of the country could go on for another year or another session even though I did not speak on the question. I intended then, if it turned as I anticipated it would, that a system which better commended itself to my judgment existed in Britain than the system introduced on that occasion, to take the opportunity when I could of ventilating my views to this House. I am not satisfied with the manner in which we settled the question of the retiring allowance to ministers and I am glad to find we will have an opportunity of discussing and reconsidering it. But I want to take no doubtful, vaccillating position on the question of indemnity. I want to say to this House that, in my opinion, a member of the House of Commons who, taking the average of long sessions and short sessions—and there is no reason that we should not have some short sessions, and there is no avoiding very many long sessions—I say that a member of the House of Commons who attends to his duties to the best of his ability and is capable of attending to them—and his constituents are the best judges of that—who is here from day to day attending to the affairs of the country, is well worth $2,500. And whenever my constituents think I am not worth that, I am ready to retire from public life. In the county of Simcoe from which I come, I have no mortgage on the people and they are under no necessity to send me here. If they do not think I earn my $2,500, they will have no difficulty in finding men in every concession worth that indemnity, and they are at perfect liberty to send such men here and I shall retire to a position more suitable perhaps to me than the one I occupy. But whatever way this comes up—I care not whether by round robin or square robin or any other way I knew of nothing dishonourable in the conduct of members of this House on either side with regard to this matter, and I would have been glad, had it been opportune, to have spoken on this question of indemnity and justified my views. But if I was silent, I understood that I was the one to take that money and use it for my own purposes. If I did not think I was justified in taking it for my own purposes, I would not consider I was justified in taking it for any other purpose. I intend to take and enjoy it as far as I can, so long as it is the law of the land; and I have no hesitation in enunciating my views and making my position known in so far as it is in the public interest that it should be known. I have not gone down hat in hand in my riding to my constituents, it is true, but I shall go to them when they want me and when the occasion arises, and I shall not go to them feeling that I have been less fairly their representative in the last session than in the previous sessions. I am sorry to have to differ to some extent from my hon. friend who has just spoken. (Mr. W. F. Maclan); I know, he is an old member of this House. Besmirched! I know that he commands a very powerful organ and that it is dangerous for me to speak even in this mild way in opposition to him. But this is a free country, and I believe the decision last session was in the main the honest expression of the people's representatives; and taking that view I am not prepared to say that I or any other hon. member need fear censure for what we did on that occasion.

Mr. W. F. COCKSHUTT (Brantford). Before the question is put, I desire to say a word regarding the speech from the Throne. What this House was called together particularly for was to deal with the tariff problem. Last year when the tariff commission was appointed I asked whether it was a life-saving crew or simply a coroner's jury. By that I meant whether it was intended to rescue the expiring industries of Canada or simply intended to bring in a verdict as to why they died. It appears now the latter is the case. This is not a new matter. I have positive knowledge that for at least four years this government has promised tariff revision. We sent a deputation from Brantford four years ago to interview the government on this very matter. We were asked then to keep a certain industry afloat, which was in a dying condition, and that later it would receive assistance from the government. That was the cutlery industry which has since been obliged to shut down. The minister said the tariff would engage the attention of the government the following year and therefore nothing would be done that year. The ministers were going over to the colonial conference and expected some arrangements might be made there which might affect the tariff and it would not do to make any change just then. Again the following year the government promised relief. They went to the country in 1904, and if I remember rightly the First Minister made at Valleyfield a speech promising shortly a revision of the tariff. We have now come to the second session, and we are told that the principal business which we supposed we were called together for, is not to be dealt with. Why delay for two months the calling of the House together in order that the tariff commission might make their proposed revision, and then, when we meet two months later, be told that the tariff is not to be dealt with at all. That surely is a very strange proceeding. The country expects that if tariff alterations are needed they should speedily be forthcoming. This government however, appears to think that there is no necessity for them to redeem their pledges. I believe this government does not sincerely intend to make any material changes in the tariff. It may be said that no industries are suffering, but I took occasion last session to point out several. Take for instance the binder twine industry, which has some 12 factories, two of which are located in my constituency. They made urgent representations to the government to save the millions of dollars of capital invested in that industry and protect the workingmen engaged in it by giving some compensation for the injury inflicted by the government giving a free entry to American twine. I believe the duty was 12½ per cent when this government came in. Since then, the article has been made entirely free. If I am rightly informed, 40,000 farmers in this country have stock in binder twine concerns. If there is one product more than another in the manufacture of which the farmer has the right to be interested, it is binder twine, an article that he uses every day in summer on his farm, an article that he understands, and the price of which he watches thoroughly. These men ventured their money in this industry in good faith. In my own county, I believe, there are upwards of 4,000 farmers interested in the manufacture of binder twine. These industries in some cases,, are in a dying condition. In others they are in a dead condition. The factory in Brandon is closed up. The fate of other factories is trembling in the balance. Yet the government declare that they are not prepared to do anything.

Then there is the case of the woollen industry. The people engaged in that industry have sent deputation after deputation to impress upon the authorities the need of immediate action. We have seen several mills sold under the hammer. But the government is not ready to move even yet. Other industries must die; other millions of capital must be wiped out before this government will rise to the occasion and redeem their sacred promise that, if returned to power, they would immediately revise the tariff. This is the second session of parliament and now they tell us that although they have travelled all over the country and obtained all the information, still they do not propose to act. I, for one, raise my voice against this conduct. I think this House should have proceeded to deal with this question immediately. It would not have taken very long if dealt with in a businesslike way. There are industries at this moment that demand the attention of this parliament. An increase of the tariff is necessary as much in the interest of the farmer as to the manufacturer. This country is no longer an agricultural country, pure and simple, but is largely a manufacturing country. The products of the factories fully equal, if they do not exceed, those of the farm. Hon. gentlemen opposite may dispute that, but I believe that the census prepared by the Minister of Agriculture, who is an authority on these matters, will show that the factories of Canada are producing as much as its farms and that the workmen in the factories are as numerous as the farmers and therefore entitled to equal consideration with the others. I do not ask that injustice be done to the farmers—far from it. Even farmers in my own county are asking for an increase in the tariff. I believe that the market gardeners in Centre York, represented by an hon. gentleman opposite (Mr. Campbell), have asked for the same thing. Throughout the province of Ontario many farmers are in favour of tariff revision, and have asked for it. All the more, therefore, do I contend that it was the duty of this government to redeem the pledge that they made over and over again and to prepare for the carrying out of which they have travelled over this country from end to end taking evidence, at great expense to the public. We should have met in January, and we meet in March. Yet notwithstanding this delay, we are told that the revision will not go on. It is true that an accident has befallen the Finance Minister, for which I am sorry. But then the business of this country should not rest upon the shoulders of any one man. It becomes this House to deal with the tariff, which is a matter of the greatest national importance, and which has been fairly brought before this government and this parliament and which this parliament is expected to deal with. I, for one, raise my protest against nothing being said in the King's speech on this matter which I believe would be one of the principal matters for this House to deal with. It may be personally convenient for me, or pleasant for me, to have summer holidays. But the very existence of millions of capital depends upon the action of this House; and it is the duty of parliament to protect that capital and the men whom it employs and who must labour in the summer as well as in the winter.

Now, a word as to a subject which has been mentioned here, and in which I have taken a deep interest. I am glad to see that the Minister of Agriculture (Hon. Mr. Fisher) is still in his place. He is looking at his watch, but I hope he will allow me a few minutes to take extreme exception to his statement regarding preferential trade. I have been a strong advocate of that policy for fifteen years, and I am not ashamed to declare my opinions in this House or elsewhere. I had the honour in 1903 when the Congress of the Chamber of Commerce of the Empire was assembled in Montreal, to be chosen as the Canadian leader on this question, and I had the honour to move the resolution on that occasion. There were representatives there from every important town and city in the Dominion of Canada. And, with only one exception every Canadian representative, from Victoria to Halifax, spoke and voted in favour of preferential trade with Great Britain. The Minister of Agriculture takes little account of merchants and manufacturers, it is true, but appeals to the farmers and says that the farmers have no use for preferential trade. I take issue with the minister; I know that such is not the case. The Manitoba legislature has passed a resolution in favour of this policy. The New Brunswick resolution has been mentioned. And we know that there is a feeling throughout this country from end to end in favour of mutually preferential trade. There is no doubt the minister made a very serious mistake in his statement in Montreal. He was completely out of accord with his own cabinet—or they have misrepresented their stand not only to the people of Canada but to the people of the empire. What did they go to the colonial conference for, if not to place their views on record? And what were their views? They had given a substantial preference, and were ready to go further as soon as Great Britain would move. Was that the view of the Minister of Agriculture? If not, the cabinet misrepresented him on that occasion. I contend that the cabinet has more than once committed itself to the doctrine of preferential trade. It is true that the farmers do not want any more of what the minister calls a 'preference' because it is jug-handle preference—all on one side, and was never intended to bear the meaning that he puts upon it. He says that we have a preference now. Let the minister state wherein we have a preference. Sir, we have not one atom of preference in the British market. The products of Russia, of the United States, of every country that is most hostile to Great Britain, come in there on the same terms as those of Canada. But we know—at least I think I know—that the minister spoke his own true sentiments when he made that speech. And the 'Herald,' his own newspaper has always been—at least has been for several years past—against that policy. It attacked me most severely, and in a very unjust way, because I moved that resolution. And, from that day to this it has been against the policy of preferential trade—there is no doubt about that. The Minister of Agriculture, to-night, has let the cat out of the bag. His explanations here will not be satisfactory to this House, or to the country, or to the empire. I think the minister showed his imperialist spirit last session when he attacked the British attitude on the cattle embargo. He styled that 'an unfriendly act.' These words generally come from an ambassador who is about to break off relations with the country of which he is speaking. I do not know whether the Minister of Agriculture was speaking in that sense or not. But when the words 'an unfriendly act' are used, the next move generally involves something more violent than words.

Whether the Minister of Agriculture meant that or not, that was the impression left upon the minds of many who heard him. Now he comes up and attacks the British preference. We have long thought that this government is opposed to it. I said the first moment the preference was brought down in its present shape that it was a deadly blow at what they had been championing for years. We have been obliged to change the name, and to call it a mutual preference, in order to separate it from what this government calls a preference. The hon. gentleman says the voice of Great Britain has decided with no uncertain sound that they want none of it. Not so sure, Mr. Speaker, about that. Forty-four per cent, we are told, of the electors of Great Britain voted in favour of the Chamberlain policy pure and simple. That is not so bad when we consider that in the last British house there was not a man elected on that platform. Even Mr. Chamberlain himself during the previous election was opposed to it, and now he sits in the House heading a solid phalanx of about 150 members elected for that very purpose, putting through what the Minister of Agriculture says Canada does not want. If he thinks that question is dead, I do not agree with him. I think the fight is but beginning, and I think he will find that it is going to be a very live question in the British empire for the next few years. While he may rejoice that Great Britain turned down that project apparently, in the meantime we who advocate the policy are by no means discouraged. We know that a solid phalanx of 150 men have been elected there to support the policy, and it is well enunciated as a policy of the unity of the empire based upon commercial bonds.

Though the Minister of Agriculture says that he wants none of it, I think he does not speak for the whole of Canada, not even for those whom he professes to speak for, the farmers. I believe that if there is one class in this country more than another who would rejoice at a mutual preference it is the farmers. They have more to gain than any others. The hon. gentleman tells us we have a preference already. Not a bit of it. We have no preference at all in the British market other than what quantity and quality give us, and that is good in any market. Britain does not buy our cheese because it is made in Canada, but because it is of the right quality. She does not buy our bacon because it is made in Canada, but because it is of the right quality. But where is our preference in the British market ? They have bought their butter from Denmark for years, and if we could deflect a part of that trade in our direction would that not be an advantage to our farmers ? If we could succeed in getting our cattle into Great Britain alive, as they used to enter, would not that be an advantage to Canada ? Still the hon. gentleman says that we want none of this mutual preference. I contend, Mr. Speaker, that if there is one policy that this country does want it is a mutual preference in Great Britain. Therefore I sincerely regret that the hon. gentleman has gone back upon what his cabinet had said they wished for when they visited England. They put themselves on record there as being in favour of a preferential tariff between Canada and Great Britain. I believe at that time they were sincere, if they were not sincere, it is much to be regretted that they misled the public men and the people of Great Britain. The speech of the Minister of Agriculture has been quoted from end to end of Great Britain. He tells us it attracted more attention than he expected. It is true it attracted more attention than any speech the hon. gentleman has ever made. But it was not on account of its wisdom, not on account of its eloquence, nor of its policy, but it was because it caused a tremor throughout the British empire, it caused an unrest, and men looked into each others' faces and said, what does that government of Canada really mean ? We would like to know what this government really means. Here is a minister of the Crown who tells us to-day that he was speaking simply as a farmer. I do not know whether his voice as a farmer is any less mighty than it is as Minister of Agriculture. I think I would as soon accept his word as a farmer as I would accept it as Minister of Agriculture, I think it is quite as valuable. But no doubt he was speaking what he felt in his own mind at the time, and that he did rejoice that in the meantime the Chamberlain policy had been knocked out, as he expressed it. But it is not dead. It is true that for a time it will not become the law of Great Britain nor of the empire ; but I am still one of those who are enthusiastic enough to believe that Great Britain will yet see that it is in her interest and in the interest of the whole empire. I believe she will yet establish a mutual bond of trade between herself and all her colonies, and thus preserve for all time the British empire. The hon. gentleman tells us that we can be loyal without any trade sentiment. That is quite true, Mr. Speaker. We have been giving our lip loyalty to Great Britain for many years past and our trade to the United States. We desire that more of our trade should be given to Great Britain and less to the United States, and the way to bring that about is by a mutual preferential tariff.

Now, Mr. Speaker, we have heard something about solidarity in the cabinet. We have been told that it exists in the Liberal party. I do not think myself that it is very creditable to hon. gentlemen to rejoice over those Northwest elections. They may feel a certain pride in those elections that is not shared by all their friends, and it is not shared by any on this side of the House. If there is anything about which we should be ashamed, Mr. Speaker, it is the way those elections have been carried on in the two new provinces. The speech from the Throne says they are the most contented people in the world. I take issue with that statement. I had an opportunity of being in those provinces prior to the election, and I make bold to say that if the voice of the people of Saskatchewan had received a fair expression at the polls, Mr. Haultain would to-day be at the head of the government. That is my private opinion. We know a little of what was done and perhaps we may know more. We know that employees of this government were doing things that ought not to be done. The trial of those men took place in secret, and most of the particulars have not come out. We are told that those two men who were at that time employees, I believe, of the Minister of the Interior, were fined $200 for pocketing the votes of two polls, putting them in without consulting any elector. Surely, Mr. Speaker, this is a new kind of voting machine they have got in the west. We are told that 150 votes were deposited without any one having marked the ballots but the deputy returning officer. If that is anything to glory in, Mr. Speaker, by all means let us glory, but remember that we are glorying in our shame. There never was an election held in any province in Canada about which we need to be more ashamed than that election in Saskatchewan. If this country is ever to be good and great it must begin to purify the methods by which we place public men in power. I contend that instead of saying that these people are the most satisfied, we should say that they have good grounds for being the most dissatisfied people in the Dominion of Canada. That is not the only constituency, I am told, in which work was done that should not have been done. I believe we will hear more about it, we will see further revelations that will show us that these methods were not confined to one constituency. I believe that Mr. Haultain was entitled to and did receive the larger part of the vote of those people who voted without let or hindrance for the cause of truth and right.

That is my belief. I travelled in that country about the time of the election and I had some means of hearing and knowing what was going on. I expected no different result from what I heard on that occasion. But this I think, Mr. Speaker, is nothing for us to rejoice at, it is far better for us to rejoice in a defeat if it were honourable than in a victory if it were dishonourable, and I contend that the reference to these provinces being in a state of great content is putting words into the mouth of a large section of that people that they do not feel. This I regret to have to say but I take this opportunity of stating what is only a personal view it is true, but a view which was formed to a certain extent from a journey I made throughout these provinces, and I believe that Mr. Haultain to-day has the confidence of more than one-half of the electorate of the province of Saskatchewan. That belief may be held to be falsely based, it is only of course a personal opinion but it is my strong personal conviction that he has that confidence and that therefore another government than the one that is now in power should be in office and if that is the case I contend that the province of Saskatchewan has no great reason to rejoice at what the speech from the Throne says, that they are the most contented people on the face of the earth. I have made these few remarks because I believe these are serious matters and matters that call for more earnest consideration than has been given them by some of the hon. gentlemen of the government side, and I think that the country has reason to expect that more would be done by this parliament than the speech from the throne outlines.

Mr. R. N. WALSH (Huntingdon). I do not desire to detain the House by referring to other matters than the indemnity question which has been introduced. I wish at this, my first opportunity, to place myself on record. As I never at any time supported the measure I have no apologies to offer as some of the gentlemen who have spoken here to-day have done. As to the reasons advanced pro and con I have but one which is sufficient for me. That is, that my constituents are very much opposed to it, even our county Liberal association passed a strong resolution in opposition to it. I feel I am here to carry out their wishes and any measure which looks towards cancelling the increased indemnity, except the increase to the premier and to the judges will receive my support.

Mr. R. S. LAKE (Qu'Appelle). Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to occupy the time of the House to any very great extent this evening but I do think it is my duty as one of the members from the province of Saskatchewan to repudiate in the strongest possible manner the suggestion that has been made that the recent elections which have been held in that province have resulted in an endorsation of the Autonomy Acts which we passed last year. I believe, Sir, that the people of that country will be fully justified in considering that any action which may be taken by their legislature in regard to those Acts is not binding on them for all time to come. The election frauds which have been perpetrated in that country are to my mind some of the most shameful that have ever taken place either in this country or any other country in the world. When the Prime Minister was speaking this afternoon he treated it lightly and said that because some single fraud had come to light in one single constituency that it could not be taken as granted that the people of that country had not had an opportunity of exercising their full franchise. But the Prime Minister has not been fully informed as to what has been going on in the Northwest. He does not know that in more than one other constituency exactly the same species of fraud has been going on as was going on in the district of Prince Albert. In the district of Battleford it has been distinctly charged in the public press, and I believe there is very good foundation for the charge, that another employee of the Department of the Interior perpetrated exactly the same fraud, that is to say, he went up into the distant country away to the north and there himself wrote out false lists and marked ballots for the Liberal, for the coercionist candidate. Then again we have heard of a very strong and well supported case of fraud in regard to the election in Regina city. If he studied the papers he would also find that in the city of Moosejaw so great was the anticipation that the ballot boxes would be interfered with there that the provincial righters had to keep an armed guard night and day over those boxes and there is no doubt that throughout the length and breadth of the province of Saskatchewan there was the greatest amount of fraud in regard to this election. In addition to all this there were all the forces of misrepresentation and of intimidation and undue influence by federal officials. At the vote which was cast on December 13 last there an increase of some 35 per cent over the votes which were cast just one year previously and I think it is not too much to say that one-quarter of the votes which were cast at this election were cast by men who were dependent upon the government of the day in regard to obtaining patents for the lands for which they had entered and that they were dependent also upon the good-will of the government officials to whom it would be perfectly easy, and it is perfectly easy, to either facilitate the granting of their patents or else to throw every obstacle in the way, and I know perfectly well that this has been done. One gentleman told me he had a message sent to him, through his son, from the Dominion lands agent in his district. The message was to this effect: Tell your father if he wants his patent he had better take a little less active part in the election. That was the message and I think it must be clear to any one here present that the officials of that department have an enormous amount of influence in regard to these matters and that they exercised it in the most unlawful way. The Minister of the Interior himself must know this and I think that in view of the resolution which was passed unanimously by this House last summer, that it is only fair to ask him whether, if it is proved to him that one of his officials up there has taken an active part in this election he is prepared to dismiss that official. I think that is a fair question to ask him. I know that in one instance the Minister of the Interior himself took the platform in support of a coercionist candidate and the chairman of his meeting the most active Liberal in that district was his own sub-agent for Dominion lands. It appears to me that it would be impossible to show a greater contempt for the authority of this House than was shown in many instances in the Northwest during the last election. There has been also a most significant diminution in the Liberal majority throughout that country. In the year 1904, there was a Liberal majority cast of 4,300 votes, whereas in 1905 that majority had come down to 1,432. At any rate that is what is claimed but I think we have ample evidence already that a considerable number of those votes were bogus votes simply marked by the election officials themselves and not by the people of the country. And how was this majority composed, Mr. Speaker? I took the trouble to analyse the vote in the district in which my own property is situated, a district with which I am pretty well acquainted.

I find that of the English speaking vote in that district, two and a half to one was the proportion in favour of the provincial rights candidate, or 642 votes to 265; whereas of the foreign speaking vote the majority against the provincial rights candidate and in favour of the coercionist candidate was upwards of eight to one, or 380 to 45. I am not surprised that under these circumstances the member for West Assiniboia (Mr Knowles) should speak of the Doukhobors and the Galicians as being such very good friends of his. The figures I have given in regard to my own district are not isolated; you will find that similar figures exist in other parts of the country. It is a thing which ought to be expected, because we know that these immigrants who come from continental Europe have been accustomed all their lives to be under the influence of officialdom, and so they came especially under the influence of the officials of this government, and that influence, as far as my experience goes, is always partisan. Then, these same European immigrants, intelligent men as most of them are, educated men as some of them are, still they do not have the opportunity of studying the questions of the day in the same manner as English speaking immigrants. And for the present at any rate they have not the same opportunity of casting an intelligent vote on public questions. When the matter is put before them they are more likely to say: I will vote for my own interest and be quite sure that I can get my land from this government. We have heard it claimed by the government to-day, that the legislation of last year was endorsed by the people. Well, the federal government were extremely anxious that the people should endorse that legislation, and they had a deep interest in its endorsation by the people of the west. They have profited by the elections in Saskatchewan and Alberta, and that being so, I claim they must accept their full share of the responsibility from the very beginning for the methods by which that success was secured. The very first step in the direction of obtaining that success is to be found in the gerrymander which was perpetrated here last session. When you look back at what has since taken place, it will be seen that it was necessary for this government to endeavour to throw as many constituencies as they possibly could into the northern and more remote portions of the province of Saskatchewan. As I demonstrated last session, the people in the northern portion or the old district of Saskatchewan are in reality entitled to about six seats, whereas the government gave them nine seats out of the twenty-five. The figures upon which I based my argument were supplied by the government and they proved my contention conclusively and it was a significant fact that neither the Minister of Justice who had charge of the Bill, nor the Prime Minister, nor the Minister of the Interior, undertook to defend the distribution of the constituencies in that province. They left the entire defence of that unjust measure to Mr. Scott, member for West Assiniboia, and to Mr. Lamont, who were to be the principal beneficiaries of it after the government. These two gentlemen certainly defended the measure with a great deal of vigour, but I do not think they impressed any one in this House with the justness of the claims they put forward. The election figures since obtained have completely demonstrated the correctness of our contention and the futility of the arguments of Mr. Scott and Mr. Lamont. It will be remembered that we asked for a commission of judges that they might give us a fair distribution of seats, and that appeal, reasonable and just as it was, was refused by the government. Failing in that appeal I undertook at a small committee meeting of representatives of both sides of the House to propose a distribution of my own, and it is a great satisfaction to me now, after the elections have taken place, to find that the distribution I suggested was soundly conceived. Indeed, in my anxiety to be scrupulously fair to my opponents, I did give more representation to the north than it was really justly entitled to. I contend that if the distribution I had suggested had been followed by the government it would have fallen in to a certain extent with what is, after all, the basic principle upon which our constitutional government is founded, that of representation by population; a principle that was outrageously ignored in the distribution that was made by the government. Just let me point out to the House some of the figures in regard to these constituencies. They are practically the same in proportion as those I gave to the House last year; they are slightly increased but they have the same proportionate increase all through. In the district of Souris in the south, one of the oldest districts in that country which gave a majority of 321 for the provincial rights candidate, there were 3,259 votes cast and the constituency returned one member. Now turn to the north, and that is where the government officials were able to get in their work, away in the back settlements in the remote north where our people were unable to follow them. We find that Redberry had 515 votes cast, Prince Albert District, 582 votes, Prince Albert city, 618 votes, Batoche, 799 votes. To this I think you might add the district of Humboldt, which, though it went by acclamation, would in all probability have cast the same proportionately larger number of votes that were cast in the other districts which would give it a vote of 261. Each one of these districts got one member, or five members in the north for a total of 2,775 votes, while in the south only one member was given for 3,259 votes, and much the same thing could be said about South Qu'Appelle as I have said about Souris. I suppose this is what the government will call representation by population. There is one thing in regard to the district of Prince Albert which I think ought to be mentioned here, and that is, that there was apparently a regular set plan to capture that district in the way in which it was captured.

Under the territorial election law, there being no voters' lists in the Northwest drawn up it was possible to have additional polling places formed by the returning officer on the application of any individual, on the sworn statement that there were a certain number of voters who were not within a certain radius of a polling place. The polling places in the Prince Albert district were fixed by proclamation, and up to the hour of nomination none except those who were in the secret knew that there were going to be any other polling places. The nomination passed off quietly and then the returning officer, who, if he did allot any other polling places, was bound under the law to give notice to both candidates that he had done so by six o'clock of that day, immediately took a rig and drove out to a country post office thirty-five miles distant, and waited until the mail had gone—it was a two-weekly mail—and then registered a letter before six o'clock notifying the provincial rights candidate that he had placed three other polls away out in the country to the north at points which were unknown to the provincial rights candidate. This notice only reached the provincial rights candidate on the 7th day of December, when it was a physical impossibility in that country for him to get his men out in order to look after those polls. In the meantime he had met the returning officer in the streets of Prince Albert, and they had passed the time of day, and nothing had been said to him in regard to those additional polls; and, when after he had received the registered letter he went to the returning officer and made a complaint, the returning officer said he had complied with the strict letter of the law. That is the story, as I heard it from Mr. Donaldson, the provincial rights candidate himself. Such things as these are very likely to make men rise up and say, we are determined that we will enforce the right to govern ourselves and will not have our rights and our liberties stolen from us by such methods as these. I consider that by their distribution of the constituencies alone the Government are responsible to a certain extent for the crimes that have taken place in that far northern country. But this was not all. The government did not feel entirely safe in simply putting the votes in those districts where they could control them. The electoral machinery must be in the hands of men who would employ the criminals to perpetrate frauds such as those which were practised, and which could be practised only with the connivance of the election officials. And so Mr. Haultain was deposed. It has been stated that Mr. Haultain, after the resignation of certain members of the legislative assembly to run in the Dominion elections, had no longer a majority of members of the territorial assembly; but, taking the province of Saskatchewan, that is entirely untrue. Mr. Haultain had a majority of the members of the province of Saskatchewan still at his back at the time he was deposed from being the prime minister of that province.

I was very glad that the Prime Minister came out to-day with a straight statement that he was not in any way concerned with the action of Mr. Forget in calling upon Mr. Scott, because I can assure him that there was a very general opinion throughout the whole Northwest that the deposition of Mr. Haultain and the calling of Mr. Scott were due to the influence of the Prime Minister himself. In fact, it was only the other day that a letter written by Mr. Scott himself to one of his supporters at Drinkwater was published with Mr. Scott's own consent in order to prove some point in connection with the elections; and in that letter, which was dated the 21st of July last from the House of Commons here, Mr. Scott said this:

> I may say that Laurier all along has seemed to be of the opinion that Haultain ought to be called as premier of one of the provinces. Had Haultain acted with any approach at propriety under the circumstances I believe that Laurier would have absolutely refused to pass him over. His whole conduct, however, from first to last in this business has been execrable. His going into Oxford and London, combined with the threat he made at Woodstock on election night to stir up a school question in one of the new provinces if he obtained control, compelled Laurier to change his mind.

I am therefore very glad that the Prime Minister has spoken out, and I think he may well ask to be saved from his friends when they write and make such an accusation against him. Then, with regard to the Lieutenant-Governor of Saskatchewan and his reasons for selecting a partisan to carry on the government, here is what Mr. Scott himself said in his address to the electors of Lumsden:

> A word respecting the fact that Mr. Haultain is not the first premier of Saskatchewan seems called for. The selection of another by the representative of the Crown was due to the attitude which Mr. Haultain adopted towards our new provincial constitution. . . . The selection of myself was doubtless due to the Liberal party in the province having induced me some time previously to accept the leadership of the party. That the Crown acted upon Liberal advice is a charge I shall not try to refute. . . . The truth is that Mr. Haultain's conduct made him a simple impossibility for selection.

That is Mr. Scott's idea of what the truth is, and no doubt he is sincere in stating it. I myself think the truth was that it was absolutely necessary for the future of this government that those Bills should be endorsed by the provinces of the Northwest, and they were prepared to take the readiest means at hand to secure that endorsation.

The Prime Minister this afternoon made a charge against Mr. Haultain in regard to the autonomy legislation. He stated that Mr. Haultain in London and North Oxford would do all in his power—not that he said he would, but that was the gist of his speeches—to destroy the constitution; and further, that he had avowed his intention of putting a ruthless hand upon the constitution. Now, I think that any one who studies the action of Mr. Haultain must know perfectly well that that is a most unfair interpretation to put upon his speeches and his action. It was not that he wished to lay a ruthless hand upon the constitution but that he desired to appeal to the Privy Council in England in order to prevent the First Minister from laying a ruthless hand and violating, as he had done, the constitution of British North America. Mr. Haultain took no partisan course. He acted as a non-partisan and ran his election campaign as a non-partisan pure and simple. It is well known that he took no stand upon the school question and would practically not allow it to be brought into the campaign until the religious and racial question had been ruthlessly thrust into that province by the memo, of the Archbishop of St. Boniface. It had been known for a considerable time previous that pressure was being brought upon the members of the Roman Catholic church to vote for the friends of separate schools, as the archbishop's memo, put it; but it was only very shortly before the close of the campaign that that memo, came into the hands of the provincial rights party and Mr. Haultain was forced to take the stand which he could have taken earlier and which, if he had not been a man of honour, he would have taken earlier in the campaign and have, I believe, secured victory by that means. But it was not the right thing to do, and he only took the stand he did in favour of national schools when he found the influence of a certain church was brought to bear in favour of separate schools. In my opinion the government must take its full share of responsibility for the electoral frauds committed in that country. There was the visit of the Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) to that country which could not have failed to encourage his officials. I do not believe for a moment that the Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) or other members of the government knew anything of the details of the conspiracy which was being hatched up there to carry these elections, but their actions made such a conspiracy possible and I hold that they are responsible for the results. Three of the officials in the Prince Albert district pleaded guilty to not opening polls in that district and were fined $200 each. But it is common report that if they did not open polls, at any rate they produced ballot boxes full of ballots. Is not that also a crime—the stuffing of ballot boxes? Yet we do not find the government taking any action to bring these men to justice. If they wish to clear themselves in the eyes of the people, they should send these men to penal servitude for a long period of time; but whatever they do, they can never get over the fact that the Saskatchewan election was gained by unfair methods and that the people of the province cannot be held bound by the results of that election.

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). I do not wish to delay the House, but in view of the very definite charges made by the hon. gentleman who has just spoken, it would hardly be seemly for me, as the minister responsible for the Interior Department, to allow these charges to pass unchallenged; and while dealing with them, I may refer incidentally to some of the other matters which have been brought into this discussion without, it seems to me, the slightest necessity or excuse. I am certainly at a loss to know in what degree the question of imperial preference is concerned in the reply to the speech from the Throne and am equally unable to understand why the results in the Saskatchewan provincial election should require to be dealt with on the same occasion.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. They were introduced by the mover of the address.

Mr. OLIVER. But as my hon. friend from Qu'Appelle (Mr. Lake) has seen fit to say that the officials of the Interior Department made use of their position to intimidate electors in the recent provincial elections in Alberta and Saskatchewan, I have this to say in reply. I must admit that I was guilty of the crime of being present in Alberta and Saskatchewan during those elections and I did hear the allegations made there which the hon. gentleman has repeated here. My reply to that allegation, wherever I heard it, was this, that if it could be shown to me that any official of the department over which I have control had used his position to intimidate any elector or hold out improper inducements to any elector, I would see that he was instantly dismissed. I asked for proof on platform after platform and the first atom of proof has never yet been offered or suggested. My hon. friend has said that some land agent of the government sent word to some voter that if he wanted to secure his patent he had better cease his activity. If my hon. friend will make good that allegation, I will guarantee him that the agent in question will forthwith cease to serve his country. And if the hon. gentleman does not make his charge good, I shall certainly expect him to apologize to this House for having made it. With regard to the so-called activity of the officials of the Interior Department, these hon. gentlemen have been good enough to suggest that the victory of the Scott government in the province of Saskatchewan was due in a very large measure to that activity. Well, there were two provincial elections in the west last fall—one in Alberta and one in Saskatchewan. Do these hon. gentlemen suggest that the victory of the Rutherford government in Alberta was due to the activity of the Interior Department officials in that province? If they do, they must give these officials credit for a very large amount of influence over the public mind. But if they are not to be credited with the victory in Alberta, I submit that neither are they entitled to be credited with the victory in Saskatchewan. The two provinces lie alongside each other and in each the conditions are similar. The officials of the Interior Department have just as much influence in the one as in the other, and it is not reasonable to suggest that the elections were won in one province by these officials and not in the other.

The gentlemen opposite have rather peculiar ideas of election, it seems to me. Their idea of a proper election is one in which the other party shall be eliminated and they shall have the privilege of casting all the votes. It would appear from what they say that it is an offence for a citizen of the Northwest to exercise the franchise, to express an opinion, or even to hold an opinion; and it is still more a crime on the part of an elector of the Northwest in the person of my humble self to go there and take part in an election. I do not agree with these gentlemen. And I wish to say further that I think it is a very serious question just how far a government has a right, by virtue of its authority, to trespass upon the rights of the citizen in the exercise of his franchise. I had occasion to express my views on that point, and I did express them, in the Northwest. The leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) did me the honour to partially quote my expressions. I will take the liberty of stating to the House what I said. I said that officials of the government were citizens, therefore they had the right to vote. I said that, having intelligence—supposedly having intelligence—they had the right to choose on which side they should vote. And I said that, having the power of speech they had the right to express their opinions. But the question of improper interference is not to be settled in a general way; each case must rest upon its own basis. To say that a man may be driven from the public service because he has a vote, because he has an opinion and expresses that opinion—it seems to me that is a most unwarrantable and most unjustifiable trespass upon the rights of citizenship. Especially is that the case when the political question at issue is not one in which the government having control of these officials is directly concerned. There may be a reason—there might be a reason—for the government exercising an arbitrary and otherwise unjustifiable authority over its officials in the case of an election in which it was concerned. But to say that they must practically disfranchise or de-citizenise their employees in regard to all questions coming before the public, provincial, municipal or otherwise, is, it seems to me, unreasonable, improper and absurd; and, if hon. gentlemen opposite wish to take that position, I can only say that they are welcome to it and that I take issue with them upon it.

As to the Prince Albert election case which has been mentioned, I have seen many arguments in the newspapers holding the right hon. Prime Minister of this Dominion (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) directly responsible for this outrage. The argument is this: the Prime Minister was responsible for the organization of the province—the organization of the province involved the appointment of a provincial premier—elections had to be held and returning officers appointed by the provincial government of which the provincial premier was the head;—and therefore in the last analyses the Prime Minister of Canada was responsible for the stuffing of the ballot boxes in Prince Albert. It has been alleged that those concerned in this 'outrage' were employees of the Department of the Interior. So far as I was able to learn on inquiry, I find that one of these men had been in the employ of the department as a fire ranger; that is, he was subject to be called upon to work for the department during the season in looking after forest fires. He was not in the employ of the department at the time the alleged outrage took place. Another man, Sutherland, had recently been appointed Indian farm instructor, and was technically in the employ of the department. The third person concerned was not an employee of this government, and so far as I know, never had been. The leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) has suggested that it was highly improper and an evidence of partisanship that gentlemen who held a position under the government should accept the position of poll clerk or returning officer if an election took place. I take issue on that point. I do not see that the acceptance by an individual of an appointment to act as returning officer or poll clerk is evidence of partisanship. Every man knows that the returning officer, the deputy returning officer and the poll clerk are supposed, at any rate—and so far as oath of office can bind any man they are bound—to act impartially. Now, it must be known that in the outlying districts it is not always easy to secure the services of men who are competent to hold a poll. Therefore, there is nothing unreasonable or improper in the department, under the circumstances, permitting one of its officials to act as such officer. However, these men acted as they did. They were supposed to have held this poll; they did not hold it; they were discovered in their wrong doing and were brought before a court and punished as the law provides. They were brought before a magistrate's court and brought there at the instance of the aggrieved candidate. The court was of his own choosing and the punishment was awarded by that court. It was not the maximum punishment permitted by the law. I fail to see wherein the Department of the Interior or the Indian Department is in any way responsible for the action or inaction of that court. My hon. friend looked at me across the floor, and asked in horror-stricken tones, if these men were still at large. I presume they are. I hope my hon. friend does not suggest that, in addition to the somewhat numerous duties already laid upon my poor shoulders, I should act the part of constable at the far distant point of Prince Albert and restrain the liberty of those who may have trespassed upon what he may consider the rights of others.

If these men are at large I presume they have a right to be at large, and if they have not a right to be at large, then the processes of law are open to my hon. friend and to his friends to take measures to restrain their liberty. As regards the gentleman who was in the employ of the Interior Department, certainly I considered that having done as he did he was not a suitable person to remain in that employ, and he was dismissed. That, I considered, was the limit of the responsibility of my department in the matter. However, I would like to point out one peculiar thing in this connection. As I said, there were three men who went north with these ballot boxes, and three men who came back, but only two were fined. The third man was the one responsible, so far as I can learn, for proposing to hold the polls in that region; he was the man supposed to know the locality, who stated there were so many people there entitled to vote, and he was the guide of this party who were to go up and take those votes. This gentleman was not an official of the Interior Department. It would almost strike one as somewhat peculiar that, when there were three men equally guilty, two of them should be fined, and the third should be still at large and still unprosecuted? Does that look like fair-play on the part of the aggrieved candidate and his friends? Does not that look something like a persecution of the supposed officials of the government, while the gentleman who was not an official may trespass upon the law as he pleases, and there is nobody to call him to account?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Does the hon. gentleman say that a warrant was not issued for him?

Mr. OLIVER. I am quite certain there was no warrant.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I have seen it stated in the papers that he was not arrested because he could not be found.

Mr. OLIVER. Then I am sorry to say that the press which my hon. friend has studied is not altogether reliable. The gentleman in question is an old resident of that part of the country, there is no difficulty in finding him. His name is Moberly, and he is to be seen from time to time on the streets of Prince Albert. He says there is no danger of his being arrested because he has been concerned in similar business for the opposition party on previous occasions, and they dare not arrest him. There is no better known man in that country than Mr. Moberly, he has left his name all over the country.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What were the previous occasions in which he was concerned?

Mr. OLIVER. I am not a resident of that part of the country, and cannot tell the hon. gentleman what were the previous occasions. I am merely stating what I am told Mr. Moberly said, and which I verily believe to be true.

Mr. BRODER. Since the machinery of justice was in Liberal hands, why did it not take charge of a man like that?

Mr. OLIVER. The machinery of justice in that part of the country will have to answer for itself. I am answering for myself and for the department which I administer, and which has been accused here of certain crimes and misdemeanours. I am not answering for the provincial administration of justice. I know nothing about the law in the matter, I do not know how far these people are subject to the law. But I assume that the machinery of justice in the province of Saskatchewan is subject to be put in motion by any person who may feel himself aggrieved, and that if these gentlemen feel themselves aggrieved it is for them to put that machinery in motion and secure justice.

Mr. BARKER. What about the government?

Mr. OLIVER. I do not know that the responsibility rests upon the government of that province any more than it does upon the aggrieved individual. However, that is a matter for lawyers to settle. I am not a lawyer, and therefore cannot give the hon. gentleman an authoritative opinion on that point. I repeat, however, that if there are people in that district of Prince Albert who feel themselves aggrieved, it is their privilege as it is their right and duty to set that machinery in motion.

Mr. BRODER. Is not the action of this man a crime against the state rather than against an individual?

Mr. OLIVER. As I said, I am not a lawyer and cannot answer these intricate questions.

Mr. BRODER. Common sense would answer that question.

Mr. OLIVER. Some of us are short on that commodity.

Mr. BRODER. So it appears.

Mr. OLIVER. There is another point that our friends opposite have dealt with very exhaustively, and that is the action of the Lieutenant Governor of Saskatchewan in failing to call upon Mr. Haultain to form the government of that province. It seems that is an outrage, an imposition, for which the right hon. leader of this House is responsible. I am not very familiar with affairs in Saskatchewan, but I would like to remind the House that if Mr. Haultain had claims on the premiership of either of the two provinces, it was upon the premiership of Alberta and not upon that of Saskatchewan. Mr. Haultain had been a resident of Alberta ever since he went to the west, he had represented an Alberta constituency during all that period of his public life, and it seems to me that if Mr. Haultain had a claim to the premiership of any province it was to that of Alberta, and if he was turned down he was turned down by Lieutenant Governor Bulyea and not by Lieutenant Governor Forget. But whether he was turned down by the one or the other makes no difference, since he was most effectively turned down by the electors of the province of Saskatchewan to which court he made his appeal.

Now, something has been said about stealing elections. I desire to say that Mr. Haultain and his friends, by the issues which they undertook to raise in the province of Saskatchewan, took a more discreditable means to steal the election than the men who stuffed that ballot box north of Prince Albert. I wish to call attention to the attitude taken by my hon. friend who has just sat down, as illustrating the position generally taken by our friends on the other side, and indicating one reason why the elections turned out as they did. My hon. friend has credited the foreign vote with electing the Scott government. Now, Sir, will you tell me in the name of common sense how would the foreign population be expected to vote except against the people who were continually vilifying them, continually declaring that they were not entitled to their rights as citizens of the country? The hon. gentleman suggests that a racial and religious question was projected into that campaign by a memorandum issued by the Archbishop of St. Boniface, the tendency of which was to secure a solid Roman Catholic vote. Those of us who had the fortune, good or bad, to listen to the speeches that were made during the election in Saskatchewan will agree that a Roman Catholic would be less than a man or more than an angel to vote in support of the men and the party who were abusing him and his church as they were being abused there.

Mr. LAKE. I would like to say that such an attack was never made in my hearing and I was on a great many platforms.

Mr. OLIVER. Well, a great deal went on that my hon. friend did not hear or did not see. I wish to point out the necessary consequence of the wild and unjustifiable statements that have been made and of the attitude that has been assumed by our friends on the other side during this discussion for the simple and sole and only purpose of making party political capital when the circumstances do not justify its being made. My friend from Qu'Appelle, (Mr. Lake), has stated deliberately, has put upon 'Hansard,' upon the permanent records of this country, a declaration that the settlers of this country are subjected to terrorism on the part of the officials of this government. That charge is absolutely unfounded, and I say further that that charge would not have been made if the gentleman who made it had properly considered its necessary effect, and provided he was inspired by patriotic motives. The attempt to divide the people of that western country as between Protestant and Catholic, as between non-English speaking and English speaking, is an attempt that can do no other than harm to that country and to this, and can do no other than reflect discredit upon those who make that attempt.

Mr. URIAH WILSON (Lennox and Addington). Mr. Speaker, I wish merely to refer to what is known as the salary grab. It is well known in this House by everybody who talked to me on the subject that I opposed that. It is well known that for years I opposed the increase of the judges' salaries, and I was opposed to the increase in indemnity. When it was raised $500 from $1,000 to $1,500, we had the promise of the Prime Minister that it would be a great many years before any other increase would take place, and I am a good deal more opposed to the superannuation or the pension to ex-ministers. I had occasion to go home on Saturday, and this vote took place on Monday. I took the pains to go into the distribution office and get a copy of the Votes, and Proceedings and the Orders of the Day, and no mention of any kind was made of this at that time. Now, I am told that this notice was handed in on Sunday night, and appeared on the Order Paper on Monday morning. If that is the case I think some minister is responsible for it and ought to make an explanation to the House as Rule 31 requires two days' notice before it could have been brought up in the House, because I expected to be here when these resolutions were brought up and I expected to say something upon it, because I knew very well then as I do now, that my constituents, irrespective of their party politics, are strongly opposed to the three things, the increased salary to judges, the pension to the ex-ministers and the increase in the indemnity to members of the House of Commons and the Senate. I have heard very little or no complaint about the increase to the Prime Minister or the salary granted to the leader of the opposition. I think people generally look upon these things as being all right, but I wish to place myself on record as being strongly opposed to the other part of these resolutions and I hope before many days we will have an opportunity of dividing the House upon these three questions, or on two of them at any rate, because I think that if the government had wanted to deal fairly with this question they would have put it on the Order paper and let it stay there for two or three weeks, so as to let it be discussed through the newspapers. Or we should have told the people when we went before them for election that we were in favour of an increase in the indemnity of members of the Commons and Senators, pensions to ex-ministers, and increased salaries to judges. I am quite satisfied that if any gentleman appeals to my constituency on these terms he will be left at home, and I think justly. We are a rural district, we earn our money hard, the bulk of the people earn their money hard and they feel that this is being just a little too extravagant and that is my opinion and that is what I intend to stand for. I hope that this matter will be further discussed at an early date. It is very late to-night and I do not propose to say anything but just to put myself on record as against this.

Mr. JOHN BARR (Dufferin). I think it is rather to be regretted that it is the intention to close this debate at this late hour for it is quite evident that there are two questions foremost before this House which hon. members desire to discuss and so far as we know, having been told to-day that there is very little before the House, we certainly must remain here for a length of time even to earn the indemnity if the increase was taken off. Under these circumstances it seems to me we are beginning wrong by carrying on this debate to such a late hour to-night. It is evident that there are a large number of members, particularly from the great Northwest, who desire to wash their dirty linen and to discuss the question of which no doubt they are full and which it is probably their duty to discuss. Then there are other bills which we will have an opportunity to discuss. No doubt many of these members came here desiring to place before the House their views in connection with the tariff question, and they will be shut off. Then again there is the insurance question which was to have come up. It is very well on occasions like this to bring up the views of hon. gentlemen on subjects of this kind in order that they may be fully considered and that the Government might have the advantage of the views of the members of the House on these questions.

Another burning question not only in this House but in this country, on which no doubt a number of members desire to express themselves, is the question of the increased indemnity to members and the pension to ex-ministers or what might be called, what has been called throughout the country, the salary grab. It was not my intention to discuss that here to-night, but the fact that the county of Dufferin, which I have the honour to represent in different meetings in their conventions both Reform and Conservative, condemned the Bill, places me in the position that I would feel bound either to resign or to emphasize the position which that is in at the present time.

That is the position I occupy, and I stated at a convention that was held a short time before I left home that I would oppose the increased indemnity. I also said that when the opportunity presented itself I would avail myself of it to have the legislation of last session revised, but as the hon. member for York (Mr. Maclean) has declared he will do so I may possibly leave it to his hands. I believe that we as servants of the people have the right to change our vote if necessary in order to meet the views of our constituents, or otherwise that we should cease to represent them. I believe that everything that is done should be done in the light of day, and I believe that the round-robin (which I did not sign) was the commencement of the agitation for an increase and it was all wrong. We have been told that committees were formed to find out the feeling in the different provinces, but about this I know nothing. I never signed to support any increase and I would not have done so were I asked. But I am free to admit that I was present in the House when the subject was discussed; it was only discussed on one or two days, it was hurried through the House in such a way that members could not have ascertained whether or not they were acting according to the wishes of their constituents. The increase of the indemnity by $1.000 was in my opinion unnecessary. We were elected knowing that the indemnity was $1,500. I believe that remuneration is intended, not as a salary but as an indemnity, merely enough to pay our expenses while we are here, and I do think that with a little economy there is no member of this House who cannot get through a session of four or five months or even six months, with $1,500. Under these circumstances I believe that the increase granted in the dying hours of the session when members of the House were anxious to return to their homes and did not look into it as they otherwise would do, was not what should have been done. At every election held in the province of Ontario since, the candidates have vied one with the other in declaring that it was a monstrous thing to do, and that if they were returned to this House they would repeal that legislation. We have not heard an expression of opinion from them so far, but no doubt they are prepared to carry out their pledges to the electors. And if the increased indemnity to the members was bad, the pensions to the ex-ministers was very much worse. I venture to say that the great majority of the members of this House did not understand the pension system to ex-ministers in the motherland. We are likely to some extent to copy from the legislation of the mother country, and it was said by several hon. gentlemen that the pension system as it was introduced here was similar to that in England. We had not time to examine into that, but we find now that the system is altogether different from that proposed here. In England, only ex-ministers who state they are unable to support themselves receive pensions, but here, young men, men who have grown wealthy at the public crib are to receive a pension, and it is extraordinary how some of the ex-ministers have grown wealthy in a very few years, have become millionaires if not multi-millionaires. And yet these men are to receive a pension, apparently as a reward for the way in which they have gained that wealth, and which in my opinion cannot have been too honestly acquired. Under these circumstances, I believe that the law is wrong, and that if it be necessary at all we should have it on the same basis as the English law in that respect. Five years is much too short for a minister to step out and receive a pension. As the years roll on these pensions may multiply until the aggregate sum becomes a burden on this country greater than the country is prepared to bear. We have had growing times it is true, but we cannot afford to pile up for future generations expenses of that kind. Under the laws that exist now, whether a minister of the Crown has been a success in his office or not, he may say: Just leave me in five years and I will give way to some one else. Thus the pensions may pile up until we have an army of ex-ministers throughout the length and breadth of this Dominion, entailing an expense greater than this country is prepared to bear. Under these circumstances, I do not believe we can condemn the legislation too strongly ; we cannot condemn it as strongly as the people of Canada have done. When the legislation was passed last session there were very few members in the Chamber; no doubt many of them expected that the House would close on Saturday and that all the business was finisehd, but yet this measure was shoved through under conditions which should not have existed. We should wipe this bill out of existence, and then if it be found necessary to make any change in the law it should be done after due consideration and after the people of the country have been consulted. It is our experience in this House that it generally takes weeks and months to get important legislation through, and that is as it should be. The newspapers have an opportunity to discuss it, our constituents have a right to protest if they see fit, but in this case no opportunity was given our constituents to express their opinions and the Bill was rushed through the House. My constituents believe that this legislation should be repealed and I am bound to be guided by them.

Mr. A. B. INGRAM (East Elgin). I have just a few words to say in respect to the question that has been discussed by my hon. friend (Mr. Barr). Let me say to start with, that I believe the debate on the address should not be prolonged for the reason that questions embodied in the address will be discussed from time to time during the session. It is therefore in my opinion not necessary to take up the time of the House in debating matters which must afterwards be discussed fully. When I hear old parliamentarians, men who have occupied seats in this House and in the local legislature finding fault with legislation because it was introduced during the dying days of the session, I have nothing but the most utter contempt for men who attempt to place such an excuse before this House. Every honourable gentleman who occupied a seat in this House last session was fully aware that this legislation was to be introduced, and there is no excuse for any honourable gentleman who has had any parliamentary experience rising at this late date and trying to excuse himself for the course he then took. Here is one abuse that has grown up in this House. I take the Auditor General's report, and what do I find year after year, particularly in the last session? I have been present on many occasions when the right hon. leader of the government and the hon. leader of the opposition had to remain silent in their places by reason of there being no quorum to transact the business of the House, and when I look over the Auditor General's report and find the number of days that certain members are marked as having been absent and then at the amounts these same gentlemen have drawn, I am prepared to say and to prove my statement that the declaration which these gentlemen made before they received their full indemnity was a false declaration. We who regularly attend to our duties in this House have to suffer by reason of these gentlemen drawing more than they are entitled to, while those who serve receive less than they are entitled to. So it is all very well for these gentlemen to talk as they have been talking. They have accepted the money and have disposed of it in one way or another, and they have not the courage to stand up and defend their action. My majority is not very large, it is true ; it is only 21 ; but I am always prepared, either before my constituents or in this House to have the courage of my convictions, and to say what I have to say, and I am glad to know that they have always given me credit for honesty in that regard, and I have yet to suffer my first defeat for pursuing that course. But I have noticed in my parliamentary experience that the men who are eternally wobbling, who have no opinion on any question, who are like the weather-cock on the barn which turns with every wind, are the first to vacate their seats in this House. Let us be manly enough to take the responsibility of our own actions instead of trying to cloak ourselves behind somebody else. I insist that an amendment to the Indemnity Act, shall be introduced this session along the line that every hon. member of this House shall record his name when he is present in order that we may have some record of the hon. gentlemen who are absent from their duties. If we do that, I am sure that instead of occupying six or seven months, we shall be able to transact the business of this House in much less time. Hon. gentlemen sometimes come into the House after having been absent for some time, and rise in their place and discuss something that has already been discussed over and over again, whereas if they had attended to their duties regularly, they would have taken part in the discussion at the proper time. If this question is brought up again, I intend to show certain things in connection with the indemnity, in connection with our judges, and in connection with other matters. I intend to have the manliness of pursuing the course I intend to pursue honestly and openly, and not cloak myself behind the misdoings of anybody else.

Motion (Mr. Knowles) agreed to.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER moved:

That the said Address be engrossed and be presented to His Excellency the Governor General by such members of this House as are of the hon. the Privy Council.

Motion agreed to.

REPORTS PRESENTED.

Report of the Auditor-General for the year ending 30th June, 1905, (Volume 1)—Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Trade and Navigation tables for the year ending 30th June, 1905.—Hon. Mr. Paterson.

Report of the Department of Trade and Commerce for the year ending 30th June, 1905.—Hon. Mr. Paterson.

Report of the Department of Railways and Canals, for the year ending 30th June, 1905.—Hon. Mr. Emmerson.

Report of the Commissioners of the National Transcontinental Railway for the year ending the 30th June, 1905.—Hon. Mr. Emmerson.

SUPPLY.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER moved :

That this House will, on Tuesday, this day, resolve itself into a Committee to consider of a supply to be granted to His Majesty.

Motion agreed to.

WAYS AND MEANS.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER moved :

That this House will, on Tuesday, this day, resolve itself in a Committee to consider of the ways and means for raising a supply to be granted to His Majesty.

Motion agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE GOVERNOR GENERAL—ESTIMATES.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER delivered messages from His Excellency the Governor General transmitting estimates of sums required for the service of the Dominion for the nine months ending March 31, 1907, and supplementary estimates for the year ending the 30th June, 1906, which were referred to the Committee of Supply.

INTERNAL ECONOMY COMMISSION.

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) delivered a message from His Excellency the Governor General.

Mr. SPEAKER read the message as follows :

GREY :

The Governor General transmits to the House of Commons an approved minute of Council appointing the Hon. William Stevens Fielding, Minister of Finance, and the Hon. Louis Philippe Brodeur, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, the Hon. Charles Smith Hyman, Minister of Public Works, and the Hon. Henry Emmerson, Minister of Railways and Canals, to act with the Speaker of the House of Commons as commissioners for the purposes and under the provisions of the 13th chapter of the Revised Statutes of Canada intituled an Act respecting the House of Commons.

Government House,
Ottawa, March 12, 1906.

DEBATES COMMITTEE.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER moved:

That a select committee be appointed to supervise the official reports of the debates of this House during the present session, with power to report from time to time; to be composed of Messrs. Bureau, Ethier, Gervais, Guthrie, Clarke, Johnston, Logan, Knowles, Macpherson, Bergeron, Hughes (Victoria and Haliburton), McCarthy (Calgary), Schaffner, Roche and Taylor.

Motion agreed to.

REPORT PRESENTED

Public Accounts of Canada for the year ending June 30, 1905.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

ADJOURNMENT—BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Will the right hon. gentleman have the report of the Transcontinental Railway Commissioners printed ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. It will be referred to the committee on printing as usual, and no doubt the printing will be ordered.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. It is desirable to have it printed at an early day. I would like to ask also the Minister of Agriculture whether or not the correspondence, orders of council and so forth, asked for last year in connection with the treaty with Japan will be laid upon the table at once. Last year the matter was referred to on four different occasions. The hon. gentleman will find it referred to in Vol, 4, pages 6654, 7816 and 7908; and in Vol. 5, pages 8385. What I asked last year was that we should have the copies of the orders in council referred to in these discussions, and also any correspondence which has taken place on the subject, together with a copy of the new treaty which I understood was to be laid on the table to-day but has not been brought down. If my hon. friend will have attention given to this request at an early date, I shall be much obliged.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. With regard to the treaty, we have received a cable stating it was signed the 31st January, but the treaty has not been received yet. To-morrow the Minister of Railways will make his annual statement concerning the Intercolonial Railway.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. Is it the intention of the right hon. gentleman to continue the sittings of the special committee regarding telephones appointed last session ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No, it is not the intention. The committee is exhausted.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 12.55 a.m., Tuesday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

TUESDAY, March 13, 1906.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

REMOVAL OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATORY.

On the Orders of the Day being called :

Mr. A. E. KEMP. Mr. Speaker, I would like to inquire from the government if the rumour, which is current, respecting the removal of the observatory from Toronto is correct?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The matter is under consideration.

SUPPLY—INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY.

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) moved that the House go into Committee of Supply.

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (Minister of Railways and Canals). Mr. Speaker, before you leave the chair, it is my——

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Mr. Speaker, before the hon. gentleman (Mr. Emmerson) goes on, I would like to say that, of course, there is no objection to his making a statement just now, although it is rather unusual to do so without more notice and I believe it is not usual to do so until an opportunity has been given to examine the report. My hon. friend from Lanark (Mr. Haggart) tells me that he endeavoured this morning to secure a copy of the report from the Minister of Railways and Canals and was unable to do so. It might perhaps facilitate business to some extent to have the hon. gentleman go on and make his statement now, but it is perfectly obvious not only to the Prime Minister, but to the Minister of Railways and Canals himself that under these circumstances it is impossible to have the usual discussion because that involves some consideration at least of the report of the minister.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Mr. Speaker, I have to admit that it is rather an unusual proceeding to rush into business immediately upon the meeting of parliament as we are doing at this moment. It will be for my hon. friends opposite to decide what course they should follow. Of course, if they are not ready for discussion we shall leave it until another sitting.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not think there is any objection from this side of the House to the hon. minister going on and making his statement at once. I merely desire to point out to my right hon. friend that under the circumstances it would, of course, be absolutely impossible to expect that criticism, which, no doubt, will be made a little later on upon the statement and upon the report.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I suppose it will come some other day.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not know whether my right hon. friend will object to its being postponed for a day or two but for fear that he may, I thought I would mention it. It may be impossible to make the criticism at once.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Hear, hear.

Mr. EMMERSON. Mr. Speaker, it is my intention and certainly my desire to as briefly as I may, and as concisely as I can, give an explanation with respect to the Intercolonial Railway, and incidentally in connection with other branches of the Department of Railways and Canals. It would be natural to expect that I would claim considerable time of the House in making that explanation, in view of the fact that the Intercolonial Railway and its conditions, have been subjected to a great deal of comment and discussion during the recess. It will be borne in mind that at the last session of this parliament it was my duty, and privilege as well, to explain as best I could with respect to the operations of the railway during the fiscal year 1904-5, and also, in part, to make some explanation with respect to the operations of the railway during the then current fiscal year; that is the fiscal year ending on June 30, 1905. I, in part, discussed the reasons which led to a deficit occurring during that year, and before I sit down it will be my effort to explain more fully with respect to that deficit, and with respect to the transactions for the whole year. I had only dealt with the transactions during a portion of the year. It will be seen by the report which I had the honour of laying on the table last evening that the total mileage of railways in Canada up to June 30 last, was 20,601 miles, an increase of 990 miles during the year. In addition to this there were 3,632 miles of sidings. As indicating another phase of transportation development, it may be pointed out that there were 793 miles of electric railway in operation on June 30, 1905. I presume, Sir, that it will be my privilege and certainly it would not be considered amiss by hon. members of this House, if I were to deal at some length with the report as a whole and if I were to invite the attention of hon. members to the information contained therein. However, the task of dealing with the Intercolonial Railway is one that may perhaps command my whole time, and I fear that I would run the risk of trespassing on the indulgence and kindness of the House if I were to attempt to deal with it in any way beyond presenting the mere skeleton of a statement. The subject itself might fairly well excuse elaboration ; the statements which I shall present to this House, Sir, might fairly be referred to; they might fairly be discussed and they might very fairly be padded. But I shall refrain and shall simply deal with the actual figures, necessarily discussing the question of the Intercolonial from a historical standpoint, with some reference to the future prospects of that great public work. The Intercolonial Railway commands a very large space in the public attention of this country, and it is with this railway that I will be expected to deal specifically this afternoon.

Referring to the fiscal year ending June 30, 1905, the statement of results is as follows :

Total revenue—
1904..	$6,339,221 07
1905..	6,783,522 83

Divided as follows :

From passengers—
1904..	$2,021,568 04
1905..	2,105,066 75
From mails—
1904..	$ 153,285 28
1905..	161,620 36
From express—
1904..	$ 107,268 13
1905..	128,298 42
From other sources—
1904..	$ 15,987 14
1905..	15,358 75
From freight—
1904..	$4,041,112 48
1905..	4,373,178 55

Thus showing that the receipts for 1905 from passenger and freight traffic, exceeded the receipts for 1904 by about $400,000.

Turning to the other side of the account the cost of operation was as follows :

Cost of operation—
1904..	$7,239,982 04
1905..	8,508,826 75

Divided as follows :

For maintenance of way and structures—
1904..	$1,486,074 60
1905..	1,716,262 57
Maintenance of equipment—
1904..	$1,534,178 39
1905..	1,834,572 94

As will be seen there was a very material increase in cost of maintenance of equipment on the Intercolonial.

Conducting transportation—
1904..	$3,904,053 11
1905..	4,602,492 36
General expenses—
1904..	$ 200,920 24
1905..	216,537 66
Parlour, sleeping and dining car expenses—
1904..	$ 114,755 70
1905..	138,961 22

It will be observed that there has been an increase in almost every item of expense under each of these branches, a marked increase in some instances.

I might say with respect to the cost of conducting transportation that there has been an increase of $700,000. The figures which I have thus cited to the House demonstrate the fact, the lamentable fact, that there was a difference between revenue and cost of operation during the fiscal year 1905 of $1,725,303.92. In the preceding year there was a deficit of $900,750.

The difference between the deficit of 1905 and that of 1904 is accounted for by the following items of excess in the cost of operation.

Maintenance of way department excess, $257,105.37.

Made up as follows :

Increase of wages under labour account..	$ 79,716 33
Railway ties..	30,979 48
Docks and wharfs..	27,403 23
Handling snow (labour entirely)..	132,200 00

There were slight reductions made in the cost of bridges, culverts and fences to the amount of $2,193.67.

In the maintenance of equipment there was an increase over 1904 of $296,434.73, made up as follows :

Maintenance of equipment department, excess, $296,434.73.

Made up as follows :

Locomotive repairs..	$ 84,016 36
Passenger car repairs..	32,818 79
Freight car repairs..	135,617 90
Abnormal expenditure due the snow blockades..	33,981 66

That is simply an abnormal expense incidental to the maintenance of equipment during the winter season of 1905. The cost of transportation in 1905 exceeded that in 1904 by the very large sum of $587,884 made up of the following items.

Engine and roundhouse men—wages..	$116,067 74
Fuel for locomotives..	252,991 05
Oil and tallow..	11,000 00
Other supplies..	601 00
Train service—wages..	112,172 37
Switchmen, flagmen and watchmen—wages..	9,097 84
Station service—wages..	49,348 51
Car mileage tendance..	16,605 52
Injuries to persons..	10,000 00

I could very readily explain in my own language the causes which contributed to this very large excess of expenditure in these several departments during the year 1905 over the same class of expenditures made in 1904; but I think that I cannot do better than read an extract from the very careful report made by Mr. M. J. Butler, chief engineer and general manager of government railways in regard to the special circumstances affecting the operation of the Intercolonial during the last fiscal year. Mr. Butler says :

The unprecedented severity of the winter entailed heavy dircet expense in the removal of snow and ice, besides, as is pointed out by the general manager, largely increasing the operating expenses otherwise, and, at the same time, causing a loss of revenue from traffic. The cost is set down by the railway officials as $264,716.14, which would be an increase of over $134,000, compared with the preceding years. This, however, but faintly represents even the direct cost entailed by the winter storms, covering, as it does, merely the actual work of removal of the material. To this has to be added the concurrent cost of a snow blockade extending for over two months, throughout which, on some divisions, there was practically an absolute stoppage of all traffic, and the boats between the mainland and Prince Edward Island stopped running from the latter part of January until March, causing great congestion of cars. From details furnished me, I compute that, including wages of men actually engaged in shovelling snow and picking ice, the proportion of ordinary pay-rolls during the blockade, detention time, maintenance of equipment, water supply, wrecking train service, meals for passengers, and for the snow shovellers and others, and lastly, the heavy resulting adverse car mileage balance, the total direct cost was not less than $518,000 over the normal. Even, when, in March, there was a cessation of snow fall, the quantity of accumulated freight entailed extra cost in the endeavour to clear it.

Mr. HAGGART. Is the $134,000 included in that $518,000 ?

Mr. EMMERSON. No. The $134,000 was in the operating expenses. These are direct expenditures incidental to the snow blockade. Mr. Butler's report goes on:

By way of assistance to the farmers in the eastern part of Nova Scotia and in Prince Edward Island, who were suffering from a deficiency in the hay crops, due to the exceptional dryness of the summer of 1904, the Intercolonial, under authority of an order in council, carried, free of charge, hay to the extent of 36,609 tons for their use ; the assistance was given by way of refund of freight charges to the extent of $125,855.46.

Mr. HAGGART. Can an order in council do that ?

Mr. EMMERSON. My hon. friend need not be surprised. The same thing was done before in respect to the carriage of coal. The report continues :

Though no revenue was derived from this service, the ordinary cost entailed on the railway was very considerable, over 3,000 cars being engaged in the work, and this cost was increased by the fact that the hay-laden cars arrived at the time of the snow blockade, when no boats were running to Prince Edward Island, the railway yards were congested, and a large number of cars were stalled for months. I estimate the cost to the railway as at least $140,000. This, of course, in no way affects the principle of aiding, a distressed population, through the gratuitous service of a government road, but it is only fair, in reviewing the financial side of the question, to see that while crediting to national generosity the cost involved, the railway's aggregate expenditure, in which it must be merged, is not debited, to that amount, at all events, with extravagant administration.

Mr. BRODER. In regard to the carriage of hay, did the railway discriminate between people who were able to pay and those who were not as well off, or was it done generally ?

Mr. EMMERSON. This aid was given by order in council, which provided that the municipalities could purchase the hay for distribution among the needy at the actual cost of the hay to the municipalities, and we would carry the hay free for those municipalities. The order in council, a copy of which was laid on the table at the last session of parliament, contains the terms and conditions of that hay transportation. It followed a precedent which was established some years ago in connection with the coal famine in Ontario and Quebec, when, by a similar order in council it was provided that coal from the Nova Scotia coal mines would be transported over the Intercolonial, the freight thereon being refunded to the municipalities bringing the coal from the east.

Now, Sir, I am very frank to admit that the deficit of last year was sufficient to appal the public mind of Canada with respect to the Intercolonial; but I have no apologies to make regarding that deficit.

The conditions which prevailed and the management of the road, are the same as they have been for the last quarter of a century. There were the same officials, the same manager, the same deputy—the same men practically operated the road—the same district superintendents, the same train despatchers, and their operation of the road during the year 1905 showed these results. I am bound to say that this deficit—which I frankly and candidly admit was a very large one—has excited very severe comment in the press of Canada. Not merely in the distant west, not merely in middle west, but in the east as well ; and no one deplored the large amount of that deficit more than myself. But, Sir, I think it is due to this House and country to call attention to the special reasons and causes which led to that deficit ; and I think, Sir, that I have the right to claim, not merely at the hands of this House but the press of this country, a little fair-play in the discussion of that deficit. I know there was a cry went abroad from one end of Canada to the other. True it is a far cry from Victoria and Vancouver, but we heard it, and we heard it echoed and re-echoed across the continent, and it was only drowned when it reached the distant shores of the Atlantic where the waves roll in from Ireland against the shores of Cape Breton. Let me refer to some of those who uttered that cry, the unfairness of which certainly does not do credit to those who sent it forth. The deficit for the fiscal year 1905 was made the subject of much comment in the newspaper press of this country and of a great deal of misrepresentation by newspapers opposed to the government and sometimes by newspapers not wholly opposed to the government.

The criticism of the Montreal 'Gazette' is a fair sample:

> The loss on operation does not represent the only drainage of the road upon the country. There was paid during the twelve months, out of the national treasury, chargeable to capital, on improving it and fitting it to do its non-paying business a further sum of $4,755,577. The total cost of the road to the country was thus raised by the end of the fiscal year to $77,491,512. The accounts of the road should therefore stand as follows—
>
> Loss on operation.. .. ..$1,725,303
> Interest on cost not earned, say 2,250,000
> Expended on improvements.. 4,755,577
>
> Total cost over receipts.. ..$8,730,880
>
> The Intercolonial Railway is worse than bankrupt. Its management, as shown by the facts in the public accounts, is a crime against the country.

Well, Mr. Speaker, that the actual deficit as between revenue and expenditure was sufficiently large to alarm the country, I candidly admit. But when the newspaper press seek to misrepresent the conditions prevailing on the Intercolonial Railway, I have certainly the right to ask that this matter be fairly considered. This article of the 'Gazette' was copied in many newspapers of the country. It was represented that the actual deficit, without taking into consideration the interest on the capital expenditure, was upwards of $7,000,000 during the past year. And this is arrived at by including the $4,755,577 expended under the capital expenditure.

I must say that it is scarcely creditable to a journal having the commercial standing of the Montreal 'Gazette' to apply such criticism to the Intercolonial Railway, when it would be making itself ridiculous by applying the same method of argument to any other railway. Are the capital expenditures of the Canadian Pacific Railway, for example, dealt with in this way? The method on the Intercolonial Railway regarding charges against revenue and capital is precisely the same as that followed on the Canadian Pacific Railway. But as this statement may possibly be questioned in this House, in view of the discussions which have taken place during previous sessions, I have prepared myself with evidence on the subject, which I am sure will not be disputed by any hon. gentleman opposite. I propose to read a letter from Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, the president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, to my late deputy minister, which should fully settle any controversy on the question of charges against capital. This question has been productive of much discussion in this House, namely, as to how far the betterments on the Intercolonial Railway should be charged to capital and to what extent these charges should be made against revenue. I remember that during last session an hon. gentleman sitting on the other side of the House—a director of the Canadian Pacific Railway—took exception to the procedure followed in connection with the capital expenditure proposed to be made. This letter of Mr. Shaughnessy was written, as appears by the heading, in the offices of the Canadian Pacific Railway at Montreal and is dated September 1st, 1905.

> Collingwood Schreiber, Esq., C.M.G.,
> Deputy Minister and Chief Engineer of Railways and Canals, Ottawa.
>
> Dear Sir,—
>
> Your letter of August 26, reached my office during my absence from the city, which accounts for the delay in replying to it. Below I give you our practice with reference to the charges that are made to capital and revenue accounts respectively in connection with the several classes of work about which you make inquiry.
>
> 1. When light rails are taken out of the track and replaced by heavy rails the difference in the weight of rail and weight of fastenings is charged to capital. No portion of the cost of labour, or of other expenses involved in making the change, is charged to capital account.

Mr. BARKER. That is precisely what I contended you should do.

Mr. EMMERSON. And that is precisely what I did on the Intercolonial.

> 2 and 3. When a locomotive is destroyed or put out of service permanently, we replace it with another, charging the cost to revenue, although the new engine may be very much heavier and more costly, and we pursue the same course with reference to cars.

Precisely what the Intercolonial Railway does.

Mr. BARKER. But the hon. gentleman surely does not mean to say—

Mr. EMMERSON. My hon friend (Mr. Barker) need not become impatient. If he will possess his soul in patience for a few moments I will read him a clause on the very point I know he has in mind.

> 4. When automatic drawbars are put in to replace the old style of drawbar, we charge to capital the original cost less the value of the scrap.

Precisely the course pursued by the Intercolonial.

> 5. Air brakes, when originally applied in place of the hand brake, are charged to capital account.

Precisely what we do in connection with these expenses on the Intercolonial Railway.

> 6. When an old station-house is replaced by a new and a larger one, we generally charge the difference in value to capital account, but this is not always done.
>
> 7. Our practice with reference to the replacement of old engine houses is the same as in the case of old station buildings.
>
> 8. If wooden bridges be replaced by others of the same material, the charge is against revenue. If a wooden structure be taken out and be replaced by permanent work in the shape of steel or masonry, or embankment, the charge is against capital. If a steel structure is replaced by a heavier and stronger one, the difference in weight only would be charged to capital.

Precisely as has been done on the Intercolonial Railway.

9 and 10. Additional sidings and the lengthening of existing sidings to meet new conditions are, as a rule, charged to capital account.

11. Excepting where the work is done by regular section forces, the improvement of the line by reduction of grades and curvature is deemed to be a proper charge against capital.

Yours very truly,

(Sgd.) T. G. SHAUGHNESSY,
President.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there is a letter justifying the course that has been pursued, and is now being pursued, in relation to the capital expenses made on the Intercolonial Railway.

Mr. BARKER. Has the hon. gentleman any objection to reading the letter to which that is a reply ?

Mr. EMMERSON. I have not the letter to which that is a reply, let me say that emphatically. But it was an inquiry made of Mr. Shaughnessy as to the principle which guided the Canadian Pacific Railway in connection with the capital expenses on that railway. The letter I have read certainly speaks for itself. It is not ambiguous, because the letter which called it forth as an answer——

Mr. BARKER. But why not read that letter ?

Mr. EMMERSON. I say I have not got it, and I am stating what is was. It was an inquiry made in connection with a dispute which was arising between the Grand Trunk Railway, I think it was, and the Intercolonial Railway; and it was with a view to learn from Mr. Shaughnessy what would be the character of his evidence on any question at issue between those railways as to the capital expenses, or as to expenses made in connection with the betterment of the Intercolonial, or of that portion of the Intercolonial that is owned by the Grand Trunk, and the rights on which are granted by an agreement between the Grand Trunk and the government of Canada in connection with the extension of the Intercolonial from Lévis to Montreal. Now, Sir, it is well known that the Canadian Pacific Railway propose during the current year to increase their stock by the issue of $40,000,000 of new stock. If the style of reasoning adopted by the Montreal 'Gazette' in the article which I have read to the House with regard to the Intercolonial, were applied in this instance, the question of dividends by the Canadian Pacific Railway would be disposed of for several years to come. We have heard a great cry during every session of recent parliaments with respect to the items included in the capital expenses of the Intercolonial, and it has been insisted over and over again on the floor of this House that the Intercolonial was pursuing a policy that was against the interests of the people of Canada in making these charges against capital account, and that it was acting at variance with the well understood principles which govern railway companies in making these capital expenses. Sir, I have not under my hand at the moment, but I think I will have before this session is closed, the indisputable evidence that the course pursued by the Intercolonial is the one that has been adopted and is followed by every railway system in the United States. Certainly, as a precedent for the course which we have pursued we have the Canadian Pacific Railway, and if the principle which the Montreal 'Gazette' would seek to apply to the Intercolonial had been applied to the Canadian Pacific Railway in years gone by, if it had been applied from the time the Canadian Pacific Railway started out on its career of usefulness and prosperity, the stock of the Canadian Pacific Railway would not be where it is to-day, upwards of 170, the stock of the Canadian Pacific Railway would not have been where it has been during recent years. Because if these capital expenses had been taken out of revenue, as the hon. gentlemen of the opposition ask the administrators of the Intercolonial to do, there would not have been earnings, there would not have been a fund to pay dividends, and we all recognize the fact that where there are no dividends there are no premiums on the stock.

Now, Sir, I desire briefly to invite the attention of the House and the country to what the Intercolonial Railway has cost, and to show the object of its construction ; I invite the attention of the House to what in my judgment has been the success that has attended the Intercolonial in fulfilling the object for which it was built. I am sure that I shall not be considered as travelling far out of the way when I start at what I consider the inception of the Intercolonial. I consider that the Intercolonial had its birth at the conference in Charlottetown, on September 8, 1864. It will be borne in mind that there had been discussion in every province of British North America during the preceding months —yes during the preceding years—as to the destiny of these provinces. There had been an agitation here in what are now the provinces of Ontario and Quebec; the public men of these provinces had been discussing the prospects for the future and the possible means of removing the difficulties that seemed then to trouble them. As to the maritime provinces, without recounting the steps that had been taken or the correspondence that had passed between the provinces, I will simply say that the representatives of the people there had met in convention at Charlottetown with the object of consummating a maritime union. That convention was composed of delegates from Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. While in session, this convention was approached by gentlemen from the provinces of Upper and Lower Canada. It was a bright September day when Sir John Macdonald, Hon. Geo. Brown and Sir Geo. Etienne Cartier and their co-delegates sailed into Charlottetown harbour. At that conference was discussed, so far as the provinces were concerned, the construction of an Intercolonial railway to bind together the several provinces forming the proposed confederacy. We know the outcome. We know that that convention adjourned to the city of Halifax. In that city no business sessions were held, but other sessions were held and public addresses were given. To show what the Intercolonial was intended to be, and to show the object that the fathers of confederation had with respect to it, I venture to invite the attention of the House to the remarks in the first place, of Hon. Geo. E. Cartier, afterwards Sir George Cartier. In addressing a public meeting at Halifax, he said :

I need hardly bring to your notice, gentlemen, that we in Canada have those two great elements of nationality, the personal and the territorial elements. But we know our shortcomings. Though great in territory and population, we want the other element which is absolutely necesary to make a nation, that is the maritime element. What nation on earth has obtained any amount of magnificence unless it has been united with the maritime element.

And Hon. John A. Macdonald afterwards Sir John Macdonald addressed a great gathering in Halifax on that occasion. I quote his words as follows :

I do not hesitate to say that with respect to the Intercolonial, it is understood by the people of Canada that it can only be built as a means of political union for the colonies. It cannot be denied that the railway as a commercial enterprise would be of comparatively little commercial advantage to the people of Canada. Whilst we have the St. Lawrence in summer and the American ports in time of peace, we have all that is requisite for our purposes. We recognize, however, the fact that peace may not always exist, and that we must have some other means of outlet, if we do not wish to be cut off from the ocean for some months in the year. We wish to feel greater security, to know that we can have assistance readily in the hour of danger. In the case of union, this railway must be a national work, and Canada will cheerfully contribute to the utmost extent in order to make that important link without which no political connection can be complete.

These remarks of Sir John A. Macdonald, indictate very clearly the nature of the discussion that had taken place among the delegates who met in Charlottetown. But these delegates from Canada came down with wider ideas. The maritime delegates were discussing the more restricted question of maritime union, and the Canadian delegates presented a grander vista, a prospect of broader union, a union that was to involve a railway which would be a connecting link between the several provinces afterwards to become the Dominion of Canada. And the words which I have just quoted show the object then in view. But other expressions which I will quote, more clearly indictate the details of the discussion that had taken place with respect to the advantages that were to accrue by the construction of the Intercolonial railway. Advantages that were to accrue not merely to the people of the maritime provinces but to the people of Ontario and Quebec as well. Sir Geo. Cartier afterwards addressed a meeting in St. John, N.B. He said :

Prosperity such as this great country was capable of attaining to would never be enjoyed until the several sectional parts of it were united under the same political and commercial system, their respective policies brought into relation with each other and all maritime facilities equally afforded to all which nature had so bountifully bestowed upon some of the parts. This was what confederation proposed to accomplish. Canada has population sufficient to make a great nation in course of time, but she wants what the lower provinces possess, an outlet to the sea. As the lower provinces now stand they are comparatively weak and powerless and the wealth, labour and industry which Canada possesses go in great measure, to enrich such cities as New York, Boston and Portland. This must continue to be the case until the Intercolonial, of which he had never been an advocate, should be built, and, as soon as the colonies were confederated, the construction of that work would undoubtedly commence.

Now, there was a clear and distinct statement by that very eminent and distinguished statesman Sir Geo. Cartier as regards the object that was to be obtained by the construction of the Intercolonial Railway. It was to bring the peoples of the several provinces together. It was to stimulate inter-communication social, political and business. It was practically to bring the products of the east to the markets of the west; it was to take the manufactured products of the western provinces to the fishermen on the shores of Nova Scotia, or Prince Edward Island, and to the lumbermen in the woods of New Brunswick. In that connection the Hon. Geo. Brown, speaking of the advantages of confederation and of the construction of the Intercolonial Railway, used the following language :

But far in advance of all other advantages would be this, that union of all the provinces would break down all trade barriers between us, and throw open at once to all a combined market of four millions of people. You in the east would send us your fish and your coals and your West India produce, while we would send you in return the flour and the grain and the meats you now buy in Boston and New York. Our merchants and manufacturers would have a new field before them.

And so on. He goes on to speak of the advantages that must necessarily accrue by the construction of that railway and by the confederation of these widely separated provinces.

The Hon. A. T. Galt then Minister of Finance of Canada, said :

In answer to the objection that Canada sought the union to be relieved of her burdens, spoke of the Intercolonial Railway, of the benefit it would confer upon the maritime provinces, whilst the expense under the proposed union must be borne principally by Canada, an arrangement entirely different from that which had been contemplated while the provinces were separate.

I have not referred to these statements as in any way extenuating the deficit which has occurred on the Intercolonial Railway during the past year, nor as a justification of the deficits which have been occasioned by the operation of the railway since its construction and completion as an Intercolonial Railway, but I do not want this House to forget, and I do not want this country to forget, the object, the main purpose, of the construction of the Intercolonial. The success, or non-success, which has attended that construction has certainly been before the country, but the object for which the Intercolonial Railway has been constructed has not always been borne in mind. There always has been a discussion about the expenditures on the Intercolonial Railway. There has always been comment, severe—very severe—with respect to the deficits on that road, but as a gentleman said in my hearing at a public meeting in the province of Ontario not many months ago, the Intercolonial Railway, from the very day of its construction, has been productive of surpluses, but the surpluses, instead of being in the shape of dividends distributed amongst the shareholders, as is the case with the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Grand Trunk Railway, have been left in the pockets of the people of the country by reason of the very low rates of freight which have been charged with respect to the traffic between the east and the west. With respect to that traffic we know what object the fathers of confederation had in view in constructing that road. It was to bring these peoples together, it was to divert the traffic which went to the New England States from the maritime provinces in this direction, and to have communication between Ontario and Nova Scotia. Three-fourths of the traffic—certainly of the through traffic—has been in the easterly direction; one fourth of the traffic has been in the westerly direction. That is to say, if there is a benefit to be derived by low rates of freight, if trade is to be promoted, if markets are to be secured, if there is to be a diversion of trade from the manufacturers of the New England States to the manufacturers of Ontario and Quebec, that can only be accomplished by making such freight rates as will make possible an interchange of traffic; and if three-quarters of that traffic is in an easterly direction, surely three-quarters of the benefit must accrue to the Ontario and Quebec manufacturers. How else would the markets of the fishermen along the shores of Nova Scotia have been secured by Toronto, Montreal and other manufacturers, and the manufacturing towns of Ontario and Quebec ? They certainly could not have been, had not these rates been abnormally and exceptionally low. The result was apparent in a very few years. The trade was diverted. Good did come of it. The very objects which the gentlemen who conceived the scheme had in view were accomplished, and the result is that the Intercolonial Railway has been operated with freight and passenger rates which are exceptionally low, and that the people east and west have enjoyed the advantage, that the country has prospered and that we know each other as we did not know each other previous to that date.

Now, all this is germane to the question at issue, because I will make the statement with a knowledge of the facts : That if we had applied on the Intercolonial Railway, during these years, in the matter of freight traffic, the rates which have been applied on the Grand Trunk Railway and Canadian Pacific Railway, there would never have been a deficit in the history of that road. It is simply a question of freight rates and passenger rates. I am always assuming that the traffic would have followed these channels without these exceptionally low rates. If it would have done so, then, certainly, there has been wrong doing in not increasing the rates equal to the rates charged by the other railways of Canada. But, if the traffic could not have been secured without the application of these special rates, then, I say that the action of those who have been responsible for the application of these rates has been justified by the results.

What has the Intercolonial Railway cost ? and this is a matter of interest, I am sure, to the people of the country. This expenditure, it will be admitted, was for the benefit of trade and transportation. That was the object in view, and it is no startling proposition to say that the parliament of Canada shall appropriate moneys for such a purpose. Parliament has been doing that ever since it was a parliament, and while I shall first invite your attention to the cost of the Intercolonial Railway, I shall as well venture to invite your attention to the question of the amount of money that has been expended by Canada since we became a confederation in connection with other means of promoting trade and transportation in Canada. You know that we have our canals. These are deficit creators, and recognized as such. You know that we have our other railways in Canada which have been, and which are, being subsidized by the parliament of Canada, and you know that we have these railways whose bonds have been guaranteed by the government, by the country, all in the interest of trade and transportation. You know that we practically built the Canadian Pacific Railway and you know that we advanced very large sums of money to the old Grand Trunk, which stands as an asset of Canada to-day on the books in the Finance Department of Canada, representing millions that have been paid out. I hear no cry with respect to that. You know that we have expended large sums of money annually for the purpose of promoting our export trade in the way of subsidies to steamships. You know that with a view to promoting our internal traffic, our interprovincial and provincial traffic, we have been subsidizing steamships which ply on our inland waters and along our coasts.

Mr. HAGGART. Will the hon. gentleman state the amount paid to the Grand Trunk since confederation ?

Mr. EMMERSON. I am sorry I cannot anticipate every question that is in my hon. friend's mind, but if he will bear with me for a little I will come to the very question he has propounded.

Mr. HAGGART. The hon. gentleman has stated that the Grand Trunk has got a certain amount since confederation. I want to know what it is.

Mr. EMMERSON. I did not say since confederation ; if my hon. friend understood me to say since confederation, I wish to correct him. I did not intend to make any such statement, but it was an amount that the people of this country expended, and it is an amount that is taken into the calculation of the financial conditions of the country, the amount that was contributed to the Grand Trunk anterior to the confederation. My hon. friend knows that, and no mere quibble can alter or wipe away the actual results with respect to the expenditure of the money. We have also expended very large sums of money in endeavouring to promote trade and transportation in connection with the Montreal harbour, in connection with the Quebec harbour, and in many other ways. I do not invite the attention of this House with any idea that these matters should be objected to. I think rather that they are to be justified. I think rather that they are to be defended; but do not let us pick out from among this mass of expenditures the money laid out on the Intercolonial and hold the matter up for public censure; do not subject these expenditures to the most extreme criticism and be silent with respect to the large sums of money which you have been paying in the past, and which you are yearly paying out, with a view to promoting the trade and transportation interests of Canada.

The expenditure on the Intercolonial charged—not chargeable but charged—to capital account, and I say according to the principles followed chargeable properly to capital account, amounted to $77,473,557. There was charged to consolidated fund, as the difference between deficits and surpluses, $7,888,517—leaving a grand total which the Intercolonial has cost Canada since 1867 of $85,362,074.

This is a large sum of money, it represents a great deal to the people of Canada, and it is a matter of fair comment as to whether Canada has received a proportionate benefit from that expenditure. I claim that it has.

The net deficits on the Intercolonial Railway during the period of its operation by Canada have amounted to $7,888,517. Hon. gentlemen will say : a very large sum indeed, but we might add if you will to this the cost of the Prince Edward Island Railway, which as you know, Sir, is a part of the government railway system of Canada. The amount charged to capital account of the Prince Edward Island Railway is $6,719,529. There has been charged to the consolidated fund during the several years a total of $7,272,337, making a grand total of $13,991,866. But from this sum which I have last named there is to be deducted for revenue $4,830,599, showing a net cost of the Prince Edward Island Railway down to date of $9,161,265.

Now, if you will, you can add these two sums together and take them as the expenditures in the interest of the Intercolonial Railway, and the two sums amount in round numbers to ninety-four and one half million dollars. It is easy to get the exact dollars; but I am near enough in stating ninety-four and a half millions. It is slightly under that amount.

As I have mentioned, there are other directions in which we have expended moneys; and first let me invite your attention to the canals of Canada: As I stated a few moments ago, the canals are nothing but deficit creators. There was a time when a charge was made for the traffic which passed through these canals. The tolls amounted to a very considerable sum, as I understand, but it was immaterial as to whether there was any return or not. Within the last few years, in the interest of trade and transportation, the government of this country, with the approval of parliament, abolished the canal tolls, and there is charged to the capital account of the canals of Canada the sum of $89,294,758. In addition to that there has been charged in the consolidated fund of Canada $8,936,985, making a total of $98,231,743, some $5,000,000 more than has been expended in connection with the Intercolonial and the Prince Edward Island Railway. Now, Sir, I do not hear any complaint with respect to this. Down by the sea there are no murmurings, although these canals and the traffic which goes over them in no way find an outlet in the ports of the maritime provinces. There is no complaint anywhere in Canada with respect to that expenditure, but there is a complaint and a very loud complaint with respect to the expenditures on the Intercolonial Railway. The annual deficit of the Intercolonal excites a discussion, and a long discussion, at every session of this parliament. Even when the amount is only $100,000 or $150,000 it is spoken of in extravagant terms and when the amount reaches to $1,725,000 the din is such that it would almost destroy your hearing. And yet there is in the annual cost of operation an annual deficit on the canals of $1,174,000.

Do we hear anything about it? In what other direction have we appropriated moneys? To miscellaneous railways the subsidies paid by the government amount to $32,617,560; to the Canadian Pacific alone there was paid $62,785,319; to the Grand Trunk there was paid—and it stands as an asset unpaid, as a part of the book-keeping of Canada—$25,607,393; a total of $121,010,272. These figures do not include the land subsidies which are admittedly of enormous value. In all 56,000,000 acres were voted to aid railway construction. You can compute the amount invested in railways by way of land subsidies by multiplying 56,000,000 by any sum that you choose. If you value the land at a dollar an acre, it means $56,000,000; if at two dollars an acre it means double that sum; if at three dollars an acre it means treble that sum; and so on. Lands which to-day are being sold, as I understand, at from $7 to $10 an acre were contributed by the government of Canada towards the construction of these railways. Add these sums together and consider the enormous amount which Canada has invested in railways, or for the purpose of promoting and stimulating trade and transportation. The Dominion government has also guaranteed the bonds of the Quebec Bridge and Railway Company—for the principal of $6,678,200, and for interest thereon at the rate of three per cent per annum for fifty years. That is surely in the interest of trade and in the interest of transportation. It is a necessity, and I hear no complaint in regard to it. It is true that oftentimes exception is taken to the acts which authorize these expenditures or these guarantees, but that is more in a political sense than from a business standpoint. From a business standpoint it is recognized by the people of Canada, with our sparse population and our large and extended area, it is necessary that assistance should be given to the construction of railways, the promotion of transportation companies and the advancement of the general trade interests of the country. Without that assistance there is not private capital to make the investment, and therefore it is a public necessity in our endeavour to make of Canada what we hope her to be. The bonds of the Canadian Northern Railway are guaranteed on a principal of £1,923,287 sterling, and interest thereon at the rate of three per cent per annum for fifty years. The guarantee to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company is for a sum equal to seventy-five per cent of the cost of the construction of the western division of the National Transcontinental Railway, but not exceeding $13,000 per mile in respect of the prairie section of that railway. To steamships for a considerable period of years subsidies have been paid by the Dominion government. The amount paid last year to steamers plying between Canadian ports and foreign ports was $795,000, and to steamers plying between Canadian ports, $113,000. The total of both classes of subsidies already paid is $10,539,102. Who will say that that was an unwise expenditure, or who will dare to criticise it? We hear no murmuring in respect to that; but it is to be added to the grand total which includes the Intercolonial, the Canadian Pacific, the Grand Trunk, the Grand Trunk Pacific, the Canadian Northern, and all the other railways big and little which have been aided by votes of the parliament of Canada. We have another object of our solicitude in the way of the promotion of trade and transportation in the aid granted to harbours and navigation. In the Montreal harbour alone we have expended $5,186,834, in the Quebec harbour $3,835,697, and in the St. Lawrence channel $3,641,364, a total of $12,663,895. If all these sums which have been expended in aid of the trade and transportation of the Dominion are added together, they will be found to aggregate a very large sum.

Now, it is a very pertinent question, as to why the Intercolonial does not pay. We are confronted year by year with these deficits, enormous in some instances—surely there must be a cause for them. Some of the newspapers of the country have given reasons and have suggested remedies. Some of them have said that political influence is the cause; others have said that it is the absence of expert management. They travel in many directions to find out reasons why the Intercolonial does not pay. I think I can mention three causes which give the explanation in a nut-shell. The first is the long route. I am not going to weary this House by repeating the discussion which occurred at the time of the location of the road. I am not going to give the reasons which were advanced why the long route along the shores of the St. Lawrence was selected. Enough for me to say that those reasons were not commercial; they were political, imperial and military, admitted to be so by the fathers of confederation, and not since that day disputed. Another reason is the water competition. There is the water competition along the coast of Maine, along the shores of the Bay of Fundy and across to the Nova Scotia coast. There is the water competition down the St. Lawrence river and along the gulf to the Straits of Northumberland. Every point touched by the Intercolonial is subject to competition from water transportation. But aside from this, there is the third reason—and perhaps one at least of the other reasons I have stated has contributed in a measure to the creation of this—low rates.

I do not know that I should at this moment speak of the reasons which have been assigned by others or go out of my way to attempt to rebut those reasons. It would be perhaps well for me at this moment not to do so. I may have an opportunity later to invite the attention of the House to the reasons which have been assigned in the newspaper press of this country and by public speakers. But for a moment let me deal with the three causes which I assign for these annual deficits. First, there is the long route. I need not dwell on that, but as incidentally arising out of that, we have a remarkable condition of things, and in order to bring it to your notice more concisely and without any unnecessary use of words, let me just say this: That in the interest of the developments of the coal mines of Nova Scotia and the steel industry in that province, extraordinary low rates on freight have been granted from Sydney and other points to Montreal. You will recognize this fact, that there is direct water communication between Sydney and Montreal for six months of the year, and you must bear in mind that the Intercolonial Railway is extended to Sydney. It is true that we could decline to take this traffic in the summer season, or rather we could decline to take it at a rate so exceptionally low; but were we to do so we would be running our cars to and from Sydney during the summer season empty, if we ran them at all. During the winter of course we would have the steel and the coal industry at our mercy as regards freight rates, but it has been deemed wise in the past—and I have not changed the system—to give them special consideration in order to have the traffic in the summer. This rate of freight is believed to be the lowest in the known world. It is ·22 cents per ton mile. All railway experts will endorse my statement that there is certainly no such low rate on this continent. Then there is the other side of the account and that is with respect to east bound freight—the products of the west and of Ontario—which find a very large market down by the sea. We have to compete with water competition from Montreal during the summer. During the winter we have to compete with the American ports and the water transportation from Boston and Portland. There seems to be a very great desire on the part of the hon. members and the press and the people of all Canada that our traffic with the West Indies and Newfoundland shall be stimulated and increased, and as far as possible done through Canadian ports—that it should in no wise be allowed to be diverted to American ports. Well, in order to secure command of that traffic to Jamaica and the other West India Islands and also to Newfoundland, it has been necessary for the Intercolonial Railway to give an exceptionally low rate on flour east bound for export. That low rate is given for the purpose of retaining these markets for the Canadian producers. A very low rate of one-quarter of a cent per ton per mile is granted on carload lots, thus securing to the Ontario millers the market of the maritime provinces. Is that, Mr. Speaker, not in the interests of interprovincial trade and transportation and the building up of our Canadian seaports ? That may not be business, but it appeals strongly to national sentiment. We recognize the fact that we have to wrestle with geography every time we attempt to stimulate this trade, and the Intercolonial Railway is looked upon as a government railroad and recognized as the pack horse which must bear the burden of this business.

In the past hon. members complained about deficits. These deficits have not merely occurred since the Liberals took office. True, when the Conservative government was in power, if there was anything of national importance requiring the use of railways the Intercolonial Railway was used. But was there ever any credit given for it ? Never, it was charged up to operating expenses. It is included in these deficits amounting to nearly eight million dollars, which have been rolled up from year to year against the Intercolonial Railway. And the Intercolonial Railway is condemned because of that contributing cause.

Reference has been made by me already to the fact that the transportation of hay during the last year free of charge and the transportation of coal in previous years free of charge, involved a very large expense on our railroad. No doubt it did, and I am not going to argue that the Intercolonial Railway should have done this. I hold that the government of Canada should have done it, if it should have been done at all. What was the object? It was that the dairy industries and agricultural interests of eastern Canada should not be allowed to go into utter decay. Here was a whole stretch of country practically barren of every vestige of vegetation. There was no fodder in eastern Nova Scotia. There was nothing to feed the stock cattle, and the people were killing their dairy cows, killing off their stock—stock which had been accumulated by reason of the assistance which had been given by the Canadian government to the agricultural interests. Was it wise to allow this to be done? It is true that years afterwards, it might be replaced; but in the meantime, what would be the result to the dairying interests of the country? Are those interests of importance? Why, their importance is recognized by every hon. member of this House; they have been recognized by every parliament that was ever convened in session here; for, year after year and session after session, votes have been given in favour of that industry. The Intercolonial Railway, again the pack-horse, took that burden upon itself, and it is charged up as another item in the deficits of the road.

Now, I have referred to the long route, to the water competition and to the low rates. Let me take you a little further and emphasize a little these particularly low rates. In comparing the long haul on the Intercolonial we are guided by the mileage to St. John of the Canadian Pacific Railway; that is to say, while we have to go hundreds of miles further, while the wheels of our cars must revolve many times more, yet, in the distribution of our portion of the through traffic we are governed by what is known as the short haul by way of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Let me invite the attention of the House, at this moment, to the reason why this was done. You had built your Intercolonial to Rivière du Loup; you had extended it from Rivière du Loup to Levis, and, in addition, you had constructed what is known as the St. Charles branch, and had spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in doing it. Subsequently you extended the road from Levis to Montreal, by what is known as the Drummond county route. But, while all this was going on, what else were you doing? This House and this country, in order to have a short line from Sherbrooke across the state of Maine to the city of St. John, gave assistance to the Canadian Pacific Railway for the construction of that line. This was in addition to the assistance given to the Canadian Pacific Railway in other directions. Therefore, for the last twenty years, you have been paying $186,000 a year in order to have that railway in competition with the Intercolonial. I am not taking exception to that; but it was done, and it is a contributing cause to the low rates which we are compelled to accept on the Intercolonial for carrying our traffic from the west to the east. I think it was a very worthy expenditure; certainly it was an expenditure having for its object the stimulating of the trade in Canadian products by way of Canadian ports—if not all the way over Canadian soil, certainly by Canadian ports. Now, I do not know how long you have continued that in order to stimulate traffic by way of St. John. Under the Act of parliament which authorized that expenditure it was to continue for twenty years, which period has not yet expired. But the fact that we have that line makes it necessary for the Intercolonial, in computing its freight rates, to be governed by what is known as the short haul, though it hauls the traffic very many miles in addition. Our longest haul therefore, is approximately 800 miles. The great bulk of the way traffic on the railway—which gives profitable earnings—is limited to about 400 miles. That is true of all railways, as I understand it, and is not exceptional in the case of the Intercolonial. On the basis of the haul of 400 miles, our earnings from way freight are about 63 per cent of those of all other railways in Canada. That is to say, that where the other railways in hauling 400 miles are entitled to, and do receive $1 we receive only 63c. On our long haul mileage basis, our rates are not quite 50 per cent of theirs, on the average. That is, where the other railways would receive $1, the Intercolonial receives in one case 63c. and in the other case 50c. Is it any wonder that there are deficits on the Intercolonial?

Mr. HAGGART. Oh, oh.

Mr. EMMERSON. My hon. friend (Mr. Haggart) recognizes the fact as we do. He recognizes also the necessity of it. He contributed to the conditions which made it necessary, and during his regime as Minister of Railways he certainly made no effort to change the conditions.

Now, as to the passenger rates: The comparison of fares on distance basis, between the Intercolonial and the Grand Trunk Railway in the district west of Toronto and on lines north of the main line, where a rate of 3 cents per mile is in force for 400 miles, shows that we collect about two-thirds as much as they do for a first-class fare; we issue second-class fare where they issue none, and our return fare is 60 per cent of theirs. Comparing the Intercolonial passenger traffic with the Grand Trunk traffic on the basis of 200 miles—that is from Montreal to Berlin, New Hampshire where a 3⅓ cent rate is in force—we find first-class fares on the Intercolonial 76 per cent of those on the Grand Trunk; our second-class fare is about 50 per cent of theirs, and our return fare is about 58 per cent of theirs. On the basis of 108 miles on the Canadian Pacific Railway from Montreal to Kemptville, where a 3⅓ cents per mile fare first class, and 2½ cents per mile second class is in force—our fares are, for first class $3 against their $3.50, for second class $2 against their $2.50 for return fares, $4.50 against their $5.85.

It is obvious that if the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Grand Trunk were compelled to reduce their freight and passenger rates to the Intercolonial basis, it would not be long before these railways would be in the hands of a receiver; it would not be long before their deficits would be quite in harmony with and proportionate to the deficits which have occurred on the Intercolonial. I think, Mr. Speaker, I have explained why it is that the Intercolonial, though not in the same class as the canals, has been a very good second as a deficit creator, and I have demonstrated to this House and this country the reasons therefor.

Now, let me take into consideration the current year. I am pleased to announce that as the result of more favourable conditions and of the reforms which have been applied to the Intercolonial, our showing for the first six months of the current fiscal year ending December 31 last, is exceedingly encouraging. Here are the figures :

Working expenses for 1905.. ..	$4,104,018
Working expenses for 1906.. ..	3,925,219
Revenue for 1905..	3,621.263
Revenue for 1906..	3,853,960

Demonstrating the fact that during the first six months of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1905, our deficit was $482,755; while for the six months of 1906, that is for the period between the 1st of last July and the 1st day of January, 1906, our deficit was $71,259.

Mr. BARKER. Is that due to the difference in the snow fall?

Mr. EMMERSON. We did not have any snow last year up to the 1st day of January. Our snow difficulties last year, up to February and March, and up to January 1st, 1906, were precisely the same as they were in 1904 up to the 1st of January, 1905. Now there was a decrease in working expenses of $178,797 in that period, and there was an increase in revenue of $232,696 ; that is to say, the improvement for that period of six months was $411,495. Now, Mr. Speaker, I am not going to claim any special credit personally for these results, but I am going to ask the House to indulge me for a few moments in calling their attention to one fact, and in so far as it is personal, I apologize to the House here and now. I was sworn in office on the 15th of January, 1904. Immediately thereafter I naturally visited my own constituency, and there was held an election which was somewhat gratifying to myself personally. There was another election the results of which were not so gratifying, as my hon. friend from St. John can testify. These occupied time. The session came on. I was new to the preparation of the estimates. My whole time was devoted to that session, and you will remember it was the long session which lasted until the snow fell in the autumn. Then came on the general elections. Following the general elections came the succeeding session, and with the sessional duties and my departmental burdens, I found it impossible to give any personal attention to an examination of the affairs of the Intercolonial. It was not until the 29th day of July last that I was able to start from Ottawa with a view of inquiring into matters affecting that railway. During that month, or about that time, I succeeded in securing the very able assistance of Mr. M. J. Butler as deputy minister and chief engineer, and with him, commencing about the 1st of August, I started over the Intercolonial. I am bound to say that we discovered many things. I do not speak as an expert, I only state the result of the information that was given me when I say that we found many things that would not meet with the approval of railway experts. Certain reforms were considered necessary and these have been applied. You will remember that we did not go over the system until August. It took us some six weeks to travel over the Intercolonial and the Prince Edward Island Railway. Certain reforms were inaugurated and applied then, and some are being applied now. Naturally we could not expect great results in so short a period. Naturally it would be impossible for any man to go on a railway, diagnose the case as he might, recognize the difficulties as he might, and in so short a time apply a remedy calculated to accomplish better results.

The same effort was made in the way of cutting down unnecessary expense, and in the way of inviting the consideration of the officials of the road. It was my pleasure and privilege to ask the representatives of the several departments to meet me in conference in regard to the conditions affecting the Intercolonial Railway. I did not merely consult with the head officials, the managers, superintendents and the other officials holding the higher positions in the employ of the railway, but I consulted with the representatives of the trackmen, the mechanics, the car men, the machinists, the telegraphers and the train dispatchers; each in their turn came and met us in Moncton, representatives, I say, of the several bodies, the trainmen, the conductors, the engine men, the locomotive engineers, the trackmen, and the firemen. We took into consideration and discussed with them the question which affect them in their employment, which affect the success of the railway, and I am bound to say that these men contributed in a very marked degree in assisting us in locating leaks, in locating difficulties and in remedying what were considered as errors. Now, as a result of this conference I think we succeeded in at least making these men recognize that there was some responsibility resting upon them for the successful operation of the Intercolonial Railway. It will be recognized that no Minister, no deputy minister, no general manager, can successfully apply remedies or making a success of the operation of the road unless he has the whole-souled and sympathetic co-operation of the employees thereof.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. If he does not get it he should be in a position to remove them and then he will get it.

Mr. EMMERSON. Many men do not get it; but we are not in a position to remove them.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. I know.

Mr. EMMERSON. It is not always easy to locate want of sympathy. My hon. friend locates it perhaps too often, but there are those who find it difficult to locate want of sympathy, and I am bound to say that in my consultation with the employees of the Intercolonial Railway, the representatives of the different brotherhoods, I found the men eager and anxious to do their part to make the Intercolonial Railway a success; and I have this to say in respect of the employees of the Intercolonial Railway and the patrons along this line, that they are all as sincerely desirous that this Intercolonial Railway shall be a success financially as any man in this House. I can testify to the assistance which I am daily receiving from the employees and from those who are the patrons of the railway. I can also include in that members of parliament, one and all. I want to acknowledge the assistance which has been rendered by the deputy minister. They talk about railway experts and expert commissioners. I want no better expert commissioner than the deputy minister who is aiding me and who has been aiding me during the past six months in the remedies that are being applied to the road. These reforms which are being applied are :

First—The car service department is under process of reorganization to bring about a better service.

Second—Steps are under way to provide for the economical purchase and handling of coal, which will in the aggregate make large savings.

Third—The accounting system on the road is very old and has not kept pace with modern methods. An entirely new system is now being installed which is practically identical with that in use on the Grand Trunk and other Canadian and leading American railways.

Fourth—Passes are being restricted to the minimum.

Fifth—Passenger rates are being advanced.

Sixth—Authority is being taken for an increase in the freight rates.

Seventh—The block system which entails the employment of an excessive number of station agents and telegraph operators is to be modified so far as freight trains are concerned.

Eighth—The staff is being reorganized to bring about a closer supervision of all the details of operation.

Ninth—Shop equipment and arrangements are being improved.

Tenth—The passenger train service is being adjusted to meet the actual business requirements of the maritime provinces, of all the provinces and of the patrons of the railway.

I know that there have been very many suggestions made with respect to the Intercolonial Railway. I am in receipt of a great deal of advice as to how it should be run, but let me for a moment call your attention to the two principal remedies that are suggested; first, with respect to the railway, that it should be sold and disposed of to the great corporations in the country, or, as an alternative proposition, that it should be controlled by a commission. There is a very general impression abroad that the Intercolonial Railway is subjected and very much subjected to political influences. That is not the case. It is true that there is to a certain extent, in connection with the Intercolonial Railway, political influence, but there is to a similar extent with respect to every railway in Canada. I venture to say that the management of the Canadian Pacific Railway is just as much subject to the influence of members of parliament in the management of that railway as I am with respect to the management of the Intercolonial Railway.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Nonsense ; no, no.

Mr. EMMERSON. My hon. friends may say 'no, no', but we all know, and every member of this House must recognize, that there is such influence, and that applications are being constantly made to the managers of these roads. The same is true with respect to the Grand Trunk Railway.

Mr. BRODER. Yes.

Mr. EMMERSON. Yes, my hon. friend (Mr. Broder) will assent to that, I suppose. That is where the shoe is not as comfortable for my hon. friend, but the statement is true nevertheless. And, there is another thing that I want to say, and it is that in so far as passes are concerned the Intercolonial Railway does not indulge in them to anything like the extent that they are indulged in by the other railways of the country.

Mr. HAGGART. The law prohibits the issue of passes.

Mr. EMMERSON. The law prohibits it, but there are ways and ways as my hon. friend (Mr. Haggart) knows. Political influence was very rife on the Intercolonial Railway—I grant it—some few years ago, and my hon. friends may have a lingering idea that the condition of things has not been remedied that existed when passes were doled out as bales of shingles and when men during elections, whether general or by-elections, were passed over the road in train loads. Those days have gone.

Mr. COCHRANE. Oh.

Mr. EMMERSON. My hon. friend (Mr. Cochrane) says 'no'. I am not talking about canals; I am talking about railways.

Mr. COCHRANE. I did not say what the hon. Minister attributed to me at all. I said 'oh'.

Mr. EMMERSON. If my hon. friend said: 'Oh,' I am not surprised, because it must be a matter of surprise, associated as he is and as he was in years gone by.

Mr. COCHRANE. We hear a good deal about that and you have not remedied it much.

Mr. EMMERSON. I say that has been remedied to a very great extent, and I want to call attention to this fact that in the last six months I have not been interfered with by members of parliament in the maritime provinces, or anywhere, in my efforts to establish reforms, in my efforts to cause retrenchment. It is a pretty difficult thing, I admit, to execute a policy of retrenchment. It is not easy in any direction, and it is particularly difficult where things have got a swing, where, during the years that have gone by, the people were led to expect this thing and that, and if these things do not come they are greatly disappointed. When people are brought to the very point of an absolute refusal, and are confronted with the absolute denial of their wishes, then you would naturally expect there would be a great deal of disappointment, a great deal of cavilling and criticism. But I am happy to say that in the efforts I have been endeavouring to put forth I have been loyally supported by hon. members sitting in this House and representing constituencies along the line of that railway. Now, I do not think that in my efforts to bring about these reforms I have had very much assistance from the railway corporations of the country. I see rumours daily in the newspaper press with respect to the sale of the Intercolonial, that certain sums have been offered, that the Minister of Railways in addition to the rebuilding of the shops at Moncton, is recommending to his colleagues and intending to invite consideration by parliament of a proposition to expend $9,000,000 or $9,500,000 on the Intercolonial Railway. With what object are these rumours set afloat? Are there any great railway systems in Canada to-day which are solicitous with respect to the Intercolonial? Why is it that they are excited with reference to the expenditures on the railway and as to its future? Have they eager eyes towards the Intercolonial? If so, it must be recognized that there is truth in the remark which I ventured to make last year, that the Intercolonial is the very best asset that Canada has. If they want the railway I could quite understand where such rumours come from. These obstacles do interfere with the proper management of the road. These rumours that are set afloat with respect to the Intercolonial are calculated to embarrass, and do embarrass. I am not in a position to assert, and perhaps should not assert, that many of these rumours emanate from such a source. But I can say this, that if I were interested in a syndicate or company anxious to secure the Intercolonial, one of the things I would do would be to have coming out daily in the public press of the country, rumours such as we have seen in the public press during the past month.

It is said that we propose to sell the Intercolonial. I want to say that the government of Canada as now constituted, have no intention of disposing of the Intercolonial Railway, and they are determined to maintain it in its entirety as a portion of the transportation system of Canada, in its present status, but in so doing, they are equally determined that it shall be a paying asset of Canada, even though it was not located as a commercial railway and even though it was constructed with regard to the interests of the empire and to political exigencies. It was a military road; we have been endeavouring to make it a commercial, a business road. We are reasonably successful in that and I venture to say that the time is near at hand when the Intercolonial Railway will demonstrate itself to be not merely a surplus gathering work for the profit of the pockets of the people, but that in its book-keeping and in the excess of receipts over expenditure, it will show a balance on the right side of the account. I know how some hon. gentlemen would deplore that fact; I know that their ammunition would run out; but nevertheless it can be made a paying proposition, is being made a paying proposition and it will, as the months pass, prove itself to be a splendid paying proposition for the people of Canada. I want to say that while the earnings have not been banked, nor shown in book-keeping, that there have been earnings and that it has been of great benefit to Canada; that it has contributed to the solidarity of this confederation, that it has brought our peoples together, that it has promoted trade and intercommunication between the several provinces. I want to say in addition to all that, that it has now reached a point where it can lay up month by month, or where it will in the near future lay up month by month, money to its credit. It is all very well to say: Oh, no, you cannot do this, but if you put it into the hands of a commission then this could be done. Well, we have had commissions. There is one thing that is beyond dispute, that is that no government can ever hope to escape responsibility for the operation of a railway, or for its success, by putting that railway into the hands of a commission. I suppose hon. gentlemen, some of them at least, will refer to the Temiskaming Railway.

An hon. MEMBER. It is all right.

Mr. EMMERSON. Yes, that is a railway that has shown a splendid surplus, but that is a railway that is being constructed under exceptional circumstances. But will you tell me that political influence has not been exercised ? If political influence has in any way obstructed the proper management of the Intercolonil Railway, has it not been in evidence in connection with the Temiskaming Railway ? The government that created the first commission that constructed that road was held responsible for every thing that commission did, and when that government went out of power and friends of hon. gentlemen opposite came into power in Ontario, what did they do? They dismissed every man——

Mr. LANCASTER. They put in good men.

Mr. EMMERSON. Does my hon. friend say they were not good men before?

Mr. LANCASTER. They did not show their goodness by their acts.

Mr. EMMERSON. My hon. friend now is just giving evidence of the very thing of which I spoke. They turned out the commissioners, then why did they turn out every engineer?

Mr. LANCASTER. No, they did not.

Mr. EMMERSON. My hon. friend says no. There may be level men and chain men and underlings in the engineering staff of that railway who were not disturbed; but every commissioner was made to resign and it was made a political commission, even if it had not been before, so that this talk, this rot I may say, about putting it into the hands of a commission in order to escape politics is simply a spurious argument and one that certainly does not answer the question relating to the Intercolonial. If you are to have a commission that is absolutely free from any influence, political, personal or otherwise, you have to make it practically autocratic. The people own the road, the people have built it, and you propose to transfer it into the hands of one man, two men, or three men, as the case may be, to whom you give autocratic powers and complete control for a period of time. That is alien to the very spirit of responsible government. If you cannot manage public works without commissions, then the Post Office Department, the Militia Department, the Public Works Department, any one of these departments should for the very same reason be placed in commission. To-day the responsibility for the management of the Intercolonial Railway is upon the government, indirectly—directly upon the department of Railways and Canals ; and that is in accordance with the theory of responsible government. If a government fails in its duty—and governments have in the past, and may in the future, fail in their duty with respect to the administration of departments—the remedy is in the hands of the people. But you construct a railway, and then you create a commission and place it in charge of that railway for a period of years, and it must necessarily be taken out of the hands of the people's representatives and be placed under the authority of one man, whose powers must be autocratic. Even private corporations do not do that. Would the shareholders or directors of a railway company place their railway under the autocratic control of a manager for a period of time ? Perish the thought, they would say. They would not entertain the idea for an instant. While men may argue, and very properly so, whether the government operation of railways can be made a success or not, while they may very properly argue that no government should own a railway, that the Intercolonial should be disposed of, let them not suppose that you can remove political influence and all other difficulties by creating a commission, which must of necessity be appointed by a political party, and receive its compensation from a political party, and the members of which would necessarily wish to harmonize their actions with the desires and will of the government of the day. There is no use of our being hypocritical in respect to these matters. Let us look them squarely in the face. I am not going to say that under my management, or under the ministry of railways as now constituted, the Intercolonial Railway can be made a success. I can only say that I am determined that it shall be made a success if that is possible and within my reach ; but if I fail, I want to say this, that the fact that it is not done does not prove that it cannot be done. I believe the Department of Railways can manage the affairs of the Intercolonial Railway successfully. I may be indulging in prophecy, and perhaps there are those listening to me who do not attach much importance to my forecast ; but I do hope to live to see the day when I can stand on the floor of this House and say not that these things can be, but that these things have been, and I shall not die happy unless I can say that.

I think I have covered the ground of the Intercolonial Railway very fully, perhaps not exhaustively. Indeed, I have felt the embarrassment of the materials at my disposal ; but I am sure that I have made some suggestions that will receive the consideration of this country ; I have at least given some food for thought. I have presented to the people of Canada in detail the amount of money they have expended in connection with the great object we all have in view, in promoting the trade and transportation of Canada. That promotion would never succeed if we did not expend the money, and I can only say that whatever funds may be voted by this parliament at this session for the administration and operation of the Intercolonial during the fiscal year which is to commence on the 1st of July next, the efforts of the Department of Railways will be to see that that money is expended so as to secure the best possible returns, so that the results which we hope for will be accomplished and will redound to the honour of Canada and to the advantage of the trade of the country. The Intercolonial Railway is a safeguard and a regulator of the transportation charges of the country, and in that way alone it is contributing very materially to the advancement of Canada.

Hon. JOHN HAGGART (South Lanark). Mr. Speaker, the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Emmerson) has shown wonderful alacrity in making his budget speech at this early period of the session. We on this side of the House have usually had two or three days notice at least when this important question of transportation and the management of the Intercolonial Railway was to be discussed. It was only at two o'clock to-day that I heard that the hon. gentleman was going to make his speech to-day. I had not the honour of a communication from him that he intended to do so.

Mr. EMMERSON. It was announced last evening in the House.

Mr. HAGGART. Yes, when we adjourned at one o'clock in the morning, the hon. gentleman placed his report on the table of the House and announced that he intended to make his budget speech at three o'clock to-day. I went to the post office and found that his report was not even distributed. However, the postmaster came to me about half an hour before the meeting of the House and handed me a copy of the report. It is perhaps just as well that the hon. gentleman has had his speech now. It has been confined solely to the deficits on the Intercolonial Railway. We have not had a word about the canals of the country, the question of transportation, or the question of the Transcontinental Railway, questions in which the people of the country are as much interested as they are in the Intercolonial Railway. However, I will deal with the question which the hon. gentleman has presented to the House. It is the same old, sad story of deficits and a bright future for the Intercolonial Railway. Let us look at the position of it. Let us see what was the condition of the annual receipts and expenditures of the road at the time it came into the possession of the hon. gentlemen opposite and for some years preceding. From 1896 to 1892, looking backwards, there was no deficit whatever on the Intercolonial under my management. The receipts of the road were in the neighbourhood of three million dollars and the expenditure three million dollars. What a change has come over the management since. Look at the road now—the only road we had between 1896 and 1905. Let me show its financial position in 1896 :

The amount of capital expended on Intercolonial Railway in 1896 was..	$48,434,492
On the Cape Breton Railway.. ..	3,860,679
The Oxford and New Glasgow..	1,949,063
Eastern Extension..	1,324,042
The Montreal and European Railway—amount that was paid, I believe, to the province of New Brunswick for a claim they had	33,942
Total..	$55,902,220

Less transfers. I am taking this from the reports that my hon. friend laid on the table this afternoon. See page 33.

Mr. EMMERSON. It was on the table last evening.

An hon. MEMBER. This morning at 1 o'clock.

Mr. HAGGART. It may have been on the table this morning at one o'clock—that is the copy of which the minister has possession—but the time we count is when it is distributed in the post office and members are able to get it. The total expenditure then was $55,902,220, less transfers, $296,872. Or the total expenditure to 1896, less transfers, was $55,605,347. To be added to that we must take the deficits from 1867 to 1896 which the hon. minister has stated to be altogether in the neighbourhood of $8,000,000. That is up to the present time. The amount of deficit on consolidated account from 1896 up to the present day is $2,447,840. Deduct that from the amount which the minister gave us as the total deficits, according to the consolidated accounts, and that has to be added to the $55,605,000.

What is the amount these gentlemen have spent on capital account since then ? They have spent from 1896 to 1905 $21,868,216 plus the deficit of $2,447,840.

But to make a comparison between the earnings on the Intercolonial Railway today and what they were in 1896, you have to add the interest of $24,000,000 which these gentlemen have expended from 1896 to the present. You have to charge about one million dollars before you can count any earnings. Yet the hon. gentleman is hopeful ! That is the financial position of the road which he presents to us. He makes the statement to the House that the deficit on current account was $1,800,000 and the expenditures on capital account last year was $4,400,000. No wonder he wants to divert the attention of the country from this enormous expenditure to other things which he pretends justify it. Well, the Intercolonial Railway runs through a fairly good section of country for commercial, agricultural and all other purposes. Why does it not pay ? The hon. gentleman tries to explain the reason. The road, he says, was built for military purposes. It was built in a round-about way for the purpose of running between Quebec and Halifax. Then he says it was built for the purpose of defence. Then it has to compete with waterways, and in order to encourage the business of the west in flour to the eastern provinces and in order to encourage the coal miners of the east, the rates on flour and coal are ridiculously low. One of the reasons given by him for the extraordinary low rate charged on coal is that it was for the benefit of the people of the west. But if he will look through his annual report he will find that only 6,000 tons passed last year over the Intercolonial Railway altogether to the west. In 1886, the amount was 286,000 tons, but that has almost entirely disappeared, and with it has disappeared this reason which the hon. gentleman has given us. Another reason he gave us was that he only charged 60 per cent of the passenger rates charged by the Canadian Pacific Railway and Grand Trunk Railway. Why does he not charge enough ? Why does he not charge the ordinary rates when he finds himself confronted with this deficit of nearly $6,000,000. But instead of doing this, he tells us that as the canals were built by the people's money and have never paid any interest on their cost, we should not expect any better result on the Intercolonial Railway. There is an amount due the government by the Grand Trunk Railway of $35,000,000 and we are expending a large sum for the purpose of building a bridge to connect the old city of Quebec with the south shore. We are also spending large sums deepening the harbour at Quebec and the channel at Montreal—and all this expenditure should be a justification for the enormous deficits on the Intercolonial Railway, and the extravagant management of that road. Is it possible to imagine any practical business man advancing such an argument ? But he also goes on to drag in the expenditure on the Canadian Pacific Railway. Because we gave a large amount of land to the Canadian Pacific Railway and other railways in the Territories, amounting at $1 per acre to $50,000,000, and because the Canadian Pacific Railway and the other railways are selling this land at from $2 to $5 per acre, that is another justification for squandering the public money on the Intercolonial Railway. He was a little nervous when I asked him a question—he tried to avoid it and said he would give an explanation later—as to the amount which the people of old Canada spent for the purpose of having the Grand Trunk Railway, and which amounts to $35,000,000. That is a debt we have against the Grand Trunk Railway, but by legislation we gave it rank it after all other securities which the Grand Trunk Railway has given. However we settled all these things at confederation. We of the upper provinces stated our public debts, and the provinces down by the sea stated theirs; and it was upon a comparison of the debts of the provinces that terms were fixed upon establishing the union. This included the case of the canals to which the hon. gentleman (Mr. Emmerson) has referred. A great portion of the canals had already been built. But, even supposing that $83,000,000 has been spent on the canals as the hon. gentleman said and supposing that we receive no return upon this besides expending money for the working of the canals, what basis of comparison does that afford with the $1,800,000 lost on the Intercolonial, plus $4,000,000 expended upon capital account in one year ? There is no comparison whatever. But, every time the hon. gentleman has discussed this question in the House he refers to this point, and charges the members of the opposition, especially those from the older provinces of Canada, with criticising in a way they have no right to do the enormous sums which are spent in the operation of the Intercolonial. He speaks of the expenditure on the canals. But I notice that, in all his comparisons, he has not said a word about the money expended in St. John and Halifax harbours, or the sums that go to provide wharfs and breakwaters around the shores of the maritime provinces. Sir, it is little short of childish for the hon. minister to attempt thus to justify in this parliament the public scandal of the management of the Intercolonial under his direction. A public scandal such as this is not to be met by such silly comparisons and such silly reasons as the hon. gentleman has given.

Why cannot the Intercolonial be managed in the same way that railways in every other part and portion of the Dominion are managed ? There have been prosperous times in this country for the last ten years. Every other railway but the Intercolonial has prospered and flourished. The receipts of the Intercolonial itself show that in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick the people are flourishing, because those receipts have been increased from something like $3,000,000 almost to $7,000,000. Why is it that, when every other railway is prosperous and flourishing, this particular railway shows a yearly deficit ? As I have said before, the people pay fair freight rates on the Intercolonial. As to the passenger rates, assuming, as I am bound to assume, that the hon. gentleman is right, and that the passenger rates are about 78 per cent of those on the Canadian Pacific Railway and about 60 per cent of those on other roads, why should not increase be made in the Intercolonial rates ? Why should not the people be plainly told that, if they intend to retain this as their most valuable asset for commercial purposes for the section of country it serves, if they intend to keep it from being handed over to a commission or leased or sold to some railway company, the condition of affairs must be changed ? If this cannot be done and if none of the plans that I have suggested are to be adopted, perhaps the whole system might be treated as the Windsor branch has been treated. That has been handed over to others to operate, and we received 23 per cent from it. If the Intercolonial is to be kept in the hands of the government and under government management, then that management must be placed upon a sound and economical basis. Why, the Intercolonial is a laughing stock among railway men. As the hon. gentleman says, they like to see it not prosperous. Let us make a comparison. Two passenger trains a day start from Montreal or Halifax—at least this was the arrangement at one time. Two trains leave Montreal by the Canadian Pacific Railway for St. John, which is on the way to Halifax. And look at the hon. gentleman's statement as to the passengers carried by these roads respectively. Of the nearly 18,000 passengers carried only 1,500 were carried by the Intercolonial Why is it that the Intercolonial cannot get its fair share of the traffic between Halifax and Montreal ? Is it because the men looking after this business are not as capable as those of the Canadian Pacific Railway ? A somewhat similar comparison could be made in every business arrangement to which the Intercolonial is a party. We in this portion of this country most certainly do not object to the Intercolonial being prosperous. Proper management of the Intercolonial would contribute to the prosperity of this part of the Dominion. It was true that the Intercolonial was built in the interest of confederation; it was one of the means designed to bind the provinces of confederation together. The hon. minister has quoted from speeches by Sir Geo. E. Cartier and Sir John Macdonald in 1864. Those speeches show precisely what the object was in building the Intercolonial—to make closer connection between the different parts of the Dominion. I am glad that the hon. gentleman has quoted from these speeches. Evidently the hon. gentleman differs with Sir Richard Cartwright, who states that Sir John Macdonald had nothing to do with confederation, but virtually opposed it. I am glad to have the confirmation afforded by these quotations made by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Emmerson) that Sir John Macdonald was favourable to confederation. The people of this portion of the country were perfectly willing to contribute their share toward the building of the Intercolonial. And, as I have said, and as has been stated again and again by hon. members on this side, the people here were perfectly willing that that expenditure should not be regarded in Jew fashion, insisting that we should receive a certain percentage on the money. What we wanted was and is a fair and equitable balance between the expenditure and the receipts of that road. It is true, as the hon. gentleman stated, that there are other benefits to the country from the Intercolonial than the receipts from the road. But what the people of this country want is an economical management of the road, so that the receipts and expenditures may at least balance.

He reads a letter from Sir Thomas Shaughnessy which he says justifies his charges on capital account on the Intercolonial. Sir, the letter read by him is a complete vindication of the course of the opposition, and justifies our criticism. The hon. gentleman says that the accounts of the Intercolonial are kept according to the rule stated in that letter. Perhaps they are at the present day, but in the past they never were.

I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

INQUIRY FOR RETURN.

Mr. LENNOX. Before the House adjourns, I wish to call the attention of the Postmaster General to the fact that on March 6 last, more than a year ago, an Order of the House was passed for a return of certain correspondence and documents relating to free rural mail delivery, particularly as it exists in the United States. I find that the return has not been brought down, and I now ask that it be brought down.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I might renew my suggestion to the Prime Minister, in view of what has just been stated, that the Secretary of State's Department should prepare a memorandum showing what returns ordered during the past session have not yet been brought down. It would be a great convenience to us, and would prevent some matters being overlooked.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 6 o'clock.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

WEDNESDAY, March 14, 1906.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF THE DEBATES.

Mr. HONORE GERVAIS (Montreal, St. James) presented the first report of the Select Standing Committee to supervise the official report of debates of the House during the present session as follows :

Your committee recommend that their quorum be reduced from eight to five members, all of which is respectfully submitted.

H. GERVAIS,
Chairman.

On the motion of Mr. Gervais, the report was confirmed.

SELECT STANDING COMMITTEES.

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). I have the honour to present the report of the special committee appointed to prepare and report with all convenient speed, lists of members to compose the Select Standing Committees, as follows :

No. 1.—ON PRIVILEGES AND ELECTIONS.

Messieurs :

Alcorn,
Aylesworth,
Barker,
Belcourt,
Bennett,
Bergeron,
Borden (Carleton),
Boyce,
Bristol,
Brodeur,
Bureau,
Carvell,
Chisholm (Antigonish),
Clarke,
Dubeau,
Dugas,
Emmerson,
Fitzpatrick,
Geoffrion,
German,
Gervais,
Grant,
Guthrie,
Haggart,
Hall,
Lancaster,
Lapointe,
Laurence,
Lavergne (Montmagny)
Lemieux,
Lennox,
Lewis,
Logan,
Macdonald,
McCarthy (Simcoe),
McColl,
Monk,
Northrup,
Piche,
Porter,
Pringle,
Rivet,
Sifton,
Stockton,
Tisdale,
Ward.—46.

No. 2.—ON EXPIRING LAWS.

Messieurs :

Archambault,
Avery,
Barr,
Black,
Bland,
Bourbonnais,
Boyer,
Carney,
Chisholm (Huron),
Copp,
Dubeau,
Ethier,
Finlayson,
Gauvreau,
Herron,
Jackson (Elgin),
McCool,
McCraney,
Martin (Queen's,P.E.I.),
Mayrand,
Morin,
Paquet,
Parent,
Seagram,
Talbot,
Turgeon,
Wilson (Russell).—27.

And that the Quorum of the said Committee do consist of Seven Members.

No. 3.—ON RAILWAYS, CANALS AND TELEGRAPH LINES.

Messieurs :

Adamson,
Alcorn,
Ames,
Archambault,
Armstrong,
Avery,
Aylesworth,
Barker,
Barr,
Beauparlant,
Béland,
Belcourt,
Bennett,
Bergeron,
Bickerdike,
Blain,
Bland,
Bole,
Borden,
(Sir Frederick),
Bourassa,
Bourbonnais,
Boyce,
Boyer,
Brabazon,
Bristol,
Broder,
Brodeur,
Brown,
Bruneau,
Bureau,
Burrows,
Caldwell,
Calvert,
Campbell,
Carrier,
Carvell,
Cash,
Chisholm
(Antigonish),
Chisholm (Huron),
Christie,
Clare,
Clarke,
Clements,
Cochrane,
Cockshutt,
Conmee,
Copp,
Costigan,
Crawford,
Crocket,
Daniel,
Delisle,
Demers,
Derbyshire,
Desjardins,
Devlin,
Dubeau,
Dugas,
Dyment,
Elson,
Emmerson,
Ethier,
Fielding,
Finlay,
Finlayson,
Fitzpatrick,
Forget,
Fortier,
Foster,
Fowler,
Galliher,
Ganong,
Gauvreau,
Geoffrion,
German,
Gervais,
Girard,
Gladu,
Gordon,
Grant,
Greenway,
Lancaster,
Lanctôt,
Lapointe,
Laurence,
Laurier,
(L'Assomption),
Lavergne,
(Drum. & Arth.),
Lavergne
(Montmagny), Law,
Lefurgey,
Lemieux,
Lennox,
Léonard,
Lewis,
Logan,
Loggie,
Macdonald,
Macdonell,
MacLaren,
Maclean,
(Lunenburg),
Maclean (York, S.),
Macpherson,
McCarthy
(Calgary),
McCarthy
(Simcoe),
McColl,
McCraney,
McCool,
McIntyre,
McKenzie,
McLean,
(Queen's P.E.I.).
McLennan,
Marcil, (Bonaventure),
Marcile (Bagot),
Martin,
(Queen's, P.E.I.),
Martin
(Wellington),
Mayrand,
Miller,
Monk,
Morin,
Northrup,
Oliver,
Osler,
Pardee,
Parmelee,
Paquet,
Parent,
Perley,
Piché,
Pickup,
Porter,
Power,
Pringle,
Proulx,
Ratz,
Reid (Grenville),
Rivet,
Roche (Halifax),
Roche (Marquette),
Ross Rimouski),
Ross
(Yale-Cariboo),
Rousseau,
Savoie,
Schnaffer,
Schell (Glengarry),
Schell (Oxford),
Sifton,
Sinclair,
Sloan,
Smith (Nanaimo),
Sproule,
Staples,
Stewart,
Stockton,

Gunn,
Guthrie,
Haggart,
Hall,
Harty,
Henderson,
Herron,
Hughes,
(King's, P.E.I.),
Hughes (Victoria),
Hunt,
Hyman,
Ingram,
Jackson (Elgin),
Jackson (Selkirk),
Johnston,
Kemp,
Kennedy,
Knowles,
Lachance,
Lake,
Lalor,
Talbot,
Telford,
Templeman,
Thompson,
Tisdale,
Tobin,
Turgeon,
Turriff,
Verville,
Walsh,
Ward,
Watson,
White,
Wilmot,
Wilson
(Len'x & Addin.),
Wilson (Russell),
Worthington,
Wright (Muskoka),
Wright (Renfrew),
Zimmerman.—194.

And that the Quorum of the said Committee do consist of Twenty-five Members.

No. 4.—ON MISCELLANEOUS PRIVATE BILLS.

Messieurs :

Alcorn,
Ames,
Avery,
Aylesworth,
Béland,
Belcourt,
Bennett,
Black,
Bole,
Boyce,
Brabazon,
Broder,
Brodeur,
Bruneau,
Caldwell,
Calvert,
Chisholm (Antigonish),
Chisholm (Huron),
Christie,
Clements,
Cochrane,
Conmee,
Crawford,
Crocket,
Cyr,
Daniel,
Demers,
Desjardins,
Devlin,
Dugas,
Dyment,
Elson,
Ethier,
Fitzpatrick,
Galliher,
Gauvreau,
Girard,
Gladu,
Gordon,
Greenway,
Gunn,
Guthrie,
Harty,
Hughes (King's, P.E.I.),
Hunt,
Jackson (Elgin),
Jackson (Selkirk),
Kennedy,
Lachance,
Lake,
Lalor,
Lavergne
(Drum. & Arth.),
LeBlanc,
Lemieux,
Logan,
Macdonell,
Maclean (Lunenburg),
Maclean (York S.),
McCool,
McLean,
(Queen's, P.E.I.),
Martin (Queen's,P.E.I.),
Martin (Wellington),
Meigs,
Monk,
Morin,
Parent,
Power,
Pringle,
Proulx,
Ross (Yale-Cariboo),
Schaffner,
Schell (Glengarry),
Sloan,
Talbot,
Thompson,
Tobin,
Turgeon,
Turriff,
Walsh,
White,
Worthington.—81.

And that the Quorum of the said Committee do consist of ten members.

No. 5.—ON STANDING ORDERS.

Messieurs :

Black,
Bourbonnais,
Brabazon,
Brown,
Calvert,
Chisholm (Huron),
Clare,
Clements,
Copp,
Finlay,
Finlayson,
Fortier,
Galliher,
Ganong,
Grant,
Guthrie,
Hall,
Hughes (Victoria),
Ingram,
Knowles,
Lake,
Lancaster,
Laurier (L'Assomption)
Lavergne
(Drummond & Arth.), Lavergne (Montmagny,
Law,
Lefurgey,
Maclean (Lunenburg),
Macpherson,
McCarthy (Calgary),
McIntyre,
Marcile (Bagot),
Martin (Wellington),
Meigs,
Morin,
Reid (Restigouche),
Roche (Halifax),
Ross (Rimouski),
Smith (Nanaimo),
Smith (Oxford),
Staples,
Stewart,
Thompson,
Turgeon,
Verville,
White,
Wilmot,
Wilson
(Lennox & Addington).
Wright (Muskoka),
Wright (Renfrew)—50.

And that the Quorum of the said committee do consist of seven members.

No.6.—JOINT COMMITTEE ON PRINTING.

Messieurs ·

Bergeron,
Bristol,
Cyr,
Dyment,
Gervais,
Henderson,
Hughes (Victoria),
Johnston,
Lavergne (Drummond & Arth.),
Logan,
Maclean (York, South),
Macpherson,
McColl,
Oliver,
Pardee,
Parmelee,
Piché,
Roche (Marquette),
Ross (Yale-Cariboo),
Smith (Oxford),
Smith (Wentworth),
Taylor,
Tisdale,
Verville—24.

(Members to act on the part of the Commons.)

No. 7.—ON PUBLIC ACCOUNTS.

Adamson,
Alcorn,
Ames,
Aylesworth,
Barker,
Belcourt,
Bennett,
Bergeron,
Bickerdike,
Blain,
Borden (Sir Frederick),
Burrows,
Campbell,
Carney,
Cash,
Chisholm (Antigonish),
Clare,
Clarke,
Cochrane,
Cockshutt,
Costigan,
Daniel,
Demers,
Desjardins,
Emmerson,
Fielding,
Fitzpatrick,
Foster,
Geoffrion,
German,
Gervais,
Kemp,
Kennedy,
Knowles,
Lake,
Lancaster,
Lapointe,
Laurence,
Law,
LeBlanc,
Lennox,
Léonard,
Loggie,
Macdonald,
McCarthy (Calgary),
McColl,
McKenzie,
McLean
(Queen's, P.E.I.),
Northrup,
Oliver,
Pardee,
Piché,
Pickup,
Reid (Restigouche),
Rivet,
Roche (Halifax),
Roche (Marquette),
Savoie,
Sifton,
Sinclair,
Sloan,

Greenway,
Haggart,
Hughes (King's, P.E.I.),
Hughes (Victoria),
Hyman,
Ingram,
Jackson (Selkirk),
Smith (Wentworth),
Sproule,
Stewart,
Stockton,
Taylor,
Ward,
Zimmerman.—75.

And that the Quorum of the said committee do consist of twenty-one members.

No. 8.—ON BANKING AND COMMERCE.

Messieurs :

Adamson,
Ames,
Archambault,
Armstrong,
Avery,
Barker,
Barr,
Beauparlant,
Béland,
Belcourt,
Bennett,
Bergeron,
Bickerdike,
Blain,
Bole,
Borden (Sir Frederick),
Borden (Carleton),
Bourassa,
Boyce,
Bristol,
Brown,
Bruneau,
Bureau,
Burrows,
Caldwell,
Calvert,
Campbell,
Carney,
Carrier,
Cash,
Clarke,
Clements,
Cochrane,
Cockshutt,
Conmee,
Copp,
Costigan,
Delisle,
Demers,
Derbyshire,
Dubeau,
Emmerson,
Fielding,
Finlay,
Forget,
Fortier,
Foster,
Fowler,
Galliher,
Ganong,
Gauvreau,
Geoffrion,
Gervais,
Gladu,
Gordon,
Grant,
Gunn,
Guthrie,
Haggart,
Hall,
Harty,
Henderson,
Herron,
Hyman,
Ingram,
Johnston,
Kemp,
Lake,
Lalor,
Lanctôt,
Laurier (Sir Wilfrid),
Lavergne (Drummond & Arth),
Law,
Lefurgey,
Lemieux,
Lewis,
Logan,
Loggie,
Lovell,
Macdonell,
Maclean (York, O.)
McCarthy (Calgary),
McCarthy (Simcoe),
McIntyre,
McKenzie,
McLennan,
Marcil (Bonaventure),
Mayrand,
Miller,
Monk,
Morin,
Osler,
Pardee,
Parmelee,
Paterson,
Perley,
Pickup,
Porter,
Power,
Ratz,
Reid (Grenville),
Reid (Restigouche),
Roche (Halifax),
Ross (Rimouski),
Rousseau,
Savoie,
Schell (Glengarry),
Sifton,
Sinclair,
Smith (Wentworth),
Sproule,
Stewart,
Stockton,
Talbot,
Taylor,
Telford,
Thompson,
Tisdale,
Tobin,
Verville,
Ward,
Wilmot,
Wilson,
(Lennox & Addington),
Worthingham,
Hughes (King's, P.E.I.),
Hughes (Victoria),
Wright (Renfrew),
Zimmerman.—128.

And that the Quorum of the said committee do consist of twenty-one members.

No. 9.—AGRICULTURE AND COLONIZATION.

Messieurs :

Adamson,
Archambault,
Armstrong,
Barr,
Beauparlant,
Béland,
Black,
Blain,
Bland,
Bourassa,
Bourbonnais,
Boyer,
Brabazon,
Broder,
Brown,
Bureau,
Burrows,
Caldwell,
Calvert,
Carrier,
Carvell,
Cash,
Chisholm (Antigonish),
Chisholm (Huron),
Christie,
Clare,
Clarke,
Clements,
Cochrane,
Conmee,
Copp,
Crawford,
Crocket,
Cyr,
Delisle,
Derbyshire,
Desjardins,
Devlin,
Dugas,
Elson,
Ethier,
Finlay,
Fisher,
Gauvreau,
Girard,
Gordon,
Greenway,
Gunn,
Henderson,
Herron,
Hughes (King's, P.E.I.)
Hughes (Victoria)
Hunt,
Ingram,
Jackson (Elgin)
Jackson (Selkirk)
Kennedy,
Knowles,
Lachance,
Lake,
Lalor,
Lanctôt,
Laurence,
Laurier (L'Assomption)
Lavergne (Drummond & Arth.)
LeBlanc,
Lennox,
Léonard,
Lewis,
Lovell,
Macdonald,
MacLaren,
McColl,
McCool,
McCraney,
McIntyre,
McKenzie,
McLean (Queen's, P.E.I.),
McLennan,
Marcile (Bagot),
Martin (Queen's, P.E.I.),
Martin (Wellington),
Meigs,
Miller,
Monk,
Morin,
Oliver,
Paquet,
Parent,
Pickup,
Proulx,
Ratz,
Reid (Grenville),
Roche (Marquette),
Ross (Rimouski),
Ross (Yale-Cariboo),
Rousseau,
Savoie,
Schaffner,
Schell (Glengarry),
Schell (Oxford),
Seagram,
Sinclair,
Smith (Nanaimo),
Smith (Oxford),
Smith (Wentworth),
Sproule,
Staples,
Talbot,
Taylor,
Telford,
Thompson,
Turgeon,
Turiff,
Walsh,
Watson,
Wilmot,
Wilson,
(Lennox & Addington),
Wilson (Russell),
Worthington,
Wright (Muskoka),
Wright (Renfrew).—122.

And that the Quorum of the said committee do consist of eight members.

LIBRARY COMMITTEE.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER moved :

That a select committee composed of Messrs. Bourassa, Bristol, Brodeur, Calvert, Demers, Pardee, Hyman, Laurier (Sir Wilfrid), Knowles, Grant, Smith (Nanaimo), Foster, Bergeron, Stockton and Monk, be appointed to assist Mr. Speaker in the direction of the library of parliament so far as the interests of this House are concerned and to act as members of a joint committee of both Houses on the library ; and that a message be sent to the Senate to acquaint their honours herewith.

Motion agreed to.

PRINTING COMMITTEE.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER moved :

That a message be sent to the Senate to acquaint their honours that this House will unite with them in the formation of a joint committee of both Houses on the subject of the Printing of Parliament, and that the members of the select standing committee, viz.: Messrs. Bergeron, Bristol, Cyr, Dyment, Gervais, Henderson, Hughes (Victoria), Johnston, Lavergne (Drummond and Arthabaska), Logan, Maclean (York, South), McColl, Macpherson, Oliver, Pardee, Parmelee, Piché, Roche (Marquette), Ross (Yale-Cariboo), Smith (Oxford), Smith (Wentworth), Taylor, Tisdale and Verville will act as members, on the part of this House, on the said Joint Committee on the Printing of Parliament.

Motion agreed to.

REPORT PRESENTED.

Auditor General's Report, for the year ending June 30, 1905. Volume 3.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

FIRST READING.

Bill (No. 14) to amend the Weights and Measures Act.—Mr. Campbell.

QUESTIONS.

QU'APPELLE, LONG LAKE AND SASKATCHEWAN RAILROAD CO.—LAND GRANT.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN asked :

1. Did the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan Railroad and Steamboat Company become entitled to receive or select any public lands under any and what statute, or under and what contract with the government?

2. To what quantity did it become entitled?

3. What area of land was reserved in the first instance out of which the company was to select its grant?

4. What were the boundaries of such area?

5. Did the company dispose of its land grant or any and what portion thereof to any corporation person or persons? If so, when and to whom and upon what terms and under what agreement ?

6. If the company's land grant, or some portion thereof, was so disposed of, did the company in making such disposition assign or convey to the purchaser any particular area of land or land to be selected within some particular area, or did it assign or convey to the purchaser simply its claim against the government in respect of the whole or some portion of its land grant ; or how otherwise did it make the said disposition ?

7. Was the area for the selection of any and what portion of the company's land grant afterwards altered, changed or enlarged in any way?

8. Was the area for the selection of the land so disposed of by the company altered, changed or enlarged by order in council or otherwise ?

9. If so, at what date, by what instrument, to what extent and in what respect was any such change, enlargement or alteration made?

10. How long was this after the company had made the disposition of its land grant above referred to?

11. If any such change, enlargement or alteration in the area aforesaid was made by order in council passed in August, 1902, or thereabouts, on whose recommendation and at whose request, for what reason and upon what grounds was the said order in council passed ?

12. When was the passing of such order in council first communicated to the said company?

13. Is the said company indebted to the government? If so, in what sums for principal and of interest respectively, and under what instrument or authority was such indebtedness created ?

14. Does the government hold any and what security for such indebtedness? If so, what is the nature of the security, and what its estimated value?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). As the question involves a great deal of labour, I would like to have it stand.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The hon. gentleman will remember that I gave notice of this question some time before the House opened in order that there might not be any delay in obtaining the answer. I trust that some diligence will be exercised.

Mr. OLIVER. I assure the hon. gentleman that there will be no serious delay.

WRECKS ON THE ST. LAWRENCE.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN asked :

1. How many wrecks occurred in the River and Gulf of St. Lawrence during the season of 1905 ?

2. How many of said wrecks resulted in total loss of ship and cargo, or either ?

3. To what cause was each of the said wrecks due ?

4. What is the value of the property lost or destroyed by reason of said wrecks ?

Hon. SIDNEY FISHER (for the Minister of Marine) :

1. 18.
2. 1.
3. (a) stranding, 13 ; (b) collision, 5.
4. Reported value according to wreck returns received in Department of Marine and Fisheries for 4 wrecks, $47,000. In the other cases the value is not given in the returns received.

TEMPORARY GOVERNMENT LOANS.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN asked :

1. What amount of temporary loans contracted by the government was outstanding on March 1, 1896 ?
2. What is the average rate of interest payable thereon ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) :

1. The amount of temporary loans outstanding March 1, 1906, was £1,400,000. Of this amount £600,000 was borrowed September 28 and bears interest at the rate of 3½ per cent per annum, £800,000 was borrowed on November 1, 1905 for the purpose of redeeming debt then falling due.
2. The rate of interest was 3⅞ per cent per annum. The average rate of interest on the two transactions is 3·52.

CUSTOMS RECEIPTS PORT STANLEY, PORT BRUCE AND PORT BURWELL.

Mr. INGRAM asked :

1. What were the receipts from customs collected at Port Stanley for each year since June 30, 1896 ?
2. What were the receipts from customs collected at Port Bruce for each year since June 30, 1896 ?
3. What were the receipts from customs collected at Port Burwell for each year since 1896?

Hon. WILLIAM PATTERSON (Minister of Customs). The following were the Customs receipts at these ports during the periods stated, viz. :

—	Port Stanley.	Port Bruce.	Port Burwell.
	$ cts.		$ cts.
1896-97	1,886 55	Nil.	304 73
1897-98	4,496 87	Nil.	393 70
1898-99	6,236 63	Nil.	688 30
1899-1900	8,095 22	Nil.	1,003 30
1900-01	9,038 65	Nil.	1,878 46
1901-02	2,230 99	Nil.	1,442 88
1902-03	39,178 03	Nil.	1,813 14
1903-04	36,326 24	Nil.	2,533 75
1904-05	25,669 93	Office closed Feb. 1905.	1,395 35

PORT STANLEY HARBOUR WORKS.

Mr. INGRAM asked :

1. Have all persons employed on the harbour works at Port Stanley been paid ? If not, why not?
2. If any unpaid balance is due any of them, how long since has said unpaid balance been due ?
3. What are the names and the respective amounts ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works). So far as the department is aware, all pay sheets for services have been paid, the cheque for the last one having been sent on the 15th ultimo.

MR. W. T. R. PRESTON.

Mr. URIAH WILSON asked :

1. Did W. T. R. Preston, Dominion Commissioner of Immigration at London, England, visit Canada late in December, 1905, or early in January, 1906, on official business ?
2. Did the government send for Mr. Preston?
3. Did Mr. Preston ask leave to visit Canada?
4. Is Mr. W. T. R. Preston, Dominion Commissioner of Immigration at London, England, an official subordinate to the Canadian High Commissioner in London, England, or not ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

1. Yes.
2. Yes.
3. No.
4. Yes.

OIL SUPPLIED INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY BY NEW BRUNSWICK PETROLEUM COMPANY.

Mr. BARKER asked:

1. How many carloads of oil were sold in 1905 by the New Brunswick Petroleum Company to the government for the government railways?
2. What was the total quantity of oil, if any, sold in 1905 by the said company to the government for the said railways, and what was the price ?
3. What quantity of oil, if any, was shipped by the said company to the government from Memramcook to Moncton or elsewhere in each month of the year 1905 ?

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (Minister of Railways and Canals):

1. Six carloads and 168 barrels of crude oil were purchased from New Brunswick Petroleum Company during the year 1905 for the Intercolonial Railway.
2. 43,824 gallons, and the price paid was ten cents per gallon delivered at Memramcook.
3. January, nil; February, 7,926 gallons; March, Nil; April, 6,996 gallons; May, 889 gallons; June, 7,075 gallons; July, 6,129 gallons; August, 949 gallons; September, 6,129 gallons; October, 953 gallons; November, 6,338 gallons; December, 440 gallons.

No business was done by the Prince Edward Island Railway with the above company.

EASTERN RAILWAY SUPPLY COMPANY.

Mr. BARKER asked:

1. What, if any, contracts or dealings has the Eastern Railway Supply Company, as principal or otherwise, had with the government since the first day of July, 1902, for sale or supply to the government railways, of belting, water hose, hardware, varnish, fencing wire, or other railway supplies; and has said company, as commission agent or otherwise, supplied any such stores or supplies to such railways since said date?

2. What were the dates and values of such contracts, dealings or arrangements, if any, and for what periods were they made?

3. What sums, if any, have been paid to said company or their principals by the government for the several years from the date aforesaid till the 31st December, 1905?

4. Is said company incorporated? If so, how and where?

5. If not incorporated, what are the names, residence and occupations of the persons forming the company?

6. Where is the principal office of said company?

7. What are the names, residence and occupation of its president and secretary, respectively?

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (Minister of Railways and Canals):

As to questions 1, 2 and 3, the information is too voluminous to answer in the form of an inquiry, and as the hon. gentleman has moved for an Order covering it, there will be no unnecessary delay in bringing the papers down.

4. The department is informed; but not officially, that the company is incorporated under the laws of the Colony of Newfoundland.

5. No. 4 answers this.

6. Halifax, Nova Scotia, so far as the department can ascertain.

7. The name of the president is to the department unknown, but reference to tenders shows that F. Fred. Pearson, of Halifax, signs on behalf of company as secretary.

HOG PLAGUE.

Mr. CLEMENTS asked:

1. What townships in West Kent and East Kent are under quarantine in respect to the hog plague?

2. How long has each of said townships been so quarantined, and how many cases of said disease have been reported in each of said townships during the past year, and what is the name of the township and place in each instance?

3. What government officials or veterinary surgeons are employed in each of said townships at the present time, and what is the salary and detailed expense of each of said officials or veterinary surgeons employed in respect of the said plague?

4. What amount has been paid by the government for the past year in respect of said quarantine?

Hon. SYDNEY FISHER (Minister of Agriculture):

1. Tilbury East, Raleigh, East Dover, West Dover, Chatham, Harwich, Camden, Howard.

2. Tilbury East, Raleigh, East Dover, West Dover, Chatham and Harwich were quarantined on October 22, 1902, Camden and Howard being added on May 1, 1905.

Camden was originally quarantined with the other townships on October 22, 1902, but had been released on November 25 of the same year.

141 hogs were reported and killed in Harwich and 13 distributed as follows:

Harwich:

April 7, lot 24, con. 3	36
April 6, lot 20, con. 2	45
October 24, lot 20, con. 2	60

Chatham:

Sept. 25, lot 20, con. 3	13
	154

3. There are no government officers or veterinary surgeons employed in any of the said townships solely. There are four inpectors employed for a larger area, in which said townships are included, who inspect carloads of hogs going out for immediate slaughter. Their names, and the amounts paid them during the past calendar year, are as follows:

W. Clapp, services and expenses from May to Dec.	$ 77 85
H. W. Fry, inspection fees, May 16 to Dec. 31	175 00
R. C. Coates, inspection fees, May 13 to Dec. 31	294 24
Henry Boyd, inspection fees, May 22 to Dec. 31	390 55

There are also four veterinary inspectors appointed under the Animal Contagious Diseases Act, 1903, whose services are, in addition to other places, available and rendered in said townships. But these four inspectors deal not only with hog cholera, but with all other diseases coming under the said Act. Their names, and the total amounts paid them respectively during the past calendar year, are as follows:

J. R. Thorne, expenses, May 4 to July 17	$ 3 73
J. R. Thorne, salary one year	250 00
	$253 73
M. B. Perdue, expenses, Jan. 2 to Dec. 31	366 19
M. B. Perdue, salary one year	1,400 00
	$1,766 19
J. Kime, jr., expenses, March to October	56 93
J. Kime, jr., salary one year	250 00
	$306 93

W. B. Rowe, expenses, Feb. 9 to Dec. 31.. .. .. $ 54 46
W. B. Rowe, salary one year.. .. 250 00

$304 46

4. During the past year, the sum of $714.64 was paid in compensation for hogs destroyed on account of hog cholera in the said townships.

BUTT AND LAP WELDED PIPING.

Mr. CLEMENTS asked.

1. What is the duty on butt and lap welded piping and tubing imported into Canada from the United States ?
2. What amount of the same was imported last year ?
3. Is it the intention of the government to make any change in the duty in the near future on above piping ?
4. If so, is it the intention to increase or to decrease the duty ?

Hon. WM. PATERSON (Minister of Customs).

1. The duty on butt and lap welded tubing from the United States is as follows :—

(a). Two inches or less in diameter 35 per cent ad valorem ;

(b). Over two inches in diameter 15 per cent ad valorem ;

(c). Not less than 2½ inches in diameter, when imported for mining purposes, free.

2. Dutiable tubing imported from United States for fiscal year ended June 30, 1905 was as follows :—

2 inches or less in diameter ..$ 69,270
Over 2 inches in diameter 473,628

The amount of free tubing for mining purposes is not classified by itself in the statistical returns.

3 and 4. It is not usual for the government to announce intended tariff changes in advance.

RIVER THAMES SURVEY.

Mr. CLEMENTS asked :

1. Has the River Thames been surveyed from Lake St. Clair to the city of Chatham, with a view of deepening the channel to fifteen feet ?
2. When was the said survey made ?
3. What was the result of the said survey ?
4. Does the government intend to improve the channel of the said river in accordance with the information afforded by said survey ?
5. When will the improvement be made ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works) :

1. Yes.

2. In September, October and November, 1904.

3. Report is dated 2nd February, 1905, and if mover desires production of same, a copy will be brought down.

THAMES DREDGING.

Mr. CLEMENTS asked :

1. Is the government aware of the immediate necessity for dredging the channel at the mouth of the River Thames, in the province of Ontario ?
2. Has the attention of the government been directed to the necessity for this dredging ?
3. Is the government aware that the city of Chatham and the adjoining district are suffering very great loss by reason of the filling in of the said channel ?
4. Is it the intention of the government to put the said channel in a navigable condition at an early date ?
5. If so, when will the work be commenced ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works). 1. Representations have been made and received, and it is the intention of the department to attend to the question of improvements during the next season.

RAW LEAF TOBACCO.

Mr. CLEMENTS asked :

1. Is it the intention of the government to increase the duty on raw leaf tobacco imported into Canada ?
2. What amount of raw leaf tobacco was imported into Canada from the commencement of last year ?

Hon. WM. PATERSON (Minister of Customs):

1. It is not usual for the government to announce particulars of tariff changes in advance.

2. The amount of unmanufactured tobacco imported into Canada for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1905 was 14,707,457 lbs.

WIRE FENCING.

Mr. CLEMENTS asked :

1. Is there any inspection by officers of the government of wire fencing imported into Canada ?
2. Does such inspection, if any, show quality, grade, &c., of such wire fencing ?

Hon. WM. PATERSON (Minister of Customs) :

1. Customs officers make inspection of wire fencing on importation into Canada, for the purpose of determining its tariff rating and its valuation for duty purposes.

2. The Customs inspection does not relate to quality and grade of fencing, further than to compare the fencing with the descriptions on invoice and appraise the value of the goods and classify same for duty purposes.

HOGS IMPORTED AND SLAUGHTERED FOR EXPORT.

Mr. SPROULE—by Mr. Sam Hughes—asked:

1. What was the number of hogs brought into Canada from the United States to be slaughtered for exportation, during the years 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904 and 1905 ?

2. What was the number of pounds of meat imported for home consumption, and also for export, if any, distinguishing fresh from cured meats, during the years 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904 and 1905 ?

Hon. WILLIAM PATERSON (Minister of Customs). 1. A special compilation requiring some time would be necessary to ascertain the number of hogs imported, to be slaughtered for exportation. The total weight and value of hogs imported, however, were as follows :—

Fiscal Year.	Lbs.	Value.
		$
1901	144,678	8,091
1902	116,366	6,812
1903	19,745	1,626
1904	135,459	7,317
1905	5,334,859	329,078

With reference to the second question, I have the answer with me, but it is a mass of figures and would occupy a long time in the reading. Perhaps it would be more convenient if it were moved for as a return. Still, if the House would rather, I will give it now.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Considered as read.

Mr. SAM HUGHES. I presume that if the minister will allow the mover of the motion to have access to the documents, that is all he wants.

Hon. GEORGE E. FOSTER. Read the first one and the last one.

Mr. PATERSON. I will hand it to the hon. member (Mr. Sproule). We might consider the question as answered—the first part having been answered, and the second might be dropped.

EXPENDITURE ON IMMIGRATION.

Mr. SPROULE—by Mr. Sam Hughes—asked:

1. What was the amount spent for promoting and carrying on immigration work in every line during the years 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904, and 1905, distinguishing the cost of the work in connection with the immigration from the United States and that from European and Continental countries ?

2. What assistance, if any, is given to steamship companies, booking agencies, corporations or associations, religious or charitable, or otherwise, for bringing immigrants to Canada distinguishing the difference in the amount paid for adults and children ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior).

1. The following figures give the answer to this question :—

Fiscal Year.	The total amount spent in promoting and carrying on Immigration for five years ended June 30, 1905 was	The approximate amount spent in promoting Immigration from the United States was	The approximate amount spent in promoting Immigration from Great Britain and Ireland was	The approximate amount spent in promoting Immigration from the Continent of Europe and Iceland was
	$ cts.	$	$	$
1900-1901.	444,729 63	144,000	110,000	43,000
1901-1902..	484,841 55	178,000	121,000	58,000
1902-1903..	642,913 74	161,000	205,000	60,000
1903-1904..	744,788 50	205,000	236,000	78,000
1904-1905..	972,356 69	318,000	198,000	130,000

2. Booking agents, &c., in Great Britain receive a bonus on tickets sold to farmers, farm labourers, domestic servants, and persons intending to follow those occupations in Canada, coming here for the first time. The bonus is 7 shillings on those over 12 years of age and 3s. 6d. on those between one and 12 years of age.

The Salvation Army receive a bonus on the classes mentioned above of 12s. on adults and 6s. on those between one and 12 years of age. They also receive a grant of £20 per month to augment their immigration fund in Great Britain, a grant of $2,000 for 1905-6 as contribution towards the expense entailed in conducting lectures on Canada in Great Britain, a grant of $1,000 for the fiscal year 1905-6 and a further grant of $1,000 for the calendar year 1906 to assist in their work of placing immigrants after arrival in Canada.

The British Women's Emigration Society. The Women's Domestic and Business Guild of Canada, receive a bonus of $3 on each domestic servant brought to Canada.

A bonus of $2 per capita is paid various philanthropic societies sending to Canada children who have not been inmates of reformatories, industrial schools, workhouses, penitentiaries, prisons or other public institutions of a similar character.

A payment of £1 per ticket and 10s. per half ticket is made to ss. companies bringing immigrants from Iceland to Canada, the cost of the ticket to the immigrant being reduced by that amount.

In the United States sub-agents receive a bonus of $3 for adult males, $2 for adult females and $1 for children under 18 years of age sent by them to Canada to engage in agricultural work.

A bonus is paid to the North Atlantic Trading Company of £1 on every man, woman and child of the agricultural class and on every domestic over 18 years of age, coming to Canada from Holland, Denmark, Russia, Germany, Austria, Hungary, Luxemburg, Norway, Sweden, Finland, and Switzerland, providing the company carries on an active emigration propaganda by advertisements in the public press, publication and distribution of pamphlets and personal canvass in the agricultural districts of the countries named, expending annually thereon not less than $15,000. No bonus is paid on any immigrant not mentally and physically fit or who is a criminal, or has a criminal record, and any expense incurred in having such persons cared for or deported is to be charged against the account of the company. The payment of bonuses on settlers from Galicia, Bukowinia and Poland, excepting Germans, is limited to 5,000 persons per year. The government makes a grant of £750 a year to the company for special work in Norway, Sweden and Finland, providing the company expends a further sum of £1,000 per year on the same special work. The company has deposited with the government £1,000 as a guarantee of good faith and security for the due fulfilment of their terms of the contract, said amount to bear interest at the rate of 3 per cent per annum.

MALLEIN TESTS FOR GLANDERS.

Mr. SPROULE—by Mr. Sam. Hughes—asked:

1. How many mallein tests have been made for glanders in horses during the year 1905, specifying the number in each province?
2. How many of those tested have been destroyed, and what compensation, if any, has been paid for them?
3. Does the Department of Agriculture consider the mallein test reliable as a means of diagnosis?

Hon. SYDNEY FISHER (Minister of Agriculture):

1. During the year ending October 31, 1905, the departmental year, the following mallein tests were applied:

Quebec	411
Ontario	181
Manitoba	1,414
Northwest Territories	2,714
British Columbia	164
Yukon	15
	4,899

2.

Province.	Tested and destroyed.	Destroyed on inspection.	Total compensation paid.
			$ cts.
Quebec	254	65	23,091 06
Ontario	77	7	5,672 50
Manitoba	591	70	52,776 66
N. W. Territories	829	113	59,308 00
British Columbia	95	3	6,303 20
Yukon	8	1	700 00
	1,854	259	147,851 42

3. Yes.

IMMIGRATION IN LAST FIVE YEARS.

Mr. SPROULE—by Mr. Sam. Hughes—asked:

1. How many immigrants have been deported during the years 1903, 1904 and 1905, on account of being diseased, or physically or mentally unsuited for maintaining themselves without becoming a burden on charity?
2. What was the number of immigrants who arrived and settled in Canada during the years 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904 and 1905, specifying the countries from which they came?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior): 1. The number of immigrants deported was:

For the fiscal year 1902-03	340
" " " 1903-04	359
" " " 1904-05	697
Total	1,396

2. The number of immigrants who arrived and settled in Canada during the years 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904 and 1905, specifying the countries from which they came, is given in the table attached.

IMMIGRATION BY NATIONALITIES

During the Fiscal Years 1900-1901 to 1904-1905.

Nationality.	1900-01.	1901-02.	1902-03.	1903-04.	1904-05.	Totals.
English and Welsh	9,401	13,095	32,510	36,694	49,617	141,317
Scotch	1,476	2,853	7,046	10,552	11,744	33,671
Irish	933	1,311	2,236	3,128	3,998	11,606
Total British	11,810	17,259	41 792	50,374	65,359	186,594

IMMIGRATION BY NATIONALITIES—Continued.

During the Fiscal Years 1900-1901 to 1904-1905.

Nationality.	1900-01.	1901-02.	1902-03.	1903-04.	1904-05.	Totals.
South African	.....	.....	.....	21	35	56
Australian	3	11	46	58	204	322
Austrian	228	320	781	516	837	2,682
Bohemian	9	3	16	91	107	226
Buckowinian	128	550	1,759	1,578	1,123	5,138
Croatian	65	59	1	16	27	168
Dalmatian	.....	.....	.....	.....	4	4
Galician	4,702	6,550	8,382	7,729	6,926	34,289
Hungarian	546	1,048	2,074	1,091	981	5,740
Magyar	.....	.....	.....	.....	5	5
Ruthenian	.....	.....	.....	.....	3	3
Slovak	14	27	82	116	47	286
Styrian	.....	.....	.....	.....	29	29
Belgian	132	223	303	858	796	2,312
Brazilian	.....	.....	.....	2	1	3
Chinese	7	2	.....	.....	.....	9
Bulgarian	.....	1	7	14	2	24
Dutch	25	35	223	169	281	733
French	360	431	937	1,534	1,743	5,005
German	984	1,048	1,869	2,966	2,721	9,588
Prussian	.....	.....	5	11	28	44
Saxon	.....	.....	13	8	10	31
West Indian	.....	.....	17	52	69	138
Bermudian	.....	.....	6	3	8	17
Greek	81	161	193	191	98	724
Hebrew	2,765	1,015	2,066	3,727	7,715	17,288
Italian	4,710	3,828	3,371	4,445	3,473	19,827
Japanese	6	.....	.....	.....	354	360
Newfoundlanders	.....	.....	335	519	190	1,044
New Zealanders	.....	.....	2	23	57	82
Portuguese	.....	.....	.....	.....	1	1
Polish	162	230	274	669	745	2,080
Persian	.....	1	40	5	8	54
Roumanian	152	272	437	619	270	1,750
Moldavian	.....	279	1	.....	.....	280
Russian	1,044	2,467	5,505	1,955	1,887	12,858
Finnish	682	1,292	1,734	845	1,323	5,876
Doukhobors	.....	12	.....	.....	24	36
Mennonites	.....	52	38	11	.....	101
Spanish	14	1	7	5	10	37
Swiss	30	17	73	128	150	398
Servian	23	.....	2	10	7	42
Danish	88	163	308	417	461	1,437
Icelandic	912	260	917	396	413	2,898
Swedish	485	1,013	2,477	2,151	1,847	7,973
Norwegian	265	1,015	1,746	1,239	1,397	5,662
Turks	37	17	43	29	30	156
Armenian	62	112	113	81	78	446
Egyptian	1	3	1	3	2	10
Syrian	464	1,066	847	369	630	3,376
Arabian	98	70	46	58	48	320
U. S. citizens via ocean ports	68	73	.....	.....	.....	141
Maltese	.....	.....	2	.....	.....	2
Malay	.....	5	.....	.....	.....	5
Negro	.....	.....	.....	.....	5	5
India	.....	.....	.....	.....	45	45
Total continental, &c.	19,352	23,732	37,099	34,728	37,255	152,166
United States	17,987	26,388	49,473	45,229	43,652	182,729
Total immigration	49,149	67,379	128,364	130,331	146,266	521,489

PARTICIPATION OF JUDGES IN BUSINESS.

Mr. SPROULE—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. Has the attention of the government been directed to the statements in the public press that the statutory provisions prohibiing judges from acting as directors, or otherwise engaging in outside business, are being disregarded ?
2. Has the government taken any steps to ascertain whether such statements are correct?
3. What opinion has the government on the subject ?

Hon. CHARLES FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice) :

1. Yes.
2. No particular complaints have been addressed to the department against any judge, but the government has under consideration the expediency of introducing further legislation to provide a sanction for section 7, 4 and 5 E. VII, chapter 31.
3. The government is of the opinion that the judges ought to obey the Act of parliament. I have no authority under the rules of the House to have an opinion, on a subject of that sort, but if I had an opinion it would be that the judges ought to conform to the law.

EMBARGO ON CANADIAN CATTLE.

Mr. SPROULE—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. Have any representations been made since January 1, 1906, to Imperial government, asking for the repeal of the embargo on Canadian cattle exported to Great Britain ?
2. If so, what is the nature of such representations ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). No representations have been made.

THE SALE OF PATENT MEDICINES.

Mr. SPROULE—by Mr. Taylor—asked:

1. Has the government taken into consideration the question of preventing or controlling by legislative enactment, advertisement and sale of patent medicines containing dangerous or harmful drugs or ingredients ?
2. Does the government intend to deal with the question ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). It is under consideration.

DISMISSAL OF DETECTIVE SKEFFINGTON.

Mr. DANIEL asked :

1. Has detective Skeffington been dismissed from the service of the government ?
2. What was the cause of his dismissal ?
3. Was an inquiry held, and had he an opportunity of making his defence ?
4. Shortly before his dismissal did he make any report as to irregularities or malfeasance by any employee of the government on the Intercolonial Railway ?
5. What was the nature of such report ?
6. Has the government taken any, and if so, what, action on his report ?

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (Minister of Railways and Canals):

Mr. OLIVER.

1. Yes, his services were dispensed with.
2. His duties were not performed in a satisfactory manner, and a change was considered necessary for the benefit of the service.
3. An inquiry was not considered necessary.
4. Yes, he brought some charges against some of the officials in connection with appropriating government postage stamps.
5. Yes, the government took action by sending down to Moncton the assistant law clerk of the department to hold an investigation into the charges. The information disclosed by his report showed that the existing practice was of such a nature as to render it practically impossible to keep a proper check on the use of stamps, and the result was that the system was entirely reorganized. There were no doubt irregularities; but they could not be brought home to any of the officials.

THE DEFENCE OF ESQUIMALT.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. Has the government taken over the defence of Esquimalt ?
2. What permanent force is in the Canadian service at that place ?
3. How many officers, non-commissioned officers and men compose the force ?
4. Of these, how many have been taken over from the Imperial garrison, how many from the Canadian permanent force, and how many recruited ?
5. What will be the annual cost of maintaining this garrison ?
6. Is it proposed to increase or diminish the force ?
7. What sum if any does the government propose to spend in armament at Esquimalt in the immediate future ?

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (for Minister of Militia and Defence):

1. Not yet, Canada is, however, paying the full cost of maintenance during current year.
2, 3, 4. None.
5. About $100,000 per annum.
6. Not at present.
7. No expenditure will be necessary.

THE DEFENCE OF HALIFAX.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. Has the government taken over the defence of Halifax ?
2. What permanent force is in the Canadian service at that place ?
3. How many officers, non-commissioned officers and men compose the force ?
4. Of these, how many have been taken over from the Imperial garrison, how many from the Canadian permanent force, and how many recruited ?
5. What will be the annual cost of maintaining this garrison ?
6. Is it proposed to increase or diminish the force ?

7. What sum, if any, does the government propose to spend in armament at Halifax in the immediate future ?

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (for Minister of Militia and Defence):

1. Yes.

2. Staff, Nos. 1 and 2 companies, Royal Canadian Garrison Artillery; one company, Royal Canadian Engineers; headquarters and Nos. 1 to 6 companies, Royal Canadian Regiment; No. 9 section, Ordnance Stores Corps; No. 4 detachment, Canadian Permanent Army Service Corps; detachment Permanent Army Medical Corps.

3. Forty-three officers; 1,117 non-commissioned officers and men.

4. 149 were taken over from the imperial garrison; 1,112 either belonged to the permanent corps, or were recruited subsequently to the decision to take over the garrison. The number under each heading cannot be accurately ascertained without obtaining returns from the several stations of the permanent corps.

5. $800,000 approximately.

6. There is no present intention of increasing or diminishing the forces at Halifax.

7. No expenditure necessary.

SALVATION ARMY IMMIGRANTS.

Mr. URIAH WILSON asked :

1. How many immigrants did the Salvation Army bring to Canada in the year ending June 30, 1905, and from July 1, 1905, to March 1, 1906, respectively ?

2. Where were they located, and were they located in colonies by themselves, or were they distributed ?

3. What sum did the government pay per head to the Salvation Army for bringing out these immigrants ?

4. What arrangements has the government made with the Salvation Army for bringing immigrants to Canada ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

1. Year ending June 30, 1905—3,097 persons. July 1, 1905 to March 1, 1906—702 persons.

2. They were not located in colonies but were distributed throughout the Dominion.

3. The government paid a bonus on farmers, farm labourers and domestic servants and persons intending to follow those occupations in Canada, of twelve shillings on those over twelve years of age and six shillings on those between one and twelve years of age.

4. The arrangements with the Salvation Army are :

(1). To pay bonuses as stated in answer to question 3.

(2.) To pay Salvation Army £20 per month to augment its fund for immigration work, the army to advertise Canada in its papers.

(3). To pay the Salvation Army $2,000 towards the expenses of a lecturing tour in Great Britain.

(4). To pay the Salvation Army for fiscal year 1905-06, $1,000 as a grant towards looking after immigrants after arrival.

(5). To pay the Salvation Army a further grant of $1,000 for calendar year 1906 in connection with looking after immigrants after their arrival in Canada.

LEASE OF J. W. WOODS BUILDING, OTTAWA.

Mr. INGRAM asked :

1. What portion of the Woods building on Slater street, in the city of Ottawa, is occupied by the Militia Department ?

2. How many rooms are there in the building, and what number or proportion of the rooms does the Department of Militia occupy ?

3. What rental does the government pay for the rooms it occupies ?

4. What is the length of the lease ?

5. Do any other government departments occupy any portion of the Woods building ? If so, how many, at what rent, and on what terms?

6. What information has the government as to the cost of the building ?

7. What is the assessed value of the said building for taxes ?

8. Are any taxes paid on the said buildings to the city of Ottawa ? If so, what amount yearly ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works) :

1. The east half and the top floor of the west half.

2. 107 rooms. The Department of Militia occupy at present 58 rooms.

3. 36 cents per square foot, or about $12,500.

4. Lease for ten years from the year 1903.

5. The Department of the Interior (the Geographers Branch) occupy two floors, containing ten rooms, at the rental above given, 36 cents per square foot.

6. No information.

7. $115,000.

8. The minister intends to abide by the statement made by him to the House in February, 1905, with reference to all new leases to be made under his control, whereby the city of Ottawa will receive taxes on property leased by the government. The arrangements for the leasing of the building above referred to were made prior to that statement.

CAVALRY DEPOT AT FREDERICTON, N.B.

Mr. CROCKET asked :

1. Is it the intention of the Militia Department to establish a cavalry depot at Fredericton, N.B., during the present year ?

2. If not, is it intended to re-establish No. 4 Company, R.R.C.I., which was removed from Fredericton to Halifax last year ?

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (for Minister of Militia and Defence) :

1. No.

2. Not at present.

BUILDINGS LEASED IN OTTAWA.

Mr. TAYLOR asked :

1. What buildings, rooms or apartments, other than those owned by the government, are occupied by each department of the government in the city of Ottawa ?

2. What rental does each department pay for such buildings, rooms or appartments in each case ?

3. To whom is the rent payable for and in respect of each such building, room or apartment ?

4. What is the term of the lease under which the government occupies each such building, room or apartment ?

5. What is the assessed value for taxation, and what is the estimated value of each such leased building wholly occupied by the government ?

6. Are the taxes paid to the city of Ottawa on any and which of such buildings ?

7. If taxes are not so paid, what effect, if any, is given to this consideration ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works) :

1, 2 and 3. Geological Museum, Sussex street, $600.00, P. Baskerville ; Geological Museum, Sussex street, $480.00, F. G. Johnson; French translators, Sussex street, $600.00, D. V. Ranger; coal shed, Central basin; methylated spirits warehouse, $1,-200.00, J. B. & W. A. Lamb; Department of Militia storehouse, $300.00, McDougal & Cuzner; Customs offices, Wellington street, $1,500.00, Ottawa Building Company; Labour Department, Metcalfe street, $1,-200.00, The Molson's Bank; Labour Department, Metcalfe street, $360.00, Great North Western Telegraph Company; Surveyor General's offices, corner Metcalfe and Slater streets, $3,000.00, Ottawa Building Company; Mounted Police Storehouse, Wellington street, $1,140.00, Slater & Sherwood; D. O. C. Military District No. 4, $500.00, Great North Western Telegraph Company; Department of Agriculture, imperial building, Queen street, $2,250.00, Charles Pearson; various departments, Seybold building, corner Sparks and O'Connor streets, $6,-500.00, J. A. Seybold; Departments of Militia and Interior, Woods building, Slater street, $12,500.00, Woods Limited; Georgian Bay Survey—Department of Public Works—Hydrographic Survey—Department of Marine and Fisheries, Corry building, Rideau street, $10,880.00, J. A. Corry; The Railway Commission, Queen street, $5,-300.00, Woods Limited; Department of Justice, Penitentiary Branch, No. 25 Sparks street, $200.00, The Egan Estate.

4. Information will be produced later on if the hon. gentleman will move accordingly.

5, 6 and 7. No, but the minister has, on the 26th February, 1905, from his seat in the House, expressed his policy regarding the payment of taxes by stating that after that period all leases which would be entered into by him would be so made that no loss as regards taxes would be suffered by the city of Ottawa.

Some of the buildings above mentioned and under rental will be abandoned during the next fiscal year, the lease of such buildings being estimated to be as follows :

Department of Agriculture, Exhibition Commission, rental, $1,000.00; Department of Inland Revenue, Weights and Measures and Gas Inspection, $550.00, Post Office Department, Sparks street, Slater building, $180.00; Department of the Interior, rooms 41 and 49 Slater building, $540.00; Department of Public Works, Georgian Bay Survey, $348.00; Surveyor General's offices, Sparks street, $540.00; Department of Public Works, workshops and yard, Wellington street, $1,160.00; various departments, Seybold building, corner Sparks and O'Connor, $6,500.00; Department of the Interior, part of imperial building, $1,950.00; Wellington street, Union Bank building, $2,250.00.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND TUNNEL.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES asked :

1. Has the government, or any department thereof, made an estimate of the cost of a tunnel under the Northumberland Straits between Prince Edward Island and the mainland? If so, what does the estimated cost of the said tunnel amount to ?

2. Who were the engineers who made the calculations, and upon what surveys and data did they base it ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works) :

1. Matter is now engaging the attention of the department.

JOHN NELSON AND CHARLES SUTHERLAND.

Mr. LAKE asked :

1. Is John F. Nelson in the employ of the government as fishery inspector, or in any other capacity ?

2. Is Charles Sutherland in the employ of the government as Indian farm instructor, or in any and what other capacity ?

3. If either of these gentlemen is not now in the employ of the government, when and under what circumstances did he or they leave such employ ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

1. No; but John F. Neilson, of Prince Albert, was Fishery Overseer for that district.

2. Not connected with the Department of Marine and Fisheries.

3. So far as Mr. Neilson is concerned, the department was notified of his resignation on the 5th February, 1906.

ATLANTIC MAIL SERVICE.

Mr. STOCKTON asked :

1. Has the government recently entered into any contract or contracts for the carriage of the mails across the Atlantic ?
2. When were such contracts entered into ?
3. Who are the contractors in each case ?
4. Which, if any, of the said contracts were let after public advertisement and tender ?
5. What is the amount of each contract ?
6. What rate of speed or time limit is provided in each contract ?
7. Is provision made in each contract for carriage by more efficient and faster steamers, in case such should be placed on the route during the term of the said contract ?
8. If such provision is not made, why has it been omitted ?
9. If the contracts, or any of them, were let without public advertisement, why was that safeguard omitted ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). A contract has been entered into which will be laid on the table at an early day. My hon. friend will have all the information.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Will the return show the information asked for in the several questions ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Let the question stand.

LIFE ASSURANCE COMMISSION.

Mr. LALOR asked :

Is it the intention of the government that the Life Assurance Commission investigate the financial position and investments of fraternal societies doing a life assurance business in Canada ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). No special reference is made in the Commission to any particular form of life insurance, but the Commissioners have full authority to investigate fraternal insurance as well as other forms of insurance when carried on by companies operating under Dominion charters or under Dominion license.

TRENT CANAL.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. Has there been an official inquiry into matters and officers connected with the Trent canal recently ?
2. What was the object of the inquiry ?
3. What was the result ?
4. By whom was the inquiry conducted ?
5. What counsel were employed in the inquiry ?
6. What remuneration was given to each of those employed in conducting said inquiry ?

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (Minister of Railways and Canals) :

1. Yes.
2. To ascertain where the responsibility rested for faulty construction of works.
3. Five officials connected with said works have resigned.
4. Mr. Henry Holgate, C.E.
5. Messrs. R. J. McLaughlin, K.C., and D. O'Connell.
6. Mr. Holgate received $450 for his services as commissioner. No remuneration has yet been paid the counsel.

POSTMASTER AT CANNINGTON.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES asked :

1. Has the postmaster at Cannington been recently removed from office ?
2. What cause was assigned for his removal ?
3. How many years had he been in office ?
4. Were there ever any complaints against him ?
5. If so, what were they ?
6. Who has been appointed to succeed him ?
7. Upon whose recommendation was the postmaster dismissed ?
8. Was the post office inspector favourable to the change ?

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Postmaster General). Mr. H. D. Talbot, formerly postmaster at Cannington, Ontario, was relieved of his office on January 12, 1906, for the reason that he was, under the name of another man, carrying on a mercantile business in the village in competition with others in the same line of business, though the salary and allowances connected with the post office seemed sufficient to maintain the postmaster.

Action in the matter was taken on the report of the post office inspector.

Mr. Talbot was appointed to the office on April 1, 1890.

There had been complaints from time to time in regard to the management of this post office.

Mr. William McPherson was, on January 16, 1906, appointed to the office.

FISH HATCHERIES.

Mr. BOYCE—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. What fish hatcheries have been established during last year, ending 28th February last, on the lakes of Huron and Superior ?
2. At what points or places are fish hatcheries now maintained by the government on these lakes ?
3. Is it the intention of the government to establish more fish hatcheries on the great lakes during the present year ?

Hon. SYDNEY FISHER (for Minister of Marine and Fisheries) :

1. None.
2. No hatcheries are maintained by the government on these lakes.
3. Under consideration.

WHITEFISH ISLAND.

Mr. BOYCE—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. What, if any, railways have filed plans for the expropriation of Whitefish Island, in the St. Mary's River, or portions thereof ?

2. When were such plans filed, respectively, and for what apparent object ?

3. Have they, or any of them, been allowed or approved ?

4. If so, when were same allowed or approved ?

5. Is the government aware that the corporations of the towns of Sault St. Marie and Steelton claim that any proposed expropriation by railways would interfere with and injuriously affect the interests of those towns, or either of them ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

1. The Algoma Central Railway, the Pacific & Atlantic Railway, and the Ontario, Hudson's Bay & Western Railway Companies filed plans for the expropriation of Whitefish Island, in the St. Mary's river. The three applications cover the whole island.

2. The plans were filed by the Algoma Central Railway Company for right of way on January 3, 1900; by the same company for terminals on January 13, 1900; by the Pacific & Atlantic Railway Company for right of way and terminals on December 24, 1901, and by the Ontario, Hudson's Bay & Western Railway Company, for the purposes of the railway, on December 28, 1901.

3. They were all approved and allowed.

4. The plans were approved when filed, namely, January 3, 1900; January 13, 1900; December 24, 1901, and December 28, 1901. The acquiring of the land for the purposes aforesaid was allowed by order in council of March 5, 1900; February 12, 1900; January 10, 1902 and January 15, 1902.

5. The corporations mentioned have made no such claim to the government.

SCHOOL LANDS.

Mr. AMES asked ;

How many acres of school lands were disposed of by the government during the six months ending 31st December, 1905, the average price obtained per acre, respectively in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

	Area in Acres.	Amount Realized.	Average. Price.	Average price of Total Sales.
		$ cts.	$ cts.
Manitoba.
Tyndall Sale	233·60	3,350 40	14 34
Saskatchewan.
Killaley Sale	3,200·00	46,560 00	14 55
Yorkton "	8,096·83	81,917 96	10 12
Saltcoats "	10,689·20	82,872 44	7 75
	21,986·03	211,350 40	.....	9 62
Alberta.
Edmonton Sale	8,874·00	106,842 70	12 04
Leduc "	1,756·00	15,834 50	9 02
Wetaskiwin "	4,679·29	46,820 92	10 06
Lacombe "	4,081·04	35,952 52	8 81
Innisfail "	7,530·59	62,561 29	8 32
Didsbury "	23,202·94	241,473 08	10 41
Calgary "	23,099·00	231,117 17	10 01
High River "	24,117·04	355,046 05	14 72
Pincher Creek Sale.	7,434·23	102,951 56	13 85
Macleod "	16,008·19	195,716 37	12 23
	120,782·32	1,394,316 16	.....	11 54

SALE OF SCHOOL LANDS.

Mr. AMES asked :

1. What was the quantity of school lands sold up to the end of the fiscal year 1905, in Manitoba and the Northwest, and the total amount received or receivable for the same ?

2. What is the amount annually paid to the several provinces on account of school lands ?

3. What is the estimated quantity of school lands unsold in the surveyed portions of the three provinces ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). The area of school lands sold in Manitoba to the 1st July, 1905, was 271,384·45 acres, for the sum of $2,180,673.95. The area sold to the same date in the Territories, now comprised in Alberta and Saskatchewan, was 147,245·32 acres, for $1,473,949.90.

Mr. OLIVER (reading).

PROVINCE OF MANITOBA.

Fiscal Year.	Interest.	Revenue other than Principal Moneys.	Total.
	$ cts.	$ cts.	$ cts.
1891-1892....	8,698 34	.....
1892-1893....	9,400 56	.....
1893-1894....	10,465 21	.....
1894-1895....	12,108 03	.....
1895-1896....	13,699 82	.....
1896-1897....	15,000 00	.....
1897-1898....	13,992 88	.....
1898-1899....	15,128 73	.....
1899-1900....	16,516 67	.....
1900-1901....	22,115 33	.....
1901-1902....	25,086 24	224,114 76
1902-1903....	24,278 28	6,886 24
1903-1904....	31,290 66	43,934 26
1904-1905....	35,946 56	89,774 94
	253,727 31	364,710 20	618,437 51

PROVINCIAL DISTRICT OF ASSINIBOIA.

1898-1899....	2,092 19	.....
1899-1900....	260 09	.....
1900-1901....	502 66	.....
1901-1902....	650 44	.....
1902-1903....	913 29	9,031 54
1903-1904....	4,955 11	3,541 81
1904-1905....	6,631 06	50,117 46
	16,004 84	62,690 81	78,695 65

PROVINCIAL DISTRICT OF ALBERTA.

1898-1899....	15,316 86	.....
1899-1900....	1,595 79	.....
1900-1901....	1,487 32	.....
1901-1902....	1,140 32	.....
1902-1903....	1,704 67	15,597 32
1903-1904....	2,073 66	5,582 65
1904-1905....	1,388 66	1,629 89
	24,707 28	22,809 86	47,517 14

PROVINCIAL DISTRICT OF SASKATCHEWAN.

1898-1899 ...	215 22	.....
1899-1900....	31 02	.....
1900-1901....	31 62	.....
1901-1902....	33 07	.....
1902-1903....	40 78	1,050 96
1903-1904....	85 81	289 80
1904-1905....	356 97	1,757 89
	794 49	3,098 65	3,893 14

3. The approximate area of the school lands remaining unsold in the surveyed portion of Manitoba to the 1st July, 1905, is 1,477,096 acres. The approximate area of the school lands remaining unsold to the same date, in the surveyed portions of Alberta and Saskatchewan, is 4,817,875 acres.

PHILIP WAGNER.

Mr. FOSTER asked :

1. Has Philip Wagner been at any time since 1900 in the employ of the government?
2. If so, where, during what period, in what capacity, and at what pay ?
3. Was Philip Wagner, previous to or during his employment by the government, convicted of crime, and did he serve any time in prison therefor ?
4. Has he ever been given larger pay or promotion in office since these occurrences ?
5. Is Philip Wagner now in government employ ? If so, in what capacity, and at what rate of remuneration ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :—

1. Yes.

2. As Galician interpreter at Edmonton at $40 per month from 1st January, 1901, to 30th June, 1901, and as assistant Immigration Agent at $25 per month, and interpreter in the Dominion Lands Office at $75 per month from 1st July, 1905, to date.

3 and 4. Nothing on record in the Department of the Interior to show that P. Wagner served any time in prison.

5. Answered under No. 2.

ADDITION TO WESTERN BLOCK.

Mr. FOSTER asked :

What is the total amount so far expended on the new structure in the Western Block, and what is the amount estimated to finish it ?

Hon. WM. PATERSON (for the Minister of Public Works). Amount expended to date $51,330. Amount estimated as required to complete, $47,000.

JOSEPH NIXON.

Mr. FOSTER asked :

1. For what time, in what capacity, and at what pay, has Joseph Nixon been in the employ of the government since July, 1905 ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

1. Joseph Nixon has not been in the employ of this department since July, 1905.

ALIENATION OF LANDS IN SASKATCHEWAN AND ALBERTA.

Mr. FOSTER asked :

Has any arrangement been made by the government since July, 1905, by transference or by sale involving the co-operation of a railway company, by virtue of which a large block of public lands in the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta passed out of the possession of the government into the hands of private individuals or corporations ? If so, what quantity of lands were involved, what was the nature of the transaction, and the consideration involved?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). No.

PROVINCIAL SUBSIDIES.

Mr. PARMELEE asked :

1. Has the government received a request from the provincial governments for a conference to present their claims for a readjustment of provincial subsidies ?
2. Is it the intention of the government to have such a conference ? If so, when ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) :

1. The government has received a request from the provincial governments for a conference to present their claims for a readjustment of provincial subsidies.
2. It is the intention of the government to have such a conference to discuss the claims of the provinces and various other subjects affecting their relation to the Dominion. It is expected that this conference will take place during the recess between this session and the next.

KENTVILLE RIFLE RANGE.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. What is the result of the reference to the Exchequer Court of the Nova Scotia rifle range question ?
2. Has an award been made ?
3. Has the government accepted the award, if one has been made ?
4. If not, why not ?
5. Has the range been completed ?
6. What is the cost up to the end of 1905, (a) of the range grounds ; (b) of the improvements ?
7. Is it the intention to use the range as a provincial drill ground as well as for a range ?
8. Is the range suitable for artillery as well as rifle firing ?

Hon. CHAS. FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice). Mr. Crawley, barrister, of Kentville, N.S., was appointed special referee by the Exchequer Court and made his report on October 18, 1904, awarding the defendant $38,000. From this report the Crown appealed and after argument the Court referred the matter again to the referee to report upon certain specified points. He made his supplementary report on September 18, 1905, confirming his former finding and award in all particulars. From the latter report the Crown also appealed, and the case was argued a few days ago and the court reserved its judgment, which has not yet been delivered.

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (Minister of Railways and Canals). I answer on behalf of the Minister of Militia and Defence :

5. Yes.
6. (a) None. (b) $14,992.40.
7. Yes.
8. No.

IMMIGRATION TO CANADA DURING THE LAST YEAR.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. How many immigrants reached Canada during last year from each (a) Great Britain and Ireland ; (b) the continent (mainland) of Europe ; (c) Iceland ; (d) the United States of America ; (e) other countries ?
2. What was the bonus per head to those from each of the above paid by the Canadian government ?
3. To whom were the cheques in each case made payable ?
4. Who regulates or decides to whom payments are to be made ?
5. Has W. T. R. Preston authority to make payments to agents or subagents for steamship or railway companies for immigration ?
6. What companies or agents, or subagents have received moneys for immigration during the last two years, and by whom were they paid ?
7. What sums have been disposed of upon the recommendation or authority of W. T. R. Preston, in each year 1902-3, 1903-4 and 1904-5.
8. Who were the members of the North Atlantic Trading Company during 1903-4 and 1904-5 ?
9. What is the North Atlantic Trading Company ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

1. There reached Canada during the last fiscal year from :

(a) Great Britain and Ireland..	65,359
(b) The Continent, Mainland of Europe..	35,108
(c) Iceland..	413
(d) The United States of America	43,652
(e) Other countries..	1,734
Total..	146,266

2. a. In Great Britain the bonus is paid on agriculturists, domestic servants and persons intending to follow those occupations in Canada. To ordinary booking agents the bonus is 7 shillings on those over 12 years of age and 3s.6d. on those between one and 12 years. In the case of the Salvation Army, the bonus is on the same classes, but at the rate of 12 shillings on those over 12 years of age, and 6 shillings on those between one and 12 years. A bonus is paid to various philanthropic societies who bring to Canada children who have not been inmates of work-houses, industrial schools, penitentiaries, prisons, reformatories or other like institutions. In several cases a bonus of $3 is paid to parties bringing domestic servants to Canada.

b. On agriculturists and domestic servants coming from Holland, Denmark, Russia, Germany, Austria, Hungary, Luxemburg, Norway, Sweden, Finland and Switzerland, a bonus of £1 per head is paid to the North Atlantic Trading Company. In the case of settlers from Galicia, Buckowinia and Poland, excepting Germans, the payment is limited to 5,000 persons per year.

c. On persons coming from Iceland, a payment of £1 per ticket and 10 shillings per half ticket is made to steamship companies on the understanding that the price of the immigrant's ticket is reduced by that amount.

d. A bonus is paid to subagents in the United States on agriculturists sent to Canada, of $3 on adult males, $2 on adult females and $1 on children under 18 years of age.

3. The cheques for bonuses were made payable:

a. To the head offices of the different steamship companies and in the case of philanthropic societies to their head office.

b. To the North Atlantic Trading Company.

c. To the head offices of the different steamship companies.

d. To the individual subagents sending immigrants to Canada.

4. The decision as to whom payments are to be made rests with and all such payments are regulated at the head office of the Immigration Department, Ottawa.

5. No.

6. As stated in answer to question 3. Paid by the department direct in case of United States agents and North Atlantic Trading Company, and through London Office in case of British booking-agents.

7. The amounts of money disbursed by the High Commissioner for Canada and W. T. R. Preston out of letters of credit issued in their favour based on estimates submitted and approved by the department during the following fiscal years were:

1902-03	$187,731 67
1903-04	221,402 23
1904-05	173,367 10

8. During 1903-04 and 1904-05 Messrs. S. Glück and N. E. Kohan of Amsterdam, Holland, were manager and secretary respectively of the North Atlantic Trading Company, the names of the other members of the company are not known to the government.

9. The North Atlantic Trading Company is a body corporate, engaged in active emigration work in various European countries.

MR. HIRAM KEECH, TAMWORTH, ONTARIO.

Mr. INGRAM asked:

1. Is Mr. Hiram Keech, formerly of the village of Tamworth, in the county of Lennox and Addington, an employee of the Dominion government?

2. If so, what is the date of his appointment?

3. What are the duties of the said Mr. Hiram Keech?

4. What is his salary, and does he receive travelling expenses as well?

5. By whom was he recommended for such appointment?

Hon. CHARLES FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice):

1. Yes. Temporarily.
2. February 1, 1906.
3. Cordage sales agent.
4. (a) $100 per month. (b) Yes.
5. Inspectors of penitentiaries.

FAST ATLANTIC SERVICE.

Mr. ARMSTRONG asked:

1. Has the government under consideration the establishment of a fast Atlantic steamship service?

2. If so, when do they expect to make a report regarding same?

3. Is it the intention of the government to advertise for tenders to establish a fast Atlantic steamship service? If so, when will the tenders be opened?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). The government has passed a mail service contract which will be laid on the table of the House at an early date.

MAIL MATTER SHIPPED THROUGH CANADIAN AND AMERICAN PORTS.

Mr. ARMSTRONG asked:

1. How many pounds of Canadian mail was shipped from American ports in the year 1905?

2. How many pounds of Canadian mail was received through American ports in the year 1905?

3. How many pounds of Canadian mail was shipped from Canadian ports in the year 1905?

4. How many pounds of Canadian mail was received through Canadian ports in the year 1905?

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Postmaster General):

1. The only record in the Post Office Department of the weight of mailable matter sent to, or received from, places over-sea is a record which shows the weight of such matter (exclusive of parcel post packages) despatched to the United Kingdom each month by way of Canadian ports and by way of United States ports.

2. In the year 1905 the weight of Canadian mailable matter shipped to the United Kingdom through United States ports was 786,497 lbs. and through Canadian ports 131,297 lbs.

3 and 4. The Post Office Department has no record of the weight of mailable matter received through Canadian or United States ports in any year.

MANITOBA BOUNDARY EXTENSION.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE asked:

1. Has the conference been held between the governments of Manitoba, Ontario and Saskatchewan, and the Dominion government, in reference to the extension of the boundaries of the province of Manitoba, which the premier stated during the session of 1905 he would be prepared to hold immediately after the creation of the new provinces ?

2. If not, why not, and when will such conference be held ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). No conference has been held between the government of the Dominion and the government of Manitoba, but I have just stated that it is intended that during the recess there shall be a conference between the Dominion government and these several governments to discuss all matters affecting the relations between the Dominion and the provinces.

TRENT RIVER WATERS.

Mr. PORTER asked:

1. Are the waters of the Trent river and its tributaries under the control of the Federal government ?

2. How was such control, if any, obtained, and for what purpose was such control obtained ?

3. What is the extent of such control, if any?

4. Are the waters of the Trent river available, and if so, to what extent, to private individuals for development ?

5. Is it the intention of the government to retain control, and to what extent, if any, of said waters to the exclusion of private individuals ? If so, for what purpose ?

6. What is the estimated water power which may be developed in the River Trent from Peterborough to the Bay of Quinté ?

7. Has the government considered the disadvantages to private individuals of having the waters of the Trent river tied up for the purposes of the Trent Valley canal, as against development by private individuals, and in what manner does the government propose to relieve the situation as against such private interests ?

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (Minister of Railways and Canals) :

1, 2 and 3. By the Act of the province of Upper Canada 3, Wm. IV., ch. 32 (1833) authority was given for improving the navigation of the River Otonabee, in the district of Newcastle, and also the adjacent waters leading from Mud lake to Scugog lake in the said district; commissioners were appointed and moneys appropriated for the purpose; also tolls for navigation were fixed.

By the Acts 6 and 7, Wm. IV., ch. 66, 1836 and 1837, certain works required to complete navigation on the River Trent, the River Otonabee, Buckhorn lake, Bobcaygeon falls and Purdy's mills, also the construction of a canal between the waters of the Bay of Quinté and Rice lake 'by improving the navigation of the River Trent' were authorized; money was provided, and the appointment of commissioners authorized. The commissioners were authorized to take lands for dams and locks and, further, to grant leases for the use of waters from the said erections or dams, canal or canals, for hydraulic purposes, and to fix and collect tolls for navigation.

At the time of the union of the provinces in 1841, an Act of that year, chap. 28, appropriated moneys for certain public works, in which were included those 'for improving the internal waters of the Newcastle district', the powers of the commissioners being thereby transferred to the Board of Works.

By the Act of Confederation, 1867, 'Rivers and Lake Improvements' were included in the Provincial Public Works and Property to be the property of Canada, and 'navigation and shipping' was placed under the exclusive legislative authority of the parliament of Canada.

Authority over the Trent canal and its waters has descended through the several commissioners, Board of Works and Department of Public Works to the Department of Railways and Canals.

It may be added that by the Fisheries Act of 1868, ch. 60, 'any river or other water' may be set apart for the propagation of fish, and leases for fishing granted. In pursuance of this authority, various lakes and tributary waters of the Trent canal in the county of Peterborough, the River Otonabee and the River Trent down to the Bay of Quinté, have been so set apart.

4. There does not appear to be any restraint on the development, by private individuals, of any rights they may have acquired to the waters of the Trent river, subject, always, to the interests of navigation.

5. This is a matter of policy, to be determined by the exigencies of each case, as it may arise.

6. The water power which may be developed in the Trent river from Peterborough to the Bay of Quinté has not been estimated.

7. The waters of the Trent river are not tied up for the purposes of the Trent Valley canal, but the recognized principle of the department is always to dispose of the surplus water.

PASSAGE AT L'ILE-AUX-GRUES.

Mr. PAQUET asked :

1. Is the government aware that there is only 27 feet of water, at low tide, in the passage at l'Ile-aux-Grues ?

2. Has the attention of the government been drawn to the necessity of deepening and widening the channels at the de Beaujeu bar, near l'Ile-aux-Grues and at the St. Roch des Aulnaies ferry ?

3. Does the government intend to have the channels at the de Beaujeu bar and at the St. Roch des Aulnaies ferry deepened and widened during the year 1906?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). Yes, the government is aware that there are only 21 feet of water at l'Ile-aux-Grues and it is intended to have the channel deepened during the present season.

BELL'S RAPIDS POST OFFICE.

Mr. PORTER asked :

1. When was the post office known as Bell's Rapids established ?
2. Who is the postmaster ?
3. Upon whose recommendation was such office established, and such postmaster appointed, and when ?
4. Were there any other recommendations or applications for establishment of such post office ? If so, by whom, and when ?

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Postmaster General). Bell's Rapids Post Office was established on April 1, 1905, with John Hicks as postmaster, on the application of the Rev. Father McInerney, of Maynooth, the report of an inspector, and the recommendation of Mr. Henry Pringle, of Belleville.

MIMINEGASH BREAKWATER.

Mr. LEFURGEY asked :

1. Are any repairs being made on Miminegash breakwater, Prince Edward Island ?
2. What is the nature of these repairs ?
3. Has a petition been forwarded to the minister regarding the placing of a proposed extension to said breakwater ?

Hon. WM. PATERSON (for the Minister of Public Works) :

1 and 2. A contract has been awarded for the construction of an extension to the southern breakwater, 30 by 50 feet, built of close face cribwork.

3. There is no such petition in the department.

TARIFF COMMISSION—PRINTING OF EVIDENCE.

Mr. HENDERSON asked :

1. Does the government propose at an early date to lay on the table of the House a copy of the evidence taken before the Tariff Commission during the past autumn and winter ?
2. Will such evidence be printed for the use of members of the House ?

Hon. WM. PATERSON (Minister of Customs). Yes, it will be laid on the table at the first opportunity to-day, when the Orders of the Day are called, or at the adjournment. In reference to the printing there are over eight thousand pages of typewritten matter, about 300 words to the page, and comprising some nine large volumes, and it will be for the Printing Committee to determine that point.

Mr. PATERSON (Minister of Customs), later laid the report on the table.

Mr. FOSTER. Is this all that took place ?

Mr. PATERSON. Yes, every thing.

ATTENDANCE OF MEMBERS—DAILY RECORD OF.

Mr. HENDERSON asked :

Is it the intention of the government to cause a daily record to be made of the attendance of members during the present session ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). I intend to move at the first opportunity for a Committee of the House to revise the rules of the House, and this question will be taken into consideration by that committee.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

Mr. PORTER asked :

1. What steps or proceedings have been taken by the government during the last year to determine the route of the Trent Valley canal ?
2. Has any report been made thereon since 1904 ? If so, what ?
3. Has the government determined the choice of routes ? If so, what is it ?
4. Has any investigation been had into the cause of the breakage in the banks or lift locks of the Trent Valley canal If so, what is the result of such investigation, and has a report been made thereon, and by whom and when ?
5. What is the estimated cost of repairs or damage sustained by such breakage in the (a) banks, (b) lift locks ?
6. Have any proceedings been taken to repair such damages ? If not, is it the intention of the government to proceed with such repairs at once, and how ?

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (Minister of Railways and Canals) :

1. The government have had surveys made.
2. Yes, interim reports have been received.
3. No.
4. Yes, and as a result five of the officials connected with the work have resigned. Yes, a report has been made by Mr. Henry Holgate, C.E., dated January 8, 1906.
5. (a) With reference to the embankment approach at the Peterborough lift lock, where the leaks occurred, the commissioner states in his report that $2,000 should cover the expenditure in connection with the repairs to be made. The concrete walls approaches at Kirkfield leaked badly and were subsequently plastered with cement mortar, reducing the leaks materially, but it is impossible to say at the present time what the cost will be to insure permanent tightness. (b). No repairs are required to the lift lock at Peterborough, and the lift lock at Kirkfield is under construction.
6. Yes, specifications have been prepared; the necessary materials are being provided, and as soon as the weather permits, the work of repairs will be proceeded with under the officer of the department.

LIFE INSURANCE COMMISSION.

Mr. A. B. INGRAM (East Elgin) moved :

For copies of all telegrams, reports, communications, investigations, letters and documents of every description, relating to the necessity of investigating the working of insurance companies doing business in the Dominion of Canada, including all correspondence, communications and other documents, whether advocating or opposing, or otherwise relating to the commission recently appointed for the above purpose ; or any investigation either by the government or by a commission, committee of the House, or otherwise, into the matters aforesaid, also in connection with the recommendation and appointment of the commissioners.

He said : I intended to move in this motion, and I think it really means that, for all the correspondence in connection with the appointment of the commissioners and the instructions to them dealing with this question. In order that it may be perfectly plain I move the motion with that amendment.

Motion agreed to.

TRANSPORTATION COMMISSION.

Mr. W. H. BENNETT (East Simcoe) moved :

For a copy of the appointment of the Commission on Transportation, consisting of Mr. John Bertram, of the city of Toronto, Mr. Ashdown, of the city of Winnipeg, and Mr. Reford, of the city of Montreal ; together with all the evidence taken before the said commission, and also the report presented to the Honourable the Minister of Public Works by the said commission.

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works). This report is now in the hands of the printer and will be brought down at an early date.

Motion dropped.

GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC RAILWAY—SURVEYS IN NEW BRUNSWICK.

Mr. O. S. CROCKET (York, N. B.) moved:

For copies of all correspondence had between the government, or any department or member thereof, and the Grand Trunk Pacific Construction Commission, in reference to the surveys or location of the route of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, in the province of New Brunswick.

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (Minister of Railways and Canals). The name is not correctly given in the motion. I imagine that the reference is to the Transcontinental Railway Commission. The motion says : 'Grand Trunk Construction Commission.' There is no such commission. I move that the motion be amended in this sense.

Motion amended.

Motion as amended agreed to.

MOTIONS AGREED TO WITHOUT DISCUSSION.

For copies of all contracts and agreements between the government or any department of the government, and the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan Railroad and Steamboat Company, and of all Orders in Council, reports, papers, documents and correspondence, respecing : (a) Any loan to the said company ; (b) any indebtedness of the said company to the Crown or to the government ; (c) any lands to which the company might become entitled by virtue of any statute, contract or agreement ; (d) any land granted to or earned by the company ; (e) the area within which such lands might be selected by the company ; (f) any enlargement, change or alteration of the area within which such lands might be selected by the company, or by any purchaser from or assignee of the company.

2. All correspondence respecting the matters above mentioned between the government, or any department of the government, or any official or person acting or purporting to act for the government and the said company, or any official thereof, or any person acting or purporting to act therefor, or any assignee of or purchaser from the said company.

3. All Orders in Council relating to, touching or concerning the said company's land grant, or the area within which the same might be selected, or any enlargement or alteration of that area.

4. All correspondence between the government, or any department or official thereof, and the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company, or any officer or person purporting to act for that company, or any person or persons, firm or firms, syndicate or syndicates, from whom the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company acquired any portion of the land grant of the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan Railroad and Steamboat Company.

5. All correspondence between any shareholders or persons intersted in the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan Railroad and Steamboat Company, with the government or any department or official thereof, and all claims and demands made by that company, or by any person interested therein against the government, in respect of the said land grant or the selection thereof, or any of the matters above referred to.—Mr. R. L. Borden by Mr. Foster.

For a copy of the special report of the Superintendent of Insurance addressed to the Minister of Finance, bearing date 9th November, 1905 ; also copies of all other reports, correspondence and documents, from January 1, 1905, up to the date of the return, respecting the regulation of life insurance in Canada.—Mr. R. L. Borden by Mr. Foster.

For a return showing (a) how many wrecks occurred in the River and Gulf of St Lawrence during the season of 1905. (b) the names, tonnage and character of the vessels so wrecked ; (c) whether such wreck resulted in a total loss of the ship and cargo, or either, in any and what cases ; (d) to what causes each of said wrecks were attributable ; (e) whether any inquiry was held in any and what cases. Also for a copy of all reports, evidence, correspondence, documents and papers, relating to or connected with the said wrecks, the inquiries concerning the same, and the loss thereby occasioned.—Mr. R. L. Borden by Mr. Foster.

For copies of all contracts entered into during the past two years for the transportation of mails across the Atlantic, and copies of all correspondence, documents and papers relating to the same matter or connected in any way therewith.—Mr. R. L. Borden by Mr. Foster.

For copies of all telegrams, reports, recommendations and correspondence in connection with the appointment of David Liddle as assistant inspector of weights and measures for the inland division of Windsor, in the province of Ontario—Mr. Ingram.

For copies of all telegrams, letters, petitions, reports, documents, recommendations, investigations, correspondence and all other communications concerning the appointment and removal of Mr. Alexander Darroch from the position of Collector of Customs at St. Thomas, Ontario.—Mr. Ingram.

For copies of all petitions, reports, letters, notices, telegrams, correspondence, recommendations, bonds, leases, papers and documents in relation to a site and new post office building in the county of Elgin, at Aylmer.—Mr. Ingram.

For copies of all telegrams, letters, reports, petitions, documents, investigations, correspondence, communications of every description, from or between any department or head of any department of the government, and any person or any government, regarding the collection of a head tax of two dollars on persons or passengers entering the United States.—Mr. Ingram.

For a return showing the amounts voted and the amounts expended, under their proper headings, each year since June 30. 1896, on Port Stanley harbour; the date of such payments, to whom payments were made, and the amount paid to each person; the amount paid for actual labour performed; the amount paid for material not used; the quantity and kind of material purchased, with the price, and from whom purchased; the present actual condition of the harbour. A copy of the estimated cost of the harbour, the statement to include dredging and the breakwater. Also copies of all advertisements calling for tenders, as well as all tenders and contracts and correspondence on the subject; the names of all dredges employed on the works since June 30, 1896, and their owners. Also copies of all telegrams, letters, reports, petitions, documents, correspondence, investigations and communications of every description in connection with said harbour works. Also a copy of the pay roll for each year since June 30, 1896; the names of all foremen, superintendents and inspectors, their length of service as such, and by whom recommended, giving all correspondence in connection with their appointment; and if dismissed or resigned, state reasons for said dismissal or resignation; the names of all civil engineers employed on the works, and by whom recommended, and all correspondence in connection therewith. Also the name of the person or persons who paid the respective amounts at Port Stanley for material furnished and labour performed.—Mr. Ingram.

For a return showing the amounts voted and the amounts expended, under their proper heading, each year since June 30, 1896, on Port Bruce Harbour; the date of such payments, to whom the payments were made, and the amount paid to each person; the amount paid for actual labour performed; the amount paid for material not used, and when, and the amount paid for material used; quantity and kind of material purchased, and the price, and from whom purchased; the present actual condition of the harbour; a copy of the estimated cost of the harbour, including dredging and breakwater. Also copies of all advertisements calling for tenders, as well as all tenders and contracts and correspondence on the subject. The names of all dredges employed since June 30, 1896, and their owners. Also copies of all telegrams, letters, reports, petitions, documents, correspondence, investigations and communications of every description in connection with said harbour works. Also a copy of the pay-roll for each year since June 30, 1896, the names of all foremen, superintendents and inspectors, with their length of service as such, and by whom recommended, and all correspondence in connection with their appointment; the names of all civil engineers employed on the works, and by whom recommended, and all correspondence in connection therewith. Also the name of the person or persons who paid the respective amounts at Port Bruce for material furnished and labour performed.—Mr. Ingram.

For a return showing the amounts voted and the amounts expended, under their proper headings, each year since 30th June, 1896, on Port Burwell Harbour; the date of such payments; to whom the payments were made, and the amount paid to each person; the amount paid for actual labour performed; the amount paid for material not used, and when; the amount paid for material used; the quantity and kind of material purchased, and the price, and from whom purchased; the present actual condition of the harbour. A copy of the estimated cost of the harbour, and a statement showing how much it will cost to finish said harbour; the above statement to include breakwater and dredging. Also copies of all advertisements calling for tenders, as well as all tenders and contracts, and correspondence on the subject; the names of all dredges employed on the works since 30th June, 1906, and their owners. And copies of all telegrams, letters, reports, petitions, documents, correspondence and communications of every description in connection with said harbour works. Also a copy of the pay-roll for each year since 30th June, 1906; the names of all foremen, superintendents and inspectors; their length of service as such, and by whom recommended; with all correspondence in connection with their appointment; and if dismissed or resigned, the reason for said dismissal or resignation; the names of all civil engineers who are or have been employed on the works, and by whom recommended; the said return to include Mr. John H. Teall, resident engineer, the date of appointment, dismissal or resignation, as the case may be, and the reason for same; and all correspondence, petitions, telegrams, letters and communications connected therewith.—Mr. Ingram.

For copies of all correspondence for the last two years on immigration between the Canadian High Commissioner, in London, England, and Mr. W. T. R. Preston, Dominion Commissioner England.—Mr. Uriah Wilson.

2. For copies of all correspondence for the last two years on immigration between the said W. T. R. Preston and Mr. W. T. Griffith, Secretary, High Commissioner's office, London, England.—Mr. Uriah Wilson.

1. For a copy of the first contract made between the government of Canada and the North Atlantic Trading Company, of Amsterdam, Holland, giving the said company a bonus for immigrants to Canada from certain European countries, and copies of all correspondence in connection with the subject-matter of said contract before and since the date thereof.

2. For a return showing the names of all the directors and shareholders of the said company on the date of said contract, and their addresses.

3. For a copy of the contract made between the government of Canada and the said North Atlantic Trading Company in November, 1904.

4. For a return showing the names of all the directors and shareholders of the said company on the said date, and their addresses.

5. For copies of all reports made to the government by the said company, especially reports referring to the number of immigrants sent or brought to Canada by or through the said company.

6. For copies of all correspondence, documents, papers and reports in connection with the subject-matter of the last mentioned contract before and since the date thereof.

7. For a return showing the amount of money paid by the government each year to the said company since the date of said contract in November, 1904, to the 1st March, 1906, and the total amount so paid.

8. Also the general business of the North Atlantic Trading Company, other than any contract they have with the government.—Mr. Uriah Wilson.

For a return showing :—1. All contracts since 30th June, 1902, between the government and (a) the Eastern Railway Supply Company; (b) the New Brunswick Petroleum Company; (c) the Sherman Williams Paint Company ; (d) the Maritime Wire Fencing Company,—for supplies to any of the railways of the government.

2. The tenders upon which such contracts were based, and all tenders made by other parties for such contracts.

3. All correspondence and communications of the Railway Department and officers thereof, with the several tenderers and the contractors, relating to such tenders or contracts or supplies. Also all correspondence and communications between the department and its officers and between such officers, relating to such tenders, contracts or supplies.

4. All advertisements, notices, statements, accounts, papers and vouchers, relating to such contracts, or the supplies, or the payment thereof.—Mr. Barker.

For copies of all forms of application for homestead entries used since the year 1890.—Mr. Ingram.

1. For a return showing : The number of homesteaders to make entry in and for the territory now included in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, during each year between 1896 and December 31, 1905.

2. The nationality of said homesteaders, dividing same into the following categories : (a) British North America ; (b) Great Britain and Ireland; (c) the United States; (d) France, Belgium and Switzerland; (e) Germany, Holland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Iceland; (f) all other countries of Continental Europe; (g) all other nationalities; (h) persons who had previously made entry.—Mr. Uriah Wilson.

For a return showing the several sums of money paid to judges, under the provisions of section 13 of an Act respecting the judges of Provincial Courts, chapter 138 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by sections 7, 8 and 9, of chapter 52 of the Statutes of 1898, from June 30, 1903, to July 20, 1905, and under this section and amendment, as enacted by section 6 of chapter 31 of the Statutes of 1905, from the said July 20 to this date ; with the items in respect of which the said several payments were made, set out and showing the payments in respect of the period before and since July 20, 1905.—Mr. Lennox—by Mr. Taylor.

For a return showing, in respect of every case where, during the year ending June 30, 1905, and during the six months ending December 31, 1905, an extension of time within which to complete his entry, has been accorded any homesteader within the territory now included in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, giving : (a) the name of the applicant for said extension ; (b) his post office address at the time of original entry ; (c) the date and agency of original homestead entry ; (d) the location of the land in question, indicating township, range and section ; (e) the earliest date at which applicant might have become entitled to secure a patent, had all conditions been promptly fulfilled ; (f) post office address of applicant at time of demand for extension; (g) the date of demand for extension; (h) the length of extension granted; (i) the cause of granting extension; (j) the name or names of any and all parties who may have communicated with the department for the purpose of recommending the granting of said extension ; (k) the name of the homestead inspector who reported on the case, and whether he advised in favour of granting an extension or the contrary; (l) the name and address of any and every person who shall have applied to record a cancellation against said section or part thereof.

All the above information to be arranged according to agencies.—Mr. Ames.

For a return showing, in the case of every homestead against which, during the year 1904 and 1905, a report of non-compliance with the law, or a demand for cancellation has been received by the Dominion Land office or offices; giving : (a) the location of said quarter section, range, township and meridian; (b) the name and address of the party by whom the original entry was made; (c) the name and address of the party or parties, (if there have been several) who endeavoured to lodge cancellations; (d) the reason alleged by complainants why cancellation of entry should be allowed; (e) whether warning of threatened cancellation was served upon the alleged delinquent; (f) the action taken by the department in each case.—Mr. Ames.

For a return showing the parcels of land, other than railway grants, which, since 1896, have been sold, in the present provinces of Alberta or Saskatchewan, for irrigation projects; giving in each instance area, location and price obtained, and the name of the company or individual to whom sale was made.—Mr. Ames.

For copies of all letters, telegrams, reports or other communications which, between July 1, 1904, and December 31, 1905, passed between the Minister of the Interior, or any official of of his department, on the one hand, and (a) the Canadian Northern Railway Company; (b) the Manitoba and Southeastern Railway Company; (c) the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan Railway Company, or any company to whom any of said companies shall have transferred its land rights, in regard to the area in which any of said companies were to be permitted to select lands due by way of subsidy.—Mr. Ames.

For a return showing the name and post office address of each person or company having a closed grazing lease, granted for a period of more than three years, by the Department of the Interior, of lands in Alberta or Saskatchewan, giving in each instance, (a) the location, boundaries and area of each tract of land so leased; (b) the date of issue and expiry of said lease; (c) the annual rental specified therein; (d) and the amount of overdue rental wherever such be the case.—Mr. Ames.

For a return showing: 1. The total number of acres of land within the present limits of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, voted by parliament to railway companies?

2. The area of said lands in respect of which the time by law specified for earning the same has elapsed.

3. The area of said lands (a) which has been earned, selected and patented; (b) which has been earned and selected, but not patented; (c) which has been earned but neither selected nor patented.

4. The area of land which may yet be earned by any railway company, indicating the name of the company, and the amount of subsidy possible.

5. In the case of each of the following roads, the Canadian Northern Railway Company, the Manitoba and Southeastern Railway Company, and the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan Railway Company, (a) the quantity of land which may yet be earned; (b) the quantity earned but not patented; (c) the extent, location (giving township and range), and boundaries of the reserved territory wherein each of the remaining selections may be made.

6. The several orders in council by virtue of which the area of selection affecting the companies mentioned in paragraph 5 were indicated, and any amendments of the same. The whole of the above information to be brought up to 1st January, 1906.—Mr. Ames.

For a return showing the total number of land patents issued, together with the acreage covered thereby, in and for the territory included within the limits of the present provisions of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, between the year 1872 and the 31st December, 1905, under each of the following forms of grant, stating also whether odd or even sections were affected; commutation grants, homesteads, Manitoba Act grants, military bounty grants, Northwest half-breed grants, parish sales, quit-claims special grants, railways, sales of mining, farming, ranching, &c., school land sales, special grants, and all others.—Mr. Ames.

For a return showing: 1. The number of homestead entries recorded each fiscal year from 1872 to 1905, and also during the six months ending 31st December, 1905, for the territory comprised in the present provinces of Manitoba Saskatchewan and Alberta.

2. The number and percentage of such entries for each year for which patents have prior to the 31st December, 1905, been granted, or recommendations made for the issue of patents.

3. The number and percentage of such entries for each year that have, prior to the 31st December, 1905, been cancelled.

4. The number and percentage of such entries for each year which, neither patented or cancelled, remained in an incompleted state on the first day of January, 1906.—Mr. Lake.

For a return showing: 1. The number of authorizations granted, under the authority of subsection 3 of article 34 of the Dominion Lands Act, for one person to make homestead entry on behalf of another person, during each of the years of 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904 and 1905.

2. Of the homestead entries made in consequence of said authorizations, during each of the years 1901 and 1902; how many have been in a demand for a patent; how many have been cancelled; how many stood upon the books of the Department of the Interior on January 1st, 1906, as neither patented nor cancelled.—Mr. Lake.

For a return showing the names of all the homestead inspectors at present attached to the thirteen agencies throughout Manitoba and the Northwest, and a record showing the number of days that each inspector was absent from his regular duties, between the 1st of July and the 31st of December, 1905, the cause of said absence, and a statement of expenses for each month during that period.— Mr. M. S. McCarthy by Mr. Ames.

For a return showing (a) the number of land sales, withdrawing even sections from homestead entry made by the Department of the Interior during the year 1904-5, and during the six months ending 31st December, 1905, together with the total acreage represented thereby; (b) the same regarding land sales affecting only odd sections; (c) the same regarding land sales affecting solid blocks of both even and odd sections.—Mr. M. S. McCarthy, by Mr. Ames.

For a return showing the amount of money scrip redeemed in Dominion land, and the number of acres thus purchased from the government, (a) in Manitoba; (b) in the Northwest; the figures for each year from 1875 to 31st December. 1905, being given separately.—Mr. W. J. Roche.

For a return showing: 1. The number of allotments of 240 acres of land, and acreage covered by the same, made between the 1st of July, 1896, and the 31st of December, 1905, to the halfbreeds of Manitoba, giving separately the figures of each year, and for the final six months.

2. The land scrip, if any, issued during the aforesaid period to colonization companies, giving in the case of each such company the name and head office address, and also giving the face value of such scrip and the year of its issuance.

3. The number and acreage of land scrip issued during the same period, to the halfbreeds of the Northwest (now Alberta and Saskatchewan), giving separately the figures for each year and for the final six months.

4. The number of acres of land scrip located within the limits of each of the thirteen Dominion land agencies of Manitoba and the Northwest, between the 1st of July, 1896, and the 31st of December, 1905, the figures for each agency each year to be given separately.

5. The number of acreage of land scrip granted prior to 1st July, 1896, to the halfbreeds (a) in Manitoba, and (b) of the Northwest.

6. The amount outstanding, granted but not located, on 1st July, 1896.—Mr. W. J. Roche.

For a return showing: 1, The number of allotments of land scrip and the total acreage covered thereby, made to halfbreeds (a) in Manitoba, and (b) in the Northwest, between 1st July, 1904, and 31st December, 1905

2. The number of land warrants, if any, and the acreage covered thereby issued for military services within the same period.

3. The number of scrip, if any, and the acreage covered thereby issued to the Northwest Mounted Police within the same period.

4. The number and acreage of all the above outstanding on the 31st December, 1905. All the above information being required in order to bring the information contained in Sessional Paper No. 67d, brought down the 13th July, 1904, up to the end of the last calendar year.—Mr. W. J. Roche.

For copies of all correspondence between the provincial governments and the Dominion government on the subject of the readjustment of provincial subsidies.—Mr. Parmelee.

ELECTIONS TO THE HOUSE.

On the Order being called:—

That a select committee of nine be appointed to inquire into the Acts relating to Elections to this House, and the prevention of corrupt practices thereat, and the procedure and practice upon petitions relating to such elections, and to report to the House if any changes are desireable therein. That the said committee have power to send for persons, papers and records. That three be a quorum of the committee.—Mr. R. L. Borden.

Mr R. L. BORDEN. I would like to discuss that as early as possible.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. We might do it to-morrow.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. It will be the first order to-morrow.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. On the motion of the Minister of Justice ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. No, on your motion. You have preference.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not insist on my motion provided the Minister of Justice is going on with his discussion on the same line. If it is more convenient he can begin.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. To-morrow public Bills and orders are on the first order but none are printed. Therefore the first motion will be that of Mr. Bennett, then that of Mr. Smith, and then my hon. friend's.

REPORT PRESENTED.

Report of the Postmaster General for the year ending 30th June, 1905.—Hon. A. B. Aylesworth.

ADJOURNMENT—INQUIRIES FOR RETURNS.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER moved the adjournment of the House.

Hon. GEO. E. FOSTER. On the 20th March last year, I moved for an order of the House which was passed asking—

For a return showing the number of wharfs, docks and piers constructed by the government in Canada in each year since 1896; the situation of each ; the total amount expended thereon, (a) in construction, including cost of land; (b) in maintenance, whether owned by the government or by corporations or individuals; the current expenditure in each year for (a) employees; (b) repairs; revenue derived therefrom each year; the number of vessels (a) steam; (b) sailing, which called each year and the tonnage of each.

A report has been laid on the table but it is not complete. I presume it is intended to cover a portion but does not cover all which was called for and is consequently practically of no use. I understand my hon. friend will be able to say that what is not brought down is in another department, but I will take it very kindly if he will see that the other department submits its portion and have the return brought down as a whole.

Hon. CHAS. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works). The return is not complete for the reason given by my hon. friend, but as he seemed so anxious for the information, I thought it better to give what was in the Public Works first. I shall be very glad to ask the Marine Department to bring down the balance.

Mr. FOSTER. There is one other report brought down on an order of the House of July, 1905, with reference to timber licenses and leases, which is imperfect in one respect, namely, that the advertisement and consequently the information as to the berths and conditions with reference to 340 lots is not given. This has to do with the limit purchased by Mr. T. O. Davis, of Saskatchewan. Will the minister make a note of that ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Will my hon. friend give the name and date ?

Mr. FOSTER. I shall send it over.

TRANSPORTATION COMMISSION.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I would like to ask the Prime Minister when we may expect the report of the transportation commission. I have not yet seen it and do not know whether or not it is being printed; and as some of the motions on the order paper have to do with this report, it is advisable that it should be printed and put in the hands of members at the earliest moment.

TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILWAY.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. There is another matter. When a certain report was laid on the table, I misunderstood its purport. It proves to be a report of Mr. Schreiber with respect to the progess of the work on the transcontinental between Winnipeg and the coast. We have not however the report of the Transcontinental Railway Commission although it is provided by statute that an annual report shall be submitted to each House of parliament within fifteen days after the making thereof or after the commencement of the next session of parliament whichever happens first.

If the report was made more than fifteen days ago, it should be laid on the table now. I assume that it has not been made, or that course would have been followed. I would like to remind the commission by this public notice that we shall expect the report within fifteen days, and, if possible, we would like it earlier.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The president of the commission told me that he expected to have his report ready in good time.

Mr. HYMAN. The hon. member for Carleton (Mr. R. L. Borden) was absent from his place when I answered another question on this subject by stating that the report of the transportation commission is now in the hands of the printer and I hope to be able to lay it on the table soon. It is quite a lengthy document.

Mr. HAUGHTON LENNOX (South Simcoe). I wish to call the attention of the Pastmaster General (Hon. Mr. Aylesworth) to the subject of an order made over a year ago—on the 6th of March, 1905. The hon. Minister will find a reference to it in 'Hansard', page 2067. As this report will be somewhat lengthy and as the session is to be a short one, I presume, that if the work in compliance with the order has not already been prepared, it should be set about at once. I call the hon. gentleman's attention to the matter now, because yesterday, owing to considerable confusion in the House at the close, I could not ascertain from any act of the Postmaster General whether his attention had actually been directed to it or not.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 5.40 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THURSDAY, March 15, 1906.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

ADULTERATION ACT AMENDMENT.

Mr. J. G. H. BERGERON (Beauharnois) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 15) to amend the Adulteration Act. He said: The object of the Bill is to force those who sell patent medicine to have attached to the package the formula of the medicine they offer for sale. This is the same Bill that I introduced towards the end of last session. The then Minister of Inland Revenue, I understand, intended to bring in a Bill to the same effect. The new Minister is not in, and I do not know what is his intention in the matter.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. I would like to ask the mover of the Bill how his Act is to be construed in connection with a similar Act which is being introduced into the legislature of Ontario ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. It is impossible to say. We shall have to wait until the measure is brought up for discussion. This motion is simply to introduce it.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

QUESTIONS.

TELEPHONE LEGISLATION.

Mr. INGRAM asked :

1. Is it the intention of the government to introduce any legislation this session affecting telephone companies ?
2. What amount was paid to witnesses and others for travelling and other expenses in connection with the inquiry made by the Select Committee on Telephone Systems last session, including all amounts paid for clerks, experts, expenses as representatives to telephone conventions, or for services performed for said select committee ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). I would ask my hon. friend to wait until the Minister of Railways introduces the Bill of which he has given notice, to amend the Railway Act, and he will then perhaps find an answer to his question. With regard to the second part of the question I have not yet obtained the information, but I hope to obtain it in a few days for my hon. friend.

APPOINTMENT OF MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT.

Mr. SPROULE—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. How many members of parliament have been appointed to positions of emolument from the Crown since the year 1896 ?
2. What are the names of such members so appointed, and what is the salary attached to each appointment ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). If my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule) were here, I would remind him that I gave him an answer to a similar question last year, and since then the only appointments that I am aware of have been those of Sir William Mulock to the bench, Mr. Peter Talbot to the Senate, and Mr. McKenzie, of Cape Breton, to the bench.

ATLANTIC MAIL SERVICE.

Mr. STOCKTON asked :

1. Has the government recently entered into any contract or contracts for the carriage of the mails across the Atlantic ?
2. When were such contracts entered into ?
3. Who are the contractors in each case ?

4. Which, if any, of the said contracts were let after public advertisement and tender ?

5. What is the amount of each contract ?

6. What rate of speed or time limit is provided in each contract ?

7. Is provision made in each contract for carriage by more efficient and faster steamers, in case such should be placed on the route during the term of the said contract ?

8. If such provision is not made, why has it been omitted ?

9. If the contracts, or any of them, were let without public advertisement, why was that safeguard omitted ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). In the year 1902 the government invited tenders for a fast mail service. Four tenders, if I remember rightly, were received, but they were not satisfactory. Then the government entered into negotiations with the Allan Company for an improved service. A contract has been made with that company, and it will be laid before the House in a few days.

THE PROHIBITION OF CIGARETTES.

Mr. BLAIN asked :

When will the government introduce a Bill embodying the principles contained in the following resolution, as passed by the House on April 1, 1903, by a vote of 103 for and 48 against:

'That the object of good government is to promote the general welfare of the people by a careful encouragement and protection of whatever makes for the public good; and by equally careful discouragement and suppression of whatever tends to the public disadvantage.

'That the smoking of cigarettes has been proved by overwhelming testimony to be productive of serious physical and moral injury to young people; impairing health, arresting development, weakening intellectual power, and thus constituting a social and national evil.

'The legislataion licensing and restricting the sale of cigarettes has not proven sufficient to prevent these evils, which will continue while the public sale of the cause of the mischief is permitted to go on.

'That this House is of the opinion, for the reasons hereinbefore set forth, that the right and most effectual legislative remedy for these evils is to be found in the enactment and enforcement of a law prohibiting the importation, manufacture and sale of cigarettes.'

Hon. CHARLES FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice). In connection with some amendments to the Criminal Code which I proposed a session of two ago, provision was made for this cigarette nuisance, but my amendment as then proposed did not meet with the approval of either side of the House, and I was forced to withdraw it. It is possible that during the present session other amendments to the Criminal Code may be introduced, in connection with which this matter may be taken into consideration.

Mr. STOCKTON.

FREE RURAL MAIL DELIVERY.

Mr. LENNOX asked :

1. Has the Postmaster General, since the 6th March, 1905, applied to the government of the United States for a tabulated statement of the services rendered and expenses, under the system of free rural mail delivery established in that country, and as to the routes, distances, equipment, and other data, to enable the department to judge as to the expediency of the establishment of such a system in Canada ? If so, with what result ?

2. If not, why not ?

3. Or has the Postmaster General sent an officer to the government of the United States to endeavour to obtain such statement and information ? If so, with what result ?

4. If not, why not ?

5. Since the 6th of March, 1905, what steps, if any, other than as above, has the Postmaster General or his department taken to acquaint himself with the working of free rural delivery in the United States, the conditions existing there, the probability of its being permanently maintained, and as to the expediency of its adoption in Canada.

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Postmaster General). No formal application has been made to the government of the United States officially, but two officers of the Canadian Post Office Department were sent to Washington in April last to make inquiries on the subject. They asked for a tabulated statement such as is above described, and were told that no statistics had been compiled from the data in hand except such as had been furnished from year to year in the printed reports of the United States Postal Department.

EMPLOYEES ON INTERCOLONIAL.

Mr. MORIN asked :

How many employees of all kinds were employed on the Intercolonial Railway and its several branches for the years 1899, 1900, 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904 and 1905 ?

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (Minister of Railways and Canals) :

There were 5,037 employees of all kinds on Intercolonial Railway and branches in 1899; 5,601 in 1900; 7,251 in 1901; 7,013 in 1902; 6,962 in 1903; 7,160 in 1904; 8,540 in 1905.

THE QUEBEC BRIDGE.

On the Orders of the Day being called :

Mr. J. E. ARMSTRONG (East Lambton). Before the Orders of the Day are called I wish to call the attention of the government to a very important matter. We all recognize that the port of Montreal is one of the most important ports on the North American continent, and I am sure there is not a member in this House—

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Order.

Mr. SPEAKER. Order.

An hon. MEMBER. What is the point of order ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The point of order is that if my hon. friend wants to put a question it is all right, but I understand he is going to make a speech.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. I do not intend to make at all a lengthy speech, I merely wish to place before the House the facts. If necessary I shall move the adjournment of the House in order to place the matter before the House, because I believe that not a day should be allowed to pass without having the matter brought under the consideration of the government. I was calling the attention of the government to the importance of the port of Montreal and to the necessity of not interfering with that waterway in any way, of not interfering with the transportation of exports from that port. I have here, Mr. Speaker, a letter from a prominent engineer and if you will be good enough to allow me time, I shall place it before the House. It conveys some facts with reference to the Quebec bridge. The writer says :

I hereby take the liberty of calling your attention to an article 'Canada on the world's highway' in the March issue of 'The Canadian Engineer' exhibiting a danger which threatens both the navigation of the St. Lawrence river, and the position and importance of Montreal as a harbour.

I believe that this danger can be averted if energetic steps are taken at once toward a raising of the superstructure of the bridge in question. I believe that this can be done without seriously interfering with the construction, or without incurring additional expenses of any amount worth consideration in comparison to the importance of the problem ; which is nothing less than the preservation of the navigability of 165 miles of first-class waterway leading directly to the mercantile and industrial centre of the continent.

The article to which this engineer refers in the 'Canadian Engineer' is one, I believe of very great importance. Diagrams are given here of the different ships that are under construction at the present time and it distinctly shows that the new turbine under construction by the Cunard Company, a 40,000 ton boat is of such a height that even the smoke stack would not pass under the Quebec bridge as it is now proposed. When you take into consideration the fact that the height of the Quebec bridge above high water mark is 150 feet and that of the tower bridge in London built in 1890, is 143 feet; of the Baltic canal bridge, 137 feet; and the East River bridge in New York, built in 1870 is 135 feet, the gravity of the situation will be understood. I do not know that I can do better than quote the words of this article. It is written by Mr. Alfred J. Roewade, consulting engineer, civic designer, Chicago, Ill. He says :

To contemplate new transportation lines for the world's traffic is one thing ; to maintain and improve those already existing is another and often equally important thing. Hence I beg as an addendum to the previous articles under this heading to call attention to a danger threatening Canada's oldest and probably most important, trade route, namely the waterway from the sea to the Great Lakes.

It has up to date been taken for granted that the St. Lawrence river would be kept navigable for ocean ships to Montreal, from whence the canal route to the lakes begins. This great route, on which so much genius, work and money has already been expended and the completion of which is expected to tax the country's resources in the future, is threatened with a serious setback by the building of a fixed bridge 165 miles from Montreal, near the city of Quebec.

It is a generally acknowledged fact that whenever great enterprises like the Quebec bridge are contemplated a number of side problems butt in, demanding serious consideration. It is a common practice to keep as many as possible of the minor side problems out of sight in order to simplify the main scheme and thus accelerate its adoption. This practice is eminently correct so long as more or less temporary solutions are aimed at ; but a different course becomes necessary when problems of great prospective importance are involved. Among the side problems which ought to have been seriously considered before finally adopting the Quebec bridge was that of overhead clearance for vessels of the largest type. It must be admitted that the ideas in technical circles with regard to this problem are rather vague and hazy. The question is : What is the height of the rigging of the future ship? In the time of the sailing ship it was approximately equal to the length of the hull ; but now that the steamship has superseded the sailing vessel on the ocean the proportional height is considerably lower—how much is commonly regarded as a matter of guesswork. In some quarters it is even regarded as unimportant, because if the rigging of a steamship is too high to pass obstacles overhead it can be cut down. Yet this is a mistake, for the structure and dimensions of the modern steel rigging do not allow of such easy handling ; besides, the funnels of the largest modern steamships have already reached a height which forbids their passage under any of the fixed bridges over waterways, which generally are supposed to have clearance enough for any ship afloat. The lack of sufficient clearance for the future ship types under bridges like that at Quebec will, it is feared, result not in a lowering of the rigging, but in the employment of smaller vessels for carriage of freight and passengers ; and this means a reduction of the waterway to a lower class. The danger in this lies in the fact that the little ship and the ship of moderate size do not count at the present stage of evolution in mercantile marine because it does not pay. It is the large ship which is the economical one in regard to power and manning expenses ; hence, the harbour which cannot admit the great modern ship is out of the competition for ocean traffic, is but an inland port—a harbour for the coasting trade.

I do not wish to read all this article, but I wish to call to your attention this fact that on investigation at the Deparment of Railways and Canals, I find that these figures are based upon facts, and if the minister will investigate this matter he will find that in accordance with the statistics contained in this article not only ships of the 40,000 ton type but ships of the 25,000 ton type, will not be able to pass under the Quebec bridge. I feel confident that the people of Montreal and vicinity and not only the people of Montreal are interested but the people of the whole of Canada and of the western and northern states, of which a large portion of the trade will be gradually flowing to the port of Montreal. We must take into consideration the fact that in the past ten years the exports out of the port of Montreal have more than doubled, we must also bear in mind that ten years from now we will probably be shipping from that port not $250,000,000 worth of exports but $500,000,000, and that it will be necessary for the large ships to come up there to take care of that export trade. I sincerely hope the Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Emmerson) will take this matter into consideration and investigate it at the earliest possible date, because I understand, Sir, that the superstructure can be built and can be made higher than it is at present without any very great expense to this country, and even if it does cost some $50,000 or $100,000 to place it ten feet or fifteen feet higher I feel satisfied that the people of Canada, when they consider this question, will believe that it is money well expended, so that the port of Montreal which is 165 miles this side of Quebec will be able to have the advantage of the large ships coming up to that port and also the advantage of the lower freight rates which this will naturally bring into effect. I do not wish to take up more of the time of the House, but I will again ask the minister to investigate this matter, in view of the height required by the large ships which are being built in other countries, and of the vital importance to Canada of building up the trade by the St. Lawrence route. If he will take into consideration the construction of the docks at Liverpool and along the Mersey and those along the Thames, and also the overhead bridge at London to which I have referred, where I have seen boats of even moderate size with not too great room in going under, he will readily know that the arguments given by this gentleman in the 'Canadian Engineer' are worthy of the most serious attention. I sincerely trust that the minister will investigate the matter and will give the case his most careful consideration. I move that this House do now adjourn.

Mr. E. D. SMITH (Wentworth). This seems to me a matter of very serious importance, and one which should receive careful consideration. If the statements made by this civil engineer, that modern vessels are being constructed of such height that they will be unable to pass under this bridge—a permanent structure—are well founded, it will be a serious menace to the trade of the St. Lawrence route. The port of Montreal ought to be the outlet of the greater part of the traffic of Canada, as well as a large part of that of the northern United States. At present, a considerable portion of the traffic passes out, not by way of Montreal, but by way of Portland, Boston, and New York, because the freights of these ports are lower than those of Montreal. And the reason why the freights at Montreal are relatively higher is because the St. Lawrence is not fully equipped so that large ocean vessels may traverse it safely night and day at full speed. In view of the fact that Montreal is much nearer Liverpool than New York or Boston this ought not to be so. Two years ago I made a careful estimate of the freight on the amount of produce shipped out of the port of Montreal, and found that it would amount to $800,000 in a year more than by the other routes. Besides this, we are paying large subsidies to induce steamers to come to Montreal. Ostensibly we pay this largely for the carriage of the mails. But, if these were paid for in the ordinary way, the sum of $4,000 or $5,000 would be sufficient instead of the $200,000 or $300,000 we now pay in the shape of subsidy. Altogether we find that we are paying $1,000,000 a year more on our outward freight and our subsidies than we would have to pay by American routes. Surely it is worthy of consideration that we should have no further impediment in the way of the traffic by the St. Lawrence route. We must make this route as safe as any other route across the Atlantic. When this is brought about, the fast ocean vessels will be able to use the St. Lawrence as freely as the open sea, and we shall save the enormous sum that we now lose annually in freights. And, year after year, the vessels will increase in size. We have, naturally, an impregnable position if we can make the St. Lawrence route as safe as the open ocean, because in Montreal we have a port that can be reached with a shorter rail haul from the interior than any other ocean port. This great natural advantage we ought not to lose. Therefore, I trust that the government will realize the duty resting upon it of carefully investigating this matter before it is too late.

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (Minister of Railways and Canals). I want to congratulate my hon. friends from Ontario upon the fact that they seem to be imbued with the maritime spirit; and I shall welcome their co-operation in other matters in which maritime interests may be menaced or affected. The question raised by my hon. friend from East Lambton (Mr. Armstrong) may be an important one, but I think that if he had read the opinions expressed by men who are regarded eminent authorities in such matters, as set forth in the Montreal 'Gazette' of this morning, he would have seen that there was no ground for alarm. I shall simply give the measurements, and will then call attention to the opinions expressed by Mr. Kennedy, a very eminent engineer connected with the port of Montreal, and the Messrs. Allan, who certainly, would be alive to the importance of this question. The Quebec bridge has two approach spans—one at the north and the other at the south end of the bridge—of 210 feet each. Both of these spans have been completed. The bridge consists of two anchor arms of 500 feet span each and the main span of 1,500 feet between the main piers. The clearance above the highest water level is 150 feet for a distance of 1,200 feet covering the channel of the river. The railway approaches with bridges on the south side, have, I think, been constructed to this grade above high water level, and I understand that the north approaches are being constructed to the same level.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Is that the height of the clear space, or is it the height from the rail to the water ?

Mr. EMMERSON. That is the height under the bridge from the highest water level to the lowest point of the bridge. An article appears in the Montreal 'Gazette' of this morning under the following headings :

Alarm is needless.

New bridge at Quebec will not interfere with the steamers coming up to Montreal.

Can easily pass under.

Structure over Manchester ship canal allow 75 feet. At Cap Rouge there are 150 feet.

I will not read all the article, but only a part of it, as follows :

According to the statements given below by men of experience, the Quebec bridge can never be a serious menace to the trade of Canada's national port, and for several reasons. In the first place, the theory appears to be quite well sustained that no masts or steamer's funnels will be too high to pass the good city of Quebec, sail under the bridge and proceed to the commercial metropolis of the Dominion. If, however, the best authorities on the St. Lawrence river be in error, and Mr. Alfred J. Reonade's fears are justified some time in the remote future, masts can always be lowered without any difficulty whatever, and steamers' funnels can be made telescopic, as is the case with all the Manchester liners.

Mr. John Kennedy, chief engineer of the harbour board, being interviewed, said that he did not think there was any foundation for the Quebec bridge scare. All those who had read the article in the 'Canadian Engineer' noticed that there were no figures given by Mr. Roenade, except the height of the bridge from high Water. Generalities had alone been indulged in, and Mr. Kennedy was at a loss to know where the data had been secured prompting the declaration that the funnels of the very largest steamers could not pass under the bridge. He had no idea that any of the big ships would have masts or funnels of such height. Masts of the present day ships are not particularly high. Some time ago the maximum height of the tunnels of the United States warships was 130 feet, but they are now cut down to a much lower figure He remembered that the masts of old sailing ships were as high as 160 feet, and a Yarmouth, N.S., ship, called the Ellen A. Read, 1,760 tons, had a mainmast 204 feet over all

This, however, did not mean anything, as the upper masts could always be lowered when circumstances required.

Mr. Kennedy also drew attention to the fact that the fixed bridges over the Manchester ship canal were no higher than 75 feet, and this decision was reached after a good deal of inquiry and discussion by the canal, shipping and civic authorities. If a great and progressive community like Manchester felt that there was no danger to its interests with 75-foot bridges over the canal, he did not think the trade of Montreal would be jeopardized while there were 150 feet to the good at Cap Rouge.

Mr. Hugh Andrew Allan, of the firm of Messrs. H. & A. Allan, who was also seen, expressed views identical with those of Mr Kennedy. As soon as Mr. Allen had seen the height of the piers of the Quebec bridge he had made up his mind that all danger to Montreal's trade in that direction was exceedingly remote. He had also been struck by the entire lack of data in the 'Canadian Engineer's' article. He had looked over the plans of the new turbine steamer 'Virginian,' and found that it was 84 feet from the keel to the highest bridge deck on the steamer, and allowing her to draw 26 feet, there still remained a margin of 92 feet for the funnels and masts. He did not think there were any grounds whatever for alarm. He said it was quite a common thing for steamers to have telescopic funnels, like the Manchester liners.

Mr. Speaker, it would seem to me that the opinions here expressed by these gentlemen should dispose of the question. The Department of Railways and Canals, through its engineers, and in the specifications, have made every necessary provision; I have no doubt that this matter was very fully considered. When you come to talk about 40,000 ton ships coming up to Montreal, that is not likely to occur in the very near future. In the first place, the best depth of water that can be found, I fancy, would not permit vessels of that tonnage approaching the port of Montreal. The class of vessels that are likely to be constructed for that trade within the near future, is not likely to be barred from visiting the port of Montreal by reason of the height of this bridge.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. I do not wish to prolong the debate. I merely wish to say with reference to the masts, that the Minister of Railways and Canals must realize that with the steel masts that are in use to-day it is almost impossible to adjust them to the height of bridges.

Mr. EMMERSON. The hon. gentleman forgets about the top masts, they lower those.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. If he will look at the articles in the American papers with reference to those bridges I referred to, the height of the one at New York and on the Baltic canal, he will readily understand that they will not admit of large ships such as are mentioned in that article. I merely want to draw attention to these facts. As to the St. Lawrence not being capable of admitting large ships coming up to the port of Montreal, I would be the last to believe it until the fact was ascertained by the very best engineers we can place upon that river. I hope and believe that in the years to come we will take a more energetic stand with reference to the development of the St. Lawrence river, and that instead of our widening it a hundred feet or two hundred feet, if it is necessary we will widen the channel three hundred feet or five hundred feet, so that large vessels can ply up and down that river day and night, and I believe that the people of Canada would feel that in doing so they were spending their money to a very good purpose. The minister must admit that so far as transportation on that river is concerned, it will materially assist in reducing the rates on the railroads for these could not possibly carry freight 165 miles for 50 or 75 per cent less than large boats could carry it up to the port of Montreal. I know there are some people who think that in consequence of the rapids 40 miles above Quebec it would be impossible to take away those rocks without lowering the water at the port of Montreal. But if they will investigate what has been done on the Danube, for instance, and see the dams that have been built there and the immense value they have been in improving navigation on those rivers, they will realize that in years to come it is possible to make the St. Lawrence navigable for the largest ship.

Hon. L. P. BRODEUR (Minister of Marine and Fisheries). Before the motion is carried I think I should take some notice of the remarks made by the hon. member for East Lambton (Mr. Armstrong). He seems to be under the impression that the government has not been doing its duty in connection with opening the St. Lawrence channel. For some years past, especially since 1899, great efforts have been put forth in order to deepen the channel to 30 feet. I may say that in all probability, by the 1st of October next, the channel will be deepened to 30 feet as far as Batiscan; and at high tide, from Batiscan to Quebec there will be certainly more than 30 feet. So I think there is no danger and no possibility that the navigation of the St. Lawrence will leave anything to be desired after that.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Does the minister mean to say that from Montreal to Batiscan or from Quebec to Batiscan there will be 30 feet ?

Mr. BRODEUR. From Montreal to Bastiscan. On the 1st of October next, I think, I can assure the House that the work will be completed and that we will have a channel 30 feet deep at extreme low water. Last year, if I remember right, some more work remained to be done, and when that is finished we shall have 31 feet at low water. So we may expect that at extreme low water between Batiscan and Montreal there will be at least 30 feet on the 1st of October. Now as concerns the width of the channel, we are taking the necessary steps in that direction also. Where we find large curves we are trying to give greater width to the channel. Since I have been at the head of the department I have had an opportunity of seeing many persons who are interested in navigation on the St. Lawrence, and with the system of lights we have established, especially during the last two years, we may expect the channel can be navigated not only during the day but also during the night without any difficulty at all. I am convinced that the work we are now carrying on will be found absolutely satisfactory to the navigation and shipping interests on the St. Lawrence. I am sorry however to see occasionally in the press some references to the difficulties of the navigation of the St. Lawrence. I do not know where this information comes from, but we are sometimes in the habit of seeing charges made against the facility of the navigation of the St. Lawrence. I do not think this is fair because not a single one of the accidents which occurred last year was due to the depth of the channel and nothing consequently can be charged to the government or the department in that respect. I desire to assure the House that no effort will be spared to make the channel of the St. Lawrence one of the best channels that can be found.

Motion (Mr. Armstrong) to adjourn negatived.

ARBITRATION BETWEEN HIS MAJESTY AND THE GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY COMPANY.

On the Orders of the Day being called :

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Carleton, Ont.). Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask the government what is the position of the arbitration between His Majesty and the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada. It has been carried on under a special Act passed in the session of 1904. I have seen some reference to a report or a partial report, and it would be convenient to have information conveyed to the House as to what the present position is.

Hon. CHARLES FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice). The arbitration is practically disposed of; that is to say, of the seven or eight questions which were submitted to the arbitrators five or six of them have been already disposed of. There are two which still remain to be considered and these are the two which, in my judgment are probably the most important. They are the questions which affect diversion of traffic. These questions are now under consideration, all the evidence is in, and I expect that the arbitrators will give a finding on these two points within the next month or two. I might in the interval, perhaps, if it were thought desirable, bring down the findings we have got so far from the arbitrators.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. It might be desirable to have them if there is no objection.

Mr. BERGERON. Are the findings final?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes. I was asked to agree that there could be an appeal from the findings of the arbitrators if the parties chose to take one, before the arbitrators gave their decision, but I refused because our intention was that it should be a final settlement of the whole matter as between the Intercolonial Railway and the Grand Trunk Railway.

REPORTS PRESENTED.

Report of the Inland Revenue Department, part I, in regard to Excise, for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1905; also part II, in regard to the inspection of Weights and Measures and Gas and Electric Light.—Hon. L. P. Brodeur.

Report of the Department of Labour for the year ended June 30, 1905.—Hon. A. B. Aylesworth.

POSTMASTER AT CANNINGTON.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I desire to direct the attention of the hon. the Postmaster General (Mr. Aylesworth) to the fact that subquestion 5 of the question concerning the removal of the Cannington postmaster was not answered yesterday. Question 4 is:

Were there ever any complaints against him?

The answer given is:

There had been complaints from time to time in regard to the management of this post office.

Question 5 was:

If so, what were they?

Question 5 has not been answered.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. They were various.

MINISTERIAL CHANGES.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I would like to ask the right hon. Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) whether or not he proposes to give the usual explanation of the ministerial changes?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I will be very happy to do so at any time which may be convenient to my hon. friend (Mr. Borden). What day shall we say—to-morrow, or Monday, or Tuesday?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Whatever will suit the convenience of my right hon. friend.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Well, to-morrow will suit me very well.

MASSACRE OF JEWS IN RUSSIA.

Mr. A. C. MACDONELL (South Toronto). Mr. Speaker, I would ask the indulgence of the House in addressing to it the few remarks that I will make on the resolution that I have placed upon the order paper. The resolution as proposed is as follows:

That during the reign of terror which recently prevailed in many parts of Russia, large numbers of helpless men, women and children of the Hebrew race were massacred in a most brutal and inhuman manner.

That no adequate effort appears to have been made to prevent these outrages, the perpetrators of which were permitted to complete their atrocious work.

That the parliament of Canada, expressing the sentiment of the Canadian people, without distinction of race, creed or party, deplores such wanton and inhuman massacre of the Jews in Russia, and affirms that these atrocities are a disgrace to the civilization of the twentieth century.

That this resolution be forwarded through His Excellency the Governor General, to the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies, in order that His Majesty may be advised of the sentiment of his Canadian subjets in the premises, and to the end that such action may be taken thereon as His Majesty's advisers may deem meet.

The resolution speaks for itself but my object in introducing it to the House is two-fold; firstly, for the purpose of expressing sympathy with the victims and sufferers of these massacres and of deploring and condemning them in so far as we have the right to do so, and secondly, for the purpose of, if possible, by placing ourselves on record in this matter and by voicing the sentiments of the Canadian people through the Canadian House of Commons, averting a continuation or repetition of these outrages, or at least of mitigating the rigour of them. It is within the knowledge of every hon. member of this House, and I think of every citizen of Canada, that these outrages have been committed. I, therefore, need not dwell at any length upon them. Suffice it to say that during the last two years over 100,000 helpless men, women and children of the Hebrew race have been massacred in Russia. The Russian people took advantage of the riots which they themselves, apparently, incited, to rise and massacre these helpless creatures. The intensity of these massacres, if I may use the term, increased as time went on and they seemed to culminate in one great outburst of passion and the shedding of blood in the month of November last. Since that time practically the whole civilized world has gone on record against such a condition of things. The peoples of Canada, Great Britain and the United States particularly have condemned these occurrences. We have seen throughout this country public meetings held and resolutions passed condemning these outrages, and I think I am correct in saying that the right hon. the Prime Minister of this country dignified one of these meetings in this city with his presence and either by presiding thereat or speaking thereat expressed what I believe to be the sentiments of the Canadian people in regard to these outrages. Much has been done towards, if possible, preventing a recurrence of them. Various Ministers of the Gospel throughout the country have preached against them. Public contributions have been made to relieve the sufferers, collections have been taken up for the purpose of aiding these helpless creatures. The public press, I think, without exception, has condemned these outrages. They have been condemned by the public press and by public writers. The letters that have appeared in the public press have been almost innumerable, and as recently as January of this year the Congress of the United States of America has gone on record by the passing of a resolution similar in sentiment to the one which I have proposed to this House, but in much stronger terms and language.

I think Sir, it is not asking this House too much when I ask it to endorse this resolution, as the resolution itself says : without distinction of creed, or race, or party. Let us at least enter out protest ; let us hope this resolution will not miscarry. It may be said and no doubt it will be said that such a resolution is futile and can be of no avail. I decline to accept that view. I believe that if we thus formally place the sentiments of the Canadian parliament in the hands of His Majesty it will strengthen his Majesty's hands to take whatever course his advisers may see fit in regard to the matter. It is known to us all that massacres of a somewhat similar character were stopped in Turkey and in China by the interference of other nations, and let us hope that this resolution may tend towards a similar result in the present sad circumstances. We see in the newspapers to-day, threats of a recurrence of these dreadful massacres during the coming Easter season. It seems strange that the sanctified Easter time should be selected for such an inhuman purpose, but we have the fact that these outrages occurred at Easter time in 1903, 1904 and 1905. Even if this resolution should have the effect of staying the hand of only one assassin of the Jews, the resolution will not be passed in vain.

Mr. MACDONELL.

And, Sir, who are these people who have been so persecuted in Russia ? If we are to judge them as we find them in Canada we must form a high opinion of the Jewish race. It is safe to say there are no more law abiding citizens of His Majesty in this country than are our Hebrew fellow subjects. They enjoy perfect security under our British constitution, they enjoy equal rights with their Christian fellow subjects and in their turn they respect the law which protects them, and evidence their desire to uphold the constitution. They are law abiding and good citizens of Canada. They are a charitable race and this resolution partakes of the qualities of charity and mercy. They are a people who maintain their own poor ; they make that a practise of their religion. We see no Jews in the public charitable institutions of the country, and I am happy to say very few of them in the prisons and penitentiaries. I trust Sir, that this resolution will not contravene any international usage, law, or custom. I trust that this expression of the sentiment of the people of Canada will not in any way be considered as a violation of the comity of nations. The resolution is framed in as moderate language as it is possible to frame it in order to give expression to the sentiments it contains. But, Sir, if it is thought that the resolution is too strong in its terms, if it is thought it asks more than we in Canada have the right to ask of his Majesty in connection with this matter, then I am perfectly willing that the resolution should be modified so as conform to the ordinary usage. This is a humanitarian and a philanthropic resolution. I hope that there will be no difference of opinion in this House regarding it, and no misconstruction of my motives in bringing it forward. I submit it with the suggestion, that if it is considered to be too strong in its terms, it may be modified in any way that may suit the exigencies of the case, so long as it preserves intact the expression of the unanimous sentiment of the Canadian people which I believe it embodies. I have great pleasure in moving the resolution.

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). I certainly have no exception to take to anything that has been said by my hon. friend (Mr. Macdonell) nor to the motive which has inspired him in bringing this resolution before the House. Our fellow citizens of the Hebrew race deserve every encomium he has bestowed upon them. They are industrious, they are peaceful, they are frugal, they are respectable citizens of Canada in every sense of the word. We have reason to presume that their character in Russia is the same as it is here, but whatever may be their character as citizens of the Russian empire, there is no possible justification for the harsh treatment to which they have been subjected. What has taken place in Russia must instill a feeling of horror in the breast of any civilized man. I have however to call the attention of my hon. friend, and of the House, to this point: Whether it is advisable that we should pass such a resolution in this parliament. The citizens of Canada have passed somewhat similar resolutions in public meetings—in one of which I have myself taken part—and that proceeding is quite proper. It is right that the sense of horror of every man in this free country should be expressed, so that by the multiplicity and unanimity of these expressions of opinion some influence may perhaps be brought upon the government of Russia to induce them to protect the lives of their citizens. That is a thing that is quite within the duty of every Canadian citizen. But, I would like the House to remember that this parliament does not represent the full plenary sovereign power. We are a colony of England, and whilst we have full autonomous power, we have not at this moment the right to interfere in foreign matters as to which the Crown of England alone is responsible. We have on more than one occasion in this House passed resolutions on matters affecting a people beyond our own purview and jurisdiction, but in relation to the condition of British subjects in other parts of the empire. Take the example with which we are all familiar; upon more than one occasion this House has passed a resolution on the question of Home Rule for Ireland. I believe it is quite within our power and quite within our right as British subjects to express opinions as to conditions which may affect our fellow British subjects in any part of the world, but I think we should hesitate somewhat, or at all events take some care to reflect, before we interfere in a matter which is purely within the domain of the Foreign Office and the relations of England with a foreign power. If we had full plenary power it would be for us to determine whether it would be advisable for us to interfere even ever so slightly with the domestic policy of any other nation. But, the relations of England at the present time with Russia are the relations which belong simply to the diplomatic service of Great Britain and in that service we have no voice whatever. I am not prepared to say at this moment that I would condemn the action taken by my hon. friend (Mr. Macdonell); far from it. I would simply ask this House of Commons to reflect whether or not it is wise for us as a dependent colony of Great Britain, having no plenary sovereignty, to interfere in the slightest degree with the sovereignty of England in its relation to other nations. I am not prepared at this moment to express any opinion on this question I would like to have the opinion of the House upon it, though I express my own conviction that it is far preferable for us not to attempt to advise England as to what her duties are with regard to other nations. At this moment, while I am not prepared to take issue altogether with my hon. friend, I would ask the House again to reflect on this matter and to postpone the consideration of it to a future date. As I have said, I sympathize with the object of my hon. friend. He is moved by motives of humanity. We all sympathize with him. He has put his case in moderate language, to which I am sure no exception can be taken. But I think that the matter had better be deferred for future consideration, and therefore I beg to move that the debate be now adjourned.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN (South York). Mr. Speaker, I do not altogether agree with the doctrine that has been laid down by the Prime Minister on this occasion. The British parliament has taken up questions of this kind and has expressed sympathy with oppressed people in various portions of the world, and I think the parliament of Canada has sufficient rights, if it cares to assert them, to express its sympathy in the same way. This parliament is not secondary to the British parliament in matters of this kind, and I hope the day will soon come when we shall have the fullest liberty, and assert the fullest liberty, of declaring our views with regard to matters of this kind. I sympathize altogether with what the hon. member for South Toronto (Mr. Macdonell) has said. While I regret the massacres that have taken place and the injustice that has been done to the Jews, it must be a matter of satisfaction to Canadians and to the world at large that Russia to-day is effecting her emancipation, and that constitutional government is coming in that country. Everybody must be more than pleased to see the dawn of a better day in Russia, with the coming of constitutional government founded somewhat on British lines.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Carleton, Ont.). I agree with the Prime Minister that it is better to postpone the further consideration of this question at the moment. The resolution is couched, as the mover has said, in less forcible language than that which was employed in a resolution on the same subject passed by the Congress of the United States. With most of what the Prime Minister has said. I would be inclined to agree, except that one qualification perhaps might be made, which is this, that technically as well as actually this parliament has a perfect right to address the King on any subject whatever. From that standpoint one would think that this parliament might be very well justified in passing a moderate resolution with regard to what has taken place in Russia; and I join most heartily in what has been said by the Prime Minister and by the mover of the resolution as to the feeling with which these outrages have been regarded by the people of Canada as a whole. The position of Canada with regard to the foreign relations of the empire is, as the Prime Minister has said, somewhat peculiar. It is possible that it may be a transition stage. As to that we can only speculate. On one occasion I recollect that this House passed a resolution, since I have had the honour of being a member of it, which concerned people outside the empire. That was the resolution which we passed I think in 1899, with regard to the rights of British subjects in the Transvaal.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. England claimed a suzerainty over the Transvaal.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. She claimed suzerainty, it is true; there is that observation to be made. There was a good deal of difference of opinion as to whether that was merely a nominal right or a practical right. The Prime Minister will remember that English jurists and statesmen differed a good deal in opinion as to what that amounted to, after all. However, for the moment I entirely agree with the proposal which the Prime Minister has made that the debate be adjourned. If it is proper for this parliament, having regard to its relation to the King, and to the empire, to make a moderate expression of opinion with regard to these outrages, it seems to me that the motion of my hon. friend is well founded, and that some resolution couched in these or similar terms might very well be passed. It is, however, a case in which it is not wise for us to make too great haste. Therefore I am entirely in accord with the motion of the Prime Minister.

Mr. HENRI BOURASSA (Labelle). Mr. Speaker, in case this motion should result as some other motions for the adjournment of debates have resulted in times past, I think this debate should not be ended without some sober thought being expressed now to clear the atmosphere of what I might call the fictitious sentiment which has been sought to be developed in this country in favour of the Jews. I need not say that I am animated by no feeling against the Jews, any more than I suppose the hon. member for South Toronto (Mr. Macdonell) is animated by consideration of the influence the Jewish vote may have in his constituency. I take for granted that both my hon. friend and myself are speaking our mind on this subject. I may say in passing that the province of Quebec was the first part of the British empire to accord to the Jews their rights as citizens. Even at the time when my co-religionists and those of my hon. friend were denied those rights in England, the French Canadian Catholics in the province of Quebec passed a law—and if I may speak personally, I may say that my own grandfather was the author of it—to give the Jews civil rights in the province of Quebec, before England or any other part of the British empire had done so. But if we allow ourselves, even before we have the right to rule ourselves as a nation, to be drawn into debates on international questions and to take upon ourselves the tremendous responsibility of advising all nations on earth as to what they should do in regard to their internal affairs, I think we should take care to study a little the questions on which we pass resolutions, otherwise our action might carry us very far. For instance, we might be induced to pass resolutions condemning the barbarous custom of lynching which is kept up in the United States in time of peace, and when there is no social revolution to excuse the American government for not stamping out that barbarous custom. We might also from time to time pass resolutions condemning the criminal neglect of the Turkish government to prevent the massacre of thousands of Christians in countries where England, France and some other European powers have the right to exert their influence. So far as Russian Jews are concerned, perhaps we might be a little careful about our expressions of sympathy, in view of the well established fact, which has been vouched for by the most sober correspondents of British newspapers, that the Jews have been at the bottom of most of the social troubles that have arisen in Russia—that a great deal of the money that has been raised by subscriptions in foreign countries on behalf of the Russian Jews has been as a matter of fact used in purchasing firearms and supplies for the revolutionists. Therefore it might be embarrassing for the British government, of which I suppose my hon. friend from Toronto is a loyal supporter, if we passed a resolution here asking the British parliament to express sympathy for people who, having taken a large share in the revolution in Russia, are now to a certain extent sufferers from that revolution. It is a well known fact, and this has been published in the London 'Times,' that the slaughters in some of the Russian cities were made by the Christians, because the Jews had prepared a conspiracy to slaughter the Christians.

Now so far as the charity of the Jewish people is concerned, I shall not go into a long historical study. I certainly sympatize with the Jews for some of the persecutions to which they have been subjected on account of their religious belief, but as had been very clearly stated time and again by one of the most illustrious of English writers, Mr. Goldwin Smith, the sentiment of hatred against the Jews, not only in Russia but in other countries, does not come from racial or religious feeling but from the fact that the Jew does not assimilate himself to the country in which he is living, except to that extent that will enable him to profit by the citizenship of the country in which he is living in order to enrich himself and contribute in the least possible degree to the development of that country. It is a well known fact that the Jews do not become owners of property to a large extent. In Russia especially, they have not purchased land but have lived and enriched themselves to an enormous extent by extorting from the poor people not only their money but the blood of their life, and repeating in fact the historical example that has been illustrated over 300 years ago by the greatest of English poets. In days of revolution, the common people simply go and strike blindly but instinctively against the people who have persecuted them for years and years. Revolutions in England, revolutions in France, gave rise to a great deal of slaughter and abominable crime, but they were the natural result of the oppression under which the people had suffered for years and years; and when the law was weak and revolutions came, the people struck at those from whom they had suffered. The Russian peasants had been sucked for centuries by the Jewish usurers, it is no surprise now that they are acting terribly in their dealings with them. I think it would be most ridiculous of this parliament to adopt a resolution, inspired, I am afraid, by local conditions of an electoral character, passing judgment on a problem which has been trying the spirit not only of Russian statesmen but the statesmen of many countries for years, for centuries, a problem which consists in trying to bring the Jewish people to adopt themselves to the social conditions of the country and not merely to use those social conditions for their own benefit. Moreover, Sir, I think that it would place this parliament in a still more ridiculous position within our own imperial borders. We have been reminded by the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) that some seven years ago a resolution was adopted by this parliament expressing sympathy with the British citizens who were for the time being living in the Republic of Transvaal. The pretense was then made of the suzerainty of Great Britain over the Transvaal, and parliament being surprised, as it would be surprised at this time, by an absence of the knowledge of facts, put on its records the doctrine of suzerainty of the British over the Transvaal, after that doctrine had been entirely discarded by the British government, and when it had been decided by the highest tribunal in Great Britain that the suzerainty was abandoned. Therefore it was an interference in international matters. But now that the Transvaal is part of the British empire, why not propose a resolution of sympathy with the effort being made to stamp out slavery under the name of the British crown and British sovereignty ? The British people have decided by hundreds of thousands of majority that the slavery established by the Conservative government in the Transvaal should be stamped out.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Does my hon. friend not know that that expression was absolutely discountenanced and withdrawn by members of the British government in recent debates in the British parliament ?

Mr. BOURASSA. I know that members of the British parliament——

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. —of the British government, not of the British parliament.

Mr. BOURASSA. Of the British government, all right; the word is very little to me, I must say. I attach very little importance to words, it is to facts that I look, and when I see men, when I see corporations organized under British law, going to a foreign country and purchasing men for money, and having nearly the right of life and death over them for years, and having the right of using corporal punishment to force them to work so many hours a day and so many days a year, I call it slavery. And as a matter of fact, it is the process and not the word which has been condemned so strongly, and with such an unmistakable voice, by the British people at the last election.

What I was just going to say, when I was interrupted, was that if we had something to do with the reform of social iniquities, we should begin within our own world first; and therefore if we wish to utter expressions of sympathy in matters of this kind, we should begin by those parts of the British empire, where under British law, processes similar to slavery are now held one century after that magnificent movement which was started by Wilberforce for the abolition of the slave trade. But, Sir, I do not wish to bring on a discussion of that extent, I simply remind you of the fact to show that we are apt to be carried away by prejudices raised by petty interests to step out of our constitutional, of our national, of our social, of our political role, and that we would do far better if we want to enjoy the confidence of the British people, if we want to co-operate with the British government in the good works of social reform within our own imperial borders, we had better come down to the basis of common sense, and not bother ourselves with problems which we are not prepared to solve, and of which we even do not know the basis.

Mr. W. B. NORTHRUP (East Hastings). I would not have risen to say a word had it not been for the insinuation of the last speaker that those who have spoken in favour of this resolution have been influenced by the fact that there was a vote in their constituency that might be favourably influenced by remarks of this kind. I am not aware that there is a single Jewish vote in my constituency, and I therefore rise that I might at least claim to speak with absolute freedom from any such bias as was suggested by the last speaker. At the same time if the last speaker had read the notice of motion instead of preparing to pour out his vials of ridicule and wrath on its mover he would have seen that we are not asking His Majesty to do anything whatever in connection with these massacres. We merely, as a body which certainly has plenary authority as far as its rights to express its opinions are concerned, express our opinion on a most lamentable state of affairs. I am not aware of any person the world over who is prepared to defend the murderers who in the last few months have been slaughtering the unfortunate Jews in Russia. It may be possible that, among the Jews there, there are some who have excited the enmity of the Russians, but I am sure if the last speaker will read the play of England's greatest poet, when he reads the gems that fall from the lips of Portia, he will hardly find that she is inspired by the same spirit that seems to actuate him this afternoon, even although it may be impossible that in the whole history of Russia there could have been a greater usurer than old Shylock himself. My hon. friend to be consistent would have to advocate that it would have been Portia's duty to raise a rabble to slaughter old Shylock and all his family and all other Jews, old and young, male or female whom they could find. I quite agree with what has been said by the Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) and the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) that perhaps it is well to have this matter considered, but I do hope that after due consideration is given to it that this parliament of Canada which was not afraid to send representations home to the mother country at a time when, on such a subject as home rule, there was a great diversity of opinion in that country. And when, therefore, we were suggesting to the home authorities what they should do, it might well be said that we were acting beyond our authority, perhaps impertinently. Surely, a body that was prepared to give advice at such a time cannot be afraid to express sentiments which, I think, I am safe in saying, are the sentiments of every man, woman and child in Canada except the last speaker.

Motion agreed to, and debate adjourned.

ELECTIONS TO THE HOUSE.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Carleton, Ont) moved:—

That a select committee of nine be appointed to inquire into the Acts relating to elections to this House, and the prevention of corrupt practices thereat, and the procedure and practice upon petitions relating to such elections, and to report to the House if any changes are desireable therein. That the said committee have power to send for persons, papers and records. That three be a quorum of the committee.

He said: In connection with this motion, I wish to say a few words. The motion is, in effect, superseded by a motion which my hon. friend the Minister of Justice (Mr. Fitzpatrick) has placed upon the order paper. I shall not press the motion, but shall ask that the debate upon it be adjourned until after the motion of the Minister of Justice has been disposed of. But, perhaps, it may be convenient if, at this time—as I am not in a position to be a member of the committee—I make a few suggestions which, possibly, may be of a little service to the hon. gentlemen who are to be members of the committee, seeing that I have given some little attention to the subject during the last few months with a view to endeavouring to bring about in our legislation such amendments as will accomplish the result which, I am sure, members on both sides sincerely desire.

I think it was in the session of 1903 that this subject engaged, to some extent the attention of parliament. My hon. friend the Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) at that time urged members on both sides of the House to co-operate with a view of placing upon our statute-books further legislation which would tend to bring about cleaner and purer elections in Canada. The subject was considered by a special committee upon a Bill introduced by Mr. Charlton. That committee made a report in the closing hours of the session. The report, among other things, embodied the suggestions that men who do not exercise the right of franchise should lose, for a certain time at least the privilege of voting for members of parliament. There was a very great difference of opinion in the House with regard to that particular portion of the Bill which had been reported. A great many members were opposed to any such suggestion. Eventually the Bill stood for further consideration and the report of the Minister of Justice upon it. The session was very far advanced at that time. The Minister of Justice was unable to give the necessary consideration to it, and, from that time until the present no step of importance has been taken for the purpose of bringing about the reforms which were then suggested. I am not approaching the subject to-day from a partisan standpoint, but with the sincere desire that gentlemen on both sides of the House should co-operate for the purpose of reforming our electoral law.

I may aid the committee by giving the results of an examination which I have made of certain fairly recent proceedings in the British House of Commons. In the session of 1897 Sir Charles Dilke moved for a select committee to inquire into the procedure and practice in parliamentary election petitions, and to report to the House if any changes be desireable therein. The committee sat on several days and heard a great deal of evidence. Among other witnesses called before the committee were Mr. Justice Cave, Mr. Justice Wright, and Baron Pollock who were judges of Great Britain having great experience in the trial of election petitions. Mr. Samuel Day, an eminent English counsel who had had great experience as counsel in such petitions was examined, as were the public prosecutor and various other gentlemen who might be regarded as experts with regard to this particular subject. The committee did not complete its labours in the session of 1897, and a similar committee of nine was appointed in the session of 1898, to whom was referred the evidence taken before the committee of 1897, and who did make a report after examining further witnesses. To the report of this committee, I have already directed the attention of my hon. friend the Minister of Justice. It is possible that some of the suggestions which are to be found in that report may be of service to the committee for which the Minister of Justice will shortly move.

Looking a little at the subject from the standpoint which I have indicated, I would say that it is very desirable indeed to bring about some change in our law which will result in bringing on by-elections within a reasonable time. I am not saying this by way of reproach or speaking from a partisan standpoint or with any desire to pass censure on the government in this connection. I shall take another occasion to do that if it shall be necessary. But we have known, both in the parliament of Canada and in the legislatures of the various provinces, this result to be brought about—that a certain constituency has sometimes been unrepresented for a whole session. There is no doubt that under the law as it exists at present, there is a temptation to any administration whether it be Liberal or Conservative, to fix the time for holding the by-elections at a date when it will be most convenient to the political party in power. I do not think that that condition should continue. I have introduced already two Bills for the purpose of amending the law in that regard, and I should be very happy indeed, as I previously stated, if these two Bills should be referred to this committee.

There is another particular in which the law should be amended. The government nominates the returning officers throughout the country and these returning officers, appoint their several deputies. It is desirable, if it be possible, to have returning officers appointed who will not be of a partisan stripe. For my part, I would prefer that some particular officer out of a class should be selected as deputy returning officer, and that it should be provided that he must exercise his independent judgment in and shall be responsible for the choice of a respectable deputy. Again I say that I am not dealing with the subject from a partisan standpoint when I allude to the fact that many of the evils with which we have been confronted in recent years, have arisen from the circumstance that either the returning officer himself has seen fit to appoint as deputies men who are not fit to discharge that office, or else, in the selection of these officers, he has acted solely upon the recommendation of the candidate of the party in power. That again, I say, is liable to occur under the present system, whether a Conservative or a Liberal government be in power; and the result is readily observable. If the candidate is a dishonest man himself, or if, being an honest man, he acts upon the recommendation of dishonest advisers, the result may be, as sometimes has occurred, that a deputy returning officer will be selected for the very reason that it is intended that he should put in practice certain frauds in the conduct of the election. That is the second suggestion which I make to my hon. friend the Minister of Justice as one which should engage the attention of the committee.

With regard to bribery generally, I do not think we can congratulate ourselves upon any advance in that regard, either in public practice or in public opinion in Canada. I have heard reports, as all of us have heard reports, of what goes on in various elections throughout the country, and I do not think we can reasonably say that the standard of public life in that respect is being raised or has been raised in Canada during the last ten, fifteen or twenty years. The subject of dealing with voters who decline to vote until they are paid is a subject that engaged the attention of parliament during the discussion in 1903 to which I have referred. Whether or not it be practicable to deal with that subject by depriving those voters of the franchise in case they do not see fit to exercise it, is an open question upon which there has been a great deal of discussion in the United States of America. Against it there is put forward the consideration that neither one candidate nor the other, that neither one political party nor the other, may command the confidence of certain electors, and that those electors should be left free, if they see fit, to refrain from voting for either one or other at the election. On the other hand it is perfectly obvious that the offence of bribery, so far as it occurs in that connection, might possibly be checked by putting upon the statute-book of Canada some such enactment as that which was urged in the session of 1903. The conveyance of voters to the polls was also dealt with, and if I remember rightly, the committee brought in a report that the payment of money for the conveyance of voters to the polls should be allowed with certain restrictions, certain limitations. From what one can learn there does not seem to be much doubt that the present law in that regard is not much respected by either one political party or the other in this country. We should either create such sanctions and such means of enforcing the law as will make that provision respected, or else we should bring about some limitation of it so that it shall be in actual accord with public opinion.

Now there are some provisions in the British Act of 1883 which have not been placed upon the statute-book of Canada, and to which I invite the attention of my hon. friend the Minister of Justice. That Act is 46 and 47 Vic., chapter 51, with which the Minister of Justice is familiar. I would refer him to section 33 and to subsections 1, 2 and 3 of that statute. It is true that we have in this country a provision that a candidate within two months, after polling day or declaration day, shall make a full statement of all expenses which have been incurred by him or by any person on his behalf in connection with the election. But the British statute goes very much further, and it seems to me is very much more effective. The British statute might perhaps be quoted with advantage, but I shall not quote it in full. It provides for a very full statement, not only by the candidate but by his election agent; and further it provides that the candidate himself as well as his election agent shall make that declaration under oath, that is to say he shall make a solemn declaration that the statement filed by him is true. There is another important provision in the British statute which we have not, namely, that unless the candidate has made that declaration and made it under oath, he shall not, after the time limited for filing the declaration, sit or vote in the House of Commons until he has obtained from a competent court under conditions which are prescribed by statute, permission to do so. That is to say the statute provides that under exceptional circumstances the candidate may make application to the court and may obtain from the court an exoneration of his default on account of those special circumstances. But apart from that one provision, no candidate in Great Britain can sit or vote in parliament until that declaration has been filed. Now I would like to call the attention of the House and my hon. friend the Minister of Justice to the character of the declaration which must be filed. It is to be found on pages 584 and 585 of Rogers' work on Elections, and it is an appendix to the statute.

> And I hereby further solemly and sincerely declare that, except as appears from that return, I have not and to the best of my knowledge and belief no other person, nor any club, society, or association has on behalf of the said candidate made any payment, or given, promised, or offered any reward, office, employment, or valuable consideration, or incurred any liability on account of or in respect of the conduct or management of said election.

The effect of the British statute is set forth very forcibly in an article in the 'North American Review' for February, to which I will allude later. But I may go on for a moment and point out to my hon. friend that by the schedules which are to be found on pages 579 to 583 of Rogers on Elections, and which are made part of the statute by certain sections thereof the expenditure of a candidate in Great Britain for legitimate purposes is limited to a certain amount and to certain defined purposes. That amount depends upon the number of electors in each constituency. Thus not only is the amount which a candidate can expend in an election for legitimate purposes limited in this way, but the amount which any political club or association in Great Britain can spend on his behalf is likewise limited to the amount fixed by statute. In this country we have a statute which, perhaps, strictly construed, might amount to a prohibition of any contribution towards elections and to certain defined purposes except through the election agent. The British Act of 1883, section 28, contains a very much more forcible and more direct prohibition of any contribution being made except through that agent. Perhaps it may be well to quote some words from that section.

> Except as permitted by or in pursuance of this Act, no payment and no advance or deposit shall be made by a candidate at an election or by any agent on behalf of the candidate or by any other person at any time, whether before, during, or after such election, in respect of any expenses incurred on account of or in respect of the conduct or management of such election, otherwise than by or through the election agent of the candidate, whether acting in person or by a sub-agent; and all money provided by any person other than the candidate for any expenses incurred on account of or in respect of the conduct or management of the election, whether as gift, loan, advance, or deposit, shall be paid to the candidate or his election agent and not otherwise.

The word 'person' as used in the section. is defined by section 64 of the British Act in this way.

> The expression 'person' includes an association or body of persons, corporate or unincorporate, and where any act is done by any such association or body, the members of such association, or body who have taken part in the commission of such act shall be liable to any fine or punishment imposed for the same by this Act.

That, it seems to me, is a very important provision and one which might well engage the attention of the committee.

Another very important function in connection with elections in Great Britain is discharged by the director of public prosecutions. Now, I am perfectly well aware when I allude to the duties imposed upon the director of public prosecutions in Great Britain that we have in this country a very different system. I am perfectly well aware, as we are all aware, that under our federal system the administration of justice is confided to the government of the provinces and not to the government of Canada. Therefore, I fully appreciate the answer which might be made that a director of public prosecutions in the exact sense in which that office has been established in Great Britain is not perhaps possible in this country; but it seems to me possible that we might establish some officer who, in respect of election petitions and possibly in respect of infractions of federal laws relating to customs and revenue might discharge the duties which are imposed upon the director of public prosecutions in Great Britain. I am referring throughout to the same English statute—the Act of 1883. Section 43 of this statute provides as follows:

> On every trial of an election petition the director of public prosecutions shall by himself or by his assistant, or by such representative as hereinafter mentioned, attend at the trial, and it shall be the duty of such director to obey any directions given to him by the election court with respect to the summoning and examination of any witness to give evidence on such trial, and with respect to the prosecution by him of offenders, and with respect to any person to whom notice is given to attend with a view to report him as guilty of any corrupt or illegal practice.

By section 41 of the English Act it is provided that upon any motion to withdraw an election petition copies of the affidavits are to be delivered to the director of public prosecutions who can attend, cross-examine upon the affidavits, or take any course which seems desirable if he has any suspicion that the proceeding is the result of a corrupt agreement between the two political parties.

We have good reason to believe that arrangements are made between the two political parties, or between members against whom petitions have been filed, with the view of the discontinuance of these petitions in this country. In the public press the practice has been denounced as a scandal and I do not know that I would dissent very much from that description The statute as we have it rather lends itself to the practice for more than one reason. I will not enumerate all of these, but, for example, it is the practice of the judges throughout Canada—and I am to assume for the moment that it is a practice which they must follow having regard to the provisions of the statute—to accept the assurance of counsel that he has no evidence to offer and to dismiss the petition. It is the practice after evidence of one or two corrupt acts has been offered and agency established that the candidate shall be unseated without further inquiry. There are sometimes good reasons to believe in these cases that if the inquiry were persevered in important facts might be disclosed which it is not to the interest of the persons engaged in the investigation to have brought forward to or disclosed to the general public. The appointment of an officer in this country having some such functions as those which are discharged by the public prosecutor in Great Britain, would, it seems to me, constitute a force independent of either one political party or the other and it would lead or ought to lead to a much more thorough investigation than at present.

Another difficulty is that while our law contains somewhat elaborate provisions in regard to the circumstances under which an election petition may be withdrawn the statute provides that if a petition is not brought to trial within six months after it is at issue or within the extended time fixed by the judge, it absolutely lapses and no further proceedings can be taken because the judges regard themselves as functi officio after the period has elapsed. So that the provisions contained in the statute limiting the right of the petitioner to withdraw his petition do not have the cogency and effect which they might otherwise have.

There is another important provision in the English statute to which some attention might be directed and it is that contained in section 44. The provision in short, is, that if upon the trial of any election petition corrupt practices are found to have prevailed somewhat extensively, and if these corrupt practices cannot be brought home to the candidate himself or to any person who, under the law, is regarded as his agent the court has the right to make an order that the expenses of the investigation shall be paid by the municipality in which these corrupt acts have so extensively prevailed.

I referred a moment ago to an article in the North American 'Review.' That article is written by Mr. Arthur Bottow. I do not know anything of the gentleman except that he describes himself as having performed the duties of an election agent on many occasions in Great Britain. He is evidently a person who has a very familiar acquaintance with the law of Great Britain as it was before 1883 and as it has been since the Act of that year passed into law. His article is somewhat long. I want to quote something from the last two pages:

> The end came through the law of 1883, and ever-blessed let me call that law. For, under its benificent powers, the knife of the public prosecutor cut deep down into the very roots of the political ulcer, and the scandal which originated in the lax morality of the court of King Charles II, and had in the two hundred years of its orgy permeated the very vitals of the body politic, ended its pestiferous life. All previous legislation had been half-hearted, ambiguous or narrow; the drag-net of Sir Henry James caught the whole breed of corruptionists and its provisions left no loop-hole but cessation or the gaol. If for no other reason, it would mark a new era, inasmuch as for the first time it brought under discipline political clubs and associations; but it has many other claims to everlasting gratitude.
>
> It may assist in suggesting some points to our present-day reformers, and I make no apology for summarizing some of its most novel and drastic provisions it starts by defining bribery and treating, and extending these offences to periods before, during or after any election, and in making the receiver as well as the giver guilty of a corrupt practice, punishable by one year's imprisonment or $1,000 fine. It makes the aider, abetter, counseller and procurer of personation as guilty of felony as the personator, punishable by a term of two years' imprisonment with hard labour. Its next blows are at long-established abuses, never before unlawful. It makes it an illegal practice, punishable by $500 fine on summary conviction, to hold any committee in public houses or saloons; or to pay for the use of any house, or other premises, for the purpose of exhibiting posters; to pay for any bands of music, torches, banners, ribbons or other marks of distinction, or to pay for the conveyance of voters to the poll.

It disfranchises every person employed for money by the candidate, and cuts down the number who may be employed to one agent, one polling clerk and one messenger for every 500 voters.

It defines the purposes—so much for printing, so much for this and so much for that—for which alone money can be spent; and it limits the total maximum to $1,750 where the voters number 2,000, and $750 for each 1,000 votes above that number; a subject never before touched by law.

It prohibits a single cent of this expenditure being incurred by any other person than the agent. Whatever aid any club or association may desire to give must be in cash to the agent, of which hereafter. The spending-agent has to make an itemized account with the names and duties of every person employed or bills incurred, confirmed by their vouchers. Within thirty-five days after the election, the agent is compelled to file a statement of all moneys received by him from the candidate or from any other person, with the name of every person, club or association from whom the same was received. Both the candidate and the agent are charged with actual personal knowledge of all the details of these receipts and payments, and each of them has to declare solemnly and sincerely that, except as appears on the returns, they have not, nor to the best of their knowledge has any other person nor has any club, society or association, on behalf of the said candidate, made any payment or incurred any liability on account of it, or in respect to, the conduct and management of such election.

To clench the whole legal fist, and to bring it down swiftly and mercilessly; if there be a petition against the member the director of public prosecutions is to attend it; and it shall be his duty, without any direction of the court, to prosecute persons guilty of corrupt or illegal practices before any court competent to deal with the offences. Finally, if there be no petition, and if any information is given to the public prosecutor that any corrupt or illegal practices have prevailed, it shall be his duty to make inquiries, and institute such prosecutions as the circumstances appear to him to require.

Under these provisions, the old conditions passed away, and individual political debauchery has to be written of as history.

Now, if the Minister of Justice by means of this proposed committee can bring about such reforms in our Canadian law as will ensure to this country in the future the better conditions which have been described in the extract I have read, he will earn a higher and a better claim, then possibly he could in any other way earn, to the gratitude of the Canadian people.

Just one word more. I recently attended a conference of the National Electoral Reform Association of the United States in the city of New York, and at that conference certain suggestions were printed for the consideration of the gentlemen who took part in the discussion. Among the subjects treated there are three or four which I would like to read to the House, in order that these subjects might have consideration from the committee which is shortly to begin its work. Among the subjects treated at that conference were:

First. The full publication of election expenses both by individuals and organizations. There is a general feeling that publicity will do much to mitigate present evils. But it is doubtfull whether correct and complete statements will be made unless some easy form of procedure, is provided by which some statements can be readily inquired into and criticised, on the motion of responsible citizens or organizations.

Second. The prohibition of corporate contributions for election purposes. These contributions are shrouded in such secrecy that they can probably be detected only by beginning with the expenses in a given election district, and working back to the contributor.

Third. The fixing of proper objects of expenditure, such as meetings, publications, &c,. and the fixing limits to the amounts so to be spent. No state law now covers this branch of the subject with any thoroughness, but the Ontario Act is carefully worked out.

There are other suggestions, but I think they are covered by the existing law in this country.

One more suggestion I wish to make and it is with regard to the desirability of amending the law respecting controverted elections. That law is not at the present time in a very satisfactory condition. Preliminary objections are filed, a great deal of delay takes place, the case eventually comes on for trial, the particulars are filed. I have alluded already to the manner in which protests are sometimes disposed of when they come on for trial before the judges. I believe that a very radical change should be made in the procedure, and even if no radical change be made, then beyond all question, preliminary objections should be absolutely abolished. At present they serve only for delay; the period for putting them in is usually extended; they are brought on, disposed of; an appeal is taken to the Supreme Court of Canada, if the prelimanry objection, in case it were allowed, would put an end to the petition. The candidate takes his seat in the following parliament, and then similar delays take place after the conclusion of parliament, during the sitting of which, if the members' attendance at the trial is necessary, as it usually is, the trial cannot proceed. A very radical change should be made there so that an immediate inquiry could be had, the attendance of a judge procured at once, an investigation held immediately, possibly the candidate not allowed to take his seat until that summary and prompt inquiry had been held ; if that could be brought about I think it would be a very desirable change. Certainly the law as it stands at present does not accomplish very great results. The withdrawal, the abatement, the pairing off of elections are undoubted evils, and, whether or not the suggestions which I make be approved by the Minister of Justice, at all events greater simplicity of procedure and greater expedition in disposing of these cases ought to be ensured.

I would suggest to the Minister of Justice that the committee shall call before them (as was done in Great Britain) some of the judges of this country who have great experience in the trial of election petitions. It might call before it some counsel who have been engaged in those trials. It might call before it experts of this character and obtain their suggestions and advice. I would respectfully suggest that if some able and competent man from the Department of Justice could assist the committee for the purpose of examining the statutes of Great Britain and those of some of the American states in order to obtain suggestions as to amendments in our law, the committee would be very much assisted in that way. If an officer from the Department of Justice could not be procured, I think it would be worth while to employ counsel for that purpose, in case the gentlemen upon the committee were not able to devote the very large amount of time which would be necessary in order to do this work thoroughly.

In summing up my suggestions, they are: that there should be non-partisan returning officers and deputies; that there should be a limitation of expenditure somewhat as in Great Britain; that there should be stringent provisions in regard to payments or assistance by political organizations or associations; that there should be provisions touching contributions by corporations; that, above all, there should be created some independent authority, charged with the enforcement of the law. The law as we have it in Canada at the present time is fairly effective, and would accomplish very much greater results than it does at present, if we had some force outside of and independent of both political parties which would see that the law is carried out, whenever an election petition is filed, or whenever, apart from any election petition there is grave reason to suspect that corrupt practices have prevailed on a great scale. I regard this suggestion as perhaps the most important of all those which I have ventured to make.

The committee might with advantage consider the prohibition of inducements to communities or constituencies. It is under our law illegal to hold out a bribe or offer intimidation to a single voter; but there is no law in this country at the present moment which prohibits a public man from going into a constituency and offering what was in effect a bribe or intimidation by the suggestion that if a particular candidate is elected an expenditure of money will be made in the constituency, or that if that particular candidate is not elected the interests of the constituency will not receive the consideration they otherwise would obtain.

I think the committee should also take into consideration the desirability of a simpler and speedier procedure for the investigation of matters connected with election petitions, or indeed corrupt acts in any constituency although no election petition happened to be filed.

It is with all diffidence that I venture to make these suggestions to my hon. friend the Minister of Justice. He is very familiar, no doubt, with all that I have brought to the attention of the House to-day. I can only say to him that in this work he will receive every possible assistance not only from the members of the committee who represent this side of the House, but also I am sure from every hon. gentleman on this side of the House. I sincerely trust that the work of the committee will result in bringing about better conditions in Canada; because, speaking, as we do to-day, in no partisan spirit and from no partisan standpoint, we all can agree that the conditions in Canada at the present time are not what we should desire. If, as I have said, the work of that committee shall result in such conditions as those described in the article which I have quoted to the House, I venture to believe that no greater work will have been accomplished in any session of the parliament of Canada since confederation.

Hon. CHARLES FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice). Mr. Speaker, I am sure it is quite unnecessary for me to say, in view of the motion which stands in my name on the order paper, how fully I sympathize with the object my hon. friend the leader of the opposition has in view; and I think I may safely add that this House is under a debt of gratitude to him for the very complete and very learned statement which he has made of the law as we now have it both in Canada and in England. So far as I am concerned, it shall be my desire to do all I can to accomplish the object we all have in view. A free vote, a pure vote, an honest ballot box, are the essential requisites to the maintenance of our free institutions. Among the Bills which I was instructed by the Prime Minister to prepare for this session was one with respect to elections. After having carefully and fully considered the matter, I came to the conclusion that I would derive much benefit in the preparation of such an Act if I could have the advantage of a committee of this House to co-operate with me—a committee composed of members from both sides of the House—who would bring to the consideration of the different questions involved an unpartisan mind; and I am quite sure that to-day we are all animated by but one desire—to give to this country such a law as will enable us to have a pure and honest election. In looking over the law, I have come to the conclusion that so far as our Election Act, is concerned, it is a fairly good one. The difficulties have been largely with the application of the Act. There are three Acts which have to be considered—the Election Act, the Controverted Elections Act and the Franchise Act. The great difficulty, I think, exists with respect to what my hon. friend has called the 'saw-off'—the settlement of election cases. I can see no good reason why we should not—I am speaking now perhaps hastily—deal with the question of the settlement of these controverted election cases somewhat in the manner in which the Criminal Code deals with the compounding of felonies and misdemeanours. With respect to returning officers, we might return to the system which exists in Quebec and Ontario, which existed here prior to 1882 or 1883, that is, appointing as returning officers certain public officials in the various counties, such as sheriffs and registrars, who occupy non-partisan positions, and who, in the great majority of cases, I might almost say in all cases, are men upon whose reputation we may fairly rely for a proper administration of our Election Act. With respect to bringing on by-elections, I quite agree with what my hon. friend has said, that it is not fair that a constituency should remain disfranchised because the representatives of either political party do not deem it necessary or advisable to have an election in that constituency. It seems to me we might easily arrange in that respect that we should leave it to some extent in the hands of the Speaker, or in the hands of any two members of the House to require the bringing on of the election as we now do with respect to the issue of the writ.

With respect to bribery I think our Election Act is very complete, that it goes very far and I may say that so far as I am concerned I would be disposed to round off some of the provisions of this Election Act because at the present time a man, however honestly he may attempt to conduct an election, may expose himself to very severe penalties quite innocently under the Election Act as we have it now. However, that can be easily provided for, I think we can make some improvements, there that will meet all real existing difficulties.

With respect to compulsory voting I myself am no very ardent partisan of the principle of interfering with any man's individual liberty. I am one of those who have been looked upon as perhaps opposed to public franchises being vested in municipalities and things of that sort because I always stand for the liberty of the individual; I stand for liberty as I understand it at all events. I would not like to say that I would be in favour of compulsory voting. This view has gone through my mind many times. If you give to the individual, to the citizen, the right to vote, that is a very sacred right that he receives not only for his individual benefit but as a trust to be exercised for the benefit of the whole community, and if he does not see fit to exercise or fails to exercise that trust I do not see why he should be vested with it very much longer. I would seriously consider that aspect of the case and see whether or not it would not be possible for us to do something towards bringing about a remedy to what is undoubtedly a grievance. That is to say that the man who sits on the fence near the booth on polling day and will not deliver up his vote, looking upon it as a piece of merchandise for which he is entitled to be paid, should not be left in possession of that vote.

The next question to which my hon. friend has directed attention is the appointment of a public prosecutor. I do not think that the appointment of such an official is surrounded with so many difficulties as might appear at first sight. It is quite true that the administration of criminal justice is in the hands, to a large extent, of the provinces but so far as our election matters are concerned, the judges of our provincial courts are federal officers, and for the purposes of our Election Act the provincial courts become federal courts. The practice, the procedure, everything connected with them is under our jurisdiction and control and therefore I cannot very well see why with respect to these courts, which are after all federal courts, it should not be in our power to appoint such an official as my hon. friend has referred to. Of course the appointment of such an official would be an enormous burden to any political party that would have the responsibility of making it. As things go in this country there is no use of pretending to shut our eyes to the fact that political partisanship runs very high, and no matter what might be the honesty or purity of the motives of the gentleman who would make the appointment he would be sure to be criticised. However it does seem to me the appointment of such an official might very well be considered, and if we could only agree and secure the appointment of a man such as we have in this country by the score—for, after all, all is not bad in Canada; we have very good men in this country and if I had any criticism to offer of what the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) has said it would be that it seems to me he painted the conditions existing here with perhaps too heavy a hand—I would be disposed to consider that we could find such a man in this country and that we can in this country do all that is necessary to carry on a pure election.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I hope my hon. friend did not understand me as saying we could not find a competent man ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Perhaps I exaggerated a little. What I wanted to say is that these are the things that occurred to me off hand, but where I see the real difficulty, where, when we come to consider the whole question, we will find the subject that deserves the most serious consideration that the members of this House or the committee can give it, is in the preparation of our election lists. We have agreed to adopt the provincial franchise as the basis of the Federal Election Act. In the provinces there is, of necessity, overlapping of constituencies. As a result we have conditions existing which make it necessary for us to find some remedy for what has occurred for instance in Manitoba. And I may say to this House—I do not intend to discuss that question now, but my chief object in seeking to obtain this committee, and I think the chief reason that determined my colleagues in allowing me to have my way in that respect was that we might have that matter thoroughly and fully investigated, because I say to this House that in the light of the information that I have got—and I have taken great trouble to become informed in respect to all that occurred in Manitoba—the error that was committed there, so far as my information goes, was one which was the result of the conditions existing with respect to our electoral lists. Now, I want that matter investigated, because it is not fair, Mr. Speaker, that we should allow the impression to get abroad in this country that any official has been placed in a position to disfranchise any number of electors in this country. It is not fair that we should be in this position and under the law as we have it now it should not be in the power of any man, by error or design, to deprive his neighbour of his vote, and if that is a condition which exists as a result of the operation of our law we must find a remedy for it. I deprecate as strongly as it is possible for me to do it, the attacks that have been made on the judges with respect to this Manitoba election matter, and I beg to assure the House that when that matter is investigated—and I say now and here that as I hope to be a member of that committee and as I intend to summon some persons to appear before that committee to give evidence with respect to what occurred in Manitoba, it shall be open to any member of the committee to summon any one he chooses so far as I am concerned in that connection—when that matter is fully investigated it will be found that the charges made against the judiciary are absolutely without foundation and that it was not open to the judge who tried that case to come to any other conclusion than the conclusion to which he did come.

Now I did not intend to speak of that subject because that might be considered as trespassing on controversial ground, but I wanted to make that observation, and I say that I shall do all that lies in my power to carry out the object which the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) had in view when he made that motion and I trust that we shall not be entirely deprived of his valuable services in so far as that committee is concerned.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I would suggest that the debate be adjourned.

On motion of Mr. Ingram the debate was adjourned.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What business will be taken up to-morrow ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. To-morrow we will resume the debate on the motion of the Hon. the Minister of Railways and Canals, (Mr. Emmerson).

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 5.25 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY, March 16, 1906.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

STEAMBOAT INSPECTION ACT AMENDMENT.

Mr. LEIGHTON G. McCARTHY (North Simcoe) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 16) to amend the Steamboat Inspection Act, 1898.

Mr. LANCASTER. I would like to ask the hon. gentleman if the Bill is in the same terms as the one he introduced last session.

Mr. L. G. McCARTHY. It is not exactly in the same terms. I have made some amendments in view of the investigation made by the committee that considered the Bill last year. I have dropped out the second paragraph and increased the nominal horse power so that it enables tugs up to the nominal horse power of ten to be managed or engineered by men with permits.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

RAILWAY ACT 1903, AMENDMENT.

Mr. HAUGHTON LENNOX (South Simcoe) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 17) to amend the Railway Act, 1903.

Mr. HENDERSON. Explain.

Mr. LENNOX. This is made necessary in consequence of certain provisions that existed in the law of 1890 and that were left out in the Act of 1903, provisions which made the railway company liable in some instances in which cattle escaped not from the land of the owner of the cattle but from other land. That law was considerably discussed in 1888 when the main Railway Act was introduced but it was not incorporated in it there being some division of opinion at that time. It was afterwards introduced in 1890 with the unanimous consent, apparently, of the House, both sides concurring in the necessity of it and some very eminent gentlemen on the government side of the House —I refer to the government of to-day— expressing their opinion as to the necessity of such legislation. Following upon that legislation we had some cases one of which was that of Fensom vs. the Canadian Pacific Railway showing the effect of that Act of 1888 as amended by 53 Vic., chap. 28. The provisions that I have incorporated are substantially the provisions that were in force at that time and that are the subject of the decision in the case I have referred to, the provisions being :

If in consequence of the omission of a railway company to erect and maintain a fence, 'any animal gets upon the railway from an adjoining place where under the circumstances it might properly be, then the company shall be liable to the owner of every such animal for all damage in respect of it caused by any of the company's trains or engines.'

Also that

No animal allowed by law to run at large shall be held to be trespassing on a place adjoining the railway merely for the reason that the owner or occupant of such place has not permitted it to be there.

I have modified the wording to some slight extent in consequence of the legislation since introduced. The Bill I move for leave to introduce also provides for a new law in regard to the question of fencing railways. In the Act of 1903, third subsection of section 199, provision is made that Whenever the railway passes through any locality in which the lands on either side of the railway are not improved or settled, and inclosed, the company shall not be required to erect and maintain such fences, gates and cattle guards unless the board otherwise orders or directs.

That was a retrograde movement in 1903 and was objected to in this House at the time. Experience has shown the necessity of having the law in a different condition. The bonus, by the legislation of 1903, is thrown upon the farmer or resident in the country, whereas the onus should be thrown as I submit, upon the railway company, they being nearer at hand and having better means of getting the order of the Board than any private individual could possibly have. I have therefore provided that the Board shall have power to make orders modifying or relieving the company from compliance with the provisions under subsections 1 and 2 as to fencing for a limited time so that the railway company shall not be absolutely bound to fence in every case, but they shall always be bound to fence unless the board shall otherwise order.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

REVISION OF THE RULES OF THE HOUSE.

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) moved :

That a special committee of seven be appointed, with instructions to carefully examine the rules of the House, and to report what changes, in their opinion, might be adopted, with the view to simplify, accelerate and expedite its business ; and that said committee be composed of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. Brodeur, Mr. Laurence, Mr. Belcourt, Mr. Borden, Mr. Haggart and Mr. Bergeron.

Motion agreed to.

ELECTIONS TO THE HOUSE.

Hon. CHARLES FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice) moved :

That a select committee composed of Messrs. Aylesworth, Greenway, Stockton, Ingram, and the mover be appointed to inquire into the operation of the Acts relating to the elections of members of this House, and into the practice and procedure in connection with election petitions ; and to consider what changes are desirable therein ; with power to send for persons, papers and records, to examine witnesses under oath, and to report from time to time.

He said : It is unnecessary for me to say anything in support of or in explanation of this motion as the matter was fully discussed yesterday afternoon.

Motion agreed to.

MINISTERIAL CHANGES.

On the Orders of the Day being called :

Rt. Hon. Sir. WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are proceeded with I rise in pursuance of a promise which I made yesterday to the hon. leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) that I would to-day give the usual explanation in regard to the ministerial changes which have taken place since last session. Two vacancies occurred during the recess. One has already been alluded to. It was occasioned by the lamented death of my hon. friend and colleague the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Préfontaine). The government thought when they had to fill the vacancy in the cabinet, that it would be good policy to select a successor to Mr. Préfontaine in the new western provinces and I advised His Excellency the Governor General that I would present the name of Senator Templeman who for some time had been a member of the cabinet without portfolio. The recommendation was at once acceded to by His Excellency. The question then arose to what portfolio should be assigned to Mr. Templeman.

Mr. Prefontaine had been the Minister of Marine and Fisheries and he had been engaged in very important work in improving the St. Lawrence route, and which I think he carried out to the satisfaction of the House and of the country generally. The province of British Columbia has fisheries which are equal perhaps to the fisheries of the Atlantic coast, and the province of British Columbia might very well believe that if a Minister of Marine and Fisheries were being selected, its claim to the portfolio should very well be considered. I discussed the matter with Mr. Templeman after he had accepted office, and I reported to him that whilst the cabinet fully recognized the importance of the fishery interests in British Columbia, the paramount question at the present time with which any Minister of Marine and Fisheries would have to deal was the continuation of work which had been commenced by the government and successfully prosecuted by Mr. Préfontaine in regard to the St. Lawrence route, and that under such circumstances it was more in accord with the fitness of things that a man from the east should be entrusted with the task of continuing this work. To this, Mr. Templeman readily acceded. Therefore, I asked my hon. friend the Minister of Inland Revenue (Mr. Brodeur) to agree to take the portfolio of Marine and Fisheries; Mr. Templeman agreeing to take the portfolio of Inland Revenue. At the same time I discussed with my new colleague a point which I had had an opportunity of previously discussing with the member for Brandon (Mr. Sifton) when he was Minister of the Interior, and with the present Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) That is: That some work at present entrusted to the Minister of the Interior should be transferred to another department. At present the Minister of the Interior has to look not only after the general business of his department, but he has also to attend to the Lands branch, the Indian branch, and the Geological survey. I had discussed with the hon. member for Brandon (Mr. Sifton) and with the present Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver), the suggestion that it would be advisable to transfer some of this extra work to another department which was not so encumbered as is the Department of the Interior. I suggested to Mr. Templeman that perhaps, when he had taken possession of his department he would think it advisable to take the Geological survey under his administration, with the possible creation of a Mines branch. To this, Mr. Templeman also acceded.

The next thing we had to consider was the fact that Mr. Templeman was at that time a member of the Senate. I suggested to him, and he agreed readily in the suggestion, that it would be more fitting that he should sit in the House of Commons, the popular branch of parliament. Mr. Riley, the then member for the city of Victoria, readily vacated his seat. I am glad to say that when Mr. Templeman went back to the people of Victoria he was elected by a very large majority, a result to which as I understand, indeed as I know, a large proportion of the best Conservatives of that city contributed.

Another vacancy occurred, as the House is aware, by the fact that Sir William Mulock was appointed to the Bench in the province of Ontario. That came about as is fully explained in the correspondence which took place last fall between Sir William Mulock and myself. On the 7th of October I received the following letter from Sir William Mulock:

Ottawa, October 7, 1905.

My dear Sir Wilfrid,—

The time has at last arrived when I must without further hesitation withdraw from public life. As you may remember, I made known to you on my return from Australia, which country I visited in 1901, at the request of the government to represent Canada at the inauguration of the Commonwealth parliament, that I contracted during the somewhat severe Atlantic voyage, a serious attack of neuritis which for nearly a year caused me continuous suffering, the pain at times being almost unendurable. After a while, it gradually yielded to treatment, but left my nervous system seriously impaired, and in consequence less able to stand the strain inseparable from the public life in which I have been engaged for nearly a quarter of a century. Several times since, there have been partial recurrences of the attack which, I have been advised, are but premonitions that if I am not to succumb entirely, I must seek a less wearing life.

During the last two or three years, I have on several occasions informed you of my condition, and requested your permission to my retiring into private life, but you have always been so anxious for me to remain, and I myself have felt so interested in my public work, that until now I have postponed reaching a final conclusion.

The last occasion of my speaking to you upon the subject was in June last when about to leave for England to attend the Pacific Cable Conference. I then mentioned to you that the pain was constantly returning and that I was assured it would continue to do so as long as I was engaged in my present strenuous occupation, and therefore again made known to you my earnest desire to retire. With your invariable sympathy and kindness, you renewed your expressions of regret at the prospect of my withdrawal, urging me to postpone reaching a final conclusion until my return from England, adding the hope that perhaps the change would prove beneficial.

Realizing your very strong desire for my continuance in the government, I again deferred to your wishes, and have thus had advantage of the interval in which to give further consideration to the matter.

Taking a deep interest in public affairs, being in entire political harmony with the government, on the most friendly and intimate relations with each minister, and being deeply attached to the constituency of North York, which has unswervingly reposed its confidence in me ever since my entry into public life, it is with the greatest regret that I have now to inform you of my having reached the final decision, that I feel myself compelled without further delay to give up the public career into which I have for so large a portion of my life thrown my whole heart and energies. Nevertheless, it is, I feel assured, in the public interest that I should take this course and I therefore now tender my resignation as a member of your cabinet and would ask you to kindly submit it to His Excellency at the earliest moment for his acceptance.

It will, I know, be a great satisfaction to you to learn that my nervous system alone is affected and that with proper care and under more peaceful and restful condition, I may reasonably hope for a gradual and complete recovery.

Believe me, my dear Sir Wilfrid,

Yours sincerely,

(Sgd.) W. MULOCK.

The Right Honourable
Sir Wilfrid Laurier, G.C.M.G., P.C.,
Prime Minister of Canada, Ottawa.

His Excellency at that time was away from the capital and I could not communicate with him. On the 11th of October I replied to Sir William Mulock as follows:

Ottawa, October 11, 1905.

My dear Mulock,—

I have your letter again asking me to accept your resignation, and I feel that I cannot longer withhold my consent.

You know how reluctant I have been to agree to this decision on your part. My mind is not in any way altered, but as there is no hope of any permanent improvement in your health, so long as you continue in the arduous work in which you have been engaged for the last nine years, there is no alternative left to me but to acquiesce in your request. I will, therefore, place your resignation in the hands of His Excellency immediately upon his return to Ottawa. After twenty years of close and intimate association, this severance, even though it be only of official ties, is a deep personal sacrifice to me, far deeper and greater, I am sure, than you can imagine. The loss will also be very great for the country which you have served with so much ability, zeal and success.

It has occurred to me that, whilst your health has been steadily declining for some years, you have still enough left of your former vigour to allow you to serve the public in some other, almost as useful, though less exacting capacity. I have thought of asking you to accept the Chief Justiceship of the Exchequer Division of the High Court of Ontario. The Minister of Justice entirely agrees in this, and I hope you will accept.

Believe me as ever, my dear Mulock,

Your old and sincere friend,

(Sgd.) WILFRID LAURIER

Sir William Mulock, K.C.M.G., &c.,
Ottawa.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER.

On the following day I received this letter from Sir William Mulock:

Ottawa, October 12, 1905.

My dear Sir Wilfrid,—Yesterday I received your extremely kind letter of the 11th instant, in acknowledgment of mine of the 7th October in which you with great reluctance have agreed to submit to His Excellency my resignation as a member of your cabinet. I assure you that words fail to express my pain at withdrawing from public life, and from associations in the ministry with yourself and my other dear friends there. One of the happiest memories of my life will be the recollection of your unfailing kindness to me beginning in 1882 and continuing without interruption and increasing with years until the present moment.

I appreciate greatly the offer in your letter of the chief justiceship of the Exchequer Division of the High Court of Justice for Ontario approved of, as you mention, by the Minister of Justice, and gratefully accept it.

Yours sincerely,

(Sgd.) W. MULOCK.

The Right Honourable,
Sir Wilfrid Laurier, G.C.M.G.,
Premier of Canada.

I say nothing new to the House, to the old members especially, when I recall the fact that for some years back the health of Sir William Mulock has not been so good as it was formerly. He has a very strong constitution, but the arduous work in which he was engaged told heavily upon him. I have seen in the press a remark to the effect that if Sir William Mulock withdrew from the cabinet on account of the state of his health, it was inconsistent that he should be called upon to perform the duties of a judge. If such an opinion prevails outside of this House, I am sure that it requires no refutation on the floor of parliament. It is known to every hon. member that the duties of public life are very exacting. It is a fact of public notoriety, as to which there can be no doubt, that though one may not find his health adequate to the ardent furnace of political life, he may find it quite sufficient for the more sedate atmosphere of the bench. Therefore, to those who know Sir William Mulock's great ability there was nothing inconsistent in asking him to accept a position on the bench of the province of Ontario. There was another consideration which I had for some time discussed with my friend Sir William Mulock. Many years ago, I think it was in 1894, Sir William Mulock introduced into this House a Bill which proposed that a member of parliament should be ineligible for any position under the Crown while a member, and for a considerable time after he ceased to be a member. That proposal met with very little response—in fact, with no response whatever. For my part, I strongly dissented from the views of Sir William Mulock on that subject. I discussed it with him on more than one occasion, telling him that my view was—and it has been so ever since—that such a policy was altogether inacceptable—that it was not in my estimation conducive to the public welfare. Such a policy is not in accordance with British precedents or with the British system of parliamentary government. It has been held in England, and I think it may be accepted in this country, that the experience which a man gains in the active work of politics while sitting in this House or in the other branch of the legislature, is a proper and efficient training for the discharge of any duties to which he may afterwards be called. Even in the profession of the law, I believe that a man who has passed through the severe order of political life, who has sat in this House and seen the many questions which come here for discussion and adjustment, is better trained, even for the discharge of the duties of a judge, than he would be if he had not that experience. It is part of the unwritten law of Great Britain that the Attorney General has the refusal of the highest judicial office that may become vacant while he is a member of the administration. We have seen, in our own day, several examples of this. Sir Charles Russell retired from the office of Attorney General to become the Lord Justice of England. Only a few years before Lord Coleridge had done the same thing; and after him the same thing was repeated by the present Lord Chief Justice of England, Lord Alverstone. If we go farther back, we shall find a long list of precedents to the same effect. Not only is this the case in the judicial department of the government, but it is a matter of history that the most important offices which have to be filled in the public administration of Great Britain, not only within the three realms, but all over the world, are bestowed upon members of parliament for the very reason that members of parliament have acquired an experience which will be of good service to them in the discharge of any public duties with which they may be entrusted. Thus, ever since the union of the provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, with very few exceptions, all the Governors General who have been appointed in Canada have been members of parliament, either in the popular branch or in the superior branch. From the first incumbent of that office, Mr. Poulett Thompson, appointed in 1840, to the last, the present Governor General, with only two or three exceptions—Sir Charles Bagot, who had been trained in the diplomatic service, Sir Edmund Head, who had been trained in the civil service, and Sir John Young, who had also been in the diplomatic service—every man who has been appointed to the high and responsible office of representative of the King in this Dominion has been taken from parliament. So I represented to Sir William Mulock that although his views on this point were not quite in accord with my own, or, I believe, with those of the large majority of this parliament, they should not stand as a bar to his acceptance of the office which was offered to him; and, after consideration, he yielded to my persuasion and accepted the office. When it came to looking for a successor, I offered the portfolio of Postmaster General to my friend the present Postmaster the hon. Mr. Aylesworth. Mr. Aylesworth had never sat in parliament before; but in my estimation he should have been a member long ere this; and I may say here, what I have said elsewhere, that five or six years ago I first approached Mr. Aylesworth with the view of inducing him to give his great talents and great abilities to the service of the country. This was nothing but a sacrifice to him. The small salary which he is receiving to-day—I purposely call it a small salary—is no compensation whatever to him for the great sacrifice he has to make in giving up the large and lucrative practice which he has built up for himself. Mr. Aylesworth yielded to my entreaties, presented himself for election to the electors of North York, and I am happy to say was elected.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Carleton, Ont.). Mr. Speaker, I am sure we all sympathize with the expression of hope by the Prime Minister that the health of Sir William Mulock will be in some measure restored in the calmer atmosphere which will greet him upon the bench of Ontario. It would apparently seem that while Sir William Mulock has left public life to obtain rest and repose upon the bench, the new Postmaster General has left the active practice of the legal profession for the purpose of finding rest and repose in that strenuous public life which Sir William Mulock has vacated.

We have, it is true, been told by a late member of the cabinet that the scenes within the Privy Council chamber were sometimes of an extremely strenuous character. The gentleman I refer to took occasion to inform the Canadian public, while he was yet a member of the cabinet, that, to use his own graphic expression, 'We often fight like blazes.' It is therefore perfectly evident that such tempestuous intercourse and the participation in scenes of such active hostility must tell eventually on any man's constitution; and I trust that the new Postmaster General brings to his duties that freedom from any nerve strain and that vigour and hardihood which will enable him to survive for some years to come the turmoil of office.

The right hon. gentleman has not intimated to us that the new Postmaster General attached any conditions to his acceptance of that position which, it appears, the first minister has been urging upon him for so many years. Nor has my right hon. friend been good enough to tell us whether he took his followers into his confidence regarding these frequent requests to the new Postmaster General to enter the cabinet. On that point we are entirely in the dark.

Upon one subject mentioned by my right

hon. friend, namely, the acceptance by members of this House of offices of emolument under the Crown, there is force in some of his suggestions. At the same time we must all agree that it is not very seemly to have members sitting in parliament with written promises of judicial or other preferment in their pockets and supporting the government on the strength of such promises. In one instance at least a gentleman in this country made public the fact that he had sat through one whole session with a written promise in his pocket of a certain high position. True he did not get what the government promised but he got something else. He received high judicial position. How often that has occurred in other cases we know not. We do know however—and I speak with some knowledge of the fact—that public office in this country, and even high judicial position, has been made the subject of petty intrigue among members of parliament on the other side. There can be no doubt about that. And if the government should see fit to bring down the whole correspondence—withholding nothing—on that subject, I venture to say that everything I have stated today would be more than substantiated. Therefore while there may be occasions when the experience any man has attained in the public life of this country will be of service to him hereafter in another office, and when the fact that he is about to receive a public office will in no wise influence his independent judgment in this House, nevertheless the practice may be carried to an extreme; and the right hon. gentleman himself no doubt recollects today that in the years when his party was in opposition, no matter was made more a reproach to the Conservative government than the very circumstance that they had appointed certain men who sat behind them in parliament, to offices of emolument under the Crown. My right hon. friend did not in those days take that dignified and philosophical view which he now adopts. But of course, as we know, convictions and opinions are apt to shade off considerably when one passes from opposition to power, and thus we must make every allowance for the right hon. gentleman.

But there are one or two matters immediately connected with the advent of these gentlemen, Mr. Templeman and Mr. Aylesworth, to public life about which a word might be said. One is whether or not the government have taken into consideration the advisability of reducing the number of cabinet portfolios. Was it not, during eight or ten years before they came into power, a subject of reproach by the right hon. gentleman and all his colleagues that the Conservative government of that day required to carry on the administration in a country comprising only four million or five million people, thirteen or fourteen ministers of the Crown, while in the United States, with a population of from 60 to 70 millions then and eighty millions now, the administration required only seven cabinet ministers in all? No doubt my right hon. friend has some recollection of hearing arguments of that kind put forward by his supporters. Is it intended that we shall have a new portfolio? Apparetly not, since according to the first minister, the Department of Mines and the Geological Survey, are to be attached to the Department of Inland Revenue. That is almost as excellent an idea as attaching the subject of copyright and patents to the Department of Agriculture. The arrangement seems to me rather incongruous and one would suppose that if the number of portfolios is not to be reduced, at least some better arrangement might be made than that suggested.

Nor is there any suggestion of any change in policy by reason of the bringing in of these gentlemen. I suppose we shall have the same old policy of appropriating and expending public money, when desirable in the interests of strong supporters of the government. I suppose we shall have the same policy of appointing to high public office—as in the case of Mr. Jackson—men whose sole qualification is that they have performed some partisan service. I suppose we shall have the same exploitation of the public domain for the benefit of friends of the administration. Well, we might have hoped for something better.

But there is one subject upon which some little inquiry might be made. Have the new Postmaster General and the new Minister of Inland Revenue been made thoroughly acquainted with the views and policy of the government regarding the tariff? If these two gentlemen enjoy that distinction, I am afraid they enjoy it alone among all the people of Canada. However, there is a further consideration, and that is whether or not these two gentlemen agree with the Minister of Agriculture or the rest of the cabinet with regard to the British preference. On that point we have had two policies announced within a very short time of each other. We have had the policy of the Minister of Agriculture given out at Montreal and that of the right hon. gentleman pronounced at Toronto, in which my right hon. friend reiterated his belief that what he and his colleagues had promulgated at the colonial conference, in 1902 was still sound policy to which the government was committed. But the Minister of Agriculture has pronounced an entirely different, an entirely inconsistent and opposite policy. It would be interesting to know whether or not the Postmaster General (Mr. Aylesworth) and the Minister of Inland Revenue (Mr. Templeman) whom we welcome to this House, are in accord with the one or the other wing of the cabinet in that regard.

There is another and a very important subject on which we should have some light. Some of us had an impression that perhaps it had a little to do with the retirement of the late Postmaster General. It appears that our suspicions—if they might be called suspicions—were entirely unfounded, from the correspondence which has been brought down. The Postmaster General, at the last session of parliament, brought in a motion, as a member of the administration, by which he asked that a certain inquiry should be made into the telephone system of this country. He himself acted as chairman of the committee which investigated that subject somewhat fully and thoroughly. The inquiry made by that committee was either incomplete or it terminated so late in the session that it was impossible for the committee to make any report—that is a report of any value. A few days before prorogation this majority report was passed in the committee and subsequently presented to this House:

> During the course of the inquiry, your committee have held some 43 sittings and examined about 50 witnesses, and have had a large number of exhibits and other papers and documents laid before them.
>
> Owing, however, to the voluminous nature of the evidence submitted, and to the late period of the session, your committee feel that it is impossible for them during the present session to come to any conclusions, or to make any recommendations to the House upon the subject referred to them, but they beg to submit herewith for the information of the House the Minutes of their proceedings from March 20th last, together with all the evidence taken by them and the exhibits and other papers laid before them.

It has been the practice, I think, when a committee of this kind has not concluded its labours in such a way as to enable it to make some report to the House, that the whole subject matter, including the evidence taken in the previous session, should be again referred to a similar committee and that the inquiry should be carried on in the succeeding session. Either the time of this House and the time of members of this committee have been absolutely wasted to no purpose, or this matter should be proceeded with by the new Postmaster General, and we should have the advantage in this House of a report based upon the evidence submitted to that committee last session, and upon any further evidence which a new committee may deem it advisable to hear at the present session.

The right hon. the Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) has not made any reference to the policy which will be pursued by this government, the policy which will be carried out by the new Postmaster General in that regard. It would have been desirable to have had some information on this point and if the inquiry is not to be proceeded with we should have the reasons that have induced the goverment, after undertaking an inquiry of this kind, to stay proceedings before its conclusion, leaving the matter just as it was before the inquiry was initiated.

I shall not again allude at any length to a subject which I mentioned the other day. The Prime Minister in speaking of the members of this House from Ontario who sit on the government benches put the matter very frankly—I might perhaps use a stronger word—put the matter, to say the least, very frankly when he said that these gentlemen had been passed over and that they had submitted. That is the language which the right hon. gentleman used with regard to his followers from Ontario and he seems to congratulate himself and these followers of his upon the circumstances that although these men, old and tried, some of them, in public life, men of experience in parliamentary procedure, men who have devoted their lives to public questions, that although they were absolutely competent to fulfil the duties of Postmaster General, nevertheless for some reason which apparently he does not desire to disclose, he has seen fit to pass over every one of them, and to call in a gentleman who, however able and competent he may be, has had, up to the present time, no experience in public life and has made no sacrifices whatever in the performance of public duties in this country. The right hon. gentleman seems to congratulate himself very much upon the machine-like obedience of the hon. gentlemen behind him. Sometimes he puts that as a reproach to us, but in this case he takes it as a compliment to himself. Nebuchadnezzar of old established a divinity in the Plains of Babylon and called upon his subjects to fall down and worship it, and they all did except one, Daniel. But the right hon. gentleman is able to congratulate himself on this occasion that there is not one Daniel among all his followers.

However, these are matters of internal economy in the ranks of the right hon. gentleman's party, and as he affirms to us that everything is calm and smooth and absolutely satisfactory to the able and experienced and competent men who sit behind him, I am sure we will receive his words without the slightest question or qualification and compliment him on having so remarkably uselfish and obedient a following.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN (South York). The right hon. gentleman (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) in addressing the House to-day exhibited his usual facility in evading the question at issue. He was very successful in that, but what the people of Canada wish to know is something about the maintenance of the independence of parliament, and that phrase he never mentioned here to-day. Sir William Mulock's reputation in this country was based on that record to which the right hon. gentleman referred, namely, that he did believe in the independence of parliament and did not believe in giving offices to members who were sitting in this House. He tested that question in this House, and while he did not have the support, probably, of many members in this House, he had the support largely of a majority in this country to-day. The independence of parliament is a good sound doctrine, a doctrine that will exist long after hon. gentlemen who are now in the House of Commons shall cease to be in it. We hear nothing now of the independence of parliament, but day after day we see hon. gentlemen in this House going into offices in every direction. As I pointed out the other day, at least eight of them who sat here last session are no longer here but have passed into positions of emolument under the Crown or have taken other offices that have come to them by the assistance of the government. Now, I think the right hon. gentleman should have told the people of Canada where he stood and where his government stood in regard to the maintenance of the independence of parliament or rather they have told us to-day by ignoring the question that they no longer believe in the maintenance of the independence of parliament, that they intend to appoint any and every one of their followers that they possibly can to office. The right hon. gentleman also told us that he consulted the new Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Brodeur) as to how the policy of his predecessor, the late Mr. Préfontaine was to be continued ; he talked the matter over with him. Did he also discuss with the present Postmaster General the question of how the policy of the late Postmaster General was to be continued ? As was pointed out by the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) the late Postmaster General by his conduct in the Telephone committee, by the speeches that he made in this country, by the editorials that were published in organs of hon. gentlemen, gave the impression that it was the intention of the government to fully and thoroughly investigate telephone conditions in this country, and if I am any judge of what a man says and means, after watching the late Postmaster General, I was convinced that it was his intention to nationalize the telephone system of this country. That he had studied that question, had gone to England and had investigated the nationalization of the telephone there and I felt that he had come back to Canada not only to nationalize the telephones but to nationalize the telegraphs and even to extend the principle of national ownership to a cable system between Canada and the mother country, as he had taken part in the discussion which resulted in the construction of the Pacific cable system for the benefit of the empire. But we have had no statement from the government to-day as to whether the policy of the late Postmaster General or the intention perhaps of the late Postmaster General were to be continued. We have been told that the policy of the late Minister of Marine and Fisheries is to be continued and we know that the present Postmaster General (Mr. Aylesworth) in the election in North York told the people there that he intended to continue the policy of Sir William Mulock in regard to the post office and in regard to telephones. Now, I hope some statement will be made here to-day in regard to that. This question of the telephones is a burning issue in this country. Different provinces of the Dominion have taken it up; it is an issue in Manitoba and they propose to have a provincial system in connection with telephones. But there is an opportunity in this country to have a Dominion system of telephones, a Canadian telephone system, at least a government ownership of the trunk lines as they have in the old country and as they have in a great many other countries. Now, surely the Prime Minister should have told the House to-day whether that committee is to be continued. He told us in a side issue the other day that it had exhausted itself; he has not told us whether there is to be anything done this session with regard to telephones, whether it is the intention to take advantage of all the information that was collected last session and to introduce legislation that will give some relief to the country in regard to the telephone grievances that exist to-day. So I think the statement that has been made here to-day is not sufficient, is not wide enough, does not communicate to parliament the things that parliament is entitled to know, and I hope before this debate is closed some member of the government will tell the House and the country what the intention of the government is with regard to that important matter that was in charge of the late Postmaster General which has not been completed, which is to-day unfinished business.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES (Victoria and Haliburton). I am not going to discuss the matters that have been brought up to-day. I rise to make a suggestion with regard to the matter arising out of the remarks made by the First Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). That right hon. gentleman spoke about some rearrangements of the departments. May I draw his attention to the fact that, in the opinion of the many people in the country, it would be greatly to the advantage of the conduct of the affairs of government if there were a geographical department in which the survey work and map work for the Marine and Fisheries Department, the Lands Branch, the Geological Survey and the Militia Department could all be done under the same head. This would relieve each department of a great deal of routine and detail work which now takes up attention, and I am satisfied that the mapping of the country would be more advantageously carried on.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Perhaps this might mean the creation of a new portfolio. If my hon. friend (Mr. Sam. Hughes) insists upon it, I may consider the matter.

Mr. W. H. BENNETT (East Simcoe). It is to be regretted the Postmaster General (Hon. Mr. Alyesworth) has not risen in his place to repeat here some of the ideas he expressed in the campaign in North York, and for the benefit of the country, to emphasize here the line of conduct he pursued in that campaign. His predecessor in office, Sir Wm. Mulock, had always taken a high and mighty stand in the public life of Canada, so far as talk was concerned; but, when it came to performance he was among the lowliest and most retiring in the land. The public records of Canada teem with instances of the paltry politics played by the ex-Postmaster General when he was a member of this House. Take, for instance, his giving out of doles of public money in his own riding. In one case, boots were required for the letter-carriers in the city of Brantford. In the home of the Minister of Customs (Hon. Mr. Paterson), no dealer was found, even among the Liberals there, fit to supply a few pairs of boots. These boots had to be bought in the village of Aurora in the Postmaster General's riding. Then, the mail bags of the country had to be repaired. The city of Toronto could not provide men to do the work, neither could Hamilton. All this work had to be dragged up to the village of Aurora in the riding of the Postmaster General, in order that a few dollars might be disbursed there to impress the people with the idea of what a high and mighty man the ex-Postmaster General was, and how profuse he was in his expenditure, when he was handling other peoples' money. Sir Wm. Mulock, not knowing whether he might drop into the Exchequer Court, of whether his cabinet position might be made so tolerable that he might stay for another year or two, was preparing himself for an election in the riding of North York. He went into that riding, and said to the people: Let me tell you what I am going to do for the people of this riding; I am going to dig a ditch from Lake Simcoe to the town of Newmarket, a wing of the Trent Valley canal. In the years to come it will probably be known as 'Mulock's folly,' but, in the meantime, it will be the means of spending a lot of money among the faithful. When the present Postmaster General (Hon. Mr. Aylesworth) was elected he was not afraid to say that all these acts were contemptible and disgraceful. Be it said to the hon. gentleman's honour, he had the manhood not to mention Mulock's ditch in North York. I congratulate the hon. gentleman upon that fact. It was what I had expected of him from a somewhat long acquaintance with him—and I trust that he will allow me to be classed among his personal friends. I admire the Postmaster General for the position he took just as much as I have always despised Sir Wm. Mulock for the position he took. The Postmaster General was too big a man to offer to the electors of the riding this paltry bribe. Of course, it is barely possible that I may be complimenting the Postmaster General too highly. A burnt child dreads the fire, and the hon. Postmaster General had heard of the Trent Valley canal in West Durham the year before. But I am not going to say that that was the reason why he did not refer to it in North York; I say, with all sincerity, that I believe the Postmaster General is too big a man and too honest a man for such politics. A great deal is expected of the Postmaster General in his new office by the people of Ontario. And I say that also in all sincerity. I believe that the public accounts will never show such dealings with the electors of North York as characterized his predecessor, I can tell the Postmaster General that I quite agree with the hon. member for North Ontario (Mr. Grant) in some of the opinions he expressed in a recent interview. I agree with him that the Liberals of the province of Ontario welcome the addition of Mr. Alyesworth to the cabinet. I am not going to be so unkind as to say to my venerable friend the Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson) that he is too old and ought to get out as my hon. friend from North Ontario has said. Nor will I call from their quiet recesses, Hon. Mr. Scott and Sir Richard Cartwright, to tell them that they are too old for the positions that they occupy. In the absence of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Fitzpatrick) it is with regret I tell the House what the hon. member for North Ontario said of him—that he was one of the greatest stumbling blocks, on account of his connection with the Transcontinental Railway. This session has continued for over a week, and I am waiting to see the hon. member for North Ontario come into this House and have the manliness to stand in his place and express here the opinions that he has expressed outside. We heard of the hon. member this afternoon, when his name was read as signing a petition in favour of the Sabbath observance. The hon. gentleman has a right to come here in person and express his views—he need not address this House by signing his name to a petition. I hope he will come here and make plain his insinuations particularly against the hon. Minister of Justice.

Mr. DERBYSHIRE. I understand that he will be here on Monday.

Mr. BENNETT. Perhaps, in view of the way in which the hon. member for North Ontario has appeared before the House by petition this afternoon, he would prefer to have us accept this assurance of his expected appearance with the added expression 'D. V.' But the hon. member for North Ontario is not the only slumbering volcano among the hills of Ontario liberalism. Where is the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. Martin) ? They held a meeting in that riding recently and that hon. gentleman joined with others in denouncing this government as most lavish in its expenditure. Yet, we are assured that hon. gentlemen opposite are a happy family, that there is no feeling of revolt, no demurring, no objecting.

I suppose I shall be expected to congratulate the Bench of Ontario upon the accession of Sir William Mulock. The members of the legal profession in that province will remember that the position of Chief Justice of the Exchequer Court has been dangled before the eyes of prominent members of the profession all over the province—all kinds and conditions and colours of men were mentioned for the office. It was said that that decayed politician, Hon. G. W. Ross, who had been made a lawyer by Act of parliament was to fall into the office. It was said that the place would be given to Mr. E. F. B. Johnston. But while people were looking here and there to see to whom the office would be given, there were those in the inside circle who believed that Sir William Mulock would take it after all. And why not ? It is well known that he had been made very uncomfortable in the cabinet for years. It was notorious that he was not all accord with his colleagues on the telephone question. Did the Secretary of State see eye to eye with him in the reforms he was trying to make with regard to the Bell Telephone Company ? Not by any means, if there is any truth in common report. It is a good thing that the Postmaster General has come into the public life of Canada. He has been waiting for a year. He was not coming in as a private member at the time of the general elections, but was coming in then as Postmaster General. But, Sir, if patience has been a virtue in his case, how shall we express our admiration of that virtue as exemplified by the hon. member for Centre York (Mr. Campbell) ? That hon. gentleman has been waiting, and watching and praying, year in and year out. And we see nothing coming to him even yet. Perhaps, as we scan the public accounts, we may find that he has been rewarded. I know not. But we will look. We will do one thing; we will sympathize with the hon. member for Centre York. I am looking forward to the advent of the hon. member for North Ontario next week whose presence is vouched for by my genial and hon. friend from Brockville (Mr. Derbyshire). We will all await with the greatest possible patience what he has to say about the hon. the Minister of Justice and his connection with the Transcontinental Railway. I think there may be, perhaps, a reference to the hon. minister in some other connection, but apparently from what he says in that interview he alludes to his connection with the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. As to the hon. Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson) the right hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright) and the hon. the Secretary of State (Mr. Scott), all I can say is that I hope they will be long spared in their positions because it will exhibit to the people of Ontario the long suffering and the patience of my hon. friend from Centre York and patience which my hon. friend the Postmaster General (Mr. Aylesworth) has exemplified in the past year in waiting for something, Macawber-like, to turn up. One thing I must say in all seriousness and it is that the hon. Postmaster General is welcomed to the cabinet by Ontario people in particular. He has had a high standing at the bar in the province of Ontario. He has been in the position of counsel for Liberals and Conservatives in election trials and his duty was first, last and always to his client. I say in all sincerity that I was one of those who was prepared to and did trust the hon. Postmaster General in that capacity and I say that the position held by the hon. Postmaster General in the province of Ontario in the past, particularly in the estimation of the legal fraternity, has been such that the people of Ontario will look to him for a higher state of affairs in the government of Canada during the years while he may continue to be a member of the administration.

REPORT OF NATIONAL TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILWAY COMMISSION.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Carleton). Mr. Speaker, I would like to say to my right hon. friend the Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) that not only was I mistaken, but that he, himself, was mistaken as to the report of the Transcontinental Commission. I was urging that it be brought down and he promised that it should be brought down while it was here all the time. The report which my right hon. friend said would be brought down in a few days is here now.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I am very glad.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I must confess that I do not understand how it was overlooked because I searched the Votes and Proceedings carefully and found no reference to it. It may have been omitted. I regard this as a report of similar importance to the report of any department of the government, and I would suggest that it should be annually brought down in printed form as is the Auditor General's Report or the report of any other department, but in the meantime, as neither the report of last year nor this report is printed would my right hon. friend accept a motion that they should be printed at once ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. With the consent of my right hon. friend I move :

That Rule No. 99 be suspended in reference to the two reports of the National Transcontinental Railway Commission and that the same be ordered to be printed forthwith.

Motion agreed to.

REPORT PRESENTED.

Report of the Commissioner of Dominion Police for the year ended June 30, 1905.—Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, for Minister of Justice.

SUPPLY—INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY.

House resumed adjourned debate on the proposed motion of Sir Wilfrid Laurier for the House to go into committee of supply.

Hon. JOHN HAGGART (South Lanark). Mr. Speaker, when it was approaching six o'clock the other evening and when I made a motion to adjourn the debate there were a few matters mentioned by my hon. friend the Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Emmerson) which I wished to reply to. I will take them in the order mentioned by the hon. minister. In the meantime I must say that I regret to see his absence from the House especially as some of the matters which I intend to deal with must be a direct contradiction of statements made by the hon. gentleman when he was addressing the House. However, I cannot help it. If the hon. minister chooses to be away it is his fault and not mine. In order to illustrate what the Intercolonial Railway had to bear and the losses it sustained he mentioned the carrying of hay over the road to the maritime provinces. The amount carried was in the neighbourhood of 37,000 tons. The amount of rebate allowed by the government of this country, under the authority of an order in council, is in the neighbourhood of $125,000, or nearly $126,000. The amount of loss to the Intercolonial, according to the statement of the deputy minister, is in the neighbourhood of $140,000. I asked the hon. gentleman upon what authority he did this. He said by authority of an order in council. I asked him what business he had to do this by an order in council. He said he had the precedent of carrying coal to the cold, suffering people of Ontario a year or two before and that he just followed the precedent set then. I remember that one of my hon. friends from the city of Toronto asked what amount of coal was carried up free on the Intercolonial Railway and, en passant, I might mention that the hon. minister says that that sturdy pack-horse, the Intercolonial Railway, had to bear all the expenditure and all the loss of carrying this coal free and carrying this hay over the Intercolonial Railway and that it was right that we should give credit to it. According to the terms brought down in answer to the motion of my hon. friend, one of the members from Toronto, the total amount of coal carried to the province of Ontario was 496 tons and all for the city of Ottawa, not enough to supply the families of the fifteen ministers who at present reside in this city with coal during the year. The total amount of money would be received for freight for this 496 tons of coal must be less than $1,000. That is the heavy amount that is placed upon that sturdy suffering packhorse, the Intercolonial Railway. Now, what authority have they to do anything of the kind ? The returning of $125,000 of the charges for carrying freight over the Intercolonial Railway looks to me like an appropriation of public money. For the suffering farmers whose stock was dying for the want of this hay! If I am informed properly a great portion of this hay, or over 5,000 tons of it, was carried through to Sydney and went over to Newfoundland for speculators.

Another peculiarity about the carriage of this 37,000 tons of hay is that it occurred at a time when elections were going on in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. Now, Mr. Speaker, I protest that any appropriation like that $125,000, should first receive the sanction of parliament. It is not in the category of these matters which the Governor in Council can deal with. It is a matter which should have its first initiative in this House, or if such expenditure were made for the purpose say of combatting an epidemic and was absolutely urgent, there should have been a Bill of indemnity covering that amount introduced into this House. We all know that expenditure was not for the purpose of relieving suffering to any great extent in that locality ; it was for the purpose of benefiting a lot of speculators dealing in hay in that section, and more than all it was for the purpose of securing votes for the government in the election that was proceeding at that time. Enough upon that perhaps.

One of the things that the Minister of Railways grew eloquent about was the statement of the Montreal 'Gazette' with regard to the financial position of the Intercolonial Railway. You will remember that the Montreal 'Gazette' took the deficit on the Intercolonial Railway and added to it 3 per cent on the capital expenditure on the Intercolonial Railway, and figured that as the cost of the Intercolonial Railway to the country for the year. And the Minister of Railways grew eloquent about that. He told us that falsehood was carried to the Pacific ocean, reverberated back to the Atlantic until it was buried in its waves, and dashed again on the shores of Great Britain and Ireland.

Mr. BENNETT. The old story.

Mr. HAGGART. Yes, the old story. Fancy such eloquence from the Minister of Railways on a simple financial statement contained in the Montreal 'Gazette' and which statement virtually represented the true position of the Intercolonial Railway. Why, according to the minister's own statement the capital expenditure on the Intercolonial Railway amounts to $85,000,000 and 3 per cent upon that is somewhere in the neighbourhood of $2,500,000. The amount added for interest by the 'Gazette' was a quarter of a million less, and perhaps I am too high in figuring at 3 per cent, but I noticed that the Prime Minister recently told us that the government is now borrowing money at rates varying from 3½ to 3⅝ per cent. At all events the statement of the Montreal 'Gazette' was well within the mark. If you make an expenditure of $10,000,000 say on a railway or on a public work, you first of all must get interest on that capital expenditure, and if you cannot earn the interest you charge it up against the concern. Capital expenditure may be made for the purpose of improving a property and it may be an asset to the investor, but who would ever think of that with regard to the Intercolonial Railway? Why, Mr. Speaker, if the Intercolonial Railway were put on the market to-morrow do you think any syndicate or any railway in Canada would pay for it, an amount equal to the amount that has been spent on capital account by this government from 1896 to 1905? After all your locomotives, and all your magnificent undertakings, does any one think it possible that you could get for that railway the bare sum of $25,000,000 which this government has expended on the Intercolonial Railway on capital account between 1896 and 1905 ? And, when the Montreal 'Gazette' stated it was a bankrupt concern it stated the absolute truth, no matter how much the Minister of Railways may deny it.

The hon. member for Hamilton (Mr. Barker) and myself have on the one side disputed with successive Liberal Ministers of Railways, as to what should constitute capital account. That, I shall refer to again. But the Minister of Railways through his deputy has received a letter from Sir Thomas Shaughnessy on this subject, and although we have Sir Thomas Shaughnessy's letter in reply we have not the letter to which it is an answer. My contention has been that the charge for capital account should have ceased long ago upon the Intercolonial Railway, and in that I am following the policy laid down by no less a person than the late Hon. Alexander Mackenzie who said that the capital account on the Intercolonial Railway should cease; that anything less than that was falsifying the accounts and deceiving the people of Canada. I say that on the Intercolonial Railway which has been in existence for 40 years charges to capital should cease. It is true that in abnormal conditions like the acquisition of the Drummond County which cost us $1,400,000, or of the Canada Eastern which cost us $800,000, these sums would be a charge on capital, but on the old Intercolonial Railway proper which has been in operation since 1868, it is time the capital account should be ended. When that is done, and not until then, shall we have a true statement of what is the actual expenditure upon the Intercolonial Railway. I was dealing with the letter of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, let me read it and comment upon it as I go along. Sir Thomas Shaughnessy says :

> Your letter of August 26, reached my office during my absence from the city, which accounts for the delay in replying to it. Below I give you our practice with reference to the charges that are made to capital and revenue accounts respectively in connection with the several classes of work about which you make inquiry.
>
> 1. When light rails are taken out of the track and replaced by heavy rails the difference in the weight of rail and weight of fastenings is charged to capital. No portion of the cost of labour, or of other expenses involved in making the change, is charged to capital account.

When I was in control of the Intercolonial Railway all the rails which were laid on that line for several years were charged to revenue and not to capital. In the first two years of Mr. Blair's administration he followed my example. In 1897 and 1898, a certain amount of rails laid on the Intercolonial Railway were charged to revenue, but the following year Mr. Blair got a vote for $500,000 on account of capital for the purchase of rails and that was the first introduction of the system. Those of us who were present at the examination of Mr. Pottinger in the Public Acounts Committee will remember that when he was asked why an expenditure of a million dollars had been charged to capital account, knowing it had been wrongly charged, Mr. Pottinger said: Because you voted it for capital account. And when the Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Emmerson) read that part of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy's letter in the House on Tuesday last, the hon. member for Hamilton (Mr. Barker) said :

> That is precisely what I contended that you should do.

And Mr. Emmerson replied :

> That is precisely what I did on the Intercolonial Railway.

Is it possible that a member of the government of this country could make a statement of that kind, which I presume must be made in ignorance of the facts or because he has been wrongly informed by some of the officials ? A more glaring false statement was never made to this country or to the members of this House. I hope to be able to make that assertion so plain that no man in this House will deny it. You will remember that Sir Thomas Shaughnessy wrote :

When light rails are taken off the track and replaced by heavy rails the difference in the weight of rail and weight of fastenings is charged to capital. No portion of the cost of labour, or of other expenses involved in making the change, is charged to capital account.

If we look at the capital expenditure on the Intercolonial Railway, what do we find? We find a charge of $495,000. According to the statement of the Minister of Railways and Canals concerning the letter of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, that would represent the difference in value between the weight of the rails taken off and the weight of the rails which supplanted them. If you look at the accounts of the Intercolonial Railway you will find that new rails were laid on 118 miles of road. The rails taken off averaged a weight of 67 pounds to the yard and the rails put on averaged 80 pounds to the yard, a difference of 13 pounds to the yard. Therefore, according to the opinion of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, the amount to be charged to capital account is the cost of this difference of 13 pounds to the yard, with the difference in cost of the fastenings. On that basis, the amount charged to capital account for new rails would lay about 419 miles of track instead of 118 miles. I was anxious to see whether the accounts of the Intercolonial Railway as given in the Auditor General's Report would bear out the statements of the Minister of Railways and Canals, and I turned it up. It shows that in all $1,015,275 was expended for steel rails and fastenings. Now, mark what was paid for the rails. For the first 10,000 gross tons the price was $29.15, for the next 10,900 gross tons $31.50, and for the next 9,971 gross tons, $33, or an average of a little over $31 per gross ton. The account gives credits of 24,860 tons of rails taken off, at 67 pounds to the yard, at $20 a ton. The statement of the minister was that he had taken the actual weight of the rails and only charged the difference between those he had taken off and those he had put on. Does he know the difference? Did he ever see this account? Who furnished that false information to him? The total amount of the credits of steel rails and fastenings is $520,265 which, deducted from the expenditure of $1,015,275, leaves the exact amount charged to capital account at $495,009.89.

The Minister of Railways and Canals said:—

And that is precisely what I did on the Intercolonial.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy says:

When light rails are taken out of the track and replaced by heavy rails the difference in the weight of rail and weight of fastenings is charged to capital account.

The hon. Minister of Railways and Canals only allowed $20 per ton for the rails taken out, while he was paying over $31 per ton for the rails going in, and the difference, one-third of the $1,000,000 odd that he expended on capital account, should be deducted from the $495,000. In other words, according to his own statements, he ought to have charged to revenue nearly $300,000 more than he has done.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy goes on to say:

When a locomotive is destroyed or put out of service permanently, we replace it with another, charging the cost to revenue, although the new engine may be very much heavier and more costly, and we pursue the same course with reference to cars.

Upon which the Minister of Railways and Canals remarked:

Precisely what the Intercolonial Railway does.

Mr. BARKER. But the hon. gentleman surely does not mean to say—

Mr. EMMERSON. My hon. friend (Mr. Barker) need not become impatient. If he will possess his soul in patience for a few moments I will read him a clause on the very point I know he has in mind.

It will be interesting to know whether the shops to be reconstructed in the place of those burnt down the other day and the cars and locomotives which are to replace those destroyed, are to be charged to capital or to revenue account. In my opinion they will no doubt be charged to capital.

Then the minister quoted again from Sir Thomas Shaughnessy's letter:

Air brakes, when originally applied in place of the hand brake, are charged to capital account.

And with regard to this he comments:

Precisely what we do in connection with these expenses on the Intercolonial Railway.

He went on to quote further from Sir Thomas Shaughnessy:

6. When an old station-house is replaced by a new and a larger one, we generally charge the difference in value to capital account, but this is not always done.

7. Our practice with reference to the replacement of old engine houses is the same as in the case of old station buildings.

8. If wooden bridges be replaced by others of the same material, the charge is against revenue. If a wooden structure be taken out and be replaced by permanent work in the shape of steel or masonry, or embankment, the charge is against capital. If a steel structure is replaced by a heavier and stronger one, the difference in weight only would be charged to capital.

What will the hon. minister say to this? He no doubt will say it is precisely what has been done in the Intercolonial Railway. Well, I had the curiosity to look up the accounts of the Intercolonial Railway with reference to the equipping and strengthening of iron bridges. I thought the statement of the minister must have been entirely wrong, from my recollection and here is what I find in the blue-book: I find an expenditure of $264,242, charged to the Intercolonial Railway for the strengthening of iron bridges, and I do not find a credit of one cent for the bridges removed. Would you believe it possible that a minister of railways would, in the face of such a condition of things, have the nerve to tell the House that the accounts on the Intercolonial Railway are kept as they are on the Canadian Pacific Railway? Sir Thomas Shaughnessy goes on to say:

> If a steel structure is replaced by a heavier and a stronger one, the difference in weight only would be charged to capital.

But the hon. minister, in the case of the Intercolonial Railway, charges the full amount to capital without deducting one cent for the material replaced. What reliance, I ask you, can be placed on the statement of a minister who will make an assertion of that kind? Never has there been a concern more mismanaged in this country than the Intercolonial Railway. There has been continuously a fight between the opposition and the Minister of Railways regarding this abuse of charging expenditure against capital account. That account has been made an excuse for extravagance which ought not be permitted on any railway. As I have already said, the expenditure on the Intercolonial Railway should be confined entirely to revenue account. There should be no expenditure at all upon capital account. That railroad has been running for forty years through a section of country as favourable for railway construction as any other portion of America. Notwithstanding the statement of the hon. minister, I say it is a railroad that ought to pay, and would pay if properly managed. Yet for the last nine years—managed as it has been by the couple of gentlemen who have presided over it during that period—it has resulted in a loss of $24,000,000 to the people of this country. What excuse does the hon. minister give? He says it is the fault of the location of the railroad,—that the railroad follows military lines and political lines instead of the shortest commercial route. But we have not had from him the information as to how much shorter the new railroad contemplated from Lévis to Moncton will be than the present Intercolonial Railway. That information ought to be given to the people.

Then he said that for a number of years we have been subsidizing the Canadian Pacific Railway at the rate of $186,000 a year in order to have a short line to St. John and that the effect of this was to force the Intercolonial Railway to carry freight over a long haul at competitive rates which do not pay. Well, that may be a serious charge against the late government, but what would you think of a government which is placing a non-paying concern—a bankrupt railway as the Montreal 'Gazette' puts it—in a still worse position by building a line from Quebec to Moncton for the purpose of further competing with it. The hon. minister had no explanation to give as to that. What distance is he going to save by this next line? What are its gradients? If I am rightly informed, the Intercolonial Railway line from Lévis to Moncton is nearly as short and more favourable as regards gradients than any line that can possibly be got by any other survey between these same points. Yet notwithstanding that, we have this government pledged to build a railroad and transfer it over to a rival company which can only have the effect of greatly increasing the competition from which the Minister of Railways tells us the government railroad is now suffering because of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

It is somewhat strange how completely the hon. minister ignored the calamity which happened at Moncton the other day. We had down there a conflagration which nearly swept away all the government workshops. Yet not a statement have we had with regard to it from the minister. What is his policy in that connection? What amount of money will he require to renew those workshops and repair the ravages effected? What are the men who were employed in these shops doing at present? Are they getting the same pay as they did when working in the shops or are they simply engaged as labourers at labourers pay in clearing away the debris? What is the position? What does the hon. minister intend to do? Not a word have we had from him.

I have had information, which I believe to be correct, that he is not taking out any ties for the Intercolonial Railway this year. I am told that he proposes making a favourable showing in the last six months by putting in no new ties on the Intercolonial Railway. Well, it is well known that the life of a sleeper, made of soft wood, is but seven years. That consequently every year one-seventh of the entire quantity has to be renewed. Of course, if you strike out from the expenditure in any one year the outlay caused by the renewal of one-seventh of the ties, you will show a large saving, but it will be at the expense of the efficiency of the railroad. There is another way in which the minister might make a favourable showing for the last six months of the year. To what account are the men employed at present clearing the debris to be charged—to revenue account or to capital? If these men are kept on while the buildings are being repaired and the machinery being put into them, are their wages to be charged against ordinary revenue or to capital?

We would like to know it because if the accounts of three quarters of the men employed in the workshops at Moncton are transferred from revenue account into capital expenditure during the year, transferred to capital account, it makes an enormous difference in the financial statement of the road during the year. Not a word in reference to that, not a word in reference to the policy of the road. What the minister is going to do is to have a more efficacious car service. He is going perhaps to increase the passenger rates, he is going to take power to increase the freight rates along the Intercolonial. The rates for carrying passengers and freight on the Intercolonial Railway, let me tell the Minister of Railways, were increased by Mr. Blair, and were made greater than when I was managing the road. I managed the road so that with less receipts for passenger rates and less receipts for freight rates the accounts balanced for the whole time I was in. I managed the road so that there was none or very little of this charged to capital account compared with what there is at the present time, yet the present minister and his predecessor glorify themselves upon taking the old Intercolonial Railway from travelling upon a back lane, putting it in a front place and showing to the world what a judicious expenditure for the purpose of improvements would do on the Intercolonial Railway. And what is the result? The result will be the same as long as the Intercolonial Railway is used as a political machine—not a pack horse but a pack hack, for the gentlemen who are in the government at the present moment, used for the purpose of furthering their political objects. The minister says, to a certain extent correctly, that you will not better affairs by putting the road in the hands of a commission. Commissions in certain respects are a farce. Does it remove the management of the Transcontinental Railway from the ministers of the Crown at the present moment? Are they not the directing parties in reference to it? It acts as a shield to a certain extent for iniquities committed by the commission under the direction of the gentlemen who are in power. It is possible to do it in a certain way so that it may be removed from that category. They have to certain extent done it in Australia. If it is possible to appoint an impartial commission let us remove the obloquy and stain for the people of Canada that that Intercolonial Railway has become at the present date. The people of Canada are disgusted at the management of the institution and the effect of it must be either to have it pass into the hands of a commission or as I stated before to have it leased to some road working it on a percentage of the receipts or some other way. Canada has had the best opportunity of any country in the world, of which I know, of elucidating the great problem of the ownership by government of corporate facilities, the ownership of telegraphs, the ownership of railroads, but this opportunity has been lost by the incapacity, the worse than incapacity, the stupidity and I might almost give a worse name to it, of the parties who have been ruling the road. We have the Intercolonial Railway from Halifax to Montreal, the government railway also runs the whole length of Prince Edward Island and it extends down to St. John. It was built as part of a pact, a solemn bargain, made with the people of the maritime provinces when we entered into confederation. We have earnestly carried out our pact or part of the bargain and what is the result? By the mismanagement of the people themselves, because it is a representative from that section of the country, backed by the nearly unanimous voice of the representatives of the maritime provinces, who controls the road, this state of affairs has arisen. The probability may be that a road that ought to be run in the interests of the people of that country may be removed from any jurisdiction which they could possibly exert over it either by their representative or any other person. It is in the interest of the maritime provinces and the rest of the Dominion to see that the men who manage these roads down there manage them economically, and in the best interests of the people. The people will be glad to see this, they like to see a man, although they may envy his position or would like to be in it, administer the affairs of a department of government economically. They like to see a government institution run on a proper basis. The management of that road at the present day is interfering with the solution of one of the serious questions agitating every country; that is: Is it possible at all that government institutions of that kind, railways and telegraphs, can be managed in an economical and proper way by the government of the country? I say it can. I say that a proper civil service, efficiently looked after by a proper head, may be a little more expensive in running a road, but that all the supplies for a government road can be bought as economically and as cheaply as they are bought for any other road in the country. When I was at the head of the Intercolonial Railway all supplies were bought as cheaply, if not more cheaply than they could be bought by any other road. People would rather deal with the government than with private corporations. They knew they would be fairly dealt with and if there was any difference of opinion between the government and the individual as to fulfilling his contract or as to the goods supplied being up to the standard required by the Intercolonial Railway, we had a ready way of settling it, we sent the article on which he tendered down to the School of Science at McGill University, Montreal, and asked their report. When we got their report there never was a kick from the party supplying it because he knew it was perfectly honest. I hope that the state of affairs which I inaugurated or which was inaugurated before my time on the Intercolonial will continue. The only hope for the road is an efficient control either by a commission or some other means than the present one, or to put in a man that is not from the maritime provinces at all who will see that the road is efficiently managed. It is the only hope and the people of that section ought to insist upon it. There is such a feeling now in the Dominion that the people of this country will no longer keep paying on capital account for ordinary expenditure and continue running the road at a loss of $7,000,000 or $8,000,000 and the party which adopts a policy of removing the road from government control by some means or other will be the popular party in this country.

Then it is the duty of the representatives from the maritime provinces to insist on an economical management of that road. I have no faith in management by commission. I am a good deal in line with my hon. friend from South York (Mr. Maclean). I believe that the time is coming when the strict control of railway freight and passenger rates will be an essential part of our public policy. Why not? We give corporate powers to certain powers; we do it in the public interest; but we have the ultimate and absolute control. When it is in the public interest that these things should be charged, the power rests with the people of this country and with the parliament that represents them to bring those changes into effect. And, if there is a wrong, it is the duty of those who possess the power to redress that wrong.

I do not wish to speak further, on this subject. I regret that the Minister of Railways is not in his place. I think the House had a right to expect that he would be here, and I think it would have been only courtesy to me for him to attend on this occasion when he knew I was to reply to his address. My criticism has been, to a great extent directed to the statements of the hon. gentleman. Some of those criticisms I would have made considerably stronger had he been here. For instance, his statement with regard to Sir Thomas Shaughnessy's letter, when he tries to mislead the people and this parliament to the belief that he is trying to carry out managerial policy and a method of book-keeping similar to that of the Canadian Pacific Railway, when his own books and the report of the Auditor General prove the very contrary. This is not an unimportant debate as one might infer from the fact that the hon. Minister of Railways is not present. What are the greatest questions that we have before us? They are the expenditures and deficits of the Intercolonial, the question of the Transcontinental Railway, and the general question of transportation. These latter two the hon. minister did not think it worth while even to mention. And he does not think it worth while to attend the debate even of those things to which he referred in his own speech. In my opinion he is not paying that attention to parliament that he ought to pay.

Mr. HAGGART.

Mr. HANCE J. LOGAN (Cumberland). Mr. Speaker, I shall crave the indulgence of the House but for a short time, and, as it has been some time since I sought that consideration before, I trust it will not be granted me ungraciously.

Sir, we have at last found out what is the policy of the Conservative party in reference to the great Intercolonial Railway which is so important to us, particularly to those who live in the maritime provinces. The hon. member for South Lanark (Mr. Haggart), who was Minister of Railways for so long a time in the Conservative government, is, of course, the mouthpiece of the opposition in reference to their policy touching that great railway system. Therefore, I presume, I must take what the hon. gentleman has said this afternoon as being that which is believed by the men who sit behind him—as an enunciation of the policy of the Liberal-Conservative party.

But, before I make any remarks in reference to the main points of the speech to which we have just listened, let me say that I think that the remarks made by the hon. member for South Lanark as to the absence of the Minister of Railways (Hon. Mr. Emmerson) are a little unfair. I do not think that he should complain of the absence of the Minister of Railways. The minister has always been attentive to his public duty. He was called away to-day by public business which he could not very well leave unattended. But I am sure that if the minister had known that the hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Haggart) would make the statemnt of policey he has made to-day, he would almost have been willing even to neglect public business to be present, to hear the Intercolonial, the government railway system of Canada, which was increased in mileage by the Conservative government, and which was to be extended to the Georgian bay, condemned in such strong language by the hon. gentleman, and to hear the hon. gentleman say that his opinions were even stronger than the language that he used. The hon. gentleman has spoken of this railway as a sinkhole. Yet this is the road which the hon. gentleman has proposed to extend hundreds of miles to Georgian bay.

The hon. gentleman spoke of the government using the Intercolonial to carry hay free into the maritime provinces to save a serious situation due to the famine in that commodity. He said that the government had no power to pass an order in council to carry this hay free. I am sorry to say that my hon. friend, in his speeches on the railway question, is always provincial—Ontario provincial. When we carried coal from the maritime provinces to the municipalities of Ontario free four or five years ago the hon. gentleman did not question the constitutionality of the order in council. We heard no word from him so long as free freight was made to apply to the province of Ontario. But when a condition of affairs existed in the eastern part of Nova Scotia and the Island of Cape Breton, which demanded the attention of the government and the assistance of the government to save a great industry, the hon. gentleman rises to say that it is unconstitutional and should not have been done. Mr. Speaker, there are functions which must be performed by a government railway which would not be expected of a railway belonging to a private corporation. The Intercolonial is the means of communication between widely separated parts of this Dominion. It was never built as a commercial institution; it was designed as the first great means of cementing the provinces of the original confederation.

The hon. gentleman (Mr. Haggart) has referred to the Intercolonial, this railway upon which we have spent over $80,000,000, as a bankrupt concern. In fact, he says, that we could not sell it to-morrow for $25,000,000. The hon. gentleman is not only inconsistent but he is blind to inconsistency as it must present itself to the eyes of others. His party have been preaching government ownership of railways. They went to the country a year or two ago upon that cry. And now he tells us that this government owned railway which has cost $80,000,000 could not be sold for more than $25,000,000. Let us be thankful then, for having saved this country from building a government owned railway which would probably be four or five times the length of the Intercolonial.

He quarrels very much with what is being charged to capital account and in that connection he enunciates another principle. Let it be heard from one end of Canada to the other that the railway expert of the opposition says we should not spend another dollar of capital on the Intercolonial ; that, if we cannot get the money out of revenue, we should not expend it at all. He also quarrels with the items in the capital account. But, if you take up the report of the Railway Department during the time the hon. gentleman was Minister of Railways, you will find the very same sort of items charged to capital account that are charged to capital to-day.

Read the report of the Minister of Railways as presented a few days ago, read the report of the General Manager touching the capital account, and read the same General Manager's report of twelve years ago and you find exactly the same items charged to capital account. The hon. gentleman knows as well as he is living that we must have a capital account on the Intercolonial Railway, and that as the country develops, as the country grows, as new branches, as new sidings, as new and better accommodation are required we must take the cost of these improvements and extensions out of capital account. That is the policy of every railway in Canada, government or private owned. My hon. friend says that we should not take any further money out of capital account and that we should not last year have spent any money on capital account. If we had not taken it out of capital account we could not have expended it at all. That is plain to be seen as our revenue did not equal our expenditure. Therefore it was his policy last year that we should not have expended any money on capital account upon the Intercolonial Railway. Well now, Mr. Speaker, if you will look over the items of expenditure on capital account you will wonder how we could have got along at all last year if we had not expended a large amount on capital account. For instance, we purchased last year on capital account about $1,300,000 worth of rolling stock. The hon. gentleman has not been down in the maritime provinces, he has not been in Nova Scotia or he would know that there is a continuous cry from one month to another along the line of the Intercolonial Railway for more rolling stock, for more cars. Men come into the offices of the railway and ask for cars to ship their hay and their flour. Men come into the offices and ask for cars to ship their coal. Mines are idle for weeks at a time on account of the difficulty of securing sufficient cars to carry the product of the collieries of Nova Scotia. We spent last year, I repeat, $1,300,000 on rolling stock. We need still more rolling stock to-day, but if my hon. friend had his way we should spend nothing on capital account, we should not have a single car, we should not have a single engine added, we should not have a single siding constructed ; in short, we should have none of the improvements enumerated in the manager's report made upon the Intercolonial Railway. I cannot think, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. gentleman can be serious in contending that as the country progresses we shall not spend any more money on capital account on the Intercolonial Railway.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I do not think I shall refer much further to what the hon. gentleman has said. His language, I am bound to say, was a little extravagant. He referred, however, to the fact that my hon. friend the Minister of Railways was not buying any sleepers. This is only in passing. The hon. gentleman, I am sure, is misinformed in reference to this matter as I know as a matter of fact that a large number of sleepers are being bought at the present day even though the hon. gentleman would lead us to believe that the minister is endeavouring to starve the road during the present year in order to make the best showing possible from the operation of the road. But, before I leave the hon. gentleman altogether I will allude to one remark which he made and that was that the Intercolonial Railway to-day is a political machine.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. LOGAN. I do not think, Mr. Speaker, that those who know the facts will say 'hear, hear.' If they had lived along the line of the Intercolonial Railway about 1896 they would have known what a political machine really means. They would have known that at that time men were carried in train loads to vote at the general elections of that year. They would have known, as I know, that whole bundles of passes were handed out in blank. They did not fill them in and they even telegraphed ahead and said: I am sending you 2,500 shingles—meaning passes—for electors to be carried from one part of the country to the other to vote for the then government. And, my hon. friend was the Minister of Railways at that time. My hon. friend knows that this matter was investigated under oath after this government came into power and he knows as well as I do that the statements I am making were proved on oath to be absolutely true. He knows that all over this line from one end to the other passes were sent helter skelter in every direction, and men were carried from one part of the country to the other.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Did the hon. gentleman ever see that evidence?

Mr. LOGAN. I have not only seen the evidence but I have read it.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I have asked two or three times to have it brought down and laid on the table of the House but it never has been brought down.

Mr. LOGAN. I am bound to say that there must be some difference of opinion between my hon. friend (Mr. R. L. Borden) and myself because I have read the evidence. However, even if I had not read the evidence, everybody in the maritime provinces who lives along the railway knows that the statements I am making are correct—absolutely correct.

Mr. HAGGART. Whose evidence was it? I never heard of it before.

Mr. LOGAN. The evidence of Mr. David Pottinger, general manager of the Intercolonial Railway, Mr. Geo. M. Jarvis, the present superintendent and of other officials of the Intercolonial Railway. Why, Mr. Speaker, in the very town in which I live men have admitted to me themselves that in the old days books of passes were sent to them in blank to be filled out, 'Pass John Brown and 25 others' Yet, my hon. friend talks about a political machine!

An hon. MEMBER. Name.

Mr. LOGAN. I have represented a constituency for something over ten years through which the Intercolonial Railway passes, through which there is a very large mileage of the Intercolonial Railway both of the main line and the short line, and I am speaking with a full knowledge of the facts when I say that I do not know of one single pass of any kind or description having been issued by the Minister of Railways, either the late Minister of Railways (Mr. Blair), or the present Minister of Railways, to any friend of mine or to any friend of this government for the purpose of influencing him on election day or at any other time. I am afraid that sometimes people get the opinion in this part of the country that the road is a mere political machine. I want to say that the Intercolonial Railway is the most difficult railway concern to get any transportation from in the Dominion of Canada. No passes are issued as there were in days gone by. Passes are eliminated. I remember that the late Minister of Railways and Canals, about 1897, after he had been in office for a few months, told me one day in conversation over in his department that at least one-third of his correspondence at that time was in reference to transportation which had been issued by this road in years gone by and that he found that about half of the people were being carried free. Those days have gone by, and there is no such thing to-day as issuing passes at the request of any member of parliament.

Mr. HAGGART. How does the present hon. Minister of Railways and Canals, in his statement, intend to increase the revenue of the Intercolonial Railway by abolishing passes?

Mr. LOGAN. Well, Mr. Speaker, I should think that if a good Conservative travelled over the road in the old days on a pass from Halifax to Montreal and the railway received nothing, and if he travelled over the same road to-day and paid $25 the railway would be in receipt of that much more. I cannot see that it takes very much of an argument to convince any one of that proposition. Stopping the passes means stopping the leakage. It means more revenue to the Intercolonial Railway and this should be secured if possible.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. But there is no leakage according to your statement.

Mr. LOGAN. I am not talking about the present leakages. My hon. friend knows that leakages did exist until the government closed up these leakages. Passing from the hon. gentleman's remarks in reference to a political machine, I say that we are to-day face to face with an agitation in this country the object of which is to take the Intercolonial out of the hands of the government. It is no use for us to shut our eyes to it; it is no use for us to say it is all moonshine, it is an undoubted fact that there is in this country to-day in some quarters a determination on the part of some people that the Intercolonial Railway shall either be handed over to a commission, or that it shall be conveyed by lease or sale to one or other of the great private railway corporations. And a part of the game—if I may so call it—is, that certain gentlemen friendly to these corporations and certain newspapers friendly to them are ready upon all occasions to cry out that the Intercolonial Railway is a sink hole and that we are wastefully throwing the money of the country into it without geting any benefit in return. Well, Sir, the initial purpose of the Intercolonial Railway was well described by the Minister of Railways in his recent speech. In 1864 when we in the maritime provinces were endeavouring to form a maritime union—which we should have formed—we were approached by the representatives of Upper Canada who held out to us the olive branch of a great Intercolonial Railway. They said: Join the other provinces of Canada, come in with us and we will build a great people's railway in this country. And the people of the maritime provinces took these gentlemen at their word they believe in their representations, and joined in confederation. And, Sir, all that we in the maritime provinces now ask is, that the bonds which we entered into shall be respected and that the promises which were made to us shall be kept in their entirety. We in the maritime provinces have not benefited from confederation to the extent that we had hoped. In those days of old we had our big distributing houses in the different cities of those provinces; we had a large and growing trade. But to-day these distributing houses have been almost driven to the wall by competition, and competition from what source? Competition from the United States or from outside countries? No. Competition from the upper provinces of Canada. And how has that competition been made possible? It has been made possible by the low freight rates on the Intercolonial Railway. And when some people speak of the people of the maritime provinces being selfish; when they say we are sordid in our action in reference to these freight rates; I want to point out to these gentlemen that the lowest rates on the Intercolonial were not made for the benefit of the people of the maritime provinces, but were made for the benefit of people in other parts of Canada. Our trade has suffered to some extent by this keen and successful competition from the other provinces, but we are not complaining to-day. Our merchants have gone into other avenues of trade, and I am glad to say that their enterprise and energy in these other directions has reaped a fair reward. But, Sir, we insist that the Intercolonial Railway shall be maintained as a government railway, not that it is of any party advantage to us, because representing as I do a constituency in which there is a large railway mileage, I can tell my hon. friends that I would be thankful to morrow if all the government railway patronage were taken away from me. I believe that I would be stronger on election day than I possibly am now, had I not the patronage of the constituency. I would welcome the day when the patronage of the Intercolonial should be taken entirely and absolutely away from the members of the constituencies along the line.

Mr. LENNOX. Will the hon. gentleman explain what government railway patronage he has?

Mr. LOGAN. Surely my hon. friend must know.

Mr. LENNOX. It would be interesting to know.

Mr. LOGAN. The hon. member (Mr. Lennox) can very well answer his own question. He knows that, for instance, if a section man should unfortunately die or be removed, that the government would ask the member representing that constituency and who is in sympathy with the government to recommend a successor. Not that the man would be employed, because the member recommended him, but he would be given a trial as to his competency and if found competent for his work he would be retained.

Mr. LENNOX: Is that all?

Mr. LOGAN. The same would apply to some other positions on the road, and the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lennox) knows as well as I do that the only way the government can secure men to work on the road is to ask for a recommendation——

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, what about the C.P.R.?

Mr. LOGAN. Surely my hon. friends opposite are not surprised at that. Perhaps the less they say about getting favours from the Canadian Pacific Railway and securing accommodation from them along the railroad the better it may be. But let us not bring the Canadian Pacific Railway or the Grand Trunk Railway into this discussion, let us deal with the Intercolonial which is the question before the House. As I have said, the Intercolonial was built for the purpose of cementing confederation. I shall not weary the House by repeating the history of that railroad and how it was constructed around the Baie de Chaleurs and along the northern part of New Brunswick. We all know that it was built for political and military reasons, and not for commercial purposes, and so we must take the railroad as we find it. We have the long haul to contend with as compared with other railroads having a shorter haul to competitive points, and we have also the low rates to contend with when we attempt to make a good showing for the Intercolonial Railway. It no doubt will be asked as to how these low rates originated, and perhaps I can answer the question. Before confederation we had a small railway in Nova Scotia and another in New Brunswick, and when these railways were made a part of the Intercolonial, if there was no written agreement to the effect, there was at least an understanding that the then existing rates should be maintained in the future. And so it has been that from that date to the present, although the expenditure of the Intercolonial has necessarily increased, the rates have remained practically the same during all these years. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Haggart) said that Mr. Blair had increased the rates. It is true that Mr. Blair did increase the rates on some comparatively insignificant items, but the truth remains that in general the rates on the Intercolonial Railway have not been raised since the railroad was built 30 years ago. The classifications may have been changed, but the rates have not been to any material extent increased. But, Mr. Speaker, do not let any one run away with the idea that these low rates are beneficial only to the people of the maritime provinces and to them alone, because as a fact the local rates are not considered excessively low. What is true is, that the excessively low rates on the Intercolonial Railway are directed towards the benefiting of interprovincial trade of which the western provinces reap a large benefit. Then again the Intercolonial Railroad has to meet water competition at almost every point along its route, and any one who knows anything about railway operation knows that water carriage is a most serious competition, and tends perhaps more than any other to keep railway rates down. Then also we have the Canadian Pacific Railway running in active competition with the Intercolonial Railway between Montreal and St. John, and we pay the Canadian Pacific a large annual subsidy for running that railway. In addition to that, there is a stretch on the Intercolonial Railway where we have almost an absolute dearth of any revenue producing traffic to the Intercolonial Railway.

Mr. FOWLER. Would the hon. gentleman state the points along the Intercolonial between which, that great dearth of trade exists ?

Mr. LOGAN. If the hon. gentleman should travel from Rivière du Loup to Moncton he will find that out without my having to tell him.

Mr. FOWLER. All right, we will come to that.

Mr. LOGAN. I have spoken of some of the difficulties which the Intercolonial Railway has to contend with at the present day. My hon. friend (Mr. Haggart) has compared the condition of the Intercolonial Railway in 1896 with the condition of the Intercolonial Railway at the present day. Why, Sir, if that railroad were now in the same condition that it was in 1896 ; if we paid the same rate of wages to-day as he paid as Minister of Railways in 1896, we would have a handsome surplus on the operation of the Intercolonial Railway.

Some three years ago Mr. Pottinger, the general manager of the Intercolonial Railway who occupied the same position under the old government, stated that if the same rates of wages had been paid to the employees of the road in 1896 as were paid in 1903 it would be found that there was an increase in the aggregate paid of over $1,000,000 per year. Mr. Speaker, our friends talk about the excessive expenses on the Intercolonial Railway. Do they propose to lessen the wages paid to the men employed on that railway ?

An hon. MEMBER. Yes.

Mr. LOGAN. Some hon. gentleman says yes, I venture to say that he will not say that in the maritime provinces, and I venture to say that the leader of the opposition will not say it. Let me quote some of the wages paid in 1896 as compared with the wages paid to day. For instance, in 1896, the maximum rate paid to conductors was $2.50 per day and the minimum $1.90. To-day the maximum is $3.25 and the minimum $2.50. The wages paid to baggagemen, brakemen and trackmen have been increased in about the same ratio. In 1896 the total wages paid to certain trainmen and track men amounted to $255,000, whereas the total wages paid last year to the same class of employees was over $651,000 or nearly three times as much.

Now, there are only certain limits within which we can reduce the expenses of the Intercolonial Railway. Last year, we know, was a year of an entirely exceptional character. We had to contend with conditions which we probably shall never have to face again. The entire traffic of the road was tied up for over two months by tremendous storms. In other respects last year was an expensive year in the operation of the road. But when hon. gentlemen talk about cutting down expenses of the Intercolonial Railway, it must be remembered that we pay about $4,000,000 a year in wages. Those who receive wages along the line of the railway believe they are underpaid to-day. They certainly were under paid in 1896, when men were working for 90 cents or $1 a day and regular track men for $1.15 per day. To-day these men are paid from $1.30 to $1.50 a day. Does any one say that this wage, or the wage paid to any other class of employees on the Intercolonial Railway is excessive? Is the official staff, from the general manager down, overpaid ? I will guarantee that the salary of the general manager is the smallest paid to any manager of a railway in the Dominion of Canada which is over 500 miles in length ; and the salaries paid to the other officers are not excessive, and could not be successfully attacked whatever might be the policy of economy with respect to the Intercolonial Railway.

At six o'clock, House took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at eight o'clock.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. Speaker, before dinner I made reference to the fact that three years ago Mr. Pottinger, the manager of the Intercolonial Railway, made a report in which he stated that if the scale of wages paid in 1903 had been paid in 1896 to the same number of men there would have been an increase in the wages for 1896 of over $1,000,000—to be exact, $1,075,000. Since 1903 this wages account has been still further increased; so that, I think that the statement can be made reasonably and without fear of successful contradiction that if the same scale of wages which existed in 1896 had been paid last year, it would have meant a reduction of expenses of not less than $1,500,000. This accounts to a large extent for the considerable increase in the working expenses of the road. But I would like to ask these hon. gentlemen who say that there is extravagance on the Intercolonial whether, if they had the opportunity, they would reduce the wage schedule on the Intercolonial. It has been said that the Intercolonial pays extravagant wages. As one who has some knowledge of the wages paid on the Intercolonial I can deny that. Is $40 a month to a young man employed as clerk in a freight office an extravagant wage to keep himself, his wife and family? Is $1.50 a day an extravagant wage to pay to a trackman who works long hours—and the hotter the day or the wilder the storm the harder his work? Is it extravagance to pay trainmen as high as $3 and $3.25 a day, men who are liable to be called out at any hour of the day or night to risk their lives on railroad trains? Is it extravagance to pay $1.75 to $2 a day for skilled mechanics in the works at Moncton? If so, then, if I were Minister of Railways and Canals, I should be very glad to plead guilty to the charge of extravagance. But there is no extravagance in the wages on the Intercolonial from the top of the staff down to the trackmen who work on the roadbed, and it would be difficult to economize in the expenditures of the Intercolonial, so far as the wage schedule is concerned. The next largest item of expenditure is that paid for coal. We have heard a good deal of late in reference to coal and coal combines, and high prices paid by the Intercolonial for coal. Last year, I believe we were paying $3.15 a ton, not for run-of-the-mine coal, but for the very best screened coal, coal over which the government inspectors stand while it goes over the screens to see that it is the very best coal that can be produced by the mines. Private consumers pay $4 to $5 for the same coal. The Canadian Pacific Railway is not supposed to be influenced by outside considerations, yet that railway is paying about as much for its coal on the Atlantic division as is the Intercolonial. We have seen a good deal in the newspapers, and we have heard statements made about the Grand Trunk Railway getting its coal supply at Montreal cheaper than the Intercolonial gets its supply at the mouth of the mine. But, Mr. Speaker, there is coal and coal. The coal for which the Grand Trunk Railway pays is what is known as run-of-the-mine coal—that is, coal as it comes from the pit and is shoved into the car. The coal bought by the Intercolonial is screened under direct inspection of government officers. We ask for tenders for coal. All the collieries in eastern Canada are requested to name a price. Last year the government did not even accept their lowest tender, but offered so much and no more for the coal. The coal companies demurred, but finally accepted the price offered, although they claim, and say they are prepared to prove, that the price is less than that they received from private corporations. Therefore, I do not think that we can complain of the extravagance of the coal account. And what is that account? Why about $1,250,000 will be charged for coal this year. If the coal account is to be further reduced, I am fully convinced that it means only one thing, and that is a reduction in the wages paid to the miners of Nova Scotia. If our friends who are clamouring for a decrease in the price of coal are prepared to advocate that the miners of Nova Scotia shall be paid a less wage for going down into the bowels of the earth and risking their lives every hour they are away from the sunlight, I can only say that it is more than this government, which is a Liberal government, is prepared to favour. Outside of the two items of wages, about $4,000,000 and coal about $1,250,000 you have not got a very large margin for economy. You may say that we are paying too much for printing. I think that the printing bill is about $50,000 a year. I venture the statement that we do not pay as much for printing as do private railway corporations in this country. You can scarcely take up any country newspaper anywhere but you will find a long advertisement of the Canadian Pacific Railway—but, even admitting that there may be too much advertising, still, you have not a very wide margin for the exercise of economy within an expenditure of $50,000. We pay $140,000 rental to the Grand Trunk Pacific under an agreement made by this parliament. We are bound by that agreement and cannot reduce the amount. We pay about $70,000 for ferry services—not a very extravagant amount—not one that can be very much reduced.

And so it comes down to this, if there is to be a reduction in the working expenses of the Intercolonial, it must be made in the items bought by the stores department. You would imagine, to hear some people talk that the purchases of stores of the Intercolonial were simply handed out to the favourites of the government. I must agree with my hon. friend from South Lanark in what he said this afternoon, that every man wants to get the government as a purchaser. So anxious are they to get the government as a purchaser that they will actually tender for the sale of goods to the government at less than the prices at which they sell to private corporations.

I venture the statement again that there is no railway corporation in Canada that buys its general stores at a less cost than the Intercolonial Railway of Canada. They issue calls for tenders in all directions, in every town all over the country whenever they are about to expend money in getting supplies. Some of these calls are not published in the newspapers, but they are sent all over the country to firms in the different towns, inviting them to tender for supplies which are needed and you may be certain that the replies which are received to these notices of tender are favourable to the Intercolonial Railway. Where then, Mr. Speaker, is the extravagance on the Intercolonial Railway ? It is all very well for hon. gentlemen to get up in this House and as they have done and as they will do and talk about this being a sink hole and about extravagance. I want the hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House who speak upon this question to put their finger upon one single item and say : There is a leakage. Do not talk in loud generalities, do not say there is wide spread corruption; put your finger upon the item and tell us where we can stop the extravagance and where the leakage is.

Last year some train services were discontinued. Did we receive very much encouragement from our friends on the other side or the newspapers supporting them ? When the Minister of Railways discontinued the trains running into Sydney and when boards of trade were making the welkin ring with denunciations of the minister, did we receive any assistance from newspapers which support these hon. gentlemen ? It is a fact that the head lines were even longer than ever in denouncing the government for doing what the minister thought was in the very best interests of Canada. No encouragement was received from these sources. When the Minister of Railways discontinued other trains on the main line he did not receive any encouragement from them. The Minister of Railways has been exercising this policy since he has taken a firm hold of the Intercolonial Railway,—in other words since he has really been able to take charge of the Intercolonial Railway, because for a long time after he became minister he was not in a position, owing to the meeting of parliament and to other causes, including a general election, to take hold of the Intercolonial Railway as he would like,—but since he has taken hold of it with a new deputy, a competent deputy, where have these hon. gentlemen or the newspapers supporting them endeavoured to point out to him or show him where leakages could be stopped and give him credit when leakages have been stopped ? The present Minister of Railways, to my mind, deserves the support of the people of this country, not only of Liberals but of Conservatives. You heard the minister the other day make a statement in this House,—and I was pleased to hear him make it, I was pleased to know that every one else had maintained the same attitude that I had humbly maintained myself—that he had never in the six months since he had inaugurated this policy, had a single Liberal member protest or quarrel with him over the policy he had adopted. As far as I am concerned I want to uphold the Minister of Railways. When boards of trade meet and pass resolutions, I think the proper policy for us on this side is to say to these boards of trade and others : Give the Minister of Railways a free hand, see what he can do ; he has already almost worked wonders on the Intercolonial Railway. What are the facts ? During the first six months of the last fiscal year the deficit on the road was $482,755; during the first six months of this year that deficit has been reduced to only $71,259 and I believe the minister when he says that within a few months he will have the Intercolonial Railway where the income will equal the expenditure at least, and when he arrives at that point where there is not a deficit on the road I for one believe that he should go no further, that the Intercolonial Railway was never expected to be, was never intended to be, was never promised to be, a large dividend paying institution. I myself believe that the expenses and the revenue should be equalized, and toward that end I propose as a humble member of this House to give the Minister of Railways all the sympathy and support that lies within my power. But to make this road a large dividend paying institution I say would not be fair to the people of the maritime provinces and we should not attempt it any more than we should attempt to obtain dividends on the money we have put into the Canadian Pacific Railway. We gave them a completed line which cost us $30,000,000; we also gave them $25,000,000 in cash and 25,000,000 acres of land which at the very low valuation of $3 an acre would be $75,000,000 more or a total of $130,000,000. Are we claiming that they should to-day pay to the government any dividend on that large amount invested ? If it is reasonable for us to pay interest on the $80,000,000 odd invested in the Intercolonial Railway why is it not just as reasonable that we should insist that the Canadian Pacific Railway, if we had the power to insist should pay us interest on the vast amount of $130,000,000 which this country has invested in that great railway. We do not ask them to do it, we do not want them to do it, because the money we put into the Canadian Pacific Railway goes to develop Canada. The money we put into subsidies to railways all over this country was given for what purpose? To develop the country, to make Canada greater than it was, to make us more independent of other countries, to make us a greater nation than we were and so I say that I can see no more reason to expect dividends from the Intercolonial Railway than to expect them from the Canadian Pacific Railway which runs across this continent. There is only one way in which we could pay dividends on the Intercolonial Railway, and it would be an easy way. We could increase the freight rates. It would not take long to do it. We could bleed the people out of that much more money and have a surplus on the balance sheet. But, Mr. Speaker, I contend as a representative from the maritime provinces that it never was intended that we should have the freight rates raised to that point which would make this road a large dividend paying institution.

The present minister, as I said, deserves our sympathy and our support. He has associated with him a young, active, energetic deputy minister. He has surrounded himself with men who are up-to-date railway men. He is doing more than that. He has put his finger upon the weak point of the management of the Intercolonial Railway that is upon the point of responsibility. In days gone by there never was any responsibility on the Intercolonial Railway except that the general manager was responsible to the deputy minister at Ottawa. To-day the Minister of Railways says to each one of the heads of departments—to Mr. Joughins, the mechanical foreman, to Mr. Burpee, engineer of maintenance, to Mr. Mackenzie, chief engineer and to other heads: Here is your work, you are responsible to me and to parliament for what you do and so it is that he has engendered the spirit of enthusiasm among the officials of the Intercolonial Railway, making them realize that they are part of this great institution, to make it greater and make its management more successful. When his new deputy was appointed the minister went over the Intercolonial with him, spent weeks upon it, looked into every station and freight shed, looked over every siding, went over that road from end to end, thoroughly and then he was in a position to know what was reasonably wanted for that road. The hon. member for South Lanark (Mr. Haggart) was Minister of Railways for many years. There is a tradition down in the maritime provinces that upon one occasion he went over the road; but how did he go over it? He went over it with his car locked, travelling at the rate of fifty miles an hour most of the way. Was that any way to look over the interests of a great railway? The present minister spent weeks with his deputy, and was able when he saw a leakage to stop it, and when he saw he could economize, economy was practised. If he saw that a train was running which was not paying expenses, off went that train—boards of trade to the contrary and Tory newspapers to the contrary notwithstanding. My hon. friend has done this and has shown great strength of character in doing it. Under his management economy has been in fact the watch word of the Intercolonial Railway, and I believe will continue to be. It is our duty to assist the hon. minister in continuing the policy he has inaugurated in order that he may succeed in making the road at least self-sustaining.

What then may we expect of the Intercolonial Railway in the future? An effort is being made—whether by interested parties or not I shall not say—to induce the people of western Canada to loathe the very name of the Intercolonial Railway. It is time such efforts should cease. This railway was built as part of the pact of our great Canadian confederation. We in the maritime provinces did not get very much out of confederation but we are satisfied to stand by our agreement. Nobody of any standing in the provinces to-day would have a word to say in favour of our breaking up the confederacy. Every man down by the sea, whether he lives at Cape North or Cape Sable is as anxious to build up Canada as if he lived on the banks of the Ottawa. We are all true Canadians willing to bear our share of our country's burdens, willing to do our part in developing the great heritage which God has given us. We do not complain about the expenditure on great Canadian enterprises. Take the question of canals which has been brought up very often. I do not propose to refer to that question more than to say that we in the maritime provinces do not complain of the expenditure on the canals in Ontario if these canals are part of the great transportation system of this country. If it be necessary to construct the Georgian Bay canal and if the engineers and government are convinced that it can be built for a reasonable amount, you will never find men of any standing in the eastern provinces opposing that expenditure, provided it be in the best interest of Canada. But what we ask of the people of the west to bear in mind is the fact that the Intercolonial Railway system is as much a part of the transportation system of Canada as are the canals. We ask them to remember that the Intercolonial Railway was not built entirely for our benefit, that the freight rates in local sections are not very low, and that this line of railway was built as much to develop western traffic as eastern trade. Two of the most expensive trains on that line, the fast freight from Montreal to Halifax and the ocean limited have been put on largely for the advantage and convenience of our western friends. The fast freight is particularly for the benefit of western manufacturers and wholesale men and the ocean limited fast train is for the purpose of carrying passengers down to seaside resorts along the St. Lawrence and on our maritime coast during the summer months. We do not want to be considered beggars at the treasury of Canada. All we ask is that we shall have fair-play. If there have been incidents of confederation which have worked detrimentally to the maritime provinces, we make no complaint but we demand that the Intercolonial Railway shall remain for all time the property of the people.

There are some who urge that it should be put under a commission. What better would it be then ? The government would still be responsible and the commission, which would have to be made autocrat, would not be responsible to the will of the people as the management of to-day is. There are many objections to a commission which I need not mention as they have been dealt with elaborately already. We know that other countries have tried that system and found it unsatisfactory. New Zealand had for a number of years its government owned railways under a commission, but that colony abolished the commission and to-day its government operates these railways. Australia is to-day trying the experiment of a commission, but it is only an experiment and likely to end as did the commission in New Zealand. Banish the thought that the Intercolonial Railway should ever pass out of the hands of the people into the hands of any corporation. You might just as well break up the entire bonds of confederation as the covenant made with the people of the maritime provinces that that railway should be built and maintained as a government road. The location of the road was perhaps not the best that might have been selected, but nevertheless the road exists as a part of the confederation and of the transportation system of this country. Instead therefore of discussing the question of handing it over to a private corporation, let us make up our minds that it must remain the property of the Canadian people and let us endeavour to uphold the Minister of Railways in his efforts to operate it in such a way as to make revenue and expenditure meet. And let us on the other hand endeavour to give this road our preference. I am sorry to say that on many occasions we find Canadians patronizing a private railway when they might just as well patronize the one which belongs to the Canadian people. I have frequently urged upon the government to make it a feature of their tariff policy that the preference to goods of Britain and colonies shall only apply when these goods are brought in through Canadian ports. When that policy is adopted, it will prove a great stimulus to our government railway system. To-day we are giving a preference to goods landed in American ports which might as well come through Sydney, Halifax, St. John, Quebec or Montreal. Last year we imported about fifty thousand tons of West India sugar on which we gave a preference and the great part of that sugar came in through American ports when it should have come in through Canadian ports. Let us adopt the policy I am suggesting, and you will soon find the receipts on the Intercolonial Railway rapidly increasing.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Might I interrupt my hon. friend ? On page 155 of the unrevised Hansard I find that the Minister of Railways and Canals made use of these words:

> Our first-class fares on the Intercolonial Railway are 76 p. c. of those on the Grand Trunk Railway ; our second-class fares are about 50 p. c. of theirs and our return fare is about 58 p. c. of theirs.

Will the hon. gentleman tell me why the people of the eastern provinces who travel on that railway should receive their fares at from 50 to 65 per cent of what we have to pay in western Canada to our railways.

Mr. LOGAN. The hon. gentleman will find, if he will compare the rates, that those charged by the Atlantic division of the Canadian Pacific Railway which competes with the Intercolonial Railway and also with water rates, are about the same, as far as passengers are concerned, as those charged by the Intercolonial Railway.

Now, Mr. Speaker, in conclusion, I regret I have kept the House so long ; I did not intend to do so. I believe that the hon. member for Lanark was unfair towards the road. I believe his remarks must have a bad effect as prejudicing this great national institution in the minds of the people. We do not want the western people or the people of Ontario to believe that this is a sink hole. We want them to believe that we have a great national asset in the Intercolonial Railway, that it is part of our national existence and that the minister's hands should be upheld in operating that road in an economical and efficient manner. Let those in Ontario not be saying that this great tax-burdened province is paying for the Intercolonial Railway for the maritime provinces, nor should we in the maritime provinces say that we are being unjustly taxed to maintain the canals in Ontario which were made free without a murmur — without even a murmur from the provinces down by the murmuring sea. Let us remember that these institutions are part of our great Canadian confederation. Let us be broad Canadians, let us speak of Canada as a whole and not in reference to provinces and while we in the maritime provinces will uphold the hands of the government in developing the great west and in developing the great north land of this country, or in the opening up still further the great provinces of Ontario and Quebec let the other provinces look down to us by the sea and say: We will stand by the bond of confederation, we will maintain the Intercolonial in an efficient manner, we will give to the people of the maritime provinces an efficient train service and we will be at all times ready and willing to improve the Intercolonial Railway either in its equipment or its road bed.

My hon. friend from Lanark, in his concluding remarks, deprecated the fact that we have a minister of railways from the maritime provinces. Mr. Speaker, I am surprised that a gentleman who has occupied a position in the cabinet of this country should be so parochial and provincial. A minister from the maritime provinces knows the needs of the Intercolonial Railway and the needs of the people of the maritime provinces, and I maintain that he is the best man to be appointed Minister of Railways. If there is one thing more than another in connection with the Intercolonial Railway on which we can congratulate my right hon. friend the Prime Minister it is that he has had men, both in the persons of Mr. Blair and the present hon. Minister of Railways and Canals, who are thoroughly acquainted with the needs of this great national institution. We do not want to beg anything for the maritime provinces, but we want to insist that what we did get out of Canadian confederation shall be held.

Mr. G. W. FOWLER (King's, N.B.) Mr. Speaker, one who did not know the hon. gentleman (Mr. Logan) who has just taken his seat, or who did not know the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Emmerson) and the pitiable exhibition he has made of his management of the Intercolonial would almost think that the deficits, which up to the present time, have existed upon that railway were due to the evil designs of Tory newspapers and the Tory party. Why, Sir, we would think that this railway, instead of having a deficit of nearly $1,750,000 this year had really a surplus to hear the hon. gentleman talk about the wonderful reforms that have been initiated by this paragon of a minister during the two years in which he has been in power. He has been in power for two years and yet this year is almost the record year for deficits in the history of the Intercolonial Railway. He has been in power for two years and during these two years on the ordinary working of that railway there is a deficit of about $4,000,000. Yet, this is the gentleman who has put his finger upon the sore spot on the body of the Intercolonial Railway, has diagnosed the disease and found a cure. The hon. member for Cumberland says: Why do we not all support him; why do not all you Conservatives do your duty as patriotic citizens and support this great Minister of Railways? He needs all the support he can get—I will admit that, Mr. Speaker. But it is pretty hard sometimes to make a man stand on his feet even if you hold him up. My hon. friend has put up two men of straw for the purpose of knocking them down and making himself a great fellow by the exploit. He has spent a lot of time in trying to argue that there is a strong feeling in the minds of some people in some portions of Canada in favour of handing over the Intercolonial Railway, that bond of union between the scattered provinces of this great confederation, to a private corporation. I want to say to my hon. friend that there is no such feeling in any portion of this Canada of ours, and that if this matter were put to the vote in any part of Canada the people of Canada would vote unanimously, or almost to a man, that the railway should remain the property of the people of Canada as it was designed and built, that the bond of confederation should be carried out in its integrity. There is no disposition on the part of any portion of the people to do that sort of things, and those papers that are putting out that kind of news are doing a great injury if they should by so doing get any person to lend their aid to that proposition. He has also made a great spread of the increase in wages on the Intercolonial Railway and he asked with a very dramatic action and gesture whether the people on this side of the House would say that $40 a month was too great for a working man to bring up his family and educate his children upon. Who, on this side of the House, has ever said a word against the raise of wages on the Intercolonial Railway? Not a man. We all recognize the fact that the cost of living has greatly increased in this country in the last 25 or 30 years. In the last ten years the cost of living has very materially increased and $40 a month would not go as far to-day as $30 a month would go 10 or 15 years ago. We are perfectly willing that the men who work on and operate the Intercolonial Railway shall be properly paid for their services, shall receive a proper day's wage for a proper day's work. The hon. gentleman asks: Would you alter the wage schedule? Not in the rate of pay, let me say, Mr. Speaker, but in the total of the wage schedule of the Intercolonial Railway, I would make a very material alteration. I want to say right here, I know whereof I speak, and when the time comes before the public accounts committee in this House, evidence will be produced to prove exactly the words I am going to utter now, that in the wages paid in the city of Moncton there is all the way from $400,000 to $500,000 a year too much paid because there are to-day four men doing and badly doing the work of one. That is absolutely true. Men are tumbling over themselves. They have not room to work, there are so many of them. That is where great leakage occurs on the Intercolonial Railway. Then, this great physician who comes with the healing in his wings to heal the ills of the Intercolonial Railway goes down to Moncton and says that he touches the sore spot because he cancels a train running out of Sydney, Cape Breton. That is the wonderful thing that he does, but he does that while there are in the city of Moncton hundreds of men who are not earning ten cents a day let alone the $2 or whatever they may get. That is an actual fact and it can be easily proven. I do not care to follow the hon gentleman (Mr. Logan) in his wanderings east and west, north and south. He told us that these things were charged to capital on the Intercolonial Railway because the money was voted by this House on the capital account. Well, such an argument is not worth replying to. He talks about political machines, and he says there has been an end to political machinery on the Intercolonial. Sir, never in the history of the Intercolonial has political influence been so rampant on that road as at the present time. And, Sir, the present head of that railroad is the worst man that ever filled the portfolio of railways from that point of view. Political influence. Well, I should say so. Talk about shingles; its deals that come up now.

Mr. LANCASTER. And ties.

Mr. FOWLER. Deals and railway ties. Why, Sir, they have a company called the Eastern Supply Company—I believe there are some questions on the paper in regard to it—and that company is a mysterious product of somebody's clever brain. Incorporated, they tell me, away off in Newfoundland, this Eastern Supply Company supplies a great portion of the goods for the Intercolonial Railway. There is a gentleman who is very influential in that Eastern Supply Company, a very important gentleman in connection with that company, a gentleman by the name of Lodge who is the 'fidus Achates' of the Minister of Railways. Mr. Lodge is a very well known gentleman in that section of the province; a very well known gentleman indeed. He is a very well known gentleman in the city of Moncton and the city of Moncton knows only too well the sort of man this Mr. Lodge is, this great friend of the Minister of Railways, this gentleman who is the acting secretary of the Eastern Supply Company. And, Sir, when the Public Accounts Committee gets to work I think there will be some information required with respect to Mr. Lodge and with respect to the Eastern Supply Company. So much for political influence along the line of the Intercolonial Railway.

My hon. friend condemns government ownership, and well he might the example that is before his eyes. I do not blame people for being a little sceptical about government ownership when they see the unfortunate manner in which this railway has been handled by this government. We have been told from the other side of the House that management of railways by commission is an experiment in Australia. Well, it is an experiment that has been tried for three years with ever increasing success in that great colony. Surely we have men in Canada who can manage the railways of Canada as successfully as it can be done in Australia. Indeed, Sir, when the people of Australia were looking around for a railway man they came to Canada and got a Canadian, and he is managing their railways to-day with such success that they are dividend paying instead of being deficit making as they were before.

Mr. LANCASTER. He must have been a Tory.

Mr. FOWLER. Of course he was. We were told by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Logan) that the people were so anxious to sell to the Intercolonial Railway that they cut their prices down, that they made no profit, that they were falling over themselves in their anxiety to sell to the government railway. He told us the government called for tenders. Did they? Yes, they invited a favoured few who happened to be in the good books of the Minister of Railways. And we are told that no money has been spent for advertising. What a tremendous economy that is. Well, what they did was to send a letter to Mr. Smith and Mr. Jones and Mr. Robinson, we will say, who were friends of the government, and Smith and Jones and Robinson made an arrangement by which one tenders for one thing and another tenders for another thing, and they tender at prices that pay them mighty well. And as to passes. We are told there is a tremendous saving on that account. Why, to hear that hon. gentleman talk about economy, if all his economies were added together, the deficit instead of being a million and three quarters, would be turned into a large surplus. But the surplus does not appear. And as to passes, why they do not want to have any pass so many of them are carried free.

The hon. gentleman tells us we are going to have a surplus next year. I would like to know on what ground he makes such a prophecy as that. The Minister of Railways told us that the deficit was only $71,000 on the past six months operation. But never in the history of railroading in Canada has there been a winter so favourable to railroad operation as this last winter, and while other Canadian railways have been rolling up tremendous surpluses on account of the lack of snow and the facility of operation, the poor Intercolonial Railway has a deficit of $71,000. If it were an ordinary winter like the winter of 1904-5, I am quite certain that that deficit would be increased four fold at least and would amount to over half a million dollars for the year.

The hon. gentleman (Mr. Logan) told us that if the Intercolonial were extended to the Georgian bay it would be still worse. Would it ? Don't we know that the government take great credit for the extension of the Intercolonial to Montreal ? Did not the Prime Minister go throughout the length and breadth of Canada stating that when he came into power he found the Intercolonial Railway ending in a field, and he brought it to the metropolis. Well, he may indeed with truth say now, that the result of his policy has been so splendid as to put the Intercolonial Railway into a bad financial hole. The Conservative party did not object to the extension of the Intercolonial Railway to Montreal. On the contrary the Conservative party favoured it. But the Conservative party did object to the immense expense that was entailed by the plan proposed by the government. Look what they pay the Grand Trunk Railway for running rights across the Victoria bridge and into the Bonaventure station ; a most outrageous, a most rascally price, and that is the only phrase by which it can be properly designated. We know that the first Drummond County Bill that was introduced by the government was held up in the Senate, and we know that the next bargain that was made was some three quarters of a million dollars better for the country than the first, a thing for which the country has to thank the Senate. But Sir, alas, the composition of that Senate has so changed by reason of the men appointed by the government, that a steal like that would go through the Senate for a million and a half dollars more than we ought to pay, just like goose grease without ever a clog in the way at all. Well, Sir, if the Intercolonial Railway had been extended to the Georgian bay so that it might tap the traffic of the great west, then the railroad would have a chance of earning a dividend.

The hon. gentleman (Mr. Logan) told us that the Intercolonial Railway was not intended as a commercial venture and that it traversed a portion of the country where it could not possibly be made to pay. I was surprised to hear that statement. We have present to night the member for Restigouche (Mr. Reid) and the member for Gloucester (Mr. Turgeon). I see sitting on the government benches my friend from Gloucester who is so valiant and doughty a champion whenever the interests of his county or province are attacked. I am surprised that he did not rise in his place to denounce the member for Cumberland (Mr. Logan) for making such a nasty insinuation against the magnificent agricultural county of Gloucester ; one of the finest counties in the whole Dominion of Canada, magnificent soil, beautiful level land, a splendid agricultural county and peopled by enterprising and honest farmers and fishermen. Even the west with its vast and rolling prairies cannot take the shine out of the county of Gloucester, but yet the member for Cumberland says that it can give no trade to the railway that runs through it. We have also here the member for Northumberland (Mr. Loggie), and I am surprised that every hair on his head did not rise straight up when the member for Cumberland said that there was no trade to be got for the Intercolonial Railway from the rich and noble county of Northumberland.

The hon. gentleman says this road does not run through a good agricultural portion of the province of New Brunswick. I say it runs through as good an agricultural country as there is to-day in the whole province of New Brunswick, not excepting even the magnificent valley of the St. John river. My hon. friend from Gloucester (Mr. Turgeon) will not deny that statement; neither will my hon. friend from Kent (Mr. LeBlanc), nor my hon. friend from Restigouche (Mr. Reid). Not only is it a splendid agricultural country, but there are some very fine and flourishing towns along that route. There are the towns of Campbellton, Chatham, Newcastle, Dalhousie, Nelson, Bathurst—all thriving industrial centres tapped by the Intercolonial Railway. There is a settled district for almost the whole distance from Moncton to the Metapedia. And yet my hon. friend from the province of Nova Scotia dares to asperse the province from which I come by saying that this railroad does not run through a good agricultural country and therefore has no local traffic. Are there no hon. gentlemen representing the splendid agricultural counties in the province of Quebec through which that road runs to rise in protest ? Why do they sit silent, or have they gone home at the week's end ? If they had been present when that statement was made, it would have been received with hisses or marks of dissent from these gentlemen. I say that the Intercolonial all the way from Montreal to Moncton runs through a magnificent agricultural country. There may be some portions of it which are not very good, but on the average it is an excellent agricultural country. We know that there are portions of the Canadian Pacific Railway which run through poor agricultural districts. Any one who has travelled on that line to the north of Lake Superior knows that for twenty-four hours the train runs through one of the most God-forsaken districts in the world; and yet that road pays. So the Intercolonial Railway could be made to pay. It should get a portion of the transcontinental traffic. If it were managed decently and honestly, and were removed from political influence, it could be made a dividend-paying road. My hon. friend said it should not be a dividend-paying road. Why not? My hon. friend says we are not begging from other parts of Canada something that we are not paying them for. Then, why should we not wish the Intercolonial to be made a dividend-paying road. I do not ask anything of the kind. If the Intercolonial Railway, by charging fair rates for the services which it performs, could pay, why in the name of common sense should it not be made to pay? My hon. friend says, because the canals are free. I do not think that has anything to do with the case. I do not think the people of the province of Ontario or the people of the great west are so narrow that because this railroad does not pay now, they would advocate putting it into the hands of a private corporation. Not one per cent of the people in any part of Canada entertain that idea. My hon. friend is only putting up a man of straw when he makes that statement, and then says that under the bond of confederation you must stand by the Intercolonial Railway. There is growing up in this country a strong feeling in favour of the public ownership of public franchises. That feeling is widespread, not only in this country but all over the world, and in almost every country where public ownership has been tried it has been proved successful. Some of the experiments may not have been successful; but one swallow does not make a summer, neither does one failure of government ownership condemn the principle. That would not be common sense or human reason. In the great majority of cases where public ownership has been tried, it has been proved to be very beneficial and profitable to the people at large; and I believe it will be so with the management of the Intercolonial Railway when it is put upon a proper basis. I am in favour of managing that railroad by means of a commission so long as we have such incompetent ministers as we have in this government.

Mr. W. F. COCKSHUTT (Brantford) Mr. Speaker, before the motion is put, I desire to allude to a matter that concerns the constituency from which I come. I notice that the maps which accompany the minister's report do an injustice to the city of Brantford. I hold in my hand map No. 5, in which I find outlined the same old lines that have stood for forty years as the only means of entering Brantford by the Grand Trunk Railway, that is via Harrisburg. The Minister of Railways and Canals is not present. I wish, however, through 'Hansard,' to draw his attention to the fact that the main line of the Grand Trunk at present passes through the city of Brantford. If the minister wishes to go through to Chicago by the Grand Trunk Railway to-day, he will have to stop at the city of Brantford. Though that may be news to him, it is not new to all hon. gentlemen opposite. I think the Minister of Customs could have told him that the main line of the Grand Trunk passes through the city of Brantford, and, at this late date, that line should be included in this map which is sent broadcast by the Minister of Railways and Canals. It is now about three years since that road was put under construction, trains have been running on it for eighteen months, and the official opening took place last autumn, to which I think the Minister of Customs was invited. I merely wish, in justice to my constituents, to explain that the main line of the Grand Trunk now passes through the telephone city of Brantford. I do not wish to speak on the main question, because I do not qualify as a railroad man; but I must express my surprise at some of the remarks made by my hon. friend opposite (Mr. Logan) who is not now in the House. His statement in regard to passes, that they were passed out like bundles of shingles, is one so grosly exaggerated that when the hon. gentleman comes to read it in 'Hansard' I believe he will repent having made it. I trust that the day will soon come when the Intercolonial will be a paying proposition, as I think we all desire it to be. Government ownership is not always a failure. We have in Ontario a small road known as the Temiskaming Railway, which has been running for about a year, and which I believe has paid a handsome dividend upon last year's operations. I trust that when the Minister of Railways and Canals brings down his next report upon the Intercolonial Railway, he will be able to show a balance sheet that will reflect more credit upon his management than the present one does. I congratulate him upon the able speech he made in presenting his report; but I am sorry that I cannot congratulate him on the financial showing he has made. When he makes the Intercolonial a paying proposition, I believe every one of us will hold up both hands for this great national highway of which we are all so proud.

Motion agreed to, and House went into Committee of Supply.

Archives, Agriculture and Statistics—Exhibitions, additional amount required, $75,000.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. This is intended for the exhibition at Milan, where there is to be this year a World's Fair. Canada has been invited to attend and we have decided to send an exhibit.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Who is in charge of the Canadian exhibit?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Mr. Hutchison, who was in charge at St. Louis and was very successful.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What will be the character of the exhibition ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The same as at Liège, Belgium, last year.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not know that we have much information about that.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I think a report was made. At any rate, according to the American papers, the Canadian exhibit was one of the best, if not the very best.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If we make an exhibit, which is supposed to be representative of the resources of Canada, we should make a creditable one. Did that in Belgium show the mineral resources of the country ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I saw a remarkable specimen of the resources of this country in the Imperial Institute in London about ten years ago. It consisted of a very few samples of a very few of the products of the different provinces. The province of which I have the honour to be a native, the province of Nova Scotia, was represented by about half a bushel of coal piled up in one corner of the room. It was a most exhilirating spectacle to any one from that province. I trust that if we exhibit at Milan, we shall make an exhibit worthy of the country.

Mr. PATERSON. The item No. 260, which we have allowed to stand, is intended to remedy the condition of affairs in London to which my hon. friend alludes. It will be taken up when the Minister of Agriculture is present and he will explain what is to be done in that connection.

Amount required to provide for expenses in connection with the royal inspection on insurance, $20,000.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. I would like to call the attention of the Prime Minister to the fact that the Insurance Commission has been in session in this city two or three days, and so far the chief counsel engaged for the Dominion has not taken any important part in it. A very surprising thing took place to-day. While the superintendent of insurance was there to give evidence, he was suddenly withdrawn and another witness substituted. The counsel from Ontario, named by the Ontario government to represent the policy-holders, had to publicly protest against the way the commission was conducting its proceedings.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. On what ground ?

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. He protested on the ground that he had not the opportunity of examining the witness who had been in the box the last two or three days. He protested publicly that this witness, who had been examined by the Dominion counsel, was swept away before the counsel representing the policy-holders from Ottawa had an opportunity of questioning him. If this commission is to give satisfaction, a somewhat different course must be adopted. We have had enough in the last two or three days to justify everything said in the direction of supporting a demand for a thorough investigation. I trust the government will see that the gentleman to whom they have intrusted the case of the people, shall attend to the case. He has not been there yesterday or to-day. That is not the way to give satisfaction to the policy-holders.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I am not prepared to meet the strictures my hon. friend chooses to pass on the work of the commission. It seems to me they have done very good work up to the present and I am not aware of what has taken place to-day. Mr. Shepley has not been there the last two days but the investigation, which is taking place to-day, was only preliminary. Mr. Shepley has been given the task of carrying on the investigation, and he will no doubt do his duty thoroughly and fearlessly, but he cannot be expected to put aside all other interests to look after this alone. He has associated with him Mr. Tilley, who is quite competent and has done his work faithfully and well. At all events the commissioners have every confidence that they will do their duty satisfactorily.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I would say to the Prime Minister that the senior counsel conducting this investigation for the government could hardly be expected to do that thoroughly and attend to his other law practice at the same time. I have some knowledge of the time and energy which a counsel has to put into a work of this character, especially into the work of investigating life insurance which has a great many technical aspects, and I am bound to say that I would not expect Mr. Shepley or any one else to leave the work to his junior counsel or others in order to attend to other professional matters if the investigation is to be thorough. I know nothing of the arrangement of the commission, I am relying on the statements of the Prime Minister. I think it is extremely desirable that the government or the commission or some authority should define the rights which counsel for the Ontario government or the Quebec government or any other government or any policy-holders should have before that commission. I think the Prime Minister will readily see, and I am sure the Minister of Justice will at once see, that it is absolutely necessary that these gentlemen should have their rights defined as to the examination or cross-examination of witnesses and if this is not done you will inevitably have confusion, you will inevitably have complaint and protest and you will fail to satisfy the country. A systematic method of procedure must be adopted in the first instance. It may have been adopted, I do not know anything about the proceedings of the commission, but the statement has been made here by a member that protest was raised to-day by counsel for Ontario against the withdrawal of one witness and the substitution of another. If counsel for Ontario are to have a status before that commission it is right that they should be heard before any witness is withdrawn from the stand and another witness substituted in his place. That would be the ordinary procedure in a court, and I venture to think that the attention of the government, of the commission, of some persons having a right to regulate these matters, should be given to the subject at once if the statements which have been made are founded in fact.

Hon. CHAS. FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice). The statements which have been made are not founded in fact. What occurred yesterday—and I have a stenographic report of the proceedings in my office—is this: Mr. Fitzgerald was under examination. He is the inspector of insurance and after he had been under examination for, I think, two days it was found that certain documents were required by the commission which Mr. Fitzgerald had not under his hand at the adjournment last night. Then at the adjournment it was decided that Mr. Fitzgerald would not be recalled to-day but that another official of the Finance Department connected with the Insurance Branch would be available this morning, the understanding being that the examination of Mr. Fitzgerald would be resumed after he had made the inquiry necessary for him to make. These are the facts as they occurred. Mr. Hellmuth, last night, acting for the Ontario government, made a statement to the effect that he thought Mr. Fitzgerald ought to be on the stand this morning. I understand that he first made that statement privately to counsel and this morning made it in open court, he thought that the examination of witnesses should be proceeded with continuously from day to day until such time as it was completed. There was some discussion on that and that was the whole difficulty.

As to the attendance of Mr. Shepley he was brought suddenly and unexpectedly into the inquiry and he had previous engagements elsewhere which necessitated his being absent from the proceedings yesterday and I understand to-day, but the intention and the understanding on the part of Mr. Shepley is that he shall be in attendance regularly hereafter, and he comes back to Ottawa on Tuesday for the purpose of assuming control of the proceedings before the commission. It was thought that if he had to absent himself the best time would be on the examination of these witnesses who will give formal evidence.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. As far as Mr. Shepley is concerned I think that is a satisfactory explanation, but my criticism is based upon the remarks of the Prime Minister which left on my mind the impression that Mr. Shepley would attend when more or less convenient to the matters investigated, and that he was to keep in touch with his other professional engagements all through the investigation. I would strongly object to that. I do not object to his being away these two days and leaving this preliminary examination in the hands of junior counsel who no doubt is fully competent to conduct it.

As far as the protest raised by the Ontario counsel is concerned, I think it desirable that the procedure should be so arranged that protests of this character should not be required, and I think it is due to the public that the commissioners should take that matter in hand and arrange their procedure so that there will be no difficulty of this kind in future.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. It will be admitted I think that the investigation under the New York State authorities has been very complete, and while I have had no conversations with the commissioners I have had with Mr. Shepley, and I understand the intention is to have the same arrangements as at the New York State investigation.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. It is all very well to have these statements now but they are dragged from the government.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. They are dragged by the incorrect statements made.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. It is a fact that Mr. Hellmuth has been asked since he went there to conduct his examination through counsel appointed by the government and an attempt has been made to have him state the questions which he wished to have asked through counsel appointed by the government. We all know that when a counsel is examining a witness the answer to one question may induce him to decide on one of several other questions which he would ask the witness. It would be a nice thing if counsel representing thousands of policyholders in this country should be asked to put his question through the counsel appointed by the government. It has been said that this was a mere matter of procedure but I shall read what Mr. Hellmuth had to say as reported in an evening paper:

Mr. Hellmuth, K.C., appointed by the Ontario government to look after the interests of the policy-holders in that province at once objected. He protested against taking away the previous witness, Mr. Fitzgerald, before he had had an opportunity of examining him. It was a most unusual course to examine a witness for two days and then withdraw him and substitute another for him without giving other counsel an opportunity to examine him. He could not do justice to the interests of policy-holders if other witnesses were to be examined before Mr. Fitzgerald was recalled. He considered it a serious question if a proper elucidation of Mr. Fitzgerald's evidence could be made if his examination were not now concluded.

One of the chief matters of interest to the policy-holders was what duties were performed by the superintendent of the department, what duties he considered he should perform and what knowledge he had of matters under his control. He wanted to find out from the superintendent what knowledge of his duties he had before the investigation opened, not what he acquired during it or after it. As the highest officer in the Insurance Department, Mr. Hellmuth protested against other witnesses intervening before he found out for the policy-holders exactly the extent of Mr. Fitzgerald's knowledge.

It was not a nominal protest, it was a protest involving the whole procedure of the commission, and I say that it is necessary that public attention should be drawn to this matter in order that the procedure may be changed and that an ample opportunity may be given to examine all witnesses and that the fullest investigation may take place in connection with this matter.

Mr. LENNOX. Before this matter passes I would like to ascertain from the Prime Minister whether it is expected that this commission will make its report before the close of this session.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I cannot say as to that ?

Mr. LENNOX. From what was stated by the chief commissioner at the time the committee assembled for organization purposes I would judge that it is very definitely in the mind of the chief commissioner and perhaps of the others that this is to be a long drawn out investigation. His Honour Judge MacTavish was particular in impressing on all the parties present and upon the public that every species of investigation would be pursued. That would be proper of course, but the judge went further than that and in fact invited all classes of people to come in and be represented by counsel. Everybody who wished to say anything could have counsel there to any extent. The whole thing indicated to my mind that the intention was not to have a return made during the present sitting of parliament. And this brings us again to what was was complained of here the other day, that is that on the eve of the assembling of parliament this commission was appointed, without waiting, as the government might well have waited, for the opening of the session. I can well understand that, if parliament was not to assemble for several months, the course taken by the government would be considered quite proper. But in view of the fact that parliament was to assemble in a few days, it was not right for the government to take the course it did. It would have been more proper and more consistent if the government had taken the country into their confidence and laid the matter before parliament. And no inconvenience would have resulted from the adoption of such a course. For one thing, it would have eliminated the difficulty with regard to Mr. Shepley. It might have been intimated to Mr. Shepley that he would be the counsel selected. And from a limited experience in matters of this kind, I venture to say—and I think I shall have the concurrence of older and more experienced counsel—that the beginning of an inquiry is the time when it is most important for the senior counsel to be present, in order that he may outline his work and determine the course the investigation is to take. I therefore, think it is very much to be regretted that we have not succeeded in expropriating the whole time of Mr. Shepley in the interest of the country. And I venture to say that the country will be very much surprised to learn that the government have not succeeded in making arrangements by which Mr. Shepley can remain here during the whole time of the investigation,

There is a more important matter to which I desire to call the attention of the government. During this session of parliament we are taking up a new condition of things. Whatever may have been said formerly, whatever may have been the arguments advanced against parliamentary committees, those arguments have lost their force in view of present conditions. Last session the government and the members generally determined that the sessional indemnity should be increased ; and the sessional indemnity having been so increased, surely members can now attend to their parliamentary duties without having their minds distracted, as formerly, by private concerns, I think the time has come when we should cease to farm out the work of parliament, and do the work ourselves. Royal commissions have not been very satisfactory in the experience of this country. Even when judges have been the commissioners,—yes even when they have composed the whole commission—commissions have not always proved satisfactory. And, in view of the fact that we have here assembled, upwards of two hundred men, determined to devote their whole time and energy to the affairs of the country, and in view of the fact put forward by the Prime Minister to-day, that we have in the House of Commons gentlemen who, by reason of sitting in this House become more efficient and more proficient in their practice as barristers, and so better qualified to become judges, I think it is clear that in matters of this kind we should endeavour to do our own work. I have no doubt that, with the earnestness which should characterize this assembly as a working body determined to do the work of the people, it would have been very much better and far more in the interest of the country if we had had a parliamentary commission assisted and guided to a great extent by the many able counsel who sit on both sides of the house. I believe the country will not be quite prepared, when their attention is called to the matter, to endorse the action of the government, in still further adding to this practice of relegating everything to commission—this constantly growing practice of farming out to others the work that we should do ourselves. If we are not competent to do the work the people should know it, and they should send men who are competent for these duties? There is no good reason that can be advanced why the representatives of the people, who are paid for the work to be done here, and with the time available, should not do this work. And there are a lot of comparatively idle men in the other chamber also. There is no reason why the services of the two houses of parliament should not be invoked in the interests of the people in this matter of insurance, instead of making the country pay so dearly as they do pay under the present system. Here is a call for $20,000 to provide for expenses 'in connection with' this royal commission on insurance. This indicates that this is only a beginning—only the thin end of the wedge. And, though it does seem somewhat amazing that it should be so, I venture to say that $20,000 will not go very far to pay the expenses of this commission. I say I feel it my duty to call the attention of the government to the fact that whatever may have been the conditions formerly, whatever may have been the cogency of the arguments used on former occasions, the policy that should be adopted now is that of doing ourselves a greater proportion of the work than we formerly did.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. My hon. friend (Mr. Lennox) asserts positively that the work of investigating insurance is, and ought to be, exclusively within the jurisdiction of this parliament. I am not quite sure about that. That such work could well be entrusted to a committee of parliament, I do not deny. But that it should preferably be entrusted to a committee of parliament I am not prepared to admit. My hon. friend knows that, if there is any business that naturally should be within the jurisdiction of parliament, it is the investigation of everything that concerns its own existence. Yet he knows also, being an eminent lawyer, that many years ago, both in Canada and the mother country, the work of investigating the manner in which every member is introduced into parliament was taken away from parliament and relegated to the judges. There was a time when all controverted elections, all petitions against elections, were submitted to parliament. But this was found not to work smoothly, and, for good and sufficient reasons, which have never been questioned, the law was adopted that this work should be removed from parliament and entrusted to the courts of justice. Such an investigation as this insurance investigation, I repeat, might be carried on by a committee of the House. But would it have been better done than by the commission that we have appointed? I doubt it very much. My hon. friend started with the question, how long will this work occupy?—

Will the report be ready in time to lay upon the table of parliament before the prorogation? I have no means of information on that point; it is impossible for me to have any idea of it. But, suppose this work shall take three or four months. It might be, that if it were entrusted to a committee of parliament, the time of prorogation might arrive before the investigation was completed, and the work would have to stop. The commission is not limited in its time—it will take all the time necessary. My hon. friend is hard to please. He finds fault with the commission because the chairman at the first sitting notified everybody who wished to do so to be present and assured him of a hearing—that any man who had information to give or a grievance to bring forward would be heard by himself or by counsel. But if the commission had attempted to exclude anybody, I think my hon. friend would have come forward and protested against such a course. I am afraid that it is too much to expect that we can satisfy him. But I cannot but believe that, upon full consideration of the matter he will admit that the chairman started well by inviting everybody to appear who wished to do so. For my part I am satisfied with that course. My hon. friend from South York (Mr. Maclean) is also dissatisfied. I am less surprised at that because that hon. gentleman is very hard to please as a rule.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. Very.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The hon. gentleman says there was a protest on the part of counsel before the commission today. I do not know if my hon. friend has ever been in a court house, but everybody who has been in a court house knows that it is not a matter of very, very infrequent occurrence to see counsel protest to the court when they are not satisfied with the manner in which the proceedings are carried on. That has happened before the highest courts and the ablest judges. Mr. Hellmuth was not satisfied apparently with the ruling. It would have been something very extraordinary indeed if all the counsel attending, whether on one side or the other side, whether representing the policy holders, the government or anybody else, had been quite satisfied with every ruling of the judges. It is a thing we do not expect, but when protests are made before the courts by eminent counsel generally these matters are rectified, these protests are heeded and I believe this will be the effect of the protest by Mr. Hellmuth. Mr. Fitzgerald was not present this morning for examination. The commission gave a ruling upon this point which in my judgment does not have the effect pointed out by Mr. Hellmuth. Mr. Fitzgerald was withdrawn from examination simply to allow him to get some information upon a point which he is to testify and we will be called again and will testify.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. I want to point out to the right hon. Prime Minister the excellent method that was adopted in the State of New York. They had a committee of the legislature, they employed eminent counsel to conduct the case and the result was that——

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. A commission of the legislature ?

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. A commission of the legislature and that commission has extended now to a committee of the House sitting in Albany, but the characteristic of that commission was its thoroughness, its expedition, the quickness with which the report was got ready and presented to the legislature and Bills founded upon it introduced.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Hear, hear.

Mr. W. F. MACLANE. There is no reason, why, if Mr. Shepley is there attending to his duty, this inquiry should not go on from day to day, that it should not be thorough, that a finding should not be made and that, if legislation is necessary, it should not be introduced this session.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Hear, hear.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. We propose to have a fall session, but we are told that it is to be reserved for the tariff. I think it is worth the consideration of the government to see that the investigation goes on from day to day, that it is thorough, that the fullest opportunity be given to counsel who go there to represent policy-holders, to examine witnesses and that it be conducted in the fairest possible maner.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Hear, hear.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. If that is done I am confident that evidence will come out of this investigation that will justify those who believe that it is high time that the insurance companies in this country were disciplined and made to revise the system under which they are carrying on life insurance.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Possibly.

To provide for expenses in connection with the approaching visit of His Royal Highness Prince Arthur of Connaught, $15,000.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The committee is aware that Prince Arthur has been delegated by His Majesty the King to convey to the Emperor of Japan the Order of the Garter. We have invited Prince Arthur to visit Canada on his way back to England and in doing so he will sail directly from Japan to British Columbia. We are providing this sum of $15,000 for his reception.

Mr. HENDERSON. Some time ago I noticed in the daily press an account of the route which was laid down for His Royal Highness in passing through Canada, starting at Vancouver and leaving possibly from Halifax or Quebec. What I wish to draw the right hon. First Minister's attention to is that it seems rather an oversight that his visit to Ottawa would come in the midst of the Easter holidays when the great bulk of the members of this House will be out of the city at their homes. I think it is a pity that the visit of such a great personage should take place when very few of us indeed would have an opportunity of seeing him. I think some arrangement should be made by which the route will deviate somewhat from that laid down by the under Secretary of State, who, I understand, has charge of it, so that we will have an opportunity of seeing His Royal Highness when he passes through Ottawa.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I am sorry that the answer that I have to give to my hon. friend from Halton (Mr. Henderson) is that which I had to give to my hon. friend from South York (Mr. Maclean) ; it is never to trust too much to newspaper reports. The statement which has been published in the newspapers is not exactly accurate. The Prince is expected to be here on the Saturday before Easter. He is expected to spend a quiet Sunday here and to stay during the whole week in Ottawa—Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. I hope my hon. friend will be back here on Tuesday and then he will have an opportunity of seeing the Prince.

Mr. HENDERSON. The route as laid down and to which I have reference provided that he should be here on the Saturday between Good Friday and Easter Sunday. It was at the end of the week he was to be here and not the end of the previous week.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. But he will not leave Ottawa until the end of the following week.

Mr. HENDERSON. No doubt the right hon. Prime Minister had an opportunity of seeing the route as laid down. I am sorry I have not it here but according to it he was to leave Ottawa forthwith.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No.

Mr. HENDERSON. Only remaining here some three days and going before many members would have an opportunity of returning.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No.

Mr. HENDERSON. Had the report stated that he was to remain here a week, certainly I would have had no reason to complain. Personally, as the right hon. gentleman knows, I shall certainly be in my place on Tuesday morning.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I forget exactly the time but I am satisfied he will be here Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and perhaps Friday.

Mr. HENDERSON. Then we will attribute the mistake to the newspapers.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. If my hon. friend from Halton (Mr. Henderson) goes to see the horse show in Toronto he will see a good horse show and a very fine Prince at the same time.

Contribution of Canada towards the relief of the famine sufferers in Japan, $25,000.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. This is an item that I do not think requires much explanation, as it has been already explained in the press and members of the House understand what it is for. There is a famine in some of the provinces of Japan and we have thought that in view of the good relations which now exist between Japan and the empire we would contribute $25,000 to be sent not in money but in the shape of flour.

Mr. DANIEL. It has been already sent, I understand ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Partly sent.

Arts, Agriculture and Statistics—additional amount required for renewing and improving Canadian exhibit at Imperial Institute, London, and assisting the maintainance thereof, $18,000.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Will the right hon. gentleman explain what has been done.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I know that an arrangement has been made by Lord Strathcona to put an end to the disgrace in connection with our exhibit which my hon. friend has just spoken of. That arrangement requires this appropriation, but I do not know the particulars at this moment. I shall bring down the particulars next time we go into committee of supply.

Some resolutions reported.

ADJOURNMENT—COMMISSION ON LIFE INSURANCE.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Do I understand that the government are to supply us with a stenographic report from day to day of the evidence taken before the Royal Commission on Life Insurance?

Hon. CHAS. FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice). We cannot get it exactly from day to day, but I asked the chairman of the commission if he would not see to it that the stenographer should supply copies of the report of the evidence as rapidly as possible ; one copy to be supplied to the government and one to the House. I may say that Mr. Butcher, of Toronto, is doing the work, and I understand that he is very active and very expeditious, and that he will give us as rapidly as possible the material to communicate to the House. The point I had reference to was with respect to a special incident. I heard of the incident but yesterday and I asked for a special report of that special incident.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. My suggestion is that copies should be struck off as rapidly as possible under the circumstances, and laid upon the table of the House.

Motion agreed to, and the House adjourned at 9.50 p. m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY, March 19, 1906.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

INDEMNITY OF MEMBERS AND PENSIONS OF PRIVY COUNCILLORS.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN (South York) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No 18) to repeal chapter 30 of the Statutes of 1905, intituled, An Act respecting Annuities for certain Privy Councillors, and chapter 43, Statutes of 1905, intituled, An Act to amend the Act respecting the Senate and House of Commons.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Explain.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. The Bill is a very simple one. It proposes to repeal the two Acts passed last year, one dealing with indemnities and the other dealing with pensions. The Bill is introduced for that particular purpose. Whether it will carry or not I know not, but it will give every one in this House an opportunity to vote upon it and it will also give the government probably an opportunity to revise the pension Bill, an announcement to that effect having been made by the present hon. Postmaster General (Mr. Aylesworth). Whether that Bill will be introduced into the House I do not know, but I beg to introduce the Bill which is in the hands of the House and it rests with the House to deal with it.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

QUESTIONS.

QU'APPELLE, LONG LAKE AND SASKATCHEWAN LAND GRANT.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN asked :

1. Did the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan Railroad and Steamboat Company become entitled to receive or select any public lands under any and what statute, or under and what contract with the government ?

2. To what quantity did it become entitled ?

3. What area of land was reserved in the first instance out of which the company was to select its branch ?

4. What were the boundaries of such area ?

5. Did the company dispose of its land grant or any and what portion thereof to any corporation, person or persons? If so, when and to whom, and upon what terms and under what agreement ?

6. If the company's land grant, or some portion thereof, was so disposed of, did the company in making such disposition assign or convey to the purchaser any particular area of land or land to be selected within some particular area, or did it assign or convey to the purchaser simply its claim against the government in respect of the whole or some portion of its land grant ; or how otherwise did it make the said disposition ?

7. Was the area for the selection of any and what portion of the company's land grant afterwards altered, changed or enlarged in any way?

8. Was the area for the selection of the land so disposed of by the company, altered, changed or enlarged by order in council, or otherwise ?

9. If so, at what date, by what instrument, to what extent and in what respect was any such change, enlargement or alteration made ?

10. How long was this after the company had made the disposition of its land grant above referred to ?

11. If any such change, enlargement or alteration in the area aforesaid was made by order in council passed in August, 1902, or thereabouts, on whose recommendation and at whose request, for what reason and upon what grounds was the said order in council passed ?

12. When was the passing of such order in council first communicated to the said company ?

13. Is the said company indebted to the government? If so, in what sums for principal and of interest respectively, and under what instrument or authority was such indebtedness created ?

14. Does the government hold any and what security for such indebtedness ? If so, what is the nature of the security, and what its estimated value ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

1. By the Act, chapter 60, of 48-49 Victoria, assented to July 20, 1885, the Governor General in Council was authorized to grant to this railway company, Dominion lands to an extent not exceeding 6,400 acres per mile of the company's railway from Regina to the navigable water of Long lake.

By the Act, chapter 23, of 50-51 Victoria, assented to June 23, 1887, the Governor General in Council was authorized to grant to this railway company, Dominion lands to an extent not exceeding 6,400 acres for each mile of the company's railway from a point near the northern terminus of the completed portion of that railway, at or near Longlaketon on the navigable water of Long lake, to a point at or near where the 52nd parallel of latitude crosses the South Saskatchewan river ; thence to a point at or near the elbow of the North Saskatchewan river with branches to Prince Albert and Battleford, about 325 miles.

	Acres.
2. For the portion from Regina to Long lake..	128,000
For the portion from the point at or near Longlaketon to Prince Albert..	1,497,344

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. gentleman might as well hand in his paper as read it in that tone of voice.

3. An area of about 258,228 acres was reserved for selection by the company by order in council dated December 30, 1884.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order, order.

Mr. FOSTER. I think the House is entitled to the courtesy of a tone of voice that at least is meant to reach it.

Mr. OLIVER. Have I certainly the privilege of continuing, Mr. Speaker ?

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Certainly, you are answering the question.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. You might use a megaphone.

Mr. OLIVER (reading) :

4. The area reserved comprised the odd numbered sections at the disposal of the government in the following townships :

Fractional township 26, the eastern third of township 27, and that part of township 21, north of the Canadian Pacific Railway belt and south of Long lake, in range 22 ; that part of township 21, north of the Canadian Pacific Railway belt, those parts of townships 22 and 23 west of Long lake, and the east half of township 26, in range 23 ; townships, 21, 22, 23, 24, 27, 29, and that part of township 26, west of Long lake, in range 24 ; townships 22, 23, 26, 27, 28 and 29, in range 25 ; townships 24, 25, 26, 27, 28 and 29, in range 26 ; and townships 25, 26, 27 and 28, in range 27, all west second meridian.

5. An area of 128,000 acres was assigned to the Land Corporation of Canada by assignment dated February 5, 1892. These lands have all been patented but one half section.

Applications for the issue of patents in the name of sundry persons were filed in the department by the company to the number of 117 for areas in each case of one section or less area between March 20, 1891, and September 5, 1902. These lands have all been patented.

A patent for an area of 2,240 acres was applied for in the name of Harvey Matthews of White Bear lake, Minnesota, dated September 22, 1902. This land has been patented.

An area of 30,614.90 acres was assigned to Edmund Boyd Osler and Herbert Carlyle Hammond, of Toronto, and Augustus Meridith Nanton and Harry William Nanton, of Winnipeg by assignments dated November 30, 1902.

These lands have all been patented.

An area of 97,164·06 acres was assigned to Augustus Meredith Nanton, of Winnipeg by assignment dated December 30, 1902. These lands have all been patented.

An area of 839,640·97 acres was assigned to the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company by assignment dated October 25, 1902. These lands are all selected and in course of being patented so far as surveyed.

An area of 239·92 acres was assigned to the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company by assignment dated March 21, 1903. These lands are selected and in course of being patented.

6. In the case of each of the assignments or applications for patents referred to in the answer to question 5, the land assigned or to be patented was described in the document filed, except in the case of the two assignments to the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company, dated respectively October 25, 1902 and March 21, 1903.

The assignment dated October 25, 1902, conveyed to the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company 839,640·97 acres of land more or less, being the lands set apart or to be set apart by the government of the Dominion of Canada for the vendors, the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan Railroad and Steamboat Company, as a land grant in respect of the railway of said Railroad and Steamboat Company as already located and constructed, under and by virtue of the provisions of chapter 60 of the Acts of the Parliament of Canada passed in the 48th and 49th years of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria's reign, and under chapter 23 of the Acts of said parliament passed in the 50th and 51st years of said reign and the orders in council passed in pursuance of said statutes, excepting therefrom the lands set forth in schedules 'A' and 'B' and 'C' thereunto annexed and the lands held, retained or reserved by the government of the Dominion of Canada as security under the subsidy contract between the government of the Dominion of Canada and the vendors, the said Railroad and Steamboat Company, and the 128,000 acres of land, portion of said land grant applicable to the first twenty miles of said railway from Regina heretofore assigned to the Land Corporation of Canada, and the land included in the right-of-way and station grounds of the vendors' line of railway as so located and constructed, subject to the conditions contained or to be contained in the grants of said land from the Crown and to the payment of ten cents an acre survey fees on said land and to the payment of all taxes which shall accrue or be chargeable against the said lands or any parts thereof, which survey fees and taxes are to be assumed and paid by the purchasers, their successors or assigns.

The assignment to the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company, dated March 21, 1903, was for an additional area and under the same conditions as those contained in the assignment dated October 25, 1902.

7. The area for selection by the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan Railroad and Steamboat Company of lands to satisfy its land subsidy was added to subsequent to the date of the order in council of December 30, 1884, by orders in council dated respectively February 4, 1901, June 10, 1892, and August 1, 1902.

Mr. FOSTER. Would the minister kindly inform me what point in the answer he is at now ?

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order.

Mr. FOSTER. I want to follow the minister and I am very anxious to hear what he says. I want to know particularly if he is answering all the questions. I find it very difficult to follow him and I certainly could not hear his last answer. I am almost inclined to ask if he would repeat it.

Mr. OLIVER. Is it the wish of the House that I should re-read the answer.

Mr. BERGERON. The hon. gentleman had better hand it into Hansard if he cannot read so that we can hear.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I can assure the minister that it is absolutely impossible to hear him even where I am.

Mr. OLIVER. I submit I am not compelled to make myself a megaphone for the benefit of gentlemen who do not wish to keep order in the House.

Mr. FOSTER. You are doing better with your voice now.

Mr. OLIVER. (reading) :

8. The answer to question 7 answers this question.

9. The dates of the orders in council are given in answer to question 7.

The area added to the reserve made by order in council, December 30, 1884, by the orders in council referred to in the answer to question 7, was about 4,287,208 acres.

10. The latest assignment by the railway company of any portion of its land subsidy was as already given March 21, 1903. The latest order in council making any change in the land grant reserve of the railway company was dated August 1, 1902.

11. On June 11, 1902, Messrs. A. D. Davidson and George F. Piper wrote to the Dominion Lands Commissioner stating that they had purchased the entire land grant of the railway company and stating that they expected the department to grant them the same area and privileges in the selection of these lands that had been previously offered to the railway company. The recommendation to council dated July 21, 1902, by the Minister of the Interior, which was approved on August 1, 1902, states as follows :

The undersigned has the honour to point out in connection with the land grant which was made to the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan Railroad and Steamboat Company many years ago and which the company declined to accept on the ground that the lands set apart were not fit for settlement, which subject he has devoted a considerable amount of his attention to in order to come to some settlement with respect to what has been considered a long standing difficulty, that to satisfy the company he some time ago caused an offer to be made which would permit the company to select lands to cover their land grant from any available Dominion lands in the province of Manitoba or in the Northwest Territories. The company, however, have declined to accept the offer, alleging that they were unable to procure sufficient lands of a satisfactory character, and have instituted proceedings against the Crown to compel the government to provide them with lands in accordance with the grant.

As the company has refused to accept the offer of the department to allow it to select any available lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Territories for the purposes of their land grant, the undersigned would now recommend that the area within which the land grant should be located should be confined to that portion originally set apart for the grant to the company and in addition those lands which are included in the schedule thereto annexed, and that the offer to allow selection in the province of Manitoba and other parts of the Northwest Territories be withdrawn. and that the lands so described be reserved for the purposes of such land grant.

12. On August 11, 1902, a copy of the order in council dated August 1, 1902, was mailed to Colonel A. D. Davidson, as agent of the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company, which company was assignee of the railway company.

13. Yes, $1,154,457.74 of principal; $392,-047.08 of interest.

The Acts 48 and 49 Victoria, chapter 60, and 50 and 51 Victoria, chapter 23. The orders in council of June 26, 1889, the 31st October, 1890, and the 18th December, 1890. An agreement executed on the 5th August, 1889, by the late Right Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald as acting Minister of Railways and Canals and the late A. P. Bradley, as secretary of the Department of Railways and Canals, on behalf of the government, and by Thomas G. Shaughnessy and C. Drinkwater on behalf of the company.

14. An area of 493,269·34 acres is held by the government as security for the repayment of the unearned portions of the annual payments of $80,000 per annum payable to the company for twenty years under the provisions of the transport subsidy contract, dated August 5, 1889.

The government does not consider it advisable in this case to give an estimate of the value of the land, which has not been examined for the purpose of fixing a valuation.

TELEPHONE LEGISLATION.

Mr. INGRAM asked :

1. Is it the intention of the government to introduce any legislation this session affecting telephone companies ?

2. What amount was paid to witnesses and others for travelling and other expenses in connection with the inquiry made by the Select Committee on Telephone Systems last session, including all amounts paid for clerks, experts, expenses as representatives to telephone conventions, or for services performed for said select committee ?

Right Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). I stated to my hon. friend the other day that he will have an answer to the first part of his question when the Minister of Railways and Canals introduces his Bill to amend the Railway Act. The answer to the second part of the question is as follows :—

Statement of expenditure to date.

1.	42 witnesses travelling expenses and maintenance while in Ottawa..	$1,089 50
2.	Reporting of evidence (stenographers)..	2,429 20
3.	Salary of technical adviser to committee, 10⅔ months from 20th March, 1905 to January 31st, 1906	2,363 70
4.	Clerical assistance, including typewriters, distribution of evidence, &c., &c...	1,966 50
5.	Legal expenses (Messrs. Chrysler & Bethune)..	800 00
6.	Translation of papers, &c. rereceived from foreign governments (in nine different languages)..	762 00
7.	Rental of room in city for distributing pamphlets..	110 00
8.	Travelling, &c., expenses of technical adviser to convention of United States Independent Telephone Companies at Chicago	100 00
9.	Envelopes for distribution of proceedings..	99 25
10.	Office stationery..	34 80
11.	Telephone books and magazines (subscriptions, &c.)..	22 06
12.	Sundries..	1 90
		$ 9,778 91
13.	Printing committee's daily proceedings and evidence, 240,000 pamphlets..	5,388 14
		$15,167 05

THE UNITED STATES HEAD TAX.

Mr. INGRAM asked :

1. Is the government aware of United States officials collecting two dollars per head from many Canadians who are crossing the boundary line between the two countries

2. Also, that in some cases those officials are collecting the above head tax while in Canadian territory, on account of their knowledge of the intention of the passenger to cross into United States territory ?

3. Has the government had any complaints along this line ? If so, did they communicate to the government of the United States this grievance ? If not, why not ?

4. If the government has had no communication with the government of the United States, will this government take action after being assured that there is a grievance in this regard ?

Right Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). The government is aware that certain officials of the United States collect $2 per head from many Canadians who cross the boundary line between the two countries. It is not aware that in some cases these officials collect the tax while in Canadian territory, but the government has heard that in some cases United States consuls have appointed captains of steamers to collect the tax, as under the United States law the steamship company is liable. The government has had representations made to the United States with reference to this matter. In some cases the government of the United States has been informed of the facts, but generally has declined to interfere with the discretion of its officials.

WINTER COMMUNICATION WITH PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES asked :

1. Has the government or any department thereof, given a contract for the building of a steamer for the winter navigation of the Northumberland Straits, between Prince Edward Island and the mainland ?

2. If so, what will the said steamer cost, and when will she be ready for service ?

Hon. L. P. BRODEUR (Minister of Marine and Fisheries) :

1. A steamer is now being built which will in conjunction with another steamer assist in the winter navigation of the Northumberland Straits.

2. $215,000. The 1st of July next.

MARCONI WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN asked :

When does the government expect to have a Marconi Wireless Telegraph service across the Atlantic ?

Hon. L. P. BRODEUR (Minister of Marine and Fisheries). The Canadian station is ready and as soon as the new English one is completed, commercial transatlantic work will be organized.

SALES OF LAND IN THE NORTHWEST.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY asked :

1. Since 1st July, 1896, how many sales of agricultural or grazing land, other than school land, affecting 5,000 acres or more at a time, have been made by the government in Manitoba and the Northwest ?

2. When and to whom were each of said sales made ; at what price per acre ; and what was the area and what the situation and boundaries of each block ?

3. What public document sets forth the conditions of each such sale, and where may such document be examined by members of this House ?

4. Was the land sold in odd or even sections, or both, in each case ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior).

1. Four.

2. On the 27th October, 1905, to the Grand Forks Cattle Company, Limited, at $1 an acre. Area sold 9,452·65 acres. Boundaries—townships 11 and 12, range 11; townships 11 and 12, range 12; and township 12, range 13, all west of 4th meridian.

On the 22nd January, 1906, to the Milk River Cattle Company, at $1 an acre. Area sold 5,831·90 acres. Boundaries—townships 2, ranges 9, 10 and 11, west of 4th meridian.

On the 21st January, 1902, to the New Walrond Ranche Company, Limited. Area sold, 6,113·10 acres. Price, $1.25 per acre. Boundaries—townships 10, ranges 1 and 2, west of 5th meridian.

In January, 1904, to the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company, Limited. Area sold, 140,253 acres. Price per acre, $1. Boundaries—townships 22 to 31, inclusive, in ranges 26 to 29, west of the 2nd meridian; and ranges 1 to 6, west of the 3rd meridian, all inclusive.

3. The regulations respecting grazing lands, and hay lands, under which the first mentioned two sales were made, are included in the Order in Council of 15th February, 1905. Printed copies of these regulations are now laid on the table for examination by members of the House. The sale to the New Walrond Ranche Company was made under order in council of 22nd April, 1903, a copy of which is now laid on the table. The sale to the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company, Limited, was made under order in council of 24th May, 1902, a copy of which is now laid on the table.

4. The first, second and third sales above mentioned included odd and even numbered sections; and the fourth sale included even numbered sections.

Mr. FOSTER asked :

Has any arrangement been made by the government since July, 1903, by transference or by sale, by virtue of which a large block of public lands in the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta passed out of the possession of the government into the hands of private individuals or corporations? If so, what quantity of lands were involved, what was the nature of the transaction, and the consideration involved?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). No.

DISTRICT OF KEEWATIN.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE asked:

1. How long was the district of Keewatin governed under the Keewatin Act?
2. When the new Northwest Territories Act passed the House last session, was Keewatin included within those Territories?
3. Has Keewatin, since the close of the 1905 session, been brought under the Northwest Territories Act by proclamation?
4. If so, what was the date of such proclamation, and what were the reasons for the change?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior).

1. From 7th October, 1876, to 31st August, 1905.
2. No.
3. Yes.
4. 24th July, 1905. To remove the anomaly of a separate district under a distinct government, completely dividing the western from the eastern half of the Northwest Territories.

GERMAN SURTAX.

Mr. ARMSTRONG asked:

1. In what year was the German treaty with Great Britain denounced?
2. When was the surtax placed on German goods coming into Canada, and what restrictions did it impose?
3. What are the rates of discriminatory duties imposed by the German government on the following goods imported from Canada: wheat, flour, oats, bacon, hams, butter, cheese and apples?
4. What were our total imports from Germany for each year from 1896 to 1905, inclusive?
5. What were our total exports to Germany for each year from 1896 to 1905, inclusive?
6. What were our exports to Germany for each year from 1896 to 1905, inclusive, on the following articles: wheat, flour, oats, bacon, hams, butter, cheese and apples?
7. What steps, if any, have been taken to ameliorate the present conditions in favour of Canadian trade?
8. What are the present trade relations between Canada and Germany?

Hon. WILLIAM PATERSON (Minister of Customs):

1. In 1898.
2. In November, 1903. 'Articles which are the growth, produce or manufacture of Germany, when imported into Canada, shall be subject to a surtax over and above the duties specified in Schedule A. to the Customs Tariff, 1897, such surtax in every case to be one-third of the duty specified in the said schedule.'
3. Notice was given in the 'Reichsanzeiger' of June 14, 1898, fixing the date on which Canada ceased to receive most favoured treatment as the 31st July, 1898.

The provisions of the German general tariff on the articles referred to are as follows:

Wheat, 54 cents per 100 pounds; flour of wheat, $1.14 per 100 pounds; oats, 43·2 cents per 100 pounds; bacon, $2.17 per 100 pounds; hams, $2.17 per 100 pounds; butter, $2.17 per 100 pounds; cheese, $2.17 per 100 pounds; apples, dried, 43·1 cents per 100 pounds; apples, green, free.

Attached to supplement No. 8 of the German tariff is the following:

'Dutiable goods proceeding from states that treat German ships or products less favourably than those of other states may, in so far as existing treaties are not thereby violated, be burdened with a surtax varying up to 100 per cent of the tariff duty imposed on such goods. Goods free of duty in virtue of the tariff may under the same conditions be burdened with a duty not exceeding 20 per cent ad valorem.'

The actual percentage since added to each individual item is not shown.

4 and 5.

Years ended June 30.	Total Imports.	Canadian Produce.	Foreign Produce.	Totals.	Total Trade.
	$	$	$	$	$
1896	6,454,705	606,919	150,612	757,531	7,212,236
1897	5,785,546	764,589	280,843	1,045,432	6,830,978
1898	5,763,784	1,419,096	418,352	1,837,448	7,601,232
1899	7,382,499	1,310,373	909,196	2,219,569	9,602,068
1900	8,706,641	1,108,163	607,740	1,715,903	10,422,544
1901	6,679,264	1,374,716	766,836	2,141,552	8,820,816
1902	10,919,994	1,298,654	1,393,924	2,692,578	13,612,572
1903	12,127,867	1,618,517	479,182	2,097,699	14,225,566
1904	8,028,544	1,358,910	460,313	1,819,223	9,847,767
1905	6,642,139	1,123,586	23,068	1,146,654	7,788,793

6. If the hon. gentleman will move for a return for No. 6, I shall produce it immediately.

7. Correspondence and negotiations having been unsuccessful, the surtax was imposed. No other steps were open to the government.

8. The government have been approached through a representative of the German government with a view to a removal of some of the trade restrictions in both countries. The suggestions so offered will be taken into consideration by the ministers in framing the revised tariff.

CIVIL SERVANTS.

Mr. WALSH asked :

1. Are civil servants in the employ of the government at Ottawa permitted to engage in any occupation, business or work outside the performance of their duty ?

2. In how many departments is this permitted?

3. How many civil servants carry on any business or work outside of their official duties?

4. What is the policy of the government with respect to this question ?

5. What rule does the government enforce with respect to postmasters, customs officers and other officials in the outside service in this matter ?

6. Have any persons been dismissed, or threatened with dismissal, since the 1st of January, 1900, for this reason ?

7. Who are such persons, and in what position were they employed, what annual salary did each of them receive, and what is the date of their dismissal ?

Hon. WILLIAM PATERSON (Minister of Customs) :

1. Under the Consolidated Revenue and Audit Act (Sections 13 and 14) it is provided that no officer or person employed in collecting, managing or accounting for the revenue, receiving a salary at or exceeding the rate of one thousand dollars per annum, shall exercise any other calling, profession, trade or employment whatsoever with a view to derive profit therefrom, directly or indirectly, or shall hold any other office of profit whatsoever, except, in either case, with the express permission of the Governor in Council.

2. The rule in the Customs Department is as above stated.

3. There is no record in the Customs department as to how many civil servants in that department carry on any business or work outside of their official duties.

5. The rule as laid down in the Audit Act is generally observed by the Customs officers in the outside service.

6. No person has been dismissed or threatened with dismissal from the Customs service since 1st January, 1900 for transgressing this rule.

STONY CREEK ARMOURY.

Mr. E. D. SMITH—by Mr. Lancaster—asked :

Is the government aware of the fact that the roof of the armoury at Stony Creek, Wentworth county, was damaged by fire, that officers of the Militia Department examined the building last fall, and that nothing so far has been done to repair the building; also that the clothing stored therein is in danger of being seriously damaged ?

Hon. Sir FREDERICK BORDEN (Minister of Militia and Defence). The government is aware that the Stony Creek armoury was damaged by fire, and that it has not been repaired ; also that the building was examined with a view to its being repaired. As regards the clothing stated to be stored therein, the only corps at Stony Creek is No. 5 Company, 77th Regiment. That Regiment has a central armoury at Dundas. Under such circumstances if the officer commanding the company has the clothing at company headquarters, he is responsible for its safety and the department is not under any obligation to provide accommodation for it.

SHERBROOKE CAMP.

Mr. TOBIN—by Mr. Bureau—asked :

1. Is it the intention of the government to hold a military camp at Sherbrooke this year ?

2. Is it the intention of the government to purchase or lease lands in or in the vicinity of the city of Sherbrooke for the purpose of holding annual camps ?

3. Have any orders been given or steps taken for the purchase or lease of such lands, or have any officials of the department been authorized to look over or select said lands, or to open negotiations with any individual or the city council of Sherbrooke to that effect ?

4. Have any other sites in the eastern townships, outside of the city or county of Sherbrooke, been examined and reported upon for the same purpose ? If so, where and by whom? If not, why not ?

Hon. Sir FREDERICK BORDEN (Minister of Militia and Defence) :

1. and 2. It has not been decided whether a military camp will be held at Sherbrooke or not. The question is under consideration.

3. The officer commanding Quebec has been in Sherbrooke inspecting a site and advising with the local authorities.

4. Not yet.

NORTH ATLANTIC TRADING COMPANY.

Mr. AMES asked :

1. What amount was paid in bonuses to the North Atlantic Trading Company between 1st July, 1905, and 31st December, 1905 ?

2. What was the outstanding amount claimed as due the company on the 1st of January, 1906?

3. For how many settlers did the company receive or demand payment between the 1st of July and the 31st December, 1905 ?

4. What additional amounts were claimed by or paid to the same company during the aforesaid six months for advertising, literature and other objects ?

5. Has literature, prepared at the instance of the Canadian government, been furnished this company for distribution ? If so, to what extent and value ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

1. $56,287.86.
2. No claim sent in by the company for that date.
3. Between dates mentioned bonus was paid on 11,566 persons.
4. $3,443.35.
5. No.

ORILLIA POSTMASTERSHIP.

Mr. BENNETT asked :

1. How long has the postmastership at Orillia been vacant ?
2. Is it the intention of the department to appoint an officer to such a position ? If so, when ?

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Postmaster General) :

1. The Postmastership of Orillia has been vacant since the 22nd October last.
2. The matter of appointing a new postmaster is under consideration.

POSTMASTERS' DUTIES.

Mr. BENNETT asked :

1. Is it the policy of the Post Office Department to compel postmasters to attend personally to the duties of their office, and not to engage in any other calling ?
2. If so, is regard to be had to the salary paid to the postmaster, or what rule, if any, prevails ?

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Postmaster General.) It is and has always been the policy and the practice of the department to require postmasters to give personal attention to the duties of their offices, and where a post office is sufficiently important to call for the full time and attention of the postmaster, and the salary adequate for his maintenance, it is considered undesirable that he should engage in any other business.

DREDGING IN PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN asked :

1. Is it the intention of the government to appoint a superintendent of dredging in Prince Edward Island ?
2. Has the Department of Public Works arranged for the location of dredges in Prince Edward Island waters for the season of 1906 ? If so, where are the same to be located ?
3. Is the government aware of the immediate necessity of dredging the channel at Crapaud Harbour, Queen's County, Prince Edward Island and will dredging be done there this season ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister).

1. There is already a superintendent of dredging for the maritime provinces, including Prince Edward Island.
2. The dredging program, for season of 1906, is now under consideration.

MAIL SERVICE—COLDWATER AND LAWSON.

Mr. BENNETT asked :

1. Who is the contractor for the mail service between Coldwater, Lawson and Lovering, either or both of same ?
2. What amount is paid therefor ?
3. Was the same put up for public competition ?

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Postmaster General). A contract for this service was let by tender in 1897 and awarded to the lowest tenderer, W. H. Lovering, at $130 a year. On its expiring in 1901 it was renewed with the same contractor at the same price for four years ending on the 31st March, 1905, and it was then renewed for another term of four years from 31st March 1905, with the same contractor at $156 a year.

RAILWAY CLERKS FROM NORTH YORK.

Mr. LENNOX asked :

1. How many railway clerks have been appointed from the riding of North York since 1896 ?
2. What are the names, and post office addresses of such, if any ?

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Postmaster General) :

1. Six, one of whom has since resigned.
2. B. J. O'Brien, Laskay, Ont.; F. Kavanagh, Queensville, Ont.; A. E. Cain, Newmarket, Ont.; J. A. M. Armstrong, Lloydtown, Ont. (since resigned); L. Wilson, Lloydtown, Ont.; J. F. Doyle, Lloydtown, Ont.

LAKE ST. LOUIS—HYDROGRAPHIC SURVEYS.

Mr. PICHE asked :

1. Are the hydrographic plans of Lake St. Louis now completed ?
2. If so, since when have they been completed ?
3. If not, when are they to be completed ?
4. At what date can the maps based on those plans be delivered to interested parties and to the public ?

Hon. L. P. BRODEUR (Minister of Marine and Fisheries). (Translation.)

1. No.
3. The surveys will be completed about the 1st of July next. The plans must be ready for delivery, on the 1st of May, 1907.
4. During the season of 1907.

LAKE OF TWO MOUNTAINS—HYDROGRAPHIC SURVEYS.

Mr. PICHE asked :

1. Is it the intention of the Government to have the hydrographic plans of the Lake of Two Mountains made ?
2. If so, when is that work to be commenced and how long will it take to complete it ?

Hon. L. P. BRODEUR (Minister of Marine and Fisheries). (Translation.)

1. Yes.

2. During next season. It will take two seasons to complete the work.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY LAND GRANT.

Mr. LAKE asked :

1. Has the Canadian Pacific Railway completed the selection of their land grant ?

2. Have patents been issued for all the land selected ?

3. If not, how much still remains to be selected or patented, in either case ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

1. Yes.

2. Patents have been issued or are in course of being issued for all lands, except those as yet unsurveyed.

3. A total area of 1,541,585 acres remains yet to be patented.

OPENING OF INDIAN RESERVES.

Mr. LAKE asked :

1. What Indian reserves or portions of Indian reserves have been placed upon the market or opened for settlement since the 1st January, 1905, and on what terms and conditions ?

2. Is it the intention of the government to open up any existing Indian reserves or portions of them during the present year ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

1. The only Indian reserve, or portion of an Indian reserve, placed in the market since the first of January, 1905, was portion of the Assiniboia Indian reserve, comprising the southerly nine sections thereof which were offered for sale by public auction at Sintaluta, Sask., on Wednesday, the 14th ultimo. The lands were offered for sale in quarter sections for cash or one-fifth cash and the balance in four equal annual instalments with interest at 5 per cent. 34 quarter sections sold $35,345.45. Average price, $6.74 per acre.

2. It is the intention to open for sale the following lands, which have been surrendered by the Indians to be sold for their benefit :

a. A portion of the Stony Indian reserve Nos. 110 and 111, situated about thirteen miles south of Battleford, comprising 22½ sections, which have been duly subdivided for the purpose of sale.

b. A portion of Alexander's reserve, No. 134, about 25 miles from Edmonton, comprising 9,518 acres, which have been surrendered by the Indians to be sold for their benefit, and which will be subdivided as early as possible for purpose of sale.

c. A portion of the Cote Indian reserve, No. 64, situated at Kamsack, comprising about 32 sections, which have been surrendered by the Indians for sale and which will be subdivided for that purpose as early as possible.

POST OFFICE AT BLOOMING POINT, P.E.I.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN asked :

Has the Postmaster General received a petition from the inhabitants of Blooming Point, Queen's County, Prince Edward Island, asking for the establishment of a post office in the centre of the northern end of Blooming Point district, and for a tri-weekly mail service ? If so, what action, if any, has been taken in the matter ?

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Postmaster General). A petition was received on March 7, 1906, from Allan McDonald and others, praying for the opening of a new post office at a distance of two or three miles from Blooming Point, County Queen's, P.E.I. This petition was on the same day referred to the assistant inspector at Charlottetown, for inquiry and report. No report has yet reached the department.

BREAKWATER AT WOOD ISLAND, P.E.I.

Mr. A. MARTIN asked :

1. Is the government aware that a portion of the breakwater at Wood Island, Prince Edward Island, has been carried away, rendering it unfit for shipping ?

2. Does the government intend to immediately proceed with the repairs ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) :

1 and 2. A report has been received from the resident engineer on present state of this work, and it is now receiving the consideration of the department.

NEW DREDGE FOR PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.

Mr. A. MARTIN asked :

1. Has the new dredge for Prince Edward Island been completed and ready for service ?

2. If so, where is she first intended to work, and what harbours in Prince Edward Island is it proposed to dredge in the coming season?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) :

1. The dredge is completed, but the trial tests are not yet made.

2. The dredging program for Prince Edward Island, season of 1906, is now under consideration.

DREDGING PINETTE HARBOUR, P.E.I.

Mr. A. MARTIN asked :

1. Has the government received a petition or report of a public meeting held in reference to the dredging of Pinette Harbour, Prince Edward Island ?

2. Has a survey been made or ordered to be made ? If the latter, what is the nature of the report ?

3. Does the government intend to proceed with the dredging of this harbour early in the coming season ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) :

1. Yes.

2. An examination has been made, but no decision has been had on the matter, which is receiving the consideration of the department.

GUN BOATS SUNK IN RIVER THAMES, ONTARIO.

Mr. KEMP—By Mr. Lancaster—asked :

1. Has the attention of the government been called to the efforts on the part of a citizen of the United States to get possession of certain gun boats, which were ordered to be sunk by a British officer, in the Thames, near Chatham, Ontario, in the year 1813, for the purpose of removing same to the United States, to be exhibited as trophies ?

2. If so, what action does the government intend to take in the matter ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). The government is now in communication with the British authorities in reference to this matter.

REDEMPTION OF WORN SILVER COIN.

Mr. A. MARTIN asked:

1. Does the government propose to redeem worn Canadian silver coin now in circulation, or do anything to abate the trouble caused by its circulation ?

2. Would its re-coinage entail any heavy loss on the government ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) :

1. Although the law contains no explicit provisions under which worn silver can be redeemed, small amounts have been redeemed from time to time. To overcome any difficulty it is proposed to introduce legislation providing for such redemption.

2. The cost of recoinage is comparatively small.

ADMISSION TO CONFEDERATION OF NEWFOUNDLAND AND BRITISH WEST INDIES.

Mr. A. MARTIN asked:

1. Has the government taken any steps, or has any progress been made with a view to unite Newfoundland and the British West India Islands with the Dominion of Canada ?

2. If so, of what nature ? If not, why not ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). The government of Newfoundland is aware that we are ready to enter into communication with them at any time that they choose to discuss the subject of bringing the island into confederation. With regard to the British West Indies, we are prepared to extend our relations with them, but we are not prepared at this time to invite or encourage political union.

BARRACKS AT MONTREAL.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. Has the government obtained a site for the erection of barracks at Montreal ? If so, what is the site that has been chosen ?

2. If the choice of a site has not been made, what is the cause of the delay, and what negotiations have taken place in this connection ?

Hon. Sir FREDERICK BORDEN (Minister of Militia and Defence):

1. Several sites have been offered, but no selection yet made.

2. The new site will be purchased with funds to accrue from the sale of St. Helen's Island to the city of Montreal, subject, of course, to a vote of parliament. The city is seeking authority from the provincial legislature to enable it to assess the required amount and hand it over to the Receiver-General. Meantime no further action can be taken by the Department of Militia.

USE OF WATER POWER, NIAGARA FALLS.

Mr. LANCASTER asked:

1. Has the government been informed of any communication sent by the President or government of the United States to the Imperial government, asking that the government prevent the use of the water of the Niagara river for developing electric energy, so as to preserve scenic effects at Niagara Falls ?

2. If so, will any provision be made to compensate any private or industrial interests which may be affected ?

3. What instructions, if any, have been given representatives on the commission on the subject ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). I have to inform my hon. friend that the government is not aware that any representations of this character have been made by the United States authorities.

IMMIGRANT HOSPITAL, QUEBEC.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. Has the amount of $30,000 voted last year for the construction of a hospital at Quebec, for treatment of immigrants suffering from trachoma, been fully expended, and how much did the site cost ?

2. What is the total amount expended to date in connection with the said hospital at Quebec ?

3. How many immigrants have been treated in said hospital during the past three years ?

4. What is the amount expended during the last two years for the maintenance of the said hospital ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

3. The number of immigrants treated at the Quebec hospital was :

For the fiscal year 1903-04	817
For the fiscal year 1904-05	1,422
To December of the fiscal year 1905-06	528
Total	2,767

4. Gross expenditure for 1903-04 was $6,025.76; deduct amount refunded by ss. companies, $1,606.60; net expenditure, 1903-04, $4,419.16; gross expenditure for 1904-05 was $15,277.27; deduct amount refunded by ss. companies, $13,143.07; net expenditure, 1904-05, $2,134.20; total net expenditure for 1903-04 and 1904-05, $6,553.36.

Right Hon. SIR WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). My hon. friend the Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) has answered only for his own department; the first part of the question has not been answered. For the Public Works Department I have to observe :

1. A contract has been entered into for the construction of the hospital. No site has been purchased, the building is to be erected on the site previously occupied by the burnt hospital.

2. The total amount expended up to date is $41,247.71, divided as follows :

On burnt building..	$34,731 22
On temporary quarters..	6,176 55
On new building..	339 94
	$41,247 71

GEORGIAN BAY CANAL SURVEY.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. What is the total amount expended to date upon the Georgian Bay Canal survey, undertaken by the present government ?

2. Is the survey terminated ?

3. Have any reports been made to the government by those in charge of the survey ? If so, what reports have been made, by what officers, and what dates do they bear ?

Right Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) :

1. $460,361.13.

2. Almost all the field work is completed and the staff is now engaged in the preparation of the plans, profiles, &c.

3. A progress report has been made by the engineer in charge, and will be embodied in the annual report of this department for the fiscal year of 1904-05.

MONTREAL POST OFFICE IMPROVEMENTS.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. What improvements have been made in the Montreal post office, with the sum of $25,000 voted by parliament last session ?

2. Is it the intention of the government to enlarge the Montreal post office, and provide better accommodation for the public ?

3. When will such improvement be carried out ?

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Postmaster General). Nothing has been done so far. The Post Office Department is waiting to see what effect the postal stations, established or to be established throughout Montreal, will have on the central post office, before making the proposed alterations.

Mr. OLIVER.

STEAMER BETWEEN PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND AND MAINLAND.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN asked :

Is it the intention of the government to call for tenders for the immediate construction of a steamer for winter service between Prince Edward Island and the mainland ?

Hon. L. P. BRODEUR (Minister of Marine and Fisheries). A steamer is now being built which will in conjunction with another steamer assist in the winter navigation of the Northumberland Straits.

PROTECTION AGAINST GLANDERS.

Mr. STAPLES asked :

1. How many horses have been tested for glanders with mallein in the province of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, respectively, by officials of this government ?

2. Who were the owners of the horses ?

3. What was the name of the official, and date of application in each case ?

4. When were the horses destroyed in each case ?

5. When did the owners receive compensation in each case ?

6. How much did the respective owners receive, and what was the valuation in each case ?

7. What were the variations of temperature in each case, and the highest and lowest readings ?

8. How many cases have been quarantined who were the owners, and what was the period of quarantine ?

9. How many were re-tested, and what was the result ? Were any of those re-tested afterwards slaughtered ? If so, what compensation was paid, who were the owners, and what was the amount paid to each ?

10. In cases where they were slaughtered after being tested, were any post mortem investigations held ? If so, what was the result in each case, and who were the owners ?

11. Has the government any intention of changing its present system of dealing with glanders ? If so, what policy does it intend to institute ?

Hon. SYDNEY FISHER (Minister of Agriculture). The information called for in this question will take two or three extra clerks from one to two months to prepare. If the hon. gentleman wishes to get the information he must ask for an order of the House.

PROTECTION OF LABOURERS ON GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC.

Mr. RALPH SMITH asked :

1. Has any provision been made for securing to the workingmen to be employed in the construction of the Transcontinental Railway the payment of fair wages, in accordance with the resolution of the House of Commons of March, 1900, and section 205, chapter 58 of the Railway Act, 1903, in the case of : (a) contracts already awarded or to be awarded by the commissioners, for the construction of the Transcontinental Railway ; (b) contracts already awarded or to be awarded by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company.

2. Have any other provisions for the protection of labour been inserted in such contracts ?

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Minister of Labour) :

1. (a) The form of contract adopted by the commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway contains the following provisions in regard to the payment of fair wages to workingmen to be employed in the construction of the part of the road being constructed by the commissioners.

'All mechanics, labourers, or other persons who perform labour for the purposes of the construction of the works hereby contracted for shall be paid such wages as are generally accepted as current for competent workmen in the district in which the work is being performed ; and, if there is no current rate in such district, then a fair and reasonable rate, and in the event of a dispute arising as to what is the current or a fair and reasonable rate, it shall be determined by the commissioners, whose decision shall be final.

'This agreement is subject to the regulations now in force or which may at any time hereafter be in force during the construction of the works hereby contracted for, made under the authority of the Department of Labour and which are or shall be applicable to such works.'

(b) The form of contract adopted by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company contains the following provisions in regard to the payment of fair wages to workingmen to be employed in the construction of the part of the road being constructed by the Company :

'All mechanics, labourers or other persons who perform labour in the construction of the works hereby contracted for shall be paid such wages as are generally accepted as current for competent workmen in the district in which the work is being performed, and if there is no current rate in such district, then a fair and reasonable rate, and, in the event of a dispute arising as to what is the current or a fair and reasonable rate, it shall be determined by the Minister of Labour, whose decision shall be final.'

2. The form of contract adopted by both the commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company contains provisions to secure the full and prompt payment by contractors, of wages to all labour employed in or about the construction work ; to prevent the use of intoxicating liquors anywhere on or near the work; to compel compliance with the provisions of the Act respecting the preservation of health on public works, and of regulations made or to be made under the said Act ; to compel contractors at their own expense to make adequate arrangements for the medical and sanitary supervision of all their employees, and for that purpose to employ the necessary duly qualified medical practitioners, furnish and provide necessary medicines, surgical instruments and hospital accommodation; the duties of the medical staff to include not only the attendance on sick or injured men, but the inspection of the sanitary arrangements of all camps, dwellings or works, at least once a month or oftener if, in the opinion of the engineer, it is necessary; all of which provisions have been inserted for the protection of labour.

WRECKS ON PACIFIC COAST.

Mr. RALPH SMITH asked :

1. How many wrecks have there been on the Pacific coast in Canadian waters in 1900, 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904, 1905 and 1906, up to date, British and foreign ?
2. What was the number of lives lost in each wreck ?
3. What was the total financial loss of ships and cargoes ?
4. Has the government made any special inquiries into the cause of such wrecks ?
5. If so, what are the causes given for such wrecks ?
6. Have any reflections been made in the reports of such investigations, on the examinations of hulls or machinery, by the British Columbia inspectors ?
7. What was the port of registry of each vessel wrecked ?
8. What was the age of each ship ?

Hon. L. P. BRODEUR (Minister of Marine and Fisheries). The information asked is voluminous and is now being prepared. It will be furnished later on in the form of a return, if the hon. gentleman would be kind enough to give notice of motion.

CONSTRUCTION OF QUEBEC BRIDGE.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. What is the total amount paid to date by the government of Canada for the construction of the Quebec bridge ?
2. What is the total amount of bonds guaranteed by the government in connection with the construction of said bridge ?
3. How far has the work of construction of said bridge progressed ?
4. What proportion of said bonds guaranteed by the government has been negotiated, and at what figure ?
5. Have any of the said bonds been pledged ? If so, to whom ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister. The total amount paid up to date is $334,353.03. The total amount of bonds guaranteed is $6,678,200. None of the bonds guaranteed by the government have been sold. Authority has been given to the Quebec Bridge and Railway Company to pledge to the Bank of Montreal and La Banque de Paris et de Pays-Bas for the purpose of raising money and a portion of the issue has been so placed.

DIRECTORS QUEBEC BRIDGE COMPANY.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. What three directors at present represent the government on the board of directors of the Quebec Bridge and Railway Company ?

2. Who are the other eight directors of the said company ?

3. Who is at present the president of the said company, and when was he elected to the said office ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) :

1. The three directors on behalf of the government are Messrs. Laliberté, Narcisse Rioux, and Dumoulin, manager of the Molson's Bank.

2. I do not know the names of the other directors.

3. The president is Mr. Parent.

POSTAL REVENUE OF BRANTFORD.

Mr. COCKSHUTT—by Mr. Lancaster—asked :

1. What was the total postal revenue of the city of Brantford for each year from 1900 to 1905, inclusive ?

2. What was the value of postal notes issued at the Brantford office for the same years ?

3. What was the value of the postal notes redeemed at the above office for the same years ?

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Postmaster General :

1. Revenue.

1900	$26,550 78
1901	28,796 67
1902	32,349 07
1903	33,748 43
1904	36,773 56
1905	42,921 10

2. Value of Postal Notes issued.

1900	$2,641 24
1901	2,991 19
1902	2,818 15
1903	3,920 38
1904	4,862 49
1905	6,903 85

3. Value of Postal Notes redeemed.

1900	$ 9,328 21
1901	10,093 10
1902	10,927 02
1903	11,032 88
1904	15,427 51
1905	16,061 53

CUSTOMS REVENUE OF BRANTFORD.

Mr. COCKSHUTT—by Mr. Lancaster—asked :

1. What was the amount of customs duty collected at the port of Brantford each year from 1900 to 1905, inclusive ?

2. What was the yearly cost of collecting the above duty ?

Hon. WM. PATERSON (Minister of Customs :

	Customs duty.	Cost of collecting.
1899-1900	$178,540 10	$3,660 15
1900-1901	198,147 58	3,812 16
1901-1902	213,887 19	3,197 77
1902-1903	263,223 30	3,907 10
1903-1904	262,237 11	4,742 75
1904-1905	225,662 86	4,832 23

BRANTFORD POST OFFICE—SALARIES AND WAGES.

Mr. COCKSHUTT—by Mr. Lancaster—asked :

1. What was the total amount of wages paid at Brantford post office to all employees for each year from 1900 to 1905 ?

2. What were the wages paid to letter carriers for the same years ?

3. What is the number of employees in Brantford post office at present ?

4. What is the salary at present paid to each ?

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Postmaster General :

1.

1899-00	$ 8,386 57
1900-01	9,342 28
1901-02	9,933 03
1902-03	11,335 02
1903-04	12,292 07
1904-05	12,909 15

2.

1899-00	2,595 00
1900-01	3,630 00
1901-02	4,203 75
1902-03	5,223 64
1903-04	5,462 91
1904-05	6,039 25

3. Twenty (20).

4.

Raymond, W. G., postmaster,	$2,000
Montgomery, J. C., asst. "	1,100
Tranmer, E. G., clerk	800
Tisdale, W. F., clerk	700
Taylor, G. D., clerk	700
Hartley, H. J., clerk	650
Nightingale, G. E., clerk	475
Heath, V. S., clerk	410
Mizener, A. S., clerk	300
Carlin, R. J., clerk	240

Letter carriers.	per diem.
Waddington, H	$2 25
Schuler, W	2 25
Lake, W	2 25
Aitken, A	2 25
Broatch, Geo	2 25
Cox, J. A	1 75
Adam, J. A	1 75
Lutes, C	1 75
Stevens, A. J	1 75
Ion, F. E	1 50

MONTREAL POST OFFICE—ABSENCE AND OVERTIME.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. Are the post office employees at Montreal, whether in the inside or outside service, paid extra when obliged to work overtime ? If so, at what rate are they paid for such extra service ?

2. Is a deduction made from the salary of the employees of the postal department at Montreal when they are absent through illness, or from any other justifiable cause ? If so, at what rate is their salary reduced ?

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Postmaster General :

1. No.

2. Each case of absence is dealt with on its merits and pay is allowed or withheld according to circumstances. When deductions are made the amount withheld is the actual salary, which, during the period of absence, would have been earned by attendance.

WHARF AT GRANDE VALLEE.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. What is the total cost of the wharf constructed by the present government at Grande Vallée, P.Q. ?
2. What income has been derived from the said wharf by the government for the year ending June 30, 1905 ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (for the Minister of Public Works).

1. $57,488.13.
2. None ; the wharf was completed in the spring of 1905, only.

POST OFFICE AT MAGOG.

Mr. WORTHINGTON asked :

1. Is it the intention of the government to erect a post office in the town of Magog, Stanstead county, during the present year ?
2. If such a building is not at present contemplated, when is it likely to be considered ?
3. Has a site for such a building been selected in the town of Magog ? If so, where ?
4. If a site for the post office has been procured, from whom was it bought, and what was the price paid ?
5. Has any one residing in the town of Magog been authorized by the government to purchase or open negotiations for the purchase or acquirement of a post office site ?
6. If a site has been procured, are there any buildings thereon which will have to be removed ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (for Minister of Public Works) :

1. Yes.
2. Plans are being prepared.
3. Yes. On Pine street.
4. Bought from Messrs H. N. Rivard and A. Tourigny. Price, $3,200.
5. Dr. Goyette secured the option from the owners.
6. Yes.

FLOUR SUPPLIED TO PENITENTIARIES.

Mr. STAPLES asked :

1. Were tenders called for flour supplied to the Kingston penitentiary, what quantity, and to whom was the contract awarded ?
2. Were tenders called for flour supplied to the St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary, what quantity, and to whom was the contract awarded ?
3. Were tenders called for flour supplied to the Dorchester penitentiary, what quantity, and to whom was the contract awarded ?

Hon. CHARLES FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice) :

1. Yes, and nine tenders were received, 1,450 barrels. The Campbell Milling Company, Limited, Toronto Junction, their tender, $3.84 per barrel f.o.b. Kingston being the lowest.
2. Yes, and nine tenders were received, 1,000 barrels. The Campbell Milling Company, Limited, Toronto Junction, their tender $3.84 per barrel f.o.b. St. Vincent de Paul, being the lowest.
3. Yes, and eight tenders were received 700 barrels. The Campbell Milling Company, Limited, Toronto Junction, their tender $4.04 per barrel f.o.b. Penitentiary siding, Dorchester, being the lowest.

Mr. WILLIAM JACKSON asked :

1. How many officials of the civil service rank as deputy ministers, and what period of service and salary have they in each case ?
2. Are all such officials entitled to wear the Windsor uniform? If so, of which class ?
3. What are the names of the principal officers of the Senate and the House of Commons who have seats on the floor of either House, and what is the salary, length of service and relative rank in each case ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). There are 17 deputy heads of departments in the public service with one vacancy, that of the directorship of the Geological Survey as follows :

Name.	Service.	Salary.
		$ cts.
J. M. Courtney, C.M.G. I.S.O.	27 years.	5,000 00
Antoine Gobeil, I.S.O.	34 "	4,000 00
S. E. Dawson, Lit.D., F.R.S.C.	15 "	4,000 00
W. G. Parmalee, I.S.O.	30 "	4,200 00
E. L. Newcombe, K.C.	13 "	4,000 00
Frederick White, C.M.G.	37 "	4,000 00
Joseph Pope, C.M.G.	27 "	4,000 00
F. F. Gourdeau	45 "	4,000 00
John McDougald	10 "	4,000 00
R. M. Coulter, M.D	9 years.	4,000 00
L. F. Pinault, C.M.G	8 "	4,000 00
W. L. Mackenzie King, M.A	6 "	4,000 00
W. J. Gerald	39 "	4,000 00
G. F. O'Halloran	4 "	3,800 00
Francis Pedley	9 "	4,000 00
W. W. Cory	5 "	3,500 00
M. J. Butler, C.E	2 "	6,000 00

There are in addition to the above, five officers who have by statute the rank of deputy head, namely :

Name.	Rank.	Salary.
		$ cts.
A. L. Decelles, Lit.D., F.R.S.C	26 years.	4,000 00
M. J. Griffin, LL.D.	21 "	4,000 00
E. R. Cameron, K.C.	8 "	3,200 00
William Fitzgerald, M.A	21 "	4,000 00
Fred Montizambert, I.S.O., M.D	40 "	4,000 00

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. The second and third parts of the question are not answered.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I do not know what is meant by the question :

What are the names of the principal officers of the Senate and the House of Commons who have seats on the floor of either House ?

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Questions 2 and 3 of No. 61.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Oh, the Windsor uniform ! I am sorry to say that I am not up in those mysteries, and I cannot give any information.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. About question 3; there was an official document with the coat of arms circulated speaking of certain officers of parliament who were entitled to the floor of the chamber, and I suppose that is what the question refers to.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I am sorry to say I cannot give any information.

ALIEN LABOUR ACT.

Mr. TAYLOR—by Mr. Lancaster—asked :

1. Was an appeal made to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council from the judgment of Mr. Justice Anglin, with respect to the validity of the Alien Labour Act?

2. Has such appeal been heard ? If not, when is the hearing expected ?

3. Has any judgment been given on such appeal ? If so, what is the effect thereof ?

4. If no judgment has been given, when is judgment expected ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). The government has no information upon this subject.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The government should have some information about it because it is in appeal.

Hon. CHARLES FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice). Leave to appeal has been granted, but the appeal has not yet been heard on its merits.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. When is it expected it will be.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. It ought to be heard before the first of July; leave was granted last August.

NATURALIZATION OF UNITED STATES CITIZENS IN WESTERN CANADA.

Mr. TAYLOR—by Mr. Lancaster—asked :

1. Has the attention of the government been directed to the following passage in the recent report of Mr. C. V. C. Van Duesen, special examiner of the Department of Justice of the United States, relative to naturalization : 'A new phase in fraud in citizenship involving naturalization has developed since the establishment of the Republic of Cuba and the wonderful development of the farming interests in the Northwest provinces of Canada. It is the dual citizenship maintained by naturalized citizens of the United States, who have taken the oath of allegiance to the republic of Cuba, but still retain their certificate of United States citizenship, which they are at liberty to use, and undoubtedly have done so whenever their convenience or necessity demands such use. It is conservatively estimated that 50,000 native and naturalized citizens of the United States, chiefly from the border states, have taken up the prolific wheat lands in Manitoba in the last five years, some buying railroad lands, but many entering upon government homestead lands as British subjects, while still retaining their certificates of United States citizenship, and exercising such rights when in this country.'

Sir WILFRID LAURIER.

2. Has the government any, and what, information, upon the subject refrred to ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). This is the question as to which the government has no information.

MOTIONS AGREED TO WITHOUT DISCUSSION.

For copies of all correspondence had with the Department of the Interior, or the Minister of that department, or any member of the government, including all statements, charges or information, made against or concerning Philip Wagner, at one time in the employ of the government.—Mr. Foster.

For copies of all Orders in Council, surveys, reports, options, agreements for the purchase or lease, letters, telegrams, correspondence and other documents of every nature and description, relating to the acquisition of land for the purpose of military training at Petawawa, in the province of Ontario, together with the names, occupations and addresses of all persons, firms and corporations from whom any such lands were purchased, leased or otherwise acquired ; the dates when such property was purchased, leased or otherwise acquired. Also a return showing the extent of the lands purchased, leased or otherwise acquired, from each person, firm or corporation, the consideration therefor, the amount of the purchase or rental, and all amounts payable in respect thereof, including any commission upon said purchase, rental or acquisition. Also the names of all persons civil or military, who acted for the government in connection with such purchasing, leasing or other acquisition. Also all letters, telegrams, papers, correspondence and other documents between the vendor or lessee, or any persons acting for them and the government, or any person acting for the government, including all protests of persons owning or claiming to own land in the vicinity ; and all correspondence between such persons and the government, and all correspondence between any person acting for the government, and any person or persons claiming to be interested in any such purchase, sale or acquisition. Also the names of all persons engaged in making the final or other settlement of any claims for the purchasing, leasing or other acquisition of any such lands, or for trespass upon or interference with any adjoining lands, or the persons residing thereon, and a full statement of all the amounts, if any, paid to each such person engaged in making any such settlement, or in making any arrangement in connection with such claims. Also a statement of the amount and nature of all claims, for trespass interference, and of all sums paid or payable in respect thereof.—Mr. Worthington.

For a return showing all timber lands sold or leased by the Department of the Interior subsequent to the date of those included in Sessional Papers No. 39, brought down to the House on March 12, 1906; the description and area of such lots, the applications made therefor, the notice of advertisement for sale or tender, the tenders received, the amount of each tender, the tenders accepted, the name and address of the person or company to whom each lot was sold or leased ?—Mr. Foster.

For copies of all correspondence, recommendations, telegrams, petitions, in possession of the government, or any department or official thereof, with reference to the dismissal of Mr. Joseph McCabe, as postmaster at Iona, in Prince Edward Island, and the appointment of his successor.—Mr. A. Martin—by Mr. A. A. McLean.

For copies of all petitions, letters and correspondence relating to the change of the location of the post office at French Village, Prince Edward Island.—Mr. A. A. McLean.

For copies of all orders in council, reports, recommendations, correspondence, minutes or records of court of inquiry or investigation, evidence taken on such investigation, memoranda, telegrams, writings, orders and documents of every nature and kind, relating to the dismissal or removal from the militia of Canada, of Lt.-Col. Boulanger, of the Ordnance Stores Corps, Quebec, including all correspondence between Lt.-Col. Boulanger and the Militia Department, subsequent to his dismissal.—Mr. Worthington.

For copies of all orders in council, and documents, between the first day of July, 1896, and the present time, relating to swamp lands, and of all letters, telegrams and other documents and correspondence between the government of Canada and the government of Manitoba, during the same period, relating to such lands.—Mr. Staples.

NATURALIZATION LAWS OF COLONIES OF THE EMPIRE.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Carleton) moved :

For a return (a) setting forth the various laws in the United Kingdom, and in the various dependencies and colonies of the empire, with respect to the naturalization of aliens ; (b) defining the effect of naturalization consummated in Great Britain, or in the various colonies or dependencies, respectively, when the person so naturalized becomes domiciled thereafter, in any other portion of the Empire ; (c) setting forth any efforts heretofore made by the government of the United Kingdom, or of any colony or dependency, or by any body or association, for the purpose of securing uniformity in the naturalization laws throughout the empire.

He said : Returns of this character are not usually asked for in this House, but they are not unusual in the British House of Commons. I have put this motion on the order paper for the purpose of asking whether or not the government could bring down a return of this character which would be very useful to us. The naturalization laws throughout the empire vary a good deal in character, and I think they sometimes conflict with each other. I do not know whether the government may object to bring down a return of this kind ; if not I would like to have it brought down. I would mention that in connection with question sixty-three on to-day's order paper, as to which the Prime Minister said the government had no information ; it seems to me that the statement set forth in the latter part of that section is one to which the attention of the government might very well be directed. The statement is made by a special agent of the Department of Justice of the United States in a report lately made by him to the President of the United States.

Hon. CHARLES FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice). It would be exceedingly convenient to the members of the House if we had in a compact form the naturalization laws to which my hon. friend (Mr. R. L. Borden) refers. The naturalization laws are administered by the Secretary of State and I will draw his attention to this motion. Referring to question sixty-three, we may perhaps be able to bring down the treaty between England and the United States which I think expired a year or two ago with respect to this question of naturalization. My recollection is that in that treaty provision is made as to the renunciation of naturalization by an American citizen who has become a British subject and who subsequently returns to his native country. In any event I will see that the information asked for in question sixty-three is covered by the return. It would be most convenient if we could adopt some method by which the conditions as to naturalization could be made uniform, and by which the effect of naturalization could be made uniform throughout the whole of the empire, if it is possible to bring that about.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Hear, hear.

Motion agreed to.

QU'APPELLE, LONG LAKE & SASKATCHEWAN LAND GRANT.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I would like to direct the attention of the Minister of the Interior to the fact that the twelfth paragraph of question 1 has not been answered. The answer related to something entirely different. I asked when the passing of the order in council was first communicated to the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan Railroad and Steamboat Company. The answer given was that it was communicated to the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company under a certain date. I did not ask about that company; I asked about the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan Railroad and Steamboat Company. I have put another question on the order paper to-day so that attention may be directed to it.

THE TELEPHONE QUESTION.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to read a letter I have received, and to put myself in order I propose to end with a motion :

The letter is as follows :

The Canadian Independent Telephone Association.

Officers :

President, Alpheus Hoover, Green River, Ont.
Vice-President, F. D. Mackay, Toronto, Ont.
Secretary-Treasurer, A. F. Wilson, Markham, Ont.

Executive Committee :

T. F. Demers, M.D., Lévis, Que.
W. Doan, M.D., Harrietsville, Ont.
John A. Sprague, Demorestville, Ont.
T. H. Estabrooks, St. John, N.B.
C. J. Thornton, Kirby, Ont.
Dr. Ochs, Hespler, Ont.
Richard Vigars, Port Arthur, Ont.
E. Hart, M.D., Brantford, Ont.
Levi Moyer, Beamsville, Ont.

Markham, Ont., March 17, 1906.

W. F. Maclean, Esq., M.P., Toronto.

Dear sir,—I am instructed by our president to write you regarding the position of the telephone inquiry by the special committee of the House.

Our association has been patiently waiting for some announcement from the government and we are at a great loss to know what action is to be taken by the committee of parliament and whether we shall have opportunity to present new facts and evidence before the committee, and if we shall be allowed to present the views of this organization, within whose membership are nearly all the independent companies of Canada. Without any early announcement we are unable to make proper preparation.

You are probably unaware of the full magnitude of the independent movement and the tremendous strides which it has made in Ontario, largely since the sittings of the committee ended last sesion. Rural companies have sprung up in great numbers and the older companies have extended to a greater degree their systems, doubled and trebled their subscribers, and invested large sums in pole, line and equipments.

According to the reports received by me up to date there is over $270,000 capital actually invested in these companies, and a conservative estimate places the total at about $750,000. These rural companies in Ontario are so numerous and so situated that in several parts of the province we have a hundred miles of connected line or more running into three or four ridings.

The Bell company have announced that during the last year they installed 12,000 new telephones, including all Canada and the cities. The independents in the same time have had 4,000 to 5,000 new subscribers and these for the most part in the townships and villages.

It is, we submit, due to the farmers that parliament should have a full knowledge of this great new evolutionary social movement spreading through all settled Canada, and that the full light of day be given to the impediments in its way.

Our companies find that legislation is required amending the Railway Act, modifying the onerous and altogether unnecessary conditions regarding the crossing of telephone lines over the railroad along public highways, &c.

So far as connections with railway stations—we find that it is impossible to obtain the consent of these public chartered common carriers to give twelve inches of wall to our phones. These companies will give no definite answers to our requests for terms, and frequently our letters are altogether ignored. The public are inconvenienced to a tremendous extent, and our association, representing the local systems, ask of parliament relief as a matter of public convenience and policy.

There are many other matters for the attention of the House, and we respectfully ask you, as representing a rural constituency, to bring our request for information as to our present standing before the House.

Yours respectfully,

A. F. WILSON,
Secretary.

All I have to say is that this is an urgent matter. I was glad to hear the Prime Minister announce to-day that legislation on the telephone question, was in contemplation and that the Minister of Railways would introduce it. I also read in the evening papers of to-day that legislation dealing with the matter is to be introduced; but as I received this letter this morning, and as it expresses the view of a great many people in the country that legislation should be immediately introduced and that parliament should take advantage of the large amount of information that was collected last session and the cost of which was announced in the House to-day, it is only fair that the Prime Minister should make an explanation as to what the real legislation is likely to be and when it is to be introduced. I move the adjournment of the House.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Mr. Speaker, I have already stated to the House on one or two occasions that it is the intention of the government to deal with the telephone matter in a Bill which is to be introduced by the Minister of Railways. The Bill is on the order paper to-day—an Act to amend the Railway Act, 1903. I may say to my hon. friend that the Bill will deal with some of the matters referred to in the letter which he has just read. More than this I do not feel called upon to say to-day.

Motion (Mr. W. F. Maclean) negatived.

RAILWAY ACT AMENDMENTS.

On the order,

Second reading of Bill No. 8, an Act in further amendment of the Railway Act, 1903.—Mr. Lancaster.

Mr. LANCASTER. I am ready to go on, but in the absence of the Minister of Railways I do not care to.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Hear, hear. Stand.

On the order,

Second reading of Bill No. 9, an Act to further amend the Railway Act, 1903.—Mr. Maclean.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. I am in the same position. I am ready to go on.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Stand.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What business will be taken up to-morrow?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. We will take up the government Bills which are printed in both languages and are ready for discussion, and after that the civil service estimates.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 4.55 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

TUESDAY, March 20, 1906.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

FIRST READINGS.

Bill (No. 19) respecting the South Ontario Pacific Railway Company.—Mr. Guthrie.

Bill (No. 20) to incorporate the Canadian Bible Society, Auxiliary of the British and Foreign Bible Society.—Mr. Cockshutt.

Bill (No. 21) respecting the Huron and Erie Loan and Savings Company.—Mr. Calvert.

Bill (No. 22) respecting the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.—Mr. Calvert.

Bill (No. 23) to incorporate the Quebec-Midland Railway Company.—Mr. Bureau.

Bill (No. 24) respecting the Campbellford, Lake Ontario and Western Railway Company.—Mr. McColl.

Bill (No. 25) respecting the Niagara, Queenston and St. Catharines Railway Company.—Mr. Clarke by Mr. Calvert.

Bill (No. 26) respecting the West Ontario Pacific Railway Company.—Mr. Pardee by Mr. Campbell.

Bill (No. 27) to incorporate the Kamloops and Yellowhead Pass Railway Company.—Mr. Galliher.

Bill (No. 28) respecting the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway Company.—Mr. Sloan.

Bill (No. 29) respecting the Vancouver and Lulu Island Railway Company.—Mr. Macpherson.

Bill (No. 30) respecting the Kootenay and Arrowhead Railway Company.—Mr. Galliher.

Bill (No. 31) respecting the White Horse and Alsek Railway Company.—Mr. Macpherson.

Bill (No. 32) respecting the Nakusp and Slocan Railway Company.—Mr. Galliher.

Bill (No. 33) respecting the British Columbia Southern Railway Company.—Mr. Galliher.

Bill (No. 34) respecting the Columbia and Kootenay Railway Navigation Company.—Mr. Galliher.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE. Before the Orders of the Day are taken up, I wish to draw attention to a question which was asked in my absence to the following effect:

Mr. SPROULE—by Mr. Taylor—asked:

1. How many members of parliament have been appointed to positions of emolument from the Crown since the year 1896?

2. What are the names of such members so appointed, and what is the salary attached to each appointment?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). If my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule) were here, I would remind him that I gave an answer to a similar question last year, and since then the only appointments that I am aware of have been those of Sir William Mulock to the bench, Mr. Peter Talbot to the Senate, and Mr. McKenzie of Cape Breton to the bench.

My only observation is that the answers to these questions should be as accurate as possible, and I can only imagine that these appointments have been so numerous that the task of keeping them all in memory was too great for my right hon. friend. I see by 'Hansard' that one Colin F. McIsaac resigned his seat in this House, and I believe he occupies the position of a government commissioner. There may be other cases which on the spur of the moment do not occur to my mind. I merely rise to say that these answers to be of any value should be correct. I notice in the very last issue of 'Hansard' that the following question was asked by Mr. Walsh:

1. Are civil servants in the employ of the government at Ottawa permitted to engage in any occupation, business or work outside the performance of their duty ?

2. In how many departments is this permitted ?

The answer is given for only one department, yet I am credibly informed that there are other departments to which the question applies. So that an answer of that character is of very little value.

INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY PASSES.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. We have had refrence in the House several times to certain evidence, which was mentioned the other day by the hon. member for Cumberland (Mr. Logan) and previously by the Minister of Railways and Canals, I think—evidence of Mr. Pottinger or some other gentleman at Moncton, with regard to the issue of passes by the late Conservative administration. I think that evidence which is quoted in the House ought to be laid on the table of the House. If that evidence has been brought down, I have never seen it ; I would like to see it. If it has not been brought down, I would like it to be brought down. I have asked several times during the last three or four years that statements made on the floor of the House should be made good by evidence, or withdrawn, and I once more make that request to the government.

Mr. HANCE LOGAN. The evidence was taken a long while ago by Mr. McAlpine, K.C., of St. John, who was appointed a commissioner to inquire into certain charges. I was under the impression that the evidence had been brought down, because I am absolutely certain that I read it. If the report of Mr. McAlpine, with the evidence, has not been brought down, I would join with the leader of the opposition in urging the government to bring it down.

SENATE AND HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Hon. CHARLES FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice) moved second reading of Bill (No. 10) to amend the Act respecting the Senate and House of Commons.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the second time.

Mr. FITZPATRICK moved that the said Bill be referred to the select committee appointed by this House to consider the Acts respecting the Senate and House of Commons.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. Is it the intention of the Minister of Justice to bring under this Bill the practice by members of this House of pleading before Royal Commissions? There is a case on to-day in this city in which a member of this House is appearing and there may be other members also appearing before that royal commission.

Motion agreed to.

MONEY LENDERS ACT AMENDMENT.

Bill (No. 11) respecting money lenders (Mr. Fitzpatrick), read the second time and House went into committee thereon.

On the preamble,

Hon. CHARLES FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice). This is practically in the form in which a similar Bill came from the Senate in 1900. I have the English Act of that year. Perhaps my hon. friend the leader of the opposition would like to look at it ?

On section 2,

The expression 'money-lender' in this Act shall include any person who carries on the business of money-lending, or advertises, or announces himself, or holds himself out in any way, as carrying on that business, and who makes a practice of lending money at a higher rate than ten per cent per annum, but does not comprise registered pawnbrokers as such.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. This will be allowed to remain in abeyance so that members may consider the advisability of using the word 'practice.' I find it vague and indefinite, but have not been able to find a better word.

Mr. FOWLER. Why make the limit 10 per cent ? That seems a very exorbitant rate.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not quite understand the object of the section.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. It is to define what a money-lender is. Any man who lends at a rate in excess of 10 per cent will be a money-lender, within the meaning of this section.

Mr. STOCKTON. Suppose he only makes one loan and that at the rate of 100 per cent would he come under this section?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. No, because he would not be a money-lender by practice.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. What about the banks in the Yukon who lend money at 2 per cent per month?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. There is an exception permitting them to go on doing that business.

Mr. A. C. MACDONELL. By this section you are throwing the onus on the prosecution of proving that a man makes a practice of lending money at a higher rate than 10 per cent per annum. That would be pretty hard to prove.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. In the English Act the expression 'money-lender' includes every one whose business is that of money-lender or who advertises or announces himself or holds himself out in any way as carrying on that business, but there is a considerable number of exceptions. For instance, persons carrying on the business of banking or insurance or any business not having for its chief object the lending of money, also certain registered societies empowered by Act of Parliament to lend money, also anybody exempt by order of the board of trade. I would think that the definition in this Bill should be less limited. Suppose, for example, one-third of the business of a money-lender was the lending of money at a rate exceeding 10 per cent and the rest at less than 10 per cent. There might be great difficulty in establishing whether he came within the terms of the statute. I agree with my hon. friend that the expression is altogether too vague. You would have to go into a general inquiry into all the past business of a money-lender before you could bring him under the purview of this government.

Section 2 allowed to stand.

On section 3,

Notwithstanding the provisions of chapter 127 of the revised statutes no money-lender shall stipulate for, allow or exact on any negotiable instrument, contract or agreement, concerning a loan of money, the principal of which is under five hundred dollars, a rate of interest or discount greater than twelve per cent per annum: and the said rate of interest shall be reduced to the rate of six per cent per annum from the date of judgment in any suit, action or other proceeding for the recovery of the amount due.

Mr. FOWLER. Why make it 6 per cent from the date of the judgment? You are increasing the amount a usurer can charge. The legal rate, at the present time, I understand, is 5 per cent, no matter what the stipulation of the bond or note upon which the suit is brought.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. This is unusual legislation, and interferes, to a certain extent, with private contract. Therefore, it was thought not improper, in this case, to allow six per cent.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not know how it may be in the province of Quebec but, in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, on a judgment the lender gets the rate of interest allowed by the law, and, at present, that is 5 per cent. This Bill would have the effect of increasing the rate of interest allowed on this class of judgment, which, probably, it is not desirable to do, and which, one would suppose, it is not intended to do.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. There are special reasons in this case. You are allowing a special rate of interest because this Bill to some extent, interferes with private contract. That is the only reason, so far as I know, why it is done.

Mr. FOWLER. But the contract does not govern the rate of interest from the date of judgment. No matter what the contract between the parties, as soon as one party has recovered judgment from the other the contract is at an end, the law having stepped in, and the law provides that the rate of interest shall be 5 per cent. But you are increasing it one per cent by this Bill. The Bill deals with the rate of interest after the judgment, not the judgment under the contract.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fowler) had read the Bill, he would have known that the object is to allow the rate of interest under the contract to be reduced. Otherwise there would be no sense in the Bill.

Mr. BERGERON. What is the object of this limit of $500?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I understand that there are transactions, running into large amounts in which the rate of interest is far in excess of that allowed under this Bill, but with which it would not be well to interfere. The object of the Bill is to protect the class of small borrowers.

Mr. OSLER. It seems to me that there is danger in this clause as it is at present. There are cases, unfortunately, where poor people get into a position where they must have money or be sold out; and I do not believe that it would be possible for them, in many cases, to borrow money at ten per cent. The class of men who deal in that particular kind of security are not usually in command of a great deal of money, many of them are men of very little compunction. The effect of the Bill, I fear, will be to prevent many poor people from borrowing money; for the lack of it, they will be sold out, and the last state of those people will be worse than the first. I would ask what the provision of the English law is? This question came up in the House, where it was considered with enormous care. I do not recollect the provision of the English Act but I think that the limitation was nothing like the one here provided.

Mr. BOYCE. May I ask if the latter part of the section would cover the case of a contract under chattel mortgage? For instance the rate provided under a chattel mortgage may be 20 per cent, and the lender may enforce the security without recourse to proceedings in any court. Thus, there would be no judgment, and no period when the reduction here provided would apply.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The criticism of the hon. member for West Toronto (Mr. Osler) is one that naturally suggests itself to one who considers this Bill. I must confess that the difficulty is one with which I do not see how to deal effectively, while this will operate as a relief to many people, it will also operate as a great hardship to many others. I have given the matter some consideration, and, as I say, can see no way to meet the difficulty. It may be that, under certain conditions, people can borrow money only at a high rate of interest, because of their straightened circumstances, and it would be a great hardship to provide that they must not enter into such transactions or that they enter upon them at their peril. That is one of the inconveniences that may result from the adoption of this measure.

I have at hand a copy of the English statute, and the section referred to by the hon. member for West Toronto provides as follows :

> Where proceedings are taken in any court by a money-lender for the recovery of any money lent after the commencement of this Act, or the enforcement of any agreement or security made or taken after the commencement of this Act, in respect of money lent either before or after the commencement of this Act, and there is evidence which satisfies the court that the interest charged in respect of the sum actually lent is excessive,——

And so on,—leaving it a matter of discretion on the part of the court to determine whether, under all the circumstances, the rate of interest is excessive. That would meet, to some extent the difficulty the hon. gentleman (Mr. Osler) has pointed out.

Mr. OSLER. I think that is quite worthy of consideration. Take for instance, the case of a bricklayer or some other workman who may be practically out of work during the winter months. He gets behind in his rent and has to borrow $10 or $20, or be sold out. If he borrows say $10 at the rate of 10 per cent per annum and borrows for three months, that would mean 25c interest. Well, you cannot conceive of anybody, no matter how philanthropic he may be, lending $10 for three months for 25c. I think the English Act would cover the difficulty. I am quite sure that the Act as at present drawn will work great hardship, perhaps even greater hardship than results now from the charge of excessive interest rates.

On section 5,

Mr. GALLIHER. If I understand this section correctly, it provides means of evading the rate of interest to be charged. For instance, one who is actually a money lender might set up a man of straw as a money lender in his interest, and the latter might charge a greater rate of interest than the one who really is the money lender. He discounts that, and is a bona fide holder. He could collect the full value of the loan and interest, and the only recourse the borrower could have would be against, as I say, this man of straw. The two could work together that way, the money lender could evade the Act by working through another person who would not be amenable. Could not that be done ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. It might be done once, but I do not think it is likely to be done more than once, because the gentleman who attempted to operate that way would go to jail under a later provision of the Act.

On section 10,

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I intend to add provisions to this Act so that it shall not apply to the Yukon, and also that it shall be applicable exclusively to a loan made by a money lender not exceeding the original sum of $500 of principal money. With this explanation I move that the committee rise, and will move to-morrow that this Bill be referred to the Banking and Commerce Committee so that we may have an opportunity of considering it more fully. I shall endeavour, as far as possible, to adopt the provisions of the English Act, 63 and 64 Victoria, chapter 51.

Mr. SPROULE. I suppose that the Yukon Territory will become the paradise of the money lenders if we exempt that.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. There are conditions in the Yukon which do not exist elsewhere, and which make it necessary, practically, to take it out of the operations of this Act.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. Has the Minister of Justice any knowledge whether the law as it exists in England to-day is efficacious in stopping this exorbitant interest ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I do not know whether it has had that effect in all cases, but I understand that the English Act is broad enough not to interfere with any vested rights. I think the terms of the English Act are broader and more comprehensive, and are perhaps more satisfactory than the Bill we have been considering.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Under the English Money Lenders' Act, the judges sometimes make an order for allowing a judgment to be paid in small instalments extending over 75, 100 or 150 years. It might be desirable to embrace some power of that kind in this statute. It would be a salutary provision.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. It would be worth considering how far we have power to do that. We have power to fix the amount of interest charged, but whether we have power to regulate the payment of a judgment by instalments is another question. They can do a lot of things in England that we cannot do.

Committee rose, reported progress, and asked leave to sit again.

Mr. SPROULE. If you are sending this Bill to the Banking and Commerce Committee why did you ask leave to sit again?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I will have to move in the House that the Bill be called again and referred to the Banking and Commerce Committee.

SUPPLY.

House in committee of supply.

Civil government—Governor General's secretary's office, salaries, $8,662.50.
Contingencies, $14,525—

Clerical and other assistance, including salary of Miss Gilbertson at $550 per annum, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Civil Service Act	$ 2,025 00
Printing and stationery	1,500 00
Sundries	11,000 00
	$14,525 00

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. There is no increase in the salaries. In the contingencies there is a slight increase. The committee will remember that this is only an estimate for nine months.

Mr. FOSTER. Are these calculations made for just three quarters of the fiscal year ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes, but in this instance my hon. friend (Mr. Foster) will see that the estimates for three quarters of the fiscal year involve a slight increase. I understand this is for the Governor General's orderly. For printing and stationery there is also an increase. I understand this is also necessary and is asked for by the Governor General's office. In sundries there is also a considerable increase amounting to some $4,000.

Mr. FOSTER. What is that for ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I am sorry to say that I cannot give my hon. friend very full information. I understand that it is required by the Governor General's office, that the expenditures of last year justify an increase this year.

Mr. FOSTER. Of course, it would be a very easy way of getting estimates through —the right hon. Prime Minister will very well see—if all he had to say in explanation was that it was required by a department or by an office.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. We are bound, I suppose, to be a little inquisitive and if there is a large item of increase like this—and it is a large item because it amounts to about $4,000 of an increase in one branch—I think we ought to know the reasons why.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The request of my hon. friend is perfectly reasonable. I cannot give the information to-day and I will let this item of contingencies stand.

Item allowed to stand.

Office of the King's Privy Council of Canada, salaries, $24,525.
Contingencies, $7,500.

Mr. FOSTER. I notice this is not in the Auditor General's Report. We have not the second volume down, unfortunately.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No, but my hon. friend has not noticed that there is a decrease in this item. Therefore, he will not be so particular.

Mr. FOSTER. I have not noticed it at all ; I have just taken notice of the other fact.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The salaries are the same as last year excepting the statutory increases.

Mr. FOSTER. Who has gone?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. A second-class clerk, Mr. Baldwin who has been superannuated. I am not replacing him. His duties have been given to another officer.

Mr. FOSTER. Are there any increases in salaries ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. There are no increases at all ; there are only the statutory increases.

Mr. FOSTER. Are these regularly given every year ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Just as they were last year and as they were in my hon. friend's time also.

Mr. FOSTER. Not as they were in 1897 and 1898 ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. We have improved a little in that respect.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Sir Wilfrid Laurier moves that the resolution be amended by adding after the word 'contingencies,' 'notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Civil Service Act'.

Mr. FOSTER. But the word 'contingencies' is merely an indication of what the items are.

Mr. PATERSON. You will find in the details that these words are in, but they are not in the item under consideration.

Mr. FOSTER. The only place where it has a live man alongside of it is in 'clerical and other assistance'. You surely do not apply it to books, papers and envelopes.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. It is in the book. You have it there as printed.

Mr. PATERSON. It is in details but not in the book.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Shall the resolution as amended, carry ?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If it comes in anywhere it should come in after the word 'assistance' and not after the word 'contingencies.' I do not think it should come in anywhere in this resolution, but it is obviously improper to insert it after the word 'contingencies.' In the printed statement we have before us, these words are inserted after the word 'assistance.' If they are not so inserted in the written copy that the chairman has, they should be inserted after the word 'assistance.'

Mr. FOSTER. It is all right as printed, but it is wrong in the resolution which the chairman has.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Certainly.

Department of Justice—
Salaries $29,833 13
Contingencies.. .. .. 9,575 60

Mr. FOSTER. Any explanation about that ?

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. There is an amendment proposed.

That the said resolution be amended by adding after the word 'salaries' 'including allowance for private secretary to Solicitor General, notwithstanding anything contrary in the Civil Service Act.

Mr. FOSTER. Where is that to be added?

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. After the word 'salaries.'

Mr. PATERSON. These words are in the details but not in the main vote.

Mr. FOSTER. Are there any increases or additions ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. No additions. There is a promotion from the first class to a chief clerkship. One of the chief clerks of the penitentiary branch died, and Mr. Leslie, who has been in the department since 1872 has been promoted from the first class to the chief clerkship. Mr. Creighton, who has also been in the department for a long time has been promoted to take Mr. Leslie's place as first-class clerk.

Militia and defence, $42,900.

Hon. Sir FREDERICK BORDEN (Minister of Militia and Defence). There is no change whatever here, except a few statutory increases.

Mr. FOSTER. And new appointments ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. None.

Mr. SPROULE. Do you give them all the statutory increase, or do you confine it only to a few.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. All, I think.

Office of the Comptroller of the Northwest Mounted Police, $12,975.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. There is no increase, except statutory increases and a new clerk at $600.

Mr. FOSTER. Is the force larger ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No ; the same as last year.

Mr. FOSTER. Why the extra clerk ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The extra clerk is asked by the comptroller who thinks he ought to have more assistance, and as he is a very careful man, I thought he was entitled to it.

Department of Customs, $58,206.25.

Hon. WILLIAM PATERSON (Minister of Customs). The commissioner and the assistant commissioner remain the same. The three chief clerks get their statutory increase of $50 each. The first class clerks who are not at the maximum get the $50 statutory increase. One junior second-class clerk is promoted to the second class.

Mr. FOSTER. You pay no attention now to the theoretical organization of the departments.

Mr. PATERSON. How do you mean ?

Mr. FOSTER. To have a certain number of clerks of each class.

Mr. PATERSON. This gentleman will be taken from the service.

Mr. FOSTER. What has led you to the conclusion that you should change your theoretical organization and have more second-class clerks than formerly ?

Mr. PATERSON. The commissioner deemed it necessary to have another clerk.

Mr. FOSTER. You could have another clerk, but it is not necessary to make him a second-class clerk The departments start out with a well considered plan to have so many chief clerks, so many first-class clerks, so many third-class clerks and so on. It is not necessary that you should increase the number of second-class clerks to get more help in the department, because in proportion as you raise your theoretical organization in the higher clases you are adding to the expense of the department. I have noticed that lately there has been a disposition to hitch them up as was considered best by the minister without thinking of the past arrangement as to the theoretical organization of the departments.

Mr. PATERSON. That is explained by the conditions of the department. We found for two or three years that extra work was required on the inside, and men who have shown aptitude for the work have been drawn from the statistical branch, which comes under the vote for the outside service, and I presume that the new clerk who is being brought in is in receipt of a salary equal to what he will get as a second-class clerk.

Mr. FOSTER. Does the minister know that, or does he only presume that ?

Mr. PATERSON. I have every reason to believe it.

Mr. HAGGART. The minister may be perfectly correct, but the principle is this, which I think is required by the law, that the deputy head of the department shall report to the minister when a change in the theoretical organization of the department is required before the minister comes to the House for a vote.

Mr. PATERSON. We need not go over the old discussion as to that; but I may say that the deputy has proposed this change, of course with my concurrence, as being in the interest of the service.

Mr. FOWLER. Has there been any increase in the salary of the assessment commissioner ? It is now put at $3,000. I was under the impression that it was $2,800.

Mr. PATERSON. It was $3,000 for 1905-6.

Mr. FOWLER. Is that the maximum salary he can receive ?

Mr. PATERSON. There is no maximum. It was advanced to $3,000 last year or the year before.

Mr. DANIEL. In last year's estimates the salary of the assistant commissioner was put down at $2,800.

Mr. PATERSON. Perhaps the $200 was added in the supplementary estimates. Then, there are twenty-two juniors instead of nineteen; that is an increase of three; but there are two fewer third-class clerks than there were. It is intended to promote two from the third-class to the junior second.

Mr. FOSTER. There again you are increasing your high grades very much.

Mr. PATERSON. Well, I suppose the hon. gentleman does not object to an advance when there is merit. That is considered desirable and necessary by the deputy, in which I concur. Of course, all the statutory increases are advances as well. I think it is the deputy's opinion now, and has been for some time, that when there is merit the promotions should go on as high as the second class, but that unless there is some special merit, they should not go beyond the maximum of that class.

Mr. FOSTER. I cannot see the reason underlying that.

Mr. PATERSON. There is a pretty good salary at the maximum of the second-class, but it is not very great until that point is reached.

Mr. FOWLER. Do all the clerks get the statutory increase or are certain ones selected ?

Mr. PATERSON. All who are not at the maximum and who are deemed worthy.

Mr. KEMP. Under what head do the officers come who are in the United States getting values ?

Mr. PATERSON. They come under the outside vote. They do not come under this.

Mr. HENDERSON. I understand that the gentleman who occupies the position of assistant commissioner acted at one time as private secretary of the minister. May I ask, is he still the private secretary of the minister ? I notice an allowance for the private secretary of $600 a year.

Mr. PATERSON. He does not get that. Two ladies in the service of the department act as private secretaries and share in the vote. The assessment commissioner does not receive any part of that. The amount for the private secretary is divided between them. They work long hours, are very busy, and are not overpaid. The assessment commissioner—while I have not appointed any other in the office as my private secretary and while he does such work—is not paid anything extra. He discharges the duties of assistant commissioner and does it well but gets no portion of that amount.

Mr. HENDERSON. I understand the only private secretary the minister has is the assistant commissioner ?

Mr. PATERSON. Yes, there are Miss Cram and Miss Dawes who are engaged as private secretaries. They are clerks but are doing the private secretary's work.

Mr. FOWLER. Is the assistant commissioner private secretary as well ?

Mr. PATERSON. To the extent I have said, yes.

Mr. FOWLER. He holds the honorary position and these ladies do the work.

Mr. PATERSON. Yes, they do the work.

Department of the Interior, $128,224.94.

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). This is for salaries. It includes a revote of $197.44 to adjust the salaries of four clerks promoted to the junior second class on September 20, 1905, so as to make their promotion date from July 1, 1905, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act.

These were third-class clerks. It was intended to promote them to second class and they were required to pass the promotion examinations. An order in council authorizing a special examination was passed the 22nd July, 1905. The examinations were held the 20th September, 1905, from which date the promotions took effect. Their salaries had been provided for the full year to date from July, 1905, and the sum asked is to pay their salaries from 1st July to September, 1905. It is a revote.

Mr. FOSTER. The minister is voting a salary to clerks for a portion of the year who are during that portion entitled to it. They were not entitled to promotion until they passed the examination. They had not passed it the 1st July and did not pass it until September. Consequently they were not eligible to be in the rank of second class until September, so that you cannot pay them the salary of that rank except from September.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I understand the minister had a vote.

Mr. FOSTER. He had a vote but you cannot give a salary to a person for a portion of the year when he was ineligible. These clerks can only be paid the increased salary from the time they were promoted.

Mr. OLIVER. They cannot be paid unless the House votes the money.

Mr. FOSTER. Parliament is not enacting legislation to contravene the Civil Service Act to this extent that you can promote people before they pass the promotion examination.

Mr. OLIVER. The fact of this vote appearing now is because of a precedent which appeared in the votes of last year and to which parliament assented without any question. As that vote passed last year without any question, and as an exactly similar condition arose this year, it was thought proper to deal with the matter in exactly the same way as it had been dealt with last year.

Mr. FOSTER. Surely the minister will not press the point that because an illegal thing was done last year without attracting the attention of the House—slipped through—therefore we are to make it a fixed condition of things. The minister might as well say that, if parties had passed the promotion examination in the middle of the year, it should be all right to date back their promotion two or three years. Of course, parliament can vote anything, but there are some things that parliament ought not to be asked to vote.

Mr. OLIVER. The vote last year did not 'slip through.' The attention of the House was drawn to it and identically the same explanation was made as is made this year.

Mr. DANIEL. There must be a misprint here with regard to the number of first-class clerks. The number given in the margin is seventeen, but, when you count them up there are eighteen. The number in last year's estimates was sixteen. So, there appears to be an addition of two first-class clerks.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. As I understand the point taken by my hon. friend for North Toronto (Mr. Foster) it is that the promotion is made retroactive, that it is from the first of July, and these officers did not qualify until the end of September?

Mr. FOSTER. Yes.

Mr. PATERSON. It is just as the same as adding to a vote the words 'notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act.'

Mr. FOSTER. It is far worse than that. The vote was taken and they did not pass for three or four months after.

Mr. PATERSON. They were qualified. They had not passed then, but they have passed now.

Mr. FOWLER. You might as well make it work back two years as three months.

Mr. PATERSON. Not at all. We had the money, but the parties did not pass the examination until two or three months after the commencement of the year for which the money was voted. I am not saying whether parliament ought or ought not to pass such votes, but, as to the ability of parliament to pass them, it seems to me it is in the same category as the votes passed with the proviso, 'notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act.'

Mr. HAGGART. The Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) says that this amount was voted for these officers in the estimates of last year. It does not appear in the estimates of last year.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The point, I understand, was in relation to the general vote. For some reasons these four parties did not qualify until the month of September. And the objection is that their promotion is made retroactive as from July 1. The point is well taken.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. member for St. John (Mr. Daniel) calls attention to the fact that there are really eighteen first-class clerks, although the number is stated at seventeen. If so, there is a promotion there——

Mr. DANIEL. There were only sixteen last year.

Mr. OLIVER. I am informed that that 'seventeen' is a typographical error.

Mr. FOSTER. And there really are eighteen?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. Then an explanation is due as to why you have two additional this year. And this seems a proper time to call attention again to the slipshod way in which these estimates are prepared. We had trouble last year—quite a deal of trouble, over one or two very important points. And now we have the same thing this year.

Mr. OLIVER. I am informed that there is no change in the number of first-class clerks since last year.

Mr. FOSTER. How many were there last year ?

Mr. OLIVER. Eighteen.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The hon. member for St. John (Mr. Daniel) has stated that he has the estimates of last year before him, and that the number of first-class clerks is stated as sixteen. In the margin of the estimates before us it is given at seventeen, and the total is really eighteen. Why do we waste time over mistakes of this kind if there is no change ? Why are not the estimates properly prepared ?

Mr. TAYLOR. And if the minister will count the number of second-class clerks, he will see that they number twenty-four although the total is given as twenty-five. Then, the number of third-class clerks is given as thirty-one and the number is only twenty-five when you count up the number of salaries to be voted. Either there is something radically wrong or there has been carelessness in preparing the estimates.

Mr. FOSTER. I find by the Auditor General's Report that only sixteen first-class clerks were paid last year, and that is a pretty close analysis. Have not the others passed these promotion examinations ? And have any second-class clerks died during the year ?

Mr. OLIVER. One second-class clerk resigned, but none died.

Mr. FOSTER. There is somebody missing, you will have to send out the bellman to find out where he is. Because I find there were 28 second-class clerks paid last year; you have only 25 here, if one resigned, that would be 27. Where are the missing 2 ? I am afraid the minister's department got disorganized when he was out west.

Mr. OLIVER. The Auditor General's Report does not tally with the information given me by my officers here. That being the case, I must have an opportunity of revising the statement I have here, and ask that the item stand.

Department of Indian Affairs—
Salaries..	$50,537 50
Contingencies..	11,548 13

Mr. OLIVER. The estimates for Indian Affairs have been framed to meet the expenditure during nine months ending March 31, 1907. For all services under which the expenditure is continuous through the twelve months the reduction has been made. This applies to expenses of management, school grants, food supplies, medical attendance, travelling and miscellaneous charges, implements, live stock, &c. But there are certain subheads under which the reduction could not be made, as the expenditure takes place early in the year, amounts, for instance, which are all paid after the 1st of July, as supplies which are delivered under contract for annuity payment, and which must all be available between certain dates, and services which must be met before winter sets in, outside work on repairs and buildings, which must be done during the summer.

Mr. HAGGART. Have you given the clerks the statutory increase ?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes.

Mr. HAGGART. How is it that the amount you are asking is just the same, without any decrease in the number of clerks at all ?

Mr. OLIVER. The total amount is not the same as last year, the statutory increases make a difference.

Mr. FOSTER. Remember this is only for nine months.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. In making out these estimates it would have been a great convenience to the House if you had presented a third column showing what the total would be for twelve months. I think we should have to ask each minister when he goes over every item to state exactly what the total would be for twelve months.

Mr. OLIVER. I have the figures here in detail for the twelve months, but not the total.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Would the minister tell us what the chief clerks would amount to for the whole year ?

Mr. OLIVER. $13,000.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. And the first class clerks ?

Mr. OLIVER. $10,337.50.

Department of Finance and Treasury Board—
Salaries..	$47,336 26
Contingencies..	9,000 00

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The same as last year.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. Does that include the insurance branch ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes, but not the commission.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. Campbell). It is proposed to amend this resolution by adding after the word 'contingencies,' the following words 'notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Civil Service Act.'

Amendment agreed to.

Department of Inland Revenue—
Salaries.. .. ..$37,107 50
Contingencies.. .. .. 5,250 00

Hon. L. P. BRODEUR. The number of employees is the same as last year. Three junior second-class clerks have been promoted from the third class.

Mr. FOSTER. What was the salary of each of these third class clerks ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Two were getting $700 each, and the other $650. A junior second class-clerk gets $800. We promoted them because they had passed the promotion examination, and as they were good clerks we thought it would be well to promote them to the junior second class. My hon. friend knows that the salary of a third-class clerk is very small. We thought, after consulting the deputy minister, that it was one of those cases where we could give a small increase of $100 each.

Mr. FOSTER. The reason the minister gives does not appear to be very conclusive, and does not seem to be a sufficient justification. The whole aim seems to be to shove persons in lower branches of the department up into higher classes, and so to add of course, not to efficiency, but to the expense of your department. Now, if it is really a fact that third-class clerks, with the changed condition of things, are not paid as much as they reasonably ought to be paid then, it seems to me, that it will be the duty of the government to take the matter into consideration and see whether that scale of salaries should not be raised. I think myself there is something to be said in reference to Civil Service salaries. Whilst the expenses of living have very largely increased rents, food, clothing, the whole scale of life, it seems to be particularly hard for the class of people who are kept down to stated salaries and who have not what you might call an elastic method of gaining a livelihood. If they have to get along with the heightened prices that have come into existence within the last three, four or five years and the scale of salaries is below what reasonably clerks of that description ought to live upon, that would be a very good reason for revising the whole list and seeing whether or not a reasonable salary was appropriated to each class of clerks. But, to get over it by picking up here one and there another, putting them from one class into another and so giving them a higher salary in that way does not seem the proper method. I quite agree with any person who would maintain it that a young man who is eligible for good, keen work and is expected to get on with $400 or $500 of a salary has a mighty hard time of it in a city like this with the expenses of living as they are here. Having said it before I say it again that if the scale is not high enough I think it would be better to go to work and see that it is put right and then keep to it in the different grades and classes. But, certainly, it does not seem to be a good reason to say that simply because the promotion examination has been passed you will therefore jump a clerk from $600 to $800 or give a person a higher salary.

The CHAIRMAN.

Mr. BRODEUR. It was thought by the deputy and myself that these clerks were receiving pretty small salaries because they were only getting $650 and the two others were at the maximum of their class. It was not therefore unjust to give them a similar increase and to make them junior second-class clerks. Perhaps they could have been appointed junior second-class clerks at the beginning, because they had passed the examination, but having passed the qualifying examination it qualifies them for the position of junior second-class clerks. While two of them were at the top of their class, two others were receiving $650 or $50 less than the maximum of their class. Having passed the promotion examination and taking into consideration the fact that they had to live on this small salary in the city of Ottawa, the deputy minister and myself believed that we were justified in recommending that they should be promoted to be junior second-class clerks.

Mr. FOSTER. Are not the three that were left good clerks ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes, but they have not passed the examination. Those who were promoted have passed the examination.

Mr. DANIEL. Were there any additions made in the supplementary estimates of last year to salaries in the Inland Revenue Department ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. DANIEL. I notice that all the salaries provided for here amounted, last year, to $50,310. Three quarters of that would amount to more than $37,107, so that the hon. minister is getting along with less salaries for the ensuing year than last year.

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes, that is right.

Mr. FOSTER. How does he do it ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I am informed by the deputy minister that it is on account of the fact that he is trying to do with a less number of third-class clerks than were employed last year.

Mr. FOSTER. You have 3.

Mr. BRODEUR. Last year we provided for six third-class clerks and this year we are only providing for three.

Mr. FOSTER. But if you provided only for three third-class clerks—that is three less than last year—you provide for three more second-class clerks and at a higher salary.

Mr. BRODEUR. My private secretary, Mr. Garneau, who was in the service last year was not replaced. He was a second-class clerk. His position is really taken by some one else in a lower class.

Mr. FOSTER. Was Mr. Garneau in the Inland Revenue Department ?

Mr. BRODEUR. He was, but he is not now in the Inland Revenue Department.

Mr. FOSTER. Well then you should have one clerk less.

Mr. BRODEUR. No.

Mr. FOSTER. But you have exactly the same number.

Mr. BRODEUR. We have the same number of clerks, but one clerk who received a salary of $1,200 or $1,300 is replaced by a third-class clerk.

Mr. FOSTER. Then he gets the private secretary's salary or allowance ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Department of Agriculture—
Salaries.. .. ..$63,798 76
Contingencies.. .. .. 16,312 50

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. There are no changes. It is exactly the same as last year.

Mr. FOSTER. Except statutory increases ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Except statutory increases.

Mr. HAGGART. The same argument as I applied it to the Minister of the Interior a short time ago, applies here. If you give statutory increases, I do not see how you arrive at that amount.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The item last year was $84,820. For this year a three quarter vote would amount to $63,798.76. Please remember particularly the 76 cents. If it were for twelve months we would not require $84,820 but we would ask for $85,065.01.

Mr. HAGGART. But you have only taken three quarters of $84,820.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes.

Mr. HAGGART. In the $84,820 there are no additions for statutory increases.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. There are.

Mr. HAGGART. No, that is what the vote was last year.

Mr. FOSTER. There is about $200.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Here is my arithmetic : We ask for $63,798.76 for nine months. If we asked for twelve months we would require $85,065.01.

Mr. HAGGART. The statutory increases only amount to $400 for the year.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No, to $245.

Mr. HAGGART. That is an extremely small amount for 63 clerks.

Mr. FOSTER. Some of them have got up to the maximum ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The thing is very peculiar. I could not understand it until it was explained to me. The explanation is that Col. Jarvis has a salary of $2,412.50 and another officer has a salary of $1,962.50. This is the explanation given by the accountant. He has prepared the figures very carefully and the statutory increases just bring the total up to $63,798.76 for nine months. For twelve months amount would be $85,065.01. The figures are all right.

Department of Marine and Fisheries—
Salaries.. .. ..$63,762 50
Contingencies.. .. .. 14,362 50

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. It is proposed to amend this item by inserting after the word 'salaries' the following, 'including Mrs. M. Lamouche at $850 notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Civil Service Act.'

Mr. BRODEUR. The number of clerks has been reduced from 57 to 55. Mr. Halkett who has been in the service since 1873 and Mr. Kent who is in charge of the fishing bounty and who has been in the department since 1875 have been promoted to chief clerkships. These gentlemen deserve promotion. In the technical branch the number is reduced from 8 to 5 ; Mr. Tyrwhitt died and Mr. Lindsay resigned. The reason of the other reduction is that Mr. Cunningham who is in charge of the fish culture was through an error included in last year's estimate as a technical officer, when strictly speaking he is not. There is a reduction of 16 to 13 in the junior second class clerks. I propose to make Mrs. Lamouche a junior second class clerk. She has been in the service of this department since 1879 and previous to that was employed in the Department of Finance. Every year her name is coupled with the phrase 'notwithsanding anything in the Civil Service Act,' and I think it better to put this lady in the position of a second class clerk. Mrs. Lamouche is a very good officer and she is at all events above the age of 35, because she has been in the service since 1879.

Mr. HENDERSON. You should give her a pension.

Mr. FOSTER. If the minister never does anything worse than to put Mrs. Lamouche among the civil servants, it is all right.

Mr. DANIEL. Are these technical officers all educated as professional men ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes. There is Mr. Creighton who is in charge of the tidal survey ; Mr. Fraser who is the assistant engineer; Mr. Stewart, chief surveyor; Mr. Anderson, hydrographic surveyor, and Mr. Fraser commissioner of lights.

Department of Public Works, $53,437.50.

Mr. FOSTER. There is a long correspondence in the Auditor General's Report with reference to a matter which I consider very important and I want to bring it to the attention of the minister. It would seem that Mr. Gobeil the deputy minister, gets placed upon certain arbitrations in connection with the affairs of his department and for each of these arbitrations he is paid $400. That is paid to him by virtue of an appropriation for arbitrations, in which there is stuck that iniquitous phrase 'notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act.' When the first payment came to the attention of the late Auditor General he did not think that Mr. Gobeil, the deputy minister, should act on arbitrations and draw special pay, unless he had been appointed for that purpose by order in council. Mr. Gobeil, who was of course an interested party, fought his own case, and he thought because of the words 'notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Civil Service Act' being inserted in the vote it was perfectly legal he should draw the pay when he did the work. The Auditor General pointed out that the proviso was inserted to cover say, over age in the case of a person the government desired to make a clerk, or, the case of a person who has not passed an examination, but that it did not apply to the case of a deputy minister drawing extra pay. The Auditor General held strongly that the proviso did not cover a case where you could take a general vote for any department, and that the officers of the department from the deputy down could mingle in arbitrations in connection with their own departmental matters and draw pay for so doing. I believe that the contention of the Auditor General is perfectly right in that respect. But whether it be legally right for Mr. Gobeil to draw this money or not, there is a phase of the case which is more important than the legal aspect. I notice that Mr. Gobeil fought the Auditor General for about 13 months on the point, and that the new Auditor General leaves the contest sweating at every pore somewhere about the latter part of January, 1905, with the point still unadjusted. Now, even though it may be technically legal, it is a very reprehensible principle to allow any deputy minister or any superior officer in any department, under cover of a general vote, to act as arbitrator and draw pay for it unless he be specially authorized thereto by order in council. I call that to the attention of the Minister of Public Works. I believe that such a system will have the effect of disorganizing the whole civil service if it is permitted. If one superior officer can do it and add $400 or $800 to his salary, why cannot every other superior officer in every other department claim from his minister the right to do the same? Besides, it connects the officers with disputes in his department in which he had not better mingle. These had better be referred to arbitrators who would not have the special interest in them that the officer in the department has.

Mr. HYMAN. It is quite true that there is a vote in the estimates providing for the payment of arbitrators, a vote which I found there when I came into the department. The reason given for the vote was this, that there are numerous cases involving disputes between contractors and officers of the department, the settlement of which sometimes takes a great deal of time; and the officers of the department, other than those concerned in the dispute, were thought probably the best persons to thoroughly investigate all the details. This vote has been used for the purpose of paying for the overtime of certain officers of the department who act as a board of arbitration. If that board had not been in existence, some of these cases would have been referred to the courts at a very large expense to the department, and I question very much if the public interest would have been as well served in that way as it has been under the conditions that exist. There are, I believe, four officers on the board—the deputy minister, the chief engineer, the chief architect and one of the other chief technical officers. I can only say that my experience of the working of the board has been that it is decidedly in the public interest. They have gone most carefully into their work, which of necessity has to be done after hours. It cannot be done during the working hours of the department, otherwise each of these officers would have to be absent from his other duties, which is an impossibility. I am including in the estimates of this year an item of this character, and when it coms before the House I shall be glad to give all the details of the work, which I have not before me at the present time.

Mr. LENNOX. I think this is a very good time to call the attention of the House to this question of arbitration. The evil is becoming epidemic; it seems to pervade almost every branch of the government service. We have had an abuse of the judiciary in connection with it—a flagrant abuse. It was said last session that that that abuse would cease, but it has not ceased. We were promised that we would no longer have judges acting as arbitrators. The policy we have been endeavouring to adopt is that we shall expropriate all the time and services of these gentlemen in the public service in return for the salaries we pay them. We understood that to be the case with the judges, but we find that they have a divided allegiance all the time—that they serve the country for their judicial salary, but take up arbitrations on the side. The officer we are discussing receives a salary of $4,000. That may or may not be enough. If it is not enough, let us know it, and pay him more; but let it be understood that he is to devote his whole time to the service of the country. The argument of the minister may sound very plausible. He says that these services are rendered when the officer is consuming the midnight oil—that it is overtime work. But if he is paid a salary for devoting his entire energies to the service of the country, do not pile any more work upon him; let him rest during the hours usually devoted to rest. He cannot efficiently perform his duties as arbitrator and be fit to perform his regular official duties the next day. I venture to say that this is a pernicious practice which is being developed in the departments, of allowing officers to act as arbitrators, and it should cease. In this connection I may say that even the cabinet ministers are not contented to confine themselves to their duties as such, and to give their whole time to the service of the country. It is time that we had it understood clearly and distinctly that we are prepared to pay enough, directly, squarely and openly, for the services of judges, ministers of the Crown, deputy heads and other officers of the departments, but that they must confine themselves to these services. We cannot, I think, impress it too strongly on this House that this is a growing abuse, and that effectual measures should be taken to stop it. The opposition have been protesting in vain since 1900 against the introduction of that vague phrase 'notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act,' and it is only now, as we look over the Auditor General's Report that we ascertain to what extent that phraseology is invoked for the purpose of covering up a lot of more than doubtful transactions which should not be sanctioned by the government.

Mr. FOSTER. I do not think the minister's treatment of this matter was adequate. He does not seem to realize how far this kind of thing may go if it is allowed to continue. I had hoped that we would say that it had been tried, but that he had come to the conclusion that it was not wise to continue it. Look at the state of things. The minister must rely upon his deputy for advice. They come together, the estimates are brought down for the different branches of the service, and the appropriations are decided upon. The minister is the responsible head and under him his deputy supervises the work. Payments are made out according to the advice of the deputy minister, concurred in by the minister, after proper supervision by architects, foremen and so on. There comes a point when the minister decides what is to be paid. But the contractor does not agree in that decision, and the deputy head is called upon to arbitrate. Well, the very fact that the deputy head is in a position to add $400 to his salary in this way shows the folly of the practice. That is a position into which you should not put your officer. You should pay your officer for his legitimate work; and if he attends to it, he will have all he can do and have no more time left for rest and recreation than he ought to have. But if you are going to distract his attention and distribute his efforts in this way, you are not going to get the full value of his services. The minister says it would require more time and expense to have these disputes arbitrated in another way. Even so, it would be better to take the longer time and incur the greater expense and relieve your own official of duties he ought not to have to perform.

Mr. HYMAN. I would like to explain the way in which this arbitration works. In the first place, there can be no arbitration without the sanction of the minister. When there is a dispute between a technical officer of the department, such as the chief architect, and a contractor, it comes before the minister. There is no way in which the minister can make himself better informed than by having his deputy act in conjunction with the technical officer who has the particular work in charge.

Mr. LANCASTER. Why is he paid extra ?

Mr. HYMAN. I shall explain why. When there is a dispute between a contractor and a technical officer, the matter is brought to the attention of the minister. The minister decides whether it should be investigated by other officers of the department than the technical officer. Should he decide to have an arbitration then the board has power to send for witnesses and obtain information which the minister could not very well otherwise obtain. The reason why extra pay is given is because the Department of Public Works cannot very well have practically four of its chief officials absent during office hours. Then the report of the arbitration comes before the minister, and the minister is responsible for whatever recommendation he may make.

Mr. FOSTER. Who are the other arbitrators ?

Mr. HYMAN. The chief architect of the department, the chief engineer of the department, and one of the chief technical officers.

Mr. FOSTER. Are they paid extra ?

Mr. HYMAN. Yes. I have always taken into consideration the time they have spent on these arbitrations and asked that a certain amount be paid these officers for their work.

Mr. FOSTER. Then it is three times as bad as I thought it was.

Mr. HYMAN. I do not agree with the hon. gentleman. I am sure, from the way the matter has worked out and the information obtained by the minister, it is distinctly in the public interest.

Mr. OSLER. How much were they paid last year ?

Mr. HYMAN. As this discussion came up incidentally on Mr. Gobeil's salary, I have not the information asked for.

Mr. LANCASTER. Do I understand that these are claims made against the government which are arbitrated in this way ?

Mr. HYMAN. It is not always a question of claims, but often of interpretations. In the many contracts, there are bound to arise disputes between the technical officer of the department and the man doing the work.

Mr. LANCASTER. There must be two parties to the dispute. The contractor is one, who is the other.

Mr. HYMAN. The government.

Mr. LANCASTER. Then you have a deputy minister, before whom come any number of claims against the government, on which he has to report, and you put him in this position that he knows that if he resists those claims, he will be appointed to arbitrate on them and in this way be paid special fees in addition to his salary. We are all human. I do not think any deputy minister should be put in this position. It seems to me that the matter only needs to be stated to win the unanimous vote of this House—perhaps excepting the cabinet—condemning this system.

Mr. HAGGART. The principle involved in this matter was threshed out long ago, and I had not supposed that there was in existence such a board as the Minister of Public Works has mentioned. When Mr. Page was the Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals, the same extraordinary system existed. A contractor might have his quantities certified to by the deputy minister. But, not being satisfied, he would make application for a reference to arbitration. The case was then referred to the arbitration of Mr. Page alone. But the anomaly was that he sat in review of the judgment which he had previously given in the case in the course of his regular departmental duties. I think that is a bad principle altogether. It was proved to be a bad principle and was condemned in the case of Mr. Page. It was thought to be an anomaly which ought not to exist. And judging of the thing from the statement of the Minister of Public Works himself, it seems to me that no such arbitration should continue. If contractors have claims against the government either for wrong measurements or for any other reasons, they should not go to the same man who has already given judgment, to have him revise that judgment.

Mr. FOWLER. I would ask the Minister of Public Works if the finding of this court of arbitration as he calls it—or rather, miscalls it—is final, or whether it is revised by the minister, and if the minister is final arbitrator ?

Mr. HYMAN. The finding of the arbitration is always sent to the minister. It is not final until it is passed by the minister—in fact, it is not final then, because it must go to the council, and after that, to the House.

Mr. FOWLER. How can you call this an arbitration when it is simply an investigation ? The term 'arbitration' is used as an excuse, as a cloak under which you pay these men for services more than they ought to be paid.

Mr. HYMAN. The hon. gentleman is stating the case most extremely. This is not a cloak or an excuse for anything ; it is simply a method adopted by the Department of Public Works and thought to be in the best interest of the public. When matters of this kind arise between the technical officers and some one doing work for the department, it goes to the minister in order that he may become conversant with all the details. The board of arbitrations and awards, with its power to cite witnesses and examine them under rules enables the minister to become thoroughly conversant with the matter before passing upon it.

Mr. FOWLER. Then, this so called arbitration is simply an investigation not an arbitration at all, and it is a misuse of the term to use it in that connection.

Mr. FOSTER. It should not be paid out of that vote.

Mr. FOWLER. The vote does not cover investigations but only arbitrations, and it is only an investigation of which the minister speaks. Such investigations should be carried on by the public officers under their regular salaries, and the minister, I submit, has no right to use this money in this way to pay these officials extra salary.

Mr. FOSTER. I will read the vouchers—

Mr. HYMAN. Would not the hon. gentleman wait until a vote for this service is up, and then I will have full information about it ?

Mr. FOSTER. This will be a piece of information for the minister.

Arbitrations and awards, including payments authorized notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Civil Service Act, $5,000.

That is from the Supply Bill. All this is for what is known as arbitration and award.

We are told now that it is not arbitration and award——

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The point is an important one and deserves discussion, but it does not come properly under this item as the minister pointed out. He has an item covering this item and when that is before the House the whole subject can be discussed.

Mr. FOSTER. And it may not come up before the tail-end of the session.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No fear of that.

At six o'clock, committee took recess.

After Recess.

Committee resumed at eight o'clock.

Department of Public Works—
Salaries.. .. ..$42,187 50
Contingencies.. .. .. 11,250 00

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Before the resolution passes I would like to understand a little better the policy of the government with regard to such matters as those we have just been discussing. It appears that the deputy minister of Public Works has acted in an investigation, or arbitration—I do not know what is the proper term to apply to it; and he has received the sum of $400 in one instance, or more than one instance, and $500 in another. Now that is either a matter which is connected with and should form part of the duties of his department, or it is a matter altogether outside of his duties. If it is a matter which is connected with and forms part of the duties of his department, it is unnecessary to say that he should receive no additional remuneration beyond the amount of his salary as deputy minister of Public Works. As I understand it, the Minister of Public Works takes the ground that it is outside of and apart from the duties of his office. Well, then, it would be convenient for us to understand what the policy of the government is in connection with such matters. I have under my hand a reply of the Postmaster General, who states :

Mr. H. D. Talbot, formerly postmaster at Cannington, Ontario, was relieved of his office on January 12, 1906, for the reason that he was, under the name of another man, carrying on a mercantile business in the village in competition with others in the same line of business, though the salary and allowances connected with the post office seemed sufficient to maintain the postmaster.

The salary of the postmaster, if I recollect rightly, was in the vicinity of $1,000. He was removed from his office because he had the temerity to be interested in a business carried on in the name of another person. Well, if the government sees fit to adopt what I should regard as an extreme policy of that kind in connection with the outside service, how does it happen that the same policy is not applied in the inside service to a gentleman who is in receipt of a salary four times as great as that of the postmaster at Cannington, and that this gentleman, the deputy minister should be paid very large sums of money for work altogether apart from the official duties for which he is paid by the public the salary of $4,000 ? It seems to me that if this principle should be applied to the outside service, it should be applied as well to the inside service. If it is competent for a deputy minister to engage in business, or work, outside of and independent of his departmental duties, for what reason do you apply a different principle to men in the outside service, even removing a postmaster because, not in his own name, but in the name of another person, and without any interference whatever with his official duties, he is seeking to eke out what would seem to be rather an insufficient salary which he derives from his position as postmaster ? I must confess that I do not yet understand what the policy of the government is with regard to such matters. Now, I would like to ask the Minister of Public Works in what respect did the act of the postmaster at Cannington create any detriment to the public service ; and if it did create any detriment to the public service, how are you to distinguish that detriment from a similar detriment which in that case must necessarily arise to the public service from the performance by Mr. Gobeil of this work outside the duties which he is called upon to perform under his engagement with the Crown ? What is the policy of the government with regard to both the inside and outside service, and for what reason have they adopted a different rule in the one case from that which they seem to adopt in the other ?

Hon. CHARLES HYMAN (Minister of Public Works). I acknowledge that I fail entirely to see any connection or any possible likeness between the case of the deputy minister of Public Works who is acting upon a board of arbitration on a matter concerning his own department, and the case of the postmaster at Cannington. I understand that the reason of the removal of the postmaster at Cannington was that he was performing duties outside those of his office, performing work which came into competition with others, and work which was outside of his office. I do not know the details of the case; I have no doubt that when the matter is brought before the House the Postmaster General will be prepared to defend his action in that matter. But I can see no similarity between the two cases.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Do I understand the Minister of Public Works to take the position that this work performed by the deputy minister of Public Works is entirely unconnected with those duties ? Which position does he take ?

Mr. HYMAN. The duties which he performed arose from the fact of his being deputy of that department and having special knowledge of the work of the department, which knowledge made him more competent to act in that capacity. I do not say that the duties were entirely outside the Department of Public Works. The hon. gentleman understands my meaning, I am sure. There were technical disputes between officials of another department and those of the Department of Public Works, in the way of contracts or other matters, and the deputy minister of Public Works acted as arbitrator. I think both Mr. Tarte and Mr. Sutherland, when heads of that department asked this House for a vote for this very purpose, a vote to pay officials of the department who were called upon to act as an arbitration committee—the wording of the vote will show what it was for. They acted as an investigating committee for the purpose of investigating these matters as a board, of investigating them, not as deputy minister of Public Works, or as chief engineer, or as chief architect, but as a board composed of gentlemen within the department having knowledge of the matters in dispute. The board acted as ordinary officials of the department with those having claims against the department. I repeat that after two years of this system being in force, I have found it work with the best effect. Often matters of this kind are settled and adjudicated upon in the department, instead of their being referred to a court of law outside, which would naturally have far less technical knowledge of the matters in dispute, and be a less competent body to settle them.

Mr. FOSTER. How long has this been going on ?

Mr. HYMAN. I think this is the third year, I think this vote has been three years in the estimates.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not think the minister will relieve himself from difficulty by suggesting that there is another department in which another policy was carried out. This government is supposed to be responsible for a policy of some kind in connection with all the departments so far as that policy relates to similar matters. I suppose that the policy with regard to the outside service would not have been adopted except for some good reason, and I am bound to say I have not received much assistance from the Minister of Public Works thus far. I presume that the cabinet in adopting a principle must have had some reason in their mind, and I think they should be able to announce that reason to the House at the present time, if not through the mouth of the Minister of Public Works, through the mouth of some one else. It is idle to tell me that there is another department. I know there is another department. There should be one policy upon which the government should act in respect to matters of this kind in all the departments. What I respectfully ventured to inquire was, what detriment does the public service sustain by the act of the postmaster at Cannington which it does not sustain by the act of the deputy minister of Public Works ; and again I have no assistance whatever from my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works. The hon. gentleman says that it is very plain—that it is exceedingly plain. He says that his officer does not perform these duties as Deputy Minister of Public Works. Well then he is permitted to go outside and engage in an occupation which does not form part of his official duty. That seems to me to follow logically from what the hon. gentleman said. I do not know whether he will agree with me or whether he understands his own words in that way.

Mr. HYMAN. I understand the words but I do not understand the similarity between the two matters. I may be very stupid, I know, but I do not.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The hon. gentleman seems to be dense.

Mr. HYMAN. Very dense indeed.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. He seems to be remarkably dense. The difference is that one has to do with the Post Office Department and the other with the Department of Public Works. There is that difference but I do not see that there is any great difference outside of that.

Mr. HYMAN. There is some.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Well, the hon. gentleman has not made it very plain to us so far. He admits that the deputy minister of Public Works is paid $4,000 a year for performing his duty as deputy. He says that he does not do this work as deputy, that this is work altogether outside of the performance of his duty as deputy. He is permitted then to engage in outside work or an outside occupation. What difference is there between the case of the postmaster of Cannington, and the case of the Deputy Minister of Public Works ? In one case a man carries on, without any interference with his official duties, a business in the name of another person at Cannington. Upon the premises with which I started he performs his duties as postmaster at Cannington satisfactorily to the public. The ground assigned for his removal was that he was engaging in business in the name of another person. He performs his service to the country well. The Deputy Minister of Public Works performs his service to the country well. The one is paid a salary of $1,000 a year and the other is paid a salary of $4,000 a year. One of them is a postmaster and he supplements his salary by engaging in business in the name of another person. The other is permitted to make $1,000 or $1,500 a year extra.

Mr. HYMAN. I do not think he makes that much; I think the hon. gentleman is overstating the amount.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not say that he makes that much. How much does the minister say ?

Mr. HYMAN. I have not the details. I have promised the committee all the details when the matter comes up.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If I am in error in regard to the figures I do not wish to insist upon the amount. My hon. friend beside me gave one case in which he received $400 and another case in which he received $500.

Mr. FOSTER. That is right.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not know whether that is correct or not. I mention $1,500 or $1,000. I withdraw the $1,500 if I am in error. However, it does not make much difference as to the amount; it is the question of principle I am discussing. The hon. Minister of Public Works has pointed out with a great deal of seriousness that one question occurred in the department of the Postmaster General and that the other occurred in his own department. It does not seem after all that that fact affects the question or the general principle as to which I am endeavouring to ascertain the policy of the government. I am bound to say still, notwithstanding the vague statement of the hon. Minister of Public Works, that I am not very much enlightened as to the policy of the government.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I do not think that my hon. friend (Mr. R. L. Borden) has exerted his powers of discrimination at all because otherwise he would have found readily the answer which he is endeavouring to get. I would not think of discussing at this moment the Postmaster General's Department; it will come up in a few minutes, but I think I can assign the reason why the postmaster at Cannington was dismissed. My hon. friend knows that in the country post offices the salaries generally are not very large. The post office is given to a trader sometimes and there is great rivalry between traders and traders. Sometimes one, who, in addition to his own business, keeps the post office, is very apt to create some resentment in his own community and strong exception is taken to this fact that the postmaster will carry on with the business of his office another business. If the salary is ample to recompense the postmaster for the performance of his duties dismissal will sometimes take place. But sometimes a man will get $40 or $50 or $100 under which circumstances he is allowed to carry on some other business. Something of that kind was taking place in Cannington. It was supposed by his neighbours that the salary of the postmaster was ample to command all his time and that he should not be permitted therefore to carry on another business. That was the whole reason for his removal. It is a reason which is not new to this House, it has been heard of more than once, and therefore, when we come to the discussion of the Postmaster General's estimates, we may have the reason given why this postmaster was dismissed. There is no parity at all between this case and the case which is mentioned. The case which is mentioned is a different one. I do not know whether this policy was initiated by my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works or by his predecessor, but at all events the Minister of Public Works has initiated a new policy; that is to say the policy of having a board of his own officers to investigate claims which are in dispute in his department. It is a matter of notoriety, of common knowledge, that the adjustment of accounts in all the great spending departments of the government is always a subject of controversy. The proper officer will pass upon an account. It may be that the architect or the deputy minister himself will pass upon an account. Then, the creditor of the government is not satisfied with the judgment of the officer. He appeals to the Minister. The Minister, instead of dealing himself at once with the creditor, has thought it advisable—and there is a good deal in that policy—of having a board of his own officers to look over the account, to look into the matters in dispute and to make a report to him as to how they stand. This, I think, it will be admitted, is a wise policy. There is only one thing as to which there may be some ground for dispute or contention. Whether or not the officers who are called upon to perform these duties should be remunerated or not may be open to question. That is the only point and in my judgment it is a subject, and a proper subject, for discussion. I do not pass any judgment upon it at this moment. It is a purely departmental matter, but, at all events objection has been raised against the policy of remunerating these officers and there is a good deal to be said in favour of the point taken by hon. gentlemen on the other side. As I said I am not prepared to pass any judgment upon it. But, it seems to me that this discussion is altogether premature.

Mr. FOSTER. No.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes, and I will tell my hon. friend why. My hon. friend the Minister of Public Works has, as he informs me, in these very estimates we are discussing, an item to provide for the remuneration of this board. This discussion will come up properly when we discuss that item. The remuneration which is to be paid to the deputy minister, as to which exception has been taken by my hon. friends opposite, cannot be granted out of anything which is to be voted at this moment under the resolution under discussion. If it is to be paid at all it must be paid only out of the vote which is asked for that particular purpose, the item will come up later on and then we can have a discussion upon this whole question. If the committee refuses to pass this special item, Mr. Gobeil will have to perform these duties without extra remuneration. Under the circumstances the present discussion is altogether premature. The Minister himself says : I am not prepared to discuss the item at this moment ; I have not the information you ask for. You ask me how much has been paid to Mr. Gobeil and I cannot say, but I will have the information at the proper time.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. My right hon. friend the Prime Minister began by saying that he would make the matter extremely clear and he has ended up by making it extremely hazy.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No, you will see the difference.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I venture to say that the facts are not at all as he states them. He describes the duties to be the duties of a board of investigation performed by officers of the department. The Minister of Public Works takes issue with the Prime Minister. He tells us that Mr. Gobeil was not performing these duties as deputy minister of Public Works. The Prime Minister says that he was. The minister says that this is a board of investigation outside of the business of the department.

Mr. HYMAN. Therefore he is one of the board.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The Prime Minister and the Minister of Public Works will have to settle their difference of opinion as to that between themselves. I tell the Prime Minister that if these gentlemen are doing this work as officers of the department, it is my humble opinion a misuse of public money to have paid them for this work. Under what statute is any bonus of this kind allowed to the deputy Minister of Public Works for the performance of this duty ? I do not know of any, and I have not heard of any.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I will tell my hon. friend in a moment.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I am sorry the Prime Minister did not tell us before when he undertook to make the matter so extremely plain. As I understood the right hon. gentleman, the reason the postmaster at Cannington was not permitted to carry on business was that he came into competition with other people.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I did not say that.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If that is not the meaning of what the Prime Minister said, then I must plead, as the Minister of Public Works did, that I am very dense this evening. If that is a good reason in the case of the Cannington postmaster why is it not a good reason in the case of the deputy Minister of Public Works ? When he undertakes these arbitrations is he not entering into competition with people who have not a four thousand dollar salary. If the Cannington postmaster is not allowed to supplement his somewhat meagre salary because he entered into competition with other people, then why do you not prevent the Deputy Minister of Public Works with his salary of $4,000 from entering into competition with people who are no doubt just as competent to perform this work as he is. The Prime Minister has certainly not made the matter abundantly clear. I repeat, that, from the Prime Minister's own statement, there was no justification whatever for paying the Deputy Minister of Public Works one single dollar for his services.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I am sorry I did not make myself clear, but I am afraid my hon. friend is not a very willing pupil.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. It is the teacher's fault.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. This money was paid to Mr. Gobeil under the Supply Act voted last session and the two previous sessions. This is not found in the statute which defines the duty of the deputy Minister of Public Works, but it is found in the Supply Act in which an item was introduced for the very purpose—

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Will the right hon. gentleman read the item to which he refers.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. There is a similar item provided in this years estimates, and when we come to it, it will be a legitimate subject for discussion as to whether or not officials should receive special payment for these duties. At page 57 of the estimates will be found the item : Miscellaneous : Arbitrations and awards; including payments authorized notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Civil Service Act, $5,000. When we come to that item it will be a proper subject for discussion. For my part I say frankly that there is a good deal to be said in favour of the view taken by the other side that the officers should be called upon by the minister for all the services they can be called upon to discharge without special remuneration being given. The minister has reason to believe there may be exceptions to every rule, and this may be a proper exception.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. In regard to that item from the estimates, I thought the right hon. gentleman had long ago admitted that this was neither an arbitration nor an award, but an investigation by the officers of the Public Works Department.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. That matters not.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Well, if it matters not, you could apply this $5,000 to anything and it is left entirely to the sweet fancy of the Minister of Public Works. Both the Prime Minister and the Minister of Public Works seem to agree that this is absolutely out of the pale of arbitrations and awards, and therefore I repeat that there is no authority, statutory or otherwise, which justifies this absolute misuse of public money.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I admit that the expression 'arbitrations and awards' is not proper.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If the expression in the Supply Bill is not proper then the appropriation has been misused.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. When the matter was brought up in the House explanation might have been asked as to that.

Mr. FOSTER. I venture to say there was not a syllable uttered in this House which would lead any one to believe that the purpose of that vote was to pay the deputy minister or the chief architect or any other of these officers.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The discussion may have been insufficient. At all events the same vote is in the estimates this year and there is now plenty of notice and we shall have a proper discussion on it.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What about the question of competition ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. We can discuss that question then.

Mr. OSLER. The Prime Minister emhpasizes his opinion that this is not the proper time to discuss this question, but our experience in the House is that these items that are a little delicate are brought in at the end of the session when everyone is weary and then there is no chance of discussing them. I say this is the proper time to discuss such a question. The Prime Minister says there is no analogy between this case and the case of the postmaster at Cannington who was dismissed because he was competing with other merchants in the town, and thereby causing jealousy as between himself and the other merchants. I say there is an absolute analogy, because while the other merchants were jealous of the postmaster, it is human nature that the other civil servants should be jealous of these other officials in the Public Works Department who are getting very large additions to their salaries for doing very little work.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER: They are doing good work.

Mr. OSLER. Even if they are it is work that belongs to their department, and if there are not enough officials in the department to do the work then others should be engaged.

You have picked out three civil servants to whom you are going to give what may amount to more than double their salaries. I do not say that it has been that, but under these conditions it may amount to that or more. The effect of that must be to cause jealousy and heart-burning on the part of all the other heads of departments in the service, because human nature is as strong among these people as among others. The system may have worked well, but the principle is absolutely and entirely vicious, and if it should continue to be acted upon from year to year, you might ultimately get a condition of affairs under which the deputy heads of the departments might agree with each other that in every case there should be a disagreement with the contractor and a reference to the board of arbitration, with a division of the fees among them. This matter reminds me of an incident which occurred in the days of the old bank of Upper Canada. In the investigation which took place into its affairs it was discovered that the manager of one very important agency of the bank had agreed with the solicitor to pay half the notarial fees on every note that was paid at maturity, the two sharing the fees between them. A similar condition of things might occur in the departments, under an agreement between the deputy heads to refer disputed matters to arbitration, and to share the fees which they would get in addition to their salaries. I do not think anything of this kind has happened. As the Minister of Public Works has said, thus far this system has probably worked well, but I say without any hesitation that it is a vicious one, and in the interest of the civil service and of the public it should not be continued one day longer.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Let me appeal to my hon. friend, who is a business man. My hon. friend says the system is a vicious one. I say it is an excellent one. My hon. friend objects to the payment of these men for the work they do as arbitrators. I admit that there is room for a difference of opinion on that point—not for the reason he gives, that there might be heart-burning or jealousy on the part of other officials, or that there might be collusion between an officer and a contractor, but because the principle has been affirmed here more than once—and there must be strong reasons to justify a departure from it—that a man in the civil service should give all his time to his duties without any extra remuneration. That is a right principle, and I say at once that it will take strong argument to convince me that there should be an exception to it. But, I say again, this is not the time to discuss this principle. At present the question before us is the vote for the salaries of the deputy minister, architect and other officers of the department. No exception is taken to this vote. The objections raised by my hon. friends opposite are directed to the question whether Mr. Gobeil should receive extra remuneration, and I think the proper time to discuss that will be later on.

Mr. FOSTER. That is a matter of opinion. I prefer to discuss it now, when we have a chance to discuss it. I am quite aware how matters of this kind slip away to a happy hereafter, and we hear no more of them.

Mr. PATERSON. Not when you are around.

Mr. FOSTER. I may not be around at that time. We have had the opinions of two ministers who have not agreed very well. I wonder what will happen when we introduce a third. I understood that there was a well established principle upon which the Postmaster General acted in reference to the Cannington postmaster. I understood that the principle was, not that attention should be paid to the jealousy of some grocer or scrivener because a postmaster was earning a little more than his bread and butter. I did not suppose that was an impelling motive to induce a minister to say whether the postmaster at Cannington should or should not continue to earn his living. I supposed that the reason was this, that a man whose office was sufficient to occupy his whole attention ought to give his whole attention to it. What did the Postmaster General say the other day about that? Was it that John Jones was jealous of the postmaster of Cannington because he sold groceries and infringed on his trade? Not at all. The Postmaster General went straight to the point, he said:

> It is and has always been the policy and the practice of the department to require postmasters to give personal attention to the duties of their offices, and where a post office is sufficiently important to call for the full time and attention of the postmaster, and the salary adequate for his maintenance, it is considered undesirable that he should engage in any other business.

That I think is an intelligible ground, but do not let us base the policy of a department on the fact that John Jones may be jealous of his neighbour because his neighbour infringes a little on his grocery line or his chicken preserve. The Postmaster General hit the nail on the head. This man had enough work to do to attend to his office; his salary was sufficient to pay him for his work, $950 per year, and the Postmaster General decided that he should give his time exclusively to his office or leave it. Apply the same rule to Mr. Gobeil. Will the First Minister say that Mr. Gobeil has not sufficient work as deputy minister to take up his time and attention? There can be only one answer to that question. Then, applying the rule laid down by the Postmaster General, Mr. Gobeil has enough work in his office and gets enough salary, and, therefore, he ought to attend exclusively to his office and leave that outside business alone. I am confident that there was not a man in this House at the time who had the least idea that the vote was one under which you could smuggle a payment to a deputy minister contrary to the Civil Service Act. Had that been known and understood when this vote was passed, there would have been a stiff fight over it. You may contend that you may take a vote for awards and arbitrations and then tack on to it those little words, 'notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act to the contrary,' and then pay any permanent officer in the service whatever you like out of that vote in addition to his salary. I say you cannot do that. I say that before the money could be paid to Mr. Gobeil the vote should have passed by order in council at the very least. It may be that the council had the power by an order to allocate a portion of that vote to a permanent officer, but the minister himself had not that right nor had the department. That is the strong ground which the Auditor General took. He did not pass those two accounts, but reported them to the Treasury Board. Get a supplementary vote, he said, for these gentlemen, and then have the addition made to them by virtue of an order in council. Mr. Gobeil promised to do that, but took good care not to do it. Time slipped by and up to this date he has not implemented his promise to the Auditor General that he would have the matter disposed of by the Treasury Board. The Auditor General did his duty. He sent it to the Treasury Board, and it lies there yet for all I know. But outside of all that, this work is either work that pertains to the duties of the deputy or it does not. If it does, let the deputy minister do the work. And if his salary of $4,000—which is the same as the other deputy ministers get—is not sufficient, let it be increased, but increased in a manner fair and aboveboard, and not surreptitiously in this way. Does the First Minister not remember what took place in this House not so many years ago? What was it that led to the investigation we then had into the civil service? It was this very practice of making overtime payments to civil servants outside their regular salary, and it was just on that point that hon. gentlemen opposite, then in opposition, made their strongest attack on the late government. Now these same gentlemen are slipping again into the civil service in the dark that same miserable, deteriorating, disorganizing and disintegrating method. If the deputy minister and the chief architect and another officer, all of whom are paid good salaries, are to get an extra $500 or $400 every once in awhile, do you think that the rest of the service do not know it? Is not that a temptation to the rest of the service to get some side show which will add a little to their salaries? That cannot fail to be the result, and the service will become disorganized.

Mr. HYMAN. My hon. friend seems to labour under the impression that this matter was smuggled through the House and that the House did not fully understand the vote it was passing. Well, I have the debate on this very item in the Hansard of 1903, which I shall have to inflict on the House:

Arbitrations and awards, including payments authorized notwithstanding anything contrary in the Civil Service Act, $5,000.

The mere fact of the addition of these words 'notwithstanding, &c.,' is tantamount to stating that a portion of the vote will be paid to civil servants who would otherwise not be entitled to receive it. Here is the debate on this item:

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to enable the department to pay the expenses of investigation and necessary arbitration in connection with claims. We find that we can often settle claims by having some of our own officials or outside experts to arbitrate between the parties, and in that way save a great deal of money.

Mr. LANCASTER. What is the reason of this reference to the Civil Service Act ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Some of the officials of the government might be more competent to undertake this work than outsiders, and out of this money we will pay their expenses when they are sent away from headquarters.

Mr. LANCASTER. Extra pay besides their salary ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Hardly extra pay. If these disputes can be settled by our own officials it will be very much cheaper to use them than to engage outsiders.

Mr. BLAIN. Are there any cases pending at the present time ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am sorry there are some claims. These are often small matters, but they give a good deal of trouble. There are continually disputes between the architect, the engineers in charge and the contractors. I am sure that by having an item like this, we shall save a good deal to the country.

Mr. WILSON. Does this cover the commission to investigate ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A small commission will be paid out of this.

Mr. LANCASTER. What is the nature of the dispute ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Questions of constructions of contracts and specifications. My hon. friend will know from experience that difficulties are continually arising, and it saves a great deal of trouble and expense to have these matters amicably settled.

Mr. MONK. If that is not to be a gratuity to the civil service, but merely to cover expenses, when they are employed on investigations, why do you insert the words 'notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Civil Service Act' ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Very often the disputes are left to the decision of a man of experience in another department, and a small allowance would not be out of the way for the trouble and expense.

Mr. MONK. Will this amount of $5,000 be paid to nobody else but civil servants ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Occasionally we may go outside the service. The contractor might think that a government employee was biassed, but we find it less expensive to employ a civil servant when the contractor will consent.

Mr. MONK. For my part, although this is a vague vote, I would not object to having it employed in remunerating the civil service if necessary.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have the same vote every year in the Railway Department, and we find that it has worked to advantage.

I simply read this for the purpose of proving that when that vote was discussed in 1903 there was no desire or intention on the part of the then Minister of Public Works to in any way deceive or mystify the House or allow the House to remain under any misunderstanding as to the purpose of the vote. It is very plain in the explanation given by the then Minister of Public Works, and the vote has been used since that time for the purpose indicated. I can only say that the one objectionable feature—one that I have always seen and one the possibility of removing which I will take into serious consideration between now and the time the other vote is taken up—is the question of extra pay. The work of this committee or board has been of a great deal of service to the department. The only objection, I think, is to the extra remuneration.

Mr. FOSTER. If there is extra expense, of course, there is no objection to paying that.

Mr. HYMAN. There is that to be taken into consideration. I will give my best attention to the subject. The vote is now a part of the estimates and must come up. If hon. gentlemen wish to get at it quickly, we shall be very glad to have the other items go through until this one is reached.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not think the matter is so plain as the minister suggests—

Mr. HYMAN. It is on 'Hansard' and I think it was pretty plain.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If the hon. gentleman will let me have 'Hansard' I will look at the passage he quoted. If I caught it correctly as he read it, the suggestion was that one department might use the services of an officer of another department. Outside of that, I think, the only money to be spent was to pay expenses.

Mr. HYMAN. I do not think that is the meaning to be taken out of it, perhaps the hon. gentleman (Mr. R. L. Borden) will read it.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The question was asked the Minister of Public Works of that time first about expenses, and he says that there will be expenses.

Mr. MONK then asks :

If this is not to be a gratuity for the civil service——

That shows how he understood it.

Mr. HYMAN. But read what Mr. Monk said afterwards.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Mr. Monk said :—

If this is not to be a gratuity to the civil service, but merely to cover expenses when they are employed on investigations, why do you insert the words 'notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Civil Service Act' ?

The object of the question is very plain. I draw attention to the answer of the Minister of Public Works of that day as indicating why he thought it necessary—and the only reason why he thought it necessary—to make these payments. He said :—

Very often the disputes are left to the decision of a man of experience in another department, and a small allowance would not be out of the way for the trouble and expense.

Mr. HYMAN. That contemplates a payment.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I venture to think, notwithstanding the dissent of the Minister of Public Works, that what I suggested as the meaning of the explanation would be regarded by most people as the real explanation. However, we will have the question discussed later on, and I do not wish to take up the time of the House further at this time.

Mr. NORTHRUP. I would like to say a word before this question is dropped. As one person is impressed by one idea and another by another idea, I venture to speak because I think the most important point has not been touched upon. I am glad the Minister of Public Works has promised to take the whole matter into his consideration. The point that seems to be important is a simple one. This vote is an amount for arbitrations and awards, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act. We all understand the meaning of these latter words to be that an official in the employ of the government can act as arbitrator notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act. But, from the statement made this afternoon, there is no arbitration. The statement made by the former Minister of Public Works was evidently along the line of arbitration.

Mr. HYMAN. I think the word 'investigation' is used by the then Minister of Public Works in discussing the matter before the House.

Mr. NORTHRUP. 'Investigation and arbitration' are the words used.

Mr. FOSTER. That is not in the vote.

Mr. NORTHRUP. The vote is for 'arbitration and award.' The explanation given by the minister is investigation and arbitration, the investigation being preliminary to the arbitration, I presume. It strikes me that the difficulty the government is in, if the House votes the amount for arbitration and awards notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, is that this would authorize the government only to pay their employees who act as arbitrators and make awards. But, according to the explanation, there has been neither arbitration nor award but merely investigation. It seems to me that the minister would be as much justified in paying a part of this money to the man who blacks his boots as in paying it to a man who carries on an investigation. I think the minister had better consider whether the votes passed by parliament have been applied as voted or whether this money has been used without justification.

Mr. PATERSON. It seems to me that this is in line with the minister seeking the judgment of the heads of the department—

Mr. FOSTER. They are there for that purpose.

Mr. PATERSON. I was about to point out that in the administration of a department questions will necessarily arise, which it is not easy for the minister to settle. Take, for instance, the Customs Department. Some of the business community represents that a certain article should be admitted at twenty-five per cent duty. The collector at that port may demand a duty of thirty per cent. The matter has been reported to the commissioner, and the commissioner might decide the matter one way or the other. But, at times, very nice questions arise, questions in which the commissioner himself would like to have the benefit of consultation and argument with the heads of branches—the head of the checking branch, the Dominion appraiser, and so on. So, we have the board of customs constituted, which meets at intervals. Questions arising may be held for their decisions, questions in which the commissioner himself would like to have their judgment. In old times, the commissioner of customs was paid $2,800 a year as commissioner and $800 as chairman of the board of customs. I changed that when the other changes were made, and an advance was given to the deputy, but the distinction between the two payments was done away with. But I can understand that the Minister of Public Works finds it very useful, in the administration of the affairs of his department, to get the advice of three or four of the leading experts in difficult cases. That is the reason why we have a board of customs, which is provided for by law and which is continually having questions referred to it. When they report a decision upon a point which they may differ with the business community and this goes before the minister, if the minister's judgment coincides with theirs, he signifies his approval and then the decision has the force of law. The minister feels strengthened by the fact that not only has he the judgment of his deputy minister but he has the combined judgment of the other leading men of the department. And I can understand that it must be a benefit to the Minister of Public Works that he should be able to avail himself of the board which he has established. I recognize at the same time that there is a point in what hon. gentlemen opposite say, and in saying that they are performing part of their regular duty. However, it seems to me that there is wisdom in employing the services of your leading expert, as is done in the Department of Customs, to confer with others upon some particular matters, to bring their combined judgment to bear, and to advise the minister after full discussion. It does seem to me that that is in the interest of the public service.

Mr. LANCASTER. I am thankful to the Minister of Customs for strengthenthe argument I made before six o'clock. I find that the Minister of Customs strengthens what we have said on this side of the House, and that the Minister of Customs seems to think it is a help to his department when his employees undertake to disagree among themselves if by so doing they can get extra pay, and he thinks they should get it. Now it strikes me that when we pay civil servants to exercise their judgment upon matters coming within the purview of their department, they should try and exercise a correct judgment, and do it for the salary they are getting, and they should not have the inducement placed before their eyes which the Minister of Customs now clearly shows they have, to disagree among themselves so that they may be called together and asked to give the benefit of their combined wisdom, and obtain additional remuneration for doing so. The Minister of Customs instances several cases in his department which all confirm what I said before six o'clock, and that is, that there is clearly an object, even in his department for his officers to disagree as to what they ought to do in regard to matters brought under their notice. He says they might disagree, and then they would have to be called together to settle their disagreement, and in that case they are supposed to get extra remuneration. Either these officers are competent to perform the work they have to do or they are not; if they are not competent, they should not be employed in the department, if they are competent and are not paid enough salary for performing their duty, they should get an additional salary.

Mr. DERBYSHIRE. Do not lawyers disagree ?

Mr. LANCASTER. I never heard of a statute being passed to make it an object for lawyers to disagree. I can well understand that the Minister of Public Works wants the help of the hon. member for Brockville (Mr. Derbyshire); but I would ask the member for Brockville to cite one instance, either in this parliament or any other legislature, where a statute has been passed providing that officials of a department may disagree among themselves and be called together to act as arbitrators and get a second remuneration therefor. If my hon. friend from Brockville were to propose such a statute, he would be laughed out of the House. I understand from the Minister of Customs that this practice prevails in his department, and that public servants whom we pay a salary for doing the work they are employed to do, may at the same time go outside of their functions, that they may disagree among themselves and be paid an additional salary for settling their disagreements under the guise of arbitrators. That is, in effect, the argument of the Minister of Public Works and the Minister of Customs, and if my hon. friend from Brockville can put it in any better way than that, I hope he will do so and thereby relieve this government of the difficulty in which they have put themselves. I think the people are not satisfied with that kind of thing, they are not satisfied with it, even in Brockville, if they know anything about it. Now I want to repeat again what I said before six o'clock, that the Minister of Public Works is holding out an inducement to Mr. Gobeil, the deputy minister of Public Works, to find fault with contractors on claims and so on, that he and other experts of that department may be called together to settle those claims and get additional remuneration. That is the effect of the policy of this government, if you can call it a policy. They undertake to say that in disputes arising between the contractors and the government, the officials of those departments may take different views upon those questions in order that they may be called together and settle those disputes and be paid additional remuneration therefor. Then the Minister of Customs takes their advice and comes in and says that these things have been done in the interest of the Customs Department, and therefore it is all right. If it is, then I say so much the worse for the Customs Department. If the minister has employees in his department who do not know how to classify goods, and who, by disagreeing as to how goods should be classified and charged for, by simply disagreeing among themselves as to what rates of duty should be charged against the importer, they can get together and get additional remuneration, by settling their disagreement, then I say the sooner the Minister of Customs reorganizes his department the better it will be for the country.

Mr. PATERSON. I may tell the hon. gentleman that I do not propose to reorganize the Customs Department on the lines he suggests, nor do I acknowledge that he is entitled to draw from my remarks any such conclusion as he has just stated. Neither the present Minister of Customs nor his predecessors can be blamed for the policy which at present prevails in the department. My hon. friend is a lawyer, and he ought to know something about the laws that are passed in parliament. Does he not know that parliament passed a statute that there should be a board of customs in the Customs Department ?

Mr. FOSTER. Why, that is not so.

Mr. PATERSON. The hon. gentleman surely knows that, and knows that it has been in operation, I suppose, twenty years or more, and has been administered by every minister at the head of that department. Now the hon. member for Lincoln and Niagara (Mr. Lancaster) without knowing what he is talking about, jumps into this discussion and wants this whole thing done away with. Why, Sir, this statute has been administered by Sir Mackenzie Bowell and by Mr. Wallace before it was administered by myself, and they have found it to be an absolute necessity. Then he talks about the officials agreeing among themselves to disagree, saying that the collector at Montreal may disagree with something, that the question may be sent up to Ottawa and submitted to Mr. McDougald, the commissioner, and then Mr. McDougald will get the other officials together and all these things will take place which his fancy has invented. Why, Sir, the present statute is necessary to the working of the Customs Department, recognized to be so, and has been decreed by the parliament of Canada. Questions are continually coming up of that kind in administering a tariff such as ours, in which there may be diversities of opinion, where one man might think a certain article should come in under a certain range of duty while another man might think it should come in under another. There must be some tribunal to determine these differences of opinion, and the law provides that it should be done by a board of customs who report their decision to the minister, and if he approves of it, then it has the force of law, and is only subject to appeal to the Governor in Council. Therefore, I hope that my hon. friend will not insist upon abolishing the board of customs, but let us keep it a little longer.

Mr. LANCASTER. Does that include Mr. Gobeil and those men in his department ?

Mr. PATERSON. The hon. gentleman is getting away from the question. It does not. But right on that point let me say that the board of customs might be constituted by others than those constituting it, but the minister of the department who is administering it now has, in his judgment, changed some of the members of the board. There used to be assistants brought from different points. It necessitated expense. I did not think their judgment was better than the judgment I have close at hand and therefore we have appointed a board within the department every one of the members of which is right there. They meet together. The commissioner of customs has difficult questions to decide. He will have merchants backed by able lawyers like my hon. friend there, coming up and saying : There is the law; that is the clause which it ought to come under, and the commissioner, not being able to decide off hand, has he to run to the chief clerk of the check department under whom a great many of these things come to get that particular question solved ? Or has he to run to the Dominion Appraiser's branch and ask Mr. Breadner : What do you think about this ? Mr. Wood thinks so and so, the assistant commissioner thinks so and so—what do you think ? That is not the way it is done. You cannot administer a department in that way. But, he takes occasion at stated intervals to summon these officers and they sit down together and determine these questions. I can understand the Minister of Public Works to be in the same position. A question of contract comes up. Whom does he get to adjudicate upon it ? He does not get outsiders. He says : Here are men, experts in their own departments. One is an architect, another has experience in another way and he brings them together in the form of a board and they discuss these questions. There is the question as to whether extra pay should be allowed to these men or not and that is all there is in it.

Mr. FOSTER. May I ask my hon. friend a question and that will settle that part of it? When he calls in his men and when they take these matters up and come to a decision about them does he have a special vote for his deputy 'notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Civil Service Act' and does he use this vote as a gratuity to give to those who perform this work, or is this a regular part of their work for which they get regular pay?

Mr. PATERSON. They do the work without extra pay. A special amount used to be paid to the commissioner of customs. He used to be paid so much as commissioner of customs and so much as chairman of the board of customs, but when the salaries of the deputies were being raised I thought it was better to do away with that and have the sum voted to him as commissioner including the other duty that is placed upon him.

Mr. OSLER. The amount is a fixed amount for the whole year's service? It is not contingent?

Mr. PATERSON. Yes, a fixed amount. The point I lay weight upon is this, and it applies to the Department of Public Works as well as my own, that you can understand that when you are getting the combined judgment of officers, one having knowledge on another point, you are getting something which must be of help to the minister. There is the question in dispute as to whether these officers should be remunerated and my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works himself has said that it is a question which is worthy of consideration.

Mr. BARKER. It seems to me, after listening to the hon. Minister of Customs, that he has pretty well convinced the committee that the system ought to be abolished all around. He tells us that he abolished this very bad system in his own department. He used to pay the commissioner separately for this distinct work, but he abolished that system because he thought it was not a right system and he says the fact that it once existed in his own department is a justification for its going on in the Department of Public Works.

Mr. TAYLOR. Before the item passes I would like to say a word and I will try not to occupy more than half the time occupied by the hon. Minister of Customs who tried to drag a herring across the trail. In the discussion a few minutes ago I understood the right hon. Prime Minister, in answer to the leader of opposition, to say that there was no comparison between the question now under discussion and the discharge of the postmaster at Cannington. He laid it down as the policy of the government that sometimes they do allow postmasters to draw salaries of $25, $50 and $100 and to engage in other businesses but that if they go above a certain amount they must be dismissed. I want to know if it is the policy of the government to dismiss every postmaster who is engaged in mercantile business and who is drawing a salary above $100. In reading the Postmaster General's Report I find postmasters all through the country, some of them drawing much larger salaries than that of the postmaster at Cannington, engaged in mercantile businesses. I want to know if it is the policy of the government that every postmaster who is drawing a salary equal to the postmaster at Cannington is going to be dismissed?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. That is another herring across the trail. We will come to that.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Question, question.

Mr. FOSTER. No, I am afraid I will have to interject another question. After this rather heavy, tragic one this will appear a little more like comedy, but it is important also and it is in the same minister's department. I find that the Auditor General had a bout which was as little successful in bringing a solution as was the preceding one and the controversy shuts off with a pathetic statement by the new auditor on the 18th January, 1906, that he has not yet got an answer to his repeated questions and letters. This has reference to travelling expenses. I take the items from the Auditor General's Report. Mr. Gelinas is, I understand, secretary of the department and not the secretary of the minister?

Mr. HYMAN. No, secretary of the department.

Mr. FOSTER. I find that Mr. Gelinas has a penchant for travelling, but with a very good idea of not over exposing himself too much he makes short trips. All his travelling appears to be done between Ottawa and Montreal excepting that in a few cases he extends his journey from Montreal to the old historic city of Quebec.

The Auditor General says:

> The sum of $1,096.80 is charged as the cost of 28 trips between July 1, 1903, and June 30, 1904; 25 trips being to Montreal and return, and 3 to Montreal and Quebec and return. The time consumed was 82 days or parts of days. The charges for letters, telegrams, telephones, have been entered together each day in gross, at sums which appear too round to represent actual transactions; and they are also much larger than those claimed by any other government officer within the range of my memory.

This was the old Auditor General. His memory ranges back to the time of confederation.

> For 79 days the entries for these services are 3 days at $2.50 2 at $2.75, 31 at $3, 1 at $3.25, 42 at $3.50, 4 at $3.75 5 at $4, 1 at $4.50, total, $265.75.

An admirable crescendo, as the hon. minister will see, all for letters, telegrams and telephones. All of the said letters, I suppose, in the main you may say, coming to this department without any extra charge for postage, all telegrams. I should suppose, coming to his department also 'collect' and as to the telephones, I suppose these would have to be paid for if they were not charged up.

Similarly, the charges for 'cabs and street cars' in Montreal and Quebec are in round sums of unusual size. For 50 days the entries for these services are: 1 day at $2.50, 1 at $3, 1 at $3.25, 19 at $3.50, 2 at $3.75, 17 at $4, 7 at $4.50, 1 at $5, 1 at $5.50.

The 'letters, telegrams and telephones' for these few months total up to $265.75. The 'cab hire and street cars in Montreal and Quebec' for these two months total up to $192.75. Over and above that, Mr. Gelinas charges for cab hire in Ottawa from office to house and station, and from station to house in connection with the above mentioned 28 trips, the sum of $59. His other charges for cab hire in Ottawa during the year amount to $404, the total cab hire for the year being $463. This is much larger than any sum charged before during the whole experience of the Auditor General; and the Tory government was in while he was in power for several years, and it was said they were very extravagant.

Mr. HYMAN. He excepts the ministers.

Mr. FOSTER. Oh, yes, he keeps him within his rank. The Auditor General says:

There should be a statement from Mr. Gelinas that only tariff rates were paid and that the service to the government could not have been efficaciously performed by using the street cars.

And here is a neat little touch:

The directory gives Mr. Gelinas' residence as 582 Lisgar street, only two and a half blocks from the Somerset street car line.

Then, from July 1 to October 1, 1904, a period of four months there were 13 trips from Ottawa and the sum of $464.50 was charged; twelve trips being to Montreal and return and one to Montreal and Quebec and return, the time consumed being 33 days or part of days. The charges for letters, telegrams and telephones' amounted for the 30 days to $110.20 as follows: One day at $3.20, two days at $3.50, three at $4, four at $4.50. The charges for cabs and street cars in Montreal and Quebec amount in 22 days to $84, as follows. One day at $2, two days at $2.50, six at $3.50, five at $4, eight at $4.50. Details are given for $20 additionnal cab hire in Montreal, being twelve trips at $2.50 and one at $2. Mr. Gelinas is a remarkably great traveller, at short distances of course. Then the Auditor General says:

Mr. FOSTER.

Cab hire in Ottawa, July 1 to October 31, 1904—cab hire to and from house and station in connection with trips out of Ottawa amounted to $31.75; other cab hire in Ottawa during the same period, $62.50; total for four months now under consideration, $94.25.

To make a long story short the cab hire of this gentleman for one year was $225.50 and the travelling expenses $794.50. If he keeps on at the rate of the last four months for this current year it will be something like $1,200. Now, it seems in one respect like small business to talk about cab hire.

Mr. HYMAN. I do not think it is small business; I think it is a very serious matter.

Mr. FOSTER. In some respects it is more important than large expenditures. I look through this Auditor General's Report now, and I have looked through it for a great many years, and I think no unprejudiced person can look through it without seeing the tendency there is to unnecessary, extravagant, and useless expenditures. They get the fashion set by those high above them; they are quick to learn and imitate those that are above them. Any way, the word is, spend, spend, spend; and in their little way it is put into practice and it turns out into just such extravagance and indefensible expenditures as that of the secretary of the Public Works Department. He goes down to Montreal and he comes back—has he a pass; are his fares included in that? What in the world does he pay that amount of money for in a trip down to Montreal and back. What cab hire can he possibly use around Montreal, and what street car fares to make up the amounts that he charges.

Mr. MORIN. He is on strike.

Mr. FOSTER. It seems to me he is striking the government mighty hard. I do not think this requires any comment at all; there may be some good reason for it, but upon my word I cannot see it.

Mr. HYMAN. There is no doubt the secretary of the department is called upon very often to go to Montreal and to Quebec. I have not had time to go through the Auditor General's Report, but I have had my attention called to this matter and I have asked Mr. Gelinas to make a full and complete detailed statement. I can only see that he should conform to what ought to be the usages in these matters, which is, that there should be a careful expenditure of public money when he is on public business.

Mr. OSLER. If I were in order I would move that this gentleman's salary should be doubled, because if imitation is the sincerest flattery, then he has flattered his chiefs of the present government to an extent that I am sure these gentlemen appreciate.

Mr. BENNETT. Hear, hear ; get him a private car.

Post Office Department, $280,385.44.

Mr. TAYLOR. Will the Postmaster General explain this increase of $5,000.

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Postmaster General). They are simply the statutory increases with the addition of one first-class clerk and one second-class clerk.

Mr. TAYLOR. Last year the minister asked for $321,779 for the year, and he is asking in the coming nine months for $246,000. If he figures that out he will find there is an increase of $5,327.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. There is an increase on the total vote of $7,100, and that arises in this way :—

Mr. TAYLOR. Excuse me, the $7,000 is for the year, and I am referring to this vote for the nine months.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. That is what misled me ; I did not think of that explanation. The increase of $7,100 arises in this way : there are two additional clerks asked for. Whereas, last year there were 17 first-class clerks provided for, 18 are now asked ; whereas last year there were 41 second-class clerks, 42 are now asked. The two additional clerks amount to $2,700. The statutory increase of $50 a year to 184 clerks amounts to $9,200; one increase of $30 statutory ; 19 of $20, $380; 3 of $10 each, $30; and one at 25 cents a day or $78.25 a year. These items of increase aggregate $12,418.25. Against that is set a deduction of $5,310 which arises from the difference between the salaries of certain clerkships which became vacant and the salaries of persons appointed or promoted at lower salaries. So that the total result is an increase of $7,108.25, or, for three fourths of the period, the figure which the hon. gentleman has given. That is the explanation of the increase, and the only item, apart from the statutory increases, is the two clerkships I have referred to.

Mr. FOSTER. Who have been appointed?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. No appointment has been made.

Mr. FOSTER. Why are they necessary ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. Simply from the increased work due to the expansion of the business of the department. The first-class clerk is desired to take special charge of the business of newspaper postage which has grown to very large dimensions and which calls for the attention of one clerk to be devoted practically entirely to it. The work of the second-class clerk will probably be devoted to the postal stores branch, which shows a great increase of work due largely to the establishment of new post offices and new postal routes, particularly in the Northwest.

Mr. BARKER. Has the deputy minister reported that these additional offices are necessary ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. Yes, the deputy minister is responsible for this very estimate.

Mr. BARKER. I asked if he had reported it ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. He has reported it to me.

Mr. FOSTER. Sir William Mulock, I understand, was a pretty hard worker. I imagine that he got along pretty well last year without these two officers, because he attended to the department. Is one or the other necessary because of the change of policy in that respect.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I was not aware that there was any change of policy in that respect. I propose to amend the resolution by adding the following after contingencies :

Including $25 per month to be paid to G. C. Anderson for extra work signing cheques after office hours, and $50 a year to pay W. Cooch for technical work of inspecting letter carriers' boots, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act.

M. R. L. BORDEN. Are these extra clerkships to be filled by promotion from one class to another ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. The intention is to fill them by promotion.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Who is now performing the work which is to be imposed upon the first-class clerk to be appointed ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. There are several, I am not sure as to the exact number, who are working at this newspaper postage work which it is designed to put into the hands of one man.

Mr. INGRAM. The hon. minister has referred to the increase of work in his department necessitating an increased staff. Would not the same cause of increase apply to some of the offices outside of Ottawa ? Is it not a fact that some of these offices are shorthanded by reason of this increase of work, and what is being done to provide for them ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I can only say that whenever any need for extra assistance in any of the outside offices has been pointed out, that extra assistance has been provided.

Mr. OSLER. I ask for information. What are the office hours of the civil service ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. In the Post Office Department from 9.30 to 4.30, with an hour of absence for luncheon.

Mr. OSLER. In ordinary business it would be a fatal mistake to pay clerks extra money for doing work after office hours, and I think it is a wrong principle to introduce into the civil service.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I thoroughly agree with my hon. friend as to the impropriety of awarding in terms anything for extra work after office hours, and, with the permission of the House, I will ask leave to withdraw this proposition in its present shape, with the view of asking in the supplementary estimates for this amount for this man, who well earns it. He has been a clerk in the service for twenty-four or twenty-five years, and he has of necessity to do this work after office hours. He signs fifty or sixty thousand cheques in the course of a year, and it seems to me to be objectionable to provide for his payment by stating in the Supply Bill that it is for extra work after office hours.

Mr. OSLER. If a man who is a trustworthy man has to do this extra work, he should get more pay. I do not think it should be provided for as extra work. A trades union man is tabooed by his fellow-workers and looked on as a 'scab' if he does extra work.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. That does not apply to the $50 a year for W. Cooch for technical work which I understand has been provided for in the Supply Bill for years.

Mr. J. D. REID. What is the amount these two extra clerks are to get?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. The first class, $1,500, and the second class, $1,200—$2,700 together.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What is the reason this work must necessarily be done outside of office hours.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. Otherwise it would be necessary to engage another clerk to do the work. During office hours he is very fully employed. He is the head of one of the branches. He is willing to do this work of signing the cheques after hours for $300 per annum. If he were required to do that during business hours, we would have to employ another clerk who would cost much more than $300.

Department of Trade and Commerce—
Salaries.. .. ..$16,668 75
Contingencies.. .. .. 5,700 00

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. There are but few changes. One third-class clerk promoted to a junior second class, increase $150. Statutory increases $650.

Office of the High Commissioner—
Salaries.. .. ..$ 6,450 00
Contingencies.. .. .. 13,500 00

Mr. OSLER.

Mr. FOSTER. Has there been any change made lately in the scope of this office as regards immigration work?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. If my memory serves me right the High Commissioner has been made a channel of communication between the Interior Department and the Immigration branch in London. That is the only change.

Mr. FOSTER. Was there not some trouble between the High Commissioner's office and Mr. Preston?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Mr. Preston and Mr. Griffith had some serious differences and there was a good deal of correspondence on the subject. About twelve months ago the High Commissioner came to Ottawa and this matter was thoroughly gone into with him. I asked him to investigate it and adjust it in the best way possible and have not heard from him since on the subject.

Department of the Interior—
Salaries.. .. ..$128,224 94
Contingencies.. .. .. 21,500 00

Mr. OLIVER. With regard to the alleged discrepancy between the estimate and the Auditor General's Report, I have to say that the report which was quoted was the report for the year previous to the one mentioned in the estimates. Therefore the comparison did not apply. There was an error in the figures as they appeared in the printed estimates. The number of first-class clerks should have been stated as 18 and the number of second class as 24. Compared with the current year there is an increase of one in the first class and a decrease of one in the second class. This is caused by the promotion of F. Nelson from the second to the first class.

Mr. FOSTER. Was he at the top of his class?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. How many others were at the top of the class?

Mr. OLIVER. The particulars with regard to Mr. Nelson are these: He has been employed in the Interior Department since Nov. 4, 1882. He was appointed to the permanent staff on June 1, 1885. He reached the maximum of the second class on Jan. 1, 1905. He is attached to the registration branch of the department. It is proposed to promote him to the first class with the minimum salary of $1,500 per annum. No increase is therefore caused by his promotion. He passed the necessary promotion examination in 1887.

Mr. TAYLOR. How about the thirty- one?

Mr. OLIVER. That is the same number as in the current year.

Mr. TAYLOR. There are only 25 provided for in the estimates.

Mr. OLIVER. That is another misprint.

Mr. TAYLOR. It is more than a misprint unless we have more at one salary than is stated. You have six at $700, one at $670, two at $662.50, ten at $650, three at $637.50, one at $600 two at $500. You have to put down six more or the Auditor General cannot pay.

Mr. OLIVER. The error is in the first line. It should read 'third-class clerks, seven at $700, six at $650.'

Mr. TAYLOR. Surely after these estimates are printed the minister has some officer in his department who checks them with the manuscript sent to the printer. They should not be laid before the House in a misleading manner.

Mr. OLIVER. The officers have called attention to the error so there will be no longer danger of it being carried through the vote. I can only say that there was an error and that we apologize.

Mr. OSLER. I think it was the members on this side who called attention to the error.

Mr. OLIVER. The resolution is correct, and if passed without any reference, it would have gone through correctly.

Mr. FOSTER. Is the minister able to say whether he drafted any of these clerks for his work in the Northwest during the late provincial elections ?

Mr. OLIVER. No, these were employees in the inside service, and remain in Ottawa.

Geological Survey—salaries, $49,931.25.

Mr. BARR. Perhaps the minister will tell us whether there are any errors in this item.

Mr. OLIVER. I had not expected this item to come up. The director is not present. But I can assure the House that these figures are correct.

Mr. FOSTER. Are there any extraordinary increases ?

Mr. OLIVER. None. There is an addition of a third-class clerk.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. This includes a vote at the rate of $3,000 a year for the director of the survey. I think a vote at the same rate was asked for last year and given. There is still no regularly appointed head of the survey. The position of deputy head and director is filled by Dr. Bell as acting director. I brought this matter to the attention of the minister last year, and I may repeat now very briefly what I said then at great length. Dr. Bell, I believe, has been a good director for the last three or four years, and during that time he has received a salary, I think of $2,400, instead of the regular salary of $3,000 which has always been paid the deputy head of the department, at least for some years. The minister said, last year, I think, that he would deal with this matter soon. We have had the same information from the head of the department for several years. There has been about the same diligence in regard to it as there has been with regard to the tariff—the government were always going to deal with it the next year. Will the minister be good enough to tell us what is the cause of the delay. Though he is technically responsible for the delay, still we recognize that it took place before he assumed his present position. I am discussing the department not the minister, when I ask why this delay occurs. Why is it that the minister comes down this year without a statement conveying any information as to when the position will be filled?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Perhaps I can answer my hon. friend (Mr. R. L. Borden). The present minister is not responsible for the long delay which has occurred in filling this position.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. He accepts responsibility when he takes the office.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Of course. But, perhaps, he is not as familiar with the reasons as myself, because I was in the government before he was. The office has been vacant for three years, if I remember well. The subject was more than once brought to my attention by the former Minister, Mr. Sifton. I am sorry I have to give the explanation at present why the office has not been filled. Everybody acknowledges the very superior merits of Dr. Bell as a scientist—his qualifications in that respect will not be questioned by anybody. But the relations of Dr. Bell with the different members of his staff are not as cordial as they might be. Though Dr. Bell is eminent in his profession, a very superior man as a scientist, perhaps he has not the faculty of managing men which is essential to such a position. Dr. Dawson was eminently successful in that respect. As I have said, from time to time, the question has arisen about filling the office. There were good reasons why Dr. Bell should be called to the position made vacant by the death of Dr. Dawson, but there were reasons on the other hand why that should not be done. The minister has come to a conclusion, I think, after conference with me—but which, before it is made official, I think, should not be given to the House. But in a few days the appointment should be made.

Mr. OSLER. What work, speaking generally is accomplished by the geological survey ?

Mr. OLIVER. The work is largely exploratory. As a result of that work, information as to portions of the country which have not been traversed by the representatives of any other branch of the public service can be given. We have also results from the scientific investigations with regard to all parts of the country, in regard to matters of economic importance, in regions which are not so distant and which are covered by other branches of the public service. It has been alleged against the usefulness of the geological survey that the practical results have not been as important as the expenditure might justify. But it is of the nature of the case that the work of the geological survey must be largely speculative—it is a work for the collection of information. Geology to-day is not an exact science, but it is one toward which information is being continually collected, and in that work the geological survey of Canada has taken some valuable part.

Mr. OSLER. What is the total amount expended?

Mr. OLIVER. The vote this year will be about $100,000.

Mr. OSLER. I think this question ought not to be passed over at the present time in the ordinary way. Canada is in this position to-day that enormous interest is being taken in the development of our minerals and new discoveries are being made. I think the government of Canada for the last 25 years has been absolutely remiss, has been criminally negligent in the conduct of this department. The eyes of the industrial world are now turned towards Canada, not only with regard to our mineral resources, but in regard to many other things. But it must be said that at the present time we know practically nothing about our own country, we have no reports concerning a great part of it. The Geological Department is perhaps just now the most important in the whole government, and we have a man at the head of that department who the government does not think is fit to be at the head of it—not because of his want of knowledge, but because of an incapacity in some respects, perhaps because he is not a good organizer. I say that the government ought to have the very best man to be found in the world at the head of the Geological Department of Canada, I do not care what price they have to pay him. Most of this expenditure we are considering is for clerks in the office at Ottawa, it is not for doing outside work, a very small part of it is for real original work. Now we are just groping along. We have a vast territory, and the people of this country ought to know with some reasonable degree of certainty what it contains. We have no knowledge of it at all; we are drifting along with a man at the head of that department that we pay $2,400 a year. I say that instead of passing this item of $50,000 or $60,000, the government should let it stand over in order that they may reconsider this vote, that they may realize the importance that attaches to this department, and that they may be more liberal in the money they vote for the purpose of acquiring an actual knowledge of the resources of this country so far as scientific men can acquire it. Any other country in the world, with the prospects that Canada has to-day, would have the ablest experts procurable at the head of the Geological Department. We ought to have full and accurate information of the resources in all our enormous territory to the north and to the west. We are doing absolutely nothing to find out the value of the country so far as its geology is concerned, and so far as its mineral wealth is concerned.

Mr. OLIVER. For my part I agree thoroughly with a great deal of what the hon. member (Mr. Osler) has said as to the importance of the Geological Department making a thorough examination into the natural resources of Canada. But I think perhaps he hardly appreciates the amount and value of the work that has already been done, not only in recent years, but for many years past. I think he scarcely appreciates the extent and accuracy of the information that was collected by the Geological Survey Department under the preceding government as well as under the present government. There are in the records of the Geological Department to-day, to quote an expression we have all heard, 'mountains of information' with regard to the geology, the geography and the climate of Canada in all its parts, records which are moulding away in the vaults of the Geological Department. These are all available to the public; anybody who wants them can have them, but apparently the people do not want them, or do not know that they can get them. Every reasonable means has been taken to inform the public that these records are available to them. At any rate, the government takes this opportunity of again making it known to the public that the records are available in the department, that they have been collected for the benefit of the public, and if the public do not choose to avail themselves of that information, neither the Geological Department or the government can be blamed. It is, however, a fact that these records are not distributed free; they are sold at a moderate price. The reason, I take it, that they are sold instead of being distributed gratuitously, is because it was supposed that only those interested in them would care to get them. The charge is a small one, and those really interested in the reports it is supposed would be gald to pay for them. The idea, I presume, was that it was needless to expend large sums in printing reports for free distribution which were of no special value to any one but those who were interested in them. I assume that is the reason the preceding government decided to sell the publications of the Geological Department rather than give them away. At the same time I would be glad to receive a mandate from the House to scatter these reports gratuitously, or to accept any other reasonable suggestion that would secure a more thorough distribution of the literature now lying in the records of the Geological Survey Department. Speaking for myself, I repeat what I said in the beginning, that the government fully appreciates the importance of the work the geological survey has been and is now doing. It was not with any idea of slighting the work that the present estimates were not made larger. These are the main estimates based upon the work of last year, and I hoped that before we brought down the supplementary estimates we would be able to place a statement before the House showing that we had been doing some aggressive work and that we would also have been able to give more explicit information as to the directorship of the survey.

Mr. OSLER. I do not want for a moment to belittle the work that has been done. I know that the late Dr. Dawson did everything that it was possible for one man to do under the conditions then existing. In regard to the statement the hon. minister makes that there are mountains of information in the department which are not made use of, that is one of the things I would complain about because no man has time to look into these enormous reports. I should say that to make use of these reports at all a man should go over them, pick out those things which are interesting and embody them in a short blue-book which would be read by everybody. But, as the hon. minister says, there are enormous volumes, enormous folios of information. It is like looking for a needle in a hay stack for one to go through these volumes and find it. There has been no attempt to distribute shortly and tersely this information so that people can understand what has been the result of all the expenditures of this department. What have we obtained ? I say we have obtained exceedingly little knowledge of our own country and that we have enough before us to make it worth while for this government to spend a very liberal sum of money to get the very best men that can be got to give to the people a knowledge as far as possible of what we have in this country. It has not been done in the past and I know that unless a change in the policy of the department in connection with this matter takes place, it will not be done in the future.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. I am very glad to have the privilege of saying a few words in reference to the books in the geological department in which are stored the mountains of information which the hon. minister has referred to. If the hon. gentleman will turn to the Auditor General's Report, page 15—H, he will find that the amount received for the publications of the geological survey last year was only $675.16, and if he will investigate further he will find that he is paying a man more to collect this $675 than the amount received. When we take into consideration that in the neighbourhood of $130,000 is spent in gathering information from one end of this Dominion to another so as to educate our people in reference to the valuable mines and minerals we have throughout our country I feel confident that the hon. minister, if he considers the best interests of the people, will do away with the charge for these reports which are being sent out. For instance, I have been called upon many times myself to send reports to different parts of the country, and I have in my hand now a bill from the department for reports that I have sent to men in my own riding. My people are specially interested in this geological department and in its work and I think it is unreasonable and unfair that these reports should be lying, as they are and as I know they are, in the cellars of the geological institution rotting practically simply because the people are being taxed if they wish to secure copies of them. I believe there should be a distribution made of these valuable reports. They are most valuable. As my hon. friend from West Toronto (Mr. Osler) has already said in reference to the value of the geological department to the people of Canada, I may say that it is one of the most important departments that there is in the Dominion at the present time, and I am satisfied that sufficient attention has not been paid to that department in the past. I sincerely hope that the government will pay particular attention to that department and see that the mines and minerals of this Dominion are developed to the extent that they are capable of being developed.

I do not wish to prolong the discussion of this item, but I wish to call the attention of the committee to another matter in connection with this department. Possibly it has been referred to here to-night, but I want to ask the hon. Minister of the Interior whether he has appointed Dr Bell to be director of the survey and if not, why he has not appointed Dr Bell ? I sincerely believe there is not a man in the Dominion who is more deserving of the position of director of the geological survey, or as head of any department than is Dr Bell. I want to say to you that I have followed his books for years and I can vouch for the valuable work that he has been doing for the department. I find that in the year 1903-04, $3,200 was voted for the deputy head and director, that in the year 1904-05 $3,500 was voted for the deputy head and director and this year I notice that $3,000 is being asked for the deputy head and director. If the hon. minister will consult the Auditor General's Report as I have, he will find that the deputy head and director has only received $2,400 per annum. I would like to ask the hon. minister what has been done with the extra amount and why the director has not even received the regular statutory increases that are due to him from year to year.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. My hon. friend (Mr. Armstrong) was not in the House a moment ago when this matter was discussed. I stated to the committee, and I am very glad to repeat it to my hon. friend who is a friend of Dr. Bell, as I am myself, that the reason why we have not appointed Dr. Bell to the vacancy is not because Dr. Bell is not quite competent in his profession. Everybody recognizes his great ability as a scientist, but while everybody recognizes the great superiority of Dr. Bell as a geologist, it at the same time has unfortunately been too true that he has not been as successful in the management of the staff as his predecessor was, and for this reason the government have long hesitated whether they should appoint Dr. Bell to that position or call him to another duty. That is the reason and the only reason. According to my reading of the Civil Service Act for an officer of that kind there is no statutory increase.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. May I ask the Prime Minister if this $3,000 that has been voted year after year is to be given to Dr. Bell or whether the $3,000 which is asked to be voted at the present time is to go to Dr. Bell ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The government has decided to make an appointment and it will be made inside of a week.

Mr. COCKSHUTT. I have been very much interested in the discussion that has taken place on this item. I desire to concur in the remarks of my hon. friend from West Toronto (Mr. Osler). I look upon this department as a very important one. I would like to ask the hon. Minister of the Interior whether the geographic department comes under the geological survey. Do they not perform geographical work as well as geological work in this department ?

Mr. OLIVER. The geographical department is not now a part of the geological survey.

Mr. COCKSHUTT. Usually they are connected ; I think they used to be.

Mr. OLIVER. They were at one time.

Mr. COCKSHUTT. I do not know whether there is any department now of that kind ?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes, there is a department in connection with the geographical surveys branch rather than with the geological survey.

Mr. ARMSTRONG.

Mr. COCKSHUTT. The geographic survey and the geological survey are of the utmost importance to a new country like Canada. They constitute the best means of disseminating knowledge amongst the citizens of our natural resources and I quite agree with what has been said that we do not know what we have in this country yet. We have not been apprised of the value of our territory with all its resources, minerals and other valuable deposits that there are in the Dominion of Canada. It seems we are not aware of these until strangers come in from foreign lands and take possession of some of the most valuable of our assets. Then we find that we have something in a particular district. This applies to the recent discoveries in the Cobalt district as well as to other mineral districts discovered in the past. The most valuable mines generally fall into the hands of strangers rather than into the hands of Canadians. This department might very well be enlarged ; it is one of the branches of the service that the House would unite in saying is not up to the standard it should be. There should be a more liberal allowance to the head of the department and a more liberal distribution of the knowledge that is obtained. What is the use of collecting this information if it is not disseminated among our people. It is most desirable that this information should be placed before our citizens in order that they may see where the treasure of our country lies, and that they may develop these rich natural resources if they so desire. I have had some correspondence with Dr. Bell asking for information, I do not know him personally, but so far as I know of him he fills the position admirably. I believe he is a good man, and I would be sorry to see him dispossessed of the position he holds. I do not know whether that is the intention of the government or not. I would like to see his hands, or the hands of some superior man if he can be found strengthened. I would suggest that these valuable reports should be distributed to Canadians free of charge. Free distribution of public documents is the rule in other departments of government, and I do not see why an exception should be made in this case. If necessary a resolution should be moved asking the minister to make a free distribution of these geological reports in the future.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. I wish to emphasize what has been said in regard to Dr. Bell. It would be a most serious draw back to the Geological Department were he removed from its head and I would be very sorry indeed to see it occur. I am quite sure the Prime Minister will see that the words of only a few of the men in the department will not be accepted, for I believe if he investigates he will find that a very large majority of the officials who are engaged under Dr. Bell are sympathetic with him, and are his tried friends.

Mr. OSLER. What has been done of late years in experimenting for oil north of Edmonton ? The late Dr. Dawson was strongly impressed with the probability of valuable oil fields being discovered there. In the early days of this government a boring machine was sent out there but it was so bad that it fell to pieces before it got to the ground, and there was practically no boring done. One or two small borings were attempted, but I think all that machinery is still on the desert in the prairie. I believe that the government should spend a reasonable sum in experimenting for oil in the far north. They have the late Dr. Dawson's reports very strongly pointing to the probability of oil being found in that district.

Mr. OLIVER. The late government is entitled to the credit of having begun the boring for oil north of Edmonton, and their efforts were continued by this government. The boring rig did not fall to pieces. There was one well sunk at Athabaska Landing about 100 miles north of Edmonton, to about 1,700 feet, and another boring was made at Victoria about 80 miles north-east of Edmonton, and a boring made 700 feet No oil was struck in either of these places and then the rig was removed to a point down the Athabacka river 200 miles north of Edmonton, and a boring made 700 feet deep. There, such a heavy flow of gas was struck that it was impossible to continue the boring operations and as the rig was then 200 miles away from Edmonton and down the river, it would not pay to bring it up. That is why the rig was left there and why it is not in use. At present a private company is boring for gas in the city of Edmonton and they are now down over 1,000 feet.

Mr. HENDERSON. They ought not to have to bore as deep as that in Edmonton.

Mr. OLIVER. Perhaps they would not in Halton. It is possible this private company might go to a greater depth if the House would agree to give them some assistance in the matter.

Mr. OSLER. The government did not attempt to bore where Dr. Dawson advised them.

Mr. OLIVER. I beg pardon ; all the boring done by the government was under the direction and advice of Dr. Dawson.

Mr. OSLER. That is years ago.

Mr. OLIVER. Yes. There was boring done at Athabaska Landing, Victoria and Pelican Rapids.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Is it the intention to continue boring with the government rig that is there now ?

Mr. OLIVER. The government rig is at Athabaska and had not been in use for years. Private parties have boring rigs at Edmonton and points on the Athabasca river.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. In reply to what the Prime Minister has suggested in reference to Dr. Bell, while we cannot profess to know anything about the discipline of the department and while we must accept what the Prime Minister has suggested in that regard, nevertheless I think it should be taken into consideration that the government have placed Dr. Bell in a very anomalous position for three or four years by leaving him at the head of the department without the authority which would appertain to his office if he were placed there permanently. I know nothing more likely to cause dissatisfaction and want of discipline than to leave that department as this government has left it for four years. A great deal of consideration should be given by the government to that fact. Dr. Bell could not possibly have the same control over his staff or exercise the same discipline in his department that he could have done if he had been appointed to be permanent head of the department within a reasonable time after the death of the late Dr. Dawson. However, we shall hear further of that.

There is just one thing I would like to say to the Minister of the Interior with regard to the information which is gathered by the staff. I should be sorry to believe that the mountains of information so gathered are to be compared to the mountains of information which on a certain celebrated occasion were laid on the table of this House. If I thought they were not more substantial in their nature, I should favour the abolition of that department. I am speaking, not of that which I know but of that which I am informed when I say that the compilation and arrangement of the information so gathered is not properly carried out. I am not saying this by way of criticism of the officers of the department, but in criticism of the system that has been pursued in the past, and I am not reflecting upon this government more than on previous governments. I understand that there is a great deal of material in the department which is not readily available to the public, or, if it is, there is a good deal of difficulty in getting at it. There are two important features to be considered in connection with this or any similar department. One is the gathering of the information, the ascertaining of certain facts about the physical character of this country. That work must necessarily be done by experts, and it should be done by the very best experts who can be obtained for the purpose. After that point is reached, the work is almost absolutely useless unless the results of it are put into systematic shape and rendered readily available for all the people to whom it may be of use. It is in these two latter respects that the work of the department does not seem to be up to the standard, if the information that comes to me from members of the House who have made themselves familiar with the subject, is reliable.

Mr. FOSTER. I think that one of the best things that could be done to popularize the work of the department would be to get a clever scientific editor and put him to work on these mountains of information. I sympathize with the idea of distribution, but if these geological compilations were put into the channels of free and inconsiderate distribution, I believe that in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred they would be wasted because of their technical nature. But if you will get the right kind of man who understands the practical needs of this country and who will edit this information and put it before the public in the form of popular pamphlets, I would favour the distribution of these pretty widely even if it involved considerable expense. Part of this information is extremely technical, and the great majority of people will not be interested in it, but it is of great use nevertheless. That might go to scientific people, while the other part might be put in the popular form, with illustrations and maps, for distribution to the public. I reiterate what my hon. friend has said, that the government has not done it duty in the last three or four years by the Geological Department. It was the business of the government not to hesitate in appointing a permanent head. Every year they hesitated, they made the department less useful than it would otherwise have been. It was very unfair to Dr. Bell himself. I would not like to be made the principal of a school under conditions which made every teacher under me think he had as good a chance of getting the place as I, and without any authority. It was unfair to keep Dr. Bell in that position for three years. The government should have had the firmness to appoint him at once or else to appoint some one else. The whole department has been rendered less efficient than it would otherwise have been by that delay.

Mr. SAM HUGHES. I suggested to the First Minister a few days ago the advisability of systematizing the work of the different departments in regard to map making. At present there are four or five departments issuing maps. To my mind this whole work could be systematized and better done, to the advantage of all the departments if it were concentrated in one department and under one head. I am not finding fault. This is a suggestion which I made years ago, and which I am encouraged to repeat by the statement made by the Prime Minister a few days ago. I am satisfied that if this were done, it would result in a great saving of labour to the departments and in advantage to the public.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN.

Departments generally—Care and cleaning of departmental buildings, including amount of $100 required to pay for firing noon gun, which amount may be paid to a member of the Civil Service, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $30,000.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The increase of $5,000 is necessitated by the increase in the number of departmental buildings.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Is there any increase in the number of departmental buildings ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes, we have buildings scattered all over the city.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. You include those leased ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes, they must be looked after.

General consulting engineer to Dominion government—
Salaries.. .. ..$ 5,175 00
Contingencies.. .. .. 750 00

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Mr. Schreiber was promoted from the position of deputy minister and chief engineer of railways to the position of consulting engineer.

Board of Civil Service Examiners, salaries and other expenses under the Civil Service Act, including $400 for the secretary and $150 for a clerk, which sum may be paid notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $2,250.

Mr. SAM HUGHES. What is the system followed in these examinations and who are the men who compose the board ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. They are Mr. DeCelles, Mr. Waters, and another gentleman. The papers are collected by a secretary appointed in each city and sent to the examiners.

Governor General's secretary's office—
Salaries.. .. ..$ 8,662 50
Contingencies.. .. .. 14,525 00

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I was asked for information as to the increase and I have the following information from Col. Hanbury Williams. As regards the estimates for contingencies, they include statutory increases, also the four temporary employees of the office, and increased expenditure for stationery and sundries. The amount provided in the main estimates was insufficient during the past two years, and supplementary votes were found necessary. It is not thought possible to reduce the expenditures under these heads during the coming year.

Some resolutions reported.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Will any government business be taken up to-morrow ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 10.50 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

WEDNESDAY, March 21, 1906.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

MEMBER INTRODUCED.

Hon. WILLIAM TEMPLEMAN, member-elect for the electoral district of Victoria, B.C., introduced by Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Ralph Smith.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER moved :

That the name of Mr. Maclean (Lunenburg) be placed on the Public Accounts Committee instead of Mr. Carney.

Motion agreed to.

QUESTIONS.

DREDGING IN ONTARIO.

Mr. BENNETT asked :

1. What amounts, if any, have been paid for dredging in the province of Ontario, from the 1st day of July, 1905, up to the present time, the place where such work was performed, the names of the parties doing such work, and the amount paid therefor.

2. Are there any unpaid amounts due or alleged to be due for dredging ? If so, to whom, what are the amounts, and where was the work performed ?

Hon. CHARLES HYMAN (Minister of Public Works). The information asked is quite voluminous; I will have to ask the hon. gentleman to move for a return.

NATURALIZATION LAWS.

Mr. TAYLOR asked :

1. Has the attention of the government been directed to the following passage in the recent report of Mr. C. V. C. Van Duesen, special examiner of the Department of Justice of the United States, relative to naturalization : 'A new phase in fraud in citizenship involving naturalization has developed since the establishment of the Republic of Cuba and the wonderful development of the farming interests in the Northwest provinces of Canada. It is the dual citizenship maintained by naturalized citizens of the United States, who have taken the oath of allegiance to the Republic of Cuba, but still retain their certificate of United States citizenship, which they are at liberty to use, and undoubtedly have done so whenever their convenience or necessity demands such use. It is conservatively estimated that 50,000 native and naturalized citizens of the United States, chiefly from the border states, have taken up the prolific wheat lands in Manitoba in the last five years, some buying railway lands, but many entering upon government homestead lands as British subjects, while still retaining their certificates of United States citizenship, and exercising such rights when in this country' ?

2. Has the government any, and what, information, upon the subject referred to ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). I thought I had already answered that question. The government has no information on this subject.

NATIONAL TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILWAY.

Mr. CROCKET asked :

1. What portion of the route of the proposed National Transcontinental Railway has been surveyed and located between Winnipeg and Quebec ?

2. What portion of the route, if any, of the proposed National Transcontinental Railway has been surveyed and located between Quebec and Moncton ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) :

1. Quebec to Winnipeg, approximate total distance 1,366 miles, all surveyed, of which 395 miles have been located and advertised for tenders, and 149 miles have been submitted to the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway as first location and the revision of said location is proceeding.

	Miles.	Dist.
From Quebec Bridge westerly..	150	'B'
Vicinity of Hurricinaw River. .	44.5	'C'
Eastward from boundary between Quebec and Ontario..	8	'D'
Westward from boundary between Quebec and Ontario..	59.8	'D'
Vicinity of Red Paint River, northwest of Lake Nipigon..	37.7	'E'
Pelican Lake to a point about 10 miles east of Winnipeg..	244	'F'
	544

2. Moncton to Quebec via Back or Centre route approximate total distance 514 miles, all surveyed, of which 428.7 miles have been submitted to the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway as first location and the revision of said location is proceeding.

	Miles.	Dist.
Quebec Bridge to boundary between New Brunswick and Quebec..	220	'B'
Quebec boundary eastward to Grand Falls..	62	'A'
Plaster Rock, eastward	68	'A'
West of Chipman..	20	'A'
Chipman to Moncton..	58.7	'A'
	428.7

Via St. John or River Route, approximate total distance 531 miles, all surveyed, of which 407 miles have been submitted to the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway as first location and the revision of said location is proceeding.

	Miles.	Dist.
Quebec to boundary between New Brunswick and Quebec.	220	'B'
Along St. John River between Grand Falls and Fredericton.	66.3	'A'
Quebec boundary eastward to Grand Falls..	62	'A'
Chipman to Moncton..	58.7	'A'
	407.0

HOPE ISLAND TIMBER.

Mr. BENNETT asked :

1. What amount of timber of different kinds was removed from the lighthouse reserve on Hope Island by Mr. Manley Chew under permission given to cut thereon ?

2. What amount has been paid by the said Manley Chew therefor ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) :

1. The total amount of hemlock, elm, birch and hemlock booms reported to the department cut was 30,724 feet. The bass wood and cedar is paid for in a lump sum and not by measurement.

2. Mr. Chew has paid $161.75.

WHARF AT DORSET.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES asked :

Is it the intention of the government to construct a wharf at Dorset, on the border of Muskoka and Victoria and Haliburton, on Lake of Bays, during this year ?

Hon. CHAS. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works). Representations have been made to the department as to the necessity for the construction of a wharf at Dorset. There is no vote available. The matter will be given consideration when the estimates are brought down.

COLLINGWOOD DRY DOCK.

Mr. BENNETT asked :

What amount, if any, has been paid to the Collingwood Dry Dock Company for bounty, under the Act for the assistance of dry docks ?

Hon. CHAS. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works). $30,000.

MUTUAL RESERVE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

Mr. T. MARTIN asked :

1. Has the attention of the government been directed to the statement in the public press, that the officials of the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance Company, of New York, have been charged with grand larceny in the first degree, and with forgery in the third degree ?

2. If the government has not already done so, what action do they propose taking in the matter, in the interests of policy-holders in Canada ?

3. Has the government taken any steps to ascertain whether such statements are correct?

4. What opinion has the government on the subject ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER.

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). The government have no information on the subject except that which they obtain through the public press. They assume that the charges will be properly investigated and dealt with in the New York courts. They are not aware of any action which can be taken in Canada in such a matter for the benefit of Canadian policy-holders.

SASKATCHEWAN LAND COMPANY.

Mr. LAKE asked :

1. Has the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company earned the right to purchase the whole, or what proportion, of the 250,000 acres of homestead lands, under their agreement with the government, at $1 per acre ?

2. Have they selected all the lands they are entitled to purchase, and have patents been issued for these lands ?

3. Do these lands become liable to the payment of such taxes as may be legally imposed on surrounding lands owned by private individuals, directly the company has earned the right to purchase them ?

4. Have inspections in regard to the fulfilment of their conditions by the company been regularly carried out ? If so, at what intervals, and what is the date of the last inspection?

5. Has the company completed the selection of the odd numbered sections, the right to which they may have acquired from any railway companies earning land grants ?

6. If not, how many acres have they selected up to the 1st January, 1906, and what portion of these were patented on that date ?

7. How many acres still remain unselected and unpatented by the company ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of Interior) :

1. They have earned the right to purchase 150,000 acres.

2. They have not selected all the lands they are entitled to purchase; patents have been issued for 142,808.75 acres

3. These lands become liable to taxation on transfer to the company.

4. Reports of inspection are dated 22nd December, 1903; 30th September, 1904, and 11th January, 1905.

5. Yes.

6. All selected. 173,573·94 acres patented.

7. None unselected. 27,229·11 acres unpatented.

RECOGNITION OF VOYAGEURS.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES asked:

1. Were the boatmen or voyageurs from Canada to the Nile, under Sir Garnet Wolseley, in the early eighties, given medals or scrip for those services ?

2. Did the Canadian government recognize them in any official way ?

3. Were the boatmen or voyageurs in 1870, under Sir Garnet Wolseley, recognized in any official way by either the British or Canadian governments ?

4. If so, what was the nature of such recognition ?

5. Is it the intention of the government to grant those boatmen or voyageurs, who served on Red River expedition of 1870, scrip or medals for their services ?

Hon. Sir FREDERICK W. BORDEN (Minister of Militia and Defence):

1. They were given the Soudan medal by His Majesty's government. They also received the Khedive's bronze star. They did not receive any scrip.

2. No, except as stated in answer to No. 1.

The balance of the questions I would ask to stand.

DISEASES AMONG ANIMALS.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES asked:

1. Has the Department of Agriculture any record of an outbreak of disease among cattle, sheep, horses, or hogs, in the county of Victoria during the last year ?
2. What was the nature of the said outbreak, if any ?
3. What was the result ?
4. Were any of the farmers paid for the loss of their animals ?
5. If not, why not, if any were lost or destroyed by disease or by order of the government officials ?

Hon. Sir FREDERICK W. BORDEN (for the Minister of Agriculture):

1. Yes.
2. Anthrax was suspected and a veterinary inspector was sent to investigate.
3. No evidence was found pointing to the existence of any of the diseases dealt with under the 'Animal Contagious Diseases Act.'
4. No.
5. No animals were destroyed by order of the veterinary inspector.

POSTMASTER AT CANNINGTON.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES asked:

1. In what business was the late postmaster at Cannington engaged prior to his dismisal ?
2. Was the late postmaster granted an inquiry before being dismissed ?
3. What reports or complaints against him were received by the department ?
4. Who furnished those reports ?

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Postmaster General):

The business which the former postmaster at Cannington was said to have been carrying on was that of a grocer. Different residents of the village complained of the fact that the postmaster should be, as they put it, subsidized by the government against them, and expressed suspicion that their mailable matter did not receive fair treatment in the Cannington post office when supposed to relate to their business affairs. Investigation was made by an inspector who made personal inquiries from the postmaster himself and from other persons, and reported to the department the result of such investigation.

MAIL SERVICE IN PARRY SOUND DISTRICT.

Mr. BENNETT asked:

1. What amount is paid to the courier for carrying mail from North Sequin post office to Missionary Road post office, in the district of Parry Sound ?
2. Who is the contractor, and were tenders called for the service ?
3. What were the receipts of Missionary Road post office last year, or for the past six months?
4. When was Missionary Road post office opened, and at whose request ?

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Postmaster General). Missionary Road is not known to the department as the name of any post office in Canada.

LAKE CECEBE LIGHTHOUSE.

Mr. BENNETT asked :

1. Was a lighthouse constructed by the Department of Marine and Fisheries, or the Public Works Department, near Magnetawan, on the Magnetawan river, district of Parry Sound, last year ?
2. How many tenders were received therefor, if any were asked ?
3. What was the contract price ?
4. Was there a local inspector of the work ? If so, what was his name, and what remuneration was paid to him ?

Rt. Hon. SIR WILFRID LAURIER (for the Minister of Marine and Fisheries).

1. Yes; by the Department of Marine and Fisheries in Lake Cecebe near its debouchement into Magnetawan river.

2. Tenders were not asked. The work was small and it was desirable to push it to completion during the low water of summer. A wooden lighthouse on a cribwork pier was consequently built by day's labour by direction of the minister.

3. There was no contract price, but the total cost of the work was $760.64. Including the cost of the cribwork, foundation, lighthouse tower and supervision of work.

4. Yes, Captain Joseph Mortimer, $3 per day.

PAYMENTS TO WOODS LIMITED.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. What is the total amount paid by the government from the 1st March, 1905, to the 1st March, 1906, to Woods Limited, or to J. W. Woods, on account of rent of buildings in the city of Ottawa ?
2. What is the total amount paid by the same to the same from the 1st July, 1904, to the 1st March, 1906, for flags and awnings ?
3. Is Woods Limited an incorporated company, and who is its president ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works) :

1. $16,340.
2. $3,873.90.
3. The department has no definite information, but presumes that it is. J. W. Woods signs as president.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. What is the total amount paid to date by the government of Canada to Woods Limited, or to J. W. Woods, for goods supplied for the Georgian Bay Canal Survey, since the beginning of said survey, up to 1st March, 1906 ?

2. Were tenders called through the newspapers for said supplies before they were ordered ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works) :

1. $8,279.26.

2. These goods were purchased at different times and in various quantities, in the usual way of purchasing supplies.

RENTAL OF POST OFFICE BOXES.

Mr. BOYCE asked :

1. What are the regulations of the Post Office Department governing the installation of, and rentals received from, post office boxes in cities and towns ?

2. What proportion, if any, of the revenue derived from box rents is received by the postmasters for their own use, where the boxes are installed (a) at the expense of the government ; (b) at the expense of the postmaster ?

3. Have the box fittings in all post office buildings, erected since 1896, been furnished at the expense of the government ? If not, what exceptions are there, and what are the reasons for such exceptions, if any ?

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Postmaster General) :

1 and 2. At post offices where the postmaster and staff are paid fixed salaries, the Post Office Department receives as a part of its revenue the whole amount collected for box rents. At other offices postmasters are allowed fifty per cent of the box rents collected. When boxes are installed at the expense of the postmaster, he is allowed the full amount of rents collected for all such boxes.

3. Yes.

INSPECTION OF CANADIAN RIFLES.

Mr. WORTHINGTON asked :

1. Did Major Pym, or any other imperial officer, come from England at the request of the government, for the purpose of inspecting or reporting on the Ross rifle, or any other arm, or part thereof, of the Canadian service ?

2. If so, was such an inspection held and a report made ?

3. If so, what was the nature of the report ?

4. If no inspection was held, why was it not so held ?

5. Was this officer paid by the Dominion government ? If so, how much, and for what service ?

Hon. Sir FREDERICK W. BORDEN (Minister of Militia and Defence). 1, 2, 3, 4. An officer was applied for on April 28, 1905, by the Department of Militia to assist in the work of inspecting the Ross rifles before delivery. No reply was received from the War Office until some months afterwards when notification was sent to the department that Major Pym had been selected. In the meantime, the work of inspection has been carried on by an inspecting staff under direction of Lieut-Colonel R. Cartwright, A.A.G., for musketry. Major Pym arrived in Canada about March 4, and reported to the Master General of Ordnance at Ottawa. It is expected that he will assume his duties on the inspecting staff at Quebec immediately.

5. This officer will be paid by the Dominion government at the rate of $2,800 per annum.

EMPLOYMENT OF A. G. DUNCAN.

Mr. BOYCE asked :

1. Is A. G. Duncan, of Marksville, St. Joseph's Island, in the employ of the government ?

2. If so, in what capacity, when was he appointed, and at what salary ?

3. Is he entitled to receive for his own use any fees or emoluments in addition to his salary ? If so, what, and is he required to make a return of such ?

4. What are his duties ?

5. Is he required to devote his whole time to the performance of his duties ?

6. What amounts have been paid to him annually (a) for salary ; (b) for expenses ; (c) for fees and emoluments, in addition to his salary, since his appointment ?

7. Is he required to make an annual or other periodical reports ? If so, when was his last report received ?

Hon. Sir FREDERICK W. BORDEN (Minister of Militia and Defence).

1. Yes.

2. April 17, 1899, at a salary of $1,200 per annum.

3. No.

4. As inspector of fisheries, to carry out a general supervision of the enforcement of the Dominion Fishery laws within his district.

5. His services are required to be at all times at the disposal of the department.

6. (a) For salary,—1898-1899, $200 ; 1899-1900, $1,200 ; 1900-1901, $1,200 ; 1901-1902, $1,200 ; 1902-1903, $1,200 ; 1903-1904, $1,200 ; 1904-1905, $1,200. (b) For expenses,—1898-1899, $233.13 ; 1899-1900, $776.62 ; 1900-1901, $292,73 ; 1901-1902, $406 ; 1902-1903, $496.08 ; 1903-1904, $377.10; 1904-1905, $319.86. (c) Nothing.

7. He is required to make an annual report, periodical reports, and reports at all times on matters referred to him or which may arise in his inspectorate. The last report received from him is dated February 9, 1906.

GOVERNMENT DOCK AT SAULT STE. MARIE.

Mr. BOYCE asked :

1. What amount was expended during the year 1905, and up to the 28th February, 1906, upon (a) construction and repairs, and erection of buildings, upon the government dock at Sault Ste. Marie ?

2. Under whose superintendence were such expenditures made, and what was his remuneration ?

3. What buildings, if any, have been erected on the dock, warehouses, coal sheds, and the like ?

4. By whom was the work done ?

5. Were tenders called for the work ? If not, why not ?

6. If the buildings are not completed, what is the estimated cost of completing them ?

7. If the work on the buildings is not being done by contract, upon what terms and what rate of remuneration is the work being done, and what persons or firms, respectively, supply the material required ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works).

1. Repairs, &c., $590; erection of building, $3,727.50.

2. James Penman, inspector. Remuneration, $2.50 per day.

3. A combined waiting room, office and warehouse building.

4. Messrs. Dunlop and Boyd.

5. Yes.

6. Cost of completing building estimated at $4,177.50.

7. Work under contract.

SASKATCHEWAN VALLEY LAND COMPANY.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN asked :

1. Did the government make or cause to be made in or previously to 1902, any valuation of the lands, if any, sold or granted by the Crown that year to the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company, or its assigns ?

2. If so, when, and by whom, was such valuation made ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). No valuation was made.

QU'APPELLE, LONG LAKE AND SASKATCHEWAN RAILWAY.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN asked :

1. Was the order in council, dated 1st August, 1902, relating to the land grant of the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan Railway and Steamboat Company, communicated to that company by the government ?

2. If so, what date was it first communicated to that company ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

1. Yes.

2. August 15, 1902.

HON. A. B. AYLESWORTH.

Mr. BENNETT asked :

Since the appointment of the Honourable A. B. Aylesworth to the position of Postmaster General, in how many actions, causes, matters, or proceedings, has he been engaged as a counsel before a judge or judges appointed by the government of Canada ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). There is no department of the government which is in possession of any information under which an answer could be given to that question.

PORT OF CANSO MEDICAL STAFF.

Mr. DANIEL asked :

1. Has any one been appointed to succeed the late Dr. Brine in the office of supplying medical attendance and medicine to sick fishermen at the Port of Canso, Nova Scotia ?

2. If so, who is the person appointed and at what salary ?

3. Does Dr. McGarry still hold the office of quarantine officer at the Port of Canso, Nova Scotia ?

4. If so, at what salary ?

Hon. Sir FREDERICK BORDEN (Minister of Militia and Defence). The answers to the first two questions are furnished by the Department of Marine and Fisheries. They are :

1. No.

2. Dr. P. A. McGarry was recommended but declined to accept the position at the salary named, which was the same as Dr. Brine received, viz. $280 per annum including all medicine supplied.

The third and fourth questions are answered by the Department of Agriculture and the answer is, No.

STEAM SERVICE BETWEEN PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND AND GREAT BRITAIN.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN asked :

1. How many trips were made during the year 1905 by steamers under contract with the government, between Prince Edward Island and Great Britain ?

2. What are the names of the ships, the dates of the trips, port of call in Great Britain, and the amount of subsidy paid for such trips ?

3. Is it proposed to subsidize steamships on said route next season ? If so, what number of trips, dates and port of call.

Hon. WM. PATERSON (for the Minister of Trade and Commerce) :

1 and 2. No trips were made in 1905.

3. An item has been placed in the Main Estimates to provide for such service —Vide Vote No. 161—but it is yet too early to determine whether it will be expedient to run such trips or whether steamers can reasonably be secured for the purpose.

DREDGING ST. MARY'S RIVER.

Mr. BOYCE asked :

1. What amount was paid by the government during the year 1905 for dredging in St. Mary's River, (a) at the canal and approaches; (b) at the government dock ; (c) in the channel ?

2. To what persons, firms or corporations, respectively, were such amounts paid ?

3. Was the work in each case performed by contract under tender ? If not, under what arrangement ?

4. What prices are paid per yard at the different places, respectively, what dredges were employed and who owned them ?

5. To what depths has the river been dredged, (a) at the canal, both approaches ; (b) at the government dock ; (c) in the channel ?

6. Have any complaints been received from navigators, of the difficulty of access to the government dock by reason of submerged rocks and boulders in the approaches ? If so, from whom were such complaints received, when, and how were they dealt with ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works) :

1, 2, 3, 4 and 5. No expenditure made by this department for dredging in the St. Mary's river, in 1905.

6. Representations have been made by the wharfinger and the Board of Trade of Sault Ste. Marie, and the matter is now under consideration.

DRILL HALL, ST. JOHN, N. B.

Mr. DANIEL asked :

1. Is it the intention of the government to proceed with the erection of a new drill hall in St. John, N.B., this year.

2. If so, on what site ?

3. If it is not the intention of the government to proceed with the erection of such drill hall this summer, at what date does the government propose to proceed with such erection ?

Hon. Sir FREDERICK BORDEN (Minister of Militia and Defence). The matter is under consideration.

TRANSPORTATION COMMISSION.

Mr. BENNETT asked :

When will the report of the transportation commission be printed and distributed ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN Minister of Public Works). I am hurrying up the printers as much as possible and doing all I can to have it completed.

MOTIONS AGREED TO WITHOUT DISCUSSION.

For copies of all letters and documents relating to the establishment of an imperial intelligence service.—Mr. Belcourt.

For copies of all thermograph records of temperatures on ocean steamers in the possession of the government, taken during the season of 1905, stating : (1) where the thermograph was placed in each case, whether in cold storage chambers, cool air chambers, ventilated chambers, unventilated chambers, or on deck or other part of the vessel, exposed only to the natural ocean temperature, and in this latter instance, if liable to be exposed to the sun's rays ; (2) the kind of produce that was stored in the chamber, if any ; (3) date of sailing of steamer, the port from which sailing, name of vessel.—Mr. E. D. Smith.

1. For a return showing the description of all lands in Manitoba and the Northwest, formerly reserved for timber or hay purposes, to which homestead entries have been granted since 1st January, 1905.

2. The date of decisions to open such reservations for settlement.

Mr. BOYCE.

3. The names of applicants, in order of application, on the books of the various agencies and sub-agencies, for each quarter section, at the date when the entry was granted.—Mr. Lake.

For a return showing the number of applications for inspection received at the several land agencies in Manitoba and the Northwest for each month of the years 1904 and 1905, from homesteaders desiring to secure their patents.

2. The number of inspections made monthly from each agency.

3. The number of applications for inspection on file 1st January, 1906, at each agency.—Mr. Lake.

For a return of all valuations made in or previously to the year 1902, of the lands sold or granted in that year to the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company.—Mr. R. L. Borden.

For copies of the contract, together with plans and specifications, between the government and the Dominion Coal Company, for the improvement of Glace Bay Harbour, for public purposes. Also copies of all correspondence, telegrams, memoranda, and representations made by delegates, members of parliament, or any other persons, having reference thereto. Also copies of all accounts furnished to the government for expenditures on Glace Bay Harbour, by the Dominion Coal Company.—Mr. Martin.

For a return showing : How many horses were tested for glanders with mallein in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, respectively, by the officials of this government ; names of owners of horses ; name of official, and date of application in each case ; date when the horses were destroyed, in each case ; date the owners received compensation in each case ; amount received by the respective owners, and the valuation in each case ; the variations of temperature in each case, with the highest and lowest readings ; number of cases quarantined; names of owners, and period of quarantine ; number of cases where re-tested, and the result ; number of cases slaughtered after being re-tested ; compensation paid, names of the owners, and the amount paid to each ; cases where horses were slaughtered after being tested, and the number of post-mortem investigations held, with the result in each case and the names of owners.—Mr. Staples.

For a return showing : How many wrecks there were on the Pacific coast in Canadian waters in 1900, 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904, 1905, and in 1906, up to date, British and foreign ; number of lives lost in each wreck ; the total financial loss in ships and cargoes ; the inquiries made by the government into the causes of such wrecks ; the causes given for such wrecks ; the results of reports made of such investigations, as to hulls or machinery, by the British Columbia inspectors ; the port of registry of each vessel wrecked ; the age of each ship.—Mr. R. Smith.

QUEBEC BRIDGE AND RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. F. D. MONK, (Jacques-Cartier) moved :

For a copy of the last financial statement and balance sheet of the Quebec Bridge and Railway Company.

2. A list of the directors of the company and of its chief officers.

3. A statement of the bonds of the company which have been guaranteed by the government, and which have been negotiated or are pledged.

4. A statement of all moneys paid by the government on account of capital or interest on the said bonds.

He said: This motion calls for information which ought to be in the possession of the House. Under section three of the Act by which we undertook to guarantee over $6,000,000 of bonds for the construction of the Quebec bridge, it was provided that the government would have power to cause at any time an investigation to be made of the books of the company by any officer it might judge fit to depute for that investigation. The government therefore has power at any time to obtain the information asked for by this motion. I think it is urgent at present, in view of the construction of the Transcontinental Railway, in view also of the unfinished condition of the Quebec bridge and on account of the large amount involved by the government guarantee, that we should get that information. Before the motion is put, I would ask permission of the House to amend it by adding after the words 'chief officers,' the words 'and of the shareholders of the company and the amount of shares possessed by each shareholder.'

Amendment agreed to.

Motion as amended agreed to.

SOUTH AFRICAN VOLUNTEERS.

Mr. ANDREW BRODER (Dundas) moved:

That this House would be pleased to learn that the volunteers of the several South African contingents from Canada, suffering total disability, incurred in such service, will receive recognition from their country, as part of that empire on behalf of which they willingly made such sacrifices.

He said: I have brought this matter to the attention of the House three times during the last three sessions. I bring it forward again feeling that it is a matter which ought to have had the attention of the government before this time. When it was first mentioned here the Minister of Militia (Sir Frederick Borden), if I remember rightly, as well as the right hon. Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) left the impression that the subject would at least receive the consideration of the government. The following session it was again brought to the attention of the House and, if it were possible, to make deeper the impression upon the minds of the hon. members to which I have referred, the right hon. Prime Minister and the Minister of Militia did so, giving expression to their intention of looking thoroughly into the matter and dealing with it—as I understood them—on its merits. I need not say that the whole country would naturally look for some recognition, not only by this House, but by the government, of the claims upon us of these men whose acts did more, perhaps, to bring this country to the attention of the world than any other thing that has been done for a long time. This great Dominion has so largely benefited by the efforts of the South African contingents and by the recognition by the people of the empire, not only of the country as a whole, but as individual Canadians, to lay down their lives, if necessary on behalf of the empire. Sir, these men made a personal sacrifice by which this country was largely benefited, and up to this time the country has not recognized in any sense the claims even of those who suffered total disability in the empire's defence. It is scarcely necessary for me to appeal to the appreciation either of the House or the Canadian people on behalf of the men whose claims are set forth in this resolution. I have in my own riding one young man—whose case comes to my mind probably because I am so familiar with it—Trooper Mulloy, a man of more than ordinary ability, an ambitious and intelligent young man, who started out with high aims and a strong purpose of being a man in the world, who saw fit, as a matter of duty, to enrol himself as a South African volunteer, and who, while in the service, lost both eyes. That young man is receiving from the British government 60 cents a day. (I think that in discussing this matter last year I stated this sum at 65 cents a day, but I have learned since that I was in error). There are some who think—some who have even stated—that recognition of the services of these men who might be considered empire volunteers should be left to the imperial authorities. If we look into the matter we shall find that the Canadian government have already committed themselves to the principle that they have a duty in relation to these volunteers, because where it was pointed out that the pay of these men under the rules of the Imperial service would not equal the pay of Canadian volunteers, the government increased that pay to our standard here in Canada. So the principle being admitted, I cannot see why we, as a part of the great empire, should hesitate a moment to act upon that principle in a matter in which our duty is so clear.

It is rather a strange thing that no country in the world, perhaps, has been so slow as Canada has been to recognize the claims of individuals who have not merely risked life and limb in defence of the country, but have suffered disability as a result. I do not wish to appeal to this House in the sense of asking charity on behalf of this man. Not at all, Sir, the appeal is a higher one than that; it is an appeal to our sense of duty to recognize the claim which these men clearly have upon the people of this Dominion. Though I have referred personally to Trooper Mulloy, because I know him personally—for he grew up within a few miles of my own door—and though his is certainly a case which should be recognized, I do not wish to single him out above others. There are men in every province whose claims deserve equal recognition with his; for I do not think there is a province in the Dominion but had the honour of participating by sending some of her sons to fight the battles of the empire in South Africa. That being the case, there should be no hesitation whatever on the part of the government to recognize the claims of these deserving men. I have suggested a comparison with other countries. I do not wish that this country should copy the pension list of the United States. But the action of the United States has a lesson for us. In that country no man who has turned out in defence of his country is neglected by the state. Even those who have the misfortune to become mained or injured in the employ of the government after having been in the army from 1861 to 1865 have been recognized under the pension laws of the United States. The list of pensions in the United States to-day is quite as large as it was two years after the war closed. I do not say that we should go so far as that, but I do say, and I do urge upon the government, that this country should recognize in a tangible and fitting way the claims of those men who have added glory to the name of Canada in the battle fields of the empire.

Now it is all very well for us to sit in our quiet homes and enjoy the benefits which the personal sacrifice of these men has procured us, while we let them live or die as best they can, without receiving any recognition at the country's hands. I think it is high time that something should be done in this matter. I am sure I appeal to a sympathetic House in this regard, and I hope the government will see fit to act, and act promptly on behalf of these men whose claims should have been recognized before this day. I think it is time that we should have at least the opinion of this House in reference to this matter, and I take pleasure in moving this resolution, seconded by my hon friend from Dorchester (Mr. Morin).

Hon. Sir FREDERICK BORDEN (Minister of Militia and Defence). I am sure the House will agree with all that my hon. friend (Mr. Broder) has said about the good results to Canada and to the empire at large from the services rendered by our volunteers in the war in South Africa to which he has so eloquently and pertinently referred. With the sentimental side of the question I think we can all agree, but, Mr. Speaker, there is a business aspect to this question which must not be overlooked. Last year when my hon. friend brought the matter to the attention of the House. I told him that the volunteers who went to South Africa had gone there as British soldiers, that they had made a distinct contract with the British government as to what their treatment should be, namely, that they should be treated as well in every respect as volunteers from Great Britain herself. The government of Canada on behalf of these volunteers accepted those terms; and that being the case, surely we have a right to insist that they should abide by those terms. I stated further, Mr. Speaker, that we had had troubles of our own in Canada, notably the Fenian Raid, the Northwest Rebellion, and other troubles as a result of which Canadians on Canadian soil had been wounded, and some of them had met with total disability. I stated that these men had been pensioned, that their pensions were being paid by the Canadian government. I told him that I had examined carefully the pension list, the amounts of pensions paid for certain disabilities by the Imperial War Office, and the pensions paid for similar disabilities by this government, and that I found them to be practically the same. But I went the length of saying that if, in the case of any of those who were wounded in South Africa, even though a contract had been made, it appeared that there was any very serious discrepancy between the amount they were paid by the British government for those services as pensions, and the amount paid to our volunteers for services in Canada, I would consider whether we might not increase the amount to equal the Canadian amount, just as we did in the case of the pay, as the hon. gentleman has correctly stated. I have looked carefully over the list, and I am unable to see that there is any practical difference between the two rates of pay.

Mr. BRODER. There were some cases that received special recognition, such as Capt. Peters, who received $1,000 per annum.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I looked into that question, and I found a satisfactory answer, although not having the memorandum here at this moment I am not quite prepared to say what it is. But it was an officer, at any rate, of high rank to whom that particular treatment applied, and not a soldier in the ranks. Now it seems to me that the question for this House to consider is whether we should depart from a rule of action laid down for our own volunteers serving in defence of Canadian soil, for the upholding of Canadian authority within Canada, whether, I say, we should treat those who served in South Africa differently from the way we have treated those who have served in Canada. I am not aware that any exception has been taken to the treatment which has been accorded to those volunteers who served in Canada, I am not aware that my hon. friend makes any complaint with regard to that. Surely we are not going to ask this parliament to treat the volunteers who served in South Africa better than we treat those who have served in defence of this country itself. Such being the case, I think I must ask my hon. friend to withdraw his motion, having had an opportunity of placing his views again before the House, as he has done on several occasions. He made one remark with which I agree absolutely. He says that no country in the world has been so slow as Canada to recognize the services of our volunteers who had served, I presume he meant, on the occasion of the Fenian Raids and the North-west Rebellion. So far as the Fenian Raids are concerned, I agree with him entirely, and it remained for the present government to take action shortly after they came into power. It was my great pleasure to be able to take the earliest opportunity of bringing the matter to the attention of the Imperial authorities, as a result of which the Fenian Raid medal was granted. We had in this country men who had served their country for many years as volunteers. We knew that in England a long service medal was granted to her volunteers, but in Canada no recognition of that kind had ever been made. I had the honour to bring that matter to the attention of the Imperial War Office, and we have now the satisfaction of knowing that a long service medal for men who have served in the ranks, and a long service decoration for officers, have been granted, and that hundreds, if not thousands, of our Canadian volunteers are now wearing those medals and decorations. So we have, at any rate, come at last to a sense of our duty in that respect. I have nothing to add, Mr. Speaker, to what I have said. I do not think we are prepared at this moment to admit that it is our duty to treat those who have served the empire in South Africa differently from the way we have treated Canadians who have served the empire on Canadian soil.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Carleton, Ont.). Before the motion is disposed of I would like to say that the terms of the resolution do not seem to be such as would not commend themselves to every member of this House; their application may be another thing. The resolution reads :

> That this House would be pleased to learn that the volunteers of the several South African contingents from Canada, suffering total disability, incurred in such service, will receive recognition from their country, as part of that empire on behalf of which they willingly made such sacrifices.

I would not suppose that the Minister of Militia (Sir Frederick Borden) would have found anything in that resolution which would not commend itself to him. As far as the business aspect of the case is concerned—and to this he has devoted most of his remarks—I think it might fairly be taken into consideration that the men who went from Canada to South Africa were in many cases of a different class from the ordinary rank and file of the British army. They were young men attending colleges, young men attending law schools, studying for the professions, men of a high class, for the most part, who gave up their prospects in life for the purpose of fighting for the empire in South Africa, and it hardly seems to be right to dismiss the subject as the Minister of Militia does, in a word, because these men receive the same pensions that the ordinary rank and file of the British army receive for total disability. I would have thought it possible that the government might have considered this question in a broader and more generous way. The case which has been alluded to by the mover of the resolution is certainly one which will appeal to every one of us. A young man of very great ability, who probably would have distinguished himself in either the professional or public life of this country, went to South Africa, lost the use of both his eyes, is permanently disabled in that way and on his behalf the hon. member (Mr. Broder) has made an appeal by the resolution he has moved to-day. The Minister of Militia (Sir Frederick Borden) has certainly not laid undue stress upon the sentimental side of the case in the remarks he has made, and I repeat that it would seem to me that the consideration to which I have alluded might very well have been taken into account by the government in dealing with the matter that has been brought to the attention of the House.

House divided on motion Mr. Broder.

YEAS :

Messieurs.

Alcorn,	Lancaster,
Ames,	Lefurgey,
Armstrong,	Lewis,
Barker,	Macdonell,
Barr,	Maclean (York, S.),
Bennett,	McCarthy (Calgary),
Bergeron,	McLean (Queen's P.E.I.),
Blain,	Martin (Queen's, P.E.I.),
Borden (Carleton),	Monk,
Boyce,	Morin,
Brabazon,	Northrup,
Broder,	Osler,
Chisholm (Huron),	Paquet,
Christie,	Pringle,
Clements,	Reid (Grenville),
Cochrane,	Roche (Marquette),
Cockshutt,	Schaffner,
Crocket,	Smith (Wentworth),
Daniel,	Sproule,
Elson,	Staples,
Foster,	Stockton,
Ganong,	Taylor,
Gunn,	Walsh,
Haggart,	Ward,
Henderson,	Wilmot,
Herron,
Ingram,

Jackson (Elgin), Kemp, Lake, Lalor, Wilson (Lennox & Addington), Worthington, Wright (Muskoka)—59.

NAYS :

Messieurs.

Adamson, Archambault, Aylesworth, Beauparlant, Béland, Belcourt, Borden (Sir Frederick), Bourassa, Brown, Bureau, Calvert, Campbell, Carney, Carrier, Carvell, Copp, Costigan, Crawford, Cyr, Delisle, Demers, Derbyshire, Desjardins, Devlin, Dubeau, Dugas, Dyment, Finlay, Finlayson, Fitzpatrick, Fortier, Galliher, Gauvreau, German, Girard, Gladu, Grant, Greenway, Harty, Hunt, Hyman, Jackson (Selkirk), Johnston, Kennedy, Knowles, Lachance, Lanctot, Lapointe, Laurence, Laurier (Sir Wilfrid), Laurier (L'Assomption), Lavergne (Drum. & Arth.), Law, LeBlanc, Logan, Loggie, Lovell, Macdonald, Macpherson, McCarthy (Simcoe), McColl, McCool, McCraney, McIntyre, McLennan, Marcile (Bagot), Marcil (Bonaventure), Martin (Wellington), Mayrand, Meigs, Oliver, Pardee, Parmelee, Paterson, Parent, Piché, Pickup, Proulx, Ratz, Reid (Restigouche), Rivet, Ross (Rimouski), Rousseau, Savoie, Schell (Glengarry), Sinclair, Sloan, Smith (Nanaimo), Smith (Oxford), Stewart, Telford, Templeman, Tobin, Turgeon, Turiff, Watson, Zimmerman.—97.

PAIRS :

Messieurs.

Ministerial :	Opposition :
Brodeur,	Lennox,
Caldwell,	Clare,
Emmerson,	Avery,
Ethier,	Leonard,
Fielding,	McLaren,
Geoffrion,	Perley,
Guthrie,	Fowler,
Hall,	Hughes (Victoria),
McKenzie,	Porter,
Miller,	Bland,
Sifton,	Bristol,
Talbot,	Seagram,
Lemieux,	Tisdale,
Fisher,	White, Hon.

Motion negatived.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN.

Mr. CALVERT. The hon. member for Two Mountains (Mr. Ethier) has not voted.

Mr. ETHIER. I am paired with the hon. member for Laval (Mr. Leonard). Had I voted I would have voted against the motion.

MONTREAL TURNPIKE TRUST.

Mr. F. D. MONK (Jacques Cartier) moved :

1. For a return showing the present indebtedness to the Dominion government of the Montreal Turnpike Trust, (a) on capital account ; (b) for arears of interest.

2. The amounts collected at each toll gate belonging to the said Turnpike Trust, during the year ending 31st December, 1905.

3. The amount expended on each section or road division under the control of said Trust, during the said year, ending 31st December, 1905, and the contracts given out during the year, with the name of the contractor, the date and amount involved in each case, the cost of stone supplied, and in each case an indication as to whether tenders for such contracts were called for in the public press.

4. The amount paid out during the said year at each toll gate for salaries to day and night keeper, and all other expenditure at each of the toll gates maintained.

5. The actual indebtedness in detail of the said Trust, outside of its bonds due to the government of Canada.

6. A detailed statement of sums paid out during the year outside of salaries, road maintenance and rent.

He said : The object of this motion is to obtain accurate information as to the financial affairs of the Montreal Turnpike Trust. I have moved a similar motion almost every session since 1896, and I have on many occasions urged upon the government the necessity of appointing a commissioner to investigate the affairs of the trust and to suggest some remedy by which the nuisance of having these toll gates all around the city of Montreal shall be abated. Our late lamented friend, Mr. Prefontaine, who was conversant with the matter, just before his death had admitted the necessity of looking into the affairs of the Montreal Turnpike Trust, and he was desirous of covering by that commission the toll gates in the vicinity of the city of Quebec. As my right hon. friend is aware, I suggested the name of Mr. Kent, who is at present serving on the insurance commission, as a man conversant with the situation around Montreal and quite competent to investigate it. I had also suggested the name of Mr. Alexandre Desmarteau who seemed to be acceptable to Mr. Prefontaine, and I had also suggested the name of Mr. Thomas Trenholme, who is one of the members of the trust. As the Prime Minister is aware, the bonded indebtedness of the Montreal Turnpike Trust to the government, together with accumulated interest, now reaches the sum of over $250,000, and there is no possible prospect of the government ever recovering either the principal or the interest. I repeat that it behooves the government to look into this question and to have the matter investigated in order that that nuisance of long standing; that obsolete toll gate system around Montreal should be abolished. I beg to move this motion seconded by Mr. Blain.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN (South York). I express my sympathy with this motion. Until a few years ago the city of Toronto was surrounded by these toll gates; they were a great obstruction to the development of the city, but the city in some way was able to have them removed. I trust that the city of Montreal will succeed in having these toll gates abolished and I hope that city will set a good example to all the cities of Canada by not creating any permanent franchises within its limits.

Motion agreed to.

DOMINION ELECTIONS ACT, 1900—AMENDMENT.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Carleton, Ont.) moved the second reading of Bill (No. 2) further to amend the Dominion Elections Act, 1900. He said: On the first reading of this Bill I made a brief explanation of it. Should the second reading now carry I propose to move that the Bill be referred to the Select Standing Committee appointed on the motion of the Minister of Justice.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read a second time.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN moved:

That the said Bill be referred to the special committee of seven members appointed on the 16th instant to inquire into the operation of the Acts relating to the election of members to this House, and that the said committee be authorized to consider and report upon the said Bill.

Motion agreed to.

ACT RESPECTING THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN moved the second reading of Bill (No. 3) to further amend the Act respecting the House of Commons. He said: The observations I have just made with regard to Bill (No. 2) are applicable to this Bill.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read a second time.

On motion of Mr. Borden the said Bill was referred to the special committee with the same instructions as with regard to Bill (No. 2).

CRIMINAL CODE AMENDMENT.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN moved second reading of Bill (No. 4) further to amend the Criminal Code, 1892. He said: Mr. Speaker, as I said very little about this Bill at the time of its introduction, I would like to make a few remarks at this stage. In the first place, it proposes to enact that:

The members of the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada are persons holding a judicial office within the meaning of the next preceding section.

The next preceding section of the Criminal Code is one that relates to judges of courts and to members of parliament, and it might be well that I should place that section before the House in order that hon. members may understand what is proposed to be done. Section 131 of the Criminal Code, is as follows:—

Every one is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to fourteen years' imprisonment who,—

(a) holding any judicial office, or being a member of parliament or of a legislature, corruptly accepts or obtains, or agrees to accept, or attempts to obtain for himself or any other person, any money or valuable consideration, office, place, or employment on account of anything already done or omitted, or to be afterwards done or omitted, by him in his judicial capacity, or in his capacity as such member; or

(b) corruptly gives or offers to any such person or to any other person, any such bribe as aforesaid on account of any such act or omission.

It is desirable, I think, that the members of the board of railway commissioners, who are persons holding a judicial as well as administrative office, should be brought within the purview of that section. It may be that in the amendment to the statutes which we are to have before us, that provision has already been adopted.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I think it is a very proper provision.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The next section of the Bill which I am introducing is an amendment to the Criminal Code, section 131-B. It is a very long section, and I will not read it to the House. I believe hon. gentlemen have examined it, and we shall have a discussion of it later. The difficulty with section 131 of the Criminal Code, which concerns the same matter to some extent, is that it simply makes the giving or accepting of a bribe an indictable offence. The evil, if it be an evil, with which I propose to deal is something different from that. My Bill differs from that of the Minister of Justice in this respect. We have approached the subject from different standpoints. I agree that some of the provisions which the Minister of Justice proposes are very proper provisions, and possibly the Bill he has introduced and the Bill I introduce might be regarded as supplementary of each other, and both of them may perhaps be reported upon in that way by the committee. I desire to make it a criminal offence that any member of this House, whether he be a member of the legal profession or not, shall accept a sum of money or a reward of any character for any service he performs with regard to legislation before a committee of the House or before the House itself. The provisions of the Bill are designed to have that effect. Let me point out to the House the source from which I draw the idea of the Bill, and what has been done in England and the United States in the same direction. We have in the rules of this House only one provision, so far as I am aware, which touches this particular matter. It is this :

Resolved, that the offer of any money or other advantage to any member of this House, for the promoting of any matter whatsoever depending or to be transacted in parliament, is a high crime and misdemeanour, and tends to the subversion of the Constitution.

I do not think that provision, the source of which I will speak of in a moment, covers the object I have in view. It was not so considered in the British House of Commons, in which a very interesting debate on this question took place in the year 1858. The resolution which I have just read from our own rules is a resolution which was adopted by the British House of Commons as far back as the year 1695. It was not regarded there as sufficient, and in the year 1858 Viscount Hotham moved in the British House of Commons a resolution on the same subject. The debate which ensued I have under my hand ; it is reported in the English 'Hansard', third series, volume 151, commencing at page 176. Viscount Hotham was asked to withdraw the resolution. There were a great many reasons urged against it. He declined to do so, and in the end his motion was adopted by a vote of 210 to 27. The resolution of Viscount Hotham, which is to be found at page 184 of the volume of 'Hansard' to which I have just referred, is this :

That it is contrary to the usage and derogatory to the dignity of this House that any of its members should bring forward, promote or advocate in this House any proceeding or measure in which he may have acted, or been concerned for or in consideration of any pecuniary fee or reward.

The resolution was undoubtedly aimed at a practice which seems to have prevailed previously to that date in the British House —the practice of members of the bar receiving rewards, accepting retainers, in respect of legislation which was introduced into the British House or before committees of that House. The debate which took place on the motion is, as I have said, very interesting. I will not weary the House with it. Any hon. gentleman who takes an interest in the subject, and especially the members of the committee who will have this matter under consideration, may if they see fit consult that debate, and I think they may possibly receive some useful suggestions from it. Similar discussions, on which I will not weary the House, came up at various times in the British House between 1858 and 1899. In 1899 Sir Robert Finlay, then Solicitor General, in answer to a question propounded by a member of the House, said that if a solicitor after his election as a member should continue to engage in parliamentary practice, a question of parliamentary usage might arise for the decision of the House. The question and answer are reported in the English 'Hansard', fourth series, volume 76, page 264. I have taken the trouble to make pretty careful and pretty extensive inquiries as to the practice of counsel and solicitors in the British House with regard to this subject, and I have received only one answer from every source to which I made application, and that is, that no barrister or solicitor in the British House of Commons would for one moment think of carrying on his professional business after his election as member of parliament, in respect of any matter coming before that House. Not only is that the case, but they carry it a little further there. Counsel who are members of the British House of Commons, and who have been concerned in the debate of questions arising in the House, take very good care not to accept a professional retainer in the courts afterwards in respect of any matter which has been so debated by them in the House ; thus they make the rule operate conversely. Of course, so far as the House is concerned, the first branch of the rule is the all-important one for parliament to consider. Mr. Mundella, whose resignation as President of the Board of Trade is very thoroughly discussed in the Edinburgh 'Review' for April, 1901, resigned his position as President of the Board of Trade because a judge's order had passed that he, being a director of a New Zealand loan company, should be publicly examined by one of his own officials. In announcing his resignation, he said :

I think that the public have the right to be sure that there is not the slightest suspicion of conflict between personal and public considerations.

In the United States they have dealt with this subject very thoroughly. I shall not read all their enactments, but shall refer my hon. friend the Minister of Justice and the members of the committee to the Constitutional Manual and Digest of Cases published in 1890. In this volume the committee will find collected at pages 436, 437 and 438 the various sections of the revised statutes of the United States which deal with the subject I am now bringing to the attention of the House. It is not necessary that I should read these provisions, but let me say that everything I have expressed in this Bill is included in the statute law of the United States at present and has been so included for many years. If the members of the committee will be good enough to examine the statutes which are collected on these pages, they will there find ample justification, if the legislation of the United States can be regarded as a justification, for placing a similar law on our statute book. In the United States they have had prosecutions against senators and members of congress who have infringed the statute to which I have referred. There have been, I think, no less than three of these prosecutions within the past eighteen months. I shall not refer to only one, namely, the prosecution brought against the United States Senator, John L. Mitchell, senior senator for Oregon. The prosecution of this gentleman attracted some attention not only in the United States but elsewhere. I am quoting from the 'London Times' of July 5th, 1905.

New York, July 4th.—After a trial lasting two weeks United States Senator John L. Mitchell, senior senator for Oregon, was found guilty at Portland, Oregon, to-day of accepting pay for practicing before departments of the federal government. The penalty is imprisonment for not more than two years and a fine of not more than ten thousand dollars. Mr. Mitchell was under an indictment on graver charges including that of feloniously conspiring to defraud the government of public lands by means of false and forged affidavits and fictitious persons. So popular is Mr. Mitchell in Oregon that a verdict of acquittal or the jury's failure to agree was regarded as certain. The evidence, however, was too direct and it is difficult to see how any other verdict than that given could have been reached. One of the witnesses was Mr. Mitchell's law partner who swore that the senator and himself had altered their partnership agreement when the danger of a prosecution became imminent making the articles read that Mr. Mitchell was not to receive money for business in federal courts. Mr. Mitchell is the second senator to be convicted of a criminal offence within a few months. The fact that not a single evening paper here regards the news of the conviction of a member of the senate as 'live' enough to be put on its front page is, perhaps, as good an indication as could be found of the condition of public conscience regarding malfeasance in office. It should be added that to-day being Independence Day the 'Evening Post' does not appear.

I have referred already to the Bill of my hon. friend the Minister of Justice, and I have said that it might be regarded as supplementary or complementary to the Bill I am introducing. Both, I understand, are to go before a committee. If I might be permitted to say a word with regard to the custom of members of the bar carrying on practice in this House, while they are members of it, I would say that I am entirely in accord with the provisions of this Bill of the Minister of Justice in that regard. I do not think it is proper for members of the bar to practice before committees of this House for reward. I do not think it is proper for members of the bar to take retainers in respect of Bills which they carry on through the various stages in this House and before the Senate. Let me illustrate what I mean, and I think the evil of the practice will be very evident. I have had one or two matters come under my own personal observation, and when this committee gets at work I shall be perfectly willing to go before it and testify as to one or two matters that have come under my personal observation and to one or two, as to which I have not personel knowledge but the strongest kind of information. A member of the bar is retained either in support of or in opposition to a Bill. He goes before a parliamentary committee and makes it known to that committee that he has a retainer from certain parties interested in that Bill. He represents his clients before that committee. If the practice could be stopped there, something might be said in its defence, although I myself would be prepared to say, even if the practice went no further, that that should not be allowed. But the difficulty is that the practice does not stop there. The next step is that a member of the bar, who has been retained before a committee of the House or before a committee of the Senate—he being a member of either House—deals with that Bill and in respect of it before a committee of which he is a member. And there is just one step beyond this which is this—that he does not disclose to that committee, before which he appears, the fact that he is a retained solicitor or counsel acting for those who are interested in that measure. A member of the bar who does that, puts himself in an absolutely false position. Members of the bar are retained to do work which other members of the House, not belonging to the legal profession, think themselves fully capable of performing just as efficiently. A member of the bar is retained in respect of a Bill. Part of his work may be conversations with other members and discussion of the subject with them. A member of the House who is not a member of the bar thinks himself just as capable of doing that as any practising advocate and undertakes similar work; and when you have a member of parliament accepting that position and not disclosing to his fellow members the fact that he is a retained and paid advocate for the Bill, you have a situation which might be described in language that I hesitate to use in this House. That is the danger of permitting members of the bar to carry on their practice in this House or the Senate or before any committee of the Senate or any department of the government. I venture to say for that reason that the Bill which has been introduced by my hon. friend the Minister of Justice and the Bill which I have introduced—both having a common end, both intended to effect a common purpose—are Bills which should receive, not only the very careful attention of the committee but also the very careful attention and consideration of this House when that committee reports. I therefore beg to move the second reading of this Bill, and after moving its second reading I shall make a similar motion in regard to it as in the other cases.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the second time.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I beg to move that this Bill be also referred to the special committee of seven appointed on the motion of the Minister of Justice on Friday last, and that the said committee be authorized to consider it and report upon the same.

Motion agreed to.

DOMINION CONTROVERTED ELECTIONS ACT.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN moved second reading of Bill (No. 5) further to amend the Dominion Controverted Elections Act. He said: I gave a brief, but I think, sufficient explanation of this Bill when I moved the first reading. I now beg to move the second reading and ask that this Bill be disposed of in the same manner as the other.

Bill read the second time, and referred to the same committee with the same instructions.

RAILWAY ACT, 1903, AMENDMENT.

On the order—

Second reading of Bill (No. 9) an Act to further amend the Railway Act, 1903.—Mr. Maclean.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN (South York). I am ready to go on with this Bill, Mr. Speaker. I have waited two or three days for the Minister of Railways (Hon. Mr. Emmerson) to be in his place.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister.) If convenient for my hon. friend (Mr. Maclean) the Bill will be called to-morrow. The Minister of Railways is not here to-day, but is expected to be in his place to-morrow. Whether he is here or not the Bill can be taken up.

On motion of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, House adjourned at 5 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THURSDAY, March 22, 1906.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

FIRST READING.

Bill (No. 35) to incorporate the Western Loan and Trust Company.—Mr. Adamson.

Bill (No. 36) respecting the Canadian Niagara Power Company.—Mr. German by Mr. Galliher.

Bill (No. 37) respecting the Montreal Park and Island Railway Company.—Mr. Geoffrion.

Bill (No. 38) to incorporate the Temple Mutual Life Association.—Mr. Bole by Mr. Turriff.

Bill (No. 39) respecting the Canada Atlantic Railway Company.—Mr. Macdonald by Mr. Galliher.

LOAN COMPANIES.

Mr. A. ZIMMERMAN moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 40) respecting certain loan companies.

Mr. TISDALE. The hon. gentleman should give us some explanation of what the Bill is.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. This Act as now introduced is a verbatim copy of an Act passed by both Houses in 1903, Bill (No. 24). Through some official oversight it was never presented for the royal assent, and so, through no fault of its promoters, failed to become law. This is for the purpose of giving loan companies greater powers in regard to investments, but is asking for nothing more nor less than the Bill of 1903.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

QUESTIONS.

RAILWAY FACILITIES IN PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.

Mr. A. MARTIN asked :

1. Has the government received petitions or copies of resolutions passed at public meetings in New London and Rustico, in Prince Edward Island, in reference to the extension of railway facilities to these sections?

2. Has the survey of the proposed New London line been completed and final as to location, or is it the intention of the government to order a survey for a loop line to serve both New London and Rustico ?

3. If not the latter, does the government intend to proceed with the survey of a short spur line to serve the large section of Rustico, as asked for by petition and resolutions passed at various public meetings, and sent to the Department of Railways and Canals ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (for the Minister of Railways and Canals) :

1. Yes, petitions have been received from the inhabitants of New London and vicinity.

2. Yes, a survey has been made from Emerald Junction via. Granville, P.E.I., and another via. Clinton to Stanley Bridge, and a reconnaissance survey has been made from Kensington via. New London to the same point.

3. Answered by No. 2.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND STEAMSHIP SERVICE.

Mr. A. MARTIN asked :

1. Has the government considered the commercial necessity of establishing steamship communication between the north side of Prince Edward Island and Miramichi, the Magdalen Islands and Sydney ?

2. Is it intended to call for tenders for a suitable steamer to make weekly trips on this route during the coming season ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (for the Minister of Trade and Commerce) :

1. Yes.

2. No.

QUEBEC BRIDGE.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. Have the subsidies granted by the provincial government of Quebec and the city of Quebec, towards the construction of the Quebec bridge, amounting to $250,000 and $300,000, respectively, been paid in cash to the Quebec Bridge Company ?

2. With whom were the bonds of the Quebec Bridge Company, amounting to $472,000, and referred to in the Dominion statute, 3 Edward VII., chapter 54, negotiated, and have the said bonds been withdrawn or redeemed ?

3. Were the said bonds redeemed by government guaranteed bonds ?

4. Were said bonds redeemed at their par value of $472,000, or at the value they had realized, of $283,279 ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (for the Minister of Railways and Canals) :

1. Yes, except the subsidy granted by the provincial government, which is payable at the rate of $30,000 per annum, of which $180,000 is already paid and a sum of $70,000 is still payable by the province.

2. The bonds amounting to $472,000 and referred to in the Dominion statute 3 Edward VII, chap. 54, were interim bonds and were negotiated with M. P. Davis and Thomas McDougall as trustee, by a deed of mortgage dated May 15, 1902, and they were redeemed by a deed of release dated March 2, 1904.

3. Yes.

4. They were redeemed at par value according to contract passed between the Quebec Bridge Company and its contractor.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. Has the government caused to be made at any time, under section 5 of chapter 54 of 3 Edward VII., any inspection of the books of the Quebec Bridge and Railway Company ?

2. If such inspection has taken place, by whom was it made, and has any report been received?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (for the Minister of Railways and Canals). No inspection of the books of the Quebec Bridge Company has yet been made.

TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILWAY.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. Have the commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway expropriated or taken possession of any lands required for the purposes of the eastern division of the said railway within the province of Quebec ?

2. Has any payment or agreement to pay been made for any said lands required for such purposes ? If so, what is the cost to date of such expropriations ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (for the Minister of Railways and Canals). The Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway have not expropriated or taken possession of any lands for the purposes of the eastern division of said railway within the province of Quebec.

RAILWAY ACCIDENTS IN CANADA.

Mr. KEMP asked :

1. How many passengers travelling on railways in Canada met with fatal accidents during the years 1904 and 1905 ?

2. How many employees and others met with fatal accidents during the same period ?

3. How many passengers, employees, and others met with serious injury ?

4. Have investigations been held on behalf of the government in respect to such accidents ?

5. If so, will the government lay reports of such investigations upon the table of the House?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (for the Minister of Railways and Canals) :

1, 2 and 3 :

—	—	Year ended June 30, 1904.	Year ended June 30, 1905.
Steam Railways...	No. of Pass. killed.	25	35
Electric " ...	" " "	10	30
Steam Railways...	" Empl. "	192	206
Electric " ...	" " "	3	3
Steam " ...	" Others "	178	227
Electric " ...	" " "	40	23
Steam Railways...	" Pass. injured	234	244
" " ...	" Empl. "	912	919
" " ...	" Others "	259	194
Electric " ...	" Pass. "	508	884
" " ...	" Empl. "	64	65
" " ...	" Others. "	272	347

4. I have no information on this question.

5. No.

SWAMP LANDS.

Mr. STAPLES asked :

1. What system or method is used by the government in classifying swamp lands ?

2. What is the nature of the swamp lands known as class 'a' and class 'b,' respectively?

3. How many acres of swamp lands of 'a' and 'b' were transferred by the Dominion government to the Manitoba government in each year since 1896, giving class 'a' and 'b' separately in each instance ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

1. Swamp lands inspectors appointed by the government inspect the lands as the surveys progress, and report to the Minister of the Interior.

2. There is no classification of swamp lands in the manner mentioned.

In Orders of the Governor General in Council vesting the title to swamp lands in His Majesty the King for the purposes of the province of Manitoba, lands being transferred are in certain cases described as being in a schedule marked 'A', and lands not surveyed at the date of the Order but reserved under the order for transfer to the province when surveyed are described in certain cases as being in a schedule marked 'B'.

3. Swamp lands were transferred by Order of His Excellency in Council to His Majesty the King for the purposes of the province of Manitoba in each of the years from 1896 to the present year as follows.

	Acres.
1897	151,985·39
1898	3,120·00
1899	197,281·39
1900	160·00
1902	20,744·01
1903	112,424·33
1904	77,721·01
1905	16,445·00

Lands were set apart by Order of His Excellency in Council for transfer to His Majesty the King for the purposes of the province of Manitoba when surveyed as follows :

	Acres.
1903	90,840
1904	87,840

PORT COLBORNE BREAKWATER.

Mr. BENNETT asked :

1. How much money has been expended to date on (a) dredging ; (b) on dock or breakwater work at Port Colborne ?

2. How much has been expended to date on the government elevator at Port Colborne ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) (for the Minister of Railways and Canals) :

1. The cost of dredging is	$142,843 50
Cost of submarine rock excavation is	438,752 25
Total under-water excavation to date	$581,595 75
(b) Cost to date on breakwaters	752,142 52

2. Amount expended to date on elevator at Port Colborne is $98,199.99.

INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY ILLUMINATING OIL.

Mr. FOWLER asked :

1. What quantities of illuminating oil have been bought by the Intercolonial Railway department during the last three fiscal years, respectively, and from whom ?

2. Was said oil bought by tender ?

3. If so, who were the tenderers, and at what price did they tender, respectively ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (for the Minister of Railways and Canals) :

1. The following are the quantities of illuminating oil bought by the Intercolonial Railway for the last three fiscal years, viz :

	Gallons.
1903—Imperial Oil Company	58,854
Gall Schneider Oil Company.	89,436
1904—Imperial Oil Company	78,383
Gall Schneider Oil Company..	75,785
1905—Imperial Oil Company	169,229

2. All the above mentioned oil was bought by tender, except 58,854 gallons supplied by the Imperial Oil Company in the year 1903.

3.

Imperial Oil Co. For Specification		'A' 22 c
Imperial Oil Co.	"	'B' 24 c
Gall Schneider Oil Co.	"	'A' 19½c
Gall Schneider Oil Co.	"	'B' 21½c
Imperial Oil Co.	"	'A' 19½c
Imperial Oil Co.	"	'B' 20½c
Gall Schneider Oil Co.	"	'A' 21½c
Gall Schneider Oil Co.	"	'B' 22½c
Canadian Oil Co.	"	'A' 19 c
Canadian Oil Co.	"	'B' 18¼c
A. D. Gall Petroleum and Chemical Co. for Specification		'A' 20⅛c
A. D. Gall Petroleum and Chemical Co., for specification		'B' 20⅝c
Eastern Railway and Supply Co.		'A' 17 c
Eastern Railway and Supply Co. (better quality)		'A' 18 c
Eastern Railway and Supply Co.		'B' 17½c
Eastern Railway and Supply Co. (better quality)		'B' 18 c

RECOGNITION OF VOYAGEURS.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES asked:

1. Were the boatmen or voyageurs in 1870, under Sir Garnet Wolseley, recognized in any official way by either the British or Canadian governments ?

2. If so, what was the nature of such recognition ?

3. Is it the intention of the government to grant boatmen or voyageurs, who served on the Red River expedition of 1870, scrip or medals for their services ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (for the Minter of Militia and Defence):

1 and 2. No.

3. It was decided by the government of the day that they were employed as civilians and not eligible for medals or scrip. They were, in fact, treated precisely as were the teamsters employed at the same time. It is not intended to depart from the decision then reached.

PAYMENTS TO WOODS LIMITED.

Mr. MONK asked:

1. What is the total amount paid to the Woods Limited, or to J. W. Woods, by the government during the year ending 30th June, 1905, for goods furnished to the Transcontinental Railway Construction Commission ?
2. What is the total amount paid by the government from the 30th June, 1905, to the 1st March, 1906, to the Woods Limited, or to J. W. Woods, for goods furnished to the Transcontinental Railway Construction Commission ?
3. Did the said construction commission call for tenders through the newspapers before placing orders for goods with the Woods Limited ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WLFRID LAURIER (for the Minister of Railways and Canals:

1. $16,125.29.
2. $11,402.50.
3. Goods furnished by Woods, Limited, were purchased by the Commissioners' purchasing agent at wholesale prices. Tenders are not publicly called for in such cases, as the goods are generally wanted for immediate requirements, but quotations are usually obtained.

FREIGHT CHARGES ON THE INTERCOLONIAL.

Mr. SINCLAIR asked:

1. What is the rate on steel products per ton per mile by the Intercolonial Railway from Sydney to Montreal ?
2. What is the rate on fish per ton per mile by the Intercolonial Railway from Mulgrave to Montreal ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (for the Minister of Railways and Canals):

1. The rate on steel products by the Intercolonial Railway from Sydney to Montreal is ¼ cent per ton per mile.
2. The rate on fish by the Intercolonial Railway from Mulgrave to Montreal is 57-100 cents per ton per mile.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

Mr. WARD asked:

1. What surveys have been made of the outlet of the Trent Valley canal, from Rice lake to Lake Ontario, during the past two years ?
2. By what route have these surveys been made ?
3. By whom have the surveys been made ?
4. Has the government come to any decision as to the proper route to be adopted ?
5. Have the reports of surveys been submitted to the Department of Railways and Canals by the engineers in charge ?
6. What is the probable amount of damage caused by the break in the Trent Valley canal at Peterboro' and Kirkfield ?
7. Have the officers, in whose charge these works were, been retained, or have such officers been dismissed ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (for the Minister of Railways and Canals):

1. Instrumental surveys have been made over three proposed routes for the Trent canal from Rice lake to Lake Ontario.
2. The respective routes surveyed were from Rice lake to Port Hope; Rice lake to Cobourg; Rice lake to Trenton.
3. By E. J. Walsh, C.E., and staff.
4. No.
5. No.
6. When the leaks occurred in the embankment approach to the lift lock at Peterborough, the commissioner stated in his report that $2,000 should cover the expenditure in connection with the repairs to be made.

It is impossible at the present time to say what the cost of the repairs will be for the damage at Kirkfield.

7. Five of the officers connected with the works have resigned.

DREDGING ST. MARY'S RIVER.

Mr. BOYCE asked :

1. What amount was paid by the government during the year 1905 for dredging in St. Mary's river, (a) at the canal and approaches; (b) at the government dock; (c) in the channel ?
2. To what persons, firms or corporations, respectively, were such amounts paid ?
3. Was the work in each case performed by contract under tender ? If not, under what arrangement ?
4. What prices are paid per yard at the different places, respectively, what dredges were employed and who owned them ?
5. To what depths has the river been dredged, (a) at the canal, both approaches ; (b) at the government dock ; (c) in the channel ?
6. Have any complaints been received from navigators, of the difficulty of access to the government dock by reason of submerged rocks and boulders in the approaches ? If so, from whom were such complaints received, when, and how were they dealt with ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (for the Minister of Railways and Canals).

1. Amount paid by the Department of Railways and Canals during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1905, for deepening and widening channel way at upper entrance Sault Ste. Marie canal was $46,633.74.
2. Messrs. Hickler Bros., $21,060.74 ; and C. S. Boone, $25,573.
3. Yes, the work was performed by contract under tender.
4. Eighty cents ; and one dollar and seventy-four cents per cubic yard. Dredges No. 5 and 8 owned by Hickler Bros., and Dredges No. 10 and 15, owned by C. S. Boone.
5. Lower approach 21 feet to 21 feet 5 inches. Upper approach 21 feet 5 inches below extreme low water.
6. None by the Department of Railways and Canals.

FLOUR SUPPLY TO PENITENTIARIES.

Mr. TAYLOR asked :

1. In what newspapers were tenders invited for the supply of flour for the penitentiaries at Kingston, St. Vincent de Paul and Dorchester?
2. Were tenders invited in any other manner than by advertisement in newspapers ?

3. Over what dates did such advertisements in newspapers, if any, extend ?

Hon. RODOLPHE LEMIEUX (for the Minister of Justice) :

1. Ontario : Acton 'Free Press,' Alexandria 'News,' Belleville 'Ontario,' Brantford 'Expositor,' Brockville 'Recorder,' Chatham 'News' Collingwood 'Bulletin,' Cornwall 'Freeholder,' Cobourg 'World,' Embro 'Courier,' Essex 'Free Press,' Eganville 'Leader,' Galt 'Reformer,' Hamilton 'Times,' Hamilton 'Herald.' Ingersoll 'Chronicle,' Kingston 'British Whig,' Kingston 'Canadian Freeman,' Listowel 'Banner,' London 'Advertiser,' Milton 'Reformer,' Ottawa 'Danebrog,' Ottawa 'Free Press,' Ottawa 'Le Temps,' Peterborough 'Examiner,' Port Hope 'Guide,' Ridgetown 'Plaindealer,' Stratford 'Beacon,' Toronto 'Globe,' Toronto 'Star,' Toronto 'Register,' Toronto 'Grocer.'

Quebec : Arthabaskaville 'L'Union des Cantons d'Est,' Montreal 'Le Bulletin,' Montreal 'Le Canada,' Montreal 'La Presse,' Montreal 'La Patrie,' Montreal 'The Herald,' Montreal 'Witness,' Montreal 'Shareholder,' Quebec 'Le Soleil,' Quebec 'Telegraph,' Quebec 'L'Echo de Québec,' St. Hyacinthe 'L'Union,' Sorel 'Le Courrier,' Sherbrooke 'Le Progrès de l'Est,' St. Johns 'Le Canada-Français.'

Nova Scotia : Amherst 'Daily News,' Halifax 'Acadian Recorder,' Halifax 'Morning Chronicle,' North Sydney 'Enterprise,' North Sydney 'Herald,' Sydney 'Daily Record,' Sydney Mines 'Enterprise.'

New Brunswick : Fredericton 'Herald,' Moncton 'Transcript,' St. John 'Globe.'

Prince Edward Island : Charlottetown 'Patriot.'

Manitoba : Brandon 'Sun,' Selkirk 'Expositor,' Stonewall 'Argus,' Winnipeg 'Free Press,' Winnipeg 'Commercial Weekly.'

Northwest Territories: Prince Albert 'Advocate,' Regina 'Leader.'

British Columbia : Vancouver 'World,' Vancouver 'Province,' Vancouver 'Ledger,' Victoria 'Times.'

2. In response to the invitation for tenders in May, 1905, ten were received for Kingston penitentiary, eight for St. Vincent de Paul, and eight for Dorchester, at prices ranging from $4.19 to $5.70 per barrel. These prices were thought to be too high and it was decided to defer purchase until after harvest. In September a letter inviting tenders was sent to all who had tendered in May and to such others as it was thought might tender. Thirteen responded, some tendering for the supply of one, others for more than one penitentiary. The following tenders were received : Nine for the Kingston penitentiary, nine for St. Vincent de Paul and eight for Dorchester, at prices ranging from $3.84 to $4.80 a barrel. In every case the lowest was accepted.

3. Three insertions in daily newspapers, on three Saturdays in May. Twice in May in the weekly newspapers.

Mr. TAYLOR.

OTTAWA POST OFFICE RECONSTRUCTION.

Mr. BLAIN asked :

1. What is the total expenditure on the Ottawa post office since the fire ?

2. When will it be completed, and what is the estimated total cost ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works) :

1. $175,113.65, including clearing away rubbish and fitting up temporary quarters for post office service, and moving and renewing furniture by fire.

2. The post office officials are in possession of the building, which is completed with the exception of internal fittings. The total estimated cost of reconstruction is $183,113.65.

NORTH ATLANTIC TRADING COMPANY.

Mr. OSLER—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. Has the Department of the Interior made any investigations into the operation of the contract of the 28th November, 1904, with the North Atlantic Trading Company, as intimated by the First Minister to be its duty (see 'Hansard' of 1905, page 9,447), and with what result?

2. Has the government made any investigation as to whether the said contract has been abused, and with what result ? (See 'Hansard' of 1905, page 9,448).

3. Has the government considered the question of terminating the said contract, and what, if any, action has the government taken or decided to take ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). The operation of the contract of the 28th November, 1904, with the North Atlantic Trading Company is a question which the government has under consideration.

JOSEPH NIXON.

Mr. FOSTER asked :

1. Has any further report been made by Mr. Leach, or by any other commissioner, in respect of Joseph Nixon, land agent at Macleod, subsequent to that of 3rd April, 1905 ?

2. If so, will the minister lay it on the table of the House ?

3. What settlement has been made with the bona fide lot purchasers at Macleod, who paid in their fees to Nixon, and what loss, if any, has been sustained by the government therein?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

1. Yes, two reports by Mr. Leech dated 18th August, 1905, and 19th December, 1905; and reports of the 17th January, 20th January, and 9th March, 1906, by the agent of the Department of Justice at Macleod.

2. Yes, on an Order of the House being obtained.

3. Lots sold by Joseph Nixon to certain purchasers and afterwards patented to town of Macleod, have been re-transferred to the Crown in order that sale to original purchasers may be carried out. The government has sustained no loss.

Mr. FOSTER. Perhaps the minister would lay that on the table without the formality of a motion.

JOHN F. NELSON ; CHARLES SUTHERLAND.

Mr. LAKE asked:

1. Is John F. Nelson in the employ of the government as fishery inspector, or in any other capacity ?

2. Is Charles Sutherland in the employ of the government as Indian farm instructor, or in any, and what, other capacity ?

3. If either of these gentlemen is not now in the employ of the government, when and under what circumstances did he or they leave such employ ?

He said : This question is identical with one asked by me on the 14th of March. It was answered by the Minister of Agriculture (Hon. Mr. Fisher) and by the Minister of the Interior (Hon. Mr. Oliver). But I find that the answer of the Minister of the Interior, which I did not catch, does not appear in 'Hansard,' so I have asked the same question in order to have it placed on 'Hansard.'

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). I noted that 'Hansard' had incorrectly taken the answer that was given on that day. The answer to the part of the question which relates to the Department of the Interior is as follows :—

2. No.

3. Mr. Sutherland's services were dispensed with on or about the 18th of February, 1906.

POSTMASTER AT CANNINGTON.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES—by Mr. Lancaster—asked :

What was the salary or income, gross and net, of the postmaster at Cannington, for each year since 1903 ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (for the Postmaster General) :

1902-03	$782 53
1903-04	934 51
1904-05	959 46

WHARF ON RIVIERE JESUS.

Mr. LEONARD—by Mr. Monk—asked :

1. Is it the intention of the government to complete the work commenced for the construction of a wharf and its approaches, on the Rivière Jésus, at St. François de Sales, county of Laval ?

2. What amount has been expended up to the present on such construction ?

3. What is the amount required to complete the said works at St. François de Sales ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN Minister of Public Works) :

1. Yes.

2. $12,254.71.

3. Balance of appropriation, $1,693.19, will be sufficient to complete the work.

SALARIES OF GUARDIANS, ST. VINCENT DE PAUL PENITENTIARY.

Mr. LEONARD—by Mr. Monk—asked :

1. Has the government or the Department of Justice, received a petition from one or several of the employees at the St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary ?

2. If so, what are the names of those who made that petition ?

3. Is it the intention of the government to increase in a general manner the salaries of the guardians at St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary ?

4. Is it the opinion of the government that those employees are sufficiently paid ?

Hon. RODOLPHE LEMIEUX (for the Minister of Justice) :

1. Yes.

2. Joseph Desjardins, J. Percy Forster, Edmond Bélanger, Paul Blondin, P. J. G. Lynch, A. McDonough and Agra Bourgeois.

3. The matter is under consideration.

4. The matter is under consideration.

WHARF AT TERREBONNE.

Mr. LEONARD—by Mr. Monk—asked :

1. What amount has the government expended up to the present, for the construction of the wharf and approaches thereto, at Terrebonne, on the Rivière Jésus ?

2. Have such works been completed ?

3. Does the government propose completing such works this year ?

4. What amount is required for the completion of such works ?

5. Is all the money that has been voted for such works expended ?

6. If not, what balance remains for expenditure ?

7. Why did not the government ask, in the estimates for the financial year from the 1st July, 1906, to the 31st March, 1907, for the amount necessary to complete such works ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works) :

1. $12,320.49.

2. No.

3. Work is expected to be completed by the end of present fiscal year.

4. The present appropriation will, it is hoped, be sufficient.

5. No.

6. $1,625.95.

7. Nothing required.

CARRIAGE OF COAL FOR THE INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY.

Mr. GAUVREAU asked :

1. Is it the intention of the Minister of Railways to have all the coal intended for the use of the Intercolonial Railway brought to the port of Rivière du Loup, or else to have it carried, as heretofore, by rail ?

2. If so, has he ordered, or is he soon going to order, hydrographic surveys at the Point, so as to ascertain the depth of the water at high and low tide, in order to have the dredging done that might be needed in case of a lack of water sufficient for the steamers carrying the coal ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (for the Minister of Railways and Canals) :

1. It is not the intention of the Railway Department to bring coal via the port of Rivière du Loup. The supply for that point will be hauled by rail from Lévis, where it is intended to install coal handling appliance adequate for the requirements of Rivière du Loup, Chaudière and Drummond divisions.

2. No.

SALARIES OF LIGHTHOUSE KEEPERS.

Mr. GAUVREAU asked :

Is it the intention of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to grant the increase in salary, this session, which has been so urgently requested for several years back by the lighthouse keepers and the captains of floating lighthouses ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (for the Minister of Marine and Fisheries). The Minister of Marine and Fisheries has handed me the following answer : The question of increasing the salaries of these officials, based upon the importance of each light, the difficulties attending its management and isolation and other like conditions, is now, under consideration.

CIVIL SERVANTS AND OUTSIDE EMPLOYMENT.

Mr. WALSH asked :

1. Are civil servants in the employ of the government at Ottawa permitted to engage in any occupation, business or work outside the performance of their duty ?

2. In how many departments, and what departments, is this permitted ?

3. How many civil servants carry on any business or work outside of their official duties?

4. What is the policy of the government with respect to this question ?

5. What rule does the government enforce with respect to customs officers and other officials in the outside service in this manner ?

6. Have any persons been dismissed, or threatened with dismissal, since the 1st of January, 1900, for this reason ?

7. Who are such persons, and in what position were they employed, what annual salary did each of them receive, and what is the date of their dismissal ?

8. The foregoing questions apply to all the departments except the Department of Customs.

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). Civil servants generally in the employ of the government at Ottawa are not permitted to engage in any occupation, business or work outside the performance of their duty. This is the rule in most of the departments. The government does not know how many civil servants carry on business outside of their civil service duties. The policy of the government on this subject was recently expressed in this House. The rule in force was explained by my colleague the Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson) a few days ago. I am not aware that any person has been dismissed or threatened with dismissal on this account.

INQUIRY FOR RETURN.

Mr. FOSTER. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to ask the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Hyman) if he is making any headway with that return of mine.

Mr. HYMAN. So far as the Department of Public Works is concerned, it has already been laid upon the table. I spoke to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries about it, and I understand that his return has been almost completed.

RAILWAY ACT, 1903, AMENDMENT.

Mr. E. A. LANCASTER Lincoln and Niagara) moved the second reading of Bill (No. 6) in amendment of the Railway Act, 1903. He said : This Bill is one which, I think, as soon as the facts are stated to the House, will be at once concurred in by everybody. It relates to proceedings that are taken in arbitration against the land-owner where the company is compulsorarily taking a man's land. Until 1903 we had two sections upon the subject. In 1903, the Hon. Mr. Blair, in consolidating the Act, thought it wise to make one section out of two sections, namely, sections 150 and 151 of the Consolidated Railway Act of 1888. The first of those two sections related to a case where the land-owner did not pay any attention to the proceedings, did not give a notice refusing the offer made by the company, nor did he appoint an arbitrator. By that section, the law as it was until 1903, the company were permitted to make an application, and it will occur to you at once that there was no one but the company who had any standing to make an application. The next section, 151, dealt with the case where the land-owner did take notice of the proceedings and gave notice refusing to accept the sum offered by the company, and apointed his arbitrator ; and in that case either party could invoke the court for an appointment of the third arbitrator so that the proceedings could go on. Now I am satisfied that there was a mistake in the wording of the section that I am seeking to amend, the mistake occurred in consolidating the two sections and turning them into one. The law as it has been on the statute-book since 1903 says, that nobody but the company in any case can invoke the court for the appointment of an arbitrator so that proceedings can go on. I am satisfied that never was the intention of this parliament, it never was intended in 1903 that the land-owner who is resisting as to the amount offered him, can have his proceedings tied up at the will of the company for ever, and can be prevented from having his hearing—because he cannot get his board of arbitrators constituted—and can be compelled to stand mute and either take what the company offer him or never have his proceedings gone on with unless the company sees fit to invoke the court. I, therefore, propose to amend that section by adding the words, 'or of the opposite party,' after the word 'company;' and by adding the words, 'or the company,' after the word 'party' in the sixth line, so that it will read when amended as follows :

If, within ten days after the service of such notice, or within one month after the publication thereof, the opposite party does not give notice to the company that he accepts the sum offered by it, the judge shall, on the application of the company or of the opposite party, six days' notice of which shall be given to the opposite party or to the company, appoint arbitrators——

And so on. Unless that amendment is made, when a man is resisting the company as to the amount, and when he says, I have material evidence to prove that I am entitled to more damages than the company offers me, and I want the matter determined, and cannot get it determined unless the company at its own will will invoke the court—in that case what happens ? Now, I am bound to mention a case which came under my notice. I happened to be asked to act as arbitrator in several cases last summer, and the land-owners could not get the arbitration proceeded with because the company would not ask the court to appoint arbitrators. The money is paid into court, what the court sees fit to order, and they may order a little more than the amount offered by the company, sometimes twice as much, or less, according to the magnitude of the property in question. The company gets an order under the other section of the Act that the proceedings can go on as far as they are concerned, so that they can take possession of the man's land. Certain sums of money are paid into court, and that money has to lie there until there is a determination as to how much the man is entitled to. But they can prevent the man getting a determination unless they choose to make an application to the court that proceedings shall go on. Because under the old law of 1888 there were two classes of cases provided for : One was where the man stood mute and did nothing, paid no attention to it, and in that case the company made an application. I am not quarreling with that, if it remained that way. But in the other case the man takes action, takes an interest, notifies the company that he will not accept the amount, and asks the court to appoint arbitrators. But he cannot go to the court and get an appointment made unless the company is willing to make the application for him. Now it is not fair that the land-owner who wants his case determined, who wants to find out what he is entitled to, who wants it determined by these arbitrators when he cannot agree with the company, that he should be compelled to take the company's offer, which may be totally inadequate, simply because the company won't allow proceedings to go on by making an application. I can see how the accident occurred when the two sections were run into one. The Hon. Mr. Blair acted on the theory that if the man pays no attention, the case is to be in the same position as if he had notified the company that he would not accept their offer. I am not quarreling with that feature of it, because it does away with the necessity of a notice. But since 1903 the law is open to the objection that if he does not notify the company at all he is to be taken as refusing their offer. If he accepts their offer, of course, there is an end of it, but if he does not wish to accept their offer, he simply does nothing. Therefore, in consolidating the Act Mr. Blair provided that the court should appoint three arbitrators, but, as I think, entirely by mistake, he left the previous part of the section standing, namely, that the application should be made by the company ; and as it stands now the courts are bound to decide that they cannot appoint arbitrators unless the company itself asks for their appointment. Now, I think either party to the proceedings ought to have the right to accelerate them and get the matter determined ; and I trust with this statement, the government and the House will see fit to adopt this amendment.

Hon. CHARLES FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice). In the course of the revision of the statutes the commissioners discovered this omission, and it was brought to my notice. It was my intention to introduce this amendment in connection with some other amendments to the Act, but as my hon. friend (Mr. Lancaster) has preceded me by moving his amendment, I can see no objection to its going through.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time, considered in committee, and reported.

CERTIFICATES TO MASTERS AND MATES OF SHIPS.

Mr. E. A. LANCASTER (Lincoln and Niagara) moved the second reading of Bill No. 7 to amend the Act respecting the certificates to masters and mates of ships. He said : Mr. Speaker, this Bill is one which I introduced in the session of 1904 and which was debated then but which was defeated by a vote of the House principally, as I take it—and as I think 'Hansard' shows on a fair construction of the language—that legislation of this kind would be introduced in the next succeeding session—that is the session of 1905. As several hon. gentlemen now in this House were not in the House in 1904, I will have to ask those who were in the House in 1904 to bear with me while I repeat for the benefit of those who were not then in the House the reason why I think this Bill ought to be passed. The Bill is brought forward at the instance of the Masters and Mates Association of the Dominion of Canada. It is supported by those of us who feel that the principle is a sound one, other than those interested in the Masters and Mates Association, as ordinary residents and citizens of the Dominion of Canada. The principal object of the Bill is to compel those who take out masters and mates certificates for the inland waters of the Dominion of Canada to be British subjects. That of itself, standing alone, it seems to me, would commend it to everybody in this House and it is all the more necessary because by the laws of the United States a man who is a master or mate and a Canadian citizen or a British subject cannot take a situation as master or mate on a boat owned in the United States unless he foreswears his allegiance to the King of Great Britain and becomes an American citizen. So that, practically, the business part of it, outside of the sentimental consideration, is one that ought to appeal to everybody in this House. A master or mate who is a Canadian citizen and who remains a Canadian citizen and a British subject is limited by the laws of the United States to employment upon vessels owned in Canada. But the master or mate who is an American citizen can take his situations, can get his positions on American boats, and if they do not suit him he can come over without anything to stop him and take a situation in the Canadian marine against the Canadian citizen. You may call it protection or reciprocity according to the way you look at it. I do not care which you call it. It is both. I want Canadian masters and mates to be protected and I want reciprocity with the United States; that is if they say to us that British subjects, otherwise well qualified to man their boats as masters and mates, are not good enough for these boats because they will not foreswear King Edward and his successors, then we ought in self defence to say to the United States: You must employ your own American citizens at home and not send them into Canada to take the places of our British subjects. The late, lamented Mr. Prefontaine, in a statement which he made in the House in 1904, said that I ought to be patient, that he would introduce legislation during the next session—that is the session of 1905—upon this subject. The correspondence is upon 'Hansard.' I do not want to weary the House by reading it in detail but perhaps some hon. gentlemen who were not then members of the House would like to know where to find it. It is in the 'Hansard' of 1904, vol. III. I have not the exact page. The late Mr. Prefontaine took the position that he had been delayed that session in bringing down a government measure to accomplish this object and he said that if I would be patient and allow the matter to drop for that session he would introduce a Bill in the next session. We know it was not introduced and I feel obliged therefore to propose this legislation now.

In order that the House may quite understand that this is a matter which is serious I propose to read extracts from the proceedings of the Canadian Association of Masters and Mates at their annual meeting held in February of the year 1904 which, as I said a while ago, was the initiation of this Bill. I have here the proceedings of the annual meeting of the Grand Council of the Canadian Association of Masters and Mates, held at Toronto, on February 8th, 1904. The printed record of these proceedings having been handed to me by the association.

Capt. Milligan moved, seconded by Capt. Jordan, that the Dominion government be memorialized to amend the law so as to make the examination of masters and mates more rigid and to require that all recommendations of a master to a candidate for examination must be made on oath, or the candidate must produce a recommendation from the executive of a branch of this association.

That was carried. Then:

No one but British subjects to hold certificates, and in case a master or mate removing to take service in a foreign country and it was necessary for him to swear allegiance to that country, his Canadian certificate to become absolutely void, and should he wish to return to Canada he must become again a British subject in the proper and regular manner and take out a new certificate after he has been domiciled in Canada the time prescribed by law.

Then again:

Capt. Gidley moved, seconded by Capt. Dix, that a committee, composed of Capts. Milligan, McCoppen and Boyle, St. Catharines, be appointed, with Mr. Lancaster, M.P., for Lincoln to revise the Acts relating to masters and mates, prepare amendments to said Acts in the shape of a Bill on the line of the resolutions passed and suggestions made at this meeting, and that it be presented at the coming session of parliament.

Then it was:

Moved by Capt. Milligan, seconded by Capt. Jordan, that this association memorialize the Dominion government to cancel all certificates of masters and mates held by persons who have gone, or may go, to the United States and obtain certificates to sail vessels, where such persons are required to swear allegiance to the United States in order to qualify them to obtain such American certificate.

These resolutions were adopted in order to assist legislation of this kind to be passed by this House. Now, we have to ask ourselves whether the resolutions are reasonable and whether the legislation sought by this Bill is fair and such as ought to be passed. As I say the first clause of the Bill which I am moving here deals with the question of requiring masters and mates on our inland waters to be British subjects, and it proposes to strike out the words 'or for persons' so that they must be British subjects and not other persons. The Act as it now stands, chapter 42, 57-58 Victoria, amending the original Act reads :

Examinations may be instituted in Canada, for British subjects or for persons domiciled in Canada,——

The amendment is to strike out the words 'or for persons,' the effect being that they must be British subjects domiciled in Canada in order to obtain these certificates. The association supplemented these proceedings by sending memorials to this government, memorials which were acknowledged by the late Minister of Marine and Fisheries and which are among the documents of the department, asking that this legislation be passed. Then, in order that there may be no doubt as to what the American law is, I propose to read to the House a statement of the officers of the United States Department of Commerce and Labour at Buffalo, New York, on the subject. Mr. W. D. Graham, secretary of the Canadian Association of Masters and Mates, wrote so that there would be a distinct statement as to what their law is and the letter which he got in answer to his inquiry from Mr. Frederick L. R. Pope and Mr. Joseph D. Schumacher, United States local inspectors, omitting the first portion, is as follows :

In reply to your second question, an Act of congress, approved May 28, 1896, provides that, after the first day of January, 1897, no person shall be qualified to hold a license as a commander or watch-officer of a merchant vessel of the United States who is not a native-born citizen, or whose naturalization as a citizen shall not have been fully completed.

The United States law can also be found in section 2174 of the revised statutes, which says :

Every seaman being a foreigner who declares his intention of becoming a citizen of the United States in any competent court and shall have served three years on board a merchant vessel of the United States subsequent to the date of such declaration may, on his application to any competent court and the production of his certificate of discharge and good conduct during that time together with the certificate of his declaration of intention to become a citizen, be admitted a citizen of the United States ; and every seaman being a foreigner, shall, after his declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States for the purpose of manning and serving on board any merchant vessel——

And it goes on to say that he may obtain his license. So he has to become a citizen of the United States before he can get a license to run one of their boats. Therefore, we cannot get employment for our Canadian masters and mates on boats, say, for instance, sailing out of Buffalo, that are owned by American citizens. American owned bottoms cannot employ these Canadians unless they will foreswear their country and become American citizens. On the other hand, United States citizens can come in here under the law and get employment on our boats. I am not sure that this government allow it if they find it out. They may not allow it except they become British subjects, but this government are doing nothing wrong under the statute if they allow them to get licenses to run boats and still remain citizens of the United States.

There are other sections of this Act which I propose to amend in order to carry out that idea. I move to amend the section of the Act that deals with the effect of the certificates they get and this is supplementary to the main object of my legislation in regard to their being obliged to be British subjects. I propose that they shall cease to be entitled to use these certificates if they cease to be British subjects. I move that these certificates shall become void on their ceasing to remain British subjects even if they are British subjects when they get their certificates. As long as they remain British subjects the certificates shall be good but they shall not be good in Canada if they cease to be British subjects. I propose that if they change their allegiance to the country they thereby forfeit their right to run a boat on our inland waters.

Mr. BRODEUR. My hon. friend (Mr. Lancaster) has read a letter written by some one. I did not catch the name. Is that letter written by some official of the United States or by some other person ?

Mr. LANCASTER. It is from the government officials, the local inspectors of the Department of Commerce and Labour, Steamboat Inspection Service, of the United States, in Buffalo, New York. These are the people who apply the law and who will not allow our Canadian people to take out licenses unless they foreswear their allegiance to the British Crown, and declare their intention of going over to the United States. I am quite willing to send this letter over to the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Brodeur).

Then, the other principal enactment that I am asking this House to pass in my amendment is that relating to the qualification of the Examiners of Masters and Mates. It would hardly be believed, if it were not stated here on the statute-book that a man can be an examiner under our law and not know anything about navigation. A dry goods merchant, a lawyer, a doctor, a farmer, a carpenter, or anybody else under our law can be an examiner of masters and mates on our inland waters. I do not believe this government would employ people who were not competent lake navigators, but if they chose they could do so and if they did so they would do it legally. I think the statute ought to be such that no government could employ anybody to examine me as to my qualifications to serve as master or mate on a boat on inland waters unless that person is a competent lake navigator. The second object of my Bill is to amend the section in regard to the qualification of examiners and to insist that these examiners must be competent lake navigators. It is the same thing as if those of us who go up for the law examination at Osgoode Hall were not examined by lawyers or those who go up for examination in a medical case were not examined by doctors. I think it has only to be stated in order to be remedied. I dare say—and I do not wish to be misunderstood here—that this government would, if they knew it, never appoint a man an examiner unless he were a competent lake navigator, but the government might be asked to do it and in the interest of the proper conduct of these affairs I should think that the government would prefer to have a statute behind their backs which would prevent the appointment of anybody who was not a competent lake navigator because then they would not be oppressed with applications by people for positions of that kind which they, by law, could not appoint them to. I am not likely to be ever a member of a cabinet in this country, but if I were a member of the government and I were asked to do that sort of thing I would be very glad indeed if I had behind me a statute which compelled me to do what I thought I ought to do and prevent me from being solicited to do things that I should not in the interests of our inland navigation do. But, as the law stands to-day, the government may, if they see fit, appoint anybody to be an examiner of masters and mates, to say whether they are qualified to man boats and I think no harm can be done and that a great deal of good can be done if the statute is amended so that legally the government could not appoint anybody to be an examiner of masters and mates unless that person applying for the position is himself a competent lake navigator. There is another aspect of the matter that also appeals to me whether it does to others or not. There is a great deal of life at stake upon these boats. Besides all the mercantile value there is a great deal of life at stake upon these vessels on our upper lakes and we cannot be to careful that the masters and mates are the very best that can be obtained. They can deceive a man who is not himself a competent lake navigator but they cannot deceive a man who is a competent lake navigator in examining them. I will not weary the House at any further length, I move the second reading of the Bill.

Mr. JOHN H. SINCLAIR (Guysborough). Mr. Speaker, I desire to draw the attention of the House to one of the clauses referred to by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lancaster) in his speech. The Bill says that:

> But no person shall be appointed an examiner in respect to masters and mates of ships trading on the inland waters or on coasting voyages unless he himself is a competent lake navigator and has a certificate to that effect.

I would ask the question: Why a lake navigator? The hon. gentleman who prepared this Bill evidently forgot that there was an Atlantic ocean on one side of this country and a Pacific ocean on the other. It would be a very curious thing if we should adopt a provision that a man examining a sailor at Sydney, N.S., to be captain of a vessel should be a competent lake navigator. I am referring to the fact that this Bill applies not only to inland waters but to the coasting trade. I think the fact must have escaped my hon. friend that we have a very large coast where people know nothing at all about lake navigation, and if a clause like that is necessary it should apply only to the province of Ontario or to the inland waters.

I do not see why it would not be sufficient to say, if he were a competent navigator or a man who had himself passed the usual examination as a captain or master of a ship. It seems to me that would be a better provision than to provide that he should be only a lake navigator.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. There is no such thing as a certificate for a lake navigator.

Mr. LANCASTER. If he were qualified as a competent lake navigator would he not be competent to examine masters of coasting vessels? Would not one cover the other?

Mr. SINCLAIR. I do not think so. I think the navigation of the Atlantic and Pacific coasts is the greater by all means. The people engaged in the coasting trade have no knowledge at all of the lakes, and it would be absurd to provide that the men to examine masters for the coasting trade should be competent lake navigators.

Mr. J. D. REID. I am fully in accord with this Bill. Living as I do on the St. Lawrence I know as a fact that there are a number of American citizens living in the United States who hold Canadian certificates as masters, and who come to Canada and take charge of some of our Canadian vessels to the injury of our own citizens. I also know as a fact that a great many Canadians, a number from my own constituency, who have gone to the United States and worked their way up to become masters of American vessels, have had to become American citizens and move their families to the United States before being allowed to take charge of those vessels. When Americans come over here to do dredging, they generally bring with them a lot of American citizens to take charge of their plant. I think this Bill should have gone a little further and included engineers as well as masters and mates, and I hope they may be included in it. The number of people employed on vessels in this country is limited, and, therefore, none but Canadian citizens should be employed so long as our neighbours to the south are so strict in their rules against Canadians. I hope the House will pass the Bill and thus far protect our Canadian mariners.

Mr. PARDEE. It appears to me, in listening to the remarks of the hon. gentlemen who have spoken on this Bill, that in a great many ways it is along proper lines. Nevertheless, the House cannot be too careful in looking into such a Bill as this which affects a very large class of the community; for if we go too far in the direction suggested, it may do us more harm than good. I am free to confess that I think we ought to legislate along such lines as will keep our home markets for our own people, but there are in my own constituency a large number of marine men who might be very materially affected if we passed such legislation as would have the effect of causing the United States to pass a retaliatory law. I am not prepared to consider the clauses of this Bill as it has been introduced, because I am not familiar with the nature of the amendments which it proposes to make, and therefore I would respectfully ask that it be left over for a day or two until I and other members of the House can look into it, and until I can get the advice of the Mariners Association of my own town as to what effect this Bill may have.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I think it would be an advantage to have this Bill reach the committee stage. I intend myself to point out some omissions from the Bill. After we have discussed it to some extent in committee, we might let it stand for further consideration, so as to meet my hon. friend's convenience.

Mr. BRODEUR. Before the Bill is read the second time I wish to make a few remarks with regard to some of the principles involved in it. My hon. friend proposes that the examinations shall be made under oath. This is rather an extraordinary proposition. It seems to me that examinations have never yet been made under oath. It would be very extraordinary to require that all who present themselves for examination shall be sworn before they write their papers or answers. I think my hon. friend has not given to this matter all the consideration that should be given to it. I believe this is the first time in the history of Canadian legislation that such a proposal has been made. Another proposal in the Bill which it seems to me should be carefully considered by this House is that all masters and mates coming from Great Britain, who have passed their examination there and are in possession of certificates of a very superior character, are to be debarred by the Bill from passing an examination for masters and mates in this country unless they have lived here three years.

Mr. LENNOX. They are British subjects.

Mr. LANCASTER. I am not changing that. It has always been the law.

Mr. BRODEUR. No, my hon. friend is mistaken. All British subjects since the legislation of 1894 could be admitted to pass their examinations. In 1894 the law was amended and British subjects, whether they were here only a month or six months or three years, could pass their examinations. But my hon. friend suggests that those men should not be admitted to pass their examinations. That is very serious.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What clause ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is the result of clause 1. The old section reads as follows :

> Examinations may be instituted in Canada for British subjects or for persons domiciled in Canada for at least three years.

Now my hon. friend is asking that British subjects should be debarred from passing that examination unless they have been in this country three years.

Mr. LANCASTER. No.

Mr. BRODEUR. I beg the hon. gentleman's pardon. That is what is proposed in this Bill.

Mr. LANCASTER. No.

Mr. BRODEUR. I will read to the hon. gentleman the law as it will be amended by this Bill :

> Examinations may be instituted in Canada for British subjects domiciled in Canada for at least three years.

What can that mean, if not that a British subject who has not been domiciled in Canada for three years would be debarred from passing the examination ?

Mr. LANCASTER. Does the hon. gentleman (Mr. Brodeur) want the other words struck out too, if he does I do not object.

Mr. BRODEUR. That is a different thing. I am speaking of the Bill as it is, and I am saying that the Bill has not been sufficiently considered. For, as he must see himself, this is a very serious objection to his Bill—that we should say to the seamen from Great Britain that though they are British subjects, they cannot come and pass their examination in this country until they have been domiciled here three years. There are other objections which could be brought against the Bill. It has been suggested that the Bill should be considered in committee, and the committee report progress. I have no objection to that step ; but I do not wish, by agreeing to the second reading of the Bill, to be committed to any of the principles herein embodied. There are some provisions of the Bill which might be adopted. With that reserve, I have no objection to the Bill being read the second time.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The proper time for the discussion of these details is in committee, I should say. I do not think we commit ourselves to any very definite principle by reading this Bill the second time. It may be, as the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Brodeur) has said, that a certain effect might be produced by the language of the Bill which perhaps was not contemplated. But, of course, it is almost impossible to prepare legislation—especially for a private member to prepare legislation—in such a way that it will not require correction in committee. I may point out that the government of which the hon. gentleman (Mr. Brodeur) is a member introduced a railway Bill a few years ago in which, before it passed into law, no less than fifteen hundred amendments were made, and this notwithstanding the fact that the country had the satisfaction of paying a very large sum to a gentleman in New Brunswick for his services in drafting the Bill. Therefore, I do not think there is any reproach to my hon. friend from Lincoln and Niagara (Mr. Lancaster) in what has been said. I should have supposed that the government would welcome the hon. gentleman's assistance in bringing to the attention of the House and the government a subject which is admittedly worthy of consideration.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the second time.

Mr. SPEAKER. When shall the House go into committee on said Bill ?

Some hon. MEMBERS. At the next sitting of the House.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I thought the minister's idea was to go over it to-day for the purpose of discussion, but allow the clauses to stand.

Mr. BRODEUR. I have no objection to discussing the clauses in committee.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. It being understood, of course, that the Bill stand over.

Mr. BRODEUR. And none of the clauses be adopted.

House went into committee on the Bill.

On section 1.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I would like to draw the attention of the hon. member for Lincoln and Niagara to the effect of the amendment, if he will allow me. If he will look at the statute 57-58 Victoria, chapter 42, section 3, he will see that, if the amendment suggested be adopted, that section will read as follows :—

Mr. BRODEUR.

Examinations upon oath may be instituted in Canada for British subjects domiciled in Canada for at least three years ?

The rest of the section will remain as it is. The result of that amendment, as I understand it, of course there may be some uncertainity—will be to make examinations under oath compulsory. That, if it means anything, will mean that the individual who offers himself for examination being sworn will give his answers subject to the penalty for perjury if he makes a mistake. Perhaps that is not what the hon. gentleman has in view—I am quite sure it is not. Then, by striking out the words ' or other persons,' the section will be made to provide that only those can be examnied who are British subjects and have been domiciled in Canada for at least three years. I am sure that that also is not what the hon. gentleman has in view. What he has in view, I fancy will be accomplished by saying 'British subjects who intend to become masters or mates, or persons domiciled in Canada for three years.'

Mr. LANCASTER. I agree to that.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. What about the examination on oath.

Mr. LANCASTER. As to that I would just say a word. It is not at all such a careless a piece of legislation as might be inferred from what has been said. I have had several discussions with the masters and mates on these subjects, and very able and intelligent men they showed themselves in that discussion. They pointed out that when a man offers himself for examination, a part of his qualifications, and a very large part, is in the form of the certificates he gets from men under whom he has served. Men who wish to be thought good fellows and who wish to do a good turn to another give certificates that are not true as to service, and consequently the service is becoming degraded by men who have not the qualifications they are supposed to have. It may be that what is desired in this legislation can be better accomplished by some other form of words. I do not pretend to be perfect in these matters. As to the examination on oath, of course it was not intended to make a man a perjurer by a wrong answer in examination. It was simply intended to provide that these certificates—certificates which he must produce in order to qualify—shall be the evidence of real service and not the mere results of good fellowship. So long as my hon. friend can arrange that these certificates shall be under oath, that is what I am driving at.

Mr. BRODEUR. I do not suppose that my hon. friend wants that the examination itself should be under oath, but only the certificate which the applicant has to file showing how many months he has served under a mate or master.

Mr. LANCASTER. That should be under oath.

Mr. BRODEUR. But the applicant has to make a declaration that the particulars mentioned in the certificate are true and this declaration is tantamount to an affidavit.

Mr. LANCASTER. But, what I am referring to is the certificate which the applicant produces, and my contention is that that certificate should be made under oath.

Mr. BRODEUR. But I think that point is met by the existing law under which any one who makes or procures to be made any false representation for the purpose of obtaining for himself or anybody else a certificate is guilty of a misdemeanour.

Mr. LANCASTER. But the man who certifies may be living in Buffalo or Detroit or Chicago and you cannot prosecute him there without extradition. All I am aiming at is to protect the British subject.

Mr. BRODEUR. I don't see how we could reach, even under my hon. friend's clause, a party living in the States who made a false certificate.

Mr. LANCASTER. I want the certificate to be in the form of a statutory declaration so that the person giving it could be prosecuted for perjury if it were not true.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not know how you could prosecute a man who is outside our jurisdiction. Our law governing statutory declarations would not operate in the case of a declaration of that character made in the United States. You might make an amendment providing that the declaration, if made in the United States, should be made in such a way as would give it the force and effect of an oath under the law of the United States.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The whole thing requires to be very carefully considered.

Mr. STOCKTON. I wish to call attention to section 3. It is required that the examiner shall in all cases be a competent lake navigator. That would interfere with the coasting trade and the examinations for that trade in the maritime provinces. You should require him to be a competent lake or coast navigator.

Mr. LANCASTER. I will agree to that.

Mr. BRODEUR. We have no law which speaks of lake navigators.

Mr. LANCASTER. Strike out the word 'lake' and say competent navigators.

Mr. BRODEUR. I think our regulations go far enough. So far we have had no serious complaints with regard to them. Here is our regulation :

No person shall act as an examiner of candidates for masters' and mates' certificates until he has been duly appointed, and has received from the chief examiner of masters and mates a certificate to the effect that he is qualified to act as examiner.

Well, suppose we appoint a man in Ontario for lake navigation, of course the chief examiner will have to see that this man is properly qualified in the knowledge of lake navigation. When he comes to give a certificate to a man who is called upon to discharge duties in the maritime provinces, of course he will have to see that this man is qualified in respect to coast navigation, or to navigation in that part of the country. So I think my hon. friend would seriously complicate the situation by leaving these words as to lake navigation. I think our regulations are broad enough at present. Moreover, there has never been any complaint that I know of with regard to the qualifications of examiners, and I think this clause ought to be struck out.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Before we leave section 1, let me observe that there has not been much said about the main subject of the clause, that is, to impose restrictions upon men coming from the United States to this country and obtaining certificates to act as masters or mates on vessels on the inland or minor waters of Canada. What is the view of the government with regard to the proposal of my hon. friend from Lincoln and Niagara (Mr. Lancaster) with respect to that? We have not discussed that point very much, though it seems to have been the main object of the clause, as I understand the hon. gentleman who introduced the Bill.

Mr. LANCASTER. With regard to what the Minister of Marine and Fisheries said last, I wish to submit that if we struck out the word 'lake' what would be the effect of it ? Just about what we all want, that the man should be a competent navigator.

Mr. BRODEUR. With regard to the question raised by the leader of the opposition, I have not given much consideration to that point, because I simply took the Bill as it was. I thought the Bill was unfair to British masters and mates coming to this country, that as the Bill was drafted it could be considered as debarring British subjects, who have not been living in this country for three years, from passing an examination. That is the view I took of it.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. That is satisfactory; the Minister did not look at it in this aspect, and he requires a little time for consideration before he announces the policy of the government.

Mr. BENNETT. Living on a part of the Georgian bay where there are a great many captains and mates engaged in navigation, I may say that there is a strong feeling against American captains being permitted to come in there and ply on Canadian waters and on Canadian boats, as is now the case. There has been in past years a great deal of towing of logs on the north shores of the Georgian bay and Lake Huron over to the state of Michigan and other points in the United States. However, that has been stopped, but the practice then commenced of permitting a large number of American tugs to come in and by various means to circumvent the laws of the land, has been followed up by their adopting all possible means to introduce American vessel men. There is a strong feeling in the town of Midland, Collingwood and other points against the practice that now prevails.

Mr. BRODEUR. Are not those men holding Canadian certificates, or do they come over here and act as masters without certificates ?

Mr. BENNETT. I have heard complaints in both respects, as to the fact that Americans are enjoying Canadian certificates, and the further fact that Americans come in and are allowed to ply their vocation without having even Canadian certificates. I know the feelings and the wishes of vessel men in that neighbourhood, as well as on other parts of the lake, and I have seen memorials making complaints, and I hope the government will see fit to endorse the action of my hon. friend from Lincoln and Niagara and allow this Bill to go through so that the trade may be limited to Canadians. I would even go as far as the hon. member for Leeds, and I say that the Bill should be made applicable not only to masters but also to engineers.

Mr. SINCLAIR. I would call the attention of the hon. gentleman who has charge of this Bill (Mr. Lancaster) to section 2, which provides that the applicant should make a declaration of the name of the master under whom he has served. Now, it might be difficult for him to comply with that clause. We all know that sailors do not serve under one master very long. Sometimes a sailor works for two or three months on one ship and then he goes to another, and by the time his two years are up he may have served on several. Sometimes captains are away out of the country, some of them may not be living, and it might be difficult for the applicant to comply with that provision before he can get a certificate. In England the system is different. There the sailor is employed before an officer of the Board of Trade, and when his voyage is ended he is paid off before the officer of the Board of Trade, and a record is kept of the number of days he has served, and when he applies for promotion the records are turned up to find out how many years the sailor has served. There is an official account kept of his services. We have no system of that kind in Canada with regard to our coasting and inland waters. I think it would be well to amend our law and to provide that a customs officer or some other officer should keep a record of the discharge or transfer of sailors, and of the length of time they have served, or in some other way to keep an official record of the number of years he has served.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I would like to ask the minister to state what is the practice on the lakes at the present time. Do citizens of the United States who have not a proper certificate of competence from the proper authorities in the United States, come into this country and act as captains, engineers or mates on Canadian vessels, or what is the practice with regard to that ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No, they have to be Canadians and British subjects before they can do that. If they are foreigners, they have to live in this country for three years before they are entitled to pass an examination and act as masters and mates.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. They must be domiciled here ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Domiciled for three years in this country before they can act as masters or mates. My hon. friend from Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) a few moments ago referred to the fact of some Americans coming up here. My information is that there are very few who come here and pass their examinations, because they have to reside in Canada for three years, and if they have not passed the three years in Canada they cannot pass the examination. There are very few who do that. I think my hon. friend was referring to a different state of affairs which cannot be controlled under this clause ; that is with regard to the navigation of American boats which are employing American mates. I think that is the situation to which my hon. friend is referring. As far as these certificates of masters and mates are concerned the law, in effect, is that if a man is a British subject he may apply for a certificate as master or mate on a Canadian vessel. If he is foreign-born he has to pass three years here and then he may have a right to go and pass the examination. These are the only two cases with which we have to deal under this Bill, and I think there are very, very few cases of this kind. I do not think, speaking on the spur of the moment, without having considered the question on the line brought forward by my hon. friend, that this resolution is necessary, because there are very few cases, if there are any, where Americans have come up here, have passed three years here and then passed their examinations.

Mr. L. G. McCARTHY. How is the time for which the foreign person has lived in Canada proven and before whom is it proven ?

Mr. BRODEUR. He has to make a declaration to that effect himself and if the declaration he makes is false, then he is liable to be brought before the criminal courts for a misdemeanour.

Mr. MACPHERSON. I wish to state that I have been told by masters and mates in Vancouver, and also by engineers, that the majority of the men who are acting as pilots, mates and engineers on the Yukon river, in British bottoms, are Americans. The hon. minister does not think that to be true ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No, I do not say that.

Mr. MACPHERSON. I am prepared to state that the law was simply winked at in the Yukon country. So I have been told by the shipmasters who came down to Vancouver after trying to get positions on the Yukon.

Mr. BRODEUR. That would be against the law.

Mr. MACPHERSON. Entirely against the law. I have been told also that American engineers have received permits to act on the Yukon river from our Canadian officials. I am not prepared to state positively that this is the fact, although I am told that and I have seen correspondence strongly bearing out the statement I am now making. I am of the opinion that, although this Bill may not exactly meet the occasion, the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lancaster), who has brought it in, has the right spirit at least, that is to do all we possibly can to keep the American masters and the American mates and the American engineers out of our country and keep these positions for our own people. There should be some reciprocity. The Americans apply a very, very strong law against our people, and I do not see, I cannot understand, why there should not be a strong desire on the part of our government to see that the Americans are not able to circumvent the law as they are doing to-day, as I am positively and authoritatively informed they are doing.

Mr. LANCASTER. I can assure the minister that these cases are not half as scarce as he would seem to think. If he lived near the Welland canal, as I do, and saw the number of men on the Canadian boats going through the canal, who are not British subjects who simply get around this provision by saying that they have been domiciled in Toronto, St. Catharines, or some other place in Canada, for three years, when in fact, they have only gone there occasionally or have spent only part of their time in St. Catharines, Toronto or other places, while their wives and children have been living in the United States. You cannot stop them from doing this unless you have a statute such as I propose, which says, to these men: Unless you can prove that you are a British subject, get off the boat. If we are all agreed that they should be British subjects, there is no possible harm in saying so, and I am prepared to meet all other suggestions the minister may make in order to have reasonable legislation. The principle I am fighting for is to have Canada for Canadians or for British subjects.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. As I understand the minister there is no evasion of law on the lakes, such as has been alluded to by the hon. member for Vancouver (Mr. Macpherson) in respect to the Yukon river.

Mr. BRODEUR. No, I have no information in regard to that. I have not been informed that certificates have been given in the way mentioned by the hon. member for Vancouver (Mr. Macpherson). I shall look into the question because it seems rather extraordinary that certificates would have been given in such an irregular way.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The United States law does not permit a master or mate to receive a certificate of competency unless he becomes a citizen of the United States. Am I not correct in that ? Is it true that the law of the United States does not permit any person to receive a certificate of competency as master or mate unless he becomes a citizen of the United States ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I am not very sure, but my impression is, from reading the law, that they will have to take the oath of allegiance without becoming naturalized. I am not very sure in regard to that. After reading over the document just handed to me by the hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Lancaster) it seems to me that the law simply provides that they have to take the oath of allegiance in the United States without being obliged to become American citizens.

Mr. J. D. REID. They must reside as well ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is the same with our law.

Mr. J. D. REID. I know of Americans living on the other side and yet having Canadian certificates.

Mr. LANCASTER. I have read the American statute; it says that they must first declare their intention of becoming citizens and then as soon as they do that they are to be considered citizens of the United States so they have to take the position that they are citizens of the United States. It simply provides a procedure first; it says they are then citizens and as soon as they do these things they can take positions on the boat.

Mr. BRODEUR. They have to become naturalized ?

Mr. LANCASTER. Yes, under that section.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. Perhaps the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Brodeur) is holding back information which we would like to hear. We have been told in the newspapers that at an early date, at a pilgrims' dinner in New York, a very important announcement is to be made in connection with the relations between Canada and the United States. Probably there has been an arrangement in regard to reciprocity, in this and other things, and until that dinner comes off and that announcement is made the country may have to wait for an announcement of policy in regard to this particular subject.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Was this published in the 'World'?

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. No, it was in organs of the hon. gentlemen that this announcement was made.

Mr. BRODEUR. Would the hon. member for Vancouver (Mr. Macpherson) be kind enough to give me information in regard to these certificates in the Yukon of which he speaks.

Mr. MACPHERSON. I shall be pleased to do so, I think there is some correspondence in the department.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Of course the minister observes that the member for Grenville (Mr. Reid) says that he knows of one case where a master who is an American citizen living on the American side has received a certificate of competency and is acting as master of a Canadian vessel. That would clearly be an evasion of the law.

Mr. BRODEUR. It may be that the law has been violated and that certificates have been given in a way that is not absolutely correct. Of course the law provides for that, and it may be a question as to whether it is necessary to amend the law when it seems to meet the situation.

Mr. L. G. McCARTHY. There is no doubt that the feeling among the men on the upper lakes, as has been stated by the member for East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett), is that this law is not being carried out in accordance with the intention. Whether it is the fault of the administration of the officers, on whom devolves the responsibility of its enforcement I do not know, but the Canadian masters and mates are perfectly satisfied that they are not getting fair treatment as compared with the treatment of Canadian masters and mates under the United States laws and I want to place myself on record as emphatically endorsing the view of the hon. member for Vancouver (Mr. Macpherson) that we should make it as difficult for an American to get papers in this country, entitling him to become a master or a mate as it is for a Canadian to obtain such a certificate in the United States. If we do that I do not think any harm would come of it.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Would that be going far enough? I have not looked at the Act but it seems to me the Act provides that in order to take the examination it is simply necessary to make a declaration of intention to become an American citizen. The applicant may never become an American citizen, may never do anything further, so that will not carry us very far. It seems to me we should carry the matter further and see whether we cannot restrict the certificates to British subjects domiciled in Canada and make them valuable only so long as the Canadian domicile continues. That may be the most effective way to meet the difficulty.

Mr. TAYLOR. I have seen the American law but there is a case which has come under my own observation. Messrs. Folger Brothers of Kingston have a line of steamers running through the Thousand Islands. These steamers have American register. They wished to have Mr. Carnegie of Rockport to command one of these steamers but in order to qualify he had to move his family to Cape Vincent for a certain time before he could take out papers for that boat. He had to become an American resident, to live in the United States and become a citizen of the United States before he could sail the steamer.

Mr. BRODEUR. Is not the Canadian law the same? When we are dealing with a Canadian registered vessel is she not obliged to have for master or mate a British subject?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. No, one domiciled in Canada for three years.

Mr. J. D. REID. As I understand, if an American citizen comes to this side and is on a Canadian steamer for three years as wheelsman, &c., although he has always resided on the American side, after he has had a certain number of years on the Canadian steamer he is granted a certificate as master. That has occurred in a case I know of and the man has never been a resident of Canada.

Mr. BRODEUR. That is a violation of the existing law.

Mr. J. D. REID. That is what I say. He has his master's paper and can sail a boat on either side of the river. He has an American certificate and if he can do better on an American vessel he takes her but if not he takes a Canadian vessel. A case of that kind is most unfair to our citizens.

Mr. LANCASTER. The minister will notice that under the present law, all a man has to do is to prove in some way that he has been domiciled in Canada for three years, then he gets a certificate good to him for ever He is an American citizen all the time, he was when he got a certificate, but he brings his family over to Niagara Falls from Buffalo or to Windsor from Detroit, or perhaps sends them as far in as St. Catharines, eleven miles from the border, because he can there get on the boats going through the Welland canal very handily, and lives a part of that three years there, so that he will not be accused of perjury. when he swears he has been domiciled in Canada. Then he has that certificate given to him for ever, as a Canadian master, but he never was a Canadian citizen. He can get jobs in the United States as an American citizen and as an American citizen can keep Canadians out of jobs on this side.

On section 2,

The said section 3 is further amended by adding the following subsections thereto :—

2. No person shall be entitled to present himself for examination for master until he has obtained a certificate of competency as mate, and has served as such for at least twelve months, and furnishes a statutory declaration of the master under whom he served of such service.

3. No person shall be entitled to present himself for examination as mate until he has served as wheelman for a period of twenty-four months, and furnishes to the examiner a statutory declaration of the master under whom he served of such service.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN. I wish to call attention to subsection 3 of section 2 which you have just read. This is to be added as a subsection to section 4 of chapter 42, of the statutes of 1894 which was substituted for section 3 of chapter 73, of the revised statutes. Now, section 4 of the statutes of 1894 provides for the examination of masters and mates for inland waters and for coasting voyages. 'Coasting voyages' are defined by a previous section to include

A voyage between Canada and Newfoundland or St. Pierre and Miquelon, or a port or place in the United States of America, or in the West Indies or South America, or in Central America or Mexico.

If this amendment should become law the result would be that any person, say in the province of Nova Scotia, applying for a certificate as master or mate, would have to satisfy the examiner that he had served for twenty-four months as a wheelman. That seems rather peculiar to me, but possibly there may be some explanation. I imagine my hon. friend (Mr. Lancaster) has in mind that the applicant shall serve as wheelman aboard a steamer in inland waters, so it would be unreasonable to prohibit a person from applying for a certificate as master or mate say in one of the maritime provinces, and prevent him from taking the examination because he has not served for twenty-four months as a wheelman.

Mr. LANCASTER. Why ?

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN. Because it is not a qualification at all. I move that subsection 3 be struck out.

Mr. DANIEL. It is absurd.

Mr. LANCASTER. I think we had better not be in too big a hurry to strike that out. The reason for that clause is that the Masters and Mates Association, after discussing that with me, convinced me that it was absolutely necessary that a man should have qualified as wheelman before acting as mate, and my hon. friend now intimates that it is absurd to require that qualification. He might perhaps tell me how if a man has had no experience as a wheelman he would be qualified as a mate to manage a vessel.

Mr. DANIEL. I would like to ask the hon. gentleman to explain what he means by a wheelman.

Mr. LANCASTER. The hon. gentleman surely does not want me to enter into a disertation as to what a wheelman is.

Mr. DANIEL. I do.

Mr. LANCASTER. Then I am sorry to tell my hon. friend that I cannot take up the time of the House in that way, because every one who is interested in navigation knows what a wheelman is. If we have to explain to gentlemen exactly what we mean by a wheelman, we will be told that we have left out some part of the qualifications of a wheelman and be told there are other things a wheelman does. These words have a technical meaning which every navigator understands.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Not in the coasting trade.

Mr. LANCASTER. This section is dealing with inland water navigation particularly. If it is the case that there are words in that section which are not applicable to the coasting trade, I would point out that I have not brought in the coasting vessels; the section of the statute to which I am applying this has amalgamated these two things. Some gentlemen about me ask questions in a semi-loud tone of voice and seem to expect me to answer them, but they will not stand on their feet to explain what they mean.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN. Will the hon. gentleman explain ?

Mr. LANCASTER. The hon. gentleman behind me (Mr. A. K. Maclean) says, as I understand, that this clause will not do to apply to coasting vessels. Has the hon. member for Lunenburg (Mr. A. K. Maclean) any objection to this applying to the inland waters ? These are what it is intended to apply to, and, if it will meet his views, I am willing to insert words to that effect. If this is not an important matter upon the coasts of Canada, I am told by the masters and mates who consult me that it is an important matter on the inland waters. Therefore, if it will suit my hon. friend, I am wiling to have the provision limited to those waters, so that it will not apply to the coasting trade.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN. I cannot say that this will be satisfactory, because the objection I raised might also apply to the inland waters. I think it is quite possible that there are sailing ships on the great lakes of Canada. It is impossible for me to give a technical definition of a wheelman. If my hon. friend could do so, a great deal of difficulty might be removed. I think the clause should be struck out altogether.

Mr. LENNOX. I think it was understood that the Bill would not be finally disposed of to-day, but that we should have a discussion upon it and then let it stand for further consideration. A wheelman, I understand, is a person who takes a position upon a steamer under a master. We might get over the difficulty which has been suggested by adding, after the word 'wheelman,' the words 'or a person who has served on a sailing vessel.' The difficulty, I suppose, arises because on some sailing vessels there are no wheelmen. But the object of the hon. gentleman who introduces this Bill is quite evident, and if we allow it to stand over there will be no great difficulty, with the assistance of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries and the Minister of Justice, in adopting language which would cover the various cases which could arise in connection not only with the coasting trade, but with the shipping trade on the inland waters of Canada. With the principle involved in this Bill I am heartily in sympathy. Though I do not live on the coast, I live near enough to those who follow the calling of mariners on the great lakes of Canada to know from conversations which I have had with many of these gentlemen that they have experienced great inconvenience from unjust competition at the hands of American citizens, and I would like to see the Bill confine this privilege not only to persons who are resident in Canada, but to persons who are actually British subjects, whether Canadians or people from the British isles.

Mr. E. M. MACDONALD. I think this legislation, as submitted by my hon. friend from Lincoln, is of so indefinite a character that the suggestion which has been made that it should stand over for further consideration is the only wise one to consider at this stage. As the hon. member for Lunenburg has pointed out, section 2 would create serious complications with regard to coasting vessels and cause the greatest possible difficulty throughout the maritime provinces. I am sure that my hon. friend, on reflection, will realize that there is no such person as a wheelman recognized as an officer on vessels engaged in the coasting service.

Mr. LANCASTER. I have already suggested that we limit it to the inland waters.

What is the use of our quarrelling about something which is not any longer in dispute ?

Mr. E. M. MACDONALD. When my hon. friend proposes legislation which affects interests in which others are concerned, he should be willing to hear it discussed.

Mr. LANCASTER. When the point is conceded, what is the use of talking about it?

Mr. E. M. MACDONALD. I would suggest another point for the consideration of my hon friend. By section 2 my hon. friend proposes to confine the proof of service to a statutory declaration of the master under whom the person has served. That master may have died or left the country, and it may be impossible to obtain that evidence. My hon. friend proposes that Americans should not be permitted to hold certificates for service on Canadian vessels. That proposition is one to which I think the House should give serious consideration. There is, however, this difference between the legislation which he proposes and the law that exists in the United States. By virtue of their Naturalization Act, a person going into that country can take out what are known in common parlance as his first papers; he can make a declaration of his intention to become an American citizen, which will qualify him to obtain papers to enable him to act as a master or mate. We have no such law in this country, and the proposal in my hon. friend's Bill would necessitate a person who comes into this country intending to remain here, to be actually domiciled here for the statutory period necessary to become a British subject before he could act as a master or mate. To that extent the legislation which he proposes is in excess of that which exists in the United States. To the extent of limiting the officers of our carrying trade in Canada to our own citizens I am disposed to agree with him, but we should deal with the legislation on that subject with the greatest possible care and only after the fullest possible consideration.

Mr. LANCASTER. If this legislation does not fit the case, perhaps the hon. gentleman will tell us what he would suggest in place of it.

Mr. E. M. MACDONALD. The hon. gentleman is proposing the legislation. I will deal with it when it comes up.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN. I agree with the hon. member from Pictou that it would be unwise to attempt to pass this legislation in its present shape. Some radical amendments are required. While I do not object to the principle of the measure, I think sufficient consideration has not been given to the Bill by my hon. friend from Lincoln, and I would propose that the committee rise report progress and ask leave to sit again.

Mr. STOCKTON. It was definitely suggested by the Minister of Justice that no section should be passed to-day, but that the Bill should be moved into committee for the purpose of discussion.

The main object sought by the promoter of the Bill is an excellent one, namely, that only British subjects shall be capable of acting as masters or mates on ships registered in Canada. Are we prepared to adopt that principle ? That is a fair question for discussion. There is no necessity to move any resolution. The question is only up for discussion, and when it comes up again, if the hon. member for Pictou (Mr. E. M. Macdonald) has any valuable suggestion to make to protect the coasting trade of Nova Scotia or if we have any to make to protect the coasting trade of New Brunswick we shall be quite prepared to accept them.

Mr. BRODEUR. There is no objection to the clauses of the Bill being discussed without adopting any of them. That will facilitate discussion another day. It might be advisable even to refer the Bill to a special committee. My hon. friend from Simcoe (Mr. Lennox) raised some question with regard to the use of the word 'wheelman' in subsection three.

Mr. LENNOX. I suggested the using of the word 'sailor' which would make the language more general. I am not conversant with the terms used in navigation, but my object is to make the clause applicable not only to wheelmen but to persons occupying a similar position on sailing vessels.

Mr. STOCKTON. From a cursory reading of this section, it would seem to apply only to steamers. 'Wheelmen' on a sailing vessel has no very pronounced meaning. Every able-bodied seaman must take his turn at the wheel.

Mr. SINCLAIR. An able-bodied seaman is a man who knows how to steer. An ordinary seaman is one who works around the deck. These are the two distinctions on a sailing vessel.

Mr. BRODEUR. I am informed by the department that in several instances we have had complaints about the difficulty of securing masters and mates. People have been reported for not having Canadian masters or mates and they have replied that they could not find any. I am afraid that the twenty-four months required as the period in which a man must serve as wheelman is too long.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What is a wheelman on a steamer ? Is he an officer ?

Mr. J. D. REID. On the St. Lawrence river, a man cannot take the position of wheelman until he has served a year or two on the steamer as deck hand. He is then given the position of wheelman and learns the compass from the mate.

Mr. DANIEL. I understand that wheelman on a steamer is a grade of itself. Steamers have their captains and their mates and they have also their wheelmen and deck hands. The wheelman does not serve as an ordinary man before the mast. But on sailing vessels, every able-bodied seaman is expected to take his turn at the wheel. I think that if this subsection were to read :

No person shall be entitled to present himself for examination as mate for the inland waters of Canada until he has served as wheelman for a period of twenty-four months.

It would be all right. But as the clause stands, it is extremely objectionable.

Mr. BRODEUR. It seems to me that if in the case of inland waters, we required that the certificate of the master under whom a man has served should be made in the form of a statutory declaration and then do not require such declaration in the case of certificates given by masters of sea-going vessels, there is lack of uniformity.

Mr. DANIEL. As inland navigation is confined principally, if not altogether, to steamers, and as sea navigation includes sailing vessels as well as steamers, what you would require as evidence of competency in the one case need not be required in the other.

Mr. BRODEUR. But what I am pointing out is that there can be no reason why you should insist on a statutory declaration in the case of inland navigation and not in the case of sea-going vessels.

Mr. DANIEL. That is an entirely different thing.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I would draw the attention of my hon. friend to the fact that the period of probation here proposed—twenty-four months—is somewhat long. You will remember that inland navigation is limited to six months each year, so that twenty-four months would be practically four years. Possibly what he has in mind is two seasons. So, when we deal with the Bill again, he might bear that in mind.

Mr. LANCASTER. The master and mates who saw me thought that three years was a proper period of probation. On inland waters they have about eight months' navigation, and what they counted on was three seasons of about eight months. Still, eighteen months might be a reasonable period.

On section 3,

Section 4 of the Act respecting certificates to masters and mates of ships is amended by adding after the word 'effect' in the last line the words 'but no person shall be appointed an examiner in respect to masters and mates of ships trading on the inland waters or on coasting voyages unless he himself is a competent lake navigator and has a certificate to that effect.'

Mr. LANCASTER. The idea of my hon. friends around me here seems to be that the word 'lake' should be struck out, making the provision merely that the person should be a competent navigator.

Mr. BRODEUR. There is not only that point, but the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lancaster) is providing for a certificate where the law does not now provide for a certificate.

Mr. LANCASTER. Speaking off-hand and in view of the fact that it is not intended to pass these clauses now, I do not see any objection to having the word 'lake' struck out. At the same time, I am glad of the opportunity to think it over.

On section 4.

The section substituted for section 7 of the said Act by section 2 of chapter 41 of the statutes of 1891 is amended by adding after the words 'boats' in the fourteenth line the words 'such certificates to be conditioned to become void upon the holder thereof renouncing his allegiance to the British Crown.'

Mr. BRODEUR. This and the next clause, I understand, are to bring the law into conformity with the amendment made in the first clause ?

Mr. LANCASTER. Yes, to carry into full effect the protection of British subjects.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. Has not the Minister of Marine and Fisheries heard enough in this discussion to justify him in taking charge of this measure and produce a Bill that will meet the case ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I will consider that point. But the Bill of my hon. friend (Mr. Lancaster) perhaps may be made into a good measure.

Mr. LANCASTER. Thank you.

Progress reported.

RAILWAY ACT, 1903, AMENDMENT.

On the order,

Second reading of Bill (No. 8) in further amendment of the Railway Act, 1903.—Mr. Lancaster.

Mr. E. A. LANCASTER (Lincoln and Niagara). This Bill is a very important one and I shall take some time in discussing it. It is now ten minutes to six, and, if the government has no objection, we will call it six o'clock and go on with the Bill to-night.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Go on.

Mr. LANCASTER. Of course, I can talk until six o'clock. But I am ready to go on, and I want to get the Bill dealt with to-day. I may not get another chance this session.

Mr. LANCASTER.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I will ask my hon. friend (Mr. Lancaster) to allow this Bill to stand. If agreeable to him, we would like to adjourn at six o'clock.

Mr. LANCASTER. Of course, I do not want to be mean about it and prevent the adjournment if that is generally desired. But my position is that when a Bill standing in my name is called I ought to be ready to go on. And I am ready to go on. But, if the adjournment takes place now, and there should be trouble in reaching this Bill on account of other Bills coming up, I want it understood that I shall be allowed an opportunity to discuss this matter.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. By all means.

REPORT PRESENTED.

Report of the Minister of Justice as to the penitentiaries of Canada for the year ending June 30, 1905.

ADJOURNMENT—BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I would like the attention of the Minister of the Interior—who is not in his place—to be called to the absence of the report of his department. I would ask when we may expect that report, and would urge the importance of having it placed upon the table at the earliest possible moment. I would also ask the Prime Minister what business the House is to take up to-morrow.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. We shall move for Committee of Supply and, in Committee of Supply, shall deal with the estimates of the Minister of Justice, probably the Mounted Police, some of the Customs Department and the Post Office Department.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. And the report of the Minister of the Interior ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I will have an answer about that to-morrow.

Mr. FOSTER. And volume No. 2 of the Auditor General's Report. That is very urgently needed.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I knew my hon. friend's (Mr. Foster's) desire and so communicated with the Auditor General. He tells me that the volume is in print and is now being bound, and we shall have it early next week.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 5.50 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY, March 23, 1906.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

FIRST READINGS.

Bill (No. 41) respecting the Vancouver, Westminster and Yukon Railway Company.—Mr. Macpherson.

Bill (No. 42) to incorporate the Buffalo, Niagara and Toronto Railway Company.—Mr. German by Mr. Campbell.

Bill (No. 43) to incorporate the Brandon Transfer Railway Company.—Mr. Sifton by Mr. Johnson.

Bill (No. 44) respecting the Kingston and Pembroke Railway Company.—Mr. Hall.

Bill (No. 45) respecting Patent of The Anderson Puffed Rice Company.—Mr. Hall.

REPORTS PRESENTED.

Civil Service List of Canada.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Annual report of the Department of Marine and Fisheries for the year ending June 30, 1905.—Hon. Sydney Fisher (for the Minister of Marine and Fisheries.)

NORFOLK ELECTION TRIAL.

Mr. SPEAKER. I have the honour to inform the House that I have received from the Hon. Chancellor Boyd and the Hon. Mr. Justice Teetzel, two of the judges selected for the trial of election petitions pursuant to the Dominion Controverted Elections Act a certificate and report relating to the election petition for the electoral district of Norfolk, by which the sitting member is declared to be duly elected.

REPORT OF THE DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would ask the Minister of the Interior, if he were here, when we may expect the report of the Department of the Interior. I asked the Prime Minister as to that yesterday.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I asked my colleague to-day about it, and he informs me that the report is all in the hands of the printer, and ought to be down at an early day.

RECOGNITION OF VOYAGEURS.

Mr. SAM HUGHES. I wish to draw the attention of the Minister of Militia to the answer which was given to the question asked yesterday about the voyageurs in the Red River expedition. The question was :

Is it the intention of the government to grant boatmen or voyageurs, who served on the Red River expedition of 1870, scrip or medals for their services ?

The answer was :

It was decided by the government of the day that they were employed as civilians and not eligible for medals or scrip. They were, in fact, treated precisely as were the teamsters employed at the same time. It is not intended to depart from the decision then reached.

I desire to ask, did not the teamsters in the 1885 rebellion receive medals and scrip ?

Hon. Sir FREDERICK BORDEN (Minister of Militia). I am informed that they did not. They were paid exceptionally high rates, and after careful consideration it was decided not to grant medals, and they were not granted.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. This is for 1870, not 1885.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I beg the hon. gentleman's pardon, I will inquire about that, but I do not think they were.

SUPPLY.

House in Committee of Supply.

Administration of justice, $8,925.

Mr. FOSTER. I would call the attention of the First Minister to the fact that the volume of the Auditor General's Report which includes the expenses of the Minister of Justice is not yet down.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. If my hon. friend was not prepared to go on with this to-day, he should have taken exception yesterday, when I announced our intention of taking it up. Nothing else is at present provided for we might agree to leave one or two items for discussion until the remainder of the Auditor General's Report is down. I understand that it is expected to be down on Monday or Tuesday.

Mr. FOSTER. It is very inconvenient to take up estimates the context of which is not shown. It seems on the face of it a fair proposal to say, we will reserve an item, but that never works out, and I think we are not asking too much in asking for the Auditor General's Report relating to the estimates which are to be taken up. The Customs and Post Office expenses are in the volumes which we have, and we are prepared to go on with these, but we are not prepared to go on with the Justice estimates.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I will do anything to accommodate my hon. friend. If exception had been taken last evening to our going on with the Justice estimates, I would have made preparations accordingly. I do not see the Minister of Customs or the Postmaster General here, but I expect them before long. I would suggest that we go on with a few of the items of Justice in the meantime.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The reason I did not take objection last evening is a very plain one. I met the Auditor General at six o'clock in the hall, and he told me that a limited number of copies of the second volume would be ready to-day. I asked him to have a copy sent to my hon. friend from North-Toronto (Mr. Foster), and I understood that that would be done. But for that I would have mentioned to the Prime Minister last night that it would not be convenient for us to go on with the Justice estimates. I would have been willing to go on even if we had had a limited number of copies. It may be that there are some in the post office now.

Administration of justce—miscellaneous expenditure, $7,500.

Hon. CHARLES FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice). Hon. members will notice a very large reduction in this item. This is a result of the creation of the two new provinces. They will be charged with the administration of justice within their boundaries, and consequently we shall be able to get along with a relatively small amount this year.

Mr. FOSTER. Broadly speaking, what is included in this item?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The cost of administering justice in the Northwest Territories as now constituted, that is, in the remaining portions which are not included in the two new provinces; also the expenses incurred in connection with extradition cases and in connection with fugitive offenders from or to other parts of the empire; also copies of testimony in application for clemency; also sundry matters not otherwise provided for. It is believed that this will be ample to cover the actual expenses, but it is impossible to make a very close estimate. The expenditure under the different headings of this item last year were $85,066.67.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What territory is covered by the item before us, and what is the population of that territory?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. It will be that portion of Mackenzie district north of Alberta and Saskatchewan, the Keewatin district and Ungava. In addition we shall be obliged to provide for the other items I have mentioned in connection with extradition and the Act relating to fugitive offenders.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What is the judicial system of the Territories at the present time? Is justice administered by stipendiary magistrates or by judges?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. In the Northwest Territories justice will be administered by judges of the new provinces. My hon. friend will remember that we allowed the judicial system to continue until such time as new arrangements were made for the new provinces. There has not been a meeting of the legislatures and no new arrangements have been made. When they have organized their judicial systems we will make arrangements for the appointment of magistrates. The portion of Mackenzie north of Alberta and Saskatchewan will be administered judicially from there, and Keewatin from Manitoba.

Administration of justice—living allowance for judge of Atlin district, $900.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. This is a continuation of the vote of last session of living allowance for Judge Young to make up for the cost of living in the Atlin district, which is supposed to be far in excess of that in other parts of British Columbia. The judge's salary is $3,000.

Supreme Court of Canada, $18,887.50.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The only change here is with respect to one new appointment of a junior second-class clerk, Miss Geary. The appointment is made on the recommendation of the registrar who says that in view of the increased work of the court another stenographer and typewriter is necessary.

Mr. FOSTER. Up to this time, in this item the words 'Nothwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act' have not appeared.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. They apply exclusively to Miss Geary and are necessary because, as I understand, Miss Geary is beyond what may be called the canonical age.

Mr. FOSTER. What a splendid thing it would be if we could have one minister and one department in whose estimates these words did not appear.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. It is only a little sin.

Exchequer Court of Canada, $10,037.50.

Mr. FOSTER. That seems to be exactly the same for the next nine months as for the whole of the current year.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The reason for this is given by the registrar in a report in which he says that he is asking for the $4,000 as it was his intention to ask for $5,000 had the vote been for the whole fiscal year instead of nine months. He says that for the past five or six years it has been impossible for him to make both ends meet with an appropriation of $4,000, the result being that at the end of each fiscal year he has had to carry over a large amount to be paid out of the new appropriation, thus crippling at once his contingencies account for the year. He was obliged to ask for a supplementary vote last year and will have to ask for $1,000 this year, his contingencies having been exhausted except about $700 or $800. The business of the court is increasing. It is always impossible for one to make an exact estimate of the expenditure of the court, because it depends on the volume of business during the year. The greater the volume of business outside of Ottawa, the greater the charge for travelling expenses. One of the largest items of contingencies for the fiscal year is that of stenographers' fees, including the sum due for the last fiscal year, and on account of the business coming before the court a larger sum will be required. Last year the expenditure in connection with the fees of stenographers was $2,850. Of course, that was only an apparent outlay, becuase it all comes back by way of stamps. The reason for the last item, postage and stationery for Admiralty Court judges and registrars, $112.50, is that it has been decided to allow postage and stationery to the local admiralty judges, that is to say, that the judges who are appointed to act in admiralty cases as members of the Exchequer Court. The intention is to allow each of them $5 per annum for postage and $20 for stationery, making $25 each. As there are six judges, the total amount will be $150 per annum, and for nine months $112.50.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Where do you provide for these salaries to local judges in admiralty ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I think the judges are provided for in the item covering the Exchequer Court. My hon. friend will find the item under the heading of Exchequer Court of Canada.

Yukon Territory—
Travelling allowances of judges..$ 1,125
Living allowances of judges.. .. 11,250

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. How many judges are there ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Three.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Has the minister any information as to this particular matter ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. My hon. friend will remember that last year when this matter was up for consideration, it was decided that I should examine into the question and ascertain whether, with respect to the living allowances of our officials and judges in the Yukon Territory, it might not be found possible to make some reduction. I had the matter looked into, and as a result the information I obtained was that the conditions in the Yukon were still almost the same as they were when these living allowances were granted. If the hon. gentleman wishes to have that matter discussed more fully, I would wait till the member for the Yukon (Mr. Thompson) was present, as he might have some information to give which I do not possess with respect to that question.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I suppose there is a written report upon it ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. Who reported ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. One of the judges in the Territories, Judge Craig.

Mr. FOSTER. Then there was no further examination made, because a great many officials are involved in this matter in the different departments. What we found out last year was that a different scale, if it were a scale, was adopted and carried out in different departments, that there was not uniformity. Now, is that the only report that the minister has, or is there a general report on living expenses taking all the grades through ? It is not in one respect the most unprejudiced report when it comes from a party directly interested; though I am not casting suspicion upon the report as being untrue or anything of the kind. But if some person could have looked into the whole thing and given a report upon the whole matter, some person not personally interested in the question, we might have got at the facts in a little different way, and may be with a different result.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I think that is perfectly fair, and if my hon. friend wishes, we will allow this item to stand. My recollection is that an official of the Auditor General's office was sent up to the Yukon for the purpose of auditing the accounts, and I think some report was given by him, but I am not quite certain. Perhaps it would be fairer to wait in order to ascertain if he made any report, and if he did, I will bring it down.

Mr. FOSTER. I think some get larger allowances than their salaries.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The salaries of the judges are equal to the living allowances they get.

Mr. FOSTER. Some get considerably more. I suppose a man on a small salary eats as much as a man on a large salary.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I note what my hon. friend says. An officer of the police court gets $600 more in the way of living allowances than his salary. However, we will let this item stand.

Dominion police, including one second-class clerk at $1,200, $27,750.

Mr. FOSTER. How many police ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. One commissioner, one inspector, one inspector of secret service, three sergeants of police, fifteen grade 'A' first-class constables, nine first-class constables, four second-class constables, two third-class constables, four supernumerary constables, one mail boy and one second-class clerk. The four supernumeraries are employed here during the session of parliament. They get $1.50 a day.

Mr. SAM HUGHES. Will the minister explain the system of promotions in force in the Dominion police ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I think the Dominion police probably come the nearest to the military police of any force I know of in the Dominion. There are no promotions or appointments made except on the recommendation of the commissioner. He is absolutely in control and I think it is necessary, if we wish to preserve the efficiency of the force, that these matters should be left in the control of the commissioner. I need not say anything about his competence or qualifications.

Mr. FOSTER. There is absolutely no political patronage ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. None whatever. Of course, I may say if I were asked to make a recommendation to the commissioner I would do so.

Customs—salaries and contingent expenses of the several courts in the various provinces and in the Northwest Territories, including pay for overtime of officers, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $971,150.

Mr. DANIEL. What is the cause of the increase in the amount ?

Hon. WM. PATERSON (Minister of Customs). This is for the various ports covering the Dominion and we ask this amount for salaries and for overtime. There is an increase of $50,000 per annum, or for the nine months $37,500. The estimate for the nine months ending March 31 is $1,214,525, and for the twelve months it would be $1,619,366.67. The amount of the vote in 1905-6 was $1,554,865. Therefore the increase is $64,501.67. That is putting it on the basis of the full year. We are asking altogether for next year $64,000. Of this $50,000 is for increases to officers and for the new ports that may be opened during the year 1906-7.

Mr. DANIEL. Has the hon. minister any idea of what new ports will be opened ?

Mr. PATERSON. There are a great many applications, but we are opening no more than we can possibly help. We try to give all the consideration to the mercantile interest, but the pressure for new ports to be opened is so great and it will entail so much additional expenditure that we have to be convinced that there is a great necessity for them before we are able to meet the wishes of the people. We can only estimate for the coming year by our experience of last year. We took $50,000 extra last year and there is an unexpended balance of $300 or $400. It was estimated very closely. We had to take two estimates ; we had to take the original estimate and a supplementary estimate. This year we do not expect to do that. Of that amount there was about one-half expended in increases in the salaries of officers. The other half was consumed in the opening of new ports and for additional officers at the ports already opened.

Mr. SAM HUGHES.

Mr. BLAIN. Would the hon. minister give us a list of those opened last year ?

Mr. PATERSON. Out of the increased appropriation of $50,000 for 1905-6—that is for the current year—there was an aggregate increase of $23,250 to 304 officers in the various provinces excepting the Yukon. The list is made up as follows :

Province.	No. of officers.	Total increase.
Ontario..	100	$7,600
Quebec..	73	5,390
New Brunswick..	25	1,850
Nova Scotia..	42	2,340
Prince Edward Island..	5	250
Manitoba..	35	2,910
British Columbia..	19	2,210
Alberta..	2	200
Saskatchewan	3	200

So that, last year, out of the fund of $50,000 that parliament was kind enough to grant we used $23,250 of the $50,000 to give added remuneration to these 304 officers. We expect, during this year, if parliament is willing to vote what we have asked, to spend a like amount for the same purpose and then we are taking a balance of $25,000 or so for the additions that we will have to make to the staff and for any new ports that we may feel impelled to open, though, as I said before, we are going very carefully in that matter.

Mr. DANIEL. Are these increases statutory increases or does the government pick out certain employees or officials and give them certain increases ?

Mr. PATERSON. No, they are not statutory in the outside service. They have to be granted on merit as each case commends itself to the department. Statutory increases are confined to the inside service.

Mr. BLAIN. The hon. minister did not give us a list of the new ports opened last year ?

Mr. PATERSON. New ports were opened at Alexandria, Ont., Bannerman and Yorkton, Man., and Crofton and Venanda, B.C. Glace Bay was made a chief port.

Mr. COCKSHUTT. Did the hon. minister take into consideration the application made last year for a new port in the Muskoka district where a very large number of American tourists come during the summer season. I think the nearest port is Orillia where they were able to make their entries at the present time. It was thought that if there were an office at Gravenhurst, Bracebridge, or Huntsville, it would be a very great convenience and would enable travellers to get their luggage through on the same train with themselves. Has that been taken into consideration ?

Mr. PATERSON. A special officer is sent there during the tourist season but a permanent port has not been established.

Mr. W. WRIGHT. I would urge upon the minister the necessity there is for establishing a customs port either at Bracebridge or Huntsville, which would be a great convenience to the business people in that locality. I might tell the minister that there is one firm alone there which imports over $1,000,000 worth of goods per annum and it is very inconvenient to them to be compelled to make their entries either at Orillia or at Toronto. It would certainly be a matter of very great convenience indeed if the minister could give a port further up in the Muskoka district, either at Bracebridge or Huntsville.

Mr. PATERSON. The question of constituting a port at Bracebridge has been pressed upon the department very strongly, and as the hon. gentleman (Mr. Wright) says the proposal possesses a good deal of merit. But we have so many applications that we are necessarily forced to go slowly, or, I am afraid parliament would hardly like to give us the amount we would have to ask for. I recognize that Bracebridge has as strong a claim as many places where in times gone by ports have been established. I cannot say more than that Bracebridge is on the waiting list and is not forgotten entirely.

Mr. DANIEL. On whose recommendation does the Minister of Customs increase the salaries of officers in the outside service ?

Mr. PATERSON. We like to get the reports of the collectors and of our inspectors as to the circumstances which justify an increase. We have 1,600 officers altogether under the department. In Toronto and Montreal we had numbers of men who were getting only $500 a year, and while that might be considered a fair salary many years ago I think the House will agree that in view of the increased expense of living in the cities, that pay was not sufficient. Wherever we found officers with $500 a year in the cities, without exception we gave them $550 one year, and last year we increased it to $600. We think they will have to remain at that for some length of time. A great portion of the increased vote went in that way. In the case of increasing the collectors' salaries we exercised our judgment. Probably the collector would draw our attention to the fact that the business of the port had increased, and we could judge of that not only from the revenue of the port but also by the number of entries which is perhaps a better indication of the increase of the work. In these cases we have been able to give the collectors a little more salary. That, in a general way, is how the increases have been given.

Mr. DANIEL. I would like to know how it is done in a 'particular' way. Are increases given on the recommendation of the member for the constituency, or have salaries been increased because of the fact that they were low ?

Mr. PATERSON. The guiding principle was to increase salaries that were low. We have to have the reports of our inspectors, and in the case of collectors we determine by looking at the work of the office. I would not say that members do not make representations, but we do not feel impelled to act upon the representations of the members. I can assure my hon. friend (Mr. Daniel) that should he or any other member of the House make representations which in the view of the department were reasonable—I would not say that they would be carried out, but they would be fully considered and if not granted one year perhaps they would in another year. I suppose my hon. friend wants to get at whether the thing is administered in a fair and honourable and businesslike maner ?

Mr. DANIEL. Yes.

Mr. PATERSON. I can tell my hon. friend in a general way, that that is what the department desires to do.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. I am sure that any hon. gentleman in this House who has looked into the question will not accuse the minister of either over-manning the department or being extravagant about the salaries paid to the officers. I will give the House a fair statement of the situation as it is in Hamilton to-day, and as it was in 1897. I have been making every effort for the last year or two to get additional help in the customs house at Hamilton, and as I have not been successful I can speak somewhat feelingly on the subject. In 1897 there were 34 men on the staff in the Hamilton customs house, and in the year 1905 there are only 33, or one less than eight years ago. The increase in the salaries paid to the officials in the Hamilton customs house this year over 1897, amounts to the paltry sum of $196. Now, in 1895-96 the revenue of the Hamilton customs house amounted to $614,433.55 while in 1904-5 the receipts were $1,270,312.06. During that period the receipts have doubled in Hamilton, and yet there is one customs house officer less, and the increase with the salary list amounts to the insignificant sum of $196. The House will see that the Customs Department has been run most economically as far as Hamilton is concerned ; indeed, I think too much so. I trust the minister will see his way clear in the near future to give us more assistance in that office.

Mr. PATERSON. We have not been able to meet the wish of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Zimmerman) in Hamilton, but we have very expert officers there and while I admit the revenue has increased and the work has greatly increased also, yet we are forced to be as economical as we can and so far the officers in Hamilton have managed to get along. As I have said about $25,000 went for increases to officers already in the service. During the past fiscal year we were forced to add 33 new officers whose salaries amount to $21,730. These are additions we had to make to the staffs at ports already constituted. Of these 33 officers, 12 are in Ontario, one in Quebec, 1 in New Brunswick, 3 in Nova Scotia, 11 in Manitoba, and 5 in British Columbia. Of the Ontario officers, two were appointed in Port Arthur, one at Alexandria where a new office was opened, one at St. Thomas, one at Toronto, one at Toronto Junction, and four at Windsor where the work has increased very largely. As hon. gentlemen know. Windsor is a large manifesting point, the work there has increased very largely and it was absolutely necessary to appoint four men there.

Shawenegan Falls and Grand Mère has been made an outport and an officer has been appointed there. This, as hon. gentlemen know, has become a very important commercial point and we made Shawenegan Falls and Grand Mère an outport of Three Rivers. One additional officer was appointed for New Brunswick, at St. John. For Nova Scotia one was appointed at Glace Bay, one at Clifton and one at Yarmouth.

Of the 11 new officers in Manitoba one was appointed at the new outport of Bannerman. This is down on the border. There is a new railway coming in there, part of the Great Northern system, and as hon. gentlemen will understand wherever a new railway crosses the border, you must place customs officers. One is at the new outport of Yorkton in Manitoba. Yorkton is many miles from the nearest former outport, it is virtually the terminus of a road and seemed to the department to have merits that we could not overlook. Then there was one at Portage la Prairie, where the work has increased very much, and eight have been appointed at Winnipeg. You will see the necessity for the Winnipeg appointment when I give you a few figures on the Winnipeg revenue for the last five years. The revenue was as follows :

1900-01	$ 920,000
1901-02	1,400,000
1902-03	1,803,000
1903-04	2,498,000
1904-05	2,629,000

And for the eight months of the current year the receipts have been $2,141,000, or at the rate of $3,212,000. Hon. gentlemen will see at once that, where the business is increasing at such a rate, if we can get along with even eight additional men out there, we are certainly requiring the officers to do their full duty ; and I have no doubt that will be one point at which, during the year 1906-7, we will have to place additional officers.

I might say in order to give you a general idea of how the business is increasing that customs revenue in the Dominion for the eight months ending February 28, 1906, amounted to $29,623,363, or at the rate of $44,435,044, for the full year. The customs revenue for the fiscal year 1904-5, is $42,024,339, so that if the present ratio of increase is maintained we may expect an increase of over $2,000,000 in the customs revenue.

Mr. COCHRANE. You must be bleeding the farmers white now.

Mr. PATERSON. Oh, by no means, by no means. The burden that the farmer has to bear, for which parliament is responsible, is the amount of money that he must pay to the merchant, that parliament says the merchant must pay before he gets his goods in. That is all parliament does.

Mr. COCHRANE. But you used to say that it was the farmers who paid it.

Mr. PATERSON. Yes, so they do, but parliament does not make my friend or any one else buy goods ; that is their own work.

Mr. FOSTER. It never did.

Mr. PATERSON. It never did. The only place where parliament comes in is——

Mr. COCHRANE. Might I ask the minister why he has changed his platform so much ?

Mr. PATERSON. I have not changed it, I have not changed that.

Mr. FOSTER. Be easy on him.

Mr. COCHRANE. But you did not always say so.

Mr. PATERSON. As the member for North Toronto (Mr. Foster) says, it always used to be that way.

Mr. COCHRANE. But you did not use to say so.

Mr. PATERSON. Oh, yes, the hon. gentleman is forgetting.

Mr. COCHRANE. If I had time to go to 'Hansard' I could show you I am not.

Mr. PATERSON. The hon. gentleman has not heard me explain. There is a largely increased revenue——

Mr. COCHRANE. I know that, but you always used to say it was out of the farmers pockets it came.

Mr. PATERSON. Precisely, and other classes.

Mr. COCHRANE. But you never put in the other classes.

Mr. PATERSON. And the farmers are now coming in, owing to the good times, in a measure due to the new government.

Mr. COCHRANE. How silly.

Mr. PATERSON. And they are buying more goods and the more goods they buy, the more revenue. But parliament or this government does not make a man come in and buy goods ; he does it of his own free will. Parliament says : Before you get the goods from the merchant you must pay so many dollars on the hundred into the treasury. That is the rate of taxation that the government levies for which we are responsible. Now under the old government——

Mr. COCHRANE. Take care now.

Mr. PATERSON. That government said they must pay $18.28 on the average on every $100 worth that came in. This government said : This is too much. And for $16.04, you can have your $100 worth of goods. That is where the burden has been reduced, it has been reduced by 12½ per cent on what the farmer has to pay as far as the action of the government is concerned, and the revenue has more than doubled.

Mr. COCHRANE. Who pays the balance ?

Mr. PATERSON. Pays the balance of what ?

Mr. COCHRANE. Of revenue.

Mr. PATERSON. The balance of revenue ?

Mr. COCHRANE. Yes.

Mr. PATERSON. The free-will offering of the people coming in and buying more goods.

Mr. COCHRANE. Oh, how silly.

Mr. LALOR. Then, do I understand the minister to say this government has saved the farmers nearly $2 a year ?

Mr. PATERSON. I say—and the hon. gentleman need not take my word, he can work it out himself and it is in the returns —there was under the old government an average rate of $18.28 duty, levied on every $100 worth of imports, taking the free and dutiable together. Parliament imposed that rate. Parliament was responsible for that average rate and for that alone parliament is responsible ; for parliament does not send any man or woman into a store to buy goods—they do that of their own free will. But we are responsible for what we say the merchant must pay into the Dominion treasury before he can get these goods. I say that on the average, taking dutiable goods and free goods together, the old government said they must pay $18.28, but this government says : We will do with $16.04, and if the farmers, owing to their better conditions, and all other classes of the community are paying more, because there is more money going into the revenue, that is their own free-will offering. As far as the government is concerned, they have lessened the burden of taxation.

Mr. HENDERSON. We have heard this story every year for the last six or seven years.

An hon. MEMBER. Ten years.

Mr. HENDERSON. And the more I hear of it, the less I think there is in it. The Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson) has told us that under the former regime the average rate of duty on goods, dutiable and free, was $18.28, and he tells us now that under the present regime the duty has been reduced on the average something like $2. The hon. gentleman does not tell the House and tell the country that he has changed his system, he does not tell the country that he is bringing into this country every year an enormous amount of corn on the free list, the bulk of which is exported, and that in the calculation of the average duties he takes that free corn into consideration and by that means shows a reduction in the average rate of duty at the present time. I need not tell him—the Finance Minister of this country has told him in his place in this House—that he is wrong and that he ought to make that correction. But notwithstanding that he goes on, year after year, deceiving the people of this country by his system of subterfuge in manipulating the accounts as given to us in the blue-books. He has not told us that the government has added to the taxation of the people about a million and a half in duties on tobacco as excise, which addition is pure taxation. He has not included that in his estimate when he says the taxation has been reduced by $2 per $100, on the goods coming into this country.

He has not told us that he has changed his system of protection, because we all know that he is a protectionist pure and simple, I do not think he will deny it. He has not told us that he has changed the system of protecting the industries of this country by taking the hard earnings of the farmers and others out of their pockets and handing them over to those who manufacture iron and steel in the shape of bounties, which is additional taxation ; but not one cent of that additional taxation is taken into consideration by the hon. gentleman in striking his average rate. What about the sum that is paid to the producers of crude oil ? That is another very large sum taken out of the pockets of the farmers, but not one cent of that is taken into consideration by the hon. gentleman when he tells us that the taxation has been reduced.

Another sum has been taken out of the pockets of the farmers and handed over to the manufacturers of binder twine. What is the result of all this manipulation ? The farmers know that they are paying two prices in some cases instead of one. It is not a reduction of 2 per cent but in the case of binder twine it is an addition of about 100 per cent in price because we know that they are paying to-day about twice as much for their binder twine as they formerly did. I think the hon. gentleman had better revise his figures. This is a standard speech of his ; we have heard it eight or ten different times, and I think the people are getting so accustomed to it that they pay very little attention to it. I have made a calculation for several years, and have presented it to this House, and my figures are just as reliable as those of the hon. gentleman—even more so, because they are not stuffed or padded. The hon. gentleman cannot show by an honest calculation that he has reduced the taxation on goods coming into this country, dutiable and free, by one-half of one per cent. When he says that he has reduced the duties by 12½ per cent what does he want the ordinary farmer to understand? That on an article on which he formerly paid a duty of 25 per cent he is now paying 12½ per cent.

Mr. PATERSON. Oh, no.

Mr. HENDERSON. That is the impression given in the country, that is the deceptive way in which the hon. gentleman puts his case. Of course, we know that he means 12½ per cent of the duty. Then, why does he send his speeches broadcast throughout the country, telling the farmers that he has reduced the duties 12½ per cent when he knows that the duties are not decreased 12½ per cent ? He keeps to himself the idea that this means only 12½ per cent of the duty. I do hope this House will not have a repetition of this kind of exhibition again, which we have had too often already. I believe the people are getting tired of it, because they know that the average duties have not been reduced. They know that they formerly paid 20 per cent on their binders and they are paying the same now; they know that they formerly paid 20 per cent on their ploughs and harrows and that they are paying the same now. It is true, the hon. gentleman has reduced the duties on some things which the farmers have ceased to use—on the old-fashioned flail with which they used to thresh their grain, on scythes, on snaths, on sickles. He has reduced the duty on the old ten cent hand-rake that he and I used to rake hay with. But so anxious was he to get revenue that when he took the duty off the scythe and the snath, he actually doubled the duty on the grindstone. Let the hon. gentleman read the speech delivered by the Minister of Finance in this House about three years ago, and he will get the secret of the whole matter. The Minister of Finance told us that he had never intended to reduce the average duty, that he could not afford to surrender the revenue, and I believe he has carried that out. I fail to see that the average duty has been reduced; I am satisfied that it has not. But what I object to is that the hon. gentleman will parade this old horse year after year until it is unfit for use any longer. I think he had better lay it aside, and take up some other line of argument if he expects to convince the farmers of this country that this government have placed them in any better position than they were before in the matter of taxation.

Mr. PATERSON. I did not commence this; I tried to get my estimates through. It is an interesting discussion, which my hon. friend from East Northumberland (Mr. Cochrane) is responsible for, and if we are to pay a little attention to the question that has been raised, I am quite ready to debate it. My hon. friend from Halton (Mr. Henderson) has spent a good deal of time in belabouring what he called a dead horse. He wants me to change my tune, but I cannot do that and tell the truth; and I cannot tell a lie, you know. My hon. friend says that when I stated that the rate of taxation had been reduced 12½ per cent I meant to convey the impression to the people that 12½ per cent had been stricken off the duty. What I did was to ask hon. gentlemen to take the trade and navigation returns, and find the total amount of goods, dutiable and free, that were imported into this country, and then take the total amount of revenue derived and divide the one by the other. The result gave you in 1896 $18.28 of average taxation taken from the people to go into the treasury on every $100 worth of goods. Take the same returns and pursue the same course with regard to 1905, and you get $16.04, as the average of taxation, which some people would say was a reduction of only $2.24 ; but it is $2.24 on $18.26 a reduction of 12½ per cent on the rate of taxation.

Mr. HENDERSON. Ah!

Mr. PATERSON. Ah! My hon. friend begins to see it now. I grant you that there has been an increase in the excise duties on whisky and tobacco ; but we are discussing the customs revenues. I have no objection to the hon. gentleman discussing excise.

Mr. SPROULE. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Paterson) was only discussing the customs revenue, why did he include the free goods ?

Mr. PATERSON. Cannot my hon. friend (Mr. Sproule) understand that the burden upon the people is affected by making the goods free as well as by making them dutiable ?

Mr. SPROULE. Cannot the minister understand that there is no customs revenue from free goods ?

Mr. PATERSON. But if twenty per cent had been levied on a certain class of goods by the old government, and this government made those goods free, would not that be reducing the burdens of the people ?

Mr. SPROULE. If the hon. minister is dealing with customs revenue, let him deal with that ; if he is dealing with free goods let him deal with that.

Mr. PATERSON. But if you are stating the revenue on imported goods you must take all the goods imported—does not my hon. friend understand that basic principle ?

Mr. SPROULE. Not at all.

Mr. PATERSON. No ! Well, we understand it. And that is the principle we follow ; and that is how we have lowered the rate of taxation. As to the matter of more goods being consumed, and more money coming into the treasury, who ever said that if a Liberal government came into power there would be less revenue ? We knew there would be more ; and everybody knows it now. What we said was that we would reduce the rate of taxation that the people had to pay, and that has been done.

Mr. TAYLOR. You said that you would reduce the expenditure.

Mr. CROCKET. In view of what the minister has told us, I would like to have his views on the statement in the statistical year-book concerning the per capita customs taxation. In the year 1896, it was $3.90 per head and in 1904, it was $7.26 per head.

Mr. PATERSON. I do not know what basis the statistical year-book took for the population of Canada. But, in any case what we are concerned with is not the taxation per head but the rate of taxation on goods imported. If the people now buy far more than they did before, if any man or woman spends more money over the counter of a store than formerly, that is no matter that the government can control. The question is, how much have the government required the merchant to pay on the goods before he can put them in his store for sale. We have reduced the rate of taxation 12½ per cent—I have to reiterate it so that my hon. friend will remember. As to the per capita revenue, assuming that the figures of the year-book are correct—which I neither dispute or affirm, but only assume for the purposes of this argument—it would simply show that the people are in a better financial condition than they used to be and are able to spend more money. I will tell the hon. gentleman another thing that he ought not to forget—

Mr. COCHRANE. Better say 'Amen' and sit down.

Mr. PATERSON. I think the hon. gentleman (Mr. Cochrane) is ready to say 'Amen' he started this discussion. The point I refer to is this : Millions upon millions of money have been paid into the public treasury that have not been paid by individual consumers directly. During this era of prosperity, largely brought about by the action of this government, many millions of capital have been invested in manufacturing enterprises in Canada, and hundreds of thousands, and even millions of dollars have been paid in by capitalists, on machinery and other things brought in, duties which are not directly a burden upon the farmers or any other producers in the country. That is one great source of the additions to the revenue. Now, about this $23,000 extra that I want : Am I to have it ? If so, we will call the item carried and proceed.

Mr. BLAIN. This item includes an amount for overtime for officers. In the customs report, I see that in the Sault Ste. Marie office, A. W. Howe receives a salary of $600, and for overtime salary of $330, another one, Mr. T. Hugli received a salary of $600 and for overtime, $318.50. The overtime seems very large as compared with the salary.

Mr. PATERSON. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Blain) will remember that this item increased our estimates, I think it was two years ago, by $80,000. It will be understood that, of course, we cannot interrupt trade and commerce, we cannot say to a transportation company. 'You must stop your boat or train at six o'clock when our customs officer quits work.' We must have our officers and men on hand at the times when they are required, even during the night. We used to require the transportation companies to pay for overtime. They paid the money, not to the officers direct, but to the government, and the government paid the officers. The rate prescribed is twenty-five cents per hour. The transportation companies for years, under the old government as under the present government, made representations that this was not reasonable. We could not expect them to tie up trains at six o'clock, and if our revenue wanted watching it was our duty to pay the men to watch it, not that of the transportation companies. I confess that during the years I did stave them off, as they had been staved off by the previous administration, I was never able to satisfy myself that their claims were not right. I became clearly convinced that it was our duty to pay our own officers for the work they did. Consequently we adopted the new rule, thus adding $80,000 to our expenses. Of course, it would not be fair to ask the officers to do for nothing the work for which they were formerly paid, indirectly, by the transportation companies. I do not know where the officers are located to whom the hon. gentleman (Mr. Blain) refers. I suppose they are at the ferries at Sault Ste. Marie. The hon. gentleman will find the same thing with reference to Niagara, Fort Erie, Montreal and the eastern townships where the roads cross the boundary, and elsewhere.

Mr. FOWLER. Before this item is passed, I think the House may congratulate itself that this little breeze has arisen. Some months ago we read in the newspapers that the Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson), in common with some other members of the cabinet from Ontario, had become almost imbecile through senility, that he was, in fact, in an almost moribund condition. But I think the hon. gentleman has shown this afternoon that his mind is still active, that his physical strength is not at all impaired; and the hon. member who I believe is present, and who made the statements to which I refer, must be very glad to observe that the hon. gentleman has not reached that stage that he said he had reached, but is still able to turn a hard corner with his old agility. It might be that there is some little indication of age in the hon. minister in one respect; garrulity is one thing which, I understand, usually accompanies age, and the hon. gentleman seems to be talking a great deal in connection with his estimates.

Mr. BERGERON. If I understand rightly, we are now paying $80,000 for work occasioned by the transportation companies. Are we recouped for that, or are we paying that much more than we paid before ?

Mr. PATERSON. Yes, in round numbers.

Mr. BERGERON. If the work was well done before, why do we pay that ?

Mr. PATERSON. It was fully explained at the time. I could not see but what the contention of the transportation companies was just, that we could not expect railroad trains and steamboats to tie up at six o'clock at night and remain there until office hours in the custom house next morning. They contended that we should let the traffic move night and day, and take measures to guard the revenue. Their argument was that traffic and commerce must go on, but that it was for us to provide for guarding the revenue. I say we have to yield to that argument. These collectors are our officers, they are doing our work, they are collecting revenue for us. We were getting that amount for many years out of the transportation companies, and I was never able to satisfy myself that it was a just charge for us to levy upon them. They do pay however for holidays, and if there is any Sunday work necessitated they have to pay for that.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. That may be removed by the new legislation, I suppose.

Mr. COCKSHUTT. On what basis is the overtime calculated ?

Mr. PATERSON. It is 25 cents per hour.

Mr. COCKSHUTT. Is that the same rate as they are paid during the ordinary day work ?

Mr. PATERSON. In some cases it would be more.

Mr. DANIEL. If the government recognize that it is their duty to pay these customs officers additional in connection with the transportation companies, what about the payment of the officers who attend bonded warehouses the obligation of the bonded warehouse keepers to pay the customs officers when they go there ? Why is it not the duty of the government to pay these customs officers themselves, and not call upon the bonded warehousemen to pay the salaries of these officers, or so much per hour for their duties ? They are still looking after the revenue of the country, and it appears to me that if it is the duty of the government in the one case to pay these officers, it is the duty of the government equally in the other case.

Mr. PATERSON. That might seem to be so at first sight, but if the hon. gentleman will think for a moment he will see the distinction. Bonded warehouses are warehouses in which merchants place their goods, and only pay duty upon them when they are taken out of bond; the accommodation then is wholly to the merchants. The customs laws of Canada in the interests of the revenue require that the duty should be paid before a man gets possession of his goods, and we practically say to every man who is importing goods: Pay your duty today. But parliament in its wisdom has said : You may establish warehouses in which these men may store their surplus stock and let it remain there for weeks and months, and when they find a market for it and have to take it out, then they must pay duty upon it. But the hon. gentleman will see that there is a saving in interest of a very large amount to an individual when we allow him to defer paying that money to the government for days or months. It is a benefit given to the individual merchant for his own purpose; therefore the department takes the ground that he should pay that expenditure. But it is different with the railways who are carrying on the general trade and commerce of the country, they do not derive any additional benefit from it.

Mr. DANIEL. Has that course always been pursued, or is it a new departure ?

Mr. PATERSON. No, we think it is a reform that we instituted last year. As I said, the individual importer is benefited by allowing him to defer paying the duty and getting interest on his money. For these warehouses we charged $40 a year, it was a uniform flat rate. The merchant who might require the services of an officer once a week had to pay $40 for his warehouse, the same as any other merchant who required the services of an officer every day in the week, or perhaps the services of an officer continually. That was inequitable to start with. So we decided not to levy a uniform rate upon all, not to charge them for the bonded warehouse at all, but to charge according to the hours that they required the services of an officer, and they pay for that. If a man requires the services of an officer for a whole day, he must pay for it, and in his case that would run up $480 a year. They pay that to the government, and we pay the officer. Now that man, instead of paying $40 a year for his warehouse, will have to pay us $480. But as the bonded warehouse is a benefit to the merchant and he is individually profited by it, we thought it was only fair that he should pay the services of the officer, for if we had no bonded warehouses we would not need as many officers as we have. I trust I make plain to the hon. gentleman the distinction between them and transportation companies.

Mr. DANIEL. I can see the point, but it appears to me it is really adding a little more duty to the goods which the merchant takes out, it gives the government a little more revenue. But the payment must after all come out of the party who buys the goods, and it is so much additional taxation.

Mr. PATERSON. No. it does not affect the revenue, but it would affect the expenditure of the department. It reduces our expenditure somewhat. But it would not if we had to pay these men as we did before and did not get anything back.

Mr. BERGERON. It increases the amount of money paid by the importer. My hon. friend from St. John (Mr. Daniel) holds that the importer must pay so much more which was before this time paid by the government.

Mr. PATERSON. He does not pay any more in duty, but he has a larger business expenditure to that amount.

Mr. BERGERON. And he charges that afterwards ?

Mr. PATERSON. I do not know whether he does or not, but that is not the government's business.

Mr. BERGERON. But the government gets from the importer $480 a year for the services of the customs officer. How much is that employee paid, generally, by the government ?

Mr. PATERSON. He gets about $600.

Mr. BERGERON. He does only that work ?

Mr. PATERSON. That applies only to a few cases.

Mr. BERGERON. That is the way the government increases its surplus.

Mr. PATERSON. It reduces the amount I have to ask from parliament.

Mr. BERGERON. By $425.

Mr. PATERSON I have to ask parliament for that much less money.

Mr. BERGERON. $425. Suppose the government pay an employee, getting $600, $175 the importer pays him $425. That makes up the $600. Then the hon. minister comes to parliament and asks for less money, but that $425 that the importer has to pay must be paid by some one. The importer will charge this increased amount to his customers and they will pay more for their goods.

Mr. LALOR. It seems that the principle is wrong that the warehouse man or the man who pays the duty should pay the salary of this officer. Whether it places the officer under an obligation to the warehouseman or not it gives him the impression that he is under an obligation to the man who pays him his salary.

Mr. PATERSON. He does not pay the money to the officer. He has nothing to do with the officer. He asks us to allow him to have that officer so many hours a day. We detail an officer for that work and we charge the warehouseman so much for doing it.

Mr. LALOR. The principle is much the same, it indirectly comes out of the warehouse man. It seems to me it would be better for the government to charge some fee to the warehouseman and let him have nothing to do with the salary of the officer. There is a question that probably does not come under the department of my hon. friend the Minister of Customs, but under that of the Department of Inland Revenue, and that is that where a vinegar factory is established the man who controls that factory has to pay the officer his salary. The result is that small factories cannot start and that the larger factories have a complete monopoly of the business thereby increasing the cost to the people of the country. It seems to me that the principle is wrong of having an officer, whether an excise or customs officer, paid directly or indirectly by those who are in control of these works. It should not be paid in that way. If we want more revenue we should collect it in the way of an increased duty rather than by taxing a man, firm, or company manufacturing vinegar by compelling them to pay the salary of the officer in charge of their works.

Mr. PATERSON. I think the hon. gentleman has not fully thought it out. Putting on an increased duty would not remedy the thing at all. My hon. friend from North Grey is not engaged in business. If I were at liberty I might be engaged in business. I want a man to help me in my business, to meet my convenience in order to store goods, to defer payment and to get the interest on that money. I ask the government to allow me to have a public officer to do that. Why should my hon. friend from North Grey or any man who is not in business be called upon to pay part of that which is going to benefit me ? Why should the farmers be taxed to pay this officer's salary when this officer's services are devoted to one merchant who is getting the benefit of it and who is saving ten times the amount in deferred payment and interest ?

Mr. BERGERON But they will have to pay it all the same in another way.

Mr. LALOR. Why not levy a special rate on the goods that are left in bond and relieve the warehouseman entirely from having to do with the officer in charge ? Then the officer would be under no obligation to the warehouseman.

Mr. PATERSON. He has nothing to do with the officer directly or indirectly. It is not always the same officer who does this work ; it may be one man to-day and we may send another man to-morrow. There is no one particular man. We can change our officer. We can send a different man every day if it is necessary. So, there is nothing in that.

Mr. DANIEL. The only point I wish to make is that the hon. minister was telling us this afternoon that he was reducing the taxes of the country, referring to the tariff in that regard, but he has not brought to the notice of the country the fact that in other ways he has been adding to the taxes of the people. This, he does not refer to, but he says that he is reducing taxation. The only point I wish to make is that this one charge is so much additional taxation, so much additional cost to the man who buys the goods, that the merchant has to pay this additional cost to the Customs Department over and above what he formerly paid. This is additional taxation, yet the government does not get any discredit for putting on that additional taxation in so far as its tariff rates are concerned.

Mr. PATERSON. Just let us give that a moment's consideration. The hon. gentleman will see that he is entirely wrong. It is not adding to the taxation of the people. It is reducing the taxation of the people. If we paid the officer the warehouseman gets the direct benefit and the whole country pays for it. If we make the man who is benefited pay it the country has that much money to its credit. It is a reduction of taxation and not an addition.

Mr. DANIEL. This charge is added to the cost of the goods which the consumer, of course, has to pay ?

Mr. PATERSON. What different position would he be in if we paid the whole amount to the officer.

Mr. DANIEL. He would save that much money.

Mr. PATERSON. But we would be paying out of the public treasury to the officer.

Mr. DANIEL. You would, but still you would not pay so much.

Mr. BLAIN. In regard to the question of overtime, what objection would the hon. minister have to paying these men proper salaries rather than paying so much money as overtime ? Here are two men getting $600 each and their overtime amounts to more than half their salary each year. Why would it not be very much better and more in the interest of the country for the hon. minister to fix these men's salaries at a set amount and pay them a straight salary to do the work ? It seems to me to be a very large amount of overtime.

Mr. PATERSON. That $330 is based upon a service of two hours per week day and ten hours service on each Sunday and statutory holidays. If what the hon. gentleman suggests could be arranged and were practicable it would be simpler for us, but, I am afraid it is not practicable.

Mr. BLAIN. Why not ?

Mr. PATERSON. There are certain seasons of the year in which extra services might be required and there might be other times in which they might not be required. There are certain places where extra services are required more than they are required at other places, and there are different officers at the different ports. At one port you perhaps have several men and you want to have some extra service performed. You might not want to give to one man the same work to do all the time. It may be divided among your port officers and their being paid by the hour enables you to send any officer you may detail for that purpose to do the work without raising the salary.

Mr. BLAIN. It is not difficult to understand where the amount is $14 or $15 as it is in many cases, but where it comes to half of the salary it seems to be rather difficult of explanation.

Mr. PATERSON. Well, it does, but we have thought it out carefully and we have come to the conclusion that this is the only way in which we can work it equitably and have as free a hand as we would like to have and say to these officers : Go there and do that, or go here and do that. That is the basis upon which it is fixed. I ought to state that an officer receiving extra pay for over time has to send in a statement of the number of hours he serves which has to be certified by the collector.

Mr. PERLEY. I would like to ask the hon. minister how, when there are a lot of applications for new ports of entry, he decides whether he will grant an application or not. On what basis does he decide ?

Mr. PATERSON. We make it a point generally when there is an application for a new port to send out to the different ports at which goods for that particular town or village in which they may be asking for an outport have hitherto been imported. The people in this village or town may hitherto have been importing their goods through three or four different ports. We obtain from the collector a statement of the amount of duties paid during the year by the people living in the village or town, and we make up our minds as to whether the public interest requires that a port should be constituted.

Mr. PERLEY. If any place which applies to be made a port of entry has a revenue equal to the minimum revenue of already established ports, is the application granted ?

Mr. PATERSON. Our object is to give to the business community such convenience as we feel reasonably justified in giving. Every additional port means additional expense, and we would like the revenue to be such as to warrant the payment of a salary upon which the officer can comfortably exist. It is rather a selfish view to take, that the department would get the revenue any way whether the port is constituted or not. Another point that comes into consideration is the distance that a place may be from an existing port ; perhaps the town may be situated on a main line of railway and there may be a customs port between it and the boundary at which the goods could be entered and sent right on, by a person who has a power of attorney for that purpose. All these things have to enter into our calculations.

Mr. PERLEY. Alexandria, Ont., was constituted a new customs port during the past year ; was that done on account of the revenue or for some other reason ?

Mr. PATERSON. I am sorry to say there has been a fire at Alexandria. It was not without justification from the revenue point of view, and it was further urged that a new post office building had been erected in which there was accommodation provided for a customs office.

Mr. PERLEY. Do I understand that because a public building was erected with a customs office in it, that was the reason the port was established there.

Mr. PATERSON. I would not say that, but there was the fact that provision was made for customs officers and we would be relieved from the cost of rent and caretaking.

Mr. PERLEY. Now that the Alexandria building has been burned down, will that affect the judgment of the minister as to establishing a customs port there ?

Mr. PATERSON. Now that it is created a port it will remain. I don't know what the plans of the Minister of Public Works are, but we will have to get accommodation somewhere.

Mr. BERGERON. And you will appoint a customs officer of course ?

Mr. PATERSON. There is one already appointed.

Salaries and travelling expenses of inspectors of ports and of other officers of inspection and preventive service, including salaries and expenditure in connection with the Board of Customs and for the compiling of statistical returns of exports and imports, $142,125.

Mr. COCKSHUTT. For some years past the method of collecting customs statistics has been completely changed. Formerly statistics gave the port of origin as the port from which the goods were exported, but now only the port of exit at which the goods leave the country is given in the returns. This is a matter of more than passing interest to the commercial community. For instance, Toronto may have manufactured $5,000,000 worth of exports last year, but it is only credited with $5,000 ; the balance being credited to small ports of exit like Niagara Falls, Bridgeburg, Windsor, or Sarnia. In this way the Customs Department credits these smaller places with the export of the manufactures that originate in Toronto, Brantford, Hamilton and other cities. I asked a question last year with regard to the export of seeds, principally clover seed, and I found that was the system adopted. Last year, Bridgeburg, Ont., a place that is hardly ever heard of and that perhaps has not more than 100 people in it, was credited with $15,000,000 of exports. If this system is thought desirable by the department, it should also be provided that the place of manufacture should be credited with the goods exported. The foreign countries which receive these goods look in our statistical year-book and they naturally think that Bridgeburg, which exports $15,000,000 worth, must be an important centre, whereas when you come to pass through it you cannot tell whether you are in it or out of it. The city of Brantford, which used to be credited with $1,000,000 worth of manufactured goods exported, was last year credited with less than $1,000 worth, the city of Hamilton got about the same credit for export goods, and Toronto very little more. I do not believe it would cost the department a great deal to see that the port of origin is credited with the business which originates in it. It is a serious matter for the merchants and manufacturers of Canada not to be able to ascertain from the statistics the export trade which their own towns are doing. I wish the minister would give this matter his attention. When a town originates goods it should get credit for them. In that respect the old system that was abolished was a good system and if the change was found necessary in the interest of the department —and I am not going to say that the minister has not full justification for the change, I ask him if it would not have been possible also that the former statistics should be maintained and that we should know exactly the business of the various towns and cities that originate these goods, so that we might know what they are doing and that we might inform our constituents of what is going on in our particular centre. I have paid some attention to this, and 'The Monetary Times' has written several strong articles on the subject, which I do not think were very strongly answered by the minister's deputy. I do not know whether the minister can give a better answer than his deputy did.

Mr. PATERSON. The change was effected for this reason. While I admit the difficulty in the present system, on the other hand we used to collect the statistics of exports and the statistics were taken from the entries at the local customs houses in the different provinces. Some years ago — and the same conditions would continue to a modified extent to-day if we were returning to the old system—when the province of Manitoba and the Northwest Territories were raising and selling some millions of bushels of grain, when attention was being turned in the old country to Manitoba and the Northwest, and these districts were being advertised as great grain producing countries to which immigrants might go, that export wheat came down largely, as it does now, to Fort William and Port Arthur, where it was stored in elevators. It went out in the spring or in the fall, but it was going to Buffalo, millions of bushels of it. Thus if you turned up the records you would find that Manitoba and the Northwest, which were being advertised as producing millions and millions of bushels of wheat, exported 100,000 bushels of wheat in a certain year, although millions had been exported.

Mr. BERGERON. How was that?

Mr. PATERSON. Because they were exported from Port Arthur or Fort William in Ontario and, therefore, were credited to Ontario. We had the same difficulty with our imports, because goods, for Manitoba and for many parts of Ontario, for the Northwest and perhaps for British Columbia, coming into this county would pay duty at Montreal.

Mr. BERGERON. I understand that.

Mr. PATERSON. Montreal will get the credit. But the consumption took place in other provinces.

Mr. BERGERON. You cannot help that, but the other way—

Mr. PATERSON. So in the other way you cannot help it. It is the port from which you ship that gets the credit. If it originated in Brandon or Regina, it would be shipped from Port Arthur.

Mr. BERGERON. Why would it not be marked as from Brandon?

Mr. PATERSON. Because it was not exported from Brandon.

Mr. BERGERON. But it is.

Mr. PATERSON. No, it is sent from Brandon to Port Arthur; it is not billed any further than that; it goes into the elevator and lies there. When a sale is subsequently made, it may be sent to the old country, but it is a sale out of the country and it is credited to Fort William or Port Arthur.

Mr. BERGERON. I do not see why it could not be easily changed and marked as from Brandon.

Mr. PATERSON. If it went from Brandon you could not tell whether it went to the old country or not. It might go into consumption for the local mills in Ontario or Quebec.

Mr. BERGERON. As long as you know it is exported from these places, it would be easy to say it is wheat from Brandon or the Northwest Territories.

Mr. PATERSON. How could we keep track of it coming from all the different points? I can understand what has been said about the difficulty, and that each town would like to be credited with the goods it originates, but after all we thought it was better to do away with the provincial subdivisions and all that sort of thing. This is the Dominion of Canada, and if goods go out of this country they are exports of the Dominion of Canada.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Is the minister going to do away with this classification by ports or provinces? At the present time in the minister's report we find the exports from this province and that province. If he looks up the exports of cattle from Ontario he will see that Ontario exported only a few thousand and that Quebec exported the great bulk. Is he going to do away with that classification?

Mr. PATERSON. You mean the port to which it is sent for export?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Yes, the Canadian port.

Mr. COCKSHUTT. I see some of the difficulties in the points the minister raises, but I do not think it alters the case because there is an export entry with every shipment that leaves the town. Nothing can leave Brantford, for instance, for export without an entry showing the amount and the value of the goods. That entry is in the hand of the department the same as ever; all the information is in the hands of the government and all they have to do is to collect it and publish it as they used to. The objection of Fort William getting credit for Brandon's business is not overcome by sending the grain to Montreal; that only increases the difficulty. Brandon sends to Fort William and Fort William to Montreal or Halifax, and these ocean ports finally get the credit for shipping, although the goods came from Ontario, Quebec or the Northwest Territories. In the same way Bridgeburg gets credit for all the manufactures of Ontario that pass out of the country in that way. What I point out is that the export entry showing the point of origin is already made and all they need to do is to collect the entries as they used to, and they have all the information there. It would not cost much, one or two clerks could do the whole thing each year and could give us the statistical information to which the towns and cities, and for that matter the farmers, are entitled. The port of origin should have credit for what it originates. Everything else only multiplies the difficulty which the hon. gentleman has pointed out. Montreal gets credit for the wheat of the Northwest and Manitoba, for the cheese and other products of Ontario and for every thing that is exported, whereas these provinces and the towns and cities that originate the goods get no credit whatever and have nothing to show they are doing an export trade at all. This, I think, is an injustice to the points at which these goods originate, and I think the minister should remedy that. It would not cost much and I commend it to his consideration during the coming year in order that he may see if it would not be possible to have the statistics collected as previously and also, if he wishes, to give the present statistics as well. I do not think it would multiply the work much.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The minister referred to bonding. Suppose goods in bond are lost, how does the department recoup the owner of these goods?

Mr. PATERSON. How lost, through fire?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Through fire, theft or in any way while in charge of the customs officers.

Mr. PATERSON. If goods are destroyed by fire there is provision made that upon the certificate of the proper officer the owners are reimbursed. I suppose they insure the goods.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Suppose goods of the value of $500 are in the custom house at Ottawa and $250 worth of these goods are lost while there. How does the minister recoup the owner of the goods ?

Mr. PATERSON. We do not assume any liability or responsibility for them.

Mr. COCKSHUTT. I would like to have an answer to my question, whether the minister thinks it would increase the work of the staff very much to have the statistics compiled as they used to be ?

Mr. PATERSON. We think that to take the port of exit as the basis for our statistics of exports secures much greater accuracy. If some system can be devised whereby that accuracy can be maintained and we could at the same time meet the hon. gentleman's view, I would be very willing to adopt it.

Mr. TAYLOR. Of what use is the Department of Trade and Commerce ? It issues a report in addition to the trade and navigation returns which are isued by the Customs Department. The report of the Department of Trade and Commerce ought to give credit to each town for the value of the goods exported from that town. We have a town which manufactures goods very largely and ships them to foreign countries, but it does not figure in the reports as having exported a dollar's worth, although we have to make entry for the export of the goods. They are credited to the port from which they take their departure. If the Department of Trade and Commerce is going to do any work in the interest of the country, I think it ought to take up that matter.

Mr. PATERSON. If it is done, it will have to be done through the Customs Department, which gets the original invoices. The information on which the report of the Department of Trade and Commerce is based is obtained from the Customs Department.

Mr. TAYLOR. Then, what is the use of duplicating the work ?

Mr. PATERSON. The Department of Trade and Commerce has other branches, such as commercial agencies and the tariffs of other countries.

Mr. TAYLOR. I do not see that the Department of Trade and Commerce is doing much for the country, but this is something that ought to be done.

Mr. SAM HUGHES. I do not think I made myself clear to the minister. Suppose the goods are shipped from some port in England to Canada and are in charge of the government officers in the government warehouse, and some of these goods are lost. Surely the government would make the deficiency good ?

Mr. PATERSON. No, we do not.

Mr. SAM HUGHES. Never have done it ?

Mr. PATERSON. No, I believe not.

Mr. SAM HUGHES. Would it not be a very good time to begin to do justice ? How is the owner of the goods to be recouped for his loss ?

Mr. PATERSON. We would not compel him to pay the duty if the goods were destroyed; but we could not hold ourselves responsible for losses. The owners put the goods there at their own risk. It is our bounden duty to give care to them, but it would not do for us to admit liability for them.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Another matter. Some four or five years ago the Minister of Trade and Commerce promised to publish an annual statement showing the freight rates and passenger rates on the various railways between important points in Canada, the rates between the seaports of Canada and the principal seaports of various outside countries, and also the through freight rates from various points in Canada to important points in foreign countries. These were all to be compiled so that we would know the local rates and the through rates. I would be very pleased if the Minister of Customs would draw the attention of the Minister of Trade and Commerce to that matter.

Customs—miscellaneous—printing and stationery, subscriptions to commercial papers, flags, dating stamps, locks, instruments, &c., for various ports of entry, legal expenses and uniforms for customs officers, $37,500.

Mr. PATERSON. We are asking for as much for nine months as we asked last year for the whole year. There will have to be a considerable amount of extra printing done during this year, if the tariff is to be revised in November, and in other ways.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The minister spoke of some reduction in expense on account of the new arrangement made with regard to bonding warehouses. Has he decreased his estimates any on that account ?

Mr. PATERSON. No.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Why do you not ?

Mr. PATERSON. We need that as well as this. We would have had to ask for a little more than we have here if we had not had that.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. How much does it amount to ?

Mr. PATERSON. Under the old arrangement, about $16,000.

Customs—amount required to meet expenditures in the Yukon Territory, $37,500.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Why do you keep that separate ?

Mr. PATERSON. For comparison as much as anything, I suppose.

Mr. HENDERSON. I think the Post Office Department has done away with the system of keeping a separate account for the Yukon Territory, and I think that the sooner the same thing is done by the Customs Department the better.

Mr. PATERSON. Of course, so far as the percentage of total expenditure is concerned ; the Yukon is included with other branches of the service, that is, the cost of collecting the revenue is not shown to be less by keeping the Yukon separate. I do not see why the suggestion made by the leader of the opposition should not be carried out. But, as this was a new item arising after this government took office, it was commenced in this form and has been carried on in that way. I am inclined to agree with the hon. gentleman that the time has come when it might be fairly dealt with in the same way as the other provinces.

Mr. HENDERSON. That is, as in other things, the government in this case adopted, largely, the policy of their predecessors.

Mr. PATERSON. We could not do that with reference to the Yukon, for there was practically nothing of it before our time,—only a little gold dust came down for a year or two before we came into office.

Miscellaneous — amount required to pay Messrs. I. G. Baker & Company customs duties paid by them at customs stations in the Northwest Territories in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1880, on supplies for the Department of Indian Affairs and for the Northwest Mounted Police, $2,033,07.

That is an item, hon. members will see at once, requires some explanation. I have all the papers here. I would not ask parliament to vote the money now unless hon. members are perfectly satisfied with the explanation I shall give. I have here the full file of papers in the case, which hon. members can look over. I cannot formally lay it on the table, because this is not a copy and is required in the department. This is a very old claim dating back to 1880. I suppose the department could have dealt with this itself, at any rate through the Governor in Council. But, as it dates back so far, I did not think it wise to deal with it in that way, but decided to ask for a vote of the House. I believe that it is a just claim, but I believe that the judgment of parliament with regard to it should be asked.

Mr. HENDERSON. Every man who is interested could not have an opportunity to peruse the documents. Could not the minister give us an idea of what they contain ?

Mr. PATERSON. I shall be glad to explain the matter in a general way. This firm of I. G. Baker & Co. were a mercantile firm in Montana, in the early days, before the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway. No doubt, the hon. member for South Lanark (Mr. Haggart) would remember them. In those days the government made purchases, from this firm of goods for the Indians and the Northwest Mounted Police, as it was easier to get the goods in from Montana—from Fort Benton I believe it was—than by the long overland haul from Winnipeg. Large quantities of goods were bought from I. G. Baker & Co. in that way. Up to 1880, these goods were bought on the basis of free delivery—no customs duty to be charged. In 1879-80, orders were given for goods on that same understanding. There had been a change of government meanwhile, and, when the new government came in, there was an alteration in the plan, and the policy was adopted of charging customs duty.

Mr. BERGERON. Where was that new government ? Not in Ottawa ?

Mr. PATERSON. Yes.

Mr. BERGERON. Not in 1880.

Mr. PATERSON. They came in 1879.

Mr. BERGERON. No ; there was a change of government in 1878.

Mr. PATERSON. Very well, that would be the change of government referred to ; —the papers disclose the whole transaction. The goods were brought in with the understanding with the government that they were to come in duty free.

Mr. BERGERON. For whom were these purchases made ?

Mr. PATERSON. For the Northwest Mounted Police and the starving Indians.

Mr. BERGERON. That is the reason no duty was paid—because they were imported for the government ?

Mr. PATERSON. Yes, it was perfectly legitmate. The point I am getting at is that there was a change and it was decided that the goods must pay duty. Messrs. Baker & Co. say that they were not notified of that change, but from the time they were notified they paid duty on goods sold in the same way. This $2,033.07 is to refund duties paid by them on the goods brought in before they were notified that duty would be charged. If hon. gentlemen will look at the papers in the case they will see that nowhere did the government dispute—so far as we can see—the justice of the claim. But the position seemed to be this : The Customs Department took the ground that they would not remit these duties, but that the Indian Department could get a vote from parliament and pay them. And so it went backward and forward between the two departments until we came into office in 1896. It can readily be understood that when I became minister and an old claim of this kind came before me, I hesitated about it, for, if the claim was a just one it should have been settled before. And so it went on year after year, the firm constantly pressing their claim. So far as the money is concerned, I suppose it does not amount to anything, because, I understand this is a millionaire firm. But Mr. Conrad, the man with whom we have dealt has maintained his right. Finally I said, we will go into the matter thoroughly and see what it means. I should have explained that a further cause of delay was that some of the papers were lost for a time as a result of transmission between the departments. But Mr. McDougald, the commissioner of customs, making a diligent search, found the missing papers. He is satisfied that there is absolute proof of the bona fides and the justice of the claim, and we think that, in justice, it ought to be paid.

Mr. BERGERON. Does this firm still exist ?

Mr. PATERSON. I suppose they are in business yet.

Mr. BERGERON. It was an old firm in 1880.

Mr. PATERSON. This Mr. Conrad, I believe, is a member of the firm. But, if parliament will vote the money—

Mr. BERGERON. The government will find some one to accept it.

Mr. PATERSON. The commissioner, of course, will see to it that the money goes to the person who is entitled to it. As the hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson) asked me to read the papers, in the case I will.

Mr. BERGERON. Before the minister goes on with that, there is one point I would like to have cleared up. Why should the government repay the money paid by these gentlemen for customs duties on these goods ? Did not they repay themselves in the price at which they sold the goods to the officers of the government at the time ? After all, that money went into the treasury through the customs, and it was paid for goods delivered to the government through another departement. How can it be that the government owes this money ?

Mr. PATERSON. The government owes the money because the goods were ordered by the Department of the Interior, and ordered on the understanding that they were to come in free as goods ordered by a department of the government. When they came in the Customs Department insisted upon duty being paid.

Mr. BERGERON. And when the goods were delivered to the Mounted Police or to the Indians, how were they paid ?

Mr. PATERSON. The Department of the Interior paid them their contract price for the goods. The Customs Department had no right to take this money from them.

Mr. HAGGART. When they presented their bill did they charge for the goods plus customs ?

Mr. PATERSON. No, the goods were all brought in as they had been for years before under that clause of the tariff respecting goods ordered by a department of the government.

Mr. BERGERON. Did they make a claim immediately ?

Mr. PATERSON. Yes, immediately, and renewed it from year to year until I came in. Then they renewed it with me, but it being an old claim and some papers being mislaid, I did not take it up.

Mr. HAGGART. But when they sent their bill to the Department of the Interior they charged the value of the goods plus the customs they had to pay ?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. They probably did that, but I suppose the answer was that the goods were purchased at a contract price, and that was the only price the Department of the Interior would pay. I imagine they have done what the hon. member for Lanark (Mr. Haggart) has said, otherwise they would not be making a claim now. As I understand, the Department of the Interior purchased the goods at a fixed price, which price contemplated no payment of customs duty, as it had not been the practice to charge customs duty in the past. The Department of Customs altered its policy, and the company was obliged to pay customs duty. If they had known that in advance they would have added the customs duties to the price which they demanded from the Department of the Interior. Not having done that, they ask for a refund.

Mr. PATERSON. Quite so.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. But we would like to know when they first made the claim. If they did not make the claim at the time the hon. member for Lanark mentions, when did they first make it ? I would suppose they made it when they sent in their bill for the goods.

Mr. PATERSON. There is a memorandum prepared by the Customs Department on the subject, and I will read that.

Mr. HENDERSON. I did not mean that the hon. gentleman should read all the items but make a general statement.

Mr. PATERSON. I may say that Col. Fred. White, of the Northwest Mounted Police, says that he has actual knowledge of the facts, and that the claim is a just one. He knows that the question passed backwards and forwards between the company and the department.

Mr. BERGERON. I suggest that we let the item stand for a couple of days until we make some inquiry.

Mr. PATERSON. As the hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson) has asked me about it, and now that the subject is commenced, I will read the memorandum of the commissioner of Customs.

Mr. HENDERSON. I have got all the information from the Minister I expected to get. I only wanted a history of the transaction, I am not particular about the items.

Mr. PATERSON. The history of the claim is as follows :

Mr. BERGERON. There is no use reading it if it is allowed to stand.

Mr. PATERSON. Having said that much, I think I will just read the memorandum of the commissioner of Customs. I cannot lay it on the table of the House, for it is not a copy.

The particulars of the claim are as follows :

For Indian supplies—
On cattle delivered at Battleford..	$1,050 40
On 8 ploughs delivered at Fort Walsh.	40 00
On axes and hardware delivered at Fort Walsh..	28 65
On 1,000 sacks of flour..	250 00
	1,369 05
Vouchers for above forwarded to Deputy Superintendent General Indian Affairs, April 29, 1881.
On seeds for farmers, May 26, 1880, vouchers attached..	76 67
On Pemmican sent to Battleford.. ..	52 00
On 723 sacks of flour, April 7, 1880.. ..	180 75
On 260 sacks of flour, June 23, 1880..	65 00
Total for Indians..	1,743 47
For police supplies..	289 60
Amount..	2,033 07

Mr. BERGERON. Those were goods imported from the States ?

Mr. PATERSON. Certainly.

The Deputy Superintendent General of Indian Affairs in a letter to the Commissioner of Customs on the 12th June, 1883, makes the following statement :

I have the honour to transmit to you herewith for perusal a file No. 15282 of papers relative to a claim made by Messrs. I. G. Baker & Company, of Fort Benton, United States, for the refund of customs duties paid by them at Fort Walsh, Northwest Territories, in 1879, on cattle, flour, seeds and implements of husbandry purchased from them at various dates in 1879 for this department, to be used for the relief of distress amongst starving Indians within the Territories, and for aiding Indians in the cultivation of their reserves.

In connection with this subject previous correspondence has passed between our departments, but I desire now to call your attention particularly to the letters herewith of the 12th of January, 1881, 7th March, 1882, 14th August, 1882, and 8th May, 1883, addressed by the Messrs. Baker to this department and that from Colonel McLeod, of 29th May, 1882, in the closing paragraph of which he distinctly states that the agreement made by him with Baker & Company in 1878-9 was, so far as the supplies for the Northwest Mounted Police are concerned, on the express condition of free entry, a condition which was renewed for 1879-80, and this statement appears to be corroborated by the letter of the 31st ultimo addressed to this department by the Comptroller of the Northwest Mounted Police.

The history of the purchases on which this department is asked to procure a refund of duty for the Messrs. Baker & Company appears to be as follows : That in September of 1879, Colonel McLeod was directed while at Fort Benton to purchase supplies for this department, to be used for the relief of starving Indians in treaties 4 and 6, and that acting on his instructions he purchased beef, cattle, flour, &c., from Messrs. Baker & Company, who had always furnished supplies for the Northwest Mounted Police on the distinct understanding that they should be entered duty free, that nevertheless customs duties were collected on those supplies to the amount of $1,369.05 by Capt. Crozier, as per receipts herewith, and that duties were levied on other articles which are alleged to have been imported for the use of the mounted police, but were diverted to the use of this department prior to the 1st July, 1880, which dues were paid by Baker & Company, amounting to $374.42, that the traders in Montana declined to deliver supplies in the Northwest Territories on any condition than that of free entry up to 30th June, 1880, and that the Messrs. Baker & Company, in having been compelled to pay duty on supplies purchased under an agreement that no such charge would be made, are being unfairly dealt with.

It is hoped that favourable consideration may be given by the Department of Customs to the application of Messrs. Baker & Company, and that there may appear to be no obstacle in the taking of such steps to procure a refund of the sum claimed as may appear to you necessary.

That is the way in which the Deputy Minister of the Interior vouches for the correctness of the claim.

Mr. Fred. White, comptroller of the Northwest Mounted Police, writes as follows to the Commissioner of Customs on the 28th April, 1896, in respect to this matter :

On the 20th October, 1893, I forwarded to the Commissioner of Customs a file of papers respecting a claim of Messrs. I. G. Baker & Company for a refund of $289.60, representing duty collected from them on supplies imported for the Northwest Mounted Police under a contract covering the fiscal years 1879-80.

In early days, provisions, &c., for the mounted police in the southern part of the Territories were obtained from the United States via the Missouri river, and it was distinctly understood that no customs duties would be charged thereon.

This privilege was discontinued on the 1st July, 1880, since which date duties have been paid by the contractors on all dutiable goods, but the collector of customs at Fort Walsh collected duties on the last shipment of supplies received under the contract for the fiscal year 1879-80, hence this claim.

As Messrs. Baker & Company are persistently urging a settlement, I beg that you will be good enough to place me in a position to give them a definite reply as to whether the refund can be made by your department.

The comptrolller further certifies that the vouchers showing the payment of the above duties ($289.60) were forwarded to the Customs Department with the letter of 20th October, 1893.

The payment of customs duties by Messrs. I. G. Baker & Company in the fall of 1879 and spring of 1880 to the extent claimed is established by the returns of the customs officers for that period, the following amounts being specifically noted :

For Indian Department—
Fort Walsh—
October, 1879..	No. 346	$1,050 40
March, 1880..	" 347	260 90
March, 1880..	" 348	182 75
October, 1879..	" —	52 20
May, 1880..	" 365	76 67
June, 1880	" 373	65 00
June, 1880..	" 369	20 00
For Northwest Mounted Police—
May, 1880..	No. 36	269 60

Mr. BERGERON. It covers more than one year?

Mr. PATERSON. No, the year 1879-1880.

Mr. BERGERON. And 1881.

Mr. PATERSON. The demand started in 1881, but the claim covers a little under a year, from October, 1879, to May, 1880.

Mr. BERGERON. When were they notified of the change of policy of the government?

Mr. PATERSON. At the end of the financial year 1880.

The Deputy Superintendent of Indian Affairs states that receipts for $1,369.05 customs duties were sent to the Customs Department with his letter of June 12, 1883.

In the customs returns from Fort Macleod for the quarter ending 31st December, 1879, the customs officer transmits a statement of goods delivered free, being supplies for use of Northwest Mounted Police force, duties uncollected as per agreement made with department.

In the tender of I. G. Baker & Company, April 23, 1877, it is stipulated that the articles are to be delivered relieved of custom house dues.

The Deputy Minister of the Interior states (in regard to Indian supplies) that 'an arrangement will be made with the Customs Department to have the cattle so to be delivered to this department admitted free of all customs charges or dues.'

Provisions for free entry of articles for the government were contained in the tariff of 1879, as follows :

Articles imported by and for the use of the Dominion government, or any of the departments thereof, or for the Senate and House of Commons.

Duties on supplies for the mounted police and Indiass appear to have been collected in 1879 and subsequent years, in pursuance of instructions from the Customs Department, as a matter of policy.

I. G. Baker & Company contend, however, that their contract for 1879-80 provided for exemption from customs duties.

This does not appear to be denied, nor the merits of the claim disputed.

The delay in adjusting the matter appears to have been caused in some measure by the loss of the vouchers and claim papers sent to the Customs Department in 1881. When the matter was brought up again in 1893 and 1896, while the claim was admitted, the departments concerned did not agree as to whether a refund should be made by the customs or the amount voted by parliament.

This is a summary of the case. The Department of Customs is satisfied that it is a case in which a refund in justice, ought to be made and I suppose one which might have been made under authority of the Governor in Council, but, of course, we did not think that would be a proper thing to do with a claim as old as this one. We want this money voted by parliament after being placed in full possession of the facts. If hon. gentlemen feel that they have sufficient information we might pass the item now or we will let it stand and give them an opportunity to go through the papers.

Mr. BERGERON. It is not a big item, but it is an extraordinary procedure. This claim is 26 years old.

Mr. LANCASTER. I would like to ask the hon. minister if the claim is still the property of the original claimant or has he assigned it to some one else?

Mr. PATERSON. A gentleman representing the firm of I. G. Baker & Co. has been pressing this claim personally, and the correspondence is in the name of I. G. Baker & Co. It is the same firm.

Mr. LANCASTER. There has been no assignment of the claim to anybody?

Mr. PATERSON. No, and as I said before, I do not think it is the matter of the money they care about. This is a millionaire firm.

Mr. LANCASTER. Millionaires are fonder of money than some of us poor people.

Mr. PATERSON. Well, I know, but they feel that this is a just claim and that they have not been treated right. I feel that it was only right that we should pay it. Mr. White, the comptroller of the Mounted Police, who has personal knowledge, says that he knows it is right.

Mr. BERGERON. How was it that if Mr. White knew he never convinced the minister that it should be paid?

Mr. PATERSON. The whole difficulty, as far as I can make out, was that the Customs Department made this new rule that they were to pay the duties and they did so, I suppose, in ignorance of the fact that this contract had been made previously with this firm. Then they got the duties and since they got them the Customs Department was not ready to give up any money they should not give up. They said: 'No, we will not reduce our revenue that much, Let the department that ordered these goods take a vote in parliament and pay the Customs Department. Then it was thrown backwards and forwards in that way.

Mr. BERGERON. These contractors knew very well the kind of a contract they had signed. They signed a contract by which they were to bring in goods, paying duty, and if the party who received the goods was informed of one thing without the other being informed of the same condition, it is something that I cannot understand. Neither can I understand why it was not paid before if it is really due.

Mr. PATERSON. The accountant of the department who has gone through the papers says that these duties were collected by Capt. Crozier ; he got ten per cent on the collection, and he stipulated that they should pay although they were entitled to free entry.

Mr. BERGERON. We will look over these papers.

Mr. PATERSON. I am in no hurry. In fact I am not concerned whether it is paid or not, but I think it should be.

Item allowed to stand.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I am in the hands of the House whether we shall proceed or adjourn.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If the government is ready with any business I presume we had better go on.

At six o'clock, House took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at eight o'clock.

PRIVATE BILLS.

SECOND READINGS.

Bill (No. 19) respecting the South Ontario Pacific Railway Company.—Mr. Guthrie.

Bill (No. 20) to incorporate the Canadian Bible Society, Auxiliary to the British and Foreign Bible Society.—Mr. Cockshutt.

Bill (No. 21) respecting the Huron and Erie Loan and Savings Company.—Mr. Calvert.

Bill (No. 22) respecting the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.—Mr. Calvert.

Bill (No. 23) to incorporate the Quebec Midland Railway Company.—Mr. Bureau.

Bill (No. 24) respecting the Campbellford, Lake Ontario and Western Railway Company.—Mr. McColl.

Bill (No. 25) respecting the Niagara, Queenston and St. Catharines Railway Company.—Mr. Clarke.

Bill (No. 26) respecting the West Ontario Pacific Railway Company.—Mr. Pardee.

Bill (No. 27) to incorporate the Kamloops and Yellow Head Pass Railway Company.—Mr. Galliher.

Bill (No. 28) respecting the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway Company.—Mr. Sloan.

Bill (No. 29) respecting the Vancouver and Lulu Island Railway Company.—Mr. Macpherson.

Bill (No. 30) respecting the Kootenay and Arrowhead Railway Company.—Mr. Galliher.

Bill (No. 31) respecting the White Horse and Alsek Railway Company.—Mr. Macpherson.

Bill (No. 32) respecting the Nakusp and Slocan Railway Company.—Mr. Galliher.

Bill (No. 33) respecting the British Columbia Southern Railway Company.—Mr. Galliher.

Bill (No. 34) respecting the Columbia and Kootenay Railway and Navigation Company.—Mr. Galliher.

SUPPLY.

House in Committee of Supply.

Post Office, outside service—salaries and allowances, including salary of $950 for Mr. P. C. N. Dorion, a railway mail clerk, reinstated in the service on the 30th September, 1898, and salary of $626 for Mr. John McAfee, to be reinstated as a letter carrier at Montreal and to be classed in grade 'D,' under the amendment to the Post Office Act, 1902, hereby restoring them to their former status under the Civil Service Superannuation Act on payment of a sum equivalent to the statutory deductions on their respective salaries from the date of dismissal, their services to be considered as continuous, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service or Superannuation Acts, $1,335,134.44.

Mr. BERGERON. Will the Postmaster General explain this ?

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Postmaster General). This is an increase of $83,940.75 for the twelve months, or about $63,000 for the nine months.

That increase is distributed in this way : An increase in the post office inspectors' offices of $8,330; in the railway mail service of $31,640; and in the city post offices, $43,970.

The $8,330 increase for offices of post office inspectors arises from five increases of $100 a year each, $500; twelve of $50 a year each, $600; three of $20 each, $60; and eight additional clerkships. The items I have given aggregate $8,530, but there is a deduction of $200 in respect of the difference between the salaries of clerkships that have become vacant, amounting to $4,500, and the $4,300 which we pay to the persons appointed or promoted to fill these vacancies.

Mr. BERGERON. Would my hon. friend explain the cases of Dorion and McAfee ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. These were two cases each of a special character. Mr. Dorion was a railway mail clerk in the Quebec district. He was appointed in 1885 and in December, 1897, he was dismissed from the service on the ground that he had taken an unduly active part in the Dominion elections of 1886. On the 1st of October, 1898, that is ten months after he was so dismissed, he was reinstated in the service, having expressed regret for what he had done. Since his reinstatement his services have been satisfactory. His explanation, I am told, was that what he did was done in thoughtlessness rather than with any intention of being a partisan, and he was reinstated accordingly in October, 1898. Before his dismissal he had been under the Superannuation Act. On being reinstated he came under the Retirement Act which had in the meantime been passed and provision is now being made to restore him to his original status under the Superannuation Act.

Mr. BERGERON. I presume he has taken no part in elections since then.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. Not that I am aware of. He was reinstated under an order in council, a copy of which I have, in September, 1898.

Mr. BERGERON. Is it the same in the case of Mr. McAfee ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. Not quite. Mr. McAfee was first appointed in 1882, as a letter carrier in Montreal. In October, 1903, he failed to report for duty and although repeated efforts were made to find him the postmaster reported that he was unable to do so for several days. When McAfee did appear he pleaded illness as the cause of his absence but as there had been previous occurrences of the same character and those instances at all events had not always been what would ordinarily be called illness, his explanation was not considered satisfactory and his services were dispensed with by an order in council passed in December, 1903. It was subsequently found that his illness was, on this particular occasion, real.

Mr. BERGERON. Not like the others ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. And, as he had been dismissed in the view that his illness was a pretense, when it was discovered that his illness was bona fide and that he had been at his father's house during the time he was being sought for, he was re-employed, in the first place temporarily, in June, 1904, and from that time forward his services have been reported as being entirely satisfactory. What is now being done is to reinstate him in his former position as a letter carrier at $2 a day in grade 'D' under the provisions of the amendment of 1902, that being the grade to which his previous services would have entitled him if he had never been suspended or dismissed. It is proposed to reinstate him to the status he had under the Civil Service Act. He had been a carrier since 1882, some twenty-one years at the time of his dismissal.

Mr. BERGERON. Do I understand that all the money he would have earned in the service is to be paid to him ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. He is not paid for the time he was not in the service.

Mr. BERGERON. Each of these men was under the Superannuation Act at the time of dismissal ? But when they were dismissed would this not all be at an end ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. It would be but for this legislation to restore each man to his original status, so all they will lose is the time they were out of the service.

Mr. BLAIN. Was any investigation made at the time when these two mail clerks were dismissed ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. The circumstances, I am told, in regard to Dorion were that he was practically the candidate for the county of Quebec in 1896, that he stumped the county actively and retired from the service to all intents and purposes before the election day. It was a matter of notoriety in the locality at the time; I do not think there was any official investigation.

Mr. BERGERON. He did not expect there would be any change of government so soon.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. Presumably. The other one was a case where there was an effort to find out and it was supposed at the time of dismissal that the man's absence was not due to any real illness but that that was a pretense. When it was discovered a few months afterwards that the case had been one of real illness, the mas was reinstated by order in council.

Mr. BENNETT. May I ask if it is necessary now for railway mail clerks to pass the civil service examination before they are employed ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. To be regularly employed, yes, but under the statute, a man may be appointed to the position of porter, and serve as a railway mail porter for a period of probation.

Mr. BENNETT. What wages per diem are paid to the railway mail porters ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. They start at $400 a year. The amount is regulated by statute, I think.

Mr. BERGERON. Does my hon. friend know that there is a great demand for more letter carriers in Montreal ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I have not heard of it.

Mr. BERGERON. The newspapers have been complaining about it very often.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. The report of our superintendent is to the contrary, that the letter carriers are not working other than reasonable hours, and that there is not a deficiency of men. I may say that petitions have been received from letter carriers' associations in nearly, if not quite, every city in the Dominion asking for amelioration of their conditions in the way of shorter hours but none have asked for additional help so far as I have seen.

Mr. BERGERON. I suppose the two things may be taken together: if there were more help the hours would be shorter. I imagine that is the meaning of what I have read, and also that they asked an increase of wages. I was under the impression that some memorials had been sent to the Post Office Department to that effect.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. A number of such memorials have been received, as I have just stated, and are under consideration. No deputation has been here, however.

Mr. BERGERON. I believe my hon. friend from Jacques-Cartier the other day had a question on the paper in regard to more letter carriers.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I have not answered such a question.

Mr. BERGERON. While on this subject I may say that there have been demands for a post office in the eastern part of Montreal. Some very strong demands were made last year upon the predecessor of my hon. friend, and they have continued all the year round. The merchants of that part of the city suffer great inconvenience from not having a building where they can transact business instead of going to the only post office that we have in Montreal to-day. I understand that there has been some discussion as to whether the post office should be in St. James division or in St. Mary's division, but it should be somewhere.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. The circumstances to which my hon. friend has referred have been brought to my attention by the members for St. James and St. Mary's divisions, and steps have been taken to relieve the conditions to which he refers. A sub-post office is to be established in the vicinity of St. Catherines and St. Denis streets.

Mr. BENNETT. May I ask the Postmaster General if these so-called mail porters take runs on the trains and act in the capacity of ordinary mail clerks ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. They assist in the service. They are learning their business while acting as porters.

Mr. BENNETT. They have not to pass any examination ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. They have to pass an examination before they can be appointed railway clerks. They are simply on probation as railway mail porters learning their work.

Mr. BENNETT. How many of these approximately have been appointed in the province of Ontario ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. Speaking approximately, the number would probably not exceed a dozen.

Post Office Mail Service, $2,250,525.

Mr. BENNETT. I suppose that alludes to the ordinary carriage of mails throughout the country ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. Mail service by land and water.

Mr. BENNETT. I am going to make an appeal to the Postmaster General in this connection. Prior to 1896 the custom had prevailed that where tenders had been called for a mail service and a man had placed a vehicle on the road and had got engaged in the service, it was sometimes thought well to give him a contract for the same service for an additional term of three years at the old figure. I think that system was concurred in by all persons as being a fair one, because the fact of tenders having been called for three years before was an evidence that the rate charged was a reasonable one. The late Postmaster General, on coming to power, reviled that system as a very bad one, and there was a famous blue-book published and circulated throughout the country to show that these renewals of contracts were an outrage, and in many cases they were annulled and the service put up to competition. A case has arisen in the east riding of Simcoe to which I am going to draw the attention of the Postmaster General. He is starting out with a clean sheet, great things are expected of him, and he is not to be saddled with the crimes of his predecessor. In this connection I will read an answer which the Postmaster General gave to a question in regard to the mail service between Coldwater, Lawson and Lovering, and which is to be found at page 347 of the unrevised Hansard. It is as follows :

Hon. Mr. AYLESWORTH (Postmaster General). A contract for this service was let by tender in 1897 and awarded to the lowest tenderer, W. H. Lovering, at $130 a year. On its expiring in 1901 it was renewed for four years ending on the 31st March, 1905, and it was then renewed for another term of four years from 31st March, 1905, with the same contractor at $156 a year.

This contract had originally been placed at $130 a year after fair competition, and it was renewed for three years; and last year the then Postmaster General added $26 a year to the amount of the contract without putting it up to public competition. Politically I would rather have the Postmaster General leave it where it is, for this reason. This Mr. Lovering, I need not say, is a follower of the hon. gentlemen opposite, and a very strong one ; but his own neighbours, Liberals, are anxious to tender for this contract ; and yet the Postmaster General takes $26 of the people's money and makes a present of it to Mr. Lovering. The Postmaster General had as much right to give Mr. Lovering a contract at $1,000 increase as at $26. On the question of principle it would be exactly the same; on the question of money it would be different. The Postmaster General of last year stultified himself in doing that. The present Postmaster General has this case before him ; he is ratifying it if he continues the contract. Personally and politically, I say I prefer that he will, because he will simply disgust the Liberals in that neighbourhood. They have an idea of common honesty and common decency, and they think that this contract should be put up to public competition. This Mr. Lovering, whom no doubt through the defeated candidate or somebody else succeeded in persuading the late Postmaster General that he was the whole thing in that neighbourhood, is not it by any means. I have expectations of the Postmaster General that he is not going to come down to that sort of thing, but will see to it that there must be fair, honest public competition ; that he will see to it that Liberals and Conservatives alike have the opportunity to tender. So I am going to ask the Postmaster General if he intends to continue this contract to Mr. Lovering at $156 for the balance of the term which expired four years from the 31st of March, 1905 ; or will tenders be called for, leaving the contract open for the competition ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I am afraid I am not able to give my hon. friend (Mr. Bennett) a categorical answer without giving the circumstances also. The course which the circumstances seem to call for, if the difference in the amount was sufficient to be talked about, would be to compare with the cost of similar services in other parts of the country the amount being paid to this contractor. Everything depends on the frequency of the service, the distance travelled, the amount of work done. And it may be that, though there has been an increase of $26 upon the original contract price, the amount is still far below what would ordinarily be expected to be paid for services of the character performed. Of course, tenders cannot be called for without advertisement, and this is attended with more or less expense. It might well have been considered by any one in charge of this department that, if the service could be arranged for at an increased expenditure of only $26 a year or 50 cents a week, it would be better to make the renewal on those terms than to go to the expense of calling for tenders.

Mr. BENNETT. I am surprised to hear the Postmaster General (Mr. Aylesworth) talk as he does with the Minister of Justice (Mr. Fitzpatrick) sitting beside him. When tenders were desired for the supply of flour for the Kingston penitentiary, the Department of Justice thought fit to advertise in the Acton 'Free Press,'—now the Postmaster General knows what the Acton 'Free Press' may be and what it is—the Alexandria 'News,' the Collingwood 'Bulletin,' the Eganville 'Leader'—where is Eganville? Somewhere in the county of Renfrew, is it not?—the Listowel 'Banner,' the Milton 'Reformer,' the Ridgetown 'Plaindealer'—that is rather a misnamer for such dealing—the 'Register,' of Toronto—I do not know of that paper at all—some paper with an unpronounceable name published in the village of Athabaskaville, and so on through the list. To cap the whole thing, they went away out to British Columbia to advertise for tenders for flour to be supplied to the penitentiary at Dorchester, New Brunswick. In view of the action of his colleague the Minister of Justice, the Postmaster General can hardly justify his plea for not calling for tenders. As I understand his argument, he intends to disregard, whenever he thinks fit, the healthy principle of competition by public calls for tender. If he thinks it right, or his officers think it right, they intend to let these contracts without competition. If, when a contract is to be given, the Postmaster General thinks that nothing is to be gained by public competition, he will give the contract to his political friends. The Postmaster General must know that in these country districts a large number of people wish to tender. The route in this case is only four or five miles and a lad can carry the bag in and out from the station at Coldwater. I can tell the hon. Postmaster General that more Liberals than Conservatives are disgusted at this paltry policy. It is such a picayune thing for a great department of the government to be pulled this way or that by a little political pooh bah and compelled to employ him at his own figure. If I were to consider this thing merely from a political point of view, I would say that I hope the Postmaster General will stick to the position his predecessor took. His predecessor did a number of these acts in East Simcoe, and the more he did of them the more he disgusted Liberals there. And it was the same way with every department of the government that gave out contracts, whether the Marine Department, the Public Works or the Post Office. In that view I could hope that the Postmaster General would leave this where it stands and that Mr. Lovering will have this advantage. His neighbours will have a way of getting even with the government, even though they will have to wait two or three years.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. So far as the hope, expressed by my hon. friend with regard to this particular matter are concerned, I think they are likely to be realized. I think this will be allowed to stand exactly where it stands to-day. I notice by the statement that he has made that this route is five miles—

Mr. BENNETT. Both ways.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I understood the hon. gentleman to say that this was five miles from the station. The mail carrier makes a journey of five miles each way, or ten miles for the round trip. This he does six times a week, which means that he travels sixty miles a week, or for the fifty-two weeks of the year, 3,120 miles. So, he is getting paid at the rate of five cents a mile. I should think that that was eminently reasonable.

Mr. BENNETT. Then, if I understand the Postmaster General, wherever he thinks it eminently reasonable, these contracts will be let without public competition.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I can only say, in answer, that if I find a contract expiring where the service is being performed at the rate of five cents per mile, I would hesitate—unless the amount involved was very large—to call for tenders. And, I may say, that, in the short experience I have had in the department, I have found more than one instance where calling for tenders produced no tender at anything like so small a figure as that at which the service was being performed.

Mr. BENNETT. And, I take it, not only will he make arrangements at the old figure, but he will, if he sees fit, increase the amount as in the present case.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I think I should hesitate about increasing the amount. But, of course, every case must be regarded as one for the exercise of good, common sense judgment.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If the department is to proceed on the principle of public calls for tenders, it could hardly be a matter in the discretion of the minister, as he might exercise his discretion to do away with tenders altogether. The Postmaster General may not be aware that his predecessor cancelled nearly one hundred contracts of this character given shortly before the late government went out in 1896, and he cancelled them for the very reason that tenders had not been called for. I do not think there was a claim in any of these cases, that the amount was not reasonable, and I should doubt very much whether the new advertisements brought in contracts for smaller amounts. Not only that, but, when these contractors sought to assert their rights against the Crown on account of the cancellation of their contracts, the Postmaster General of that time refused to certify for a petition of right. I think that in every case, so far as my recollection goes, the men were refused any recourse in the Exchequer Court in respect to the claims which they were advised by counsel they had against the Crown. I merely allude to this for the purpose of showing that the policy of the government seems to be very different from that announced in the first instance.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I want to draw the minister's attention to a matter which has been recently brought to my notice concerning the postmaster in the town of Leamington. I understood the policy announced by the government the other day was that a postmaster should receive enough salary to remunerate him properly—and I understand the salary was placed at about $1,000 by the Postmaster General—so that he might not need engage in any other business. I find on looking into the matter that the postmaster at Leamington is getting $1,250 per annum, and in addition to holding that position I find that he is police magistrate, he is treasurer of the town, he is collector of water rates, he is collector of gas rates, he draws by-laws for the town of Leamington, he is secretary of the public school board and treasurer of the public school board; he also works a fruit farm of about four acres; he is operator of the government telephone to Pelee Island, and also overseer of repairs to the Pelee Island cable. I am not going to ask the minister now to say whether it is the fact, but I understand this gentleman was also engaged as inspector of the cable to Pelee Island in the year 1905. I also find that his son is a clerk in the post office, with which I have no fault to find, but the information I have is that he also has an office as collector in the post office building. The son is collector of the town of Leamington, and holding his office in the post office building is very much to the detriment of those who get their mail there. Now, if the rule laid down the other day by the Minister is to be carried out, a rule on which I would congratulate the Postmaster General, I would ask him to look into this matter and take some action.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I shall be happy to do so. I should think that the circumstances as narrated by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clements) indicate that the postmaster of Leamington enjoys to a very large extent the confidence of the community.

Mr. CLEMENTS. Then I understand that the minister has changed the policy which he announced in the House the other day?

Mr. FOWLER. It seems to me that in view of the fact that only the other day we heard of a postmaster being dismissed because he was engaged in other occupations besides that of postmaster, that the answer which the new Postmaster General has given to my hon. friend from West Kent (Mr. Clements) was a very flippant one, and a very improper answer. Now, the hon. gentleman is new to this House and he had better understand at once that ministers are not in the habit of giving answers of that kind to proper inquiries made on this side of the House. It is not the best course for the hon. gentleman to pursue. This is not his first offence either. The other day he offended in a similar manner, and it would perhaps expedite the passing of his estimates if he were a little less flippant. Now, it seems to me that in view of the statements made by my hon. friend from Kent, some consideration should be promised by the minister with respect to this poo bah; this gentleman who holds so many offices besides that of postmaster. He is violating the rule laid down that a man holding an office and getting a salary of $1,000 or upwards should hold only the one office of postmaster. This man, I understand, gets a salary of $1,250, yet he has all these other positions. Not only that, but he used the post office for the purpose of carrying on his own private business, and his son uses it as well. Now, all these things are certainly a violation of the rule laid down, and the minister should promise to investigate this matter. If he finds the facts as stated by my hon. friend from Kent, this postmaster, dyed-in-the-wool Grit though he be, and no doubt he is—because no decent Tory would take such an advantage of his position—should be brought rigorously within the rule.

Mr. BENNETT. I was mistaken in saying that the service was a daily one, I find it is only three times a week. Now, for the benefit of the Postmaster General I will tell him this, that a pretty good Grit, and one who has a great deal more influence than Mr. Lovering, is carrying the mail in that neighbourhood, and he makes six trips a week. Mr. Lovering has $156 a year for his services and this other contractor only receives $137. Both carry the mails about the same distance, but the one makes six trips in the week instead of three, and he gets $160 a year, although he makes twice as many trips, he only gets $160. Here is another one, practically the same distance, who gets $200 and makes double the number of trips The report will show that men making twice as many trips are only getting paid about $160 or $170. Now, here is a case where, without a doubt, if the service were put up to honest competition, it would be done much cheaper. If the Postmaster General wants to stick to the position taken by the late Postmaster General, I should be pleased to see him do it. But the action taken by the present Postmaster General now will serve as a precedent in respect to competition. When a local candidate, whether he is a defeated candidate or a member, wishes to make a representation, then the Postmaster General will not be bound down by any rules of competition, but he is going to give the contract at his own will and pleasure. Well, we will see what the result will be in a political sense.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Bennett) misunderstood me if he thought I said that I intended to follow the recommendation of any member of the House or of any defeated candidate in regard to awarding mail contracts; I made no reference to any such thing, and so far as my experience in the administration of the Post Office Department goes there has been no question or instance, of any such thing. I was referring in what I said when on my feet before with regard to this item, entirely to my own judgment of what a service of the character that this contractor seems to be performing would reasonably be worth. The statute provides that when the amount of the contract exceeds $200 tenders must be called for, but where the amount is less than $200 parliament in its wisdom, I take it, thought it might cost more to call for tenders than to award the contract even though a larger figure was involved. The very figures that my hon. friend has given seem to indicate that for services approximately of this character, a figure from $137 to $160, is a fair one to pay for the work done. In this case the amount paid to this particular man is between the limits mentioned.

Mr. SPROULE. I do not think that answer covers the case. The practice followed by his predecessor for years was that in all cases there should be an invitation for public tenders. Now, it is a known fact to those who have been in parliament for some years, though it may not be to the new Postmaster General, that his predecessor cancelled many contracts that had been renewed at a figure below $200 when it was believed by the department that the work was being done very much cheaper.

He gave as his justification for so doing that it was his duty to ask for tenders and in many of these cases, some of which I have knowledge of because some of them were cancelled in my own constituency, tenders were asked for the same work and they were not received at a lower price. Some were given at the same price and some were given at a higher price, but notwithstanding the fact that the same work was tendered upon at a higher price it was justified on the ground that it was the result of public competition. It was contended that the practice which the hon. Postmaster General now defends was not a proper one, that where a contract was less than $200, and that when it knew or believed that the contract was performed for a reasonable figure the department was justified in exercising its judgment and renewing the contract without calling for tenders. That was strongly, vehemently condemned and the contrary principle was supported by many hon. members on the other side of the House. For some time they carried out their views, but after a while the late Postmaster General fell away from his own contentions and he began to renew not only contracts that were under $200, but I am told—and I believe correctly—some contracts that were over $200. It is not whether the judgment of the departments be correct that it is being done cheaply to-day, but it is whether the principle was wrong before. If it were wrong before it must be wrong now. It was declared to be wrong before. It is a principle that the hon. gentleman's predecessor declared was radically wrong. If I understand the principles of the incoming minister he is obliged to adopt the policy of his predecessor and defend it.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, oh.

Mr. SPROULE. Yes, the policy of the government. No incoming minister can differ either on the platform or in this House from his colleagues; otherwise he would not be in the cabinet, because the fact of his being in the cabinet is an acknowledgment that he is in accord with the Prime Minister and his colleagues. The fact that he took the place of his predecessor as Postmaster General imposes upon him the obligation of defending the principles of his predecessor. Instead of that he takes the very reverse ground. He takes the ground we took years ago and he stands exactly on the same ground which was contended over and over again by his predecessors was wrong.

Mr. LENNOX. Mr. Chairman, I would like to call the hon. Postmaster General's attention to some questions in connection with the post office that probably he has not yet taken into consideration and which might lead him to believe that the statement that the rate charged in the case brought up by my hon. friend from East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) was reasonable was a somewhat hasty judgment. I have before me a statement of the actual expenses in connection with a number of post offices that I collected last year, which will be found at page 2074 of 'Hansard' of last session. I find that in South Simcoe the average rate per mile is not ten cents as in the case brought forward by the hon. member for East Simcoe, but the average rate is 3·94 cents a mile. It is true that in some ridings the rate is higher, but there are peculiar circumstances that occasion that, perhaps. For instance, when I go from South Simcoe to North Simcoe I find that the rate advances a little, but in that case the government have an ardent supporter in the person of the representative of North Simcoe, and in that case the average rate is 4·53 cents per mile. There is one higher still and I think it is probably the highest in the province of Ontario. There is perhaps even greater reason why it should be higher still as it is in a riding whose interests will commend themselves no doubt to the favourable consideration of the Postmaster General and that is North York. In that riding it is higher than in North Simcoe, but it is only 5·30 cents per mile, even in North York ; so that the hon. Postmaster General probably will have reason to reconsider his position. When he says that he would think the rate in the case of the Coldwater mail carrying contract reasonable, it might be worth while for the hon. Postmaster General to consider this peculiar discrepancy. I find too in comparing South and North Simcoes, represented by members of different political complexions, that some peculiar discrepancies occur in the cases of short distances. For instance, distances of less than a mile. In that case the average per trip in South Simcoe is only 8·42 cts. a trip whereas in North Simcoe it is 12·62 cts. per trip; a difference which might be capable of explanation in some way, but which suggests explanations not favourable to the theory of proper administration of the department. From what the hon. member for East Simcoe says he hopes great things of the new Postmaster General and I hope that his hopes may be realized, and that among the things that will be improved will be that the rates in these different municipalities, lying alongside one another, and existing under similar conditions. will be more uniform in future than they have been in the past.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I think the question which was put to the hon. Postmaster General by my hon. friend from Kent (Mr. Clements) is deserving of a different answer. It was a question that was courteously put, but it was scarcely courteously answered. We are endeavouring to know what principle the post office department will act upon in such cases. I would say to my hon. friend the Postmaster General that from my knowledge of the practice of this House and of the passage of estimates it is not an unreasonable request and is one for which the opposition are justified in expecting a reasonable answer. The answer of the Postmaster General in regard to the postmaster of Cannington was supposed to lay down a certain principle which, we understood would be of universal application. I would like to ask the Postmaster General if that principle does not cover the case which has been referred to. I suppose there is not to be one principle employed for the postmaster at Cannington and another for the postmaster at Leamington. What has been the principle that the Postmaster General acted upon in respect to the postmaster at Cannington and in what respect does that principle not apply to the facts referred to ? Of course, it is not an answer to say that this gentleman enjoys the confidence of his friends. The question is : What is the policy of the Post Office Department ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. The subject which the hon. gentleman has just spoken of has been a matter of formal answers which are on the pages of 'Hansard.' In regard to the post office at Leamington I stated in answer to the hon. member for Kent, that if any complaints were made the matter would be investigated. No complaints have been made that I am aware of. If any complaint is made by some person interested in the office as a patron of the office, or not interested, the matter will be dealt with precisely as the Cannington matter was dealt with ; an inspector will be sent to investigate, and depending upon the circumstances reported by the inspector the action of the department will follow.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The hon. gentleman has not given an answer as to what the principle was. The answer dealt with the circumstances of the Cannington case but I am still at a loss to know what the principle is. Would I be correct in understanding that a postmaster receiving a salary of $1,000 or $1,200 a year in a small town, is not to be permitted to engage in any other business than the performance of his duties as postmaster. It seems to me that is a very simple question, and one upon which we are entitled to know what the policy of the government is.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I gave an answer the other day as laying down the policy that, where the salary attached to the office seemed adequate to the maintenance of the postmaster, it was undesirable that the postmaster should engage in other duties. I cannot speak with regard to the facts of any particular case without knowing what these facts are, nor make before hand any statement of what may be done in any particular case until the facts of that case are investigated.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I understand the Postmaster General to define the principle in this way : That where the salary is reasonably adequate, a postmaster will not be permitted to engage in outside business or employment, and that if the facts are brought to the attention of the Postmaster General he will act accordingly. If that is the Postmaster General's position I understand it, if it is any less than that I do not understand it.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I cannot say more as to the matter of general policy than I have said. In my judgment such a condition of things as is indicated in the answer I made to the hon. member for East Simcoe was an undesirable condition.

Mr. SPROULE. In the answer given to the question of my hon. friend (Mr. Bennett), the Postmaster General set forth what he regarded as the proper principle. The question was :

1. Is it the policy of the Post Office Department to compel postmasters to attend personally to the duties of their office, and not to engage in any other calling ?

2. If so, is regard to be had to the salary paid to the postmaster, or what rule, if any, prevails ?

The answer of the Postmaster General was :

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Postmaster General). It is and has always been the policy and the practice of the department to require postmasters to give personal attention to the duties of their offices, and where a post office is sufficiently important to call for the full time and attention of the postmaster, and the salary adequate for his maintenance, it is considered undesirable that he should engage in any other business.

I understood the hon. member for Kent (Mr. Clements) to say that in the case he cited this postmaster was getting a salary of $1,200 a year and yet he was engaged in several other undertakings, and the Postmaster General has no objection to make. And this, note the fact that the postmaster at Leamington violates the rule which the Postmaster General has laid down as the first act of his official career. That conduct does not come with very good grace from even a new Postmaster General though an allowance should be made for him. Human memory is short, but it is not so short as to forget the rule laid down plainly by the Postmaster General within a week, when to-night we see him attempting to justify a rule the very reverse of that so recently announced by him. The Postmaster General is inconsistent with himself.

Mr. CLEMENTS. The Postmaster General has announced a principle with regard to this matter which he will doubtless find very embarrassing during his tenure of office. I have no quarrel with the postmaster at Leamington. He may be a Liberal or a Conservative so far as I know ; I am not certain of his politics nor do I care. The minister says he has had no complaints in this case, but I can tell him that I have had very serious complaints from Leamington to-day and I was asked personally to bring the matter to the attention of the House. My correspondents in Leamington ventured to congratulate the Postmaster General on the policy which he announced he was going to carry out in this fair Dominion ; to not allow postmasters who get a salary sufficient to keep them comfortably to engage in any other business. The complaints made to me set forth that a number of prominent citizens in Leamington would like to get a chance of tendering for or holding some of the positions now held by the postmaster there. It is mentioned that the postmaster's son is town clerk while at the same time he is clerk of the post office, and the fact that the government pays light, fuel, office rent, and so forth enables him to accept the office of town clerk at a much cheaper rate than can other gentlemen who are not so favoured by the government.

Mr. FOWLER. I can quite understand the difficult position in which the new Postmaster General is placed in a matter of this kind, in view of the fact that he himself, the head of a department, is not satisfied with the salary he receives from this country for performing the duties of his office, but is attending to his private practice in violation of the well known rule that Ministers of the Crown are not supposed to do that kind of thing. Naturally he has a certain kind of sympathy for his fellow pooh-bah the postmaster at Leamington. The Postmaster General thinks it necessary for his friend and co-worker in the cause to eke out the salary which he receives from the Dominion by working along other lines, because the Postmaster General himself is so important a personage in this Dominion that he is not able to get along with his salary from the people of this country, and has to help it along by his private practice which is in direct violation of that well-known rule which prevents Ministers of the Crown attending to private business.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The Postmaster General stated the other day that the postmaster at Cannington had engaged in some other occupation than that of postmaster, and that therefore he retired him. I want to know what the other occupation of the postmaster at Cannington might be.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I have no personal knowledge on the subject ; he was reported to me to be engaged in the business of a grocer.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Upon what authority does the Postmaster General base that statement. A few days ago the Postmaster General in a rather bumptious sort of manner undertook to quote from documents which he professed to have in his possession, as to the occupation the postmaster at Cannington was engaged in. The House and the country now want to know what was that other occupation ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. The answer in reply to that question appears at page 442 of the unrevised Hansard :

The business which the former postmaster at Cannington was said to have been carrying on was that of a grocer. Different residents of the village complained of the fact that the postmaster should be, as they put it, subsidized by the government against them, and expressed suspicion that their mailable matter did not receive fair treatment in the Cannington post office when supposed to relate to their busines affairs. Investigation was made by an inspector who made personal inquiries from the postmaster himself and from other persons, and reported to the department the result of such investigation.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. And what was the result of the investigation ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. He reported to the department that the charges were in his judgment well founded.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Had not the Postmaster General data from leading reformers in the village of Cannington, at the time he made that statement in the House showing that there was not one word of truth in it. At the time he made these statements to the House he had in his possession declarations from prominent Liberals in Cannington that there was not one word of truth in the statement he gave to this House and the country. He knows he had.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. The hon. gentleman is scarcely accurate. After the postmaster at Cannington was dismissed a protest against the dismissal came to me signed by a gentleman who stated that he was a leading reformer of the vicinity, and he inclosed a statutory declaration of the late postmaster himself in which the postmaster averred that the charge against him was not true, and attached a copy of a promissory note which was still current and which, to my mind, went a long way towards establishing the charge to be true.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. What is the promissory note, let us have particulars ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I cannot give the particulars from memory.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The hon. gentleman was very apt in standing in this House and reading that > Different residents of the village complained of the fact that the postmaster should be, as they put it, subsidized by the government against them, and expressed suspicion that their mailable matter did not receive fair treatment in the Cannington post office when supposed to relate to their business affairs.

He stood before the House and read that statement when he had in his possession from the leading Liberals in North Ontario —I will not accept the supposed representative who does not live in North Ontario— he had the documents and had the hardihood to stand before the House and make the statement. If that is the way he begins his career in this House, it is no wonder that people read of the announcement of his association with the Gamey affair with credence.

Mr. BENNETT. Has the Postmaster General a report of the inspector, and what is the name of the inspector who made the report ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. The report is on file. I really do not recollect the name.

Mr. BENNETT. He might ask the deputy, it would be Mr. Henderson, I presume.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. It is Mr. Henderson, I am told.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Perhaps the minister would have no objection to bringing the documents down before the item is concluded, because I think it would be of public importance to have the policy of the government settled and stated. It might be of assistance to know just what were the facts on which the Postmaster General proceeded. I would like to know after a charge was made against the postmaster which amounts practically to malfeasance in office, whether the postmaster had an opportunity of meeting the man who made the allegations against him, had an opportunity of cross-examining him, had the usual opportunity given to every man in this country who is charged with anything that practically amounts to a very serious offence. I notice that the Postmaster General refers to a charge against this postmaster, as one which is alleged. It was not worth while to put that forward as a reason for dismissing him unless there was something more than allegation. Allegation would not be enough to justify the Postmaster General in dismissing him, and I would suggest the man should have had some opportunity of knowing what was charged against him, of meeting the men who made the charges and of making his defence after he had heard the charge and the evidence on which it was based. The instincts of the Postmaster General as a lawyer, ought to surely indicate that to him, but up to the present time we have not any suggestion from the Postmaster General that any such course, as that was pursued. I would think it highly desirable that the documents—which ought to be laid on the table of the House in any case because the Postmaster General has referred to them—should be brought before the House for our information.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The Postmaster General is familiar with this reference to a note for $200. He knows, he was not born yesterday, he poses before the country as a great legal light, he is not fit for a lunatic asylum because he has a good memory. This document proves that the postmaster's brother, who was formerly in the grocery business, owed him $200, and when the brother sold out to another gentleman, the note was simply transferred from the brother to the present grocery man, and he knows, so far as declarations can prove it, that neither directly nor indirectly had the postmaster one farthing of interest in the grocery business, and yet he stood in the House and sought to mislead the House and country by making it appear that this man was engaging in another business. Possibly by bringing this gentleman into a sense of his responsibility here we may benefit him in the conduct of his department and his bearing in the country. Supposing the man had $900 a year and had a little grocery business, is that any worse than for the Postmaster General to have the hardihood to go to the Supreme Court with briefs, appearing before judges of his own appointment. I wonder which is the more scandalous before the people of the country. We shall endeavour, before the Postmaster General has been many months in his place, to put a little of the higher sense of honour into his position so that he will not be able to put on the lordly manner he did when Gamey went to him for money, ignore it and go to the man who handled out the money a little later and finish up the deal behind the scenes.

Mr. BENNETT. I think the Postmaster General stated these railway porters are paid $400 a year. Does the Postmaster General think that is adequate for their maintenance ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. That is the salary that is fixed by statute, I have no opinion about it.

Mr. BENNETT. Well then I suppose he thinks that is adequate for their maintenance. The leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) once made use of that somewhat famous word 'adequate' in another connection and he has been held very strictly to it. I think we must ask the Postmaster General to stand to his guns on the words 'adequate for his maintenance.' It being the case that $400 is adequate for the maintenance of a railway porter, must a postmaster who receives $400 or upwards be considered as receiving an amount 'adequate for his maintenance' and will the rule that prevailed in the Cannington case apply in other cases, that if a postmaster does not attend to his duties, although he is receiving a sum adequate for his maintenance he will be dismissed.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I can only deal with cases as they arise.

Mr. BENNETT. I will bring a case and make a formal complaint. The postmaster at Victoria Harbour receives $500 a year. I say advisedly that he pays no attention whatever to the office, he has nothing whatever to do with it. He is the Grand Trunk Railway agent at that point and devotes his attention entirely to that and not to the post office at all. His salary is in round figures $500. I am not going to ask the Postmaster General for an offhand opinion on that case, but I suppose he will take that into his consideration. A postmaster with $500 has nothing whatever to do with the office, he is the Grand Trunk agent at that point, which of course compels him to give his attention to the railway company's interest. Is that such a case as the Postmaster General considers should call for the dismissal of the man, assuming that state of facts is correct.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. Surely the hon. gentleman does not wish me to give an opinion on a case of that character. I should not in any case express an opinion without making inquiry into the circumstances.

Mr. BENNETT. I make the facts provisional, if the facts are correct. Let us take the Cannington case. I think it is fair to the present Postmaster General to put him in his right position, because he is in an unfair position before the House to-night. The Postmaster General of to-day is not responsible for the dismissal of the Cannington postmaster except in carrying it into effect. It was stated by the 'Globe' newspaper that the dismissal of the Cannington postmaster had been decided upon by Sir William Mulock before he left office and that it was only left for the present Postmaster General to carry it out. Whether that statement of the 'Globe' is true or not, I know not, but I know it has gone uncontradicted by the Postmaster General. With regard to this postmaster at Cannington, the inspector, Mr. Henderson, was sent there, and from what I know of him, and from what others know of him, he did just what might be expected of him. He never went near the postmaster at all. Why? For fear that he would get true information. I hold in my hand a copy of the 'Ontario Gleaner' of March 15, a newspaper published at Cannington, and here is the challenge thrown down to this inspector:

> If this man (Inspector Henderson) wanted to know anything concerning my affairs, it would have been more manly to come to me personally and ask for the facts instead of acting on the evidence of persons who had no means of knowing my affairs, and who were blinded by prejudice.

This is a letter written over the signature of Mr. Kift, the man with whom the postmaster at Cannington was said to have been in business, and Inspector Henderson dare not deny the statement there made. It is notorious that Dr. Bingham, who no doubt will be the next candidate in North Ontario in the Liberal interest—

An hon. MEMBER. What is the matter with the present member?

Mr. BENNETT. The present member does not count in the matter of North Ontario. Dr. Bingham, I am credibly informed, remonstrated with the department about the dismissal of the postmaster at Cannington—why? Because it is unpopular with the Liberals there. They know that this man Talbot has been harassed for the last two or three years since the present member has had the patronage of the riding. He had spacious premises of his own in which be carried on the post office to the satisfaction of every one there, and the Postmaster General at the time, Sir William Mulock, forced him to move from his own premises and go into a place that was not as suitable for any kind of business in order that he might be harassed and be deprived of the advantage of carrying on the business in his own premises—because of course he received a rental. There is the conduct of Inspector Henderson, and it is on a par with the whole proceeding—first, the action of the member who has the patronage in urging the late Postmaster General to dismiss the postmaster, and it would be fair for the present Postmaster General to let the country know that this position was forced upon him. It is true, he had the right to refuse to carry it out, but he has seen fit to shoulder it. The whole matter has been conducted in an underhand manner, and it is reprobated by the leading Liberals not only of Cannington, but of the surrounding country. I am going to ask the Postmaster General to take into serious consideration the case of the postmaster at Victoria Harbour. He will find on inquiry—I do not care whether he sends Inspector Henderson there or not—that the postmaster does not attend to the duties of the office, although the salary is over $500, and he can only find one thing to condone his conduct, that is the fact that he goes on the public platform at election times and makes speeches. I would dislike to prevent him doing that, because he always helps me; he adds to my majority. I see the Minister of Customs smiling. I am not directing that remark to him, although he comes to East Simcoe, and I hope he will come again, and the premier too—the more visits the more majority for me.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I am anxious that the Postmaster General shall bring down the papers in the case of the Cannington postmaster. I understand that he promises to bring them down.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. If they are moved for.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. In regard to these matters which come up in connection with the estimates, ministers have not been in the habit so far of asking us to move for the papers relative to the discussion. I do not suppose that any new rule is intended to be introduced.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. Certainly not.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I think my hon. friend the Minister of Customs will bear me out in saying that.

Mr. PATERSON. There has to be a motion made.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. A motion has been made. I desire to say to the Postmaster General in regard to the promissory note to which he has alluded, that I have under my hand a written statement, which can be sworn to if the matter is investigated. It is from the gentleman who took over the business when the note was given, and who declares most explicitly with regard to the purchase of that business in 1902 from Mr. Talbot, that the postmaster at Cannington never had the slightest interest therein. He gives an explicit statement of the reason why the note was given. The late postmaster had a young brother who went to South Africa and fought the battles of the empire. After he came back he went into business; the business was sold out, and the note was given in connection with that. There is the explanation which is under my hand at the present time. If that evidence had been presented to the Postmaster General in any such way as to indicate that the late postmaster was interested in that particular business, I think he has not been fully seized of the facts as they actually exist. I do not know whether the principle to which the Postmaster General alluded is sufficiently definite to enable him to answer a question which I propose to put to him. It is this: I have reliable information that a postmaster in the province of Ontario who enjoys a salary more than twice that which was enjoyed by the late postmaster at Cannington, is at the present time carrying on a large business in buying horses and shipping them to the Northwest, and is also dealing in grain. What I desire to know is whether the principle alluded to by the Postmaster General is sufficiently definite to impel him to dismiss that gentleman if these facts can be substantiated?

Some hon. MEMBERS. Answer.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I have already declined to answer hypothetical questions. Upon the facts of any case being placed before me, I will take such action as I think right.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I have given facts. We are inquiring about the principle which shall govern them. Apparently there is no principle to which the Postmater General is willing to commit himself, although the first explanation was that there was no partisanship or political pressure in this, but that he was simply exemplifying a principle of universal application to post office servants.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I am sorry that I cannot be so charitable as the hon. member for East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) towards the Postmaster General. The hon. member for East Simcoe excuses the Postmaster General on the ground forsooth that this matter had been before his predecessor.

Mr. BENNETT. The 'Globe' said so.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. But the former Postmaster General though he seemed ready to stoop to the lowest actions, as witness the case of the postmaster at Thessalon and McLeod, at least he would not stoop to dismiss the postmaster at Cannington but left that for the present Postmaster General to do. Nor can I be so charitable as the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) in excusing the Postmaster General on the ground of not having full knowledge of the facts. The Postmaster General had before him all the data that are before the leader of the opposition in the form of a declaration over the signature of the leader of the Liberal party in North Ontario. I do not refer to the present occupant of the position of member of parliament for that riding but the gentleman who is head and front of the Liberal party in North Ontario. This statement shows that the ex-postmaster had nothing to do with the grocery business but simply held a note of $200 by his brother which was assumed by Kift when he took over the business. Sir William Mulock could not be induced to stoop to the act of dismissing this postmaster. It was left for the gentleman who, when he sought election in Durham, made his campaign on the basis of a town clock for Bowmanville and a canal for Port Hope, and who, when he went into North York, still carried the canal with him and spoke of making it run up hill to Newmarket. And this is the same gentleman who comes to give the parliament of Canada lessons in political morality, decency and courtesy. He will find that that class of talk will not go down with this House or with the country.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I wish to bring to the attention of the Postmaster General a case with which he is acquainted, or can make himself acquainted—the case of the postmaster at Napanee, Dr. Leonard. Dr. Leonard is a very respectable man. He was appointed postmaster after the election of 1900, in which election he had been a candidate of the Liberal party. He is to-day the medical officer for the Grand Trunk Railway and also medical officer for the counties of Lennox and Addington, and also he practices his profession as he used to do, although the income from the postmastership, I believe is about $2,500. I do not make these complaints because I wish to have Dr. Leonard dismissed; although when he was appointed Sir Richard Cartwright, then and now Minister of Trade of Commerce, stated in this House that he would not be allowed to practice. The ground I have taken and the reason I have made no complaint is that if the medical men of Napanee are satisfied, I have no reason to complain. But I think the principles under which our post office system is governed should be the same throughout. I do not think that the postmaster at Cannington, who gets less than $1,000—for he has to pay his rent, fuel and light—should be dismissed because he is supposed to have an interest in another business, while other gentlemen are allowed to farm their offices out when those offices yield much larger income than the postmastership at Cannington.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I would like to say, on behalf of the government, to my hon. friend from Lennox (Mr. U. Wilson) that the principle on which the government has acted is altogether too nebulous to permit any observation to be made in response to my hon. friend.

Mr. A. MARTIN. I desire to call the attention of the Postmaster General to the carrying of the mails in a part of Prince Edward Island. From Charlottetown to Belfast, Belle River and Murray Harbour, which are connected by railway, is a distance of about 50 miles. We have the railway passing through that section, and the mail courier travelling between these points, and, in many cases by a route just along side the railway. Now, what is the result ? Take, for instance, Murray Harbour south, which is a distance of about 50 miles from Charlottetown. The train leaves Charlottetown direct from Murray Harbour. But in place of the train carrying the mails, these are sent forty miles in a different direction to Cardigan Bridge. Thence they are transferred by mail courier, to Montague Bridge seven miles, they are held over night and thence to Murray Harbour about twenty miles. The result is that instead of the Murray Harbour mails being delivered on the day they leave Charlottetown, they do not arrive until the next day. The only explanation we can get for this state of things in the province of Prince Edward Island is that there is a dispute between the Post Office Department and the Railway Department as to the price at which the mails shall be carried. The Post Office Department wants the work done at a low figure and the Railway Department thinks it ought to get a high one. And so the mail couriers are employed to carry the mail with a government railway running alongside of it. I do not know whether this matter has been brought to the attention of the department, but I think that in the interest of economy the people ought to be given a service fairer and better and so I ask the Postmaster General's attention to this matter. I hope that within the next few months, when the summer railway arrangements are made, the proper and economical delivery of the mails will be provided for. I would like to know if the Postmaster General has any information on this point.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. The matter to which the hon. gentleman (Mr. A. Martin) refers has not come to my personal knowledge, though, since he rose I have been told that the subject has been under consideration in the department. I can only remind the hon. gentleman that there are many parts of this country, perhaps not in his own province or in any of the older parts of the country, but particularly in the Northwest, where the condition of affairs he describes necessarily exists. A new railway is constructed—and the road to which the hon. gentleman refers is a branch that has recently come into operation—and before arrangements for carrying the mails on the railway can be perfected, of necessity the old form of service by couriers must be maintained. Of course, it may seem anomalous that the mails should be carried by horses when the trains are running, but that is only temporary.

Mr. A. MARTIN. The railway has been in operation some five or six months. There is no doubt that conditions prevailing in Prince Edward Island are not the same as those prevailing in the Northwest. The railway in Prince Edward Island is a government railway and is not like many of the other railways in the Northwest, which are owned by private parties. They could have a daily service to many of those places, but they have only two or three mails a week, although the train passes there two or three times a day.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The minister has not yet explained the increase of about $150,000 in the second item, I have not observed any great increase in the other. So far as I can compute, the total vote for the year would amount to about $3,000,000, that is the mail service item. The vote last year was $2,846,000.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. There is an increase for the twelve months of $154,000, and three-fourths of that for the nine months. That $154,000 if distributed among these four items: The ordinary land service, $105,000; mail service by railway, $36,700; mail service by steamboats, $7,300; supply of and repairs to mail bags, $5,000. The increase of $105,000 for the ordinary land service is to provide for new post offices, principally in the Northwest, increasing the frequency of the existing service, and the increased prices that we find it constantly necessary to pay upon existing contracts expiring and new contracts being awarded upon tender. The $36,700 in respect of mail service by railways is the amount estimated for the conveyance of mail by rail, and extensions of the service principally in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and the Territories. The details as we estimate them in the department upon the services that are presently necessary to be provided, I can give, if it is desired, and if the House has patience to listen to a couple of pages of figures. But each item, I may say, has been estimated with the utmost accuracy. The largest item, being $1,750, is the cost of establishing a baggage car service semi-daily between Brantford and Tilsonburg in the province of Ontario, a distance of 35 miles. There is a similar service in the Northwest between Arcola and Regina in the province of Alberta, $1,300 for which we ask in respect of mail in different parts of the country, aggregating $36,700. The additional amount of $7,300 for which we ask in respect of mail service by steamboats, is to provide for renewal of service between Vancouver and Port Neville and other points in British Columbia, at the increased rate of payment, $3,500 instead of $1,200; and to provide for extension of other services by steamboats, $5,000. These are the details of this increase.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I will take the liberty to draw the attention of the Postmaster General to the fact that in the Northwest, in many places where new post offices are being established, the people are given a service twice and three times a week. I am not finding any fault with that, I believe in giving the people in the new provinces all the advantages it is possible to confer upon them. But I wish to draw the hon. gentleman's attention to the fact that there are many places in the older parts of Ontario, especially in the region between the farming districts and the lumbering districts, taking the counties of Renfrew, Lanark and all this range of counties to the Georgian bay, there are large settlements where the people have only one mail a week, and those mails are not at all as expeditious in the carriage of weekly newspapers as they might be. The people were given one mail a week in the beginning, and in many places they are confined to that to the present time. I am satisfied that these people who have long been settlers in the province of Ontario are entitled to an extra mail a week at least, if not a tri-weekly mail, and I would ask the hon. gentleman to see that his inspectors turn their attention to this matter.

Miscellaneous, $295,875.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. There is an increase of $65,000 for the twelve months, or $48,000 for the nine months. The items aggregating this increase are for stationery, printing and advertising for which there is an increase on the footing of $10,000 for twelve months; manufacture of postage stamps, an increase of $12,500; miscellaneous items, which I can give in the fullest detail if desired, amounting to $45,000. That however, is offset by an amount voted for rent of premises that were leased for post office purposes for 1906-07, but not required, $1.740. So the aggregate increase on that item of miscellaneous is $65,000 for the twelve months. The increased expenditure upon printing, advertising and stationery, is simply the result of the general expansion that is going on in all branches of the service commensurate with the growth of the country. The increase of $12,500, which it is estimated in the department we will require, is for the manufacture of postage stamps, post cards, envelopes and post bands. Out of this vote of miscellaneous items we have to bear the expense of letter carriers' uniforms, street letter boxes, hand stamps, scales, weights, wages to labourers and charwomen, telegrams, telephone messages, local expenses for rent, mail stamping machines, which it is estimated will necessitate an increase of $45,000 on that branch of the service.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I would like to ask the Postmaster General if there is any limit of population above which a street delivery service may be established in towns and cities ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. No, there is no special limit. It is a pretty expensive luxury to indulge in, and as yet we have not been able to give that superior service to any but the largest cities and centres of population.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I think the Postmaster General must be acquainted with the city of Chatham in the county of Kent, and he knows that it is one of the most prosperous cities in the Dominion. The citizens of Chatham are looking forward to great things from the present Postmaster General, and they think they are entitled to this additional service, free city delivery. I want also to suggest to the hon. Postmaster General that we are hampered there at the present time and I think that if the corridor of the post office was left open on Sundays, so that the mail could be taken from the boxes, it would be a great advantage to us. A great many commercial men who would remain over in the city of Chatham and spend their Sundays do not remain simply because they do not get their mail. The result is that they go to Windsor and remain there over Sunday.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. As far as letter carriers are concerned, no doubt it would be a very great boon to the residents in any large centre of population, or for that matter, in the smaller centres of population, if we could feel that we would be warranted in incurring the large additional expense that a house to house delivery necessarily entails. The position of the city of Chatham, in which the hon. gentleman is especially interested and with which I am fairly well acquainted personally, is in no respect peculiar or special. I am not sure whether the population of the city of Windsor is greater than that of Chatham at the present time, but it is a neighbouring city on very much the same footing and one from which there is a substantially larger postal revenue annually than there is from Chatham. The city of Peterboro is a city in the central part of the province which has a considerably larger revenue than Chatham and it must be, I think I am safe in saying, considerably more populous than Chatham is. Neither of these places has a mail delivery any more than Chatham has and there are many other places in the province of Ontario and in other provinces of the Dominion where, if we could afford it, it would be of very great advantage to the people that there should be a house to house mail delivery. In regard to the other question the hon. gentleman has started, I am sorry to say that it is too much, I am afraid, to hope for a unanimity of opinion in perhaps any community that may be singled out. The hon. gentleman advocates the opening of the post office on Sunday, or at all events suggests that as being a course of procedure which would be for the advantage and convenience of the travelling public. I can only say that it is a matter of almost daily occurrence in the department that the strongest representations are made by clergymen and others of the opposite way of thinking desiring to have all post offices rigidly and inflexibly closed from Saturday night until Monday morning and it is just one of those matters in regard to which, perhaps like any other question of Sunday observance, it is very difficult to meet the wishes and views of all the different classes of the community.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I think that possibly the hon. Postmaster General misunderstood me. I do not propose or would not suggest that the post office staff should remain at the post office on Sunday.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I did not so understand the hon. gentleman.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I only suggest that the corridors be left open so that the business people could get their mail from their boxes. I thought that noticing the large increase in the estimates here I would only make the suggestion that we in the city of Chatham might have the advantage of some of the money that is being voted for these services.

Mr. A. MARTIN. If the amount is to be largely increased I would like to say a few words in favour of Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, a city with a larger population than either Windsor or Chatham, although I would like to see my hon. friend (Mr. Clements) get every accommodation for Chatham that he possibly can. I think that the department in regard to this as well as other things should come to a decision as to the population or the revenue or something by which to extend and control the free delivery of mail. It is not altogether fair that one city should have mail carriers and another city, perhaps contributing just as much and with as large a population, should not have the same privilege. I think that it would be well for the Postmaster General, on assuming his position now, to lay down some rule which might be followed in establishing this as well as some other improvements. I hope he will carefully consider the claims of the province of Prince Edward Island.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. One thing I regret is that such a large amount of money is placed under the head of miscellaneous in these estimates. The hon. minister gave us a detailed statement of quite a number of things that this vote covers. I think these items should be put in the estimates. I do not see why this large amount cannot be set out in detail. It is a very large amount. It will be considerably over $350,000 for the year. It does seem to me that we should have that in detail in the estimates.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I can assure my hon. friend that it would be a matter of such difficulty as to be practically impossible to provide in the estimates for these various items.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. The hon. minister enumerates a lot of items although not more than two-thirds are detailed in the estimates. I do not see why these miscellaneous items could not be given just as well as the others.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I was just about to show the hon. gentleman the difficulty. Take this item which is perhaps the largest single item of increase—this $12,500 increase which we estimate we shall require for the manufacture of postage stamps, post cards, envelopes, post bands, &c.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. What is the amount you will pay for that during the year ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. We pay for that by contract according to what we use and we cannot tell what we will use.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Can you not tell how much you used last year ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. We have not the information at hand. I will ascertain it to-morrow. But, we pay for it by contract at a fixed price according to the quantity we require and we can only keep track of our output from month to month and by compiling figures from that record estimate how much we will need for nine months. It is the same in regard to the item for stationery, printing and advertising. We cannot tell what we will require accurately. If we get a grant of this amount from the House we do not consider ourselves called upon to expend it. We expend what we have to expend upon these various items all of which are of course essential for the carrying on of the service. The same thing is true in regard to the uniforms of letter carriers. They are manufactured under contract and the amount of the vote we exhaust depends entirely on the quantity used.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. That is all very well but these are only estimates at best, and it does seem to me that by keeping track from year to year you would have a very good idea of what you want for each class and a smaller amount might be taken to cover miscellaneous. You can use the money appropriated under the head of miscellaneous for anything you wish in your department and that is why I think you should be able to give a fair estimate of all these items, add them to the estimates and then ask a smaller vote for miscellaneous.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. As illustrating the impracticability, even with the assistance of considerable experience, of being accurate upon such matters, I may say that the vote the year before last upon this item was $290,740 and that the actual expenditure, although that estimate had been made with the utmost care possible in the department, exceeded the vote by some $38,000.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. How much worse would it have been if you had the items?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. The total expenditure in the year 1904-5 upon that item was $328,530, although the estimate had been $290,000.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I quite understand what the minister says, but I cannot see any difference. If he had made a different estimate on the different items, and even if he had come a little short, he would still have taken, perhaps not such a large vote for miscellaneous, and he might have applied that as he did.

Mr. BOYCE. Is there any fixed principle in the Post Office Department as to keeping post offices openon Sunday so that box holders may if they wish have the privilege of going to their boxes and getting their mail ? In what post offices, if any, is this practice allowed?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. The subject is one of very considerable difficulty and one in regard to which, as we all know, there is a very great divergence of opinion among different classes of the community. The position, which I was informed on taking office, my predecessor had taken in regard to this matter seems to me to be a proper position. It is, that no postmaster would be required against his own conscientious convictions to keep his office open on Sunday, but that where the postmaster had no objection and where any considerable portion of the community seemed to desire it the office would be allowed to be opened during certain hours on Sunday for box-holders to have access to the mail boxes. I am unable to state with any greater accuracy any definite line of policy in the matter. If postmasters are willing to permit their offices to be open under the circumstances I have described and a substantial portion of the patrons of the office desire it, there is no objection at least offered by the department.

Mr. GUNN. Do postmasters receive extra pay if they open their offices on Sunday?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. Postmasters are paid by fixed salary or percentage on the income of the office, so that they would not receive additional remuneration.

Mr. GUNN. How could the opening of a post office be brought about; is it by requisition?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. There is nothing formal necessary. If there were assurances that the people genrally desired it the matter would be taken into consideration no doubt. It would be a question as to whether the community in general desired it.

Mr. BOYCE. What disposition was made of the request from Sault Ste. Marie for the privilege of having the lobby of the post office kept open on Sunday? I have never been advised directly of any disposition having been made of that, but I have been advised indirectly through some strictures that have appeared in some newspapers upon the audacity of myself as member for the constituency asking such a thing. I would be glad to know whether the cause for such strictures has emanated from any decision of the Postmaster General?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. There is no special decision in regard to Sault Ste. Marie, and so far as I am aware the post office there is not open at the present time.

Mr. BOYCE. The old post office is not open, but my question is with respect to the new post office.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. There has been no direction made with regard to the matter by the department, but there have been the most vigorous protests by clergymen and citizens against any such thing.

Mr. GUNN. That is, as involving extra work on the officials?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. No, in regard to keeping the lobby open to box-holders and distracting their attention from religious matters on the Lord's Day.

Mr. BOYCE. I want to ask the Postmaster General in regard to a matter which has interested my constituents for some time; I refer to the irregularity of the mail service to the Michipicoten district—

Mr. AYLESWORTH. Pardon me; that is under consideration at the present time. There have been complaints and they are now being investigated.

Mr. BOYCE. By what route is the mail now carried to Michipicoten?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The 'Minnie M.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. The winter service is by the Canadian Pacific Railway; the summer service by water from Sault Ste. Marie.

Mr. BOYCE. How often is the winter mail delivered and who is the contractor?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I cannot answer that off hand.

Mr. BOYCE. Has the Postmaster General received a petition from the people of Belleview, Algoma, for the establishment of a post office there, and if so what action has he taken? There are some curious circumstances in connection with that petition. Belleview, in comparison with other places in the neighbourhood that have post offices, is entitled to have one also. The receipt of the petition was acknowledged by the department, and I am informed on the very best authority that a gentleman was told that under ordinary circumstances a post office would be established there, but as there was no Liberal resident of the district who could be appointed postmaster at the princely salary of $25 a year, the community would be deprived of the benefit of a post office, as the gentleman who made the recommendation to the Postmaster General would not counsel the appointment of one of these horrid Tories.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. No such statement was ever made by me nor did I ever hear of it before. I have no recollection that I ever heard of that post office till just now.

Mr. BOYCE. What about the disposition of the petition that was filed a year ago?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I have no recollection of ever having heard the name of Belleview and therefore I do not in the least know anything about the petition. I shall have a search made at once.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Can the minister tell me anything about the petition in reference to the mail service at Wicksteed in my riding?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I never heard of that name.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Perhaps not; I think it was about the time the Postmaster General took office the petition was sent in. There is a very large community there, but somewhat like the Belleview case the people are very intelligent and there is only one Liberal in the entire locality—he has gone away recently. I trust the Postmaster General will see his way clear to give that settlement a semi-weekly if not a tri-weekly mail. A great many communities in the Northwest have semi-weekly and tri-weekly mails where there are not so many people to serve. I do not complain of that, for I believe in giving an efficient mail service to every part of Canada. I ask the Postmaster General to give his serious consideration to an improvement in the mail service to Wicksteed.

Mr. BOYCE. In the last days of the last session of parliament the late Postmaster General promised the House he would make further investigation in regard to the irregularities at the Thessalon post office and that at the opening of this session he would make an announcement in regard to that matter. Has any further declaration been made; what is the result, and will the new Postmaster General lay the report on the table of the House?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I will make inquiries with regard to that. I have not heard anything of the matter except what I saw in the newspapers a year ago.

Mr. BOYCE. Has any further investigation been made as promised ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I am not able to state. I have not heard of the case or the post office since I took charge of the department.

Mr. BOYCE. Might I ask the hon. gentleman now to take up the matter ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I will certainly investigate it.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. In this matter of miscellaneous the minister referred to uniforms. I do not know if he has the names of the contractors or the manner of letting the contracts.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. There are two firms contracting for the major portion of the uniforms, the Crown Tailoring Co. of Toronto and the Sanford Manufacturing Co. of Hamilton.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I presume they are let by tender.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. Certainly.

Yukon Territory, $105,000.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Why is this kept separate from the general appropriation.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. The circumstances in regard to the Yukon are of course of a special character, the service is one of unusual expense. The amount my hon. friend will observe does not show any increase.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. No, I observe it is exactly the same.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. And the cost of the service there is very much in excess of the revenue derived from that portion of the Dominion.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I think at one time at least it did go into the general amount. Some years ago, before the post office revenues had increased very largely, the late Postmaster General kept that separate so that he might show a surplus for the rest of Canada. But afterwards the conditions improved, and I thought the accounts were brought into one general total both for expenditure and receipts.

Mr. PATERSON. I think they are so far as the statement is concerned.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Perhaps they are only distinguished in the estimates.

Mr. PATERSON. I think so.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. The surplus which the late Postmaster General was able to show for the last year was so large that there could be no reason for such separation now.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I thought that was the explanation, so that the only reason for such separation has ceased to exist.

If I might be permitted to return for a moment to the celebrated Cannington case, might I inform the Postmaster General that the returns in regard to similar cases, in Ontario at least, are coming in with alarming rapidity. I have another statement which has been placed in my hands by a reliable informant who tells me that in a certain town in Ontario where the postmaster has a salary of between $1,600 and $1,700, the postmaster spends, if not all, the greater part of his time at an industrial establishment in which he holds an important position. I do not of course suppose this explicit statement of fact will elicit an opinion from the Postmaster General as to whether or not that man should be dismissed, but it is well to put it on Hansard and possibly at a later time we may have an answer, if not from the Postmaster General at least from the Minister of Customs, who I observe is taking a deep interest in these cases as they have been disclosed to the House.

Mr. PATERSON. In all cases.

Some resolutions reported.

On motion of Mr. Paterson, House adjourned at 10.20 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY, March 26, 1906.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

FIRST READING.

Bill (No. 46) respecting the St. Clair and Erie Ship Canal Company.—Mr. Tisdale.

ESTABLISHMENT OF FOREST RESERVES.

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 47) to provide for the establishment of forest reserves.

Mr. FOSTER. Will the minister kindly explain his Bill ?

Mr. OLIVER. It has been the policy of the government to constitute forest reserves in the Northwest Territories, with a view to conserving the wood, and thereby conserving the water supply contiguous to the reserved areas. This has been done, so far, merely by the withdrawal of the lands from sale and settlement. But it is found difficult to provide for the complete protection of the forest within these areas unless provision is made with regard to lands within such areas already privately owned. It is also thought desirable that where there are forest reserves these areas should also be game preserves. This will require a good deal of consideration because of the legal questions involved, and so it is thought well to introduce a Bill covering these points.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

SAFETY OF SHIPS.

Mr. JOHN SINCLAIR (Guysborough) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 48) to amend the Act respecting the safety of ships and the prevention of accidents on board thereof. He said : This is the same Bill that I introduced last year. It did not progress further than the committee stage, —not because there were any objections to it, so far as I was able to understand, on the part of members of this House, but because it has not been our policy to make amendments to the Merchant Shipping Act unless those amendments are assented to by the Board of Trade of Great Britain. The object of the Bill is to enable shelter-deck vessels to carry timber between the main deck and the shelter-deck during the winter. This privilege under the existing law is prohibited. The Merchant Shipping Act, as hon. members know, is an old Act and its provisions relating to this trade, were more applicable to the conditions of years ago than they are to the conditions of to-day. Shipping has been greatly changed, a new type of vessel known as the shelter-deck ship has been constructed, and there is no good reason why these old laws should be maintained prohibiting ships of this class from carrying deals and lumber in the space referred to during the winter season. It is admitted, I understand, by the authorities in England that the Act ought to be amended. There was correspondence between the Dominion Department of Marine and Fisheries and the British Board of Trade on this subject last year. The result of the correspondence was a statement on the part of the British authorities that there was an intention at the earliest opportunity to bring before the Imperial parliament a measure to amend the Act in relation to this and other matters. A Bill amending the Merchants Shipping Act is now before the Imperial parliament. My object in introducing this Bill now is to have it so far advanced during the present session that, if this amendment happens to pass the Imperial parliament, it can also come into force here without waiting for another session.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

RAINMAKING IN THE YUKON.

Hon. GEO. E. FOSTER (North Toronto). Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are called I wish to refer to a matter of some considerable importance which is made known to us by the press that constantly alert medium of communication. It seems to me to justify some statement with reference to it by the government. If I have to put myself in order by moving the motion to adjourn, I will do so at the conclusion of my remarks. I find in the Dawson 'Daily News' of Thursday, March 1st, 1906, a joyful communication, headlined in large letters, 'Rainmaker is coming—Yukon will give Hatfield $10,000—Is due in 8 weeks'. And here is this important announcement.

Charles M. Hatfield, the famous rainmaker of Los Angeles, California, has been engaged by contract with the Yukon territorial government to make rain in the Klondike during all the coming mining season, and will be here within eight weeks. According to the contract Hatfield must be on the ground by May 1——

H is now hurrying thitherward, I have no doubt.

—with an assistant and the rainmaking apparatus.

Mr. Hatfield is evidently a modest man. An assistant and himself, it would seem are enough to carry the apparatus. It cannot cost very much for freight.

In the terms of the contract, which is on file in the government offices in the administration building in Dawson, Hatfield is to receive $10,000 provided he makes rain to the satisfaction of a board of seven men, three of whom shall be chosen by the government of the Yukon, three by Hatfield, and one by the first six. The contract is made on the terms of no cure, no pay. Should Hatfield fail to produce rain to the satisfaction of the board or the majority of the board, he will receive only his cost of transportation to and from the Klondike, and maintenance for himself and assistant and cost of shipping the apparatus.

Hatfield is a wise chap. He does not propose to lose anything, anyway. He will have his trip in, and he may make a stake or two while he is there; and, if he fails to produce rain, he may produce something equally remunerative to himself.

Of the $10,000, half is to be paid by ten of the largest operators in the Yukon. The other half is to be paid by the Yukon government. The funds for the government share was voted at the last session of the Yukon Council. The other half was subscribed by the mining people during the big drought of last summer. The contract, in virtue, has been a fixed thing since August, but has just been made public. The fact that the sum was voted for such a purpose was made public last fall, but the consummation of the contract has been unknown to the public generally. Hatfield agrees to produce rain to the satisfaction of the board. No stipulated quantity of rain by inches is required, but it is specifically stated in the contract that he 'shall increase the rainfall and renew it from time to time for four months as may be named by the board and sufficient to insure, as far as ample rain will, a successful and prosperous summer for the placer mining industry of the Dawson district.'

Hatfield is to be given a fair show, for :

Five days will be allowed after each seance for the rain to come. Ten days after Hatfield comes, the money subscribed by the big companies is to be paid into the government comptroller's hands.

And so on. Now, there are a great many considerations that occur to one's mind in thinking about this contract with Hatfield. I would like to see that contract, and I sincerely hope the First Minister will lay it on the table of the House. I would like to know its terms. We must be just before we are generous; but generous we should certainly be if we paid Hatfield $10,000 for making rain. It has been generally conceded that it is Providence that sendeth the rain on the just and on the unjust—Providence is impartial. But if the Yukon Council, which is by no means impartial in its constitution, is to be installed as the great Rainmaker of this Dominion, it may come to pass that no Conservative will ever get a drop of rain, but it will all be brought down in fruitful showers upon the faithful who stand by the government.

Well, there is another thing that suggests itself. We should be just before we are generous. It has been conceded generally that it is Providence that sends the rain. I believe scientific men also state that one season being exceedingly dry is almost sure to be followed by a season with a good rainfall directly thereafter. Now, I think the contract ought to provide that Mr. Hatfield should not be allowed to commence his operations until Providence has had a chance this year to show what it can do. Having been rather parsimonous in its outpourings last year, with the design perhaps of giving the people good showers this year, why, it would be a most ungrateful thing if Mr. Hatfield is allowed to set his apparatus to work and Providence is not given a chance to give us gold producing showers during the coming season. I do not think that would be a good thing for this country, and I doubt if that were persisted in whether Providence would be quite satisfied over that arrangement. But there is another suggestion also. Suppose that man Hatfield gets his apparatus at work and tinkers with the vast and delicate atmosphere of the universe ; is it not possible that he may pull out a plug or slip a cog, and this machinery of the universe once started agoing wrong may go on to the complete submersion of this continent ? And does the contract provide that the operation should be supervised by one of the minister's officials, for instance, to make certain that this delicate far reaching system of the universe is not put permanently out of order ?

Or, suppose that something happens as is said to have happened to Mr. Hatfield last year. He went down into California and he set his apparatus at work. He wanted to get some water for a section in California and they were to pay him well for it. He set his machinery to work, and somehow he interfered with the mechanism of the universe to the extent that the rain began to fall and it did not stop until it poured in torrents from San Francisco down to the very end of Mexico, and there were more people cursing Mr. Hatfield than there were blessing him. He did not seem to have the thing under such control and under such grasp as to bring his rain where it was wanted and not submerge portions of the country where the rain was not wanted. Now has that been provided for in this case ? If this government starts Mr. Hatfield shooting up into the sky, discharging his wondrous and mysterious combination of chemicals into the atmosphere and interferes with the vast chain of atmospherical mechanism to which the United States has some claim as well as ourselves, what about the Monroe doctrine that my hon. friend the Minister of Militia and Defence seems so careful to observe ? International complications, international conflagrations may take place, and for aught we know we may be involved in a tremendous bill for damages. Well, the trouble may go further. The Minister of Agriculture, for instance, having done everything he could with regard to experimental farms, having taken Dundonald by the beard, if Dundonald has a beard, having done numerous other things, and wound up by declaring that the perference is no good for England and we don't want it here, after having exploited the newest method of fattening chickens and all that sort of thing, what a vista this opens up for the Minister of Agriculture. He can gather his faithful farmers on the ground and say to them, Mr. Hatfield is coming, I have got a cinch on Mr. Hatfield. If you will do right by me I will see that Mr. Hatfield is very kind and merciful to you, and these obdurate Tories who do not treat us well and do as we want them to, will not get a single drop of rain. And the Minister of the Interior talking to-day about the useless trouble of getting legal lights, and financial assistance to preserve the forests in order that the rainfall may be kept for this country ? What is the use of the legal lights and setting aside tracts of forest, and the like of that ? He has a simple method provided, and he can have just as much rainfall as he pleases, and wherever he likes. I submit that to my hon. friend as being a great deal cheaper and easier than going into the experiments with forest preserves. And the Postmaster General—he is not here, but if he were here, there would be a suggestion in this to him. I believe a hundred thousand dollars was voted to build a canal where there is no water somewhere in a constituency which I think now is near his own, may be is in his own constituency. Let him feel perfectly at rest now, all that will be necessary is to dig a ditch and get Mr. Hatfield down to flood it with water clear into Newmarket.

But aside from all these things, I really think the government ought to set our minds at rest as to whether this contract is sufficiently inclusive to prevent these grave dangers of which I have spoken, and also they should give us any other information that they may have in the matter. I know that there are obdurate unbelievers in the country. We have a very good and a very high class weather bureau. I believe the United States Bureau have been sitting on Mr. Hatfield, and they have been sitting on him for the last year and a half or two years, and they give it as their scientific opinion that he is an unmitigated fake and that anybody who has truck with Mr. Hatfield is very close to being bereft of good common sense. But that is only a weather bureau. What is a weather bureau compared with the Yukon council and the Dominion government ? Really, I think that this is sufficiently important to give us a day off, and I therefore move, Mr. Speaker, that the House do now adjourn.

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). I read in the newspapers the report of that contract which is said to have been made by the Yukon council with Mr. Hatfield, as my hon. friend has read it; but I did not attach to it the importance which my hon. friend attaches to it, in fact I never gave it a second thought. I did not think it was worth while giving my attention to it and certainly I do not think it is worth while adjourning the House for the purpose of discussing it. My hon. friend went over the many benefits which the Yukon Council, the government of Canada and the people of Canada would derive if Mr. Hatfield were more successful than he has been in the past, if he were successful in producing rain in the Yukon after having failed to produce it in California. My hon. friend with that wealth of imagination which everybody admires, went all over the cabinet and told us, if Mr. Hatfield were successful, what would happen to my hon. friends the Minister of the Interior, the Minister of Agriculture and the Postmaster General. But, he forgot to tell us the advantage it would be to the member for North Toronto (Mr. Foster) in bringing down a lot of cold water, for which he had a fondness at one time. True, it was only in a moment of weakness, and he does not attach the same importance to it now that he used to. Let him not forget his own welfare in considering the welfare of others. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I welcome the contract, if it is true that it exists, but of that I have no information at all, nor has the Minister of the Interior. But we would need to have the ordinances of the Northwest to see whether there is any such contract in them or whether my hon. friend has merely been too credulous.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. There is only this to be said about it, that my right hon. friend seems to forget that this government controls that council, and this rain making policy is no more the policy of the Yukon council than of this government, and we may expect to see it extended, I suppose, to other departments. But surely the government, with the Department of Labour presided over by the hon. Postmaster General, might well have inquired whether we have not equally efficient rainmakers in Canada before going to the United States. It does seem to me that the Alien Labour law has not been wholly respected in this particular and I would invite the special attention of my hon. friend the Postmaster General if he were in his place—I have not the pleasure of seeing him just now—or I would invite the special attention of the Department of Labour over which he so ably presides to the question as to whether or not the statute has really been violated in the way which is set forth in the public press of this country. If one were disposed to criticise the contract at all. I imagine it might be effectively done along the line which has been suggested by my hon. friend from North Toronto. It is drawn on terms exceedingly favorable to Mr. Hatfield, inasmuch as it provides that any rain that does come down is to be credited to him whether he produces it or not. But, speaking seriously, it seems rather absurd that the government of this country should be involved in a ridiculous contract of this kind.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. But, are we?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN.—I should think that the government ought to know whether they are or not. I would be inclined to think that as this contract is said to have been made three or four months ago the government should have inquired whether the contract had been made or not. I would be disposed to expect them to have some information as to what is going on in the Yukon and to be able to inform parliament whether or not the council which is controlled by them—a council of which one half of its members are appointed by this government and the casting vote of which is given to the chairman appointed by them—had actually made such a contract as this. It does not seem unreasonable to expect that after the lapse of months information of that kind should be available for parliament and that the subject had engaged the attention of the government. However, it seems that they have no information on the subject. If they had been keeping a little more in touch with affairs in the Yukon, we would in all prabability have this information, but it would appear that the appointed majority of the council and the chairman are able to conduct the government of that country just as they see fit, and that the government do not pretend to exercise any control whatever over its affairs.

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). Mr. Speaker, I think the debate, so far as the remarks that have been placed before the House in this connection might be called a debate, will remove the impression, if such an impression existed, that there is no difference in principle between the party on this side of the House and the party on the other side of the House in regard to the question of government. There is, it seems from the utterances of the hon. leader of the opposition and the deputy leader of the opposition, just the same old difference as that which has always prevailed between the Tory and Reformer, between the Liberal and Conservative in regard to matters of government. There is in the Yukon an autonomous government called the Yukon Council which has a fund at its disposal for purposes in accordance with the judgment of the council, and as I understand it this government—government according to well understood Liberal principles—concedes to that council the right in practice which it has conceded to it in law. If the council on the ground, in its wisdom or unwisdom, has seen fit to make a certain disposal of a certain part of its funds and this government has conceded to that government the control of its affairs it has no right to interfere with that control. On the other hand, our friends on the other side of the House take the bold position that this supposed autonomous council shall not be autonomous, that it shall not control funds that under the law are placed at its disposal, and they even go so far as to say that, outside of the acts and the facts, this government must exercise pressure—outside pressure—upon such members of the council as happen to be in one measure or another under the control of this government, that it shall exercise pressure upon those members of the council to legislate as we at this end of the country think fit and not as the people at that end of the country think fit. I think that we on this side of the House are quite prepared to take issue with hon. gentlemen on that point and to stand for Liberal principles in the gov ernment of the Yukon, just as we stand for Liberal principles in the government of the Dominion.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I think that a strong Liberal association in the Yukon did rather insist that the whole council should be elective, and that very recently.

Mr. OLIVER. I am not aware that there has been and I am not aware that there has not been such a sentiment expressed. I must say that it is in accordance with Liberal principles that when and so soon as it shall seem desirable in the public interest that any legislative body shall be absolutely and entirely elective, then that principle goes into force, but in the meantime it is a well established Liberal principle that those who are appointed to a legislative body for the purpose of legislating in the interests they are appointed to conserve shall be free to legislate in regard to those interests, and that because they hold salaried positions it does not follow that this government shall interfere with their freedom of action in regard to the responsibilities which have been laid on their shoulders. I wish to emphasize the position to the House that this government is not nearly or remotely responsible for the legislation or action of the Yukon Council in this connection. Whether that action is well advised or ill-advised this government is not responsible, and it does not accept any responsibility in the matter. The eloquent and clever argument of the hon. leader of the opposition and his deputy would have been properly placed had they been addressed to the Yukon Council, and I would suggest to them that they go the expense of cabling to the Yukon authorities so that they may be aware of their sentiments, but I would suggest to them that they do not bring into this House matters which do not concern the House.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether it is worth making any reply or not to this very peculiar argument that we have heard from the hon. Minister of the Interior. I do not think I will take up the time of the House at this juncture in traversing those opinions any more than to say that so long as this government has a government in the Yukon, to which it claims the right and actually does appoint a majority of the governing board, we will hold this government responsible for the acts of that council. When the time comes that the people of the Yukon have legislative and provincial freedom to elect their own representatives through and through up to the governor then we will concede to that country the right to do what it likes with its own, but not until that time. In the meantime I do not think it argues well for the government to have a Minister of the Interior who practically refuses to be the medium of communication for information between the council in the Yukon and this parliament, and who suggests the utterly absurd thing that any persons who wish information in reference to the doings of the council shall go to the expense of cabling themselves and get this information or shall send a deputation to that country.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Speaker, might I correct the hon. gentleman?

Mr. FOSTER. We do not propose to do that. We propose to ask the government for such information as we have a right to.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Speaker, I wish to call the hon. gentleman to order.

Mr. FOSTER. All right, go ahead.

Mr. OLIVER. The hon. gentleman took the liberty to state to this House that I had suggested that if information was wanted in regard to the doings of the Yukon council, private persons who wished for that information might telegraph and ask for it. That is not what I said, and I am within the judgment of the House that it is not what I said.

Mr. FOSTER. I am quite prepared to leave it to the judgment of the House.

Motion to adjourn negatived.

INTERNATIONAL WATERWAY COMMISSION.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. When do the government purpose to lay on the table of the House the report of the Canadian section of the International Waterways Commission. I understand that report has been sent to the Minister of Public Works and that he has submitted it to his colleagues. It is alleged in the public press that negotiations are going on between the government of Great Britain and the government of the United States through the British ambassador at Washington, in reference to a proposed treaty respecting further development of power at Niagara Falls. I would like to know whether the government has any information to give on that subject.

Hon. CHARLES HYMAN (Minister of Public Works). The International Waterways Commission has presented an interim report to the government. That report is now being printed and the moment it is ready it will be laid before the House. I do not know of any negotiations being carried on with the government of the United States in reference to the matter, as the whole question is practically being left to the International Commission.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Is it the understanding of the Prime Minister that the Canadian government has no notice of negotiations between the United States and the Imperial government?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). I have no doubt at all that there are no such negotiations, because the matter, so far as the two countries are concerned, is in the hands of the commission. There are some negotiations going on with regard to the whole question of the fisheries in all contiguous waters.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. But not with regard to this matter.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No.

RAILWAY ACT AMENDMENT.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN (South York). When will the government measure dealing with the Railway Act be brought down? The people of the country who are interested in telephone matters would like to know at as early a date as possible what the policy of the government is to be in regard to that question.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I expect that the Bill will be introduced on Wednesday next.

STEAMSHIP SUBSIDIES.

Hon. GEO. E. FOSTER (North Toronto). The government is so often like Ethelred the Unready that I fear when we come to the Trade and Commerce estimates we will run against a snag. I wish to call the attention of the Minister of Customs (who represents the Department of Trade and Commerce in the House) to the fact that last year a distinct promise was given that before the steamship subsidy estimates were taken up there would be presented to the House a thorough report of the operation of all the steamship lines that are subsidized. I ask the Minister of Customs to bring this to the attention of the Minister of Trade and Commerce. We must have that report for a week or so before the estimates are brought up so that we may be able to understand the question.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT REPORT.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I have asked for the report of the Interior Department on two different occasions. When may we expect it?

Mr. OLIVER. The Indian Affairs report will be laid on the table to-day. The Interior Department report is in the hands of the printer and will be brought down to-morrow or next day.

PRIVATE BILLS.

SECOND READINGS.

Bill (No. 35) to incorporate the Western Loan and Trust Company.—Mr. Adamson.

Bill (No. 36) respecting the Canadian Niagara Power Company.—Mr. German.

Bill (No. 37) respecting the Montreal Park and Island Railway Company.—Mr. Geoffrion.

Bill (No. 39) respecting the Canada Atlantic Railway Company.—Mr. Macdonald.

QUESTIONS.

LAND SALES IN BLOCKS.

Mr. SPROULE—by Mr. Bergeron—asked:

1. What land sales have been made in blocks or area of more than one-half section, during the years 1903, 1904 and 1905, in Manitoba, the Territories and British Columbia ?

2. To whom sold ?

3. The price per acre, and the date of sale ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). The information asked for is such that it cannot be conveniently replied to in question form, would the hon .gentleman move for a return.

VENTILATION ON STEAMSHIPS.

Mr. E. D. SMITH asked :

1. What steps, if any, have been taken by the government to ascertain whether the system of ventilation of each and every chamber of every steamer carrying any kind of perishable products across the ocean from Canada was efficient during the season of 1905 ?

2. How many sailings of steamers were there from the ports of Canada during the season of 1905 that carried perishable farm products across the ocean ?

3. What was the total number of chambers in which such cargo was carried ?

4. How many chambers were ventilated by (a) forced draft by fans ; (b) forced draft by the Cowl system ; (c) forced draft by any other system, if any ; (d) gravity only through openings provided for this purpose ; (e) unventilated except as the hatches might be lifted ?

5. Where the system of ventilation on ocean steamers carrying perishable produce was by means of fans driven either by steam or electric power, what means has the government taken to ascertain if these fans were in operation, during all the voyage, or such portion as was necessary to secure the maximum amount of coolness for the chamber and beneficial to the contents ?

Hon. SYDNEY FISHER (Minister of Agriculture):

1. During the season of navigation, in 1905, the Department of Agriculture maintained a staff of cargo inspectors at the port of Montreal and at ports in Great Britain, for the purpose of ascertaining the condition of food products when loaded in the steamers at Montreal and the condition of these products when landed on the docks in Great Britain. The reports of these inspectors were closely compared, and the department was thus kept informed as to the degree of efficiency of the system of ventilation in the different holds of the several steamers plying between Montreal and ports in Great Britain. In addition to this method of judging the ventilating systems by actual results, the temperatures, throughout the voyage, of many of the holds, have also been obtained by means of thermographs.

2. Two hundred and eighty-five.

3. Nine hundred and sixteen holds ; two hundred and twenty-eight refrigerator chambers ; seventy-three cooled air chambers.

4.

Number of chambers (holds) ventilated by fans	385
Number of chambers (holds) ventilated by cowls	473
Number of chambers (holds) ventilated through 'openings'	11
Number of chambers (holds) unventilated, except through hatches	47
	916

(In holds having no ventilation, the hatches are usually fitted with gratings for purposes of ventilation.)

5. Through the courtesy of the ships' officers, the department's inspectors in Great Britain have access to the chief engineer's log, which contains a record of the operation of the refrigerating machinery and of the fans during the voyage. The thermograph records and the actual condition of the products when discharged, also indicate whether or not the fans have been kept steadily in use from port to port in warm weather.

SELECTION OF RAILWAY LANDS.

Mr. ALCORN—by Mr. Lancaster—asked :

1. Is it the policy of the government to induce or compel railway companies or their assigns entitled to select lands in western Canada by way of subsidy or otherise, to make and complete such selection within any, and what, definite period of time ?

2. Have any, and what, steps been taken, or are any such in contemplation by the government, in the cases of the Canadian Northern Railway Company, the Manitoba and Southern Railway Company, and the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan Railway Company, respectively, or of any and which of them, to induce or compel such selection within any, and what, date or dates, respectively ?

3. Has it been claimed, notified or intimated to the government by or on behalf of either or any, and which, of said railway companies or their assigns, that they are or claim to be entitled to an indefinite or some other, and what, time within which to complete such selection of the whole or any and what part of their respective land grants or subsidies ?

4. Is such claim of title to an indefinite, undetermined or enlarged period, for selection in the case of any, and which, of said railway companies or their assigns, based upon matter of any and what contract or legal right, or how otherwise ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

1. The department is making every possible effort to have the selection of the areas earned as land subsidies by the different railway companies, but not yet selected, surveyed, selected and patented at the earliest possible date.

2. The Canadian Northern Railway Company was required by order in council dated August 10, 1903, to have its selection completed by December 31, 1905, but while good progress had been made within the time specified the selection was not then completed. It is expected that it will yet take a few months to entirely complete the selection. There is no railway company bearing the name Manitoba and Southern Railway Company, which has the right to any land subsidy.

No special steps have been taken in the case of the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake & Saskatchewan Railroad & Steamboat Company for the reason that the lands were all selected except those which were retained as security by the government in connection with the transport subsidy contract of August 5, 1889.

3. No.

4. This question is answered by answer No. 3.

EXCISE AT BRANTFORD.

Mr. COCKSHUTT—by Mr. Lancaster—asked :

1. What was the amount of excise duty collected at the port of Brantford for each year from 1900 to 1905, inclusive ?

2. What was the yearly cost of collecting the above duty ?

Hon. WILLIAM TEMPLEMAN (Minister of Inland Revenue).

1. The amount of inland revenue collections in the city of Brantford for the fiscal years named, were as follows :

1899—1900	$43,742 54
1900—1901	47,410 50
1901—1902	53,703 21
1902—1903	58,810 61
1903—1904	66,965 59
1904—1905	70,336 55

2. The aggregate salaries paid the officials in Brantford were as follows :

1899—1900	$3,650 00
1900—1901	4,599 86
1901—1902	4,586 58
1902—1903	4,502 05
1903—1904	4,283 14
1904—1905	3,799 53

The contingent expenditure of the whole inland revenue division for the years named, was as follows :

1899—1900	$1,032 35
1900—1901	910 72
1901—1902	$648 90
1902—1903	449 79
1903—1904	553 70
1904—1905	496 89

It is not feasible to determine the exact proportion of the contingent expenditure applicable to Brantford alone.

WHARF AT HIGGIN'S SHORE, PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.

Mr. LEFURGEY asked :

1. Has any request or petition been received by the Department of Public Works regarding a wharf at Higgin's Shore, Prince Edward Island ?

2. Has anything been done in the construction of a pier at this place ? If so, what ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works). A petition to that effect has been received. The matter is under consideration.

DALY AND HANMAN DREDGES.

Mr. TAYLOR—by Mr. Lancaster—asked:

1. Were any of the dredges owned by Messrs. Daly & Hanman, of Ogdensburg, N.Y., employed by the government during the season of 1905 ?

2. If so, how many of the said dredges were employed, what are the names of the dredges so employed, and what was paid per day for the same ?

3. How long did each dredge work, and during what months ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works). None were employed by the Public Works Department. I have no reply from the Railway Department, but will ask for it and give the hon. gentleman the information.

ENGLISH PRINTER'S COMPLAINT.

Mr. VERVILLE asked :

1. Has the attention of the government been drawn to the following item, which appeared in the Ottawa 'Free Press' on March 19, 1906 : The Deputy Minister of Labour, Mr. W. L. Mackenzie King, has been sent to Winnipeg at the request of the imperial government to investigate the complaint of a party of English printers, who were brought to this country by an alleged agent of the Winnipeg printers' board of trade. The men claim that the promise was not kept, and petitioned King Edward for redress.

2. Has any correspondence passed between the imperial government and the Dominion government upon the subject of the petition sent by a party of British printers, who complain that they were brought to this country under misrepresentation as to existing labour conditions in Canada ?

3. Has the government any objection to placing the correspondence before the House ?

4. What action, if any has the government taken with respect to the matter ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). It is a fact that Mr. King, the deputy Minister of Labour, was sent by this government to investigate the complaint of certain English printers brought to this country by an alleged agent of the Winnipeg Board of Trade and that these printers claim that the promise made them was not kept. There has been correspondence in the matter between the Canadian and the imperial government and there is no objection to bringing it down if my hon. friend will move for it. Mr. Mackenzie King is investigating the matter but we have not yet received his report. We expect it in a few days.

COAL STRIKE AT LETHBRIDGE.

Mr. VERVILLE asked :

1. Has the attention of the government been drawn to the following item, appearing in the Ottawa 'Citizen' on 20th March, 1906 ?

Detroit, Michigan, March 19.—A Great Falls Montana, despatch says the strike of the coal miners at Lethbridge, Alberta, Canada, has caused the Dominion government to render assistance. The Northwest Mounted Police have been placed in control of the town, and martial law prevails. This action appears to have irritated the miners still further, and the citizens fear grave disorders. More than 500 men, members of the union, are on strike, and there still are 100 at work, under police protection. These men are greeted daily by volleys of snow balls and stones as they go to work. F. R. Sherman, district president of the union works, says the strike may be extended to other coal mines in Alberta and British Columbia, unless an agreement is reached. Many smaller towns in Alberta are now on the verge of coal famine. All shipments to outside points have been stopped.

Lt. Col. Fred White, C.M.G., Controller of Mounted Police, being shown the foregoing despatch, stated that the strike mentioned had been going on for some days, and that mounted police, in the course of their regular duties, had been employed to preserve law and order at the mines. About 500 miners, Colonel White said, were on strike, and there was danger of their attempting to prevent the owners from working the fans and pumps, and thereby preventing the working of the mines, which were being operated by non-union men. The mounted police, reinforced by members of the force from other parts, were on hand to prevent the destruction of property and protect the persons of the men who were at work. The police in that region are up to the ways of the miners, and anticipate they may attempt to cause damage or intimidate the workers by use of bombs or dynamite. Up to the present, however, the police, with their well known efficiency, have been able to preserve law and order.

2. What authority had Lt.-Col. White to make the statements credited to him in the above ?

3. Upon what information were the statements based ?

4. What disorder has occurred in the district affected that would justify the interference of the mounted police ?

5. Who requested the help of the mounted police ?

6. What authority had Lt.-Col. White for anticipating that the miners may attempt to cause damage, or intimidate the workers by the use of bombs or dynamite ?

7. Has any correspondence passed between any department of the government and any individual or corporation upon the subject ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). I have been informed by Mr. Comptroller White that the report published is substantially correct. In reply to questions 2 and 3, the authority of Lieut. Col. White to make the statements credited to him was information which he received from the officers of the Northwest Mounted Police in the west. In reply to question 4, there was no interference by the police beyond the necessary precautions for the preservation of order. About 500 miners were on strike and intimidating those who insisted on going on with the work. In answer to No. 5, the manager of the mines asked protection for the non union men and the companies' properties. In answer to No. 6, it was established that there had been an explosion of a bomb or other explosive substance in front of a house occupied by non strikers; there were warnings to non strikers of personal danger if they attempted to work; and there was the assembling at the mines before working hours of numbers of the strikers, necessitating police escort for those anxious to work. In answer to No. 7, there was one telegram from the manager of the mines to the comptroller and several communications between the manager of the mines and the commissioner of police in the west. There were also numerous communications between the police in the west and the department at Ottawa. From information since received, one man was arrested and immediately released, and since that time there has been no trouble, although the strike is going on.

ADVERTISEMENTS IN BRITISH PAPERS.

Mr. AMES asked :

Has the Department of the Interior any information regarding advertisements appearing in the British press, purporting to emanate from the Information Bureau, Concord, near Toronto ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). No.

COLLINGWOOD DRY DOCK.

Mr. BENNETT—by Mr. Lancaster—asked .

1. By whom was valuation made of Collingwood dry dock, upon which bounty has been paid, on behalf of the government ?

2. What was the amount of such valuation ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works) :

1. Mr. Louis Coste, C.E.
2. $540,000.

STOCK FARM, PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.

Mr. A. MARTIN asked :

1. Have representations been made to the government with a view to utilizing the Provincial Stock Farm in Prince Edward Island for the purpose of testing the suitability of various kinds of cereals, grasses, roots and fruits, in the interests of agriculture and horticulture in that province ?

2. Is the government aware that the soil, climate and system of cultivation are in many respects different from those of the other provinces, and that experiments conducted in the other provinces are practically of little value to Prince Edward Island ?

3. Is there any reason why the province of Prince Edward Island should be made an exception in regard to the establishment of an experimental station ?

Hon. SYDNEY FISHER (Minister of Agriculture) :

1. Yes.

2. The government is aware of the nature of the soil and climate, and the system of cultivation of Prince Edward Island ; but is not aware that experiments conducted in other provinces are practically of little value to it.

3. Prince Edward Island has not been made an exception in regard to the establishment of experimental stations.

FRENCH TRANSLATION.

Mr. PARENT asked :

Is it the intention of the government to have translated into French the lectures given during last session before the Standing Committee on Agriculture and Colonization ? If not, why not ? If so, when ?

Hon. SYDNEY FISHER (Minister of Agriculture). This matter is entirely under the control of the House of Commons. The departments of the government have nothing whatever to do with it.

GREAT LAKES FISHERIES.

Mr. BENNETT—by Mr. Lancaster—asked :

1. Has the Department of Fisheries a commission inquiring into the fishery conditions of the Great Lakes, at present making an investigation ?

2. If so, who compose such board, and what remuneration, if any, is paid therefor ?

Hon. L. P. BRODEUR (Minister of Marine and Fisheries) :

1. Yes.

2. Professor E. E. Prince, Commissioner of Fisheries, chairman ; John Birnie, B.C., K.C.L., Collingwood ; and James Noble, Little Current. With the exception of the chairman,—who being of the departmental staff, receives no extra remuneration for this work,—the commissioners are paid seven dollars per day and expenses for such days as are actually occupied by the work of the commission.

EXPERIMENTAL FARM, VANCOUVER.

Mr. HERRON asked :

1. Has the attention of the government been directed to the following statement made by the Minister of Inland Revenue at Victoria, British Columbia, on the 9th instant : 'With regard to an experimental farm desired to be established on Vancouver Island, Mr. Templeman stated that a policy had been decided upon, and that twenty or thirty such farms will be started, and Vancouver Island would assuredly have one.

2. Has the government determined upon the policy announced by the minister upon that occasion ?

Hon. WILLIAM TEMPLEMAN (Minister of Inland Revenue). The statement in the press as quoted in the question is not substantially correct. It is quite true that the question of establishing experimental stations by the government in Alberta and on Vancouver Island was discussed on the public platform. I said that I believed the Minister of Agriculture would establish such stations, that probably in the far northern country such experimental stations, instead of large experimental farms, would in the future be established, that I advocated such a policy. I announced my intention of assisting in the establishment of such experimental stations. But I announced no definite policy on the part of the government. I believe that it is the intention of the government as soon as possible to establish experimental stations such as I have mentioned.

WILSON'S BEACH BREAKWATER.

Mr. GANONG asked :

1. What was the total cost of the breakwater at Wilson's Beach, New Brunswick ?

2. What was the total amount paid to James M. Johnston, in connection with this work ?

3. What was the total cost of tools and other appliances supplied by the government, in any way connected with the erection of this work, and what disposition has been made of such tools and appliances ?

Hon. CHAS. S. HYMAN. (Minister of Public Works) :

1. $36,748.44.

2. $2,470,95.

3. $855.31.

Mr. GANONG. If the hon. minister will allow me a part of the third question was not answered.

What disposition has been made of such tools and appliances ?

Mr. HYMAN. If the hon. gentleman will allow the question to stand, I will give an answer to that to-morrow.

NORTH HEAD BREAKWATER.

Mr. GANONG asked :

Have tenders been called for the building of a breakwater at North Head, New Brunswick ? If so, when ?

Hon. CHAS. S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works) : Yes, on February 4, 1905.

SUSSEX RIFLE RANGE.

Mr. FOWLER asked :

1. What was the price paid for the farm on which the rifle range has been built at Sussex, New Brunswick ?
2. What was the contract price for building the range, and who was the contractor, and what extras, if any, were paid, and to whom ?
3. Who was the clerk of works, how many days was he employed, what was his daily rate of pay, and what was his qualification for the job ?
4. Who has been appointed to take charge of the rifle range and farm, and at what pay ?
5. What pay did the caretaker of the drill ground at Sussex receive, and to whom does the income derived from the farm go ?
6. What income was derived last year from military properties at Sussex, New Brunswick?

Hon Sir FREDERICK BORDEN (Minister of Militia and Defence) :

1. $4,850.
2. (a) $9,782 ; (b) Messrs. Bourque and Govang ; (c) S. E. Hunter, $125 for sodding target mound ; A. Keith, $50 for drains under firing point.
3. Capt. J. M. McIntyre ; from May 3 to October 7, 1905, at rate of $2.50 per diem for such days as he actually worked ; he has not been settled with as yet. He was recommended for the work, and was known to have performed, satisfactorily, similar work.
4. No caretaker yet appointed.
5. At the present time there is no income derived from the Sussex camp grounds.
6. None.

MILITIA SADDLERY AND HARNESS.

Mr. FOWLER asked :

1. Where are the saddlery and harness in use by the Canadian militia made, and by whom ?
2. Have contracts always been let by tender?
3. What contracts have been let during the last year, and what are the prices and amounts of each ?
4. What tenders were received, and from whom ?
5. How were tenders advertised for ?
6. Have any, and what, complaints been made as to the quality of the saddlery or harness?
7. Has any, and what, report been made to the department as to the quality of the saddlery or harness ?
8. Is the saddlery supplied since the South African war of the same pattern and quality as that supplied to the Canadian troops for service in South Africa ?

Hon. Sir FREDERICK BORDEN (Minister of Militia and Defence) :

1. At Toronto by Messrs. Adams Bros. ; at Montreal by Messrs. Lamontagne, Limited ; and at Ottawa by Messrs. S. & H. Borbridge.
2. No ; prices are based upon those paid by the imperial war office for the same articles.
3. During the fiscal year 1904-05 orders for harness and saddlery were given as follows :

Lamontagne Limited :

1,000	sets colonial saddlery at $37.50..	$37,500 00
4	sets A. S. C. shaft harness complete at $86.37	345 48
	Spare parts for same	31 00
4	sets artillery harness, transport, near, at $90..	360 00
4	sets artillery harness, transport, off, at $85..	340 00
	Spare parts for same	49 30
40	sets breast pole bar. harness (artillery), near wheel at $73.70	2,948 00
40	sets breast pole bar. harness (artillery), off wheel, at $70.25..	2,810 00
80	sets breast pole bar. harness (artillery), off lead, at $58.12..	4,652 00
80	sets breast pole bar. harness (artillery), near lead, at $61.55..	4,924 00
36	sets ambulance harness at $80.50	2,898 00
1,000	colonial saddlery at $37.50.. ..	37,500 00

Adams Bros. :

1,000	sets colonial saddlery at $37.50..	$37,500 00
500	sets colonial saddlery at $37.50..	18,750 00

S. & H. Borbridge.

200	sets Universal saddlery at $40..	$8,000 00

4. No tenders were called for.
5. No advertisement was made.
6. None.
7. None, except department inspection reports.
8. Yes.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT SEAFORTH.

Mr. GUNN asked :

What conclusion has the government arrived at with respect to the erection of a public building for a post office and other purposes in the town of Seaforth ?

Hon. CHAS. S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works). No conclusion has been arrived at in respect to the erection of a public building in the town of Seaforth. Consideration will be given to it when the further supplementary estimates are under consideration.

EXPENDITURE ON BAYFIELD HARBOUR.

Mr. GUNN asked :

1. What has been the total expenditure on Bayfield harbour up to the year 1896 ?
2. What amount has been voted each year since 1896 ?
3. What amount has been expended on the harbour each year since 1896 ?
4. What is the name of the dredge or dredges that have done the work since 1896 ?
5. Who is the superintendent of the work under which the repairs to the pier and dredging are done ?

Hon. CHAS. S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works) :

1. $68,213.19.

2 and 3 :

1897-98..	$7,500 00	$2,231 36
1898-99..	1,200 00	1,200 00
1899-1900..	5,300 00	3,176 72

1900-01	$5,500 00	$1,620 46
1901-02	5,500 00	153 64
1902-03	3,600 00	366 55
1903-04	5,000 00	9,136 70
1904-05	3,200 00	3,151 13

4. Dredges 'Hacket' and 'Arnoldi.'

5. Foreman of pier work, James Thompso ; inspector of dredging, T. J. Marks.

ST. JOSEPH HARBOUR.

Mr. GUNN asked :

1. What amount of money has been voted for the improvement of St. Joseph harbour each year since 1896 ?

2. What amount has been expended on the same each year since 1896 ?

3. Is it the intention of the government to expend any more money on St. Joseph harbour ? If not, why not ?

Hon. CHAS. S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works) :

1.

In 1901-02	$5,000 00
1902-03	5,000 00
1903-04	5,000 00
1904-05	800 00

2.

In 1901-02	$4,999 84
1902-03	5,042 39
1903-04	4,604 11
1904-05	275 00

3. No further expenditure considered necessary at the present time.

PORT COLBORNE ELEVATOR.

Mr. LALOR—by Mr. Lancaster—asked :

1. Is it the intention of the government to build an elevator at Port Colborne, Ontario ?

2. Have tenders been asked for the construction of an elevator at Port Colborne ? If so, what is the name of the tenderers, and the amount of each tender ?

3. Were tenders advertised for ?

4. Has a contract for the construction of an elevator at Port Colborne, Ontario, been awarded ? If so, to whom ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) :

1. It is the intention of the government to build an elevator at Port Colborne, Ont.

2. No tenders have yet been asked.

DREDGING GRAND RIVER.

Mr. LALOR—by Mr. Lancaster—asked :

1. What was paid during the years 1903-4 and 1904-5 for dredging Grand river, at Dunnville, Ontario ?

2. What amount was paid for dredging Sunfish creek, Grand river, during the years 1903-4 and 1904-5 ?

3. What amount was paid during the years 1903-4 and 1904-5 for dredging at Port Maitland, Ontario ?

4. Was the work given by public tender, and was the work advertised ? If so, in what papers ?

5. Was the work awarded to the lowest tenderer ?

6. Is dredge 'General Meade' now working for the government ? If so, at what place ?

Hon. CHAS. S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works) :

1.

In 1903-04	$10,621 40
1904-05	17,376 00
	$28,007 40

2. The cost of dredging at Sunfish creek is included in that of Dunnville.

3. Nil. By Public Works Department.

4 and 5. No.

6. No.

WELLAND CANAL IMPROVEMENTS.

Mr. LALOR—by Mr. Lancaster—asked :

1. What was the cost of the superstructure of bridge No. 11, Welland canal ?

2. Were tenders asked for by advertisement?

3. Who were the tenderers, and what was the amount of each tender ?

4. To whom was the contract given ?

5. What was the cost of repairs to foundation of locks Nos. 12, 15 and 16, Welland canal?

6. To whom was the contract given ?

7. Was the lowest tender accepted, and was the work advertised ?

8. What was the cost of stone protection between Thorold and Port Colborne, Ontario, on the Welland canal ?

9. Was the work advertised, and to whom was the contract given ?

10. Was the lowest tender accepted ?

11. What was the cost per yard for stone for this work ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) :

1. $31,760.

2. Tenders were invited by circular letter addressed to the different bridge companies in Canada.

3. Only one tender was received, and the amount of it was $31,760.

4. To the Canadian Bridge Company, Limited.

5. $34,967.25.

6. Joseph Battle.

7. Yes, lowest tender was accepted. Yes, tenders were called for by newspaper advertisement.

8. $7,880.

9. Yes, tenders were called for by newspaper advertisement. Contract was given to Joseph Battle.

10. Yes.

11. One dollar per cubic yard.

Mr. LALOR—by Mr. Lancaster—asked :

1. What was the cost of superstructure of bridges at Allanburg and Marlatts Crossing, on the Welland canal ?

2. Was this work done by contract, and was the work advertised ?

3. What are the names of the tenderers, and the amount of each tender ?

4. Was the contract awarded to the lowest tenderer ?

5. What was the cost of extending the culvert under the Welland canal at Welland, Ontario ?

6. To whom was the contract given, was the work advertised, and was the lowest tender accepted ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) :

1. $32,162.

2. Yes, and tenders were called for by circular letter addressed to the different bridge companies in Canada.

3. Canadian Bridge Company, Limited, $43,940 ; Dominion Bridge Company, Limited, $32,162 ; Hamilton Bridge Company, $42,700.

4. Yes.

5. $3,852.70

6. Joseph Battle. Tenders were called for by poster. Yes, lowest tender was accepted.

TRADE AND COMMERCE REPORTS.

Mr. KEMP asked :

1. In what department are the annual, monthly and weekly reports of the Department of Trade and Commerce compiled ?

2. What department is responsible for the expenses in compiling, publishing and distributing such reports ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) :

1. The Department of Trade and Commerce.

2. The Department of Trade and Commerce compiles these reports. They are all published in the ordinary way at the Printing Bureau. The department has a mailing list for all three publications ; and the Printing Bureau has also an additional mailing list for the annual and monthly reports. The expenses of publishing the annual and monthly reports are charged to the usual vote by authority of the Printing Committee of the House of Commons. The expenses of publishing the weekly report are charged to the contingencies vote of the Department of Trade and Commerce.

OBSTRUCTIONS IN SEVERN RIVER.

Mr. GRANT—by Mr. Macpherson—asked:

1. Has the attention of the government been called to the fact that the Severn river, near Lake Couchiching, is being obstructed by rocks and debris, thrown in by reason of railway construction operations ?

2. What action does the government propose taking in the matter ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works). The attention of the government has been called to the fact that obstructions exist in the Severn river, and an officer of the department has been sent to report on the matter.

LOSS OF GOVERNMENT PROPERTY BY FIRE.

Mr. LEFURGEY asked :

1. What is the total estimated loss of government property by fire since 1896 ?

2. What is the itemized statement of different properties destroyed by fire since 1896, and the estimated amount of loss on each ?

3. Does the government insure any of the government properties ?

4. If insured on certain classes, what are they ? If in special cases, or risks, what are they ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works).

1. $464,302.29.

2.

Western Block, Ottawa	$150,000 00
Court House, Medicine Hat N. W. T.	8,667 63
Drill Hall, Windsor, N.S.	4,000 00
Public Building, Windsor, N.S.	32,995 80
Public Building, New Westminster, B.C.	33,904 80
Immigration building, Port Arthur, Ont.	700 00
Post Office, Hull, Que.	33,204 09
Post Office, Ottawa	160,000 00
Government House, Ottawa.	11,598 75
Detention hospital, Quebec.	20,231 22
Post Office, Alexandria, Ont.	9,000 00

3 and 4. No.

MISCOUCHE SHOALS, P.E.I.

Mr. LEFURGEY asked :

1. Have any representations been made to the government regarding the necessity of a buoy at Miscouche Shoals, Prince Edward Island ?

2. Is it the intention of the government to have a suitable buoy placed there ? If so, when ?

Hon. L. P. BRODEUR (Minister of Marine and Fisheries) :

1. Yes. Application has been made to substitute a gas buoy for the bell buoy at Miscouche Shoals.

2. The matter is now receiving the consideration of the Lighthouse Board in the department.

PROPOSED WEST CAPE BRANCH, PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND RAILWAY.

Mr. LEFURGEY asked :

1. Has any survey been made for a branch line of railway from the main line of the Prince Edward Island Railway to or near West Cape, and for which a sum of $1,500 has twice been voted in this House ? If so, when ?

2. If not already made, is it the intention of the government to have a survey made, and when ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) :

1. There has been no survey.

2. The matter is under consideration.

MILITARY GAZETTE.

Mr. CLEMENTS asked :

1. Is the military 'Gazette' issued by the government, and does Canada pay all expenses connected with its issue ?

2. Who is the editor, how long has he been employed, and at what salary ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). The Military 'Gazette' is not issued by the government, nor does the government pay any of its expenses.

PROPOSED HANDBOOK OF TOWNSHIPS.

Mr. AMES asked :

Has the Department of the Interior under consideration the idea of compiling a handbook showing in convenient arrangement the description of townships furnished by surveyors in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta ?

Mr. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). The matter is under the consideration of the department.

ELGIN ROAD STATION, L'ISLET COUNTY.

Mr. PAQUET—by Mr. Lancaster—asked :

1. Is the government aware that the farmers and lumbermen draw large quantities of pulp wood, boards and construction timber to the Elgin Road station, in the county of L'Islet ?
2. Is the government aware that the Intercolonial has no grounds for the piling of those forest products ?
3. Is it the intention of the government to lease or purchase land for the purpose of increasing our traffic facilities ?
4. If the government is not disposed to increase our traffic facilities, what reasons has it to give therefor ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (for the Minister of Railways and Canals) :

1. Yes, 71 carloads were received during the last fiscal year.
2. The right of way is now 90 feet wide.
3. The department have in contemplation the purchase of a further strip of land of 60 feet in width by 500 feet in length.
4. Answered by No. 3.

QUEBEC DEEP WATER WHARFS.

Mr. PAQUET—by Mr. Lancaster—asked.

Is it the intention of the government to build, at Quebec, deep water wharfs, supplied with every modern contrivance for the rapid transhipment of freight ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works). The subject of deep wharfs is now under consideration.

TRAFFIC RATES, ST. JEAN-PORT JOLI-LEVIS.

Mr. PAQUET—by Mr. Lancaster—asked:

1. Have the prices of transportation for second-class passengers, between the stations of St. Jean-Port-Joli and Lévis, on the Intercolonial, been increased since the 1st January, 1906 ?
2. If they have been increased, what are the reasons ?
3. Have the prices of transportation for first-class passengers, between St. Jean-Port-Joli and Lévis, been decreased since the 1st January, 1906 ?
4. If so, why so ?
5. Have the prices for the transportation of goods, between Lévis and St. Jean-Port-Joli, been increased since the 1st January, 1905 ?
6. If they have been so increased, why so ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILWRID LAURIER (for the Minister of Railways and Canals) :

1. Yes.
2. To increase the revenue.
3. No.
4. Answered by No. 3.
5. No.
6. Answered by No. 5.

JACK STRAW, RED HORSE AND GANANOQUE LIGHTS.

Mr. TAYLOR—by Mr. Lancaster—asked:

1. What was the cost to the government of changing Jack Straw, Red Horse and Gananoque light on the St. Lawrence river to the acetylene gas system ?
2. What was the cost of maintaining Jack Straw, Red Horse and Gananoque lights for the season of 1905 ?

Hon. L. P. BRODEUR (Minister of Marine and Fisheries) :

1. $7,270.71 ; 6 lights.
2. $1,090.19 ; 6 lights.

WASHEDEMOAK RIVER, N.B.

Mr. WILMOT—by Mr. Sam. Hughes—asked :

1. Has the attention of the Public Works Department been directed to deepening portions of the Washedemoak River, N.B.?
2. Has anything been done in this direction up to date ?
3. If not, does the department intend accomplishing this much needed improvement ? If so, when will it be begun

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works) :

1. Yes.

2 and 3. The matter is under consideration. Survey of the river has been ordered to be made.

SOUTH-EAST QUARTER, SECTION 28, TOWNSHIP 7, RANGE 2, WEST OF 5TH MERIDIAN.

Mr. HERRON asked :

1. Has any portion of the S. E. quarter of section 28, township 7, range 2, west of 5th M. been sold or leased to any person ?
2. If so, to whom, when, and what price per acre ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

1. Yes.
2. The said south-east quarter of section 28, township 7, range 2, west of the 5th meridian was sold to Malcolm McKenzie on September 25, 1901, at the rate of $3 per acre.

TOBACCO CULTURE—DISTRIBUTION OF SEED.

Mr. ETHIER—by Mr. Bourassa—asked :

1. Has the government received, from the tobacco growers of the county of Two Mountains or elsewhere, requests for the free distribution of choice samples of the different varities of tobacco, in the interest of tobacco culture ?

2. If so, when and in what manner will that distribution be made ?

Hon. SYDNEY FISHER (Minister of Agriculture) :

1. Yes ; both from the tobacco growers of the county of Two Mountains and other parts of the province of Quebec.

2. On March 19 instant a distribution was made of some tobacco seed of an Havana variety (Comstock Havana), which has been found suitable to the province of Quebec. Ounce packages of the seed were sent by mail to the presidents of the agricultural clubs in the different localities from which the requests came, and they were asked to distribute the same among the growers.

CLAIM OF JOHN C. MUGFORD.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN—by Mr. Clements—asked :

1. Did the Department of Railways receive the claim of John C. Mugford, of Breadalbane, Prince Edward Island, amounting to about $35, for damages done to his crop in July, 1904, by fire from engine on the Prince Edward Island Railway ?

2. If so, has the claim been investigated and what are the intentions of the government in the matter ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (for the Minister of Railways and Canals): There is no record of such a claim having been presented.

BROCKVILLE CHEESE CURING ROOM.

Mr. TAYLOR—by Mr. Lancaster—asked :

1. What has been the total expenditure in connection with the Brockville cheese curing room ?

2. What has been the total revenue from the same ?

Hon. SYDNEY FISHER (Minister of Agriculture) :

1. $18,661.34 to March 1, 1906.

2. $6,568.33 to March 1, 1906.

ACCIDENTS ON THE ST. LAWRENCE ROUTE.

On the order being called.

Mr. BERGERON—Inquiry of the Ministry—:

1. How many accidents have happened on the St. Lawrence route below Montreal?

2. How many below Montreal at Quebec, and how many below Quebec ?

3. What is the number of vessels wrecked, what are their names, and the date of the accident ?

Mr. J. G. H. BERGERON (Beauharnois) : That question does not read as I had intended it to. Therefore, I suppose my hon. freind (Mr. Brodeur) is not in position to answer it.

Mr. L. P. BRODEUR (Minister of Marine and Fisheries). I am ready to give an answer to the accidents that occurred last season. Does the hon. gentleman (Mr. Bergeron) wish to go further back than that ?

Mr. BERGERON. If the question had read as I intended, it would have covered the accidents that have happened since 1890, also it should read as to ask how many accidents have happened between Montreal and Quebec and how many below Quebec.

Mr. BRODEUR. Will the hon. gentleman then drop the question and give notice of a new one ?

Mr. BERGERON : If I were to let the question stand could it not——

Mr. BRODEUR. I think the hon. gentleman had better let the question drop and give notice of a new one.

Mr. BERGERON. Very well, I will do so.

Mr. BRODEUR. I do not know whether we shall be able to give all the information he desires, but I will do the best I can to meet his wishes.

CLAIMS ON PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND RAILWAY—APPOINTMENT OF W. A. WEEKS.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN—by Mr. Clements—asked :

1. Did the government or some department thereof recently appoint Mr. W. A. Weeks, barrister, of Charlottetown, to take evidence of persons having claims for lands expropriated for the Murray Harbour and other branches of the Prince Edward Island Railway, and for other purposes ?

2. If so, what was the date of his appointment, and the scope of his authority ?

3. Did he enter upon the duties of his appointment, and make a report of the inquiry ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (for the Minister of Railways and Canals) :

1. Yes, by order in council.

2. Date of his appointment was July 22, 1905. To investigate under oath into certain matters in dispute respecting lands taken for the Murray Harbour Branch of the Prince Edward Island Railway, and certain other matters in dispute connected with that railway.

3. Yes.

CHEESE CURING ROOMS—TOTAL EXPENDITURE AND REVENUE.

Mr. TAYLOR—by Mr. Lancaster—asked :

1. What has been the total expenditure in connection with cheese curing at the following places : Bagotville, Brockville, Chrontine, Cowansville, Drummondville, Hebertville, St. Alphonse, St. Felician, St. Hyacinthe, Victoriaville, Woodstock.

2. What has been the total revenue received from the above named places ?

Hon. SYDNEY FISHER (Minister of Agriculture) :

1. $107,886.14 to March 1, 1906.
2. $32,451.51 to March 1, 1906.

EXPROPRIATIONS AT POULTRY STATIONS.

Mr. TAYLOR—by Mr. Lancaster—asked:

1. What has been the total expenditure in connection with poultry at the following places or stations : Alberton, P.E.I. ; Amherst, N.S., Andover, N.B. ; Bondville, Que. ; Bowmanville, Ont. ; Calgary, Alberta ; Chicoutimi, Que. ; Eldon, P.E.I. ; Glenfinnan, P.E.I. ; Holmesville, Ont. ; L'Islet, Que. ; La Trappe, Que. ; Montague Bridge, P.E.I. ; Morden, Manitoba ; Mount Stewart, P.E.I. ; N. E. Margaree, N.S. ; Rogersville, N.B. ; Stanfold, Que. ; Vernon River, P.E.I. ; Virdell (Virden), Manitoba ; Northwest Territories egg business ?

2. What has been the total revenue from each of the above mentioned places or stations ?

Hon. SYDNEY FISHER (Minister of Agriculture).

1 and 2. Up to the 1st March, 1906, the expenditure and revenue have been as follows :

Station.	Expenditure.	Revenue.
Andover, N.B.	$ 5,677 35	$1,960 90
Alberton, P.E.I.	1,277 24	813 28
Amherst, N.S.	2,961 41	1,412 68
Bondville, Que.	11,864 25	3,465 70
Bowmanville, Ont.	6,173 96	1,358 11
Chicoutimi, Que.	2,436 14	636 46
Calgary, Alberta	359 16	121 65
Eldon, P.E.I.	1,777 17	968 31
Glenfinnan, P.E.I.	1,812 79	991 70
Holmesville, Ont.	7,797 32	2,295 91
La Trappe, Que.	1,574 55	734 72
L'Islet, Que.	647 91	250 68
Mount Stewart, P.E.I.	1,445 74	828 80
Montague Bridge, P.E.I.	1,194 77	780 30
Morden, Manitoba	181 54	96 96
North East Margaree, P.E.I	333 78	127 68
Rogersville, N.B.	1,191 62	637 09
Stanfold, Que.	450 20	231 14
Virden, Manitoba	326 70	142 50
Vernon River Bridge, P.E.I.	5,300 16	1,872 57

The egg business in the Northwest Territories had no connection with poultry stations whatever, but was run in connection with the government creameries and under the direction of the Dairy Commissioner. There was no expenditure or revenue on this account, as the eggs were collected by the butter-makers from the patrons at the different creameries. When the eggs were disposed of, the expenses in connection with the collection of the eggs were deducted from the proceeds and the balance paid over to the patrons.

JOHN McR. SELKIRK AND PELEE ISLAND CABLE.

Mr. CLEMENTS asked :

What amount of salary or wages was received, for how many days employed, by John McR. Selkirk, from the government, who was employed on the Pelee Island cable for the year 1905 ?

Mr TAYLOR.

Hon. CHAS. S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works). John McR. Selkirk was employed on cable during 1905, thirty days, at $5 per day, $150.

POST OFFICE AT LEAMINGTON.

Mr. CLEMENTS asked :

1. Does the government own the post office building at Leamington, Ontario, or if either owned or leased by the government, does the government receive revenue or rent from any portion of the said building not used for post office purposes ?

Hon. CHAS. S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works. There is no public building at Leamington. I am informed by the Postmaster General that there is an allowance of $180 for rent, fuel and light. There is no information in the department as to who the building is rented to, or whether there is any sub-lease.

WATERWAYS FROM BALSAM LAKE NORTHWARD.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES asked :

1. What is the estimate of cost of the opening up of the waterways from Balsam lake northward to Bosking, Beech, Maple and other lakes in Victoria and Haliburton ?

2. What locks, and where would they be placed, would be required to make these waters navigable ?

3. What is the date of the engineer's report upon this proposed work ?

4. Is it the intention of the government to construct these works this year ?

5. Is the government proceeding with the construction of the canal from Lake Simcoe to Newmarket this year ?

6. What is to be the total cost of said canal to Newmarket ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) :

1. A survey has been made, but no report of the results has yet been made to the department.

2. Answered by No. 1.

3. Answered by No. 1.

4. No.

5. Tenders are being asked for that portion from Holland Landing to Lake Simcoe. The balance of the work will be dealt with as soon as the engineer can complete his plans and specification.

6. It is not advisable to publish this information at the present time.

BREAK IN THE TRENT CANAL.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES asked :

1. Is the government taking precautions that it will not be necessary to reduce the level of navigable waters in the county of Victoria to supply power to Peterboro', during the autumn of 1906 and subsequent years ?

2. At the time of, and previous to, the recent break in the Trent canal what was the depth of the water on the sills of the canal above the lift lock ?

3. What was the date of the break in the canal at the lift lock ?

4. When was it first noticed by the government officials ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister) :

1. Yes.

2. There was no water on the sills of the lift lock, the water having been run off from Norwood road. However, the measurement at Nassau would give the depth of water in the reach in question, which registered on the 24th and 25th January, 1906, seven feet, which has been the average depth in the reach since June 1, 1905.

3. On the morning of January 26, 1906, a break occurred in the bank of the canal north of Norwood road.

4. The superintendent of the canal was notified at 5 a.m. on the day the break occurred. He and the overseer were on the ground at six o'clock. The exact time the break occurred is not known.

RIFLE RANGE AT LINDSAY.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES asked :

Is it the intention of the government to construct a rifle range at Lindsay this year, for the use of the 45th Victoria regiment and rifle range associations ?

Hon. Sir FREDERICK W. BORDEN (Minister of Militia and Defence). The matter is under consideration. I may say in addition that the whole question of the selection and location of rifle ranges has been referred to a committee of the headquarters staff. The annual grant is small, the number of rifle ranges required is very large, and the construction must be spread over a number of years. The object of referring the subject to a committee is to have ranges selected in the order of their importance. I will be able later on to give the hon. gentleman fuller information.

McLAREN'S CREEK, VICTORIA COUNTY, ONT.

Mr. SAM HUGHES asked :

1. Is it the intention of the government to complete the roadway across McLaren's creek in Victoria county, Ontario, during the summer season of 1906 ?

2. What sums have already been expended upon this work ?

3. When were the sums expended ?

4. By whose request was the work stopped ?

5. How much will it require to complete the work ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister).

1. The appropriations in the past were contributions towards building a roadway between Lindsay and Fenelon Falls, and the government never undertook to complete it.

2. $1,696.61.

3. $1,308.29 during the fiscal year 1902-3, and $388.61 during the fiscal year 1903-4.

4. The work was stopped by order of the chief engineer.

5. An amount of $2,500 'contribution towards construction of a road across McLaren's creek' was voted in the fiscal year 1905-6, and as the municipality has not done any work, no expenditure has been made. It is not possible to state how much it will cost to complete the work, as the government have not undertaken it.

TRENT CANAL INQUIRY—R. J. McLAUGHLIN AND D. O'CONNELL.

Mr. SAM HUGHES asked :

1. What were the duties of Messrs. R. J. McLaughlin and D. O'Connell in connection with the recent Trent canal inquiry ?

2. Upon what specific days was Mr. McLaughlin employed ?

3. What is the amount of his account for his services ?

4. Why has not his account been paid ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister).

1. Mr. R. J. McLaughlin, K.C., was counsel for the government and Mr. D. O'Connell was his assistant.

2. His services covered a period of fifteen days.

3. The amount of his account was $1,500 which was taxed by the Department of Justice at $900 and paid.

4. Answered by No. 3.

COASTING TRADE OF CANADA.

Mr. A. H. CLARKE (South Essex) moved :

Resolved, That it is expedient to amend the Act respecting the coasting trade of Canada, and to provide that the Governor in Council may declare that the said Act shall not apply to any ship or vessel of any foreign country available in case of emergency for the transportation of goods and passengers to and from any place or places in Canada having at the time no other facilities therefor.

He said. I move this resolution as preliminary to the introduction of a Bill to carry out the intention of the resolution, if it meets with the favour of this House. It is designed to amend the Act respecting the coasting trade of Canada which was passed by this House in the year 1902. The Act was designed to protect the merchant marine of Canada, but in its terms and in its operation has proved very disastrous to a large section of the people, while not protecting those that it was deemed necessary to protect. Section three of the Act provides as follows :

No goods or passengers shall be carried by water from one port of Canada to another except in British ships.

Section six of the same Act provides :

The Governor in Council may from time to time declare that the foregoing provisions of this Act shall not apply to the ships or vessels of any foreign country in which British ships are admitted to the coasting trade of such country and to carry goods and passengers from one port or place to another in such country.

My desire is to amend the Act by adding to that section a provision that the Governor in Council may dispense with or suspend the operation of the Act in cases where no shipping facilities are provided, and where, for the very preservation of the people and their right to get to market, it is necessary to employ foreign ships. The fact which prompted me to introduce this resolution arose in my own constituency during the past year in Pelee Island, a very fertile island about sixteen miles from the mainland in Lake Erie. Intercourse with the island is precarious at best, but at that time the boat that was in the habit of plying between Pelee Island and the ports in the county of Essex was destroyed by fire. Efforts were made to get other Canadian boats, but the traffic was not sufficient to enable them to undertake it. Owing to proximity to the large shipping centre of Detroit and other Michigan ports, a vessel could have been got and could have been operated with a Canadian crew. Application was made to the government to enable this to be done, but the provisions of this Act were too stringent, and there was no power given except by parliament to suspend the operation of the Act. The result was that the people were unable to get their provisions to market, they were unable to get to market themselves, and they were in great danger of being deprived of their winter supplies. Fortunately the season was extended by mild weather, and by availing themselves of fishing tugs and other boats, in a measure, they got their produce to market. But they were not able to get to market themselves, and they suffered a very substantial loss; in fact the position became so extreme that there began to be talk of annexation to the United States. To the south of them, at the city of Sandusky, a little farther distant, they have greater shipping facilities and it is rather a disgraceful thing, that, under the Union Jack, the people of this country should have to look to the land of the Eagle in order to get relief. I do not want that condition of things to exist in a riding where we have such loyal citizens as we have there, and I do think that this parliament ought to so arrange the law that no such complaint as this could be made. I may say that the press of western Ontario on both sides of politics condemned the situation in unmeasured terms. The people were almost frantic with winter coming on, with their winter supplies not there, their coal not there, when these supplies could have been got by a steamboat had it not been that the laws of the country prevented the employment of this boat. I would ask the House to join in support of this resolution. I am not animated at all by any desire to aid the merchant marine of the United States. Their conduct towards us in the past has not been such as to invite consideration of their interests, but inasmuch as conditions arise when it is impossible to get a Canadian boat there should be some power whereby the government shall have the right to provide the facilities which are necessary to enable these people to market their produce.

Mr. A. B. INGRAM (East Elgin). Mr. Speaker, before that motion is carried I would like the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clarke) to say whether or not Canadian vessels passing over to any American port have the right to engage in the coasting trade and to carry passengers or freight ?

Mr. CLARKE. I understand that they do not allow Canadian vessels to do any coasting trade whatever, and if we had the vessels available I certainly would be inclined to apply the law to the strictest extent, but when these people who are entirely on an island cannot get their product to market their rights should be paramount.

Mr. INGRAM. This is a concession that might be abused very easily, and for my part I do not like the idea of having this matter left to the Governor in Council. I think that if the trade is sufficient at any of these ports to justify the employment of vessels, there is sufficient energy and ambition on the part of the owners of Canadian vessels to look after that trade. I know that the Americans are very particular about the coasting trade in their country, and that being so I think we ought to be just as particular about the coasting trade in our country. For my part I am not in favour of granting the hon. gentleman's request.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). Mr. Speaker, the members of the House, I have no doubt, have in their mind the peculiar situation which confronted the people of Pelee Island last fall and to which my hon. friend (Mr. Clarke) has just alluded. They were in a land of plenty; they were within accessible markets, but there were no means of transportation to take their goods to the markets. This is a situation which certainly requires some attention on the part of the government, and I am free to say on the part of parliament. I have no doubt they will be willing to come to the rescue of these people in so far as it is possible to provide a remedy. But, I have to observe to my hon. friend that the resolution which he has proposed is one, which, while it might and would in part, remedy the evil of which he has spoken, at the same time would create another evil which the Canadian people, I think, are not prepared at this time to introduce. Our relations with the United States at the present time are very satisfactory. We have few grievances, and I hope as time goes on we shall have less and less; but one of the grievances we have at this moment is just this one in regard to our coasting laws. We have been always willing and we are willing yet to open to American shipping our own coasting trade if the United States will open their own trade to our vessels, but up to the present time we have not been able to convince our American neighbours that this would be a policy which it would be in their own interest and in our interest to adopt. We have had no communication with them of late, but all the time there is—I will not say official communication or unofficial communication—but all the time the people on both sides are bringing to the attention of their legislatures questions of a similar character in order that the relations between the two people may be improved by mutual concessions. This very day, in answer to a question put by my hon. friend the leader of the opposition (Mr. R L. Borden), I stated that at this moment negotiations are going on with the view of settling a question which has been long pending, which has been a source of grievance and discontent, and with which my hon. friend from Essex is very familiar. He knows the difficulty we have had in maintaining a close season for fishing on the American side of Lake Erie. At the present time negotiations are going on with a view of having international regulations made which will apply to all contiguous water, to the American side as well as to the Canadian side, and I am sure that a settlement of this question will confer great benefit not only on one side, but on the other side of the lakes as well. In the same manner our relations in the matter of shipping with the Americans are very close upon the great lakes, and especially upon the St. Lawrence, where there is the closest communication every day. Steamers ply from one side of the river every day and almost continuously during 24 hours of the day at certain seasons of the year. It would be the best policy not only for Canada, but for the United States, that there should be in this respect an exchange of facilities and that we should have reciprocity in the coasting trade. We are and always have been willing, and we have signified more than once our readiness to the American authorities to have this coasting trade made reciprocal. But our efforts up to the present time have been unavailing. Our suggestions have not been received with favour. I doubt that the people of Pelee Island would derive any benefit if we were to make an exception of this case and allow American boats to come over and engage in the coasting trade. If we were to do that we would be introducing a principle which would absolutely defeat the end we have in view, which is to obtain reciprocity in coasting. Therefore, I have to say to my hon. friend that the position of his constituents is one which has engaged and is still engaging the attention of the government. I sympathize fully with him, I understand his endeavour, I understand his anxiety, and I know full well that he desires to find a solution of this most difficult problem, but if my hon. friend will allow me a suggestion I would say that the remedy is not there. I would ask him simply to withdraw his motion, and I will state to him that I believe we will be able to find a remedy which will cope with the evil he complains of.

Mr. CLARKE. Mr. Speaker, I beg to withdraw the motion.

Motion withdrawn.

WATER POWERS.

Mr. F. D. MONK (Jacques Cartier) moved

For a statement containing the following information concerning the water powers in the possession and under the control of the Dominion government :

1. The province and the locality within the province where the water power is situated.
2. A summary of the report or reports made to the government on such water power, if any report has been made, with date of the report and name of the party who has reported.
3. The power susceptible of being developed.
4. If under lease, or alienated in any way, the name of lessee or purchaser, date, duration and condition of lease or purchase.
5. If under lease or alienated, whether public tenders were called for through the newspapers before lease or alienation took place.
6. If under lease or alienated, whether any report was sought and obtained by the government previous to such alienation, and by what officer such report was made to the government, and the purport of such report, as well as its date.
7. If under lease or alienation in any way, the the amount due the government for rent or price of sale and arrears.
8. If under lease or alienated, whether the conditions of alienation have been fulfilled.

He said : Mr. Speaker, the terms of the motion explain sufficiently, I think the object which it aims at. It is in reality an inventory of all the water powers under the control of the Dominion government, the nature of those powers, their situation, the energies susceptible of being developed, whether these have been and are at present leased or alienated, what are the conditions of alienation and whether the conditions of the lease or alienation have been fulfilled ?

It is extremely desirable that this information should be in possession of parliament as soon as possible. In recent years the impression has grown that Canada, far from being relegated to the position of a mere agricultural country, possesses natural resources and vast quantities of raw material which destine her to play an important part in the manufacturing world. In connection with the development of these natural resources we have marvellous water powers, not only in eastern Canada but in British Columbia and generally throughout our country, the information in regard to which is at present extremely vague and unclassified. Many of these water powers are vested in the provincial governments, and it would be very interesting to have a complete inventory made by these governments as to the extent of this treasure as it may be very well named—which they have under their control. In the meantime, there is no doubt that in our navigable and flotable rivers and canals we have under the control of the Federal government very extensive water powers, and it is most desirable that details of the extent of these water powers should be presented in the shape of a blue book where the information may be readily available. Since I gave notice of this motion my attention has been called to a very interesting treatise on this subject by Mr. T. C. Keefer, one of our most eminent engineers. In his presidential address to the Royal Society of Canada in 1899, Mr. Keefer dealt with this matter and I shall quote briefly from that learned address to show that this motion is timely at the present stage of our national development. Mr. Keefer said :

> Amongst the many partially developed resources of Canada, perhaps there is none more widespread or more far reaching in future results than her unsurpassed water power. The value of this has been enormously enhanced, first, by the expansion of the wood pulp manufacture, and the introduction of electro-chemical and metallurgical industries for which this country possesses the raw material; and, more recently, in the revolution which has been brought about by success in transmitting the energy of water falls from remote and inconvenient positions to those where the work is to be done.
>
> Electrical transmission brings the power to the work, and when the prime mover is water, we have the cheapest power, and perhaps nearest approach to perpetual motion which it is possible to obtain; one which is always 'on tap' and, like gravity, maintained without cost and applied without delay.

Further on in this very interesting address. Mr. Keefer makes a scientific calculation of our water powers, and particularly in the country which extends from the Great Lakes to and including Labrador. He makes a calculation founded on the precipation of rain and snow from which he deducts the allowance which must be made for that portion of the rainfall which the demands of vegetation or infiltration exact and making his calculation upon the elevation of the waters he arrives at the conclusion, that in this region can be found nearly 100,000 horse power per every foot of fall. He also calculates that the water power to be found in Canada's share of the St. Lawrence river from Lake Superior to Montreal, would be about 10,000,000 horse power. I quote from page 11 of his address :

> A still greater revolution has recently occurred which brings water power to the front again, by its amalgamation with electricity, whereby its economical power is transferred to the work, over many miles of distance, upon a single wire.
>
> Within the last ten years high voltage electricity has been firmly established with annually increasing power of extension, and this has brought Canada into the first rank of economical power producing countries. Water is thus represented by a power to which it can give birth, but which is superior to its own, in that, wherever transplanted, it can do nearly all the present power could do, as well as give light, heat and greater speed ; moreover it has given rise to industries only possible with abundant cheap electricity. What is more important to us is that such cheap industries are those for which Canada possesses the raw material, but which without water power, she could not engage in.
>
> There are important industries in which we have for some time utilized water power—for which electricity is not indispensable—but which equally require large amounts of cheap power, and are capable of indefinite extension, but while these may not need the intense electric current necessary for electro-chemical industries, they will find electrical transmission of inestimable value in many situations, while, for lighting and heating purposes, water power is invaluable to all.
>
> Heretofore we have cut our spruce into deals and exported it to Europe. and more recently into pulp wood and exported that to the United States ; but, manufactured by our water power into paper, the raw material would yield this country ten times the value it is now exported for.
>
> The extension of railways combined with electrical transmission, will promote the local manufacture of such wood products (including all valuable hard wood) as can bear transportation ; thus giving the largest amount of local employment, as well as tonnage to the railways, and delivering us from the position of 'hewers of wood' for other countries.

I quote these words of Mr. Keefer in order to show that even in 1889 he deems it important that we should possess the knowledge which this motion calls for. Up to the present, so far as I am aware, there has never been laid before parliament a complete statement as to this source of our natural wealth. Our manufacturers are increasing daily, the discoveries connected with electrical development are multiplying, and it is not improbable that even during our own lives electrical energy will be able to furnish all the light, heat, and manufacturing power we may require. What is our own position ? Take the city of Montreal, which is very fortunately situated as regards water powers. On referring to past legislation, I find that in 1873 we incorporated a company known as the Lachine Hydraulic Works and granted to it extremely valuable water powers in the Lachine rapids. These were given without any consideration and without any provision for any governmental control over the company as regards the manner in which it would deal with the electrical forces at its disposal. In one section of that Act, which was passed in 1873, there is a provision that the government may at any time expropriate the company, but that is the only provision destined to safeguard the public interest. And that provision can now scarcely be called operative. It could only be carried into operation at very great cost, because that company has disappeared and its assets are in the hands of a much larger corporation—a corporation which controls the electrical power purchased from that company as well as the electrical power from other sites in the neighbourhood of Montreal. There was another statute passed by the Canadian parliament in 1890 granting to a company which had been incorporated by a provincial statute the right to utilize extremely valuable water powers at Chambly, and that right was given without any consideration, qualification or condition of any kind. The power developed by that company is now the property of a larger corporation which practically controls the supply of electricity in the city of Montreal. These grants, these arrangements, as well as others which have since been entered into not only by the past, but by the present government, are governed by no condition. The leases or terms of alienation will be found to differ in each case, and very seldom are conditions placed in these deeds of alienation which are calculated to protect the public interest. But we have in the vicinity of Montreal—which is our largest commercial centre and a very large manufacturing centre—still large undeveloped water powers in and around the Lachine rapids. These large powers are under the control of the Dominion government. Higher up in the River St. Lawrence, there are also very extensive water powers along the counties of Beauharnois and Soulanges. Some of these have been utilized, but there is still a very large quantity of water which could be utilized and their electrical energies transmitted, by means of modern electrical discoveries and improvements, to the city of Montreal. There are also in the Ottawa river, behind the Island of Montreal, very considerable water powers still undeveloped. The survey of the Georgian Bay canal covers a portion of these water powers at the back of the Island of Montreal in what is known as the Back river, and I believe that one of the results of that survey has been to create among the engineers the impression that the Georgian Bay canal could more properly be continued from the Lake of Two Mountains down the Back river to the lower end of the Island of Montreal, rather than through Lake St. Louis by an enlargement and improvement of the present Lachine canal. Whether that line of canal be adopted or not, these large water powers behind the Island of Montreal, as they will become developed by the canalization of that river, will constitute an extremely valuable asset for the government, and that great metropolis. There are other considerable water powers under control of the government within 75 or 100 miles of Montreal. There are water powers at Carillon and Grenville and along the Ottawa. Under these circumstances, I think it would be extremely interesting for us to know what is the extent and the nature of that national asset. It would lead no doubt to the introduction of legislation which would prevent the future alienation of that valuable asset except under conditions very carefully considered in the public interest. There is no doubt a growing sentiment in favour of the municipalization and nationalization of public utilities. In my opinion, it is only a matter of time when that doctrine will ultimately prevail ; but whether it prevails or not there can be no doubt that what we possess in the way of water powers requires to be carefully husbanded and should not be alienated except under conditions which would safeguard the public interest. The government will render great service to the country by giving to this motion every attention and furnishing all the details possible. Of course even a careful and correct return to this motion would not give us by any means all the water powers which are to be found in British and North America. These are being increased by discoveries every day. Nor do I expect that we will ascertain exactly what degree of power can be developed at each place ; but what we should get is all the information possessed by the department, so that we should know as nearly as possible what we have at present in the way of water power. Many of our water powers have been alienated. Some were alienated by previous governments and some have been parted with by the present government. In this way private individuals have acquired, by lease or otherwise, extremely valuable water powers subject to the obligation of a very general character of improving them. This the grantees have not done in many instances, but are waiting for the chance of making a fortunate speculation. I think all these leases, all these alienations, should be terminated as rapidly as possible and that alienations of our water powers in future, should only be made with extreme care and after a full study of the subject has enabled us to provide legislation under which these alienations will be so guarded that they cannot possibly be contrary to the public interest.

Mr. HENRI BOURASSA (Labelle). Mr. Speaker, I am very glad that the hon. gentleman has brought this very important question to the attention of parliament. I may say that I have given special study to that question for some years past, more perhaps as regards provincial water powers, but certainly the principle is the same.

I think we are only at the beginning of a new era in the history of water power development. There is no doubt that water powers have been used for years and for centuries for industrial developments of a local character. But the importance of the national asset contained in the water power richness of a country is just beginning to be known, and I think, in preparing a work of this kind, the government might well take into consideration the work that has been performed in Europe by several of the most civilized and most developed countries, so far as this question is concerned. I have given some attention to the enormous work that has been performed by the French government in that respect and I may say they have gone so far as already to load the credit of the country with enormous sums of money for the purpose of taking back from individuals water powers that were alienated years ago or even that pertain to personal properties, with the purpose of assuring to the large industries, to the public service, to electric traction, a source of richness which they themselves define as being, at the present time, incalculable. It seems to me that my hon. friend (Mr. Monk) could have enlarged the scope of this motion and could have given an opportunity to this government to render some of our local provinces a valuable service, perhaps more valuable than the amount of money which, one after the other, they have been begging from this government for some years past. Just as this government has under its control the geological survey of the whole of Canada, which affords to the various provincial governments the advantage of becoming better acquainted with their mining richness, thanks to the good service performed by the geological service, I think the same principle could be extended to this question and as thorough a valuation of our hydrographical richness could be performed by this government, because, although a large portion, in fact the greater portion, of these waters are possessed by the provincial government their development would be a source of richness to the people of Canada at large, a source of income for the government of Canada by the development of trade and industry, and at the same time it would be a great advantage to foreign capitalists, to foreign investors, to foreign engineers, to know the exact richness of Canada as far as water powers are concerned. The inventory which my hon. friend (Mr. Monk) asks from the government could be but a partial inventory, because it would cover only those waters powers which are possessed by the Dominion government, but I think if a thorough study were made by the Federal government of all the water powers which are in existence in Canada—that would take years of course to perform, but it could be performed in a methodical manner so as to indicate to those interested where those water powers are situated, those under provincial control and those under individual control—it would be possible for any people who were interested in the development of trade and industry in any part of the country to know where they could go in order to secure the water power necessary for the development of their industries. It seems to me that if the government would study this question, as I have no doubt they are prepared to do, they could enlarge the scope of this study and create a permanent hydrographical service for the Dominion of Canada. The Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) and some of his colleagues, as well as the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden), have given a great deal of encouragement to the forestry convention which was held in this city lately. I think they deserve credit for having done so, and this question of hydrographical surveys is intimately connected with the question of forestry. Everybody knows that the preservation of our forests, and especially the reforesting of the country, is closely connected with the preservation of our water-sheds, of our lakes, of our rivers and of our water powers, and it is perfectly useless to attempt a serious solving of the problem of the preservation of our water-sheds, if at the same time we do not take advantage of the surveys, of the explorations that are made, to ascertain the capacity of our water powers. I may add, further, that it would greatly reduce the cost of our surveys if at the same time a survey would be made of the capacity of these water powers, because as every body knows the preservation of water courses is connected with the construction of dams and dykes upon rapid portions of rivers, on falls, on rapids, so that both surveys could be performed at the same time and a double result would ensue from the work of the government. I entirely endorse the remarks of my hon. friend (Mr. Monk) and I hope the government will give the question the serious consideration it deserves, so that we shall thoroughly arouse the interest of the people in that enormous wealth which we have in this country, a source of wealth which is at the same time so closely connected with numerous public services. As my hon. friend (Mr. Monk) says, there is no doubt that there is a tendency, whether right or wrong, towards a control of public services by the people, whether by parliament or municipalities, and as water powers are a source of energy for several of the public services in the large cities, and probably before many years will be the source of energy for a great many of our railways, it seems to me we should not commit the same mistake that we have committed in connection with the development of many industries, and especially the development of many public services; we should not let individuals or corporations take hold of such a source of richness from the people of Canada, but should take the means to keep it for the advantage of the people of Canada at large.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN (South York). I agree with the two speakers who have preceded me. I believe that the greatest source of wealth to-day are the water powers of this country, and that being the case, the time has certainly arrived when a national policy in regard to these water powers ought to be adopted. In many portions of this country we have no coal; we have no hard coal, but in Ontario and in all the west as they have in Quebec, we have immense sources of water power and water power has been called the new white coal, as against the black power that comes from coal. As to the alienation of water powers that has taken place in the past, I believe that an attempt ought to be made to recover these water powers.

In Ontario, it has been found that the great bulk of the possible water power from Niagara Falls has been alienated without proper conservation of the rights of the people in that power. Take, for instance, the city of Hamilton. They have a street railway problem there. The present service is very bad. The companies say they are not able to give a better service, one reason alleged being that too high a price is demanded by the Cataract Power Company for the power to drive the cars. That power company derives its power, under a franchise given by this government, from Welland canal waters. Therefore, I agree with the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) when he says that no concession of water power should be given, especially to a company, without retaining in the government right to regulate the prices charged for energy. We have given away the right to generate power, in many cases, and have retained no control. It is true that the charters given by the province of Ontario in connection with Niagara Falls contain a stipulation for some sort of control. But the net result, so far as the people of Toronto are concerned, is that, while power can be generated at Niagara Falls and a profit made at $12 per horse power per year, the probability is that Toronto people will be asked to pay from $50 to $60 per horse power for the energy, merely because sufficient protection is not secured under the concessions granted. There is a great agitation in Ontario to recover these water powers, the province to own them and generate the power and distribute it to the municipalities, who will distribute it to users. If this were done, the great power of Niagara could be used all through Ontario at a price, I believe, below $20 per horse power per year. In fact, I believe that Niagara power could be distributed all over Ontario at less than $17 per horse power per year, for twenty-four hours a day. I also believe that electrical energy, will, in a short time, be the handmaid of agriculture. Nothing will do so much to improve agriculture in this country as an unlimited supply of power widely distributed. I believe that every farm in Ontario could be economically lighted by power distributed from Niagara Falls, from the Ottawa river, or from some of the streams flowing into Georgian bay. To attain this result, the work must be done on a large scale, it must be done by the state, and the distribution effected by the municipality. Therefore, it is incumbent upon the government to see to it that no more of these concessions are given, or, if they be given, that the terms of transfer shall be such as to enable the government at any time to recover complete control; and, meantime, to regulate the prices at which the power shall be distributed. Great corporations are now being organized to exploit these water powers. At Niagara one such concern is being capitalized at millions. Something less than $6,000,000 has been issued in bonds, the proceeds of which have been used to construct the works. But $6,000,000 of stock has been distributed by the promoters, among themselves, and, they propose that hereafter and for ever the public of Canada shall pay them 10 or 12 or 20 per cent on this great issue.

Another point is this. We have allowed these companies to get control of these franchises, and it is now their intention to use the power of Niagara Falls to move trains on the American side of the river. I believe that at least two of these great power developments at the Falls to-day intend that the power shall be used to handle the traffic on the New York Central and the Pennsylvania systems. Not one horse power of that energy should be allowed to go out of this country, if we can use it in Canada for our own traffic. If this is the traction power of the future—and I believe it is, and the great Vanderbilt and Pennsylvania systems are ready now to convert their roads from the steam system to the electrical system—the law should provide that none of that energy generated in Canada shall be used to drive the railroads of the United States if it can be used, as I believe it can, to drive the railroads of our country. To that end, I have already advocated in this House—and hon. gentlemen will find that the matter will come up again with renewed strength hereafter—that there should be an export duty on energy going out of this country to a foreign country until our people have had the chance to utilize it. All along the border, this question is being agitated. We hear about the despoiling of the Falls as a spectacle through the works of these concessionaries. I believe that that matter is worthy of attention also. But the great question is that of the generation of power. In connection with the generation of power on the Niagara river, it has been pointed out by the engineers who have most recently investigated the matter that probably as much power can be developed in the rapids below the falls as is developed by the falls themselves. I believe that that will be found to be the fact. That will mean that the scenic value of Niagara Falls can be retained and quite as much power generated as though the water now running over the falls were diverted into underground tunnels. This also is a question for the government. I hope the return that we are to receive will be as complete as the hon. member for Jacques Cartier proposes and will even go as far as the hon. member for Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) suggests, so that we shall soon be in possession of an inventory of the water powers possessed by this country. I hope that hon. Mr. Whitney, who is now in charge of the affairs of the province of Ontario will find a way to recover the three great franchises that have been given out in connection with Niagara Falls; that he will be ready to give full value for the works that have been built, with a reasonable allowance for interest; that he will take over the water power and will distribute the energy to the municipalities who will distribute it at cost price to the people at large. If this be done, Ontario will find herself, as Quebec under a similar policy will find herself, possessed of a resource of greater value and usefulness than anything now enumerated among our assets. For, the wonderful thing about this energy is this—and there is nothing in the world like it—it delivers itself without cost at the end of a wire wherever you desire it to be. Coal must be mined; it must be raised from the bowels of the earth; it must be loaded on trains and transported bodily long distances; it must be elevated, carted to the place where it is to be used and fed into the furnace. And after that, the ashes must be carried away, involving still further work. But the electrical energy developed by water power will deliver itself, free of cost, hundreds of miles away at the end of a wire. That being the case, it is the greatest source of wealth any country can have, and the distribution of this wonderful power at the end of a wire at the least possible cost is one of the problems that is up to all governments in the world to-day. But especially does this problem confront the Dominion government and the various provincial governments. So I say the time has come for the government to declare that these water powers are for the use of all the people, and their service and distribution is one of the live problems of government. That being so, I hope the governments of Canada and of the provinces, irrespective of party, will appreciate the situation, and especially appreciate the fact that Canada, of all countries on the face of the globe, is the richest in its sources of water power. Therefore, I hope that the government will consider this question in a wide spirit, and that they will adopt a new national policy in regard to the developments and distribution of electrical energy.

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). There is no objection whatever to the motion of my hon. friend (Mr. W. F. Maclean). All the information we have on this very important subject will be collected with all speed and communicated to the House. I do not know how far we can satisfy the very legitimate curiosity of the House upon this subject. We have a great number of water powers which have been developed, and we have a larger number which have been leased but not developed yet. Some time last spring the government instituted a communication with the object of collecting information about both these points, namely, what water powers have been developed, what have been leased, and any other data we may obtain preliminary to declaring a policy upon this subject. There is no doubt that Canada, as my hon. friend from East York has said, has greater resources in wealth of this kind than any other country in the world. There is more water probably on that portion of the earth's surface comprised between the St. Lawrence, Hudson Bay, the coast of Labrador, the Lake of the Woods and Lake Winnipeg, than on any other usual portion of the earth. Indeed our country is full of water powers. Water has always been a well known source of industrial energy, but we never knew its full value, and it is only since discoveries have been made in electricity that we have commenced to realize the enormous extent of the wealth we possess in that particular. Our fathers, when they ran their grist mills, sawmills and other mills by water power, never suspected what an amount of energy was passing over their wheels ; I think we hardly suspect it ourselves at this moment.

I do not know that I would endorse every thing that has been said by my hon. friend from East York. He is much more of a stalwart in these matters than I am. He wants to nationalize everything to water power. I do not know that he would leave us anything to drink; if he were to have his own way we would have to apply to the State in order to get a glass of water. But I agree with him in this, that whatever disposal is made of this subject—and I am not prepared to say now that it will be, but whatever policy may be adopted, whatever disposal may be made of the water power that the government controls, I think we should regulate the prices to the consumer. I think that ought to be done, and having done that, we should secure the public so far as they can be secured. But my hon. friend goes much futher. He wants the government to build all the railways, he wants the government to develop all the water powers and turn them over to the municipalities, then to be turned over to the consumer. I am not prepared to go that far. But I am prepared to agree with him in this respect, that the object which we should have in view is to protect the consumer and in all the laws made in future the government should retain in their own hands the power to regulate prices to the consumer, the price at which energy is to be sold to the consumer. All water powers have not the same value, and it is impossible to sell them at the same price. I noticed in the remarks of my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk), he said that under the present system—if we have any system at all—in the disposal of these water powers, some are sold at certain prices and others at certain other prices. I think it must always continue to be so because there are some water powers more valuable than others. Geographical situation, for instance, is an immense consideration in a matter of this kind. A water power which is in the vicinity of the city of Montreal has already, and will have in the future, a far greater value than a water power two or three hundred miles away. My hon. friend from East York seems to have forgotten that it is not so easy to supply energy that is to be found at the end of a long wire. But everything depends upon the cost of development, everything depends on the geographical situation of the power so developed. A water power energy at the end of a wire a mile or so from its source, is a very different value from the energy which is conveyed several hundred miles. There is no similarity at all. All these things have to be considered. The matter is in its infancy and we have not given attention to it yet. Up to the present time I think we have disposed of these water powers altogether too freely, both the late government and this government, for the very obvious reason that we did not know the wealth that we were giving away. It is only in recent years that we have commenced to appreciate its value, and it is time that we should give the subject our best attention in order to evolve a policy which the government will submit to the country.

Hon. JOHN HAGGART. The subject engaging the attention of the House is certainly a very interesting one, but to my mind the question uppermost is : What jurisdiction have we over it ? Some time ago I pointed out to the House what would be the probable future of railway development in this country, and I prophesied that all railways in this section of the country would be run by electricity. About ten years ago when Mr. Booth started the Canada Atlantic Railway he intended to run it by electricty. I notice that the Ontario government propose to run their new line of road by electricity. There is no doubt that we have resources of water power in this country arising from the precipitation of moisture within our own territory greater than any other country. Those resources in this country are greater even than its immense coal fields. We have cheaper sources of power than any other country. We have the means of extracting metals from the ore, as seems to have been clearly established by the experiments made by the Geological Department at Sault Ste. Marie. They have proved that electricity can be used for the purpose of extracting ore from the raw material.

But the question arises: What jurisdiction have we over the matter ? What right have we to legislate over water power in Ontario or Quebec ? I do not know if we have jurisdiction over the water powers of the St. Lawrence. If I remember rightly, the Ontario government claims those which are situated within that province. We have no jurisdiction even over the Ottawa river which divides Ontario and Quebec, the jurisdiction is in the two adjoining provinces. Then what jurisdiction have we ? We have jurisdiction over certain water powers which we have developed ourselves in building canals in various parts of the country. But a very small moiety of the water of this country is under our jurisdiction, we have very little now upon the Welland canal. This entire question as to the preservation of our water power ; as to its municipalization, if you may call it that, the control over the water power, depends entirely upon the provincial governments, and we have no power to pass regulations and laws in reference to it. But still it is an interesting question. Even the discussion of the question is interesting and I am with the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) and the hon. member for Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) in the belief that we have sources of wealth greater than those of any other agricultural country of equal size in the water powers which we possess and that we have cheaper means, at least at the present moment, of producing power and light than any other country. I believe that such development will soon take place in electricity as electricity may be commercially converted into heat. If that is so, then we will have in the water powers of this country a greater source of wealth than that of any other country, as the Prime Minister has said, of equal extent, in any other part of the world.

Mr. SAM HUGHES (Victoria and Haliburton). In supporting the motion of my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) I desire to ask the government what is the nature of the arrangement made with the province of Ontario in the recent taking over of the water tributary to the Trent canal in the county which I have the honour to represent. I understand that recently the waters tributary to the Trent canal in Victoria county have been taken over by this government from the province of Ontario and that it is the intention of this government to erect dams for the storage of water in reservoirs throughout that area and in the remote regions of the county. Does the government control the electrical power in connection with these water powers or does the Ontario government retain control of the water powers ?

Mr. HYMAN. This is not a matter within the Public Works Department. It is a matter within the Railway Department and whether arrangement to which the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sam Hughes) has referred has been consummated or not I am not aware. There were negotiations proceeding for some time between the Ontario government and the Dominion government in reference to the taking over of certain dams on the Trent canal. These dams were erected originally for the purpose of assisting the lumber interests. Their use for this purpose has now practically ceased and in reference to a lot of these dams a proposal has been made to utilize them for furnishing and storing water for the Trent canal. I believe that the Ontario government asked that the Dominion government should take them over. I am not in a position to say whether the arrangement has been consummated but I am quite sure the government will be willing and desirous that the facts in connection with the matter should be laid upon the table.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Mr. Speaker, whether this parliament or the legislatures have jurisdiction I am sure that we are indebted to my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) for bringing the matter to the attention of the House. Speaking from the standpoint of the coal areas there was one remark to which I would take objection, namely, that there is any difference in the facility of transmitting power generated by coal and power generated by the action of water. You can transmit along a wire power generated by coal as easily as power generated by water and there is no distinction in that regard although I understand some such distinction to have been suggested by my hon. friend from South York (Mr. Maclean).

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. No.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. In connection with what has been observed by my right hon. friend the leader of the government (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) I did not gather whether he said that there had been a commission appointed to investigate this subject.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes, on the leases.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Was the report ever laid before parliament ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. It will be as soon as we have it.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. You have not the report ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. We may have it for all I know.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. There is one observation to be made in respect to the use made of water powers, subject to the control of this government and it is this : whether or not the government is disposed to go as far as has been suggested and utilize these water powers so that the power shall be delivered to the municipalities and by municipalities to individuals. I think we all should agree that leases of water powers controlled by this government should be made for such terms and under such conditions as will prevent an undue share of the increment in value being taken up by private corporations. If you grant to a corporation for speculative purposes a long lease of a power controlled by this government one result is sure to follow. In the first place it is extremely likely that that water power will remain undeveloped for a long time. There will be no competition in regard to it. Then, if the term is long and the rental fixed at a low sum in the first instance, when that water power is developed and when it comes to be utilized through the corporation by the general public, the general public will get very much the worst of the arrangement. I would suggest that all these leases should be made either for short terms or else that periods of five or ten years should be fixed at the expiration of which the government should have the power to deal with the question of rental. That system has to some extent been carried into force by the government of Nova Scotia in connection with the leases of coal, and I am not sure whether the same idea has been carried out in connection with the leases of old areas or not. I think it has not. My hon. friend from Cape Breton suggests that it has. Very well, so much more apt is the illustration. Certainly it is carried out in so far as the leases of coal are concerned. The lease is for twenty years, renewable for four additional terms; at least that was the nature of the lease when I last examined it. The lease is for twenty years, renewable for four additional terms of twenty years, but at the expiration of each term the government has power to increase the rental or royalty. I would prefer a shorter term in leases of public utilities. It is essential that these utilities should either be granted for short terms, or if granted for comparatively long terms there should be shorter periods fixed at the expiration of which the government should have power to deal with the question of rental. The adoption of such a policy would tend to give to the people of this country, either through government control or through increased revenues from the use of the water power the benefit of any increase in the value of these water powers which arises from time to time by reason of commercial development, or by reason of greater opportunities for making use of these water powers. I repeat again that the thanks of the House are due to my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier for bringing this matter to our attention.

Hon. C. S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works). Mr. Speaker, as far as I am concerned I am in hearty sympathy with the motion which has been brought before the House by the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk). So little has been thought either by the provinces or by the Dominion government of the value of these water powers that up to the present time, as my hon. friend from Lanark (Mr. Haggart) has stated, we are very much at sea in reference to the whole question of jurisdiction over water powers. I will give as an illustration the question of the water powers at the Chaudière Falls within a very short distance of Ottawa. Upon this side of the Chaudière river, the Dominion government practically control owing to the Ontario government some years ago surrendering their rights to the Dominion government, but on the Quebec side the power is being operated through a sale having been made of the land by the Quebec government to the owners and it is being operated there under Quebec law. The question of the jurisdiction has been considered by the government, but it is a complicated question, and, as to just what steps the government intends to take in reference to it I am not prepared to say further than that the government fully appreciate its importance.

The question in its relation to the Niagara River is being dealt with by the International waterways commission and the House has full information with regard to the reasons why that commission was appointed, and as to the scope of its work. I have hopes that the International commission will be able to make such representations to this government and to the government of the United States as may lead to an agreement being made, followed by a treaty, which will meet the approval of both the people of this country and of the United States. Charters to develop power at Niagara Falls have been given not only by the Ontario Legislature but by the Dominion parliament as well. The charters granted by this government are as to powers which would be the outcome of Dominion government works, and it has always been conceded that this is under the control of the Dominion government. I think I may say that the right of the Ontario government to grant these charters for the utilization of the water at Niagara may fairly well be questioned.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. Hear, hear.

Mr. HYMAN. I am not however prepared to say that the present moment is the proper time to take up that question. The hon. gentleman for York (Mr. Maclean) has referred to the export from Canada to the United States of the power which is generated, and I do not think it possible that there can be any question that the jurisdiction as to that is vested in the Dominion government.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. And the tariff law.

Mr. HYMAN. I will speak of that in a moment. I think it cannot be questioned but that this government has full and complete jurisdiction as to the export of that power. The situation is very difficult in this way: There has been authority already given for the development of a large quantity of horse power at Niagara Falls upon the Canadian side, and were the government to say now that not one single horse power of that should be exported to the United States, it might greatly interfere at the present time with the development of this power. Always providing however that we on this side of the water are not prepared to utilize that power, I think I may say that the government purposes laying down a policy in reference to the exportation of that power which for all time to come will give the Canadian government full and complete control; looking always to the fact that our development is such that that power will be required on the Canadian side. Applications have already been made for leave to place wires across Niagara for the purpose of exporting the power. For the reasons I have stated, I do not think it is wise that the government should say now: You shall not export. But, the gov ernment does purpose saying in the first place, that any permission given may be revoked by the government upon short notice; in the second place, that there shall be no claim of any possible kind against the Dominion government or any government because of the revocation of any permission which may be temporarily given to export power; and, in the third place, that any company asking for authority to export power shall conform to all rules and regulations which now or hereafter may be put in force in reference to the exportation of power. I think, Mr. Speaker, that with that permission carefully guarded, the only question the government would then have to consider would be as to whether from time to time that water power could be used upon the Canadian side, and in this way the government would have under its control the regulation of every single horse power that now or hereafter might be developed at Niagara Falls.

The hon. gentleman from York (Mr. Maclean) has also referred to the preservation of the scenic beauty of Niagara Falls. That is a question of the gravest importance. Apart altogether from sentiment, the scenic grandeur of the falls has a commercial value, and I feel quite sure that the people of all Canada are anxious that the beauties of this wonder of nature should be preserved. I think that a solution of this will be found. I know that the question is engaging the atttention of the International commission at the present time and I hope a solution will be arrived at under which the government of the United States and the government of Canada may arrange that no more horse power will be permitted to be developed from the Niagara river than is consistent with the preservation of its scenic grandeur. There is no report from the commission in reference to that matter at the present time, but another meeting will be held shortly, and meanwhile this government has given instructions—or rather I should say they have notified the commission of their desire that the spoliation of Niagara by power companies should not be permitted. If there should come about a treaty, what the nature of that treaty may be the government have no exact information at the moment.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. When does the minister expect the report of the commission ?

Mr. HYMAN. An interim report will be laid on the table of the House possibly within a week or ten days.

Mr. HAGGART. If you have not jurisdiction how can you make any arrangement ?

Mr. HYMAN. As to the question of jurisdiction I have advised the commission that while at present it might not be advantageous to raise that question, they should enter into negociations with the Ontario government and place all the arrangements they propose to make before Mr. Whitney, and endeavour in conjunction with him (if his government has jurisdiction) or in conjunction with the federal government (if this government has jurisdiction) complete arrangements without at this stage entering into a discussion as to which government has jurisdiction. The matter is in good hands when the international waterways commission has charge of it ; they have given a great deal of attention to the question, and I trust that such conclusions may be arrived at as shall be satisfactory to this House and to the country.

Mr. A. A. WRIGHT (Renfrew). As president of the Canadian Electrical Association I thank the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) for having brought this matter before the House and the government. It is high time that the Dominion government, as well as the government of Ontario and Quebec should take steps to guard and conserve these water powers which are becoming of such increasingly great value. It must be remembered however, that it is not very easy for any man to invest the amount of money necessary to develop a water power, and then, as one of the hon. gentlemen has suggested, that he should be put off with a lease of five years. Some people have no idea of what large capital it takes to prepare for the establishment of a plant, get a generator, and then put up a high tension wire to transmit the power to a distant point.

Who would ever dream of putting money into such a scheme and then have to give up his privilege at the end of five years ? It is high time the government should take these water powers into their consideration and see that none are sold or leased unless the party undertakes to develop them within reasonable time. Some basis should be established on which to compute prices to be charged for the sale of these powers. For a long time we did not realize the immense value we possessed in them. For a long time electricians were in doubt whether they would have single base or multiple generators to generate electricity, but all these problems have been thoroughly worked out and we can now have splendidly equipped lines through which we can send power almost an indefinite distance. The government should take this matter in hand and see that the water powers under their jurisdiction be sold in such a way that the public may get the full benefit.

Mr. MONK. Regarding the suggestion made by my hon. friend from Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) it did occur to me that it would be a great advantage if we could cover by the return I asked for, the assets of the provinces. I did not see, however, how I could properly include that within the scope of my motion. But I quite agree that the government could not render better service, at any rate to the province of Quebec, than to institute an investigation which would cover the water powers belonging to that province. There are a great many ways other than paying out money to a province in which this government can assist, and that is one. I think perhaps that at present the best way would be to make such a return as is available in the department and the government might institute further inquiry after it has put the House in possession of the information at hand. Just one word as regards jurisdiction. I think my hon. friend from Lanark (Mr. Haggart) is mistaken on that point. On most of these water powers we have jurisdiction. Our jurisdiction arises under the terms of section 91 of the British North America Act which gives the Dominion parliament exclusive control over navigation. That point arose in the case of the Chambly Electric Company. That company was incorporated by the Quebec Legislature, but when it came to develop power in the river Richelieu it found that dams and flumes and other constructions had to be erected in the river, which of course affected navigation. So the company had to come to Ottawa to obtain authority to make those structures. The same thing occurred in the case of the Lachine Hydraulic Works. That company had to come to this parliament to get authority to construct works in a navigable river. On that principle the Dominion government has granted leases for the exercise of water powers in the Ottawa. The moment you attempt to develop the power, you interfere with navigation, and come under the control of the Dominion parliament. Therefore on that point I think my hon. friend from Lanark (Mr. Haggart) is mistaken. We have large water powers in our canals. If hon. members will look at the last report of Railways and Canals, they will find that extensive water powers on our canals have been leased for the sum of $230,000 or $240,000, and yet last year a comparatively small portion of those rentals was collected. I am informend that were those water powers on our canals properly utilized, they would bring the government far greater revenue. But we have still greater water powers in our rivers and streams which, under the section of the Federal Act I have referred to, come within our legislative control.

Motion agreed to.

At six o'clock, the House took recess.

After Recess.

The House resumed at eight o'clock.

VETERANS OF FENIAN RAIDS.

Mr. F. D. MONK (Jacques Cartier) moved:

That it is desirable that the government of Canada should recognize in some substantial manner the services rendered during the Fenian raids of 1866 and 1870 by our Canadian volunteers.

He said : The object of this motion is to call the attention of the government to the advisability of settling now a matter that has been in abeyance for a considerable length of time and also if necessary, to test the opinion of the House as to the manner in which the matter should be settled. I may mention to the House that there are in Montreal and its immediate vicinity a considerable number of survivors of the volunteers who were in active service at the time of the Fenian raids of 1866 and 1870. How the claim which they now urge had its origin I do not exactly know nor do I think it is very important for the House to inquire into it. Within the last two or three years, being organized and having had occasion, I think upon invitation, several times to present their claims and make representations to the federal as well as to the provincial government, they are naturally anxious to see what solution is to be given to the matter, and I am sure members of this House who reside in Montreal, as well as myself, have on many occasions been interviewed by members of that very important and representative body of men who have sought for information as to what is going to be done. Three times, I believe, they have had occasion to interview the federal government since 1896. On one occasion they were referred to, or at any rate some doubt was expressed as to whether they should not make their representations to the local government. They did so ; they went in a deputation to Quebec and they were there referred to the government at Ottawa. I shall briefly state the nature of the steps they have taken at diverse times since 1896. In 1896 a large representation of the volunteer veterans of these two raids had occasion to come to Ottawa. They met, as representatives of the government, the right hon. the Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) and the hon. the Minister of Militia (Sir Frederick Borden). Speaking in answer to remarks that were made on that occasion by Major McMillan, Colonel Lyman, Major Harper and other members of the volunteer forces, among whom were Colonel Ibbottson and Senator Temple, the Prime Minister stated :

He would like to find a few facts about the subject under discussion so that he would have a basis to work upon. To begin with, he said, 'I would like to know about how many men were called out at that time, and if it is the desire of the present delegation that services of all the remaining veterans who took an active part and also in what way it is considered their services would best be recognized.'

In reply Major McMillan stated that at that time some 25,000 men were called out ; he considered fully a third are now dead (some of the members here stated that probably far more than that are now gone). Of course, the Major said, there were probably quite a number who would be satisfied simply with badges, but he understood the majority were strongly in favour of receiving a grant of land and a medal as volunteers who have taken part in more recent rebellions have been granted. It was also intended, he said, that all who signed for service should be remembered, as although they had not seen active service, it was only because they had not been called.

In making his reply Mr. Laurier stated that he fully appreciated the strength of the reason that all should be remembered and that nothing would give him greater pleasure than laying the claims of the veterans before his colleagues at the next parliament, as he regretted to say it was too late at present to bring it up at the present session.

A deputation, I think, interviewed the government since then but I have no account of what took place when their representations were laid before the government. I have been told that between 1896 and 1905 representations were made in a formal manner by duly authorized representatives of the corps of volunteers.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Just a year ago a deputation came here.

Mr. MONK. In May, 1905, a very large deputation, which members of the House will remember having seen here, a deputation representing the province of Quebec, the French speaking veterans, the Eastern Townships corps and some from the province of Ontario, were presented to the government by my friend from the St. Lawrence division of Montreal (Mr. Ames) and the member for Ottawa (Mr. Stewart) who also spoke upon that occasion. The Prime Minister is reported as follows :

Sir Wilfrid Laurier received much applause when he rose to reply. Two years ago he had been approached by a smaller deputation on a similar errand, but as the session was far advanced he had been unable to give them a definite answer. He had told them then he hoped to be in a better position next time they came to him. The members had evidently remembered his words, for they had now returned in largely increased numbers.

He could hardly claim to be a veteran as they had called him, for he had only been a volunteer in 1870. When the regiment he belonged to had been mustered the trouble was over.

To the victors, he said, belonged the spoils. was an expression most of them were familiar with. While the veterans had turned back the invaders in 1866 and 1870 there had been no spoils left. Thirty years after they come to ask from the country some recognition for their services, and he thought some appreciation should be shown. Their services then had saved the country from much humiliation, if not worse.

Had the invaders not been repelled at the border much misery would have been caused, although, of course, the country would not have been conquered.

What the veterans asked was not much. He could not give a definite answer himself to their request, but he could assure them that he and the ministers with him would be very pleased to report their request to the Privy Council.

The meeting closed with three cheers and a 'tiger' for Sir Wilfrid, called for by some enthusiastic veteran.

Last session, I had occasion, towards the close of the session, to refer to this matter. And my right hon. friend the Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) spoke as follows on that occasion, as reported in 'Hansard' of 1905, volume 4, page 6047 :

I think it is obvious to any one, and my hon. friend (Mr. Monk) will agree with me, that if the veterans of 1866 and 1870 have a claim against anybody, it is the Dominion government, although I do not say that the veterans, from their point of view, have not done well to address themselves to the provincial government. Mr. Gouin, the provincial premier, I do not think went further in his answer than to say that they should first of all address themselves to the Dominion government. This they have done, and the matter is now under consideration. But I must say, and my hon. friend will not be surprised, that up to this moment the government has had no time to take the matter in hand and give it the attention which it will require before we can come to a conclusion. The matter is under consideration, and without making any pledge, I will say that I will give an answer during the present session. When the answer will be given, I am sorry to say that I can give no indication today to my hon. friend, but certainly it will be given during the present session.

Now, as to the number of veterans, so far as the province of Quebec is concerned, as well as I can judge from information that I have carefully gathered, the number now in a position to receive any acknowledgment that the government might be pleased to give is, at most, 1,700. In Ontario the number is larger, but not so large as was stated in a certain newspaper a few days ago, which said that there were 40,000 claims. There were never more than 25,000 men called out. And, I believe it will be found that not more than 12,000 are living to-day, or, adding the number from the province of Quebec a total of 14,000 veterans at present living. The applications were made to the government, I find, in 1896 then in 1903 and then during the session of 1905.

As to the kind of acknowledgment to be given, undoubtedly that which has been talked about during these interviews, and probbably on that account is most mentioned amongst the veterans, is a grant of land. We have a very large territory still in the hands of the government which we are endeavouring to settle. It is most desirable that that territory should be settled as soon as possible and with the best sort of people. I do not think it would be possible to find better men to undertake the settlement of our great Northwest than these men. Objection has been taken on the ground that there are not only the veterans whose claim I am now urging, but also other deserving classes. Reference is made to the volunteers, who, in 1885 went up to the Northwest to put down the rebellion there. There were also those who saw active service during the Boer war in South Africa. And certainly, whatever may be the opinions one may hold as to the justice of that war, it must be agreed that these men shed great credit upon their country. But each class of these men are in a different position. The veterans to whom I am referring took up arms at a time of danger and responded to the call to defend their country. Those of 1885 who went to active service in order to quell internal trouble. And, of course, the men who went out to South Africa went under special circumstances, volunteered and went into a foreign country there to defend the British flag. As far as I am concerned if the government came to the conclusion that the claim I am advocating, the claim of this class of veterans is one which can be reasonably entertained, I would have no objection whatever that a similar favour should be extended to all those who in these moments of peril, and at the call of the authorities responded and worked bravely for the defence of their country or in vindictation of Britain's cause. I find that there is one thing in common amongst all these men—they are honourable Canadian citizens who have deserved well of their country, who have shed great credit upon their country, they are men to whom might well be confided under special circumstances which the government could determine, the excellent task of settling a couple of million acres of waste land in the Northwest.

If we turn to the report of the Department of the Interior, which shows how our territory in the Northwest is being settled, we find that at this moment those who are availing themselves of the extremely favourable conditions as to settlement are mostly foreigners. Whether the propaganda, the advertisement of the extreme advantage in settling our Northwest has been carried on more actively outside the country than inside, or whether it is that the inhabitants of the older provinces are satisfied with their lot and care little for going up to settle in the Northwest, the fact remains that these lands which we are disposing of are falling largely into the hands of foreign immigrants. Let me give the figures for 1902, 1903, and 1904, the last years of which we have complete returns. These are the three last years of which we have record. In 1902 we had 14,672 immigrants taking up homestead entries in the Northwest. In 1903 the whole of the homestead entries in the Northwest amounted to 31,383. The last year of which we have record is 1904, in which there were 26,073 homestead entries. Now, out of these 26,073 homesteaders, representing, according to this report for 1903-4, 68,381 souls ; what proportion was Canadian ? The larger number were from the province of Ontario, from which there were 3,692 homesteaders ; from the province of Quebec, only 429 ; from the province of Nova Scotia, 131; from New Brunswick, 102; from Prince Edward Island, 87 ; from Manitoba, 753 ; from the Northwest Territories, 493 ; from British Columbia, 69. So that the immense majority of those homestead entries during the years to which I am now referring, the last of which we have record, were made by foreigners coming in and taking up those lands. In fact out of 26,000, there were probably 22,000 foreigners who availed themselves of the favourable conditions which we offer to immigrants coming in and taking up our lands, getting land for nothing in the Northwest.

Now let us see for a moment how we stand with respect to the large vacant territory we have in the Northwest. I am advocating, not an absolutely free grant of land, perhaps, to these men ; but on account of their merits we should acknowledge their services, the fidelity with which they have performed their duties, and at the same time encourage the volunteer movement, which I think should be encouraged in this country. We may not all share the same ideas as to what is called vaguely militarism, but there is no doubt whatever that we require a strong volunteer force well organized, ready at any moment to give a good account of itself ; and in order to have that we should encourage in every way possible the volunteer movement. Well, up to now we have done absolutely nothing in the way of granting our waste lands on favourable conditions in the direction to which I am referring. We have granted in the Northwest Territories and Manitoba to railway companies, 56,000,000 acres—I am giving the figures approximately but correctly. Out of that grant the railway companies have earned 30,000,000 acres. Out of the lands we have at the disposal of homesteaders, 25,000,000 have been taken up. We are often under the impression, and that impression is very often expressed in words, that we have a limitless area of land. I think in this House two or three sessions ago, in answer to a question put to the Minister of the Interior, we were told that there were 100,000,000 acres still open for homesteaders. According to careful calculations made recently by my hon. friend from St. Antoine Division, Montreal, (Mr. Ames), who has gone into this matter with great care and who has visited the Northwest, we still have, of even numbered sections open to homesteading, only 12,000,000 acres, which, as matters are now proceeding, would probably give to men coming from Europe, immigrants not Canadian born but coming into the country from the continent of Europe or from the United States, probably 10,000,000, if not more, out of this 12,000,000 of acres remaining to be homesteaded. It will take at the present rate of immigration and under present conditions, if they are continued, a comparatively short time for the rest of that domain of some 12,000,000 acres to be taken up. It is calculated that even within three years this 12,000,000 acres, as things are proceeding now, will be taken up. Opinions may naturally differ as to the propriety or wisdom of allowing, as we have done in the past, such a very large and to a certain extent indiscriminate immigration into Canada. The House is aware that the system which has been established here for years is directly opposed to what has invariably prevailed in the United States. The policies are totally different. We spend an immense amount of money in bringing immigrants into the country, we spend very large sums in advertising our country abroad. We certainly favour immigrants coming into the country by the treatment we extend them when they arrive here, more than we favour our own people. We pay bonuses to men who undertake to bring these immigrants into the country. In the United States an absolutely different policy prevails. A tax is charged to immigrants entering that country of $2 a head, which it is intended, I believe, probably to increase. We advertise in foreign countries. All printed advertisements in foreign countries to induce immigrants to come to the United States are strictly forbidden by law, and no bonus of any kind is paid for immigrants entering the United States. A far stricter surveillance than is exercised here is enforced there over immigrants entering the United States. In other words, their policy is to a certain extent to keep out immigrants, or at any rate, to scrutinize closely those who enter and to derive a revenue from them. Every year the United States derives from immigration an amount not only sufficient to cover the immense cost of the inspection of immigrants arriving there, but an amount which leaves a large surplus. Now that is a policy I believe in. I think it is time for us to change our system with regard to immigration and not to encourage indiscriminate immigration to Canada. But in the meantime, and whilst this Northwest country is being settled by such a large number of people the immense majority of whom come from foreign countries—last year I think there were 47,000 Americans coming in—I think we should endeavour to place in the midst of that population a sprinkling of our own people whose presence there could not but do an immense amount of good. Here is an occasion where that can be done, whilst at the same time we acknowledge the services of these men who have as volunteers done their duty to their country.

Scrip might be given to them, quarter sections might be given to them without conditions and they would do with them what they saw fit, or conditions might be imposed upon them whilst granting them each a quarter section which would enable them if they would not ensure their own presence on the lands to be settled—because most of them have reached an age when it is to a certain extent impossible for them to go themselves and settle these lands—to delegate the execution of the restrictions upon them for the settlement and for the final patenting of these lots to members of their own families. They might in that way be benefited, the settlement of some million and a half or two milion acres of land by our own people would be assured and you would create what I think is necessary—a warm interest among our own people in the settlement of these lands, you would give them an idea what these lands are worth and at the same time fulfil the object which I had in view when I gave notice of this motion and which is to acknowledge the services rendered by this large and influential class of people who represent our veteran volunteers. I think under all the circumstances they are at any rate entitled to a definite answer from the government at an earlier date. My right hon. friend (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) has delayed them for a considerable time. I think he will admit that. At the present moment we are anxious to know what the government has decided. These veterans have reached an age when expedition is necessary in the matter and on this account I trust the government will see fit to formulate as soon as possible its policy upon this important matter, and I trust also that the government will see fit upon the lines which I have briefly indicated to reward the services of these men who have done their duty to their country.

Hon. Sir FREDERICK BORDEN (Minister of Militia). Mr. Speaker, I am sure that every one in this House will agree with the hon. gentleman (Mr. Monk) who has moved this motion in all that he has said in praise of the work done by those men who went to the front so readily to protect the soil of this country against the invader. Those who are old enough to remember the conditions, which existed at that time will remember what excitement existed throughout eastern Canada. The conditions during the war between the north and the south had been such as on more than one occasion to cause very great fear of some peril, some clash of arms between Great Britain and the United States, something occurring which might be greatly to our detriment. Fortunately nothing of that kind occurred, but at the close of the war a band of marauders was organized which threatened to overrun this country. I imagine that the excited condition of the public mind was such that the danger was always, to some extent, magnified. I do not, however, think that it should or that it does in any way diminish the great credit which is due to those veterans who went to the front at that time. It may, however, be desirable at this late date, so long after these events, to refer very briefly indeed to the occurrences which actually took place at that time, and first I would like to refer to the number of men actually called out. I have taken some trouble to collect these statistics, and I find that in 1866, between March and June, something like from 20,000 to 25,000 men in the old provinces of Ontario and Quebec were called out and were under arms. I might remind the House at this point that this particular occurrence, the raid of 1866, took place more than a year before confederation, and I might also remind the House that what was going on in Ontario and Quebec was also going on elsewhere, and that precisely the same conditions existed in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and that relatively to the population of these provinces quite as many of the militia were called out as in the great provinces of Ontario and Quebec. While 20,000 to 25,000 men were under arms in the provinces of old Canada, there were probably fully 10,000 under arms in the provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. So I must remind my hon. friend at this point that whatever is to be done, if anything is to be done, for the volunteers of that time in Ontario and Quebec the same thing must be done for the volunteers who served similarly in the provinces of New Brunswich and Nova Scotia.

Mr. MONK. I was under the impression that there had not been any calling out of the militia in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. There was.

Mr. MONK. In 1866?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. In 1866. It was feared that the Fenians would seize the steamer plying between Portland and St. John, N.B.; in fact we had very reliable information that arrangements had been made to seize the boat at or near Eastport in the state of Maine and that it was intended to bring a regiment of Fenian soldiers to some point at the head of the Bay of Fundy, presumably the town of Windsor in Nova Scotia, and the whole of western Nova Scotia was under arms and ready for the attack. Similarly, on the border line between New Brunswick and the state of Maine, there were threatenings of invasion and all along that line the volunteers in New Brunswick were under arms. Now, I will refer to what took place in 1870. In 1870, 6,000 men were called out in April, and at the beginning of June 13,500 were under arms in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec; there being no alarm in the lower provinces the militia were not called out there. Now, as to what actually took place—these men were ready for action, but how many of them went to the front?

Mr. BERGERON. In what year ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. In both years; I will take 1866 first and 1870 afterwards. In 1866, at Ridgeway on the Niagara frontier on the 2nd of June there were: The Queens Own Rifles, 11 companies, the 13th Battalion, 6 companies, and two independent companies of rifles (the York and the Caledonia), making a total of 840 of all ranks. These were under the command of Lt.-Col. Booker the commanding officer of the 13th. The casualties of that force were 9 killed and 22 wounded.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. The 10th Royals were there.

Mr. BARKER. Is the minister speaking of Ridgeway ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Yes.

Mr. BARKER. And you say there were only 840 men.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Actually at the front. That is my information.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. Where were the 10th Royals and the G. G. B. G. ?

Mr. BARKER. The minister says he is speaking of the men actually at the front; there were thousands besides these. I was there myself, within a few miles.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I say there were 20,000 called out in 1866 in Ontario and Quebec, and that actually at the front and engaged, there were at Ridgeway a total of 840 of all ranks under Lt.-Col. Booker, and the casualties of that force were 9 killed and 22 wounded. At Fort Erie, on the same day, there were a detachment of the Welland Field Battery acting as infantry, and the Dunnville Naval Brigade totalling 75 of all ranks. They met the retiring Fenians and they had six men wounded besides losing 54 captured by the enemy. Besides the above mentioned, Col. Peacock had a column at New Germany not far off, consisting of 55 men of a battery of the Royal Artillery. 550 Regular Infantry and 765 militia infantry; and Col. Lowery had a column at Clifton consisting of a battery of the Royal Artillery, 340 Regular Infantry and 752 militia infantry. Neither of these bodies ever met the enemy. In 1870, on the 25th of May at Eccles Hill, in the county of Mississquoi, an invading force of 200 Fenians was driven back by 40 men of the 60th militia battalion and some 40 farmers; no casualties. On the 27th of the same month about 250 Fenians crossed the frontier in Huntingdon county and were met by a brigade under the command of Lt.-Col. Bagot of the 69th Regular regiment. consisting of 450 men of that regiment, 380 of the Montreal Garrison Artillery and Engineers, and 300 of the 50th Militia Battalion. The enemy was driven off without any loss to us. It will be observed that in all but one of these engagements the regular army which was then stationed in different parts of Canada, took part, and that the command in every case but one was held by an imperial officer.

Mr. BARKER. I do not think that is so.

Mr. BERGERON. Is the minister speaking of 1866 all the time ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. No. I particularize 1866 and 1870. I will send my hon. friend over this paper which I am quoting from. Now, I find that in all these engagements there were 21 wounded and 9 or 10 killed.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. For the two years ?

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Yes, and 49 were pensioned including widows and orphans. The wounded who survived were pensioned, and all those dependent on the men killed were pensioned and if living they are still receiving pensions. Therefore, the wounded and the families of those who were killed seem to have been fully provided for. Shortly after the present government came into office a deputation of the veterans of the Fenian Raid waited upon the government asking for some recognition of their services. I remember distinctly the wording of the many letters and petitions I received, and the whole tenor of the contention then was that no recognition whatever had been given for the services which had been rendered. or which these gentlemen were prepared to render had they been called upon to go to the front. They felt that having made sacrifices, or having been prepared to make sacrifices for their country, it was only fair that some recognition should be given—not a substantial recognition for they told me over and over again that was not what they asked for. What they wanted was something to show their countrymen that the country recognized they had done service which was worthy the presentation of a medal or a badge of some kind. It was one of my first official duties to obtain the sanction of Her late Majesty to the granting of a medal to these men and I understood for many years they were absolutely satisfied with that. It now seems they take a different view. If we are to agree that some further recognition should be given, I understand from my hon. friend (Mr. Monk) that he would be satisfied if these veterans were given homesteads in the Northwest, and I infer from the whole line of his argument that they would actually transfer themselves from the east and settle in the west.

Mr. MONK. I said that I thought that was an impossible condition on account of the age of these men and the fact that their lives were irrevocably fixed in the east. But, I suggested the placing of a condition on the grant by which it would not be made the subject of speculation as so many of these grants have been.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. The argument of my hon. friend (Mr. Monk) was that the present policy of settling the Northwest was erroneous and contrasted unfavourably with the policy of the United States, and he pointed out that we were seeking by advertisement and bonus to induce settlers from the four corners of the earth, that it would be much better to get settlers within our own country, and that it would be a good thing to leaven the lump so to speak by sending some of these men out there. So, I think it was fair for me to assume that if his proposal meant anything, it meant that these men should actually go there and settle or you might amend that by allowing members of their families to settle in their place. But I question the policy of issuing scrip to these men and allowing them the privilege of selling it to some of these foreigners or undesirable settlers which hon. gentlemen opposite occasionally wax so indignant over. It seems to me we must guard very carefully the condition on which we would grant homesteads. The only point of view from which the proposition could be favourably considered would be that these men might be given a special advantage over others in the selection of homesteads, but only on condition that they became actual settlers. Admitting for a moment that that view could be accepted would my hon. friend limit the granting of homesteads to the 2,000 or less who remain in his own province. I understood one of his arguments to be that after all this will not be such a serious matter because there were less than 2,000 of these men living in the province of Quebec and some 10,000 or 12,000 in Ontario. Well, what about the other 15,000 or 20,000 who answered the call to arms and were ready to go to the front and who have since passed away? Are their children not to be recognized? Are we to limit this recognition entirely to the men now living and restrict it to the provinces of Ontario and Quebec? Why not include Nova Scotia and New Brunswick? It seems to me that the question is surrounded with some difficulties and that when our friends, the veterans of that time, come to reflect upon the whole situation, they will be inclined to withdraw this claim. Surely we are not to establish a precedent that whenever this country is threatened by invasion, such as that of 1866, or whenever a rebellion has to be quelled, our volunteers shall demand payment in land or money. That does not accord with my ideas of true patriotism and genuine loyalty, and I do not think that the veterans, upon second thoughts, will feel at all grateful to any one who presents that view. But since my hon. friend has presented his argument and suggested that homesteads bona fide should be offered to these men who might be willing to go to the Northwest as actual settlers, I am inclined to the opinion that the government would be ready to take that matter into consideration.

Mr. MONK. They have that privilege now.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. That is what my hon. friend suggested and I am merely giving him all he asks. I said a moment ago that some advantages might be given in the way of offering them special privileges to settle in certain communities or in certain favoured quarters. I have no right however to speak for the Minister of the Interior, but I would be disposed to go that far and to see whether anything could be done to meet their views in that respect. But to admit for a moment that every time the militia is called out, they should be entitled to extraordinary privileges and grants of land, I do not think it is in accord with our ideas of British loyalty at all. I would ask my hon. friend whether, having presented his case, he would not withdraw his motion.

Mr. SAM. BARKER (Hamilton). I did not intend or expect to say a word on this occasion, any more than I have done on other occasions when this matter was before the House; but when an hon. gentleman tells this House that he does not think it is in accord with British loyalty that the men who were out in 1866 or 1870 should expect any recognition from the government, I differ from him. I was out in 1866 and 1870 and have never yet asked the slightest recognition from the government, either of the province in which I live, or this government. I have never even asked for a medal; but for years past, the members of the old regiment to which I belonged, the 7th of London, have corresponded with me, and I can tell the hon. gentleman that these men whether they live in Toronto or Quebec or Michigan or Illinois, have a warm heart for their old friends and the old times and do feel a little sore that they have not met with the recognition they think they deserve. The hon. gentleman speaks of the conditions in those days. I do not think he knows what the conditions of the volunteers then were. I was an officer of the 7th regiment in 1866, and I recollect being called out in March of that year and drilling daily until June, and I can recollect the last day, I think it was of May, after our evening meal, when we went down to the drill shed and the whole regiment was there drilling, Col Hawley, commander of the 60th rifles, came in and without a word of warning told us that we were to go to the front that night. I recollect well that when he, a few minutes later, said he would send only one-half the regiment and when the officers went to their companies and said only one-half would go, there was almost a riot because no man would stay behind. And when Col. Hawley was told what the trouble was, he laughingly, like a soldier, said I will take the responsibility of sending you all. We were there that night in our ordinary summer uniform, with our rifles and accoutrements, without an overcoat or knapsack, without the most ordinary equipment of a soldier, and within an hour after that we were on board freight box cars on the way to meet the Fenians who were then reported to have crossed Niagara river. That was the condition of things in those days. We had not then all the fine equipment which our militia have to-day. Those men from Friday night until Monday night had not a particle of food, except an early breakfast at Paris on Saturday morning, and from that time until they got home again on Monday evening, no food was served to them.

The only regiments at Ridgeway that got any food, so far as I could see, were those who relied on a carload of food sent by their own fellow citizens. Had it not been for that they would have starved like the rest of us. That, Sir, was the condition of things in those days. The 7th Regiment left London in the evening of Friday. Not a man was able to go to his home to tell his family, his relations or his friends that he had been ordered to the front. The only man I knew of who was able to get away was my fellow officer who got a minute or two to go down to tell the girl to whom he was about to be married that he was ordered to the frontier. I do not think there was another man in the regiment who got even that much. I was an officer, and I, with the men of my company, had to get into a freight car that had been loaded with lime; in that box car we travelled to Paris and you can imagine the condition we were in when we arrived there. We arrived in Port Colborne in the evening, just in time to see the 13th and the other men who had fought at Ridgeway returning. We lay on the ground all night and at 2 o'clock we saw the dead bodies to which you referred, brought in in farm wagons. At 4 o'clock we started for Ridgeway and about 11 o'clock we walked over the ground where the battle had been fought and over the bodies of dead Fenians. On Sunday evening we arrived at the village of Ridgeway and we slept there that night. The next morning the men got up still without food. The regulars who were there, the battery of artillery and Col. Lowrie's regiment had obtained food; they had it with them, but we got none. I saw volunteers get the bone of a ham bake it over a fire and attempt to gnaw a bit of food off the bone to prevent themselves from starving. We returned on Monday and at Hamilton I recollect buying one sandwich which was the first food I had had since we left home. We got back to Hamilton black with mud from walking through swamps in Welland.

That is what those men did, they did not consider whether they were to get medals or land in the west or in Ontario. They went out to do their duty to their country and that, I think, is loyalty. These men were loyal and as I say for years back I have received letters from old men in the company in which I was an officer reminding me of those old days. Only recently I have had letters from Westmount, near Montreal, from an old sergeant of the company, recalling the old circumstances and wondering whether any recognition would be given by the country for what was done in those days. I have received letters from Canadians in Michigan to the same effect. Not long since, I received a letter from a fellow-officer on his death bed, asking me for a certificate recognizing what he had done when he was out. That is what those men think and feel and that is what the hon. gentleman tells us he does not think is loyalty. I say those men were loyal, they thought of nothing but loyalty, they sought nothing. Not a man of them would give a snap of his fingers for the sordid recognition; their hearts are warm towards their country, not only from the province in which they live but from the whole Dominion.

I do not want to speak warmly on this; I speak myself as one who was out, but I have never asked for a medal; I suppose I was entitled to one; I have certainly never asked one for myself. I am not seeking any land in the west, but I know I have the same feeling as these men have, and I tell you there are hundreds and hundreds of men in the States to-day who would gladly receive the slightest recognition, the slightest acknowledgement by Canada, that what they did in Canada is remembered.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. Let me remind my hon. friend that 5,250 medals have been issued to the militia of that time.

Mr. BARKER. Possibly. I think the gentleman said that some 25,000 men turned out from the upper provinces and 10,000 from the lower provinces; that would mean that about one in seven received some recognition. I know that a great many of these men did not receive any recognition. As I say, I never asked for it, I did not ask for it for the simple reason that I was not actually under fire. I arrived a few hours too late and therefore, as far as I was concerned, I did not want a medal and did not ask for it, but when an hon. gentleman says there were 5,000 who received medals there must be over 5,000 more who have received none. It is not a question now whether a man has already received something; it is the simple question, as I understand, whether there is anybody whatever who ought to receive some recognition or further recognition. I do not suppose any of these men would like to measure it in dollars or cents or acres, but I do think it is a mistake for any government, for any people, for any country, to try and measure with golden scales the recognition of patriotism. Surely such things ought to be generously done, surely we should not be stingy about our recognition. The late government of Ontario granted to a lot of these men acres and acres away up in New Ontario where there may be minerals but where they say they sow the wheat with shot-guns and I am told that the present government have to say they have not the land, even, to give them and are actually asking these men to take $50 as a recompense instead. Well, that is a noble thing for this Canada of ours to do. It is all very well to say: Shall we do this every time there is a rebellion, or a disturbance? There will probably never be such an occasion again as that of 1866. These men, if they did not fight, went out expecting to fight and were ready to fight. The men of the Queen's Own and of the 13th were under fire; some of them were killed and others wounded. Men of other regiments were equally ready to fight; but what they feel is that it is not whether they were hurt, it is not whether they suffered, but whether this country is willing to acknowledge that they were ready and willing to do their duty. That is the question and I do think it would be a grateful thing and a courteous thing for this country not to draw the line too narrowly but just to say to every one of these men: We are grateful to you, we acknowledge that you were good and loyal Canadians at the time you were called upon to do your duty and we desire to show we have not forgotten.

I shall give another instance. After Ridgeway there was another threat of invasion, and when the O'Neil party were threatening to cross the frontier, the very men who turned out in 1866, most of whom had been obliged to leave the ranks and go on with their ordinary employment, again volunteered. A brother officer and I had been obliged to leave our regiment; we could not retain our commissions and attend to the duties we were called upon to perform, but when the men were again called out that officer and myself again joined, this time, as privates, and went to the front and I recollect we were both promoted to be sergeants. I mention that as an example of what the men were doing in those days. It was not a question of philandering about in uniform; the men were willing to go out and do their duty and I think that should not be forgotten. An hon. gentleman says the danger was magnified. I do not know to what he refers, whether he thinks that the Fenian invasion across the Niagara River was magnified. If he does he was very much mistaken. It is quite true that the opposition to it was not very well handled. Mistakes were made undoubtedly, but undoubtedly the resistance that was shown the invaders stopped a very much larger invasion and if the volunteers had not turned out on that occasion as they did, no man can measure what the invasion might have been. I was on the spot, I could see across the Niagara River, and the hon. gentleman is very much mistaken if he thinks those who were prepared to take part in that invasion were confined to the few thousand men who actually crossed.

There were many, many thousands ready to follow them if they saw the slightest chance of success. The whole matter depended upon the prompt turning out of the Canadian volunteers. The fact that they were out so quickly, however unready they really were, was what stopped the invasion. I positively deny that there is any reason for saying that the invasion or the danger of it was magnified.

Mr. ARTHUR N. WORTHINGTON (Sherbrooke). After the complete and effective speech of the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) there seems little left to say on the subject of the Fenian Raid veterans. However, representing as I do a constituency in which there are many Fenian Raid veterans—probably as many in proportion to the population as in any other county of the Dominion, I desire to unite with others in urging upon the government the consideration of these claims. The eastern townships of the province of Quebec, which are populated with descendants of United Empire Loyalists, and which border on the United States, naturally furnished many volunteers in 1886 and 1870, who turned out, at great inconvenience, loss of time and discomfort, to go to the front and repel these invasions. It is true, as the Minister of Militia has said that very few came in contact with the enemy, but all were willing and anxious to do so. Although not a member of the militia force at that time, I well remember when several regiments marched into Sherbrooke. I doubt that the Minister of Militia to-day could transport his regiments with greater celerity. The 58th battalion largely Scotch and coming from Megantic and Compton marched into Sherbrooke, a distance of from 60 to 80 miles, forty-eight hours after they had received the order to turn out. These regiments were quartered for several weeks in the drill shed, or patrolled the frontier and garrisoned Stanstead and other places along the border. And now, after almost forty years, these men are simply asking, as a reward for their loyalty, the same recognition that the province of Ontario gave its citizen soldiers of 1886 and 1870, and also those who returned from South Africa. In both of these cases scrip was given by the Ontario government. The citizen soldiers of Quebec, one might infer by the treatment meeted out to them, had a discount placed upon their loyalty.

We have free lands for Galicians, Doukhobors and every other class of immigrant that can be laid down here from Europe. Surely we should have something for our citizen soldiers. We have thousands of acres of land per mile to be given as subsidies to railways. Take the number of Fenian Raid veterans in the district of St. Francis, say about 600 and take two small railroads that are under construction in the eastern townships that have about 20 miles of construction, and the subsidy given to either of these roads 2,000 to 4,000 acres per mile, would more than furnish the land grants for all the Fenian Raid veterans in the Eastern Townships. These veterans have visited the capital several times in large delegations. I understand from correspondence I have had, that the District of St. Francis Fenian Raid Veteran's Association purpose, during this session, to make another pilgrimage to the capital. I think it would be wise to anticipate their wishes and give them this grant ; otherwise these deputations will become annual pilgrimages. If anything is to be done for these veterans it ought to be done now. After about twenty or thirty years it was decided by the war office to grant a medal for the services of these veterans, and now, almost forty years afterwards we are considering the question of giving them a land grant. If there is anything coming to the militiaman in Canada it should come, not in forty years after the services he has rendered, but it should come while he is militant here on earth.

Mr. J. W. DANIEL (St. John). I wish to endorse as strongly as I can the resolution of the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk). Before leaving home for the present session of parliament, my colleague (Mr. Stockton) in the representation of St. John constituency and I were waited upon by the representatives of this veterans' association and asked to promote, so far as we could, the application being made to this government for some recognition of their services. The Minister of Militia (Sir Frederick Borden) is perfectly correct, of course, in his statement that the men who were called out at the time of the Fenian Invasion were not confined to the provinces of Upper and Lower Canada. In my own constituency, the infantry corps were ordered down to the border as near as they could go, to Eastport where the Fenians were collected. They were sent down to St. Andrews, but how long they remained there I do not know. In addition to these the artillery were called out and probably other corps whose designation I am not familiar with. I hold, with others who have spoken, that we cannot treat our volunteers too well. We never know when we may want their services, and it appears to me that if they get the idea that after they have done what is wanted of them, that the country is niggardly and will not take a favourable view of what they have done, I think it can hardly have a good effect upon the young men of the country so far as volunteering is concerned. I am sorry that my colleague is absent. The deputation to which I referred placed in his hands certain documents in connection with the claim they are to make on the government. As my colleague is unfortunately absent, these papers are not available for me to-night, and therefore I am not in a position to place the claims of these veterans of New Brunswick before the House in such a manner as I should like to do. At the same time I must endorse in every particular the resolution of the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk), and I am sure we are all pleased at the able manner in which he has brought to the attention of the House the claims of these veterans. It may be true that some of these veterans did not lose much. But that was not their fault. They did their duty well and bravely, and, had they been under fire, I am sure they would have done the same.

Mr. R. N. WALSH (Huntingdon). I desire to say just a word in favour of the resolution. I represent a county which took an active part in resisting the Fenian invasion, and I can say that the men who volunteered at that time did so with no other object than the defence of their country, without any idea whatever that they might get a grant in the future. They suffered hardships, and I think I can say without fear of contradiction that it was owing to their services the invasion was so speedily and successfully resisted. These men were amongst the very best citizens of our county. Not only did they give their time on that occasion, but I would draw the attention of the minister to this fact, that in that county I do not think the government were at any expense in billeting the soldiers, because they were billeted and fed by the families of the men who had volunteered to go to the front, and that without any remuneration. I can say that the same spirit still exists there, and if a similar trouble were to arise to-morrow, they would be as ready to volunteer as they were then, and without looking for any pay.

Mr. SAMUEL HUGHES (Victoria). I was in hopes that the First Minister or the Minister of War from the Eastern Townships would have had a few words to say on this matter. But they both keep silence. Attention has been drawn to the fact that one of these invasions took place in 1866 prior to confederation. If the Minister of Militia will turn to the Auditor General's Report, G-17, he will find there military pensions for Upper Canada, 4 pensioners still on the list, who are in receipt of pay from this government for services in the militia of old Upper Canada anterior to confederation. Therefore there is a precedent for this government paying them. The minister is correct in stating that the militia were called out from New Brunswick and Nova Scotia as well as from the old provinces of Upper and Lower Canada in 1866; and undoubtedly the men who turned out in defence of their country at that time were equally deserving whether they went to the frontier, or whether they were defending the frontier under fire, or whether they were working on the lines of communication and sending forward ammunition and supplies to the troops at the front. The men who were under fire were under fire possibly once in a year, but the men who are working on railway lines, and working 24 hours a day perhaps, are just as deserving as the men who were at the front. So the minister's point about those who were under fire at Ridgeway I think was hardly well taken. There is no question however but in 1870, and that is the time to which the motion of my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier applies, for days along the Quebec frontier men were in active service in resisting the invasion. Permit me again to correct the minister in his statement placing the number at only 200 at Eccles Hill, and only 250 who crossed the border at Missisquoi. I think his figures are entirely inaccurate. It may be something like the reports we frequently heard after an engagement in South Africa of the proverbial two Boers that were killed and four wounded. At Eccles Hill there were several thousand men across the border in the United States, and had it not been for the prompt action of our young Canadian militia on that occasion, the whole country would have been overrun by these renegades from the United States. On that occasion these boys turned out, not for the love of money, not with desire to shoot down the invader, but for the defence of their country. They had no desire to shed blood unless it was necessary for the purpose of ridding the country of the invaders. The response was the same in 1866 as in 1870. Small boys in 1866 turned out and small boys in 1870 turned out with the old men in order to do their share in driving out the enemy. The minister referred to the fact that the danger was magnified, and that only a few of the enemy crossed the border. Well, we remember that Great Britain waged a war in Abysinnia in order to release one man who had been taken captive. Great Britain sent a whole army over the mountains into that country to vindicate the honour of her empire. These men received recognition, received medals, and those who were injured received pensions. I do not think the minister was justified in stating that the danger was magnified in 1866 or 1870. Had the spirit that was generally understood in the United States prevailed in Canada, that we were ready to receive these gentry with open arms when they came into this country, and to haul down the flag of England and hoist the Stars and Stripes with the Fenian flag, had that spirit been dominant in Canada there is no doubt the invasion would have attained much greater proportions. But when they found so many loyal men on the border ready to meet them, each armed with a rifle, and fairly good shots, it had an effective tendency to cool the ardour of these renegades from across the line. Reference has been made to the men who were living in the United States at that time and who volunteered for service in defence of Canada. From Chicago alone upwards of 5,000 Canadian boys volunteered to return to Canada if necessary to serve their Queen and country.

I do not know what line the government propose taking in recognizing the services of the volunteers. But I will take an opportunity of making a suggestion, and I do it in all kindness, it is this: In 1866 and 1870 the men who turned out had no desire whatever to get their pay, although they looked to getting some recognition. Many served at that time without pay. I know that for a positive fact. I had the honour to serve a couple of weeks myself, and I do not think a man of that company ever sent in an account for pay. Now I suggest this to the First Minister and to the Minister of Militia as a solution of the matter. There are millions of acres of land in the Northwest, so we are told. The Minister of the Interior has told us before the Agricultural Committee again and again about the vast areas of magnificent farming lands in the Peace River Valley. I believe the colonization companies are going in there. Now, without desiring to use any opprobrious term, I must say that we have many settlers coming from Europe that are not as desirable as our own boys from Quebec, Ontario, and the maritime provinces. I therefore suggest that the government set apart in the Peace River valley a tract of land for the use of these men, and that scrip be issued in lieu thereof; or if the man goes up and settles on it he will get 320 acres, but if he does not settle on it, he will only get 160 acres. Some system of that kind should be adopted in order to encourage these men to go there and settle. There is another point. When our boys returned from South Africa the question was mooted of giving scrip to them ; and on one occasion when it was proposed to give scrip to the boys who had gone to the front and volunteered their services to fight in the two Fenian raids, the First Minister met the suggestion with the argument that the land in the Northwest would possibly belong to the provinces, that the time was drawing near when these two provinces would have to be set up, and that then the people there would probably get control of the land. The First Minister cannot make that argument to-day. He has taken particular pains, or somebody who has engineered him, that the two provinces should have no land to give to any one in the Northwest, but it is all under the control of the Federal government. Therefore the First Minister can no longer argue that these men will have to look to the provinces the same as they did in Ontario. He has it in his power to-day to set apart an area of that land in the Northwest, in the Peace River valley. Let it be limited in some way to settlement in that locality ; and I am satisfied that he will find some of those men who served years ago, and their sons, who would be glad to go up there and become good citizens in our great Northwest instead of possibly drifting away to some other land. I have great pleasure in supporting the motion of the hon. member for Jacques Cartier.

Rt. Hon. SIR WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). There can be but one sentiment as to the gratitude of this country to those who, at the call of duty, turned out and left their homes to repel invasion, both in 1866 and 1870. But, Sir, if the arguments which were heard here to-day upon this motion and in support of it, from the initial speech of the hon. member for Jacques Cartier, are well founded, it is a sad commentary upon the previous governments of Canada. We cannot forget that nearly forty years have elapsed since these men were called upon for the first time to serve their country and to repel invasion. The first call was in 1866, the second call was in 1870 and up to the year 1896 I am not aware —I speak under correction—that any effort was made on behalf of the volunteers of that day to have any more recognition than the recognition which was given to them immediately after these unfortunate events.

Mr. SAM HUGHES. Efforts were made. I would draw my right hon. friend's attention to the fact that Col. McLennan of Glengarry, long anterior to 1896, took a very active interest in this matter.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. What was the result ?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The Conservative party went out of power and the Liberals came in; we never had an opportunity of doing anything.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I think the Conservative party had an opportunity of doing everything they wanted to do. The first time I was approached on this question as the head of the government was in 1896 and it was repeated to me on that occasion that the volunteers had received no recognition whatever. Well, we looked into the matter and we found that immediately after the invasion in 1870 the government and parliament of that day unanimously did what is done generally under such circumstances by all civilized nations; they took upon themselves the support of the widows and orphans of those who had lost their lives and they gave a pension to those who had been maimed and wounded in the discharge of their duty. The government of that time did not think it advisable to do more than recognize, as is generally done, the services of those who had lost their lives or who had been maimed or lost their limbs. Now, we are asked to give more, we are asked to go beyond that and to give recognition to these men. My hon. friend from Hamilton (Mr. Barker) says that these men do not ask for a substantial recognition but that all they ask is that they simply be told that their country has not forgotten their services. But these are not the words of the motion. The words of the motion are not at all what my hon. friend from Hamilton has in his mind. My hon. friend from Hamilton says that these men want to know that their country has not forgotten them, that even at this late day the country is prepared to do something for them in the way of recognition. I thought we had discharged that duty when in 1898 they got that medal which the soldier generally covets, the medal or badge which he can carry on his breast and which shows to every one of his fellow citizens that he has suffered for his country. But, if I understand the motion of my hon. friend from Jaques Cartier, what he wants is not simply the cross, the medal, the honor but what he wants is to have substantial recognition. Here are the words of the motion :

> It is desirable that the government of Canada should recognize in some substantial manner the services rendered during the Fenian raids of 1866 and 1870, by our Canadian volunteers.

It has been my privilege on two or three different occasions to receive a deputation from the veterans and upon every one of these occasions I have asked : What is it you want, gentlemen ? What is the particular thing you have in your mind ? Generally the answer is : We want to have a lot of land in the Northwest Territories. Well, sir, the policy of this government has been that the land should be given to the tiller of the soil, that every acre of land, every quarter section, should go to him who is prepared to make upon it a home for himself. That has been the policy of the government invariably for the last ten years. My hon. friend from Jacques Cartier, with great ingenuity, sometimes dances on one foot and then on another. He says: Why are you not doing for these veterans what you do for strangers, what you do for foreigners? Why, if you give a lot of land to foreigners should you not give it to these veterans? There is no objection in so far as I am concerned. But, my hon. friend anticipates the answer and he says that these men are too old to settle upon this land. I can imagine that they are as forty years have elapsed since that time. I dare say that the men who fought at Ridgeway and Pigeon Hill are not prepared to go out and become settlers. But, while I say that, I do not say it by way of disparagement or by way of demurrer to the claim presented on behalf of these men. If these veterans of 1866 want a lot of land they are welcome to it and the government will take care that our officers show them the best tracts of land and that they have the pick of the country to select from. But, I dare say these veterans will say to us: We could fight in 1866, we could fight in 1870, but you cannot expect that we can take up a pick and shovel and perform the arduous duties of a settler to-day. I can appreciate that answer and I will say this that if there is a man who cannot take his homestead we are ready to give it to him. If he has a son who is ready to fulfil the conditions of settlement the government will be only too glad to give him that recognition. But, if it is intended that these lands should be given to the veterans simply for the purpose of selling them to the foreigner—to the despised foreigner who has been mentioned by my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier, that is a thing, which, I think, would deserve a little consideration. Whenever we have been approached upon this subject I have asked the veterans: Can you give us some substantial scheme whereby we can meet your wishes consistently with our policy that the land should be given to the tiller of the soil? Like my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier I prefer that we should have settlers from our own country rather than from foreign countries, but if our policy has been—and I think it is good policy—to have settlers from wherever they may come, the only thing we want is that they should be honest, that they should have strong arms and that they should be prepared to become citizens of Canada and not only to become citizens but to become owners and tillers of the soil, to raise crops and to contribute to the revenue and general prosperity of the country. My hon. friend says that we should leaven this mass with our own blood. I quite agree with him and if he can suggest any way in which that can be accomplished the government is quite prepared to meet him in any substantial plan in that direction. But, I deprecate the spirit in which the thing has been brought up.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER.

My hon. friend referred in the early part of his speech—I was not present, but I came in as he concluded—to a word of mine in which I had promised to give him an answer during last session and he said that I did not give him an answer, because, perhaps, the matter had not again been brought up. If it had been brought to my attention I would have been only too glad to have spoken of it again. The government has no wish to repel this idea. This motion comes very late after a lapse of 40 years. but yet it is not too late and if a plan can be devised by which we can leaven the mass with our own blood and find homesteads for our veterans or their descendants and children, the government would be prepared to consider the question and do its share towards recognizing the men who risked their lives for the defence of the country upon that very important occasion. Time moves and evidently the ideas we have in 1906 are not the same as they were in 1866 or in 1870, the government of the day thought they were discharging their full duty to the veterans and the volunteers, to those who had risked their lives, by simply providing for the widow and the orphans of him who was no more and providing as well a pension to him who had been disabled. But, we have moved since that time and now we are told that we should recognize in some substantial manner the services of these men. As I have said the government will be prepared to consider any resolution of that kind. But, if it be insisted that the veterans should receive land simply to speculate in it, that is a thing that requires further consideration from the government before we agree to it.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The right hon. gentleman referred to the alleged inaction of a previous government, but he began by telling us that the men who served in 1866 and 1870 had not made any claim up to the time his government came into power. I do not know how that may be, but according to his own statement, and the statement of the Minister of Militia, the matter has been under the consideration of the government for the past ten years, since 1896, when a delegation waited on the government at Ottawa. I refer the right hon. gentleman to his own words during last session.

> The matter is under consideration and without making any pledge I will say that I will give an answer during the present session.

The right hon. gentleman used exactly the same words with regard to the consideration of the tariff in the coming November session, and I trust we shall have a better fulfilment of his pledge in that respect than of his pledge which I have just read, for I do not recollect that any answer has ever been given.

It is a little difficult to appreciate the attitude either of the Minister of Militia or of the Prime Minister. The Minister of Militia deprecated very much that these men should make any claim ; he was inclined to reflect upon their loyalty, but in the end he was disposed to consider that the government might give them recognition of some kind ; at least to the extent of making a change in the conditions under which they might acquire homesteads in the Northwest. He tells us that there are too many of them to recognize. The suggestion is that there are 14,000 or 15,000, or perhaps 20,000, who might still make claims under this resolution, and yet he tells us that only 5,250 medals were distributed.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. 15,250.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The hon. gentleman said as plainly as could be that 5,000 medals were distributed.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. 15,250.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If the minister said 15,000 the words became transmogrified in some way so that when they reached us they were 5,000. I understood 5,000 as distinctly as I ever understood anything, and my attention was so attracted to it that I took the figures down. Of course if it should be 15,000, that is much more in accordance with the figures to which the hon. gentleman has just referred. It is no discredit to these men that they are now asking consideration of their claims. As has been stated by my hon. friend from Hamilton (Mr. Barker), they did not go out with the idea of receiving any reward in the future ; they went to the front in no sordid spirit ; they went out in a loyal and generous spirit to do their duty to their country. Surely that does not prevent us from giving consideration to the very great services they rendered to their country at that time.

The right hon. the Prime Minister has referred to the great difficulty of giving these men any substantial recognition by means of a grant of land in the Northwest, and he professes a very earnest desire that these lands should be reserved for the tillers of the soil. It is a pity the same fervent desire to that end was not present in the mind of the government when they gave 250,000 acres to the Saskatchewan Valley Land Co. at $1 an acre, which have since been disposed of at about $8 an acre. It also seems strange that the government did not have that same fervent desire that there should be no speculation in these lands, and that they should go to the tillers of the soil when they have from time to time made these issues of scrip which notoriously have been used for purposes of speculation and for no other purpose. It seems to me a remarkable thing that the government should be paying £1 a head for immigrants from the continent of Europe to settle on these lands in the Northwest, and should not feel themselves able to make the slightest relaxation in the conditions of settlement in favour of the men who forty years ago were willing to lay down their lives for the safety of the country.

My hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) brought forward this motion in a very commendable spirit. I listened attentively to his remarks and there was not one partisan or offensive word uttered by him. He urged the claims of the veterans moderately and fairly, and if the Prime Minister can do no better than to base an argument on the spirit in which my hon. friend (Mr. Monk) put forward his motion, then the Prime Minister has a very weak case indeed. If the number of claimants be as great as suggested by the Minister of Militia, then the government should consider how large a recognition it would be proper for this country to give under the circumstances. Some substantial recognition would seem to be not out of place. I venture to say that during the last ten years lands in the Northwest have been exploited in the interest of friends of this administration which would suffice ten times over to give to each one of these claimants more than he at any time has asked for or desired. The language of the Prime Minister and of the Minister of Militia in answer to the motion of my hon. friend (Mr. Monk), is, I believe, not such as to commend itself to the good sense and generous spirit of this House. My hon friend (Mr. Monk) does not seek to dictate to the government what form the recognition of the services of these veterans shall take. The Minister of Militia has in effect said that there should be some substantial recognition, and the Prime Minister himself has virtually, although vaguely, made the same admission. Under these circumstances it would be very proper for the government to accept the motion and at the earliest possible moment see that the claims of these men should receive substantial recognition, although that recognition may in the end prove to be of a very moderate character.

Mr. MONK. I would point out to the Minister of Militia that my motion is broad enough to cover the volunteers from the maritime provinces as well as the volunteers from Ontario and Quebec. Naturally, my attention has not been directed to the events of 1866 and 1870 in the maritime provinces, but my motion of course includes the volunteers from those provinces. The Minister of Militia did me the justice to say that I brought the subject to the attention of the House in a fair spirit. I do not think the Prime Minister was justified from anything I had said in deprecating the manner in which this motion has been brought forward. I introduced nothing whatever connected with politics, and in moving the motion I simply had the desire that the question should be fairly discussed and submitted to the House apart altogether from any political consideration. Both the Minister of Militia and the Prime Minister have admitted that if it were possible to modify the conditions of settlement which are applicable to immigrants coming from foreign countries in favour of the Fenian raid veterans, then if a plan were not before the government the government would accept anything reasonable.

That is in fact admitting that this motion is well founded. The desirability and justice of recognizing the services of our volunteers was admitted by the province of Ontario as far back as 1901. I have just been shown by my hon. friend from Peel (Mr. Blain) a statute of the provincial legislature of Ontario, chapter six of I Edward VII, in which provision is made, not only for the volunteers of 1866 and 1870, but other classes of our militiamen to whom allusion has been made in this discussion. Something on the lines of this statute might very well be adopted by this parliament. I am tempted to test the feeling of the House upon this point. It is not a party matter and if the government is well disposed—as it seems to be from the remarks which fell from the Minister of Militia and the First Minister—to meet these men—not by establishing a charge upon our revenue, not in making any sacrifice to any extent—but by giving them certain facilities with regard to grants of land in the Northwest which are not extended to the first comer, why not frankly say so by acceding to this motion and then let the government debate with those veterans what the conditions should be. I would suggest to my hon. friend the Minister of Militia that he would do well to allow the motion to pass.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. I would suggest to my hon. friend that he should accede to my request and withdraw his motion. Then if some action be not taken, he will have an opportunity of bringing it up later on. He admits that he has received satisfactory assurances from the First Minister and myself, and it seems to me that it would be better that he should withdraw his motion, for the present at any rate, and give the government an opportunity to see what can be done.

Mr. J. G. H. BERGERON (Beauharnois). I would urge my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) not to agree to the suggestion of the hon. the Minister of Militia. My hon. friend deserves our congratulations for having brought this question before the House and for presenting it in so forcible and conclusive a manner. It is rather difficult to understand why the right hon. the First Minister should have seen fit to cavil at the manner in which my hon. friend submitted his motion. It is all the more difficult to understand when the government practically admit the justice of my hon. friend's claim. It seems to me that, under the circumstances, the reply of the government is simply adding insult to injury. Since 1896 these veterans have waited on my right hon. friend on three different occasions and tried to obtain from him an answer favourable to their demand. Yet, all my right hon. friend could urge today as a reason why he should not consent to this motion was that he had never heard before 1896 of any such demand on the part of the veterans. Well, the reason is not difficult to find. When hon. gentlemen opposite were in opposition, they were urging these men to elect them to office by promising that once in power they would see that their services were duly recognized. Only elect us, they said, and we will give you all you can expect. But when these men, relying on these assurances, came to the right hon. gentleman in 1896, he put them off with soft words and sunny ways and led them to believe that although something could not be done then, it would surely be done later. In 1903 they came back but again they were put off by a somewhat similar plea, but were assured that the government had their interests well in mind and would certainly do something. Again in 1905 they returned and were given the same treatment. And as nothing has yet been done, my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) took the proper course of bringing the whole subject before parliament. If the government will not take the proper course of action with regard to these men, it is time for the House of Commons to speak its mind, and that is why I hope my hon. friend will not withdraw his motion. Let parliament speak. It is now a long time since those men went to the front—in 1866 and 1870. I regret that something has not yet been done for them, and if any blame attaches to the late government I am not going to make any apology in its behalf. What I say is that something should be done. As has been said this evening, we must have a militia force, and that being the case our young men who join that force should be made to feel that the Canadian people appreciate their services. I was surprised to hear the Minister of Militia draw distinctions between those who really went to the front and faced the fire and those who were awaiting orders to go. That is the first time I have heard such a distinction made. I have always been under the impression that whenever a regiment is called under arms, the moment the men leave their barracks, they are on active service. But if the dilatory policy of the government is to be continued, all the men who answered the roll call in those days and shouldered the rifle to meet the enemy will be in their graves before we think fit to offer any reward for their services. A good deal has been said about the pensions paid by the United States government to the soldiers who fought in the civil war. Well, in my opinion there was nothing which made the United States so favourably known throughout the world as those pensions. They showed that the American people recognized and appreciated the services of the men who fought for what they considered the best interests of their country. It must be very gratifying to our patriotism to know that those men who went to the front in 1866 and 1870 were not animated by any hope of reward. We have had some of them speaking in this House to-day and they all say that any such idea was absent from the minds of the militiamen of those days. Well, we are proud of their patriotism, and we have no doubt that if our country required the services of its militia and volunteers to-morrow, we would have a repetition of what occurred in those days. But we, the representatives of the people, will not be doing our duty if we do not take this opportunity of showing our appreciation of the services of those men. My hon. friend the Minister of Militia and Defence did not expect this discussion to take the turn it has done. At first he said, in the reply to the motion of my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) that he would not do anything. But when he and his friends saw what was going to happen, the right hon. gentleman said that they might do something but would not because the request came from the opposition. Then the Minister of Militia asked my hon. friend to withdraw his motion and promised that he would then do something. I say, Mr. Speaker, that this is trifling with the common sense of the House. If I understood well to-night, it was shown that in 1866 our men where under arms for about three months. Well, many of us know what dangers are run in camp life. I have here a letter written in 1866 regarding a mutiny among the troops who were stationed at Cornwall. It shows the dangers to which are exposed those who join the militia or who are ready to go to the front. It is dated Montreal, August 4, 1866, and is addressed to Capt. Wall, and signed, John S. McDougall. It reads :

> I am happy to be able to inform you that the Major General in his remarks on the late Court of Inquiry at Cornwall mentioned your conduct on the evening of the fray, with special commendation.
>
> Believe me,
> Yours very truly,
> J. S. McDOUGALL.
>
> Capt. Wall,
> Hochelaga Regiment.

Sir, there might have been loss of life, we cannot appreciate what might have happened if this man had not exposed his life to quell that trouble. What inducement is there to-day to any man in the same position, whether captain or private, to do anything of the sort in view of the manner in which parliament or the government of the country was willing to treat them.

My hon. friend said a moment ago that the land in the west was to be given only to those who were willing to till it immediately. Why could not the government give these men, no matter whether they are prepared to go on it or not, say, 50 acres of land, if they are not prepared to give 160 acres, anything at all in the way of recognizing their services. I do not wish to detain the House any longer ; I simply wish to say I am sorry my right hon. friend (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) has come to this conclusion after promising these men, for the last ten years, that something would be done.

Mr. H. J. LOGAN (Cumberland). I wish to say only a word to congratulate the member for Beauharnois (Mr. Bergeron), after sitting in this House for 18 years under the Conservative rule on at last awakening from that Rip Van Winkle sleep and coming to realize the dangers of camp life and the great necessity of giving substantial recognition to the men who fought in 1866 and 1870. My hon. friend makes some kind of an argument, which I can scarcely understand, as to why there was not something done in all those 18 years for those veterans of 1866 and 1870. But, Mr. Speaker, I think it would occur to any one, after what we have seen here to-night, that the motion at this time is a political dodge. I feel very much in sympathy with the idea of giving substantial recognition to the men who live and to the heirs of those who have died who fought at this time or who went to the front ; and I might have been inclined to have voted in favour of the motion as put before the House if we had not had the assurance given by the Minister of Militia and the Prime Minister, in reference to considering certain substantial recognition of what these men have done for their country. But it does seem to me that that should have been accepted by the member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) and I only hope he may accept it yet as a promise from this government. The Minister of Militia has gone further and said : Accept this from us now and if we do not do something bring it up later on. Now, I am prepared, if this matter comes to a vote, to vote against the motion.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, oh.

Mr. LOGAN. It is hard for hon. gentlemen opposite to understand a man having any independence in this House. It is difficult for gentlemen who sat on this side for 18 years, including the man whose patriotism bubbles over, the member for Victoria, to think that a man may be independent in this House ; but I want to say that in the discussion of this motion I have had the greatest sympathy with the subject under consideration, and I am bound to say that up to the time the assurance was given by the Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) and the Minister of Militia (Sir Frederick Borden) that my intention was to vote for the motion. But, when

I find that the motion is simply here as a political dodge I propose, myself, to vote against it if it goes to a vote. We believe the government will do its duty, with this promise which has been given by the Prime Minister and the Minister of Militia. There is not a man in this House or in the country who does not desire to recognize the patriotism of the men who fought to defend the soil of Canada in 1866 and 1870. They are just as much entitled to recognition as the men who have gone forth in times of excitement to fight the battles of the empire. These men who stood up to fight for the soil of Canada were prepared to do, and I believe, did their duty.

We have had the experiences of some of them related to-night by the senior member for Hamilton (Mr. Barker) showing the harrowing circumstances under which they laboured. We sympathize with them and I believe that some recognition should be given them. The Prime Minister and the Minister of Militia have promised that some recognition will be given, and under these circumstances I think it is our duty on this side of the House to vote against the motion made by the member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) which seems to be—I do not know if he intended it to be such—but it has been so juggled around the House that it is now merely a political dodge to try and catch votes.

Hon. GEO. E. FOSTER (North Toronto). I would like to interpose a question for the purpose of acquiring information. There we have one of the stalwarts of the House, a man noted for his independence, scarcely a session has passed but he has shown that——

Mr. LOGAN. I have never swallowed any principles.

Mr. FOSTER. Never had any to swallow—shown that independence by tamely supporting the government in every one of its projects, no matter what it was. Now such a stalwart as that gets up and declares in the face of the Speaker that up to five or ten minutes ago he had vowed in his heart that he would vote for the motion of the member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk); he believed in it, he sympathized with the men of 1866 and the men of 1870. His soul rose to their sacrifices and breathed the very spirit of their loyal devotion. He would vote for this motion. He looked at the Prime Minister and he looked at the martial figure of the Minister of Militia. He said, I will fight them both, I will vote for this resolution against them. Then up rose the First Minister and he made a pledge which satisfied the member for Cumberland (Mr. Logan). He made a pledge for substantial recognition that satisfied the member for Cumberland (Mr. Logan). Now, in the name of common sense what was the pledge that the Prime Minister gave? You all heard him on that side of the House; we all listened to him with strained ears on this side. Will any man get up and translate into English just the pledge the Prime Minister made? Can you, Mr. Speaker? Can any one? I cannot, and I am a pretty good interpreter of English, spoken as nicely as my right hon. friend always speaks it, and if I can make anything of that noble pledge of his, so definite, so substantial, that it satisfied the martial soul of the member for Cumberland (Mr. Logan) it was this, that he would not mind giving these men just about as good a chance of getting 160 acres as he gave to the Buckowinian, the Galician, and the man from Syria or Mesopotamia. The lands there are free, any man can get them to-day for his $10 application fee. Did the Prime Minister offer anything more in the case of these veterans? Will any one rise and say that he did? If he did I did not hear him; I doubt if any one on either side heard him. What then was the pledge which satisfied the burning ardour for the old-time veterans in the soul of the member for Cumberland?

The independent member for Cumberland, who, for ten or twelve years has satisfied the yearnings of a stern, sturdy independence by voting for everything that these gentlemen ever asked him to vote for. And the Minister of Militia too—what did he promise of a substantial kind? He said to the hon. member for Jacques-Cartier (Mr. Monk): 'If you will please withdraw this, I think you can rest assured that we will—give something? No he did not say that but—'we will consider the question.' And he said: 'If we do not act as you think we ought to, you can bring it up again.' Thank you for nothing. I suppose it is open to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Monk) to bring it up at any time he chooses to do so. But where were those definite pledges which so suddenly cooled the ardour of the hon. member for Cumberland, and transformed him from a fighting major who was going to stand by the veterans of 1866 and 1870 for substantial recognition, to an interpreter of all sorts of political partisanship as furnishing the motives of the hon. member for Jacques Cartier. Strange things we see in parliament at times This is one of them.

Mr. W. P. TELFORD (North Grey). As a veteran of 1866 and a representative of that class, I rise to thank most heartily the hon. members of the opposition for the beautiful things they have said about us, our courage, devotion to country, loyalty and all that sort of things. But, I have my doubts, as to the sincerity of it all. After waiting for eighteen years to receive something from hon. gentlemen opposite when in power and receiving nothing, I would rather trust to the somewhat indefinite promises of my hon. friend the Minister of Militia (Sir Frederick Borden) and the Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) then to the belated good intentions of hon. gentlemen opposite.

Mr. ROBERT STEWART (Ottawa). I am not surprised to hear the expression of opinion of the hon. member for North Grey (Mr. Telford) as to the sincerity of members of the opposition on this particular question. For my part I might perhaps have preferred to give a silent vote on this question but for the remarks of the hon. member for Beauharnois (Mr. Bergeron). What particularly attracted my attention and what I wish to protest against was the picture drawn of the veterans of 1866 and 1870 coming to the government almost cap in hand in 1902, 1903, 1904 and again in 1905. And when I protest against this picture of these veterans of 1866 and 1870, I do it as one of those veterans. Rather than take such a position, I would much sooner take the position of the hon. member for Hamilton (Mr. Barker). He has told us that he made no claim for special recognition for his services to the country for having turned out in its defence in 1866 and 1870. He has even gone so far as to say he never applied for a medal. I think that the veterans of 1866 and 1870 are not such as were pictured by the hon. member for Beauharnois. They are grateful to the present government for the recognition thus far given to them, so much greater than that afforded to them under the regime of the hon. gentlemen opposite. These veterans came to the government when they assumed office in 1896 but the picture of their coming given by the hon. member for Beauharnois——

Mr. BERGERON. I think the hon. gentleman is making some mistake. I never spoke about the veterans of 1866 and 1870 coming here as beggars, coming hat in hand. I did not say anything of that kind.

Mr. STEWART. It is true that the hon. gentleman did not use that language. But I think that the picture in the mind of every hon. member, as impressed by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Bergeron) was much like that which I have described. So far as the veterans of 1870 are concerned, they have no such spirit. They came to the present government and received recognition that had been refused to them by the previous administration. I think that the veterans of 1866 and 1870 are more like the hon. ber for Hamilton, and they do not care so much about the recognition in the way of something substantial as they want a recognition from the government of the services that they rendered.

House divided on the motion of Mr. Monk:

YEAS:

Messieurs.

Alcorn,	Lancaster,
Ames,	Lefurgey,
Avery,	Lennox,
Barker,	Léonard,
Bergeron,	McLean (Queen's, P.E.I),
Blain,	Martin (Queen's, P.E.I),
Borden (Carleton),	Monk,
Brabazon,	Morin,
Broder,	Paquet,
Chisholm (Huron),	Reid (Grenville),
Christie,	Roche (Marquette),
Clements,	Schaffner,
Crocket,	Staples,
Daniel,	Taylor,
Elson,	Walsh,
Foster,	Wilson (Lennox & Addington)
Henderson,	Worthington,
Herron,	Wright (Muskoka)—40.
Hughes (Victoria),
Ingram,
Jackson (Elgin),
Lake,

NAYS:

Messieurs.

Archambault,	Laurier (Sir Wilfrid),
Aylesworth,	Lavergne,
Beauparlant,	(Drum. & Arth.),
Black,	Lavergne
Borden (Sir Frederick),	(Montmagny),
Bourassa,	LeBlanc,
Bourbonnais,	Logan,
Brodeur,	Loggie,
Bruneau,	Lovell,
Bureau,	Macdonald,
Burrows,	Maclean (Lunenburg),
Caldwell,	Macpherson,
Calvert,	McColl,
Campbell,	McCraney,
Carney,	McIntyre,
Carrier,	McKenzie,
Carvell,	McLennan,
Cash,	Marcile (Bagot),
Chisholm (Antigonish),	Marcil (Bonaventure),
Clarke,	Martin (Wellington),
Copp,	Mayrand,
Cyr,	Meigs,
Delisle,	Oliver,
Demers,	Parmelee,
Derbyshire,	Paterson,
Devlin,	Parent,
Dubeau,	Pickup,
Ethier,	Proulx,
Finlay,	Ratz,
Finlayson,	Reid (Restigouche),
Fisher,	Rivet,
Fortier,	Roche (Halifax),
Galliher,	Ross (Rimouski),
Gauvreau,	Ross (Yale-Cariboo),
Geoffrion,	Sinclair,
Girard,	Smith (Nanaimo),
Gladu,	Smith (Oxford),
Greenway,	Stewart,
Hall,	Talbot (Bellechasse),
Harty,	Telford,
Hughes, (King's, P.E.I.),	Templeman,
Jackson (Selkirk),	Tobin,
Johnston,	Turgeon,
Kennedy,	Verville,
Lapointe,	Watson,
	Wright (Renfrew),
	Zimmerman.—90.

Messieurs.

PAIRS :

Ministerial :	Opposition :
Beland,	Perley,
Belcourt,	MacLaren,
Bickerdike,	Seagram,
Bole,	McCarthy (Calgary),
Boyer,	Ganong,
Brown,	Lewis,
Conmee,	Armstrong,
Costigan,	Haggart,
Crawford,	Clare,
Dugas,	Maclean (York, S),
Dyment,	Boyce,
Emmerson,	Pringle,
Fielding,	White,
Fitzpatrick,	Sproule,
German,	Wilmot,
Gordon,	Ward,
Grant,	Bennett,
Guthrie,	Cochrane,
Hyman,	Osler,
Knowles,	Bland,
Laurence,	Stockton,
Laurier (L'Assomption);	Kemp,
Law,	Barr,
Lemieux,	Tisdale,
McCarthy (Simcoe),	Northrup,
McCool,	Porter,
Miller,	Fowler,
Pardee,	Bristol,
Schell (Glengarry),	Smith (Wentworth),
Schell (Oxford),	Gunn,
Sifton,	Forget,
Sloan,	Lalor,
Turriff,	Cockshutt,
Wilson (Russell),	Macdonell,
Jackson (Selkirk),	Jackson (Elgin),

Motion negatived.

HOG PLAGUE IN KENT COUNTY, ONT.

Mr. HERBERT H. CLEMENTS (West Kent) moved :

For copies of all correspondence pertaining to complaints received by the government protesting against quarantine from hog plague in Kent County, Ont.

He said : I desire, in making this motion, to protest in the interest of the farmers of the county of Kent against the unjust, unfair and unreasonable quarantine regulations which exist in that riding at the present time. The farmers of that county are always ready to assist the Minister of Agriculture in doing what is right and proper, but I think they are justified in protesting against the unjust regulations that have been carried out there the last few years. Four or five years ago the swine plague broke out in that riding, and ever since then we have had in that riding a horde of government officials feeding on the fat of the land. I object to that state of things on my own behalf, and on behalf of the breeders in that county. Under the present regulations our swine breeders who have gone to great expense in bringing their herds to that state of perfection which they have now reached are unnecessarily harassed. In answer to questions put upon the order paper the other day, the Minister of Agriculture said there was only one township in that county in which there had been any swine plague for the last year or two. Now, we complain that these inspectors, or veterinary surgeons, are getting salaries from the government to inspect the swine in that county and in townships where there has been none of this disease for the last two or three years. If there is no disease, it seems to me that the breeders who have gone to such large expense in perfecting their herds should be allowed the privilege of showing their herds at the different agricultural fairs that are held throughout the province of Ontario during the last year. I know that requests were made to the minister to allow them to do so which were refused. At this time there are hundreds and thousands of hogs being shipped from that county to different pork packing establishments throughout the province and throughout the Dominion. If I did not fear to take up too much time of the House, I could cite many cases of farmers who have suffered injustice under the present regulations. A great many government officials have been sent up to that riding and have been living off the government, and getting splendid salaries, and their expenses paid for looking after a swine plague that does not exist. I say it is wrong from start to finish. I want to congratulate Mr. Rutherford, the veterinary surgeon of the Dominion, who, I think is a very efficient officer, but I say that the Minister of Agriculture has not been properly informed, or if he has, then he is greatly to blame for allowing the regulations to be enacted and enforced that prevail in that county for the last two years.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I contend in the first place that we have had no hog cholera to any extent. I doubt if we have ever had one case of genuine hog cholera. There has been a swine plague which I think could have been cured if the expert veterinary surgeons sent there by the government had done their duty. As I stated in the House last year when speaking on this question, the only remedy ever offered was a shot gun, and the regulations were carried out to such a nonsensical point that the farmers in that district were greatly irritated. They were compelled almost by force to submit to restrictions enforced by the officials who had charge in that district. When this swine plague broke out in several places in that district, it was only right and proper that the government should take some action to investigate it and to prevent the disease spreading. Now, Sir, I claim that there ought to have been some remedy applied, or some precaution used, to save the immense number of hogs that were slaughtered unnecessarily in that riding, and if some action had been taken or some remedy adopted to cure the disease, then no very serious complaint could have been made. But these men were sent there at princely salaries, and it seemed their only object was to slaughter every hog they possibly could without offering any reasonable remedy for curing the disease. Let me tell you how they proceeded. For instance, a farmer might have say 50 hogs upon his farm, 25 hogs upon the front of his farm and the balance in the middle at one of his other barns, and these hogs were allowed to run side by side with his neighbours' hogs. If one of the flock happened to die the farmers were always ready to carry out the law as laid down by the government. I want to say that our farmers in the district of Kent reported the disease promptly to the inspectors, who went out and inspected their herds, and the result was that they had every hog slaughtered upon their farms, both the well and the sick.

What I claim is that there should have been some precaution taken to save the immense herds of hogs slaughtered unnecessarily. When these hogs were killed the farmers were compelled to burry them 9 feet deep according to the regulations laid down by the government, they were compelled to cover them with lime and they were compelled to whitewash practically all buildings near which these swine had been running. They were compelled to go out of the raising of hogs for one year and at the end of the year, under the restrictions, they were allowed to go back to that industry again. Fifty per cent of the farmers throughout my district had suffered from the iniquitous regulations which were laid down by the department. The result was that when a farmer, after having had the first dose, got back into the raising of hogs again, if one of the hogs was taken sick, he was not so honest in running to notify the inspector to come out and kill the second herd without any reason whatever. I want to say that in hundreds of cases throughout that riding farmers who had experienced the first dose did not report their sick hogs a second time and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred they possibly lost one or two hogs out of their herds. The balance got well, and were good marketable swine and the raisers were able to realize the profit on them which they had expected. On the other hand, in the first case, their hogs were slaughtered. The owners were compelled to wait a year for about half the value of these hogs that were slaughtered. I believe that the compensation has since been increased to some extent. There was a horde of officials in that riding last year and the season before. I want to congratulate the hon. Minister of Agriculture on having got rid of a few of them, this information having been given to me in answer to a question this session, but I notice that some of the high salaried officials are still in the riding. I contend that the local veterinary surgeons in my district are the most capable men to attend the wants of the government and of the farmers in that district and I object to these high salaried men who have been there and who, I believe, have been killing these hogs more with the idea of saving their own positions, of keeping them in the positions which they have occupied for a number of years and in which they have been living in a princely way than to prevent the spread of disease. After these farmers had been treated in the way they had, in some cases, they did not report cases of sickness amongst their herds and the result was that there was nothing for these fellows to do. The inspectors were there to look after the disease called hog plague or hog cholera. When the cholera was not existing there and when there were no cases reported these gentlemen were appointed as hog inspectors. Their duties, as I understand it, were to inspect each and every carload of hogs shipped from that district to the different factories in the effort to prevent the disease from spreading. At least, I presume that was the object of the Minister of Agriculture. I contended in this House last session that this procedure was wrong, that there should have been a heavy fine imposed upon these factories for reselling any light weight hogs shipped to them. It would have saved the government the princely salaries they are paying to these gentlemen and it would have allowed the farmers in this district to have sold their hogs either thin or fat to any buyer if they desired to do so. But, when these regulations were put into force the farmer was placed in this position: Suppose that he had twenty nice, fat swine for sale and eight or ten swine that weighed from 120 to 140 pounds that were not as heavy or as good as the other; if a buyer went into his yard he would be totally innocent of the fact and he would sell to the buyer all the hogs he had for a stated sum taking the thin and the fat together. The result was that when the farmer took these hogs to the place for shipment he was confronted by these men who were appointed as hog inspectors and he was allowed to ship his good hogs while he was compelled to take back home the thin hogs. It was a very great detriment to the farmer, whereas, if a fine had been imposed upon the factories the same result would have been accomplished as that which the government were trying to attain and the farmer would not have been put in an unfavourable position. Now, I want to read a letter which I received from a very prominent swine breeder of my district, from the Woodburn stock farm. I think I can mention this farm as being one of the most prominent breeding firms in my riding. I do not know what the politics of the writer of this letter are, but I can voice his sentiments because I have heard them so frequently expressed by the principal breeders of my riding. He says:

Dear sir, I write you regarding the hog cholera regulations which are very improperly in force in the township of Howard at the present time.

There was supposed to be swine plague in only two places in this township in November, 1904. The inspectors at the time deemed it unnecessary to quarantine the township as the cases were light ones and they did not spread any. For some reason they put this quarantine on in May, 1902. If it was going to be put on at all it should have most certainly been on in November, 1904. Six months had elapsed after the last case before the iniquitous regulations were forced on us. That in itself is expressly against the law. The truth of the whole matter is that the local inspectors and the district inspector are making a nice fat living out of it and there will always be hog cholera here if the inspectors have their way. There never was one single case in this township. The regulations in this township were put on to please some shippers here and for that purpose only and I know whereof I speak. A firm of hog dealers, of Ridgetown, were buying hogs west of here and also at Ridgetown. They frequently finished or completed their carloads here ; that is, bringing a part of car from a quarantine district to be finished here, and unless this township was quarantined also they could not do so. The quarantine followed. We have lost $500 or $600 already by these regulations. It has taken many years and also a great amount of money to get our business to its present status and we do not want to be forced out of it, and we will soon if these regulations are imposed. We, as breeders, would be the last ones to object to proper regulations to prevent swine disease when needed, but when they are put on to make a few dollars for the local vets. and to please the whim of some shipper. it is then we object.

In conclusion, I voice the opinion of the farmers and breeders of this township when I say these obnoxious regulations should be removed at once.

Far too much is left to these local inspectors. There should be some way of inquiring into their methods.

That is the sentiment of one swine breeder in that district. If time would permit I could cite hundreds of just such cases as that. This is not the first time this matter has been called to the attention of the Minister of Agriculture, because on several occasions since last session the breeders of that district have asked him to remove this iniquitous quarantine system. I trust that the hon. gentleman will now give his attention to the matter. I understand that a great many of those who wanted to show their swine at the Guelph fair were not permitted to send the animals to Guelph, so that the owners have suffered great hardship in this respect. I can tell the minister that these herds have never had any disease, and if the inspectors have any knowledge of their profession, they should have been able to reject any hogs that were diseased, if there were any to be found, and allow the sound animals to be exhibited. In reply to a question put by me the other day, the minister stated that only in Chatham township was there any disease during the past year. In the county of Kent our farmers depend largely on the raising of hogs for a means of livelihood, and these iniquitous regulations have tended to greatly injure their industry. There is not a farmer in my district who would not readily assent to any fair regulation for the public good if there was a necessity for it, but they do object to the present regulations and to the manner in which they have been inforced. I have always contended that the disease came from the American side, and I have on many occasions protested against American hogs being allowed into the Canadian market. I congratulate the minister for having abolished the bonding privileges and preserving for the Canadian raiser of hogs the Canadian market, as the American farmers have always had their market preserved for them. At a convention held in my riding a short time ago, at which the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Hyman) was present, a resolution was passed eulogizing the Minister of Agriculture for the splendid act he accomplished in putting a stop to the bonding privilege. I am willing to give credit to the minister in that regard, but it is a question whether he deserves a great deal of credit after all, inasmuch as it took him ten years to find out what would benefit the farmers of this country. And if the abolition of the bonding privilege was a benefit to the farmers of Canada who are engaged in the production of hogs, the minister should remember that there are still a great number of other agricultural products which might be benefited if a similar policy were adopted in respect to them. I have never seen the Minister of Agriculture do any farming myself, but I understand he is a practical farmer, and, if that be so, and if his farming is not done altogether by pencil and paper, he must realize the embarassing position in which the hog raisers of the county of Kent are placed by these restrictions and quarantine regulations, especially in view of the fact that the disease has greatly abated and that in a great many townships of the riding there has not been any disease for the past two years. It seems to me that the minister should withdraw the high salaried officials he has in that riding and leave it to the veterinary surgeons of the district who are more competent to carry out the quarantine laws then the men who are sent there merely to get large salaries.

Hon. SYDNEY FISHER (Minister of Agriculture). I shall be very glad to adopt the motion of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clements) and to give him all the information he asks for with regard to this subject. I do not know that my hon. friend (Mr. Clements) need complain very much of the gathering in his county which congratulated me, because he himself has congratulated me just now, and therefore he is in accord with the convention in endorsing the action of the government in shutting off the importation of American hogs for slaughter in our packing houses. With reference to the officers of the department who are dealing with the hog cholera in Kent county, I was sorry to hear my hon. friend (Mr. Clements) allude to these gentlemen as officials who live on the fat of the land and on princely salaries, as if they were not earning their salaries and as if they were not doing beneficial work. If the hon. gentleman will refer to Hansard he will find that in reply to his question a few days ago I stated that these princely salaries amount to from $250 to $300 a year, and for veterinary surgeons, scientifically trained professional men who do good work for the country that is not very high pay.

Mr. CLEMENTS. These are not the gentlemen I referred to at all.

Mr. FISHER. There is only one gentleman, Dr. Perdue who has a salary of $1,400 a year, and to Dr. Perdue more than to any man in that country is due the fact, that while four or five years ago we were paying $25,000 and $30,000 a year compensation for hogs slaughtered in consequence of disease, for the last fiscal year we have spent less than $1,000. The disease is practically stamped out, and if we have attained that end it is due to Dr. Perdue and those associated with him who have a thorough grasp of the situation and know how to deal with it. The salary paid this man of $1,400 a year is money as well spent as any that is spent in the interests of the country. My hon. friend spoke of Dr. Rutherford as a highly skilled professional man and complimented him on his work. No man deserves praise more. But what has been done with regard to the hog cholera in Kent county has been done wholly on the advice of Dr. Rutherford. He did not think it wise in the interests of the farmers of Kent county themselves and the hog owners of the rest of Canada to raise that quarantine which my hon. friend is complaining of. A few years ago when Dr. Rutherford took hold of this matter, there were thousands of hogs slaughtered all through Ontario and thousands died on the farmers' hands for which the farmers got no compensation. In one year we paid as much as $30,000 compensation for hogs slaughtered, and then we were only paying one-quarter and one-third the value whereas now we are paying two-thirds. Yet this year up to the present we have spent less than a thousand dollars. This surely ought to show that the manner we have been dealing with this subject has been evidently successful. My hon. friend complained that certain individual breeders in that county were not allowed to send their hogs to exhibition. Well, the very last place in whose favour I would allow the quarantine to be broken would be an exhibition. At these exhibitions the best animals are collected for show purposes, and to allow for a moment the slightest danger of contagion among these animals would be nothing short of criminal. My hon. friend spoke of the fat stock show at Guelph. He knows that at that show the very best hogs from all over Canada are brought together—animals for breeding purposes, as well as for showing, fat animals which are going to be slaughtered as well as those which are. If we were to allow any suspicion of taint or contagious disease to be introduced into the building at Guelph, we would be open to the gravest censure. My hon. friend has also spoken about a cure for hog cholera. I regret to say that we have not got a cure. A number of quack nostrums are talked about and some are advertised in the agricultural journals, but so far the veterinary profession have declared there is no cure. That is why animals, when affected with the disease, are slaughtered. Even animals which have come in contact with them, have to be slaughtered. My hon. friend says that the disease is not hog cholera but swine plague or something else. I cannot give an opinion of my own on that point. I only know that the best veterinary authorities say it is hog cholera. If my hon. friend wants to set his opinion against the best professional advice and knowledge, I cannot help it.

Mr. CLEMENTS. The greatest objection I have is that they have been slaughtering unnecessarily in the riding and the disease is not hog cholera. One-tenth of those slaughtered had not the complaint.

Mr. FISHER. No hog has been slaughtered by the order of any of my officials unless he declared positively it was affected with hog cholera. And no animal has been slaughtered in consequence of contact, unless it has been in direct contact with the animal slaughtered or which dies of hog cholera. Lots of hogs have been slaughtered which did not show symptoms of the disease but they were slaughtered because they had come in contact with other animals which had the disease. Until we slaughtered the animal that came in contact with those affected, we were never able to succeed in reducing the disease. But since we are slaughtering, not only the animals which show the disease but those which have come in contact with them, we have been able to stamp the disease out. If today there is but little disease, it is because we have been strictly carrying out the policy inaugurated by Dr. Rutherford, and the results show the value of that policy.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I would like to ask the hon. minister what excuse he has to offer for quarantining the township of Howard, where the disease never existed. Yet that township has been quarantined for the benefit of the individual inspector there. Personally speaking I think the minister could raise the quarantine in that whole county without any danger whatever. So far as the inspectors are concerned they have never offered any excuse at all or any remedy. There have been hundreds of cases in that county where the animals had the disease the second time and the farmers knew that if the inspector was aware of these second cases he would have the herds killed. But the farmers would simply kill the hog affected and the balance got all right.

ADJOURNMENT—INQUIRY FOR REPORTS, &c.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I would like to remind the Prime Minister that he was to have laid upon the table of the House, from day to day, a report of the evidence taken before the insurance commission. I do not know whether that has been overlooked or not.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I will call the attention of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Fitzpatrick) to it.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I would like also to ask the Prime Minister whether or not tenders have been awarded for the two sections of the National Transcontinental Railway that were advertised some time ago ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The time for submitting tenders expired about two weeks ago.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. On the 12th ?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. On the 12th, the tenders have not yet been awarded ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 11.20 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

TUESDAY, March 27, 1906.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

FIRST READINGS.

Bill (No. 49) respecting La Banque Provinciale du Canada.—Mr. Bergeron.

Bill (No 51) respecting a patent of Henry Luther Houk.—Mr. Campbell.

Bill (No. 52) to incorporate the United Empire Bank of Canada.—Mr. Belcourt.

Bill (No. 53) respecting the Crawford Bay and St. Mary's Railway Company.—Mr. Galliher.

Bill (No. 54) to incorporate the Pacific Marine Underwriters (Limited).—Mr. Macpherson.

PACIFIC BANK OF CANADA.

Hon. N. A. BELCOURT (Ottawa) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 50) respecting the Pacific Bank of Canada.

Mr. DAVID HENDERSON (Halton). I would like to ask the hon. member how many times this charter has been renewed already ?

Mr. BELCOURT. I am not in a position to say. I am not aware of its having been introduced before.

Mr. HENDERSON. It is a hardy annual.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

MONTREAL HARBOUR COMMISSION—STATUE OF HON. JOHN YOUNG.

Hon. L. P. BRODEUR (Minister of Marine and Fisheries) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 55) respecting the powers of the harbour commission of Montreal. He said : The purpose of this Bill is to empower the harbour commissioners of Montreal to contribute to the erection of a statue of Hon. John Young within the limits of the city of Montreal. Last year a Bill was introduced authorizing the harbour commissioners to expend the sum of $6,000 for the erection of this statue, but providing that the statue should be erected within the limits of the harbour of Montreal. It has since been found that no suitable place for such a statue was available within the harbour and the object of the present Bill is to provide that a statue may be erected within the limits of the city of Montreal.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Carleton). I would like to ask the minister whether or not the goverment have in contemplation the abolition of the Montreal Harbour Commission and the substitution of some other authority. I would also inquire whether or not it is true as alleged in the press, that the government or the Minister of Marine and Fisheries is responsible for the recent decision of the board to exclude the representatives of the public press from their deliberations. I understand that this step has recently been taken ; and it is alleged—with what truth I do not know—that it has been taken either at the instance or with the authority of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries or of the government.

Mr. BRODEUR. As to the first question, with regard to the reorganization of the harbour commission of Montreal, I may say that the matter is now engaging the attention of the government. As to the second question it is a matter entirely within the power of the harbour commission, and consequently the Minister of Marine and Fisheries had nothing to do with the decision of the board.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. That is not quite an answer to my question. Was this step taken at the instance of the minister or with his approval ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I was never officially consulted with regard to it.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. 'Officially.'

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

McLAREN'S CREEK, VICTORIA COUNTY, ONTARIO.

On the Orders of the Day being called :

Mr. SAM. HUGHES (Victoria and Haliburton). Mr. Speaker, I desire to draw the attention of the right hon. leader of the government (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) to a statement contained at page 617 of yesterday's Hansard in answer to a question relating to the construction of the roadway across McLaren's creek. The right hon. first minister stated that :

> An amount of $2,500 'contribution towards construction of a road across McLaren's Creek' was voted in the fiscal year 1905-6, and as the municipality has not done any work, no expenditure has been made.

The point I want to lay before the government is in reference to the statement, 'as the municipality has not done any work.' Let me point out what the circumstances in connection with this roadway are. Formerly, the creek had solid banks. In connection with the development of navigation in that district a dam was constructed across the river at Bobcaygeon which raised the water and flooded a considerable tract of country, so that the municipality, in constructing a roadway across this country would have been put to a great deal more expense by the action of the government than if the dam had never been erected. The matter was laid before the government some years ago and a sum was placed in the estimates to construct this roadway, or in other words, to place the municipality in about the same position as it would have been if the water had not been raised by the action of the government. It may be said that the provincial government constructed the dam. That is true but the Dominion government took over the dam and assumed all liability in connection with it.

Mr. FOSTER. What did the government do ?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. They took over the dam. The Tory government took over the dam and assumed all liabilities in connection with the matter. The municipality agreed to do all that a municipality could be expected to do when the roadway was placed in a position similar to that in which it had been previously to the raising of the water, that is when the approaches to the creek were completed on each side the municipality would construct the bridge. If the government would construct an embankment leading from each shore up to the old bank of the creek the municipality would put in the bridge. I merely wish to bring this to the attention of the government so that there will be no delay in going on with this very necessary work.

Hon. CHAS. S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works). I may say, Mr. Speaker, that the explanation given by my right hon. friend the leader of the government (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) was that which was handed to him by the Department of Railways and Canals in whose charge this matter is. I have no information nor do I think any member of the government has any information, but I promise that I will have the remarks of my hon. friend the member for Victoria and Haliburton (Mr. Sam. Hughes) brought to the attention of the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Emmerson) and he will be prepared to give him an answer.

SUPPLY—CONCURRENCE.

House concurred in certain resolutions reported from Committee of Supply.

WAYS AND MEANS—INTERIM SUPPLY BILL.

House went into committee of ways and means.

Hon. WM. PATERSON (Minister of Customs) moved :

> Resolved, that towards making good the supply granted to His Majesty on account of certain expenses of the public service for the financial year ending 30th June, 1906, the sum of $161,000 be granted out of the consolidated revenue fund of Canada.

Hon. GEO. E. FOSTER. I think we ought to have a little explanation of this before it goes through. What is it proposed to do with this $18,000 for the Imperial Institute? We have had certain policies in regard to it, if they may be dignified as policies. Here is a substantial amount being voted. What is the new policy in reference to this thing ? What is going to be done ?

Hon. SYDNEY FISHER (Minister of Agriculture). In reply to my hon. friend

(Mr. Foster) I would say that for several years back we have had small votes for the Imperial Institute in London. In consequence of the pressure of our exhibition work we have not been able to really deal with this question effectively. During the Liège exhibition I took occasion of the opportunity when Mr. Hutchison, the Exhibition Commissioner, was within reach of London, to ask him to go to London and thoroughly investigate the condition of the Canadian exhibit in the Imperial Institute and prepare a scheme which he considered would be commensurate with the interests of Canada for that exhibition. He did this and communicated with Lord Strathcona, our commissioner, who was also one, of the commissioners in charge of the Imperial Institute. They went into the matter with the officers of the Imperial Institute and eventually submitted a scheme to me that was going to involve an expenditure of something over $20,000. I hesitated a little about going into such an expenditure, but after carefully examining the scheme, communicating directly with Lord Strathcona, and getting from him his views and opinions in regard to the matter I felt that if we were going to do anything with the Imperial Institute at all, if we were going to have a Canadian exhibit there, it was necessary that we should adopt some such scheme as Mr. Hutchison had outlined. We have had for a considerable time various provincial exhibits in the Imperial Institute. Certain space has been allotted to Canada. These exhibits, in many instances, are old, they have not been renewed for many years, they do not contain much that we would like to see exhibited in any Canadian exhibit and they have not been arranged under any general scheme which might be said to be Canadian or national in its character. Mr. Hutchison's scheme was one to reorganize completely that exhibit, to make it a national exhibit, to take advantage of any exhibits that were there which would be useful in arranging and making up a new exhibit and to provide for that exhibit specimens that would really and properly represent Canadian production and Canadian industry. He gave full details of the scheme, made up an estimate which was submitted in considerable detail and he reported that it would be necessary to expend something over $20,000. We have a certain amount in the ordinary annual vote. Last year most of the vote lapsed because we had not been able to take hold of the question thoroughly and elaborate a scheme. We had this year about $8,000, but a portion of that vote is devoted to the annual payments to the authorities of the Imperial Institute and a portion to the salary and office expenses of the curator. We have between $2,000 and $3,000, speaking from memory available in the current year's vote for the Imperial Institute and we estimate that if we had a vote of $18,000 we would be able to carry out the scheme.

Lord Strathcona agreed that the carrying out of the plans as arranged by Mr. Hutchison will to a very considerable extent add to the appearance and to the success of the Imperial Institute, and when this scheme in carried out the Canadian exhibits will not only be the best in the Institute but will tend to make the whole project much more successful than ever before.

Mr. FOSTER. Has that scheme ever been laid before parliament ?

Mr. FISHER. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. When?

Mr. FISHER. It was discussed on the vote two or three years ago, and again last year I explained to parliament that the intention was to make the Canadian exhibit of a national and not a provincial character. I have already obtained two votes, but unfortunately the scheme has been delayed because the exhibitions in Europe have succeeded each other so rapidly that we were not able to carry it out hitherto. The expenditure is larger than we had anticipated, but after getting Lord Strathcona's advice and the opinion of the administrator of the institute, we thought it well worth while to make this expenditure in view of the fact that parliament had endorsed our plans.

Mr. FOSTER. Have we ever had laid before us the report of Mr. Hutchison which seems to be the foundation of the scheme ?

Mr. FISHER. That particular report came in since last session of parliament.

Mr. FOSTER. What in the wide world is this parliament for if it is not to obtain the information from our officers upon which is predicated the expenditure of large sums of money, and to be consulted before the money is actually expended ? The minister tells us he knows the scheme, and Lord Strathcona knows the scheme. I do not care tu-pence ha'penny if Lord Strathcona or if the minister knows the scheme; this parliament is here to know that scheme and this parliament will not do its duty unless it keeps this vote just where it is until it has that scheme before it. The minister seems to think there is nothing for him to do but to get a sub-officer's opinion and straight way go to work and lay out $20,000, $40,000 or $50,000 of the public money. That is not treating parliament with courtesy. The minister knew the session was approaching, and what was the extreme necessity which compelled him to undertake the expenditure of $20,000 on a scheme that parliament knew nothing about. Would anything have broken if the had simply waited until he had advised parliament of what this scheme was, or, has the minister come to the conclusion that parliament does not amount to anything; is he going to treat with utter contempt not only this side of the House but his own side? Has he come to the conclusion that there is not a spark of independence, or of judgment, or of reason in the 215 members of this House? It is time that parliament should utter its protest against that sort of thing, and I utter my protest most determinedly against it.

Mr. FISHER. The hon. gentleman is heated in his language, The question has been before parliament—

Mr. FOSTER. Have we ever had Hutchison's report?

Mr. FISHER. Not this particular report. The scheme was laid before parliament two years ago and was endorsed by parliament, and last year the general principle of the scheme, though not the exact amount of expenditure, was also endorsed by parliament.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I have no recollection of that scheme ever having been laid before parliament.

Mr. LENNOX. Nor anybody else.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. In what way was the scheme laid before parliament on these occasions.

Mr. FISHER. I cannot remember the exact language, but in general terms it was stated that the vote was asked for the purpose of making the Canadian exhibit in the imperial institute a Canadian exhibit instead of a provincial exhibit. Speaking from memory I think the first vote for that was $6,000.

Mr. FOSTER. When?

Mr. FISHER. Two years ago, and I am not sure but that there was a smaller vote taken three years ago.

Mr. BERGERON. It grew.

Mr. FISHER. It grew as the demands were shown to be greater. The inperial institute was re-organized I think two years ago and that also delayed the putting through of the proposition to change the nature of the Canadian exhibit. They asked us to contribute a certain amount annually for certain specific purposes, and speaking again from memory, there was first of all a certain sum for the general maintenance of the institute, a certain other sum towards the rental of certain offices in the city, a certain other sum for the salary of the curator of the Canadian exhibit and the office expenses connected therewith. Speaking again from memory, that amounted to between $4,000 and $5,000 a year.

Mr. BERGERON. Where can we find a report of that?

Mr. FISHER. The information was given to parliament when the votes were asked.

Mr. BERGERON. Did you give the names of the curators and all that information?

Mr. FISHER. The curator is the same since the imperial institute was established. I gave his name when the votes were taken, every bit of the information I am giving now has been placed before parliament twice and parliament accepted it and passed the vote. The only question here to-day is the difference in the amount. The scheme—or the proposition, if you prefer that word—has been before parliament certainly twice, and has been explained to parliament just as I am explaining it to-day; and parliament, having had that explanation, deliberately voted the money for this purpose.

Mr. FOSTER. How much of a vote?

Mr. FISHER. The vote for the current year is $8,000; last year it was $6,000, I think. These votes have lapsed in consequence of the delays which I have explained with the exception of sufficient of last year's vote to pay the costs of the general purposes of the institute, the salary of the curator and such things. But when we came to examine the situation, I took the advice of the exhibition commissioner, who has been remarkably successful in the way he has put Canadian products and Canadian industries on exhibition before the world, and I also discussed the matter with Lord Strathcona, who is on the spot, and who knows thoroughly the nature and scope of the institution and whose judgment may fairly be considered good in the matter. I am simply pointing out that I took the best means within my power to see what could be done to make the Canadian exhibit a satisfactory and creditable one, which parliament had given me authority and had practically asked me to do. I discussed the question of this increased expenditure with my colleagues, who approved of it, and who authorized me to ask parliament for this amount which is necessary to carry the thing through.

Mr. FOSTER. How much money has been spent up to the present time?

Mr. FISHER. We have spent nothing up to the present time beyond what is contained in the current year's vote. Preparations have been made for spending this whole amount.

Mr. BERGERON. Do I understand that it is a permanent exhibition in the city of London?

Mr. FISHER. Yes.

Mr. BERGERON. Since when?

Mr. FISHER. About twenty years, I think.

Mr. BERGERON. How much does it cost every year?

Mr. FISHER. Until about four years ago it was maintained nominally by the provinces which had exhibits there. Then I asked this House to give a vote for the purpose of trying to make it a creditable national exhibit. That was agreed to, but for one reason and another we were delayed in carrying out the project, and it was only when the Liège exhibition was closed last fall that I was able to get the advantage of a comprehensive and accurate report as to what could be done, and for that purpose I applied to my exhibition commissioner, who had a short time at his disposal between the end of the closing of the Liège exhibition and the opening of the Milan exhibition. That report was presented to me in the early part of this winter, and it is in consequence of that report that this vote is asked.

Mr. FOSTER. We would like to see that report.

Mr. FISHER. I shall be glad to lay it before the House.

Mr. SPROULE. According to my recollection, it was contemplated to reorganize the institute and as soon as that reorganization took place it was to be submitted to parliament and a vote asked from parliament in connection with it, but the government have never carried out their promise to parliament in that respect.

Mr. FISHER. Oh, yes.

Mr. SPROULE. Now we are asked to vote a large sum for an organization that was never submitted to parliament and that parliament never sanctioned.

Mr. FISHER. My hon. friend is mistaken. Last year I explained the whole organization, and the year before, when it was in formation, I explained it also.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. gentleman says it was only this winter that he received the report from his commissioner as to what the scheme of the organization should be.

Mr. FISHER. No. The scheme of the organziation was a matter for the imperial government. My commissioner had nothing to do with that at all. He simply stepped in after that was completed and examined the space allotted to Canada, and pointed out wherein that space could be best utilized for an exhibit that would be creditable to Canada.

Mr. FOSTER. That has not been explained to the House, and that is what we want.

Mr. FISHER. I have not the plans here; they are in the office, but I can lay them on the table of the House if hon. gentlemen want them.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. gentleman cannot get his vote until he gives us his plans.

Mr. BERGERON.

Mr. FISHER. If the hon. gentleman wants to hold up the Supply Bill until he gets them, well and good.

Mr. FOSTER. The time has come when we must insist on fair treatment. The time has come when we must insist on knowing what is in the minister's noddle, if we can possibly draw it out, before we give him the $20,000 to carry out his vagaries or his good plans, if his plans be good. When I said I did not care a button what Lord Strathcona said about this matter, everybody knows what I meant. What I meant was simply that it was no argument to say we must vote the money because Lord Strathcona says the scheme is a good one. The minister is not exempt from ordinary rules and has been too great a sinner to be entitled to any indulgence. Spending the people's money without proper authority is an offence to which he is very much inclined. He has put us to thousands of dollars expense in this destruction of animals business without any warrant from parliament at all. Yesterday I was astonished to hear, in answer to a question, that the number of cheese curing establishments which he has started have already cost the cool outlay of some $117,000 to this country. I do not think there was a man in this House who had any idea that, under the cover of a general vote, the minister was going to spend $117,000 on half a dozen cheese curing establishments. What else he is going to do the Lord only knows. I do not believe that even his colleagues do. Well, before he gets this vote through, he must take us into his confidence. He took half an hour to tell us that there was some plan, but what it was he did not know and what has been accomplished he does not know. If we want to find out, we shall have to read the commissioners report. Yet he wants $20,000 to carry out this plan. The plan may be a good one, but we want to know what it is. Mr. Hutchison is a practical man and has done good service, but that does not dispense the minister from informing us what the plan is, so that we may judge, before we vote the money, whether it is worth while to spend $20,000 or $25,000 on it. The institute exhibit has never been a success up to the present, but what we require to know is whether it is likely to be a success if the plan in view be carried out. Surely that is only reasonable.

Mr. FISHER. I have no desire to deny or withhold any information. As my hon. friend says, Mr. Hutchison has been remarkably successful in any plans he has hitherto recommended and carried out, and I am confident that his present scheme will be equally successful. I am quite willing to lay on the table every detail that can possibly be required. But I never imagined that I should ask Mr. Hutchison how many pounds of grain or sheaves of oats he was going to put into this exhibit.

Mr. FOSTER. That was a great lapse on your part.

Mr. FISHER. I do not think so. I do not think parliament has any interest in learning such insignificant details; and when my hon. friend insists on having such microscopic information, that only shows the smallness of his view in such matters, and it is not what one would expect from a man who has been Finance minister. I do not believe my hon. friend is serious. If I were to lay on the table the details he asks for, he would not look at them. Every information that can possibly be required is in the hands of the department and can be furnished, but it never occurred to me that such details as the hon. gentleman asks for would be required by anybody. Of course the hon. member for North Toronto (Mr. Foster) has a perfect right to insist on being given those details and I have no objection to furnish them, and of course he can hold up the vote until he gets those things if he wants them, but he will have to take the responsibility, and I do not think that conduct of that kind will commend itself to parliament. My hon. friend rather misrepresents the facts when he says that the Minister of Agriculture wants parliament to do something on which it is not properly informed. In this particular instance, that is certainly not the case, because parliament has been informed already of the general scheme and has been asked whether it endorsed the scheme and wished it to be carried out. And parliament has given that endorsation. The officer of the department who has been charged with this particular work and who, my hon. friend admits, has hitherto been remarkably successful, has put his programme and plans before us.

Mr. FOSTER. Before whom ?

Mr. FISHER. Before the department and the government.

Mr. FOSTER. I think parliament has something to say in the matter.

Mr. FISHER. No doubt, and if parliament wants all the details, parliament shall have them all. If possible, I shall give the exact number of pounds of every individual kind of grain which is to go into that exhibit. But I do not believe that parliament wants such minute details. If I did furnish them, I do not believe parliament would read them, because hon. members have something more important to do. This matter has been before the House at least two years and the House authorized the Minister of Agriculture to go ahead with this work and voted money for it at least twice. It is only to-day, after the officers of the department have been able to go into the matter thoroughly and minutely and find out just what money is required, and have reported to that effect, that I have been able to state to the House what the thing will cost. If parliament says that the money shall not be spent, of course it will not.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. How much is the annual expenditure going to be ?

Mr. FISHER. In the first place we are committed to an expenditure of between $4,000 and $5,000 a year for the current regular expenses of the institute. That is all we shall be committed to if this vote passes, but I think it likely that a small amount of from $1,000 to $2,000 a year will be required to keep up the exhibit from year to year by making additions to it as required.

Mr. LENNOX. The hon. minister says that my hon. friend from North Toronto (Mr. Foster) must take the responsibility of the position he has assumed. Well, the position taken by the hon. member for North Toronto is that parliament is entitled to reasonable information as to why the money is required before voting it. But the minister must take the responsibility of the position he assumes. He comes down without being able to give us any information without being able to give us any assurance except his own word—and a great many of his words are to very little purpose—and on this he asks us to vote this money. For three-quarters of an hour the minister has been talking without giving parliament any definite information. All he has been able to tell us is that the scheme was outlined to this committee last year. Well, his explanations last year were not more lucid than they are this year. While the hon. gentleman was busy taking up the various departments of war and our relations with the mother country and cognate subjects and neglecting the interests of agriculture, I have been endeavouring to follow what the hon. minister has been asking the House to do in the interests of our farmers from year to year, and I take the responsibility of saying to the minister—and I hope I will have his attention because I want to make it a distinct challenge—that he cannot find in 'Hansard' of last session or the session before any such scheme as he intimates Mr. Hutchison has laid before him, and which he proposes to act upon at the present time. Two years ago some gentleman on this side asked a question, and what did the minister tell us ? He said, well, the Imperial Institute is not in a very satisfactory condition, it is not as we would like to have it. Some one asked him : Under what department is it ? Well, he said, I think it is under the Department of the Board of Trade in England, but he said, that is a kind of omnibus department in which they pitch everything which has no other place, and so, he said, it is something like the Department of Agriculture in this country. He said it is not in a satisfactory condition and he said : We will do better, I hope; I hope we will devise some plan by which we will have it on a better basis and if you put through the vote I will endeavour to get it on a better footing if I possibly can. And so on the strength of that we gave him a vote two years ago of $8,000. But last year the matter was in no better condition and on page 1,836 of 'Hansard' he asked a vote

For renewing and improving Canadian exhibits at Imperial Institute, London, and assisting in the maintenance thereof, $8,000.

Then follow some particulars. Mr. Ingram asked :

What changes have taken place in this office ?

and the minister replied :

We pay £450 a year as a contribution towards the general maintenance of the Institute, &c.,

And the minister will not find in the three columns of the ensuing discussion one word to indicate that he contemplated at that time that we should launch out upon a broader basis, or that we should have a scheme submitted to the Minister of Agriculture, whether in his capacity as Minister of Agriculture or Minister of War, I know not, and that he should decide without submitting to parliament what should be done in that regard. We want some information as to how this money is to be expended. I wish to say that the expenditure of that money in the last ten years in the institute has not been productive of an advantage equal to the cost involved, and we have had feeble promises from the minister that better things would be done but we have had feebler results from those promises and I think it is the duty of members on this side of the House and on that side to say : We will have adequate and sufficient information from the various ministers of the Crown, whether we are supporting them or not, so that the people shall have an opportunity of judging of the expenditure of money from time to time, as it is submitted to the House.

Mr. PATERSON. I may say a word or two on this subject. This is one of five or six items that passed in Committee of Supply and in which the House concurred a short time ago which form a supplementary estimate of sums required up to June 30 of this year. When they were under discussion the House was thin; I think my hon. friend from North Toronto (Mr. Foster) was absent. I feel sure that my hon. friend from South Simcoe (Mr. Lennox) was present. A few remarks were made by the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) when speaking on the $75,000 vote, which is another vote. He said, speaking of this vote for exhibitions :

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I saw a remarkable specimen of the resources of this country in the Imperial Institute in London about ten years ago. It consisted of a very few samples of a very few of the products of the different provinces. The province of which I have the honour to be a native, the province of Nova Scotia, was represented by about half a bushel of coal piled up in one corner of the room. It was a most exhilarating spectacle to any one from that province. I trust that if we exhibit at Milan, we shall make an exhibit worthy of the country.

Mr. LENNOX. That is this year's 'Hansard.'

Mr. PATERSON. Yes, it was the other night. The item under discussion has passed two stages, the Committee of Supply and Concurrence, and of course I do not take the ground by any means that the member for North Toronto (Mr. Foster) is not within his rights in bringing it up for discussion now, but it has been before us. It so happened that the Minister of Agriculture was not here that night; there was a desire on the part of the First Minister that these items might go through and a Supply Bill be introduced before the other branch of the legislature had adjourned. I said myself on that occasion :

The item No. 260, which we have allowed to stand, is intended to remedy the condition of affairs in London to which my hon. friend alludes. It will be taken up when the Minister of Agriculture is present and he will explain what is to be done in that connection.

I understand and quite agree that the member for Toronto (Mr. Foster) is within his rights and that the House is within its rights in asking for the explanation. I quite recognize the fact that a promise was given that the minister would explain it, but I would ask the hon. gentleman opposite in all fairness has he not done that ?

Mr. FOSTER. He has not given a word of explanation, he does not know a word about it himself.

Mr. PATERSON. He has explained if I understand him aright, that there was that condition of affairs in the Imperial Institute, and that a plan was devised whereby, by the expenditure of a sum of money we would make a national exhibition that would be some credit to us.

Mr. FOSTER. Where is the plan.

Mr. PATERSON. The hon. gentleman has not laid the plan on the table of the House, but he has said he will.

Mr. FOSTER. He will get his money and give the explanation afterwards.

Mr. PATERSON. He has meanwhile given an explanation to the House that he has endeavoured to improve the condition of our exhibit in the Imperial Institute, which the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) has characterized so strongly, and in my judgment correctly, for not only is that exhibit not creditable but it is positively something that every Canadian visitor would be ashamed of. Last year as I understand the minister he took a vote of $8,000 to obtain exhibits. It had not then been decided that we would make an exhibit at Milan; it was thought we would take some of the exhibits from Belgium and utilize them in the Imperial Institute, but when it was thought wise—and parliament is to-day asked to give sanction to that proposal—that an exhibit should be made in Milan, then the minister felt he did not want to take away from that which had brought such very, very great credit on Canada in connection with our exhibit in Belgium, he wanted to send the complete exhibit to Milan, and so he has to get additional exhibits for the Imperial Institute and he has entrusted to Mr. Hutchison the duty of procuring these exhibits, and in order to carry out this extra work he requires this extra vote. Now, that is an explanation to which this House is perfectly entitled; all I would ask hon. gentlemen opposite to consider is that, if we have failed in the proper respect that is due to the House, they would overlook it for this time and we will try to be better in future. It was not anticipated, or, I suppose, it would have been laid on the table. But, I do not think the House ought to take such a strong stand—and I feel sure that the hon. member for North Toronto (Mr. Foster) will agree with me—after the explanations given by the minister.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not know whether I can be as cheerful about this matter as my hon. friend the Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson). What I would suggest to him, in the first place, is that this ought to impress the hon. minister, as I know it would impress the Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) if he were here, with the very great importance of what we have urged before, namely, that ministers of the Crown from whom explanations of estimates are expected should be in their places when estimates are going through. This whole difficulty is owing to the fact that the Minister of Agriculture absented himself from his place at a time when he should have been here.

Mr. PATERSON. And the hon. member for North Toronto.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. No, it was the Minister of Agriculture. We asked explanations; and, as the Minister of Customs has said, the explanation was not given, but was to be given when the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher) was here. When the hon. Minister of Agriculture came to-day he should have brought the report with him ; he might reasonably have expected that it would be asked for. But the difficulty antedates that—he should have been here at the time when the estimate was under discussion.

I notice—and I wish to impress this upon the Minister of Customs—an increasing tendency on the part of ministers to absent themselves more and more from the House. Day after day the public business has been obstructed through the absence of the Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Emmerson) during ten days or two weeks. Day after day a Bill introduced by my hon. friend from Lincoln and Niagara (Mr. Lancaster) and another Bill introduced by my hon. friend from South York (Mr. W. F. Maclean) have stood over because the Minister of Railways and Canals was not here to attend to his duties. Why is he not in his place to-day ? Why has he not been in his place day after day for two weeks ? Look at the Treasury bench at this moment. How many ministers are present ? Only four of the ministerial places are filled.

Mr. FOSTER. And badly filled at that.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. It is true that we have, at the moment, a new occupant of the Treasury benches in the person of my hon. friend from North Lanark (Mr. Caldwell), who, I must say fills the place as creditably as any other gentleman on the other side of the House could. Four of these gentlemen, besides the Solicitor General (Mr. Lemieux) are present at this moment. I do not allude, of course, to the absence of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) whose illness we all regret, nor to the absence of the Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier), who, I understand, is indisposed to-day. But I allude to the absence of ministers of the Crown from their seats when these gentlemen have no public reason for absenting themselves from the performance of their duties in this House. As I say I desire to impress this very much upon the Minister of Customs. Suppose that a record had been kept by any gentleman in the press gallery, or by any hon. member on this side of the House, of the continued absence since this session opened of gentlemen who have places on the Treasury benches, what would it disclose ? Some reason may be given for occasional absence, of course. These gentlemen have important public duties that may call them out of the House at times. I am willing to make every possible and every just allowance for them, but, after making every possible and every just allowance, we find what seems to be nothing less than grave neglect of duty by ministers of the Crown. I urged upon the government last session that their estimates would proceed better, and public business would suffer less, if ministers from whom explanations were desired were in their places attending to the business of the country when their estimates were going through. It is not alone the minister of the department whose estimates are under consideration from whom an explanation may be desired. Over and over again information is necessary from the head of some other department than that to which the estimate strictly relates. And we are asked, we are solemnly and seriously asked, to let the item go through because that minister does not see fit to attend to his public duty. I think this had better stop.

Nor would I limit my remarks altogether to ministers of the Crown. I have sometimes spoken in confidence to my friends on this side of the House and asked them to give a better attendance than they sometimes do. And I take this opportunity to say that whatever I have said with regard to the duties of a minister of the Crown is, to a very great extent, applicable to members of this House, and particularly to members of this opposition. There are a good many here to-day—the attendance is better than usual. But I do not at all desire that my remarks should be limited to ministers of the Crown, because we on this side of the House have certain duties and functions to perform, and I am bound to say, that, sometimes, we have not the attendance of hon. gentlemen sitting to your left, Mr. Speaker, that I would like to see.

But this is apart from the subject now under consideration, which is whether or not the Minister of Customs can, with any show of reason, when this difficulty has been brought about by the default of one of his colleagues, ask us to pass these estimates without the explanations asked for by the hon. member for North Toronto. I would suggest that due importance should be given to the question—and I do not think it is a matter for jesting about or a matter for minimizing in any way—due importance should be given to this matter by letting this proceeding stand over until to-morrow, and placing on the table of the House, if possible to-day, or at least, giving to us early to-morrow morning, the report which we should have had in the first instance, when this vote first came up for consideration. I make that suggestion to my hon. friend the Minister of Customs. I am very anxious to forward the work of the session, but, at the same we must insist a little on matters of this kind. My hon. friend (Mr. Paterson) from his long experience of eighteen years of opposition in this House, knows that sometimes it is necessary to impress these things a little upon a government. Otherwise the government are apt to become altogether too negligent in the way they put through their estimates. I think probably there would be no difficulty in putting the item through with a little discussion to-morrow. I trust the Minister of Customs will agree that it is due to the members of the House and hon. gentlemen on this side, under the circumstances, that we should have this information.

Mr. PATERSON. I have been long enough in this House to know that when a minister wants to get his estimates through it is well to be as conciliatory as he can. I have every desire to act upon that idea. But I think the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) should not insist upon this to-day. Nor do I want to enter into a controversy as to how ministers attend in their places——

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Paterson) is very wise in that.

Mr. PATERSON. I agree that when the estimates are going through the minister whose estimates are directly under discussion should be present to give any explanation that may be desired. Of course, I recognize the right of the House as to that. But it is not imperative for ministers who are not concerned in the Supply that may be under consideration to be in their places at the same time, if the minister primarily concerned is present—as I think the House will admit is practically always the case under this government. It was as I grant, through the forbearance, or, as I prefer to say, the confidence in the goverment, of the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) that this vote was allowed to pass when we were in Supply though the Minister of Agriculture who, I think the House will agree is very often in his place—happened to be absent. The item came up for consideration late and the Minister of Agriculture did not happen to be here. Some of the hon. members of the opposition have been in office, and they know how ministers are called out of the House on matters not relating to their own business but to the public business, and wishing to show the courtesy to their constituents and others who wish to see them, they leave this Chamber for a time. It is impossible sometimes, because of these interviews, that you can get at your correspondence or even to see it in the morning and ministers have, perforce at times, to say to those who want to come and see them : Well, I have to go to council now ; the House meets at three o'clock ; I will try to slip out of the House and hear what you have to say and discuss the matter with you if I can be spared from the House. That is the position. I do not want to say more. In reference to this one item, it passed in Committee of Supply. I grant you it passed through the willingness of my hon. friend the leader of the opposition and those hon. gentlemen who were present in the House that night to let it go through. I recognize the fact that it was promised that an explanation should be given but it passed in Committee of Supply and it passed in concurrence. The House agreed to this and there was not a word about it. I do not, however, insist upon that point.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. That illustrates the difficulty of the situation. We are promised certain information—and hon. gentlemen on this side of the House cannot have every one of these matters in their minds all the time—but the government does not redeem its promises, it does not bring down the information and the item passes through concurrence. That is held up to us as if we were estopped from offering any objection. It is true that we did not happen to remember when the matter came up for concurrence that the information had been promised and not furnished, but that illustrates the danger of being irregular in the first instance.

Mr. BERGERON. Nobody expected this matter to come up this afternoon.

Mr. FISHER. If I had had the slightest idea that this particular plan would have been asked for, I would have been only too glad to have laid it on the table. There is no desire whatever to conceal the plan. I thought that a general explanation in regard to the question was all that was expected. My right hon. friend the leader of the government (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) told me that an explanation would be required I said that I had the information which I have been in the habit of giving, and that I was quite ready to give it. I thought I had given it to-day to a fuller extent than before. But, if I had thought that the plan would be required I could have had it with me. I am perfectly ready to lay it on the table of the House. I do not think I will be able to get it at this hour, but I will be able to get it to-morrow.

Mr. INGRAM. I think it is high time that this vote should come to an end. Several years ago the hon. gentleman's attention was drawn to the fact that the exhibit at the Imperial Institute was a disgrace to Canada. The hon. gentleman has been giving great credit to himself for looking sharply after the agricultural interests of Canada. In asking for a vote for the improvement of the exhibit at the Imperial Institute in London, he made a very short statement as to the object of the vote. That statement was very unsatisfactory. I will give you an instance that I have here before me.

Mr. FISHER. What year ?

Mr. INGRAM. 1904. This has been going on for years, but when the first vote was proposed an explanation was asked for and none was given. In 1904 a vote of $8,000 was asked for at half past eleven o'clock at night. The hon. minister was very eager to pass this vote through the House. The opposition took the ground, it being late, that they had no objection to allowing the item to pass, if it were understood that at a later period we could have the explanation of the minister, and then discuss the item, but hon. gentlemen objected to that, and it is just in that way that several of these items pass through the House. They pass through without very much explanation being given. I want to point out in respect to the Imperial Institute that several gentlemen have visited it and they have complained bitterly of the style of the exhibit made there by the authorities of Canada. The hon. minister pledged himself in this House that he would look into the matter carefully and that he would improve the exhibit and make it such as would be a credit to the Dominion of Canada. We have his word for it. In the following year there was an item placed in the estimates and we asked the hon. minister what had been done with respect to the Imperial Institute. Nothing had been done. That was the answer and that is what we complain of. I want to say to-day that while the hon. minister has stated that he had submitted a plan to the House in respect to the improvement of the Imperial Institute, the hon. gentleman cannot put his finger on a single line of the plan that has been submitted to this House. We have had an office in London for which we were paying £100 a year. That lease has been cancelled and now we are paying £200 for a changed arrangement. This was the explanation that the hon. gentleman made to the House. Other than this the hon. gentleman was asked what he was going to exhibit in the Imperial Institute and he said on one occasion, probably canned goods, dressed poultry, butter, cheese, hams and bacon. He was asked what these exhibits were now, and he said they were mineral and forest exhibits. These are all the exhibits that are there. Then, his attention was drawn to the out of the way place it was located in at that time, it being pointed out that it was of no great service to Canada unless there was a change made in the location of the office. These things were all drawn to the hon. gentleman's attention and on different occasions members of the opposition pointed out to the government the importance of making an improvement in the exhibit at the Imperial Institute at London, because it would tend to encourage immigration to this country if intending emigrants could see the kind of products that the Canadian people produce, and we all felt, as I feel now, that the minister has been more than careless in the arrangement of that exhibit in London. I see that while he asked for $3,000 in 1903, $8,000 in 1904, and $8,000 in 1905, he comes down now and asks for $18,000 for 1906 without submitting a single plan to this House to justify him in asking for an increase from $8,000 to $18,000. So, I say my hon. friend from Toronto (Mr. Foster) is quite correct when he says that an explanation should be given. It is time we should call a halt to this delaying from year to year in the making of proper explanations of the expenditure of public money.

Mr. FISHER. I quite agree with my hon. friend (Mr. Ingram) that we ought to call a halt to delay. I suppose that I must plead guilty to a certain portion of the responsibility for these delays. The delays were due to two things. In the first place when the attempted reorganization was started, I did not feel justified in going on with any work in connection with the institute, because I did not know what the future of the institute was going to be. Eventually, that cause of delay was overcome. The reorganization included certain payments from us which I explained to the House fully last year in detail. At the time I asked for the votes mentioned by Mr. Ingram I had expected, as I think I explained too at the time, to utilize the exhibits from other temporary exhibitions on the continent of Europe. But these exhibitions have succeeded one another so rapidly that I have not been able to do that without seriously interfering with the success of greater exhibitions. As my hon. friend the Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson) said a few moments ago when the investigation was going on last spring in London in regard to the Imperial Institute, I had hoped to utilize the exhibits from Liège. It was decided a little while ago that we should exhibit at Milan and in discussing what should be for the best we believe that it would be best to transfer the whole of the Liège exhibition to Milan supplementing it and adding to it certain agricultural exhibits to make it fresh and up to date. That prevented me from being able to do what I anticipated doing, that is utilizing these exhibits for the Imperial Institute involving a small expenditure, and it is in consequence of that fact that we have been obliged to ask for this large sum. If, instead of asking for this sum I had said : We will take the exhibits from Milan and utilize them in the Imperial Institute, I would have to wait again for another year until after the Milan exhibition was over, thus incurring another delay for which my hon. friend censures me. I came to the conclusion when this scheme of Mr. Hutchison's was put before me that we had better adopt it and carry it out without regard to the other exhibitions. That is the reason I am asking for this amount to-day. I grant that no plan in detail has been submitted ; I have never suggested that I put a plan in absolute detail before the House. If a detailed plan is required I am now in a position to give it, but I was not before. If hon. gentlemen opposite wish to hold the vote up until the plan is laid on the table, I cannot object. I promise that the plan will be brought down and a full opportunity given for discussion when the main estimate for next year is brought up.

Mr. FOSTER. The minister has come right down off his high horse. He told us that on two or three different occasions he had made a full explanation of the plan, but it turns out that such is not the case.

I have great difficulty in voting money for that Imperial Institute. Every one knows that it is situated out of the general current of travel, and the question with me is whether that money would not be far more productive to Canada if we spent it on an exhibit in the centre of population in the city of London. Parliament should have had an opportunity of passing an opinion upon that question. If the Minister of Agriculture will persist in obstructing his own estimates it is not our fault, and nothing that has been said by my kind hearted and smiling friend the Minister of Customs, who excuses the Minister of Agriculture from his dereliction of duty, although the words of the Minister of Customs nearly melted my own heart.

Mr. PATERSON. Please keep it melted.

Mr. FOSTER. The Minister of Agriculture seems to think it is not necessary to give any information and that any vote of his will go through as a matter of course. We must teach him a lesson. The older heads in the ministry should have taught him, but as they do not seem to have undertaken the duty we must see to it. I am not altogether obdurate ; I do not want to hold up anything that is necessary. But this vote is not necessary ; you can drop it and get the rest of your supplies through and then bring down a supplementary estimate when you have the information here and inside of a week we can discuss the matter and pass the vote. I submit that as a solution.

Mr. FISHER. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) has submitted two points ; one that I did not give enough information, and the other as to the wisdom of an expenditure on the Imperial Institute. The latter point was settled by parliament two years ago. I confess that like the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) I had a little doubt as to the advisability of Canada having a national exhibit in the Imperial Institute. I considered the question, I consulted my colleagues, and we eventually submitted the proposal to parliament in general terms and parliament endorsed it. I would remind the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) that the expenditure of $20,000 on an exhibit outside of the Imperial Institute would be but as a drop in the bucket. We could not make any kind of an exhibit at all worthy of Canada, outside of the Imperial Institute without spending perhaps $100,000. It is because the Imperial Institute is practically free and has a full organization of officers, and is understood to be a place of colonial exhibits that we are able to make a presentable exhibit for $20,000. I will take my hon. friend (Mr. Foster) into my confidence and tell him that when an independent exhibit was suggested the estimate given me was from $125,000 to $150,000, and it frightened me. In view of the fact that we have an emigration agency in London, and that the Canadian Pacific Railway is making an exhibit there for its own purposes, I did not think it advisable to start another exhibition when we had the Imperial Institute organized in all its branches. We considered it was wise for us to make a creditable exhibit in the Imperial Institute and with that object the vote is taken.

Mr. FOSTER. We will judge of the wisdom of that when you bring the plan down.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. During my visit to Glasgow last winter I noticed an exhibit in a store, labelled Canadian exhibit; there was also a similar one in London. I tried to gain access to these stores but they were closed, and when I inquired in the adjoining store they told me they were seldom open.

Mr. FISHER. I have nothing to do with these exhibits I do not know what their character is.

Mr. KEMP. There is an office in the city of London called the City Office?

Mr. FISHER. There is a city branch of the Imperial Institute.

Mr. KEMP. Are the expenses in connection with that office included in this vote?

Mr. FISHER. Yes.

Mr. BERGERON. When this vote came before the House and it was stated that explanations would be given on concurrence, I did not suppose that any hon. member understood that concurrence would come to-day. I want to ask my hon. friend one or two questions. I understand that the provinces formerly exhibited at the Imperial Institute. Can my hon. friend tell us what it cost each province, and also whether the Dominion government, in taking over these exhibits, will come into conflict with the provinces which exhibited there before, and whether, if we exhibit along with the provinces, they will share in the expense?

Mr. FISHER. When the Imperial Institute was first established the provinces were asked to exhibit, and I think most if not all of them agreed to do so. They sent over some exhibits and continued to do so for several years and paid something towards the maintenance of the institute.

Mr. BERGERON. How much?

Mr. FISHER. I could not give the details now. I think altogether about $3,000 from all the provinces. Out of that Mr. Harrison Watson, the curator, was paid. At the time that we were asked to take up the matter several of the provinces had ceased to contribute anything. I cannot say whether to-day any contribution comes from any of the provinces. I rather think not; but I was informed by Lord Strathcona and by Mr. Harrison Watson that any exhibits of the province that were there would be available for us, if they were suitable, and we propose to use them to the greatest extent possible.

Mr. BERGERON. Is Mr. Harrison Watson a Canadian?

Mr. FISHER. He is a Canadian by birth and he lived in Montreal until he was grown up, and has been there, I think, once or twice since. He has been the curator of the exhibit ever since the exhibition was established.

Mr. BLAIN. Will the minister state whether it is proposed to change the location of the exhibit in the Imperial Institute or not?

Mr. FISHER. Our exhibit was in two different places, and it is to be brought all together.

Mr. BLAIN. What is the total space to be given?

Mr. FISHER. I could not give the square feet of space. It is slightly larger than before.

Mr. BLAIN. I would ask the minister if he will be good enough when brining down Mr. Hutchison's report to bring down two other reports to which he made reference last year when discussing this matter. At page 1,836 of last year's Hansard, in discussing this item he said:

> Last fall, when the gentleman whom I sent in connection with other exhibitions were in London, I asked Mr. Brodie and Mr. Hay to report what ought to be done to make the exhibit in the Imperial Institute a thoroughly effective one. I have that report.

The minister last year stated that he had the report of two men who were specially directed by himself to make a report in connection with this matter, and without bringing down that report he asked and obtained from the House a vote of $8,000; and now he comes and asks for $18,000 more, and has absolutely neglected to bring down the report of Mr. Hutchison or the report of Messrs. Brodie and Hay. If the work of my hon. friend is not attended to better in the future than it has been in the past, I suppose we may expect the exhibit to continue for all time in its present condition. I hope the minister will bear in mind that we as a committee expect that these reports will be submitted to the House, and that he will refresh his own memory by a perusal of them, because he seems to be rather dull on the all-important question of how much space we shall have there. I suppose the hon. minister has not paid very much attention to this matter. Perhaps he is rather in doubt whether it is a good expenditure of money at all or not. One would have thought that the very first statement he would have been able to make to the committee would have been that a certain space would be allotted to the Canadian exhibit; and yet, with three reports in his possession, he is not able to answer that simple question. I hope he will devote a little attention to the matter before the next meeting of the committee and will be able to give these explanations as to the way in which he is going to make the exhibit such a great success in the future.

Mr. FISHER. I will.

Mr. LENNOX. I understood the minister to say that at one time he entertained doubts as to the advisability of continuing this exhibit. Was that correct?

Mr. FISHER. I said so.

Mr. LENNOX. Will the minister tell the committee when he entertained those doubts?

Mr. FISHER. Before we decided to take it up.

Mr. LENNOX. That is hardly the point. About what date does the minister mean?

Mr. FISHER. Before we asked a vote for it.

Mr. LENNOX. Does he mean about two years ago?

Mr. FISHER. No, we asked for a vote before that.

Mr. LENNOX. Does he mean that he entertained doubts before any money had been expended at all? Did he ever express those doubts to the committee or the House?

Mr. FISHER. I do not remember.

Mr. LENNOX. Does the minister not think it would be his duty, if he entertained doubts as to the advisability of expending money, to express these to the House?

Mr. FISHER. When I asked the vote I showed that at that time I had no doubt about it.

Mr. LENNOX. One other question I wish to ask. When does the minister say that the House adopted the policy of expending this money?

Mr. FISHER. When it gave the vote for it.

Mr. LENNOX. That was at the time these doubts were in the minister's mind?

Mr. FISHER. No.

Mr. LENNOX. Immediately after it?

Mr. FISHER. Yes.

Mr. LENNOX. That will do.

Mr. TAYLOR. I wish to ask the hon. minister whether he is prepared to revise the answer he gave this House yesterday? Comparing that answer with the Auditor General's Reports, it shows conclusively what little reliance this House can place on statements of the hon. gentleman. Yesterday I put this question:

What has been the total expenditure in connection with the Brockville cheese curing room, and what has been the total revenue from the same?

To this question the hon. minister replied:

Expenditure, $18,661.34 to March 1, 1906; revenue, $6,568.33 to March 1, 1906.

I have no figures for the expenditure prior to the 1st July, 1905, because the minister, in his reply, gives us the expenditure up to the 1st March, 1906, but I know that the expenditure must have been several thousand dollars. Comparing this answer with the three Auditor General's Reports for the fiscal year ending 1st July, 1905, 1904, and 1903, I find that the expenditure was as follows in each of these years:

1903, page	'D' 67..	$ 7,190 00
1904 "	'D' 100..	9,056 10
1905 "	'D' 66..	5,929 00
Total..		$22,000 00

This is the total for the last three years, not including the expenditure between the dates for which we have no figures. Yet, the minister, in his reply, yesterday, told us the expenditure was $18,000. This shows what little reliance can be placed on his statements. He tells us, on his honour as a minister that the total expenditure in connection with the Brockville cheese curing room was $18,000, yet the Auditor General's Reports for the last three years show that they amount to $22,000, and if I were to go back one or two years more, the figures would no doubt be very much enlarged. The hon. minister makes a statement in which there is evidently not a semblance of truth, and yet he expects us to vote his estimates without protest.

Mr. PATERSON. I trust my hon. friend will let the minister explain some other time and let us get on with this vote.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not think the Minister of Customs should interrupt the Minister of Agriculture in this unseemly way.

Mr. FISHER. I gave the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Taylor) the figures put in my hands by the officers of my department. He has made a statement which calls for investigation, and I shall see that it is investigated.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I find that the situation with regard to explanations promised by the government is worse than I imagined. I asked for information—as will be seen on page 331 of 'Hansard'—with regard to the exhibit in the Imperial Institute and I got this reply from the First Minister :

I know that an arrangement has been made by Lord Strathcona to put an end to the disgrace in connection with our exhibit which my hon. friend has just spoken of. That arrangement requires this appropriation, but I do not know the particulars at this moment. I shall bring down the particulars next time we go into Committee of Supply.

That was on the 16th March and this is the 27th. During the eleven days that have intervened, we have not had one syllable of information placed before this House although the item went through on that promise. Not only that but without any notice, except a private intimation last evening that some items would be taken up in concurrence, this item is taken up and not one syllable given of the information which was promised on the occasion I have mentioned. I should think the Minister of Customs would insist that the item should be withdrawn.

Mr. COCKSHUTT. If the hon. minister were in doubt some few years ago as to the advisability of this exhibit, he ought to be able to tell us now whether the various appropriations which have been made since have had the results he anticipated or whether they have been of little or no value. For some years we have been giving annual votes to keep up this exhibition about whose utility the minister had doubts at one time. Now apparently he has overcome those doubts, but he is exceedingly reticent as to the reasons which have caused this change of mind. In my opinion, if the exhibit is not considerably improved on what it was when I last saw it—some two or three years ago—it certainly is no credit to the country and not at all calculated to encourage emigration. I should say it would have exactly the opposite effect. If any intending settler should visit that exhibit, I should think that any favourable impressions he may have had regarding Canada when he went in would be removed and he would be induced to give up altogether the idea of establishing himself in this new country. The exhibition certainly cannot, by any stretch of imagination, be considered as representative of the products of this country. Despite what the minister has said, I have grave doubts as to the wisdom of this expenditure. Either we must go in more heavily and spend $100,000 instead of $20,000 or abandon the idea altogether. I do not believe that this exhibit can be made a success on these small votes. One of the first essentials is that it should be up to date. There is no earthly use in exhibiting goods ten or twenty years out of date, yet that is what is being done now. Of course our natural woods and other natural products do not come under this class, but in the case of manufactured goods—take an agricultural implement or a piece of cloth or a garment—after it is on exhibit over a year it becomes shabby and out of date and is no credit to the country. There needs to be a constant change if our exhibits are to be kept up to date. Goods under glass of course will be seen, but take canned goods, they cannot be seen on the outside, and in a few years the labels will look very shabby. It is also a question whether this exhibition is in the right place. True it is in a magnificent building, but it may be planted in the wrong quarter where it is not likely to do any good. These matters should be carefully considered, and if we decide to go on with the exhibition, we should make it one worthy of the country. Otherwise it will do us harm and instead of being an encouragement to emigration will prevent settlers from coming to our shores. If that is the case it is desirable that we should have either one or two things, either an exhibition that is up to date, and of an entirely different character to what we have had in the past, or else abandonment of this vote. We should not go into an exhibition at all if we are not prepared to do it on a basis that will be creditable to this country and to the manufacturers and producers of Canadian goods.

Are these exhibits the property of the government or the property of the exhibitors ?

Mr. FISHER. That depends on the arrangement with the individual exhibitor. Sometimes we buy the exhibits and sometimes the makers send then over and renew them from time to time.

Mr. KEMP. I suspect that the office in London which has been spoken of as being closed was the branch of the Imperial Institute. We pay £250 a year rent, but nothing is provided for taking charge of it.

Mr. FISHER. That is taken charge of by Mr. Watson and his assistant. One or the other is supposed to be there.

Mr. KEMP. Supposing the Imperial Institute did not exist and we were going to exhibit in London, what would be the best place for an exhibition ? Of course we have, in the Imperial Institute, exhibits from all parts of the British empire, no part of that empire is as aggressive and as go-ahead, as the Dominion of Canada but we are on a par in the Imperial Institute with all the smaller colonies of Great Britain. I would like to satisfy myself as to whether the exhibit is in the right place or whether we are going to this expense out of courtesy to the organization. Is this exhibit bringing any returns that are worth while, and if we are going to locate a first-class exhibit in London to-day, to attract immigrants or to interest capital, where would we locate it if the Imperial Institute was not in existence ?

Mr. FISHER. That would depend on the amount of money we are to spend. If money were no obpect we would not locate it at the Imperial Institute but at some place passed more frequently by crowds of people than the Imperial Institute is. The Imperial Institute is a well known establishment which, in addition to this work, has other work to perform; it has a very large establishment for scientific investigation and a great many people who want to invest money in Canada who want to discuss industrial matter, send to the Imperial Institute for information and a great many men who are asked to make reports by proposed companies go to the institute to get the material for their reports, not only in the scientific branches of the institute but also by examining the exhibits there. For instance if in England a mining company or a pulp company or anything of that kind was to be suggested, the probability is that the people interested would have some expert go to the Imperial Institute and get all the information they could get there in regard to Canadian products in those lines and make them a report. The Imperial Institute was started with that intention, and not with the idea of establishing popular exhibits such as my hon. friends speak of when they talk of the immigration department, &c., and I quite agree that if the exhibit was for the purpose of immigration and just attracting population, we would not spend money in the Imperial Institute, but if we are going to support an exhibition of that kind in England, instead of spending $20,000 to start one, we would have to spend $100,000 at the very least to begin with and probably $200,000 before it was thoroughly established, and if we are going to maintain it for any time, we will have to pay heavy rentals and maintenance expenses, all of which work is done for us by the management of the Imperial Institute.

Mr. FOWLER. If the Imperial Institute is not for the purpose of attracting immigration what is it for ?

Mr. FISHER. The purpose is to give information in regard to Canadian production and industries.

Mr. FOWLER. What good is that if it does not induce emigration to Canada ?

Mr. FISHER. There may be other things besides immigration.

Mr. FOWLER. If it does not have the effect of bringing people to Canada I fail to see why we spend the $20,000 at all. Is it in connection with the flotation of bonds, the business of the country ? It is not, it is not like a trade bureau, what is it for then ? Only as my hon. friend beside me says, to spend money. What tangible and material results have ever come from this expenditure. I do not speak in a spirit of captiousness I really want to know.

Mr. FISHER. My hon. friend will understand that until we put a creditable exhibit of Canadian products there, we cannot expect results. I tried to explain to the member for Toronto (Mr. Kemp) that in addition to the ordinary purpose of exploiting Canadian products, natural and industrial, there is also a scientific aspect of the Imperial Institute. I do not think myself that any great number of people likely to immigrate to Canada are apt to go to the Imperial Institute, but I quite understand that people who are promoting immigration to Canada from Great Britain may go there and obtain valuable information by which they may be able to promote that immigration.

Mr. FOWLER. Then it seems the great object of this, after all, is to provide information for those who are promoting immigration to Canada. If that is the case would it not be better to unite this with the immigration office and have an exhibition of your own, handled by the immigration officers ? It seems to me that would be much more desirable and effective.

Mr. BERGERON. The member for King's (Mr. Fowler) should understand that this is only the thin end of the wedge. Later on we will come to a higher expenditure. As this is only one resolution I would like to ask about some other items in it. How is it that we have to spend $75,000 more than was expended last year when the items for estimates for exhibitions were prepared. What about the report we have been promised the last four or five days of the insurance commission ? I see we are called upon to pay $20,000 in connection with the Royal Commission on Insurance. We have been promised a daily report of the proceedings before the commission and we have not had that yet. We do not know anything about it except what we see in the newspapers. We are called upon to pay $25,000 to relieve the famine sufferers in Japan. I do not see why we should be called upon to pay money right and left. What have we to do with paying money to Japan ? I always understood that Japan was a very rich country. I do not see that the people in Canada owe anything to Japan. There might be some justification for this in England, but I have not seen anything of the Imperial government in England voting anything for the famine sufferers in Japan and why should we do so. And we are doing that in a hurry. We are throwing money away. I would like to get some information on the subject before this is passed.

Mr. PATERSON. I understand that the report of the Insurance Commission is being printed and will be laid on the table.

Mr. BERGERON. We were promised it four or five days ago.

Mr. FISHER. This expenditure in relation to the Imperial Institute is due to the fact that we are exhibiting at Milan. When the estimate for the current year was before the House we had not decided to exhibit at Milan. It was then expected to take for the Imperial Institute some of the articles that formed part of our exhibit at Liège.

Mr. BERGERON. How much did our exhibit at Liège cost the country ?

Mr. FISHER. I can only speak from memory and in round figures. I believe it cost about $140,000.

Mr. BERGERON. And this $75,000 is for Milan ?

Mr. FISHER. Yes, to pay up to July 1 this year.

Mr. BERGERON. And more will be required ?

Mr. FISHER. Yes, it will probably cost about as much as Liège.

Mr. BERGERON. And this $25,000 for Japan—how do we come to pay that ?

Mr. FISHER. Great suffering through famine has, unfortunately, and quite unexpectedly, come upon the Japanese people. We have recently concluded a treaty of commerce with Japan ; and because of this, and believing that the relations between the two countries are to become much more intimate, we feel that an expression of sympathy of this kind to the empire of Japan, which is now undoubtedly suffering a very great national calamity, will tend to make still more friendly the relations between the two countries. The Japanese are the allies of the empire, and they are our next neighbours across the Pacific. For all these reasons, we believe that the people of Canada would like to extend their sympathy in a substantial manner to the people of Japan. Therefore the government decided to ask parliament to vote $25,000 for that purpose. I am glad to say that there are many evidences that the people of Canada sympathize with this movement. Individual subscriptions have been raised to the amount of $5,000 or $6,000, besides this sum, which the government propose to send to Japan. I notice in the press also general concurrence and appreciation on the part of the people of the act of the government in this matter.

Mr. SPROULE. Unless I am mistaken, there is a much stronger reason than any yet given why the minister should furnish the information asked for. He has been telling us what he has been going to do with this $18,000 for the Imperial Institute. But, the money is already spent is it not ? It is voted as part of the supplementary estimates for the year ending June 30 next.

Mr. FISHER. No, it has not been spent yet.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. It would appear that the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher) is not much in touch with the work being carried on in Great Britain with reference to this exhibit in the Imperial Institute. He frankly admits that our present exhibit there is anything but satisfactory, and I am sure that he will find on investigation that this is the case. I asked the hon. minister a question the other day, as I was anxious to find out what discriminatory duties were imposed by the German government upon our apples. The hon. gentleman in his reply gave me to understand that green apples were admitted into Germany free. I am sure that he will not say that now, after having heard the subject discussed in the fruit convention held here last week, where it was stated that, while we exported last year, 150,000 barrels of green apples had been sent to Germany practically free, there is now a duty on green apples going into that country of $1.50 a barrel. Perhaps the hon. minister will explain that.

Mr. PATERSON. I fancy the hon. gentleman (Mr. Armstrong) is alluding to a question I answered. I can only say that the answer I gave had been prepared by the Department of Trade and Commerce and handed to me. If there is any question as to its accuracy, I will call the department's attention to it. It may be that there is a new schedule of duties, I believe that on March 1 a new German tariff came into effect. Whether that has any bearing upon the subject or not I do not know.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. On March 19, I asked the following question :

What are the rates of discriminatory duties imposed by the German government on the following goods imported from Canada : wheat, flour, oats, bacon, hams, butter, cheese and apples ?

The answer given was as follows :

Notice was given in the 'Reichsanzeiger' of June 14, 1898, fixing the date on which Canada ceased to receive most favoured treatment as the 31st July, 1898.

The provisions of the German general tariff on the articles referred to are as follows :

Wheat, 54 cents per 100 pounds ; flour of wheat, $1.14 per 100 pounds ; oats, 43·2 cents per 100 pounds ; bacon, $2.17 per 100 pounds : hams, $2.17 per 100 pounds ; butter, $2.17 per 100 pounds ; cheese, $2.17 per 100 pounds ; apples, dried, 43·1 cents per 100 pounds ; apples, green, free.

I am sure that the hon. minister will not agree with that statement.

Mr. FISHER. My hon. friend (Mr. Armstrong) may know more about it than the minister who gave the answer to the question, but I confess that I do not. I do not know whether the answer given was correct or not ; but as the minister answered it, I take it that his answer is correct.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Was it not stated at the fruit convention last week that our apple industry faced a very serious situation so far as export to Germany was considered because of the duty of $1.50 a barrel ?

Mr. FISHER. I heard it so stated, but I do not know whether it is correct or not. I have not looked into the matter ; but I should be disposed to accept the statement of the minister.

Mr. FOSTER. I think it would be better if the minister would accept the promise we have made. It does not bear with it any hardship at all.

Mr. PATERSON. I certainly recognize the fact that all reasonable explanations with regard to the estimates should be given. But I appeal to the House whether the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher) has not given the fullest details that could be expected. As to laying the report on the table, he says he will do that to-morrow. Surely the House will not stop a Supply Bill on acount of such a matter. If the minister had not given, or could not give—even if he had showed any reluctance in giving—full information on the subject, there might be some reason for delay. My hon. friend the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher) is the last member of the government to be suspected of withholding information when asked for. The House knows that his explanations are always full——

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, oh.

Mr. PATERSON. Yes, they are always full and satisfactory. And his explanations to-day are full and they ought to be satisfactory to hon. gentlemen opposite. This amount is $18,000. The hon. leader of the opposition has stated, and other hon. members agree with him, that the exhibit that Canada now has in the Imperial Institute in comparison with those of other colonies and of India, should make Canadians blush. We ask for this $18,000 to improve that exhibit. The money was not asked for before, because the Minister of Agriculture intended to take from the samples that were exhibited in Belgium. But when it was decided to have an exhibit at Milan, and it was thought wise not to withdraw any of the articles that had been exhibited at Liège, it was decided that money must be provided for a new exhibit for the Imperial Institute, such an exhibit as will do Canada credit. Of course, if hon. gentlemen opposite do not want to make an exhibit in the Imperial Institute, there is no reason why they should not say so. But the House has already declared that it wants such an exhibit provided. The leader of the opposition says that if there is to be an exhibit he wants a good one. And so say I. The Minister of Agriculture cannot reasonably be asked for any further explanation. He has even repeated his statement in a courteous way, half a dozen times, in answer to questions. All that the hon. member for North Toronto (Mr. Foster) asks is to have the report of Mr. Hutchison brought down. The hon. Minister of Agriculture says he will bring it down to-morrow. Now, I do hold that the promise that was made to the leader of the opposition has been fulfilled. The minister is in his place and he has given the explanation.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I trust my hon. friend will not be under a misapprehension about that. There seems to be in his mind some misconception. I read it in his hearing a moment ago that the Prime Minister asked this item to be passed upon the promise that the first time the House went into Committee of Supply thereafter the information would be brought down. The House went into concurrence upon this item and even then no information has been brought down. I do not desire to protract the discussion but I cannot sit silent and listen to any such statements as those to which the hon Minister of Customs has just given utterance. The promise has not been fulfilled in any respect whatever. Let there be no misconception about that. There has been an absolute neglect to fulfil it in any respect. The duty of the government was to bring down that information the very next time the House went into Committee of Supply. They did not do it then, nor did they do it on any subsequent occasion. Nor did they do it when this item came up in concurrence. That is what we complain of. It is idle to make any such assertions as those which have just fallen from the lips of the Minister of Customs.

Mr. PATERSON. The leader of the opposition is not fair in that. He said that the Prime Minister promised that he would give this information subsequently. What is the general understanding when a promise of that kind is made ?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. That it will be fulfilled.

Mr. PATERSON. That when the matter comes under consideration again, or when the information is asked for it will be fulfilled. The hon. gentleman surely does not mean to say that the Prime Minister would make a promise that he deliberately meant to break or that he would withhold any information because he did not want to bring it down. Is not the whole context of the Prime Minister's statement that when the Minister of Agriculture was in his place and the information was asked for he would give it.

Mr. FOSTER. And he has not.

Mr. PATERSON. He has done it to-day. I heard the hon. gentleman read the language but does not that carry with it the meaning that the explanation that is to be given will be given on another occasion and is it not implied that hon. gentlemen opposite will bring it back to the recollection of the House when it is taken up again ?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Absolutely, utterly and completely impossible that it should have any such meaning. I will tell the hon. gentleman why. The item is passed. It never will come up again in Committee of Supply. The item passed upon that understanding.

Mr. PATERSON. It is up now.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Not in Committee of Supply.

Mr. PATERSON. No, but explanations are being given now, apparently.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The hon. gentleman said that this promise had been fulfilled.

The promise was :

I shall bring down the particulars next time we go into Committee of Supply.

That was the promise. The hon. Minister of Customs does not seem to be anxious to get the item through without difficulty when he suggests that the promise has been fulfilled in any respect whatever. It has been absolutely violated and treated with contempt. It may have been through inadvertence but promises should not be made unless the ministry are capable of keeping them in mind. It is not the first time that this has occurred. I recollect letting an item go through about three sessions ago upon the distinct and definite pledge that explanations should be given by one of the ministers of the Crown before the session ended and when I asked for the explanation a few days afterwards, the session being about to conclude, that minister of the Crown had left Ottawa and gone to his home and the explanation was never given. We have had enough of this. Let these items either stand, or if they are passed upon the promise that information will be brought down at a particular time let that information be brought down or there will be difficulty in getting on with an item in concurrence or on occasions of this kind. I do not wish to be obstructive. I did not desire to be obstructive on that occasion. The hour was somewhat late, the Prime Minister said the information would be given and I let the item pass relying upon that promise. The promise has been treated with the utmost contempt by the government from that time to this.

Mr. PATERSON. It will be more in accord with hon. gentleman's usual language to use that word which he did and get the credit for it, that if there has been any neglect on the part of the Prime Minister it was through an inadvertence.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I have always said that I do not accuse the Prime Minister of doing it wilfully, but I do say that the Prime Minister or any other minister of the Crown should not make these promises unless he finds himself capable of bearing these things in his mind and carrying them out.

Mr. PATERSON. I prefer that expression inadvertence ' in referring to the Prime Minister.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I say that.

Mr. PATERSON. Well, I think the hon. gentleman does not usually go to the length of saying that he would treat a promise with contempt. I do not think the Prime Minister would treat any promise he made with contempt.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I have been listening to this lengthy discussion and I have been wondering why this undue haste in rushing this item through concurrence at this early date of the session. It is a long time yet to the first of July and I understand the minister is not in immediate need of this money. Surely he can wait until to-morrow; yet, he wants to rush the item through to-day before the information is laid on the table of the House. I think the request coming from this side of the House is an extremely reasonable one. All we ask is to see the grounds upon which this money should be paid, that we should be reasonably satisfied that this is a proper expenditure of public money and one day in the month of the session is all that is necessary, the minister tells us, to furnish the information which is required to satisfy this side of the House if he is in possession of such information. I ask him again : Why not accept the proposition, coming from this side of the House and let the matter stand over ? Why rush it unduly? It creates in the mind a very deep suspicion that there is something wrong, that the minister has some motive in thus pressing a vote of this kind upon the House in such a hasty way without the information which he says he can lay on the table. He told us repeatedly that he could lay the information on the table. What signifies it to us that he can do it if it is hidden away in the archives of his department where none of us can have the privilege of looking at it ? I appeal to the minister to just meet the wishes of the opposition and let this matter at least stand until he has fulfilled what he says he can do and then let him press for a vote after having given us the reasonable information which we think we on this side of the House are entitled to. I ask him again why press this vote at this time ?

Mr. PATERSON. It is not pressing it unduly. The vote was passed on the 6th of the month, eleven days ago. There has been no undue pressure.

Mr. HENDERSON. I know that it was passed in supply as the hon. minister states in consequence of a distinct understanding. Now let the conditions upon which it was passed be fulfilled. Let all the conditions that were then laid down, upon which we on this side of the House assented to the passing of that item, be fully complied with and I think the minister will then have some excuse for pressing for a vote. But, what is the real motive? What is the object? There is something behind all this, I am quite sure, because, to my mind one day should make little or no difference in the passing of this vote. Surely the government is not so terribly run or hard up for funds that it cannot wait for twenty-four hours in order to get this money. There seems to be some extreme need for it. I think the minister should take us into his confidence and tell us just why he must have this money to-day and why he cannot wait twenty-four hours for it.

Mr. BENNETT. The bailiff is coming in.

Mr. HENDERSON. I think the country is not so far gone as that. I do not think the department is so terribly poor. Over and over again hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent by this government long before they even asked for a vote. Time and again we were told by the Minister of the Interior that an item of thousands of dollars which we were asked to vote has been already spent and without the consent of parliament. I admit that the Minister of Agriculture seems to desire to adhere more closely to the proper rule, but I cannot see why it is so urgent that he should have this money to-day. Unless he waits until he gives us the information necessary, then the House and the country will believe that there is something rotten in the state of Denmark.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Is the resolution carried?

Mr. HENDERSON. No; I want an answer to my question.

Mr. FOSTER. There is no use for the minister to sit and say nothing because that will not work. We made a fair proposition: that this vote shall be dropped for the present as a standing reminder of the wilful neglect of the minister to do what he ought to do, and that he takes the rest of his money if he wants it. It may be well to inform the minister that if he is not reasonable he may find difficulties in his path that he knows not of.

Mr. FISHER. If the work is to go on this year this money must be voted within the next few days. Of course, if this item does not go through with the rest of these supplementary estimates it will not be reached until probably near the end of the fiscal year, and the work with regard to the Imperial Institute will be stopped to-morrow.

Mr. FOSTER. It should have been stopped before.

Mr. FISHER.—That is a matter of opinion.

Mr. FOSTER. Because you had no money.

Mr. FISHER. My hon. friend is incorrect. I had the money until to-day, and if this vote is not passed I will have to cable Mr. Hutchison to stop all preparations with regard to the Imperial Institute.

Mr. FOSTER. All right; cable away.

Mr. FISHER. The hon. gentleman says 'all right,' but I am satisfied that parliament wants this work to go on, and I judge from the opinions of gentlemen opposite that they also want it to go on. I point out what the postponement of this vote will involve, and I do not think parliament wants that to happen.

Mr. FOSTER. The man who gets into a difficulty has always to take a little trouble to get out of it. There are many ways and means that are open to the ministry. They can bring down an estimate and incorporate it in a Supply Bill almost any week, provided parliament is agreeable. It is not our fault this difficulty has arisen but the matter has been made an open challenge by the Minister of Customs, who after admitting that we had no information now says that every bit of information that could be asked for has been given by the Minister of Agriculture. But the Minister of Agriculture could not tell what space we had, what plan Mr. Hutchison has proposed so that we on this side of the House know nothing about it. As to the threat that the Minister of Agriculture will cable to-morrow and burst up the whole machine, let him carry it out if he likes. If he cannot find any way of getting money when it is not voted, all he has to do is to apply to some of the deputy ministers and he will find out how it is done.

Mr. J. D. REID. It is strange that the Minister of Agriculture always gets wrathy when we ask him for information about his estimates. He is always ready with a long speech, but he keeps away from the item and gives no information. I for one feel that there is something crooked behind this whole scheme when the Minister of Agriculture is afraid to explain it. He says he has the reports down in his office; if so it would not take ten minutes to send a messenger down and have them laid on the table of the House, and then the item could be properly passed. As to the threat that he will stop the work, it is only necessary to remind him that during the past few years thousands of dollars have been spent by this government for which no vote was taken. The government should have no fault to find with our proposition that this item should remain over until we get the necessary information: then it will likely go through without the least trouble.

Mr. PATERSON. Carried.

Mr. FOSTER. It is not carried. I am anxious the minister should get the important part of this Supply Bill through the House.

Mr. BARR. This is the first time in my experience in this parliament and in the Ontario legislature that I have ever heard a minister say that he had reached the last day and the last hour at which he could continue public works in the country unless the opposition came to his aid and voted money without being in possession of the necessary information. He tells us that he will send a cablegram to England stating that the government is 'bust'

Mr. BENNETT. He will have to send it 'collect.'

Mr. BARR. That is something that has never been before witnessed in this or any other parliament. For three long hours we have had discussed this very important question of the Imperial Institute, and I venture to say that during that time, whilst we have had from the opposition a great many pertinent questions placed before the Minister of Agriculture and the Minister of Customs, not one question has been answered by either of these hon. gentlemen, although they have talked all around them. The reason they have not given us any information, as they have told us frankly, is that they do not know anything about the matter themselves. The Minister of Agriculture, after being asked how many places the exhibition is at in London, has been unable to tell us. He first told us that it was only at one place, and then he shifted his ground and told us that there were two or three places, but he did not know the exact number. Then, when one hon. gentleman asked him the very pertinent question, who owns these exhibits, how are they sent over there, and what position do they occupy when they are put on exhibition, he tells us he does not know. I venture to say that if hon. gentleman had gone a little further and asked how many years have these goods been exhibited and in what state is the label at the present time, he would have told us that he does not know But we are going to have it all to-morrow. The report is on the hon. minister's desk, not five minutes walk from here, but he could not have it until to-morrow: and during that time the terrible calamity he threatens may happen, and he will telegraph over the ocean that this government must burst or this thing must stop This is an extraordinary state of affairs. In launching out on this new expenditure, we want some information, but we cannot get it. We have taken the ground that we cannot let this vote pass without that information. Then the minister says he will force it upon the opposition. All we can say is, let him call in the members and vote us down. Otherwise we must stay with the position we have taken—we must have some information on this vital question. We want to understand from the Minister of Agriculture whether he is going to bring this calamity upon the country or give us the information.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Next.

Mr. INGRAM. On a subject of so much importance to our friends opposite I am sorry to find that the Minister of Agriculture is not so apt to furnish information as he usually is. I remember on one occasion asking the hon. gentleman an important question in respect to——

An hon. MEMBER. Chickens?

Mr. INGRAM. Oh, no. I was drawing his attention to the fact that the sties on the experimental farm were not properly made—that they interfered with nature; and I asked him how cows should lie with respect to nature; and he told me sometimes one way and sometimes another. But to-day the hon. gentleman states that this work will have to stop unless this money is voted now. I remember a few years ago, when the hon. gentleman was exercised very much over the census question, he did not hesitate to take money voted for other purposes and expend it on the investigation of a census that had been taken ten years previous. I do not know whether the censure he received on that occasion has made him change his opinion; but the hon. gentleman, in failing to lay before this House the information which he has on this question, including the reports which he had in his possession last session, has shown great negligence of duty. I think it is not unreasonable for us to ask that this information be laid on the table before this vote is passed. Some hon. gentleman who was not here when this item was discussed before, have since visited the Imperial Institute in London, and they do not think that the exhibits there made on behalf of the Department of Customs are such as to justify the proposed expenditure of $18,000. In view of these statements, I think the hon. minister should not persist in forcing this item through to-day. The hon. Minister of Customs very often says, when we ask for information, 'Oh, wait for concurrence '. But the hon. gentleman has changed his tactics now ; he does not want us to discuss this vote even on concurrence. Evidently he does not want us to discuss it at all ; he does not want the information laid on the table ; he wants to lock the door after the horse is stolen. I for one am prepared to discuss this serious and vital question, as my hon. friend calls it, until midnight, if necessary. We shall have an opportunity to look into the matter between six and eight o'clock and furnish information upon it which has not been furnished by the minister. In the meantime hon. gentlemen opposite will have leisure to think this thing over, and if they cannot make up their minds at six o'clock, they may be able to do so at eight o'clock. Again I ask the hon. minister if it is his intention to pass this item now.

Mr. SPROULE. I wish to point out to the hon. minister that it is now six o'clock and he will have until eight o'clock to get the report. If he lays that before the House, I have no doubt that it will facilitate the passing of this vote.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. There is another thing I would ask the hon. minister to be prepared for this evening. One of these items is $20,000 to provide for expenses in connection with the Royal Commission on insurance. On what is this estimate founded ? Has any arrangement been made with the commissioners as to the compensation they are to receive ? Generally speaking what is the basis of this estimate ?

Mr. PATERSON. I shall have that information this evening.

At six o'clock, committee took recess.

After Recess.

Committee resumed at eight o'clock.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Shall this resolution pass ?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Has the minister succeeded in getting that report ?

Mr. FISHER. I may say that I telephoned my deputy and asked him to send it up to me. It has not yet arrived and I cannot say whether it will arrive tonight. He might not be able to get it at this late hour of the day. You can quite understand that the clerks would be all gone and the office closed, but I will guarantee it will be laid on the table tomorrow.

Mr. SPROULE. Had we not better postpone the item and take something else in the meantime.

Mr. PATERSON. With reference to the information asked by the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) I have seen the Finance Minister during recess with reference to the amount for the Insurance Commission. He has given me a memo. to the effect that the item was asked at the request of the Minister of Finance but was not based on a detailed estimate. It is difficult to make a close estimate owing to the uncertainty as to the time to be occupied by the commission. The commissioners are authorized to employ any assistance required. This is intended to cover the expenses of Judge MacTavish, chairman of the commission ; Mr. J. W. Langmuir, commissioner ; Mr. A. L. Kent, commissioner ; Mr. H. F. Ross, secretary ; Mr. Shepley, K.C., chief counsel ; Mr. Tilley, junior counsel; clerical assistance, stenographers and typewriters, Messrs. Butcher & Co., Toronto; and incidental expenses. Having regard to the number of persons employed and the probability that the inquiry may occupy considerable time, the minster thought that an appropriation of $20,000 was not an unreasonable one.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. That is up to the first of July?

Mr. PATERSON. Yes, this vote is included in this year's estimates.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. There is no arrangement as to the compensation of the commissioners.

Mr. PATERSON. The council have not fixed that.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. That has not been under consideration?

Mr. PATERSON. It has not yet been determined.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The lawyer's fees were fixed in advance; I did not want to take any responsibility there without knowing where I was.

Mr. SPROULE. As the minister has not the report would it not be better to let this stand until he gets it? Looking over the Hansard for several years, it seems the same subject has been under consideration at different times, and we have practically always got the same answer. The difference between then and now is that heretofore only a very moderate sum of money was asked, and the request was made upon the excuse that the full scheme had not been worked out, but that it would be in the future and the information would be given to the House. We have now evidently reached that stage because the sum asked this year is $18,000 in the supplementary and $8,000 in the original estimates, making $26,000, which must be for the purpose of carrying out some well defined scheme which must have been submitted to the department and through the department to council, before this vote would be asked, and that report should be before the House before we vote the money.

Mr. FISHER. Before six o'clock I explained that the change in the amount was owing to our not being able to utilize the exhibits at Liège and I do not see any information that I can give beyond the report. I tell my hon. friend frankly that I have not the report to lay on the table, I can have it to-morrow. I asked the deputy to get it to-night. He said he would try but he has to see the clerks to get it.

Mr. SPROULE. Might this not be left until it is got ?

Mr. PATERSON. It is an item in the Supply Bill.

Mr. FISHER. There will be an item in the main estimates for the next fiscal year about the Imperial Institute and every question can be discussed on that item as well as on this. Of course I appreciate that this does not mean that this money would not be voted the money would be voted and available until the first of July. I was in hopes that the whole work would be done by the first of July. The item I am now asking for is based on a report which says this amount will be sufficient to do the whole work.

Mr. SPROULE. It is on some report that the minister must have submitted to council.

Mr. FISHER. I did.

Mr. SPROULE. Surely he has that report under his own hand ?

Mr. FISHER. It is in the department ?

Mr. SPROULE. It is a very common practice—the Postmaster General did it the other night—to read to us a report of this kind which necessitated the House voting so much money for certain purposes. The minister has that report and he should lay it before the House.

Mr. INGRAM. Is any part of this $18,000 to be paid out for debts contracted within the last two or three years ?

Mr. FISHER. No.

Mr. INGRAM. Or previous to the present fiscal year ?

Mr. FISHER. No, there were no debts contracted on this account. Mr. Hutchison has, since he left Liége, been doing some work in London. We had available, in the original vote for the current year, something like $4,000. I do not remember the exact figures on which Mr. Hutchison has been working and he has laid out the plans for the procuring of a number of other exhibits which we have taken means to acquire. This has not yet been done because we can only do that work when this money is voted. This will not be used to pay for any work done in former years.

Mr. INGRAM. How far is the Cheapside office from the Imperial Institute building?

Mr. FISHER. The hon. member means the city office ? That must be four or five miles. One is in the heart of the city and the other in South Kensington.

Mr. INGRAM. Are there any exhibits from Canada in that building?

Mr. FISHER. Not at the present time.

Mr. INGRAM. How does it come that we have been paying rent for that for some time and nothing has been done?

Mr. FISHER. This is a building which is rented by the Imperial Institute and we pay a share of the rent. We have had an office there and Mr. Henderson Watson has been there regularly as well as at the Imperial Institute in the West End and has been using that as an office. In addition to the office there is a large room available for temporary exhibitions but we have not yet paid any money on that.

Mr. BARR. What does the minister propose to do with this $18,000 ? Is it to replace the present exhibits, to collect new exhibits, and what kind of exhibits, canned fruits, preserved fruits, grains of different kinds ; and does the Imperial Institute bear any part of the expense ? Having the report on the table we could learn the facts, and would not be obliged to depend on the ipse dixit of any hon. gentleman opposite, who not having seen the report, may not know much more of the fact than we do. It does seem to me that in two hours the minister could have secured this important document which we have sought and waited for so anxiously. We have no desire—I am sure I can speak for every hon. gentleman on this side—to waste the time of the House or protract this discussion ; we are most anxious to press forward the work of the House. But we are asked to vote $26,000 of the people's money, and surely we cannot be expected to do that until this report has been laid on the table. If the money is voted, no matter what we may find in the report afterwards, we may be told : You must not complain because the vote has already been passed. Under the circumstances, why cannot the leader of the House (Mr. Paterson) take up some other business, as is often done in such cases ? It would seem that the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher) has taken it into his head that this business must be put through no matter what hon. gentlemen on this side may think of it. If that is the position, we may find it necessary to prolong the discussion. But I can assure gentlemen opposite that we have no desire to do it. Still, we have a duty to perform just as important as that of the government, and our constituents will hold us responsible for the way in which we perform it. The country will blame us if items like this are allowed to pass without due consideration and it is afterwards found that there is something wrong about them. I submit that it is a very easy thing to get over this little difficulty upon which we have stumbled. If the Minister of Agriculture and the present leader of the House will just put their heads together—and it is still true that two heads are better than one—I am sure that it would be easy to arrange for the business of the House to go on without wasting further time.

Mr. INGRAM. The Imperial Institute is situated in South Kensington. With reference to the part of the building rented on Cheapside, towards the rental of which we have been contributing £100 a year, I understand from the minister that it has not been occupied. It would seem, then, that since 1901, this country has been paying £100 a year—increased to £200 within the past year—for which we have received no return. It would seem that there has been gross carelessness in paying that amount of rent for a building which was not occupied.

Mr. FISHER. As I explained a short time ago, the building in the city has been occupied by Mr. Watson, the curator of the institute, who has been occupying it as a city office, as a place where people might meet him and where he could carry on a great part of his correspondence. He has been using it all the time we have been paying rent for it.

Mr. PERLEY. While we are waiting for this report to come from the Department of Agriculture, I would like to say a word on the subject before the committee. I may say that I know the locality in question very well. The Imperial Institute is a place to which visiting Canadians naturally like to go when in London. But it is situated in the West End of London, a long distance from the business part or from any part likely to be visited by those having business transactions with the people of Canada. It was a very good place for the exhibition of 1862. But I say emphatically that it seems to me the expenditure this country is making in the Imperial Institute brings us very little return. If the country wishes, as a matter of sentiment to keep an exhibit in the Imperial Institute, well and good ; but as a means of bringing business to the people of this country, it seems to me to be absolutely useless. My recollection of the class of people I have seen at the Imperial Institute is that they were sightseers and tourists. But as to the people from the English provinces, from Scotland, Ireland and the continent who wish to do business in London, the last place they would be likely to be seen in is the Imperial Institute. I see no objection to spending a small sum of money to keep up an exhibit in the Imperial Institute, largely as a matter of sentiment, to do our share in making an exhibition illustrative of all parts of the British empire, but if we are going to have an exhibition in London for the purpose of bringing business to this country, it seems far and away better to spend our money in other parts of the city. In Charing Cross, where our immigration offices are, an exhibition could be established which everybody in London would have an opportunity to see. If we had an exhibition there, one could hardly go to London without learning something of Canada because everybody passes that corner. Or the money could be spent with better advantage in the city, in the neighbourhood of the Mansion House or East Cheap. I understand the minister to say that the office of the Imperial Institute in the city is not used for anything except correspondence or something of that kind. I wish to call the attention of the House to the way in which this matter has been brought up here for several years. Reference has already been made to what was said about it last year. On the 20th of February, 1905, the Minister of Agriculture said :

> I have just accounted for about $5,000, and I propose to apply the other $3,000 in preparing and sending forward exhibits to the Imperial Institute, where I hope to have them installed before the 1st of July. Some of the officers who are going to install our exhibits at Liège are expected to be free in time to return to London and start the work at the Imperial Institute. That is one of the advantages of having a permanent staff of officers for exhibition work.

Then he goes on to say, speaking of the city office :

> It is for two purposes. In the first place there has been a constant objection that the Imperial Institute was too far in the West End to be convenient for business men. In connection with the city office there is a show room, where I hope to have brief temporary exhibits. For instance, one week we may have an exhibit of canned goods, another week bacon and pork, another week something else ; and each exhibit will be advertised beforehand to the trade specially interested in the particular line of products exhibited. The exhibits in the city will be exhibits of goods of a perishable nature, lasting only a few days or a week, whereas the exhibition at the Imperial Institute at South Kensington is one of a more permanent and general character.

That was said last year by the hon. Min-
Minister of Agriculture. He was going to have this work done by the 1st of July. He was going to arrange to hold in the office in the city of London exhibits of perishable products and of different goods which would be advertised from time to time to those interested in the trade. I understand that even this has not yet been done. But I wish to call the attention of the House to what took place in the session of 1903-three years ago. On October 9, 1903, the hon. Minister of Agriculture, in answer to a question in regard to the Imperial Institute, stated:

I would suggest that we in Canada could very properly take one of the rooms in the city branch and from time to time make exhibits of different Canadian products. For instance, at one time we could have an exhibit of dairy products, butter and cheese, another time an exhibit of bacon, at another time of dressed poultry, at another time of minerals, or of some particular mineral with which Canada is particularly favoured. Then we might make an exhibit of certain manufactured goods which we thought we might be able to induce the British people to buy. These exhibits would be temporary, lasting perhaps a week or two weeks. These exhibits could be especially advertised and special invitations could be sent to those engaged in trade in the particular product which might be on exhibition.

In other words, the Minister of Agriculture last year in reference to this subject on February 28, spoke almost as if he had quoted the remarks which he had made on October 9, 1903. This expenditure which was to be made in the city for the purpose of this very good object which has been referred to in these two extracts and which was going to be made three years ago, has not been made yet. The minister states that the office is still not being used and he comes back to this House and asks us to grant him this money and more money than ever to pay for this exhibit at the Imperial Institute. Last year an estimate was passed for the sum of $8,000. The hon. minister stated that he only wanted to expend $5,000 for ordinary purposes and that he wanted to spend $3,000 to try and make this exhibit a better one than it was. At that time nothing was said about this expenditure of $18,000. Now we have come to March 26, 1906. In the meantime the minister has gone on apparently arranging to spend money in London for this purpose, although it was never voted by parliament. It is inconceivable to me that this should be the last day upon which this money can be voted or that otherwise this work in London will be stopped. As my hon. friend from Dufferin (Mr. Barr) said this afternoon: It is impossible that the minister should have waited until the last stroke of the clock before he came here to get this money voted which he says he needs to carry on his work in London. This work has evidently been going on for some time. The minister has told us that he has spent no money over there which has not been voted by parliament. Last year he told us that the $3,000 extra which was asked for was going to be used for the purpose of fixing up the exhibit in London. Now he asks for $18,000. Of course, I accept the statement of the minister, but it seems to me that this government must be pledged to large sums of money which are to come out of this $18,000. I can hardly believe that no work has been done, that no contracts have been entered into, that no pledges have been made, because otherwise there would be no necessity for the immediate voting of this $18,000, but at the same time the minister tells us that he cannot wait any longer, and that all of this money is going to be spent before June 30 next. In view of the debates which took place in 1903 and 1905 it seems to be rather strange for the hon. minister to come here and tell us that he is going to do exactly the same things that he promised to do three years ago and one year ago. The fact of his having made these promises at these different times it seems to me ought to be sufficient to deter him from coming here and asking parliament to vote this larger sum of money for the purpose of rearranging or putting in order this dingy exhibit in the Imperial Institute. I think it would be much better to stop spending money on this exhibit and to spend more in the city of London in the office where the hon. minister told us in 1903 he was going to have the special exhibits, but which he tells us now he has not been able to arrange for them.

Mr. LALOR. Would the hon. minister tell us what class of goods are exhibited in the Canadian exhibit at London ?

Mr. FISHER. At the present time or in the past? There are exhibits from all the provinces, which are not very creditable to Canada, and we are trying to place goods on exhibition which will be creditable.

Mr. LALOR. That seems to be an admission of the hon. minister that the class of goods that is on exhibition in London as an exhibit representing this great Dominion of Canada is not a credit to this country. Having spent year after year large sums of money voted at each session of parliament to keep up this Canadian exhibit in London, the hon. minister now tells us that this exhibit is actually a disgrace to the country. I would like to know what has been done with the large sums of money we have voted each year for the exhibit he has over there. The hon. minister comes forward and asks us for $18,000 upon the promise that he will bring down an explanation at a latter date as to how this money is to be expended. I am not a very old member of the House and therefore I cannot speak from the experience of a number of years as to this particular subject, but we have been told to-day that this same kind of promise has been made to this House year after year by the hon. minister in connection with the Imperial exhibit in the city of London. My own opinion is that the money is absolutely wasted. I do not believe it is any benefit to this country whatever to have that exhibit over there unless the exhibit is made a very much better one than it is now, and unless the hon. minister in charge of that particular department exercises his ability, in the direction of improving the exhibit we have in that country. We are told that this exhibit cannot continue unless this money is voted actually to-day; that the hon. minister cannot wait until to-morrow for the sum of money that is asked, and we were served with the threat this afternoon by the hon. minister that unless the money is voted he would actually cable over and have this show or exhibition closed up. I do not think it would be a very great loss to this country if it were closed up, and I do not believe it is of very great advantage to the farming interest that this exhibition should be carried on from year to year. We have been told to-day by hon. members of this House who have visited London and visited this Canadian exhibit that it is an absolute disgrace. One of the members of this House who visited that exhibition says that he found in one of the corners of a room where this particular exhibit is located a heap of coal that represented the industries of the maritime provinces. I suppose that heap of coal in a dusty room that perhaps had not been cleaned out for months was to advertise to the people of Great Britain and of foreign countries the resources and wealth of this great Dominion of ours. I think that these items should not only be properly discussed in the House, but that they should be properly explained before we vote moneys such as we are asked to vote to-night. The hon. minister seems to be perfectly determined and sullen in his manner as to the voting of this amount.

He appears to have made up his mind that he is going to force the vote through this House by the slavish majority which sits behind him, and regardless of the fact that no explanation is given. But these gentlemen opposite are not always so anxious to vote money, even in a better cause. A few days ago this House was asked to vote a trifling pension to a man who lost his sight through serving his Queen and country in South Africa, but the Liberal majority in this House refused to vote that small sum of money. Yesterday these same gentlemen refused to vote a small grant to the Fenian Raid Veterans who fought for Canada when most of us were in our childhood. This same government majority on the other side of the House voted down a resolution which asked that a small land grant be given as a recognition of the patriotism and courage of these men who risked their lives in defending Canada. But when it comes to voting $18,000 for an exhibition which the minister says himself is a disgrace to the country, then they are perfectly willing to vote the money. So far as I am concerned I will not vote this money until the item is properly explained and until we know where the money is to go.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Shall the resolution carry?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Why did not the Minister of Agriculture send for the report this afternoon when the difficulty first came up, and when we might have had it in twenty minutes?

Mr. FISHER. I thought the explanation I was giving would be sufficient.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I should think the minister would very soon have been undeceived about that.

Mr. GANONG. Will the minister tell us if he has sent the cablegram to stop the work in London, because if he has done so we are merely wasting time? I would also like to ask him if he has anything to do with that wonderful Canadian exhibit in the Crystal Palace.

Mr. FISHER. My department has nothing to do with that.

Mr. GANONG. All Canadians should thank Heaven that you have not. I was there last summer and I was ashamed to see the name 'Canadian' inscribed over such an exhibit. At the same time I believe that if the money expended on the Imperial Institute located as it is, had been spent at the Crystal Palace it would have been a better inducement to immigrants. I also visited the Imperial Institute and I agree with every word that has been said in reference to it. As it is to-day it is a discredit to Canada. It may serve some scientific purpose, but as to immigration, the people who visit the Imperial Institute are not of the class who emigrate from the old country. How much of this $18,000 goes to new officials who are clamouring for positions?

Mr. FISHER. No.

Mr. GANONG. Does the minister say he does not know?

Mr. FISHER. I understood my hon. friend to ask whether any new officials were to be appointed and I said no.

Mr. BLAIN. Will the minister tell us if we are to expect a report from Mr. Hay and Mr. Brodie at the same time that we get Mr. Hutchison's report?

Mr. FISHER. I am able to some extent to satisfy the curiosity of my hon. friends. My deputy has sent me the blue prints of the plans and two communications, one in the form of a letter, and one a memo. for Mr. Hutchison which deals with the Imperial Institute and other matters.

Mr. FOSTER. Will the minister read the report ?

Mr. FISHER. I can read parts of it, or the whole of it if hon. gentlemen wish. It will take me some minutes to select the parts which refer to the Imperial Institute.

Mr. SPROULE. I wish particularly to know whether the original plan upon which the Imperial Institute used to be conducted is to be continued or whether some change is to be made ? Under the original plan each colony contributed its share towards the maintenance of the institute but that was not satisfactory, and year after year the explanation was given that it was not creditable to the colonies or to the empire, and that it was intended to make a change. A small amount of money was asked to pay the expenses of Mr. Watson and others; originally there was only one office but later on there was one in Kensington and one in London. Our King, then Prince of Wales. was at the head of the institute, but afterwards the constitution was changed and the High Commissioner for Canada was one of the governors. The Minister of Agriculture informed the House that a change had been made but we have never had from him to this hour a report as to that change. We were formerly asked to vote money upon the plea that it was only a small amount, but to-day we are asked to vote $26,000 for the Imperial Institute in place of the former sum of $8,000. Before that money is voted the minister should tell us what the other colonies intend to do, how the money is to be spent ; what proportion if any is to be spent for buying exhibits, what proportion for salaries and what proportion for rent.

What is the well-defined plan ? That is what the House ought to know, and I think the House is not only within its rights in asking for it, but would be doing less than its duty if it did not demand from the minister that information before we vote such a large amount of money. As the minister has the report in his hand, I have no doubt that after he goes over it he will give us the information which he seems so reluctant to give.

Mr. FISHER. If hon. gentlemen wish me to read this, I think I can read it now. It is written from Liège. After an introduction, it goes on .

You may not be aware that we have made quite a departure from the old way of exhibiting minerals. The minerals which we could use to good advantage are silver, lead, nickel, copper, zinc, antimony, iron, corundum, asbestos, mica and graphite. It is needless to repeat we have been complimented here in the way we have placed this exhibit before the people, because in all of the geological museums in Europe, that is, from all the information we can gather, they stick to the old way of exhibiting the specimens in cases and without any information as to what the mineral is intended for, and furthermore an object lesson is never dreamed of. To make a radical change from what has been done is what I am now suggesting to you, and if carried out, I am more than confident we can make this exhibit draw, besides make many of the doubters admit they did not know what they were talking about.

In the meantime, I will try and explain to you how we intend working on the exhibit, commencing with the minerals. On the blue-print which I am forwarding, you will notice I have marked the street line, then the entrance. Of course all of the exhibits now on this floor will be removed. Just in front as you enter the room commences No. 1 case. This will be used for asbestos, the rock being pyramided up from the base say half way up, then the fine material scattered on top ; above this, small manufactured articles that are well known to the trade. No. 2, nickel is to be placed in the same manner as the asbestos, or as near as possible, taking into consideration the material. This to be carried out with the other materials in the same way until you come to the section taken up by the staircase. You will notice between each case there is quite a space for mineral charts and photographs. The low and high cases shown along by the windows are for small specimens.

After passing the staircase section the agricultural exhibit commences. The large cases against the wall are to contain our immigration pictures or the cattle pictures, just as is thought best. These pictures are to be placed in the centre of each case. From the edge of the picture to the edge of the glass will be filled in so as to make a long bevel. This space will be decorated with grasses and grain and straw, which can be done very effectively. The other cases, similar to the small mineral cases will be used for cereal and grain specimens in bottles, also horticultural specimens. The space between the large cases will be used for photographs and reading material pertaining to agriculture. I am convinced this floor can be made satisfactory to you and any one who may be interested in the welfare of Canada.

In regard to the upstairs section, which will be a mixture of everything, I would like to let this stand before saying what is best to do with it, because when we commence on the lower floor to work I can have time to think out what is best to do with it ; at the same time, I am satisfied I can take care of it when the time comes.

You will notice the cost of the cases will be in the neighbourhood of $7,000. Should it be decided to use our exhibition cases instead of the small cases shown on plan, we would not reduce the cost materially, and, as I have said in one of my letters to you, we would be losing a good advertisement for Canada by taking these cases off the roll and making an alteration in them, no matter how very expensive, which would rob them of the novelty of being knock-downs. These have been admired by many who complimented us on having such ingenious and novel cases.

You will notice the large mineral cases which we intend placing against the wall, the exhibit will be in quantity. Starting at No. 1, asbestos, No. 2, corundum, No. 3, nickel, and so on to No. 9. I estimate the value of the material to be used at $2,500.

I might say any material now in the institute, such as building stones, &c., will have to be repolished and all rust specimens washed.

Agricultural exhibit.—Say ten pictures at $200 each, $2,000. Add to this grain samples, straws and grasses for decorating purposes, say $500; photos, reading matter, neatly lettered, $500. Add to all this, cost of neat signs for main hall and alcove cases, $500.

Upper flat on second floor.—On this flat it may be found advisable to purchase a few cases not to exceed $1,000. Should it also be found necessary we would use some of our mounted specimens and heads. In regard to heads, I notice in the institute they have some which when originally placed there were very good specimens, but they are no good now, therefore will have to be recovered, which will take some time to do; therefore will have to replace them with some of our stock. In doing this, I think it would cost about $2,000.

Woods.—With what they have there and adding to it some we have, I am satisfied $500 will cover this cost.

In the matter of horticulture, I think for fruit and bottles we would require $750.

For labour, cartage in London and living allowance for members of the staff who would be required, say in all $3,000. Add to this for unforeseen expenses, $500.

In making this estimate I am placing everything as to cost high enough to be on the sure side.

The amount of money required to finish the work, not taking into consideration the cost of the specimens required, would be in the neighbourhood of $14,000. Should this proposition be entertained by you it would be necessary to let me know as soon as possible so that I can close with the contractors for the cases. It would take them two months to complete the work.

When in London one question put to me by Lord Strathcona was what it would cost to make the change I intended making? I said about $20,000. He said in that case I would have to see the committee in reference to it, meaning as I took it, he would see how long the institute people would let us remain in the building. I merely made the remark I was only giving to Mr. Fisher an estimate of what I thought would be required to make a first rate exhibit in the Canadian section, and no doubt if he found anything that did not harmonize with the undertaking he would communicate with Mr. Fisher, and I was satisfied Mr. Fisher would be pleased to fall in with his views.

Here are some tenders which have been received: Items of cost of the proposed change to be made in the Canadian exhibit in the Imperial Institute, London:

Statement as to the cost of proposed change to be made in the Canadian exhibit in the Imperial Institute, London.

Cases on ground floor for mineral and agricultural exhibits	$7,000
Cost of minerals to be furnished by exhibition branch	2,500
Photos and charts, agricultural exhibit	500
Ten pictures at $200 each	2,000
Grain samples straw and grasses for decorating purposes	500
Photos, reading matter neatly lettered	500
Cost of large signs for main hall and above wall cases, upper floor or ground floor	500
Cost of cases which may be required	$1,000
Mounted specimens and heads	2,000
Woods	500
Horticulture, fruit and bottles	750
Labour, cartage in London, living allowance for members of staff	3,000
Unforeseen expenses, say	500
	$21,250

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I did not observe in Mr. Hutchison's report any reference to any exhibit of the fisheries. Is that not to be provided for in any way?

Mr. FISHER. He has not provided for it in this. I think it ought to be.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I should think that the importance of that industry would justify some exhibit, and it would not be difficult to provide one.

Mr. FISHER. I think there are already some specimens there. I have a letter from Mr. Hutchison referring to specimens there which he hoped to utilize. The specimens of fish are rather better than most of the exhibits.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I did not gather whether any of those cases are to be manufactured out of Canadian woods and in that way bring our forest products into notice.

Mr. FISHER. Mr. Hutchison does not mention that fact. The cases are very largely of glass.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. It is extremely desirable to consider what Lord Strathcona has suggested with regard to the possibility of new arrangements being made by the imperial authorities.

Mr. FISHER. In consequence of this report I wrote Lord Strathcona on that very point and he wrote back that the arrangements were continued and would continue many years.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Some eleven or twelve years ago I saw the exhibit and was very much impressed with its absolute inadequacy. If we are to have an exhibit, we ought to have one worthy of the country. But in listening to hon. gentlemen who have visited England more recently and understand better the conditions there, I have been very much impressed with their suggestions as to the place where the exhibit should be made. It is undoubtedly true that but few people have the opportunity of seeing this exhibit. Under present conditions, that was rather fortunate, but if we are going to spend a very substantial sum each year, and the sum asked for is very substantial—only three years ago the minister thought that $2,000 would be sufficient to prepare and place in that building a fairly good exhibit—if we are going very much beyond what was contemplated then, the government should very carefully consider the place where this exhibit is to be put. We are going to spend a good many thousand dollars to prepare our exhibit and shall be called on every year to vote a large sum to keep it up, and therefore the question of location becomes very important. This is a matter in which the government must take the responsibility, but still it is not out of place for us to point out that the question of location, under the proposed new conditions, is much more important than it has been hitherto. I trust that before final arrangements are made, my hon. friend will take that carefully into his consideration.

Mr. SPROULE. This is a splendid illustration of the unwisdom of a minister coming before the House without the information which the House ought to have. There can be no doubt that if the information now furnished had been given promptly, this item would have passed before recess. I think it is desirable to ascertain whether the provinces are joining in this or not.

Mr. FISHER. They are not.

Mr. SPROULE. Whether they do or not, we ought to make the best display possible. We are spending too much money to have any of it wasted, and if necessary we should spend more along the same lines so long as it will do good.

Mr. FOSTER. I notice that about $14,000 of the $20,000 is for cases in which to house the exhibits. It strikes me that you will not get a very comprehensive representation of Canadian products with the $5,000 or $6,000 that are left. $14,000 to be put into cases and photographs and fittings generally, rather than into the products themselves, seems rather out of proportion.

Mr. FISHER. The cost of the cases comes to only $8,000.

Mr. FOSTER. Yes, but the other mechanical work comes to about $6,000 more.

Mr. FISHER. I think my hon. friend is mistaken. The items are as follows :

Cases on ground floor for mineral and agricultural exhibits	$ 7,000
Cost of minerals to be furnished by exhibition branch	2,500
Photos and charts, agricultural exhibits	500
Ten pictures at $200 each	2,000
Grain samples, straw and grasses for decorating purposes	500
Photos, reading matter neatly lettered	500
Cost of large signs for main hall and above wall cases, upper floor or ground floor	500
Cost of cases which may be required	1,000
Mounted specimens and heads	2,000
Woods	500
Horticulture, fruit and bottles	750
Labour, cartage in London, living allowance for members of staff	3,000
Unforeseen expenses, say	500
	$21,250

Mr. FOSTER. That carries out my general idea that the amount spent on the products themselves to be exhibited is not very large. For instance what can you show of the agricultural products of Canada which would be at all sufficient for $700 ? It seems to me that would be very small.

Mr. FISHER. Those things are got very cheaply.

Mr. FOSTER. They are got up cheaply.

Mr. FISHER. Not got up cheaply, but obtained cheaply; it does not take much money to get a large quantity.

Mr. FOSTER. But it seems to me that is a very insufficient amount. Has the minister any information as to the number of visitors annually at the Imperial Institute ? I imagine that not many business men go there, nor do the great bulk of the common people who are seeking homes; it is more of a gentlemen's reserve or for people who have scientific tastes, and are comparing the products of different countries. In my time the attendance was very limited and it became almost a question whether it would not have to be shut up altogether owing to the very small patronage. The visiting patronage may have increased but I think the chances are against it; it is out of the current stream of travel and consequently has not many visitors.

Mr. FISHER. I explained to the member from Toronto (Mr. Kemp) that the value of the institute is largely owing to the information it gives to people seeking information for a specific purpose, scientific or industrial. I do not consider that the popular attendance at the institute is likely to be so large as it might be in some other place.

Mr. FOSTER. What would be the cost of up-keep, as far as the staff is concerned ?

Mr. FISHER. That would be covered by the figures I gave last year, $4,500 or $5,000 a year, for the staff and our subscription to the institute.

Mr. BLAIN. What about the reports of the other two gentlemen Mr. Hay and Mr. Brodie ?

Mr. FISHER. My deputy has not sent them. These are two inferior officers of the exhibition staff, that is to say they are under Mr. Hutchison. They were in London attending to some short time exhibitions last year, held under the auspices of the grocers and allied trades, the bakers, &c., and I asked them while there to visit the institute and give me some idea of how the building could be so decorated and arranged as to enable us to make a good exhibit. They sent a short report signed by one of them but it did not go into details as Mr. Hutchison's did, and it was not one on which I would be prepared to act without further information and that I got from Mr. Hutchison.

Mr. BLAIN. Would the minister lay it on the table at a future date ?

Mr. FISHER. I will.

Mr. PERLEY. During the last two or three years the minister has taken votes which he has explained were intended to carry on weekly or periodical exhibits in London of perishable products, poultry, bacon, &c. I understand that has not been done and I would like the minister to explain why he stated this would be done and it has not been done. It seems to me it would have been of great service to the farmers of the country.

Mr. FISHER. Simply because we have not been able to get at it.

Mr. PERLEY. The money has been voted.

Mr. FISHER. It has not been spent.

Mr. J. D. REID. I see that last year the expenditure was $7,940; of that $3,000 is on account of mineral exhibits so that there have been practically nothing but mineral exhibits in this institute up to the present time and it seems that now there is to be a material change in the exhibits in this institute. The minister has only about $750 in that statement for agricultural products. That is a very small amount to be expended in that way and for it I believe it would be almost impossible to give a fair exhibit of our dairy products which are so important owing to the large exports of them. At the same time, I feel that in this exhibit there should be some examples of our manufactures. I do not think there is anything for that included in this item. Perhaps the minister would explain.

Mr. FISHER. We would expect these to be supplied by the manufacturers. We shall be glad to receive them and to see to their being properly exhibited.

Mr. J. D. REID. Has any notice to that effect been sent out ?

Mr. FISHER. I could not do that until I knew whether the money was to be voted. But as soon as the work is in progress that will be done.

Progress reported.

SUPPLY BILL.

Hon. WM. PATERSON (Minister of Customs) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 56) for granting to His Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending June 30, 1906.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

Mr. PATERSON. I would like, if the House unanimously agrees, to put the Bill through its several stages at once.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not see any objection to that.

Bill read the second time, considered in committee and reported.

Mr. PATERSON moved the third reading of the Bill.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I have not seen copies of the Bill, but I assume that it is in the usual form and contains only the items that have been passed.

Mr. PATERSON. It is the Bill that was handed me by the clerk of the House.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the third time and passed.

SUPPLY—DIRECTOR OF GEOLOGICAL SURVEY.

Hon. WM. PATERSON (Minister of Customs) moved that the House go into Committee of Supply.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Before you leave the Chair, Mr. Speaker, there is a matter to which I would like to bring the attention of the government. On the 20th of this month, just a week ago, there was a discussion with regard to the appointment of a permanent head of the Geological Survey. The hon. member for East Lambton (Mr. Armstrong) made inquiry of the Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) with regard to the matter, and the Prime Minister replied as follows :

> The government has decided to make an appointment and it will be made inside of a week.

Would the Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson) be good enough to tell us who has been appointed ?

Mr. PATERSON. I understand that the appointment is about to be made. The House will probably be informed to-morrow.

JAPANESE TREATY.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. May I also direct the attention of the government to a request I made on the 12th of March for copies for the orders in council and correspondence with regard to the new treaty with Japan. From the discussion that then took place it appears that the treaty was signed on January 31. We were promised that the documents relating to it should be laid on the table, and I should be glad if this request should receive the attention of the government at the earliest possible moment. I would refer the Minister of Customs to page 126 of 'Hansard' of this year, where the minister will see what it was that I asked for.

RURAL MAIL DELIVERY.

Mr. HAUGHTON LENNOX (South Simcoe). Before you leave the Chair, Mr. Speaker, I wish to again inquire of the Postmaster General (Mr. Aylesworth) with regard to the return to the order of the House made upwards of a year ago for documents with reference to free rural mail delivery. The hon. gentleman has not given me any information as to when we may expect that return.

Hon. A. B. AYLESWORTH (Postmaster General). The papers are in course of preparation.

Mr. LENNOX. Has the hon. minister ascertained the cause of the delay ? A good deal more than a year has elapsed since the order was passed. It seems a very long time to take for a return of this kind.

Mr. AYLESWORTH. The matter had never been called to my personal attention until it was mentioned in the House by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lennox). I then made an investigation as to the stage at which the matter had arrived, and promptly gave directions that the papers should be prepared in answer to the order of the House.

Mr. LENNOX. Can the minister say when we may expect the papers ?

Mr. AYLESWORTH. I have not made inquiry lately, but, I should think, within a few days.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE.

Mr. PATERSON. The hon. member for West Huron (Mr. Lewis) had given notice that he wanted to speak when supply was moved for. But he does not seem to be in the House at the moment. I mention it now in case——

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I suppose that on account of the late hour the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lewis) has decided to postpone it until a future day.

INQUIRY FOR RETURNS.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. There are a number of returns which have been ordered this session, and which should be brought down soon. I mention this to the government, because, in a great many cases, I took the precaution to notify the departments ten days or a fortnight before the House opened that these returns would be moved for. I did this in order that the necessary preparation be made and that no undue delay should occur in bringing down the documents. I do not think that any of them have yet been brought down. I gave this unusual notice in order that we might expedite the work of the session. That would be entirely in vain unless the returns are brought down somewhat earlier than we might otherwise expect them. I took it for granted that when I gave the departments notice ten days or two weeks before the House opened some work might be done on the documents and that we would not need to wait a month or six weeks in order to have the returns brought down. It seems to me that some of the returns asked for might already have been brought down.

Mr. PATERSON. We think that we have been very prompt this year.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Have they been brought down ?

Mr. PATERSON. There have been a great many returns brought down. I am only speaking from memory, however.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Have there been ?

Mr. PATERSON. I think so.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I was not aware of it. I will look into that.

Mr. PATERSON. I only state this from general observation. I do not know.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Of course, I speak under correction. I have not observed that any returns ordered by this side have been brought down. However, I will make inquiry of the clerk.

Mr. PATERSON. I thought the hon. gentleman spoke about returns made for last year.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. No, this year.

Mr. PATERSON. You mean returns moved for this year ?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Yes. I was endeavouring to explain to the hon. Minister of Customs—I may not have made myself understood—that in order to expedite the work of the session I gave notice to all the departments that certain returns would be moved for in order that the preparation might be commenced and that these returns might be brought down at an earlier date than they would otherwise be expected. In view of that it seems to me that we should expect some of these returns very soon; in fact, we have been expecting them before this. I mention this in order that all possible expedition may be used, because, the Minister of Customs understands, of course, that if returns which are required are not brought down delay must necessarily ensue. We cannot properly discuss subjects unless we have certain information and it was with the view of avoiding delay that I gave notice to the departments about ten days or two weeks before the session opened in order that the departments might begin the work of copying the documents which the House would require.

Mr. PATERSON. As far as my department are concerned they are working on returns and I think they were doing that before they were really moved for and I have no doubt that other ministers are expediting these returns as much as they can. Some of the returns are voluminous and take some time to prepare.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I understand that.

Mr. PATERSON. We have one return desired by my hon. friend from Lambton (Mr. Armstrong) that we are prepared to lay on the table almost as soon as the House orders it and there is another that has been moved for that is now in course of preparation. I have no doubt that all the ministers will note what the hon. gentleman has said. I will mention it to them as well.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I have spoken twice to the Prime Minister, I think, asking for a return from the office of the Secretary of State of all orders of the House during the past two sessions that have not yet been complied with. The Prime Minister thought there would be no difficulty in procuring a return of that kind from the department mentioned. We have not yet had it and I would be very much obliged indeed to the hon. Minister of Customs if he would take a note of this also and endeavour to expedite the preparation of such a statement or memorandum.

Mr. SPROULE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the attention of the hon. leader of the House for a moment to a return ordered by this House a year ago giving the number of civil servants who have been employed from 1896 to 1905, both in the inside and outside service. That return was moved for early in March. The Order of the House issued then, the return was only brought down a few days before the close of the session, which I believe ended on the 19th or 20th of July, and even then there was only a partial return. The Department of Public Works had not included their return in it and there is no information since then, as far as I can learn, as to whether an effort has been made to comply with the Order of the House. I think it is not as it should be. A return is of little value unless it is as complete as possible, and surely it is not so voluminous that it could not be got ready for the House inside of one year. It must be over a year since the House ordered that return. I would ask the hon. leader of the House to take note of it and endeavour to ascertain whether the Order of the House has been complied with and if not to have it complied with at as early a date as possible.

Mr. PATERSON. Perhaps the hon. gentleman, having knowledge of the matter, would send me over a little note which refers me to some date or page to assist me in finding it.

Mr. SPROULE. Yes, I will do that.

Mr. BARKER. I would ask when we may expect the report of the Department of the Interior. It has been asked for over and over again and promised. We ought to have it.

Mr. OLIVER. The report is completely in the hands of the Printing Bureau and having made inquiry within the last day or two I am informed that it will be available for presentation to the House within a day or two.

Mr. BARKER. We have had that before. I hope you will realize the promise immediately. I would also ask when we shall have the report of the Department of Marine. We have had the Fisheries Report but not the Marine Report.

Mr. PATERSON. My hon. friend the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Brodeur) is not in just now. I think that all the reports will be in the hands of the printers and I suppose they are pushing them forward as fast as possible. If the hon. gentleman would renew the question when the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries is in he might be able to get an answer.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Is he within the precincts of the House ?

Mr. PATERSON. I fancy so. If not unwell you will find ministers somewhere in the vicinity if not in the chamber.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Perhaps you had better send for him.

Mr. BARKER. I would like to call the hon. minister's attention to one more matter. On the 14th of the month I asked for a statement from the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals as to certain transactions with the Eastern Railway Supply Co. The hon. minister answered two or three of the questions and promised a return as to the others almost immediately. He said : 'There will be no unnecessary delay in bringing the papers down.' The minister has not been here for some days and we require the papers for the public accounts committee. I call attention to the matter because from the nature of the papers I think there is no reason why they should not be in the department and possibly it is only owing to the absence of the minister that we have not them here. Without them our proceedings before the public accounts committee will be delayed.

Mr. AMES. May I ask the Minister of the Interior whether the reports of the Dominion Lands Branch and of the Surveyor General are also in the hands of the printer and will come down at the same time as the report of the Department of the Interior.

Mr. OLIVER. The complete report of the Department of the Interior, as I have already said will be available to the House within a very few days.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. And will include these ?

Mr. OLIVER. Will include these, so I understand.

Motion agreed to, and House went into Committee of Supply.

Indian school, maritime provinces, Ontario and attendance and medicines, Quebec, $4,200.

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). For all services under which expenditure is continuous throughout the twelve months a reduction has been made in these items on the basis of nine months. This applies to expenses of management, school grants, medical attendance, miscellaneous charges, implements, live stock, &c. But there are certain sub-heads under which a reduction cannot be made as the expenditure takes place early in the year. In these cases the full amount of the requirements for the fiscal year of twelve months has to be voted and this fact accounts for the estimate not being the even twenty five per cent reduction. Under the partial reduction of twenty-five per cent the estimates are less than for 1895-96 by $325,601. If they had been made out on the old basis, twelve months compared with twelve months, it would have shown a reduction of $60,000 approximately which occurs under the sub-heads of cattle, school buildings, and food supplies for Manitoba and the Northwest Territories.

Indian school, maritime province, Ontario and Quebec, $40,072.50.

Mr. BARR. How many schools are there?

Mr. OLIVER. In Ontario 72 day schools and 6 industrial and boarding schools.

Mr. BLAIN. Where are these located?

Mr. OLIVER. Fort William boarding school, Mohawk Institute, Brantford; Mt. Elgin Institute, Mt. Elgin; Wawanosh and Shingwauk, Sault Ste. Marie; a school for boys and a school for girls, Manitoulin Island.

Mr. SPROULE. There is an increase of about $4,000.

Mr. OLIVER. That is on account of repairs to the Mt. Elgin Institute which cost $3,000.

Mr. J. D. REID. Are these teachers required to have any certificates?

Mr. OLIVER. They require to have at least third-class certificates.

Mr. FOSTER. Normal school training?

Mr. OLIVER. Normal school training is not an absolute requirement.

Mr. BARR. As a matter of fact, have they all certificates?

Mr. OLIVER. I am informed that they all have certificates.

Mr. J. D. REID. Do they teach any other language than English?

Mr. OLIVER. In Ontario English is the only language taught. In Quebec French is taught in some of the schools.

Mr. DANIEL. How many schools are in the maritime provinces, where are they situated, and how many pupils are there?

Mr. OLIVER. The number of day schools in Nova Scotia is 11, in New Brunswick 6, and in Prince Edward Island, 1.

Mr. DANIEL. Where are those in New Brunswick situated?

Mr. OLIVER. Burnt Church and Eelground in Northumberland County, Kingsclear and St. Mary's in York County, Tobique in Victoria County, Big Cove in Kent County.

Mr. DANIEL. What is the number of pupils attending these schools?

Mr. OLIVER. The total number enrolled is 153, with an average attendance of 87.

Mr. BLAIN. Is there any system of inspection in these schools, and if so, what is the system?

Mr. OLIVER. They are inspected by the public school inspectors of each province, who make returns in regard to their inspection to the Indian Department.

Mr. FOSTER. What has the minister to say with reference to the progress of Indian children in these schools? Are they making satisfactory progress? What are they fitted for? What do they become as products of the schools?

Mr. OLIVER. I do not know just how to answer the question. There is no doubt that the Indian children are fairly capable and apt pupils, but as to the effect the education which they have acquired has had upon their general life, I am not able to answer definitely.

Mr. FOSTER. I would not expect the minister, with his short acquaintance with the work, to be able to answer definitely; but what I want to get at is this. Does the Indian Department, which cares for these children and provides the means of their education, pay attention to anything besides simply paying the salaries of the teachers and the fees of the medical men and so on? Does it keep track of the progress of the Indian children, beyond simply teaching them to read, and may be write and cipher a little? What progress do the Indian children make more than that, and what progress do they make in these lines?

Mr. OLIVER. In the province of Ontario the Indians are showing considerable progress in education and in civilization, and are taking some interest in the ordinary work of civilization in their vicinity according to their condition in life.

Mr. BARR. Are they taught to work on farms in Ontario?

Mr. OLIVER. There is no system of farm instruction in Ontario, but a large percentage of the Indians are practical farmers and some of their work is highly creditable.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I have been a little interested in this question, and have taken some opportunities of endeavouring to find out what advantage it is to the Indian children to receive instruction in these schools; and the very limited attention I have given to the subject has led me to the conclusion that if you send the Indian children back to the tribe and among those who have no education at all, they relapse almost immediately into the same condition of barbarism as their ancestors; but if you segregate those who have had some education, if you send them out to employment of some kind, or put them on a separate part of the reserve and keep them by themselves, a very decided improvement ensues. That is the information which has come to me in a more or less fragmentary way from different sources. I would like to know if there is anything in that suggestion, which seems to point to the conclusion that a great deal of care should be paid by the department to the after course of life of the Indian children educated in the schools. It does not seem to be of much use to educate them and send them back; it does seem to be of some use to educate them and segregate them from the old life. In the latter case there has been a very marked improvement, not only in the Northwest, but in British Columbia.

Mr. OLIVER. We are dealing at the moment with the Indians in eastern Canada, and I think the long-continued and immediately surrounding conditions of civilization are an important part of the total effect upon the life of the Indians, of which the education received in the schools is another part. There is not the same difference between the Indian in eastern Canada and his white neighbour as prevails in the western country, and the danger of Indian children going back to their original condition is not so great on reserves in eastern Canada as it is in our western country. What we are attempting to do is to give the Indian children the best educational opportunities we can so that they may work out their own civilization to the best advantage, influenced by the example of the white population around him.

Mr. FOSTER. In the maritime provinces, for instance, do many of the Indian children go to the white schools?

Mr. OLIVER. Only to a limited extent. In Cumberland county, N.S., the Indian children, in some cases, attend the white schools.

Mr. FOSTER. In the maritime provinces you cannot get a large number of Indian children together in the one spot as with some few exceptions, they are very scattered. I am inclined to think that the Indian schools are ineffective because there are so few children you can get together and keep together for any length of time in the year, which makes it more difficult to get the kind of teacher best qualified to help those children along. It takes probably more special ability in a teacher to take hold of children of that kind and instil into them the desire to learn than it does in the case of white children. It strikes me that most of the money spent on these Indian schools is pretty well wasted. I do not know how far these children get an idea of education. You may teach them to read a little English, but do you go much further than that? But there is one thing which you seem able to do to any extent and that is distribute medicine. They seem to be able to take as much medicine as you are able to dole out to them. The bill for medicines is probably much large than the bill for schooling. Is the struggle still on between the department and the medical men as regards this constant medical care?

Mr. OLIVER. Of course in the case of a race such as the Indians, which is often described as a dying race, they necessarily require more medicine and medical treatment than white people who are living under more favourable conditions and who are more vigorous and progressive. Then there is more expense in the medical care of the Indians who live distant from the medical practitioners, scattered as these Indians are here and there throughout the maritime provinces.

Mr. BARR. Are the medical men paid by contract or for the work they actually do?

Mr. OLIVER. In some cases they are paid a salary and in others fees.

Mr. GUNN. Did I understand the minister to say that the Indians are not taught farming in the eastern provinces?

Mr. OLIVER. What I said was that there are no Indian farm instructors in eastern Canada as there are in the reserves in the west. But I fancy that practical farming is taught at the educational institutes which exist in eastern Canada.

Mr. J. D. REID. Are the physicians who attend the Indians on salary allowed outside practice?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes.

Mr. BARR. If we take the expenses in connection with medicine and medical attendance in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec, we find that the charge per capita for the Indians is greater than it is for the whites, although it is well known that the Indians, if left to themselves, have no desire to take much medicine. It seems to me that there must be a number of medical men who are good politicians and have a pull with the government, and probably the government takes this way to recoup them for their political work.

Mr. BLAIN. Is the same standard of education asked on the Indian reserves that is found in the other counties ?

Mr. OLIVER. No, it is not. The course of study is different in Canadian schools. The third-class certificate is the necessary certificate, the higher certificate is not requisite.

Mr. BLAIN. What kind of books do they use ?

Mr. OLIVER. The same series of school books is used in all the schools in the province of Ontario. The books are purchased through the stationery department of the goverment.

Mr. BARR. And who revises those books, who prepares them ?

Mr. OLIVER. They use the Gage series.

Mr. AVERY. Who applies for the books required ?

Mr. OLIVER. The school teacher.

Mr. BLAIN. I see that some teachers are engaged at a salary of $100 per annum, and others at higher rates, some at $300. Who engages these teachers ? Are there trustees on the reserve ?

Mr. OLIVER Would the hon. member mention the schools ?

Mr. BLAIN. One on page J—6 of the Auditor General's Report.

Back Settlement, teacher, Isidore Whitlock, 12 months to June 30, $100.

And there is another.

Bear Creek, teacher, Alma H. Norsworthy, 12 months to June 30, $100.

I need not give other instances.

Mr. OLIVER. I am informed that the Indian Department engages the teachers, and in the case mentioned, in the Back Settlement school, the department pays $100, and the Indian band pay $200. So the teacher receives $300.

Mr. BARR. The government pay one-third ?

Mr. OLIVER. We pay one-third and the band two-thirds.

Mr. SPROULE. Are these schools inspected the same as the other schools ?

Mr. OLIVER. They are inspected by the provincial school inspector, who reports to the Indian Department and, of course, is paid for his services by the Indian Department.

Salaries of chiefs, Cape Croker and Gibson, and agent, Oka, $112.50.

Mr. BARR. How many chiefs are there that receive this $150 ?

Mr. OLIVER. The two chiefs receive $50 each and the other vote of $50 is for the departmental agent for the Iroquois at St. Regis.

Payment of Robinson treaty annuities, $12,450.

Mr. BARR. Does this treaty continue in perpetuity ?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes, the annuity payments are continuous.

Mr. SPROULE. What stand is the department taking with regard to this ? My recollection was that a demand was made on the province of Ontario for either a refund of the money or the land. If the decision of the Privy Council was that the land belonged to Ontario, then I think the Dominion made an application for a refund of the money. How are the negotiations between the Dominion and Ontario in regard to this question ?

Mr. OLIVER. I understand that the question as between the Dominion and the province has been settled, and that the province has paid in a capitalized amount of $205,000, capitalized in 1903 at 3 per cent, and then a further amount of $88,000, capitalized in 1903 at 5 per cent, giving a total annual payment or revenue of $10,550.

Mr. SPROULE. Paid in by the province ?

Mr. OLIVER. To the Dominion.

Mr. SPROULE. But we continue to pay the treaty obligation ? If this was on account of the payments made in pursuance of the treaty obligation in the past what arrangement is there to be for the future ?

Mr. OLIVER. This is the amount that was paid in in settlement of the claim ; this was the final settlement of the claim.

Mr. SPROULE. I do not understand just how the settlement is. This treaty goes on in perpetuity. There must be a payment made to the Indians by somebody ; has the federal government to pay it in the future, or the provincial government ?

Mr. OLIVER. The Ontario government pays this amount in settlement of our claims against them, and we pay the balance of whatever annuity is required.

Mr. SPROULE. We pay in perpetuity the balance and this is a final settlement as between the province and the Dominion ?

Mr. OLIVER. This $10,550 is a payment in perpetuity. It goes on annually as a settlement of that claim and whatever further amount is due the Indians has to be paid by the Dominion.

Mr. SPROULE. The treaty annuity is $12,450 for the one year, and it was the same last year. Why is it made $10,000, the payment of the province $10,000 when we are required to pay $12,450 ?

Mr. OLIVER. The total amount to be paid is $23,000, of which the Ontario government pays $10,550 and we pay $12,450.

Mr. SPROULE. Since what date has that contract run?

Mr. OLIVER. It was a settlement of a claim that has run since 1903.

Mr. SPROULE. And what about the payments made previous to that date?

Mr. OLIVER. Of course, this government made the payments in the past. And this payment annually in perpetuity of $10,550 by the Ontario government is accepted by the Dominion in respect of past payments by the Dominion and future obligations on the part of Ontario.

Mr. BARR. Then, do we understand that for many years the Dominion government has been paying this and the Ontario government, though receiving the benefit, did not pay anything until 1903?

Mr. OLIVER. I find, on consulting the officers of the department, that I rather misstated the case. The Ontario government returned to this government some $90,000 that had been paid, and this is the payment of the awarded obligation of the Ontario government beginning with 1903.

Mr. BARR. Has the House ever been favoured with the papers on this subject?

Mr. OLIVER. They are printed in the report of the Finance Department.

Mr. FOSTER. I notice that in these payments, Woods, Limited, come in, as they usually do everywhere. In this case they make a sale of a down robe for $25. Was that given to a chief?

Mr. OLIVER. That was in connection with Treaty 9, and was for one of the commissioners who negotiated the treaty last summer for the part of Ontario lying north of the height of land.

Mr. FOSTER. And who owns the robe when the commissioner is through with it ?

Mr. OLIVER. The work of the commission is not yet ended.

Survey of Indian reserves, $7,000.

Mr. FOSTER. Here is a big increase What is it for ?

Mr. OLIVER. The increase in this item is asked for to enable certain works which is pressing to be carried out; $2,500 is required to subdivide the lots in rear of the Restigouche reserve in order that they may be settled on by Indians who have no cultivatable land. Another reserve requires to be properly allotted to the members of the tribe in order that their holdings may not conflict ; $2,750 being required for this purpose. In Caughnawaga village the department has constantly to settle disputes between the holders of lands in the reserve and the holders of land in Caughnawaga village, and as no proper survey of the village has been made it is almost impossible to settle the disputes. In addition, the department requires $500 to pay for incidental and unforeseen services which may arise during the course of the fiscal year.

Mr. FOSTER. Can the minister tell us the total amount spent in surveying the Caughnawaga reserve—how many hundreds of thousands of dollars? Ever since I was a child in politics they have been surveying that reserve. What is the whole area of the reserve?

Mr. OLIVER. I am told that it is 14,000 acres.

Mr. FOSTER. Now, if the minister will supplement that information by stating the amount spent so far in surveys we shall be able to figure out the number of thousands of dollars per square foot or so that it has cost.

Mr. OLIVER. I am told that the Walbank survey made about 15 years ago cost about $14,000.

Mr. FOSTER. That being only one of many?

Mr. OLIVER. My officer informs me that it was the only survey. Of course, it covered more than one year, but it was one piece of work.

Mr. FOSTER. And there is still surveying to be done?

Mr. OLIVER. This is a survey of the village, not of the reserve.

Mr. FOSTER. But the village is in the reserve?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes; but I assume that the survey of the reserve itself did not take notice of the requirements of the village or else that the requirements of the village have increased, possibly by increase of population.

Mr. FOSTER. Does this mean subdividing lots?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes, and resurveying.

Mr. FOSTER. They take out the stakes, do they, and have the survey over again?

Mr. OLIVER. There may be something to be said in favour of that theory.

Mr. SPROULE. Is any of this money to be spent in surveying the islands in Georgian bay ?

Mr. OLIVER. The surveys of the Georgian bay islands are completed as far as the North Shore. That was done some three or four years ago, and there have been no surveys of these islands since that time.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the government doing with reference to these islands ? Is the department selling them ?

Mr. OLIVER. The survey was made with a view to selling the islands. But before a sale can be made a relinquishment of the right of the Ontario government to the islands to be sold has to be secured. When the survey was made a valuation was placed upon the islands by the surveyor and now, when an application is made to purchase an island, if the consent of the Ontario government is secured, the island is sold at the surveyor's valuation to the first applicant.

Mr. SPROULE. What arrangement has been come to between the Ontario government and the Dominion in regard to these islands ? I understood there was a distinct line dividing the property as claimed by Ontario and that held by the Indian Department for the Indians. What division was made or is the claim not settled yet?

Mr. OLIVER. There was an arrangement attempted to be arrived at whereby the Dominion government would administer the islands south of Moose Deer point and the Ontario government those north of the point, but after the arrangement had to a certain extent been agreed to a dispute arose in regard to some islands lying in the north channel west of this boundary and the result was that the whole matter was thrown into confusion again. The whole question is still finally unsettled, but a provisional arrangement has been arrived at whereby the Ontario government will formally relinquish its right to the islands in order that the islands may be sold. Of course, the Ontario government's right in the matter will be established when the dispute, now in course of adjustment, is concluded.

Mr. BARR. Have any of these islands been sold?

Mr. OLIVER. Quite a large number have been sold.

Mr. BARR. How was the money divided between the province and the Dominion?

Mr. OLIVER. The money secured is funded by this government and when the dispute is finally settled, of course, the money will be divided according to the judgment given.

Mr. SPROULE. Is there not a certain locality where the Ontario government have the right to sell and other localities where the Indian Department have the right to sell ? I was informed that there was some kind of a tentative arrangement of that kind.

Mr. OLIVER. The Ontario government have not sold any in recent years. I presume they did sell some islands some years ago. No doubt while the arrangement I spoke of a short time ago whereby they were to control the islands north of Moose Deer Point and the Dominion those south of Moose Deer Point was pending, the Ontario government did sell some islands. But since the dispute has become general I am informed they have not sold any islands. The Dominion government have not sold any north of Moose Deer Point.

Mr. SPROULE. You did not sell any?

Mr. OLIVER. The Dominion government have not sold in the area which at the time of this arrangement they practically conceded to Ontario.

Mr. SPROULE. If these islands belong to Ontario, and we would seem to admit that allegation on account of funding the money till the final disposition is made of it, how do you arrange as to the cost of surveys ? The Ontario government surveyed a lot of these islands and the Indian Department surveyed a certain number of them.

Mr. OLIVER. The Indian Department has only made surveys south of Moose Deer Point and the matter of the cost as between the Ontario government and this government has not yet been adjusted.

Mr. KEMP. How are you going to identify these islands ? They are marked with white paint which comes off in the course of a few years ? Is it the intention to paint them again in a few years ? Is it very difficult to identify them ?

Mr. OLIVER. That, of course, is a detail that I suppose will receive attention in due course. Of course, the islands are laid down on a plan or map which prevents any possibility of mistake, but for the convenience of the public the department might very well take notice of the suggestion and see that they were made easy of identification.

General legal expenses, $6,350.

Mr. J. D. REID. We would like to have some explanation as to how this is made up. I see by the Auditor General's Report for 1905 that only $1,000 has been spent for legal expenses, while, according to this vote, $8,500 per annum is required. In the Auditor General's Report, page J—9, under the heading of 'General Legal Expenses' I find that the expenditure was $2,134.74. Included in this amount is $1,465.31 to repay Heber Archibald security for costs thus reducing the amount to $1,000 for legal expenses. Perhaps the hon. minister will also explain if there are not two or three officers of the department who are legal officers and if so what part they take in performing the legal services which the department require. I do not see the hon. Solicitor General (Mr. Lemieux) in his place just now. I would like to know what the hon. Solicitor General does in so far as this department is concerned. I understood, when the Solicitor General was appointed, that he was to take some active part in so far as these legal matters are concerned and yet in the Interior Department I find that there was $11,000 spent as legal expenses last year. Will the hon. minister tell us whether the hon. Solicitor General takes charge of the legal work of his department, or has he to farm it out to different lawyers throughout the country ?

Mr. OLIVER. The legal work is done by agents of the department of Justice in the locality in which the case is to be dealt with. This item is necessary to provide for any case that may arise in which it may be thought advisable to engage counsel for the defence of the Indians charged with serious crimes which are altogether of a personal character and for which they cannot he held responsible for the fees, such as murder, incendiarism, trespass, &c. A very large expenditure was necessary in 1902-3 in the defence of the Indian Wabey, accused of the murder of a fur trader, and in the present year a large expense has been incurred in defending the Indian Joseph Bennett, who was accused and found guilty of murder. Legal services are frequently required in connection with the purchase and transfer of land for legal purposes. Of this amount $750 is to pay the cost of litigation in respect to lands at Oka.

Mr. J. D. REID. I understand the practice is that the Indians give an order on the annual grant for the payment of the solicitor they employ, and his fees are deducted.

Mr. OLIVER. I am informed that no such orders are honoured, and that payments have not been made as the hon. gentleman has suggested.

Mr. J. D. REID. That statement will not go down so far as I am concerned, because I know that what I am saying is true.

Mr. OLIVER. Will the hon. gentleman give an instance ?

Mr. J. D. REID. I am not going to give the solicitor away. I do not want it to go on record in the House, but I know it is the case.

Mr. OLIVER. But it will have to go on record that the officers of the department say it is not the case.

Mr. J. D. REID. I have no objection to that, but at the same time I wish it to go on record that so far as I am concerned I have my doubt as to that being correct ; I am not doubting the officers statement because I dont think they know anything about it. By the way, does the Solicitor General do any work in connection with these matters ? I understand he was appointed, and that his salary was increased on the ground that he would undertake legal work for the department. They have probably more officers in the Justice Department now than they had before the Solicitor General was appointed, and yet he does not do any of the law work. I have been trying to find out for some time what the Solicitor General does, but I have not succeeded. He was here a few minutes ago and perhaps the minister can get him into the Chamber to let us know what his department does.

Mr. FOSTER. How much was spent last year in legal expenses ?

Mr. J. D. REID. $11,000.

Mr. OLIVER. The amount spent for the the year 1904-5 was $2,134.74.

Mr. FOSTER. Why do you take such a large vote in the presence of such a small expenditure ?

Mr. OLIVER. Of this amount of $8,500, there is $3,750 required to pay the cost of litigation in respect to the land at Oka. The balance is to provide for expenses that cannot of course be foreseen.

Mr. SPROULE. This Oka matter has been going on since I came to this House. In what state of advancement towards completion is this dispute. Is there going to be any finality to it ?

Mr. OLIVER. The Indians and the Seminary agreed to submit a case to the Privy Council, the Indian Department agreeing to pay the Indian's share of the expense, but afterwards that agreement was dissolved and the matter is still open.

Mr. SPROULE. Which of the contracting parties refused to live up to the agreement ?

Mr. OLIVER. I beg pardon, the matter is not altogether dissolved but they have not yet agreed as to the form of the stated case.

Mr. SPROULE. Are the Indians being removed as formerly, or are they still in possession of the property ?

Mr. OLIVER. They are still in possession and claim ownership.

Mr. COCKSHUTT. The administration of Justice in relation to the Indians in the county of Brant, is in a very unsatisfactory condition and I beg to call the attention of the minister to it. In round numbers the county of Brant contains a population of 40,000 which includes 4,200 Indians or one-tenth of the whole ; and yet not a penny is collected from these tribes nor is a penny allowed by this government towards the expenses of the administration of justice. Last year one Indian was killed by another on the reserve, a most expensive trial was held in Brantford and the cost of that trial in which the white population had no concern amounted to about $1,200 which sum has been assessed on the white population of Brant. I am not finding fault with the Indians more than any other class of the community, but I must say that the matter of which I now speak is in a most unsatisfactory condition. Brant with a population of 40,000 has the largest Indian reservation in North America within its confines, and the 36,000 white people are obliged to pay the cost of administering justice for the Indians, without a cent of compensation in return. I believe representations have been made from time to time to the department in connection with this matter. In the year 1877 the federal government acknowledged its right to contribute and a certain amount was paid to the county, but although frequent claims have been made since, the Indian Department has never recognized them. It is estimated by the legal adviser of the county council of Brant that about $25,000—I speak from memory—has been paid by the white population for the administration of justice to these tribes, and no return whatever has been made on account of it. I want to know from the minister, whether there is a fund out of which the cost of certain trials, the expensive ones at any rate—there are always petty trials for minor offences about which perhaps we need not now concern ourselves —may be recouped to the white population.

In addition to that there have been other claims. I recently filed one with the department in regard to a large fire that took place and caused immense damage to a farmer. I merely mention this to show that there is no way of getting justice in these cases. The Indians are wards of the whole Dominion, not of the county of Brant; they have large funds invested, and are receiving the benefit of the interest on these moneys; but there is no fund provided for the administration of justice to these tribes. Representations, I believe, have been made to the government from time to time, and are likely to be made again in the near future, that injustice is being done to the thirty thousand inhabitants of the county of Brant in shouldering upon them the burden of this expense. This is a serious matter which the minister should take into consideration. I would like to hear from the minister whether this item embraces any amount for the administration of justice to the Indians in the county of Brant.

Mr. OLIVER. I am afraid that after I have made the explanation which I necessarily must make, my hon. friend will have even stronger objections than ever to this item, because so far from being for the purpose of administering justice upon the Indians, it is for the purpose of defending the Indians in the course of justice. In regard to the matters of which my hon. friend has spoken, I am informed that returns have from time to time been made through the department in that regard, and I think it must be plain to every one that under such circumstances the municipality does suffer some hardship from its proximity to a large Indian settlement. At the same time, there is nothing in the Indian Act or in the authority vested in the Department of Indian Affairs that would warrant the department in assuming responsibility on behalf of the municipality for the administration of justice in regard to the Indians. The matter is an important one, but it is one that in my estimation calls rather for legislation which would apportion the burden as between the Indian Department and the municipality than for departmental action. It is a condition which was of course not contemplated when the reserve was set apart, and might very well be dealt with, but I cannot think, as head of the Indian Department, that I am entitled to deal with it departmentally.

Mr. NORTHRUP. The hon. minister will pardon me if I have not understood his explanation in regard to this item. Last year, according to the Auditor General's Report, $2,100 odd was the amount for legal expenses ; but of that $1,400 was not strictly for legal expenses at all, but was put up for costs; so that as a matter of fact the legal expenses were only about $700. This year he asks for $8,500 for legal expenses. Surely he must offer definite explanations as to why he is multiplying the amount tenfold this year over the amount spent last year.

Mr. OLIVER. I am informed that the vote ordinarily asked for is $3,500, but for the current year it is $8,500, because $5,000 of that was required to meet a part of the expenses connected with the Oka litigation, just as out of this sum of $6,350 asked for the coming nine months, $3,750 is required to meet the special litigation expenses in connection with the same case. As I have explained, it is impossible to foresee what legal expenses may amount to, and it has always been thought well to provide what would be a reasonable and sufficient amount. The fact that in the year past the actual expenditure was only $700, although the vote was $3,500, is evidence that the expenditure is not extravagant.

Mr. NORTHRUP. I am not casting any reflection on the minister when I say that we have had experience in this House of counsel sending in a bill to the Department of Justice and that department kindly raising the bill several hundred dollars; and with that experience before us, we are anxious that nothing more should be asked for legal expenses than has been expended previously. But I presume that we may rely on the minister to see under his new regime that the bills for legal expenses are properly taxed.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Will my hon. friend be good enough to mention the name of the counsel whose bill was raised in the way he mentions ?

Mr. NORTHRUP. It was the firm of McCarthy, Osler & Hoskins, of Toronto. Mr. Osler, I think, was the counsel.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. B. B. Osler. That was in the good old days.

Mr. COCKSHUTT. I want to call the minister's attention to the fact that this kind of claim was recognized by the department at one time, up to 1877, I think. An arrangement was come to with the county council that it should send in the bills periodically and they would continue to be paid; but unfortunately the county council was dilatory and failed to send in the bills regularly; so that the accounts have accumulated and they have not received any attention from the department. The hon. Minister of Customs will remember that this claim has been sent in from time to time and I believe he himself together with Mr. Heyd, my predecessor, have pressed for consideration of this claim upon the department. The hon. minister says that we are at a disadvantage because we are near the Indian settlement. We do not feel that to be a disadvantage. We have always looked upon the Indian tribes of the county of Brant as being in a way the forerunners of civilization. I do not think that Brantford would have been as big or important as it is to-day if it had not been for the Indians in the first place; and when the whites settled there, they knew that they were settling in the vicinity of their red skin brethren and therefore it is out of place for any white man to cast reflections on them. I understood the minister to say that Brantford is not an exception to the general rule, but that it is simply unfortunate in possessing the largest Indian reserve in the Dominion. Well, I would ask him whether in his own province a special fund is not provided out of the general treasury for the administration of justice to the Indians. I think he will find that the whites are not saddled with that expense but that it comes out of a general fund. If that be the case in certain provinces, why should the old province of Ontario and certain counties in Ontario in particular have to shoulder this expense which properly belongs to the whole Dominion and not to any particular locality.

Mr. OLIVER. In the Northwest there are no municipal organizations adjoining the Indian reserves as there are in Ontario, and therefore the whites adjoining the reserves are not saddled with the expense of the administration of justice to the Indians. It is the province which pays that expense, and it pays the cost of the administration of justice whether in the case of the whites or the Indians. Therefore, if the province of Ontario is to be treated in the same manner as the provinces in the Northwest, that expenditure is one appertaining to the province and not to the Dominion, and any inequalities in the apportioning of that expense, is a matter for adjustment by the provincial government.

Mr. COCKSHUTT. Do I understand the hon. minister to contend that the Indians are wards of the provincial government ? I have always understood that they were wards of the Dominion and that the treaties with the Indians come under the jurisdiction of the Dominion and not of the province. In fact, this government has recognized to a very moderate extent its liability to the county of Brant last year, because I find in the Auditor General's Report that out of the legal expenses of the Interior Department there was an amount of $30 paid Mr. G. D. Heyd for legal services in connection with the Indians, but whether these services were given in defence of an Indian or for prosecuting him, I do not know. In any event, the government should pay the costs either of the prosecution or of the defence and not leave the whole burden to be borne by the people of Brantford.

Mr. OLIVER. The department pays the cost of defence, but not the cost of prosecution.

Mr. COCKSHUTT. That was not done in this case.

Mr. OLIVER. The department does not enter into every case because the Indians on the Brantford reserve are to some extent in the position of citizens, and it is only when the department enters into a case that it assumes responsibility for the payment of the expense.

Mr. COCKSHUTT. The Indians have no franchise. They did have the franchise once and exercised it for several years, but this government disfranchised them and they are not citizens any longer. It is therefore no argument to say that they are in a certain sense citizens. They are simply members of a reserve just as are the Indians on any other reserve. True they are more advanced and civilized but the government says they are no more fit for citizenship than the Indians of the Northwest.

Mr. CROCKET. While this item is under consideration, there is a question of law which concerns the department, and to which I would draw the attention of the minister. It is this. The Indian Act defines a number of offences with respect to Indians and prescribes penalties. It provides also that prosecutions shall be taken under the provisions of the Summary Convictions Act. But there is a provision regarding appeals from convictions under the Indian Act which is different from the provisions respecting appeals from summary convictions in ordinary cases, and a good deal of uncertainty and confusion exist in the minds of lawyers and judges as to just how an appeal should be taken from a conviction under the Indian Act. The provision in that Act is :

That no appeal shall lie from any conviction under the 14 sections next preceding except to a judge of a superior court, county, circuit or district court or to the chairman or judge of the court of the sessions of the peace having jurisdiction where the conviction was had, and such appeal shall be heard, tried and adjudicated upon by such judge or chairman without the intervention of a jury, and no such appeal shall be brought after the expiration of thirty days from the conviction.

That is the only provision in the Act respecting appeals. The Act provides no machinery for the carrying on of the appeal. It has been held by some of the judges in Ontario that the appeal is subject to the provisions respecting appeals from summary convictions in ordinary cases ; but upon examination of the provisions of the Summary Convictions Act, it is found that these appeals, when taken to a judge of a Supreme Court, cannot be carried out under the conditions applicable to summary convictions in ordinary cases, because the Summary Convictions Act provides for an appeal to a county court sitting as a court at its regular sitting. This provision provides for an appeal to a county court judge or superior court judge or one or other of the classes of judges mentioned in that section, and the provisions of the Summary Convictions Act cannot be complied with, in any other case at least than when the appeal is taken to a county court judge, so that I think the matter should be considered by the legal officers of the department and machinery be provided for carrying out the appeal mentioned in the Indian Act or else provide that the appeal should be subject in all respects to the same conditions as appeals from summary convictions in ordinary cases. I was interested in a case in which a good deal of confusion arose. Neither judge or counsel seemed to be clear upon the matter. It was suggested that the matter should be brought to the attention of the law officers of the department and the Minister of Justice, so that some remedy might be provided.

Mr. OLIVER. I shall call the attention of the Department of Justice to the remarks of the hon. member. There are no law officers connected with the Indian Department. We depend on the Department of Justice.

Annuity, gratuity and expenses, treaty No. 9, from which payments may be made, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Civil Service Act, $600, $29,200.

Mr. OLIVER. This amount is required to complete the negotiations with the Indians and to pay the annuities to those who came into treaty last summer.

Mr. BARR. Is that treaty finally settled ?

Mr. OLIVER. It will be with the negotiations of this summer.

Indians, Nova Scotia—relief and seed grain, $2,025.

Mr. BARR. How is that grain purchased, by tender ?

Mr. OLIVER. By the local agent, by ordinary purchase.

Medical attendance and medicines, $2,775.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Are the physicians paid by salary or according to attendance ?

Mr. OLIVER. Nineteen are paid by salaries running from $50 up to $400.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Why do you have the two systems ?

Mr. OLIVER. Because in some places the Indians are so scattered that the salary is not justifiable.

Indians, New Brunswick—salaries, $1,056.

Mr. CROCKET. How many Indian agents are there in New Brunswick and what are their salaries ?

Mr. OLIVER. There are two, W. D. Carter, who gets $500, and James Farley who gets $600.

Medical attendance and medicines, $2,625.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. 'Medical attendance and medicines' seem to be about 50 per cent more than the relief and seed grain vote. If you gave less medicines and more seed grain do you not think it would be better for them ?

Mr. OLIVER. I will bring what has been said to the attention of the officers of the department ; there may be justification for it.

Indians, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and the Northwest Territories—annuities, $146,405.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. I have noticed that for some years past there has been a decrease in the annuities but this year there is a considerable increase. Is it owing to the increase of the Indian population or what is the basis on which annuities are paid ?

Mr. OLIVER. The note I have on that point is that the increase is accounted for by the fact that a large number of Indians only come for payment every second year, and next year, during the coming summer, these are expected to be present, That is those who were absent last year are expected to be present this coming summer.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. Will the minister inform us the amount of the similar vote last year and the year before ?

Mr. OLIVER. For the current year the vote was $141,265, that is about $5,000 less than the vote asked for the coming year. The vote for the preceding year was $143,000 odd, slightly more than that.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. Are any of these agencies in the west and Manitoba self-sustaining ?

Mr. OLIVER. I am informed that the agency of Qu'Appelle and Five Hills is self sustaining.

Implements, tools, &c., $8.307.

Mr. BARR. That is a large increase ? How are those tools, &c., purchased, by tender ?

Mr. OLIVER. This increase is principally accounted for by a request for a threshing outfit for the Saddle lake agency, and more implements and tools for Indian Station No. 8. This increased demand is owing to about 300 acres more land prepared for crop last year.

Indians, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and Northwest Territories—seeds, field and garden $1,689.

Mr. BLAIN. How does it come that the government has to supply seeds for the Indians every year ? Are we to understand that the Indians use their whole crop to live upon, or is this to supply Indian farmers who are just commencing seeding?

Mr. OLIVER. The Indians on the reserves supply the bulk of their own field seeds—wheat, barley and oats. Of course, there are reserves here and there that require these seeds. Then garden seeds are supplied year after year from outside, as the Indians do not grow their own.

Live stock, $20,867.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. Does the agent of the department purchase this live stock or is there any special officer to perform this service?

Mr. OLIVER. The live stock is purchased by Inspector Markle for Alberta and by Inspector Graham for Saskatchewan.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. I understood the Minister of the Interior to state last session that it was the intention of the department in the future, as far as possible, to purchase stock at the cattle sales held at Calgary, and, I presume, at some other points. Can he state how many cattle were purchased last year at these sales?

Mr. OLIVER. A large number of the purchases made at the sales were of thoroughbred bulls. We bought the maority of these animals at the Calgary sale last year. There was no such sale last year at Regina, but there will be one this year. We hope to buy what thoroughbreds we require for the Alberta agencies at the Calgary sale and those for the Saskatchewan agencies at the Regina sales. In Manitoba the small number required will be purchased locally to the best advantage.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. A number have been purchased in Manitoba for Alberta and shipped westward. If the majority of this stock has been purchased at the cattle sales at Calgary, there must have been a great quantity of stock purchased. I find in the Auditor General's Report many names given as those having sold thoroughbreds to the department, for instance Mr. Head sold $1,400 worth; Mr. P. M. Brett $300, and Mr. Talbot, formerly a member of this House, sold 28 head. Mr. Head, as the hon. minister knows, was the Liberal candidate in the last election in the province of Manitoba. And I know that his sales were sent to the west. I also know that, while he has been a little more modest in his price this year, only getting in the neighbourhood of $100, his price last year was $125 for each thoroughbred, whereas he purchased them for $40 to $50. Mr. Paul Brett is an immigration agent for this goverment. The hon. minister knows him well. He took a prominent part in the recent provincial elections and has always done the same in Dominion elections. When I see such names it makes me suspicious that the inspector has been directed to purchase from friends of the government. I think the minister stated last year that the purchases of thoroughbreds up to that time would be sufficient to stock these reserves for the future. But there have been very large purchases since then. What is the reason for these purchases going on year after year? Do the Indians destroy these animals? Do they kill them for beef ? The annual expenditure on this account seems to be tremendous. But if purchases are to be made the minister should send his agents to well known breeders and purchase from them direct, thus saving the profits of the middleman. Mr. Head is not a breeder of stock, but only a cattle buyer.

Mr. OLIVER. The Auditor General's Report to which the hon. gentleman (Mr. W. J. Roche) has referred deals with the year ending June 30, 1905. I was dealing with the current year, which ends June 30 next, and the estimates which are now before us are for the nine months ending March 31, 1907. I am not able to give the actual figures of thoroughbreds purchased last year, but I believe we purchased 72 or 75 head, of which the larger number were purchased at the Calgary sale. Other purchases had been made before the Calgary sale, and, I fancy, before I made the statement to the House to which the hon. gentleman has referred. I may say that instructions have been issued, and I presume will be acted upon, that thoroughbreds required for agencies in Alberta shall be purchased at Calgary and those for agencies in Saskatchewan at the Regina sale. We believe that this will be the most satisfactory method both from a financial standpoint and from the standpoint of quality. It will also obviate such criticism as to that which my hon. friend (Mr. W. J. Roche) has, very fairly, I suppose, expressed. Of course, it may be that the sales will not turn out to be adequate for the purpose, in which case we should have to supplement our purchases there with purchases from private individuals. But if we can secure the animals at the sales, that will be done.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. I see that the department has a maximum price which they instruct their inspectors not to exceed. Can the minister tell us what that maximum price was?

Mr. OLIVER. The maximum price was $125, but the inspector was allowed some latitude at the Calgary sale. He was allowed to go a little higher than that, but I am informed that the average price paid was considerably below that.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. The hon. Minister of the Interior spoke about Inspector Markle being authorized to purchase these animals. What agencies has Inspector Markle jurisdiction over ?

Mr. OLIVER. The agencies included in treaty No. 7. That would be from Edmonton south. They are nearly all the reserves in Alberta—the Blood, Piegan, Blackfeet, Sarcees, Stony, Hobbema, Battle River, White Lake, Stony Plain and Alexandria.

Mr. INGRAM. The hon. minister has referred to the purchase of bulls for the Indians in the Northwest Territories. I notice by the agricultural and industrial statistics that there are 304 bulls in the Northwest Territories. It seems that they are pretty well supplied with bulls up there. Then, I find that there are of stallions and geldings 2,853. Considering the amount of stock they have I cannot see the necessity of making any further purchases. Perhaps the hon. minister can explain the necessity of purchasing more bulls when we have such an enormous quantity as that.

Mr. OLIVER. I think perhaps the debate has taken a technical turn that scarcely will be suitable for the pages of 'Hansard.' But as my hon. friend persists, of course, I will have to give the explanation he calls for.

Mr. INGRAM. Well, I do not wish to persist, but if the hon. gentleman is bound to give the information, why then, I suppose it is in his power to do it. The statistics are here at all events, and it does strike me that the statement the hon. minister has made as to the necessity of purchasing that class of stock calls for some explanation. I would ask him why we are purchasing stock that is really not required. There surely should be some reasonable excuse for adding to this enormous number of animals which I find recorded in these statistics. The list of these animals is as follows : Stallions and geldings, 2,853 ; mares, 8,151 ; colts, fillies and foals, 1,578 ; bulls, 304 ; oxen, work, 698 ; steers, 2,667 ; milch cows, 8,800 ; young stock, 12,774 ; sheep, 361 ; lambs, 101 ; boars, breeding, 6. There is the total of the stock of these classes on the agencies included in treaties No. 4, No. 6 and No. 7, comprising 19 places in the Northwest Territories. Would the hon. minister explain this ? I do not think it will damage 'Hansard' very badly to give these figures, but if the hon. minister thinks that 'Hansard' will be damaged then they need not include them in this report.

Mr. OLIVER. Does the hon. member ask the explanation as to why there is so much stock required ?

Mr. INGRAM. Not at all. The hon. minister, in the discussion this evening, mentioned the necessity of purchasing more bulls. I pointed out to the hon. gentleman that they have already about 304. Why the necessity of purchasing more when you have now that amount of stock ? The proportion is out of all keeping.

Mr. OLIVER. I can only say, that, without becoming too technical in my explanation ; according to the best information I can get from the officers of the department, these additional purchases are necessary. At any rate that is a matter which might very well be discussed on the technical side of it elsewhere than here and a decision could be reached that would probably be satisfactory. In regard to this matter of stock on the Indian reserves it is a well known fact that it is by means of stock raising that the Indians will come most nearly to being self-supporting and therefore it is wise economy on the part of the department to deal liberally with the Indians not only in regard to the quantity, but also in regard to the quality of the stock supplied to them. If they have erred on the side of being over-liberal, I am sure the House will excuse the error, recognizing the desirability of putting the Indians as rapidly as possiblee in a position to be self-supporting.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. At page J—44 of the Auditor General's Report I find that the department purchased 222 two year old heifers at $30 apiece. These were purchased from a gentleman in Ottawa. Is it necessary to come all the way down here to purchase heifers ? Are there not sufficient raised in the three provinces of the west to supply the demand ? These are for the Sarcee agency. They were purchased from Mr. E. Devlin. Is that the gentleman who is known as Senator Devlin in the city here, and was that $30 the f.o.b. price here ? Were they purchased in the province of Ontario and were they shipped to the west ?

Mr. OLIVER. That was for delivery on the reserve.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. That is the price for delivery on the reserve ?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. Well, I could refer you, if I had a few minutes, to purchases that were made in the west at a similar figure and 1,500 miles nearer the reserve.

Mr. HERRON. I would like to draw the attention of the hon. minister to a few items in reference to the delivery of cattle in the Northwest Territories. Would the hon. minister tell us if the government have any system of inspection of these cattle on delivery at the different agencies in Alberta or in the west ? I drew the attention of the hon. minister last year when this estimate was going through to the fact that $27 or $28 was too high a price to ask for these cattle. These are two year old heifers. There were 500 or 600 head of these cattle delivered at the Piegan agency near where I live this year. I suppose that I could have found out if I had asked for an Order of the House what price was paid for them, but I have been told on good authority that the price paid was $28 a head. This system has been going on for a number of years in that part of the country and I can assure the hon. minister that they are paying $28 a head for cattle that are not worth $15. They are not worth $12. The cattle delivered in this instance at McLeod would not have sold for $12 per head at auction in that country. I do not understand why the government do not call for tenders and get stock that is raised in the country. They could get a better class of stock for about $18 or $19 per head. I refer to cattle of this age, good acclimatized cattle which are worth a great deal more to the Indians than they are to any other class of people in the west because they do not take as good care of the cattle as others do. The cattle supplied from Manitoba and Ontario are not the best class to turn over to the Indians. The officials of the department will tell the minister that there are large losses among these cattle, and that even this winter 25 per cent of the animals delivered last summer were dead months ago. The cattle were not worth one-half the price paid for them. I do not understand why the government should not call for tenders and get the best animals that are going in the country. It is true that this is a good system to encourage the Indians to be self-sustaining, but as the system is now administered it is bound to be a failure in that regard. Does the minister know who received the cattle when they arrived in that country. I can vouch for it that the cattle were landed at the railway station and turned loose, and there was no one to receive them except a few Indians who knew nothing about their value or how they were to be delivered.

Mr. OLIVER. I am very much surprised to hear the definite statement made by the hon. gentleman that the cattle were so far below in value the price paid for them, and also that an officer of the department was not present when the cattle arrived. It was the duty of the agent to receive the cattle and not only to report to the department if they were not approximately of the value paid, but to refuse to accept them. I will have the matter at once inquired into, and I will be able to state at an early date what action has been taken in regard to that shipment. It has been brought to the attention of the department that for the reasons stated by the hon. member (Mr. Herron) it was desirable to make the purchases in the west. In the past these cattle were purchased in the east probably because many of the ranchers in the west also purchased in the east and brought out carloads of young stock. Conditions have somewhat changed, and it is the desire of the department to keep pace with the change of conditions, so this year instructions have been issued to purchase on the western ranches a considerable proportion of the breeding stock required.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Why were cattle purchased elsewhere when there are so many in the west.

Mr. OLIVER. In past years many of the ranch men found it profitable to purchase young stock in eastern Canada. In the past there were difficulties in breeding stock on a large scale on the ranches, but the herds have now become smaller and the owners are able to give better attention to breeding of young stock and it has come to be recognized as part of the cattle industry. There is now available in the west a supply of young stock which was not available a few years ago.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. The minister stated that the maximum price paid for thoroughbred bulls was $125.

Mr. OLIVER. That is the maximum fixed by the department but the officer was allowed some latitude in the purchases at the Calgary sale.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. Do you pay as much for Shorthorns as you do for Herefords ?

Mr. OLIVER. The Shorthorn is the most expensive, for some of the other breeds we only pay as high as $100.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. The minister is correct in saying that the Shorthorns are the most expensive. and so far as I can glean from the Auditor General's Report the maximum price paid for Shorthorns was $125. But I notice from the Auditor General's Report (J—45) that the department has purchased from Mr. J. A. Chapman of Beresford, Man., quite a number of Herefords for which they paid $136 each. That is only a sample, because the same gentleman's name appears in different parts of the Auditor General's Report. Although the Shorthorns are the most expensive and only cost $125, the department paid this gentleman $136 for Herefords.

Mr. OLIVER. I am unable at the moment to give an explanation of the matter, as it occurred before I was in the department.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Are these cattle purchased under a written contract and what supervision is exercised to ensure that adequate value shall be received ? The present system seems to be a little lax, but of course the minister has only been in the department a short time. I think this matter may very well be made the subject of fuller explanation before we get through with this item.

Mr. OLIVER. Orders were given that part of the thoroughbred stock last year, and the whole of the thoroughbred stock this year for Alberta and Saskatchewan shall be purchased at the thoroughbred stock sales at Calgary and Regina. When the animals are put up every opportunity is given to inspect them and they are sold to the highest bidder. Our inspector for the province, there, responsible in his official position and in the knowledge which he is supposed to possess, is expected to use his best judgment in getting the best animals he can within the maximum price. We think that where these thoroughbred stock sales are being held, if they are a success, they offer the best means at the hand of the department for the purchase of that class of stock.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Why do you persist in buying such an enormous proportion of bulls ?

Mr. OLIVER. That is a very technical question. I can only reply that we do not understand that we are purchasing an enormous proportion. As a matter of fact, that particular class of stock is only considered to be at its best value for two seasons, and the supply requires to be continually renewed.

Mr. LALOR. How are the provisions purchased—by public tender ?

Mr. OLIVER. Tenders are called for by public advertisement, and the supplies are taken from those giving the lowest tender, according to sample.

Some resolutions reported.

ARRIVAL OF PRINCE ARTHUR OF CONNAUGHT.

Hon. WM. PATERSON moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Mr. Speaker, I feel sure that all the members of this House are delighted to learn this evening that Prince Arthur of Connaught has reached the western shores of our Dominion. Returning from an imperial mission to the empire of Japan, which is allied to us by treaty, he has been graciously permitted to visit this country. He will find here a people proud of the extent and resources of the Dominion, and inspired with a firm determination to develop those resources to the utmost ; a people inspired also with very high hopes of the position and the influence to which this country will attain as one of the great sister nations of the empire. He will receive a loyal and hearty welcome from the citizens of Canada, and when he leaves our shores he will bear away with him a sincere tribute of respect and affection to His Gracious Majesty, who has done so much since he ascended the throne to inspire sentiments of devotion in the hearts of all the citizens of this country, and indeed in all the citizens of this great empire to which we in Canada are proud to own allegiance. I thought it proper on this occasion to say these few words expressive of the welcome which I am sure the parliament of Canada, in common with all the citizens of this country, are glad to extend to Prince Arthur of Connaught upon his arrival on our shores.

Mr. PATERSON. I had not heard the welcome announcement that has been made by the hon. leader of the opposition, but I am very pleased to know that Prince Arthur of Connaught has reached Canada. I could not better express my sentiments at this time than to say that I fully concur, as I am sure every hon. member of the House does, in the words that have been uttered by the hon. leader of the opposition.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. May I ask whether the government intend to take any government business to-morrow in case we should get through with the business in the hands of private members ?

Mr. PATERSON. I hope that the Prime Minister will be present to-morrow. I do not feel able to speak as to that, but if it is the desire of the House that we should go on, I presume that we shall be ready to proceed with the estimates of the Indian Department, and I believe that the Minister of Justice is ready with those for penitentiaries, and the Minister of Inland Revenue is ready with those of his department.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 11.55 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

WEDNESDAY, March 28, 1906.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

ROYAL ASSENT.

A message was delivered by the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod as follows :

Mr. Speaker, His Honour the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General desires the immediate attendance of this honourable House in the chamber of the honourable the Senate.

Accordingly the House went up to the Senate.

And having returned.

Mr. Speaker informed the House that His Honour the Deputy of the Governor General had been pleased to give, in His Majesty's name, the Royal Assent to the following Bill :

An Act for granting to His Majesty certain sums of money for the public service of the financial year ending the 30th June, 1906.

MONTREAL, OTTAWA AND GEORGIAN BAY CANAL COMPANY.

Hon. N. A. BELCOURT moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 57) respecting the Montreal, Ottawa and Georgian Bay Canal Company.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Explain.

Mr. BELCOURT. The Bill is for an Act to amend the present charter of the Montreal, Ottawa and Georgian Bay Canal Company and to extend the authorized capitalization and issue of bonds with the view of going on with the work if the government should decide not to do the work itself.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. H. GUTHRIE (for Mr. L. G. McCarthy) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 58) respecting the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company.

Mr. BERGERON. Explain.

Mr. GUTHRIE. I only introduce the Bill in behalf of the hon. member for North Simcoe. It was only handed to me this minute and I have not had an opportunity of reading it. We will have to let it speak for itself.

Mr. FOSTER. Let it stand.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

FIRST READINGS.

Bill (No. 59) to incorporate the Woman's Art Association of Canada—Mr. Grant by Mr. Calvert.

Bill (No. 60) to incorporate the Inter-Ocean Fire Insurance Company.—Mr. Bole by Mr. Jackson.

Bill (No. 61) to incorporate the Grand Trunk Pacific Telegraph Company.—Mr. McCarthy by Mr. Guthrie.

RAILWAY ACT, 1903, AMENDMENT.

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (Minister of Railways and Canals) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 62) to amend the Railway Act, 1903. He said: A number of the amendments are designed to correct some little difficulties in the administration of the Railway Act ; they are intended to amplify and enlarge the provisions of the Railway Act with respect to the administration of the railways and also as to the working of the Railway Commission. Probably the most important sections of the Bill are those which deal with telephone companies, and they are intended to correct what must be recognized as abuses in connection with the operation of telephones in this country. The provisions of the Bill are not so radical as some people of this country would like, but I think it will be admitted that every change is not an advancement, and the whole question relating to the administration of telephones is so complex and involves so many interests that any startling changes might require to be adjusted again and again before a common platform would have been reached. The provisions of the Bill guard the public interest without in any way being revolutionary in their character in reference to their telephone organization. The Bill provides for the protection of patrons of telephone companies; the public interests are recognized and I trust that all other interests will be found to have been conserved. The first clause of the Bill provides with respect to appeals. Subsection 3 of section 44 now reads:

An appeal shall lie from the board to the Supreme Court of Canada upon a question of jurisdiction, but such an application shall not lie unless the same is allowed by a judge of the said court upon applications and hearing the parties and the board, &c.

The amendment as proposed will make the latter part of the sentence read:

Unless the same is allowed by a judge of the same court upon application and notice to the parties and the board, and hearing such of them as appear and desire to be heard, &c.

This amendment is suggested on account of an opinion expressed by Mr. Justice Sedgewick upon an application for leave to appeal, that there was considerable doubt as to his power to make an order allowing an appeal unless the board itself was actually represented before him on the application. Subsection 2 of the Act relates to the acceptance of evidence, and under it, unless the board were sitting at a particular time in a certain locality, parties who make application to the board would have to bring their witnesses at great expense and trouble to Ottawa. It is proposed by this amendment to enable the board to accept affidavits and declarations. This refers more particularly to such questions as railway crossings of public highways and matters of that description in which the general public are interested. The section provides for this easy method of applicants getting their case before the court. The third section repeals section 91 and makes provision as follows:

Dividends, at and after the rate of so much per share upon the several shares held by the shareholders in the stock of the company, may, from time to time, be declared and paid by directors out of the net profits of the undertaking.

This is simply to make it possible for directors to declare dividends. Under the law as it has stood in Canada for many years, railway companies could only declare dividends with the sanction of their shareholders; but this has been entirely disregarded. It is proposed to eliminate that condition. The fourth section deals with section 122 of the Railway Act, which provides for a company filing with the Department of Railways and Canals a route map containing such information as will enable the Minister of Railways to deal intelligently with the question of location. As a matter of fact, the provisions of the Act have been practically ignored. Within a few months the department at my suggestion did inaugurate an entirely different system, and framed regulations which governed in all applications to have route maps approved of. There has been some doubt as to the jurisdiction of the Minister of Railways in regard to this action. If section 122 means what it seems to mean by a fair reading and interpretation of it, every railway company, before it could get a route map approved of, would necessarily require to have location surveys. We all know that in actual practice the kind of maps that have been filed with the department on such applications are simply tracings across ordinary maps in many instances, and certainly without any preliminary surveys. This is to remedy that difficulty. Subsection 1 of section 123 is proposed to be repealed and the following substituted:

Such plan, profile and book of reference shall be submitted to the board who, if satisfied therewith, may sanction the same, and by such sanction shall be deemed to have approved merely the location of the railway and the grades and curves thereof, as shown in such plan, profile and book of reference, but not to have relieved the company from otherwise complying with this Act. In granting any such sanction the board shall be bound by the general location as approved by the minister, provided that the board may, unless the minister otherwise specifically directs, sanction a deviation of not more than one mile from any one point on the said general location so approved.

That is to say, section 123 gave the board certain powers. There was a question as between the location map that had been approved of by the department and the proposed deviation. In many instances an approved route had been deviated to the extent of twelve, fifteen, and I think I have heard instances of as much as thirty miles. It is proposed to remedy that by providing that before the board can take any such action there must be practically a conference between the minister and the board with respect to the application. Subsection 1 of section 139 makes provision with respect to the taking of land. That section is repealed, and greater powers are given to railways to take such lands as may be necessary in the safe operation of their railway in the public interest. It is proposed to add the following as a subsection to section 139:

The board may, upon consent in writing having been first obtained from the minister in that behalf, repeal, rescind, change or vary any certificate of the minister made under section 109 of the Railway Act, chapter 29 of the statutes of 1888.

It will be recalled that a certain certificate is required to be furnished by the company to the railway board. The question as to whether the minister, having once exercised jurisdiction, could amend this certificate. This remedies that difficulty. Section 171 is also amended in the same direction. Section 8 provides for the creation, development, enlargement or changing of any water power or any electrical or power development by means of water. It gives full powers to the board in that regard.

Subsection 2 of section 212 of the Act of 1903 is repealed and a subsection substituted which reads as follows:

The board shall endeavour to provide for uniformity in the construction of the rolling stock to be used upon the railway and for a uniformity of rules for the operation and running of trains, and may make regulations designating the number of men to be employed upon trains, or providing that coal shall be used on all locomotives instead of wood in any district, and generally with respect to the running and operation of trains by the company for the protection of property, and the protection, safety, accommodation and comfort of the public and the employees of the company.

The provision in the Act relating to this subject is found to be somewhat limited and this gives larger powers and has greater regard for the safety of the general public.

Section 10 repeals section 235 of the Railway Act of 1903 and substitutes the following:

Every company shall, as soon as possible, and immediately after the head officers of the company have received information of the occurrence upon the railway belonging to such company, of any accident attended with personal injury to any person using the railway, or to any employee of the company or whereby any bridge, culvert, viaduct or tunnel, on or of the railway has been broken or so damaged as to be impassable or unfit for immediate use, give notice thereof, with full particulars, to the board; and every company which wilfully and negligently omits to give such notice shall forfeit to His Majesty the sum of $200 for every day during which the omission to give the same continues.

At present accidents may occur involving loss of life and destruction of property and inconvenience to the public, and no notice is required to be given the Board of Railway Commissioners. It is true the provisions of the Act of 1903 do require that certain returns shall be made to the Department of Railways and Canals with respect to accidents, but this would throw the responsibility upon the company operating the road of furnishing to the railroad board a return giving all particulars.

Section 11 relates to the movement of trains. Section 12 repeals subsection 4 of section 303 of the present Act and substitutes the following:

The minister may, from time to time, change or vary the forms in the said schedule one contained, or may substitute other forms in lieu thereof, and, upon any such change, variation or substitution being so made, the company shall in the manner above provided, prepare, make and forward returns accordingly; the company shall also, at all times, give such information to the minister as the minister may from time to time require for statistical purposes.

Under the present law the requirements regarding statistical returns are very meagre indeed and it is recognized by those familiar with the subject that the returns sent in are practically valueless for the purpose of comparison. The returns required in most of the states of the Union are very comprehensive, give the public full information and are recognized as satisfactory, whereas those furnished in Canada are considered very unsatisfactory.

Section 13 relates to telephones. It amends section 193 of the Railway Act respecting telephone connections with railway stations by adding the following subsection.

Notwithstanding anything in any Act heretofore passed, the board, in determining the terms or compensation upon which any such connection or communication, is to be provided for, shall not take into consideration any contract, lease or agreement, now or hereafter in force, by which the company has given or gives any exclusive or other privilege to any company or person, other than the applicant, with respect to any such station, or premises.

That has been a matter of serious complaint and some litigation, and it is hoped that the provisions of section 13 will remedy the abuses which have grown up.

Section 14 provides:

In this section and the following sections of this Act, unless the context otherwise requires, the expression 'company' means a company, within the meaning of the Railway Act, 1903, having authority to construct and operate or to operate a telephone system or line, and to charge telephone tolls, and includes also the telephone company and every company and person having legislative authority from the parliament of Canada to construct and operate or to operate a telephone system or line, and to charge telephone tolls; and the expression 'telephone toll,' means and includes any toll, rate or charge to be charged by the company to the public, or to any person, for the use of a telephone system or line or any part thereof, or for the transmission of a message by telephone, or for the installation and use of telephone instruments, lines or apparatus, or for any service incidental to a telephone business.

Mr. BERGERON. What is the proposed change?

Mr. EMMERSON. This section does not make any change. It is simply more comprehensive and intended to remedy the abuses which have been complained of.

Section 15 provides for the regulation of telephone tolls by the board.

Section 16 authorizes any province, municipality or body corporate which operates the telephone system, through the board, to connect its system with any telephone system subject to parliament for the purpose of direct communication, provided the standard of efficiency of the telephone systems is such that such communication can, in the opinion of the board, be satisfactorily obtained.

Provided that the standard of efficiency of the telephone systems is such that communication can, in the opinion of the board, be satisfactorily obtained.

Section 17 deals with the question of joint tariffs where two telephone systems are connected. Section 18 deals with the publication and posting of telephone tolls in the offices of the company. Section 19 deals with contracts between companies with respect to their telephone systems, and makes such contracts subject to the approval of the board.

The question, I admit, is a very large one. The operation of telephones is one of recent years, it is developing every day, and widens out to the full scope of the interests affected by it. The public are very largely interested; and those also who are doing the work, whether municipalities or otherwise, have their own rights which must be respected. It seems to me that the provisions of this Bill will correct the abuses that are complained of, while at the same time the Bill does not go to the radical extreme which some favour. Though it may be necessary to go that far in time, the necessity has not yet been demonstrated to exist in the public interest.

Hon. JOHN HAGGART (North Lanark). Without discussing the Bill in general, I would like to draw attention to two or three prominent points in it. The principal amendment relates to the form of procedure before the commission. There is another important amendment in reference to the approval of plans which are filed in the minister's office.

Before approving such map and location the minister may, subject to the Special Act, make such changes and alterations therein as he may deem expedient.

That is, the minister may virtually locate the line of the road.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The minister can only touch the line, as it is presented to him by the company, in so far as that line deviates from the line laid down in the Act of incorporation.

Mr. HAGGART. The two terminal points may be Toronto and Ottawa, the location of the line between these two places is left entirely in the power of the minister. The minister may make such location as he likes. He may say to the parties presenting the proposed line : A friend of mine represents a certain constituency, and he is very anxious to get the line located in such a place—and the minister may use his influence for the purpose of changing the location in the direction that his supporter desires. It is a power which should not be given to a minister. Once a line is adopted and approved by parliament, all the minister should have to do is to see that a map is filed showing the location of the road, in order that public interests may be preserved, and after that, it should be left to the company themselves to run where they find it most convenient.

Mr. EMMERSON. Let me explain to my hon. friend that this Bill does not change the law in that respect.

Mr. HAGGART. It does change the law in that respect. Clause 122 in the old Act says that the company should prepare a map showing the general location of the proposed line of railway.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. That is not touched at all.

Mr. HAGGART. Subsection 3 of the Bill reads :

Before approving such map and location, the minister may, subject to the Special Act, make such changes and alteration as he may deem expedient, and upon being satisfied therewith shall signify his approval upon the map and the duplicate thereof, and when so approved, the map and application shall be filed in the Department of Railways and Canals, and the duplicate thereof with the Board.

No change or alteration from the general location of the line of railway as approved by the minister shall be allowed unless such change or alteration has been first approved by the minister. This gives a more absolute power to the minister than does the old Act.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The only change there is to give to the minister power to approve of that new map in sections, instead of his being obliged to approve of it as a whole.

The minister, in approving any such map and location, may approve the whole or any portion thereof, and where he approves only a portion thereof, he shall signify his approval upon the map and the duplicate thereof accordingly.

The section remains as it is, with the exception of these words which are added.

Mr. HAGGART. Well, if that is all the amendment there is, it is not of much importance. Another part of the Bill relates to damages to be allowed by telephone companies in making connections with other telephone companies, and provides that the board shall have power of awarding damages. There can be no objection to that.

Mr. EMMERSON. I may add that doubts have arisen with respect to the approval of a portion of the line without approving of the whole of it.

Mr. HAGGART. The minister states that it gives power to the board to fix rates or tolls of telephone companies. This Act does not give them any such power.

Notwithstanding the provisions of any Act heretofore or hereafter passed by parliament, all telephone tolls to be charged by the company shall be subject to the approval of the board.

They have the right of regulating the tolls, subject to approval. Once a toll is adopted by the board they have no power whatever of changing it in any respect until there is an application made by the telephone company again for the approval of their tolls, and the board may refuse to approve of them.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Will the hon. gentleman read subsection 3 in that section, page 6.

Mr. HAGGART (reading).

Such telephone tariff may be dealt with by the board in the same manner as is provided by the Railway Act.

Well, I should think that the Railway Act does not go further than clause 15 of the new Bill. I think that full power for fixing tolls for telephones is provided in clause 15. However, when the Act is printed we will be better able to judge.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I should think the latter clause would probably be more effective if it stood without the first. As the hon. member for Lanark (Mr. Haggart) has said, the first clause might limit the operation of the clause last referred to.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Of course we have to see to it that we give effect to our intentions. Our intention is, of course, to give to the Board of Railway Commissioners, such control over telephone rates and telephone charges as they now have over freight and passenger rates in reference to railways.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN (South York). I do not think the government is to be congratulated on the telephone amendment to the Railway Act. The country was led to believe last session, when the late Postmaster General asked this House to appoint a special committee to consider the telephone question, that a radical and important change was about to take place and that public ownership of the telephone service of this country was about to arrive. True, the declaration was not made in specific terms, but if ever a country was led to expect that a new departure was to be made, it was in connection with this very question of telephone ownership. Organs of hon. gentlemen opposite, all over the country, declared that this great reform was coming, that we were to have public ownership of telephones, and that the then Postmaster General was to be the apostle of the new movement and to introduce it in the House. He persuaded the House to grant a special committee which, at great expense, investigated the subject very fully. I happened to be a member of that committee, $17,000 and more was the cost of the committee, we examined any number of witnesses, collected information in all quarters, retained the services of experts and before the session was over the then Postmaster General was suddenly called to England. As a consequence, while that committee had collected a lot of evidence, it had not time to digest it and the idea was given out that at this present session the then Postmaster General would still be in his place, that the committee would be reorganized on much the same lines, and that all that evidence would be considered and the outcome in all likelihood would be public ownership of telephones. No step of that kind has been taken ; on the contrary that Postmaster General who posed before the country as the advocate of public ownership of telephones and also of telegraphs has disappeared from public life. and in his place has come a new Postmaster General. In the election of that new Postmaster General in North York some months ago the statement was made to the public that he would continue in the footsteps of his predecessor and the public were given to understand that legislation of a very important character in regard to telephones would be forthcoming at this session. True the public were somewhat surprised to see that the advocate of public ownership of telephones in this government was to have his place taken by a gentleman who had been the champion of the Bell Telephone Company before that very committee, that so ably investigated this question. But the public were told that no matter what the new Postmaster General had said before the committee in regard to telephones, he had said it purely as a lawyer, he was speaking for a corporation, and the doctrine was set up that a man in public life in this country, who appears before a committee of this House or in the courts may express opinions altogether different from his own opinions ; that he can be a double faced man, a Jekyll and Hyde, that he can profess to be in favour of public ownership as a public man and can go into the courts or before a committee and plead the case of a monopoly or a corporation. The new Postmaster General led the people of North York to believe that he would follow in the footsteps of his predecessor and we were told that we might look out for a new Paul, a Paul greater than the preceding Paul ; but instead of that we have a Saul who stoned the prophets, and stoned public ownership before that committee.

That hon. gentleman, as counsel for the Bell Telephone Company before the committee, said that public ownership was an unmitigated nuisance, an unmitigated cause of expense to the people, and he denounced it in every respect. He said parliament had no right—he, the present Postmaster General, before this committee, said that parliament had no right to regulate a corporation once it had created it. A change of heart has taken place to some extent ; he came before the committee and he said—I never heard so extravagant or drastic a proposition—that parliament, once it had called a corporation into existence, had no right to regulate it thereafter, that there was a contract between the two and that any attempt to regulate it was a violation of contract. He also laid down this doctrine that it was iniquitous for the public to claim any jurisdiction over telephone companies who occupied public highways in this country. He said the people of this country did not own their highways, the doctrine he set out was that in some way the Bell Telephone Company owned the highways of this country, and a great many other things were stated by him on this occasion.

Mr. SPEAKER. Might I call the attention of the House to the fact that it is not customary on the introduction of a Bill to debate it at any length. It is customary for the mover to give a general explanation, but it is not customary for a general discussion or debate to take place on it.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. While I admit that is the custom I am certainly within my right in criticising this new measure that has been introduced here to-day, and which we were told was to deal with this matter in a very wide way. Now, the hon. gentleman not only denounced public ownership but scoffed at it too. He denounced the independent telephone companies, he spoke of some farmers' telephone company that had the audacity to ask to have connection for its line with the Bell Telephone Company. There is a change of heart here to-day. Now we are to have a law that this connection is to be allowed; but that hon. gentleman when he appeared before this committee as counsel for the Bell Telephone Company, denounced this idea of independent telephone companies, indicated that they had no rights whatever, and that we, as a committee, were trying to take away the rights, to take away, as he put it, the gold of the Bell Telephone Company. Now then we are to have, as this measure shows to-day, certain amendments in the law. We are to have the grievance that I presented year after year to this House, the grievance that was derided and scoffed at, redressed. At last it has been admitted that the great railways of this country did an injustice to the independent telephone lines when they refused them access to their stations. That point has been conceded at last, but it has only been conceded after that the Bell Telephone Company has strengthened its monopoly all over the country. Another thing for which I fought before that committee and on which we collected any amount of testimony was that all telephone companies should be compelled to give an interchange of business. We have got that to-day, but after a very hard struggle. Another thing is given us; we are told that there was to be a regulation of the rates. That may or may not be secured, I have not had a chance yet of reading the Bill, but the great grievance has not been remedied, that is that no provision is made for what the late Postmaster General thought was the most important matter of all, namely for the establishment of trunk telephone lines all over this country which would convey the messages of all the independent lines. We were told and led to believe that at least the government would nationalize these trunk lines, but instead of that everything in this Bill here to-day has one object in view, to leave the trunk lines of this country in the ownership and possession of the Bell Telephone Company, the public to have the use of them on the terms of the Bell Telephone Company.

That is the grievance that remains. It is not removed at all; on the contrary it is aggravated and now, to-day, in this House, for the entrenchment of the Bell Telephone Co., a Bill has been introduced increasing the capital stock of that company to $50,000,000. I believe it can be shown that the capital of the Bell Telephone Co. is largely made up of water, and that notwithstanding an effort which was made to cover it up in the committee, the controlling majority of that stock is owned by the great Mackay Cable and Telegraph merger which has its headquarters in the city of New York and all they are doing is to strengthen the Bell Telephone monopoly in Canada and give it a position that will enable it to control and regulate the smaller companies. It was known to the public that the late Postmaster General even went so far as to enter into negotiations with the view not only of nationalizing telephones but telegraphs as well in this country. I believe that both of these things ought to be done to-day in the interests of the people. I believe in the public ownership of telegraphs and telephones and I know that the late Postmaster General was a warm advocate of both of these principles. Let me mention one important feature in connection with public ownership of telephones and telegraphs in this country. A Bill was introduced to-day to give the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company power to go into the telegraph business. What is the result of allowing railway companies to do telegraph business in connection with their railways—it is that they control the news service of Canada to-day. Not only do they control the traffic of the country but they control the telegraph messages of the country. The Canadian Pacific Railway, by reason of its powers in regard to the telegraph business, is the censor of the newspapers of the country. All the news going to the papers in the west has to pass the censorship of the Canadian Pacific Railway. What are called the associated press reports of this country to-day pass through the Canadian Pacific Railway and you cannot get a definition from them as to what contract they have with the newspapers. The other day a most serious accident happened on the Canadian Pacific Railway between here and Port Arthur. No account of it whatever was given to the public.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. May I ask, Mr. Speaker, is it usual to discuss the question of public ownership on the introduction of a Bill of this kind?

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. The principle is involved in the Bill and a promise was given——

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I rise to a question of order, Mr. Speaker. It is time we had an end to this sort of thing.

Mr. SPEAKER. The practice is not to enter into a general debate upon the introduction of a Bill. There is no absolute rule on the question, but that is the practice.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. I still say that I am within my rights and for a few moments I propose to continue. I want to show the relationship between the telephone and telegraph business and the public interest and to show that the late Postmaster General was moving along lines in direction of public ownership. He committed the country to the adoption of the principle of public ownership in regard to the cables. I can bring that subject in.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Agricultural societies might come in, perhaps.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. The hon. Postmaster General (Mr. Aylesworth) does not like this. He does not believe in public ownership in connection with telephones. Let me read what public ownership has done for telegraphs and telephones. In the current number of 'Everybody's Magazine' there is an article about public telephones in Switzerland:

> This same government operates all the telephones in Switzerland—for the convenience and benefit of the people. The charge for a telephone in Switzerland is $8 a year, and one cent for each call within the city or district in which you live. For long distance telephoning the charges are from three cents to fifteen cents according to distance, fifteen being the highest charge.

From Toronto to Montreal the charge is $1.25.

> For fifteen cents you can telephone from Schuls in the east to Neuchatel in the west, 175 miles of line. From Brooklyn to New York you pay fifteen cents, for the like distance in Switzerland you would pay three cents. Telephones are very common in Switzerland. The service is as remarkable for its smooth excellence as for its cheapness.

The present hon. Postmaster General said that he found public ownership of telephones in England a nuisance, but the Postmaster General of England to-day is introducing the telephone system there. Now let us come to the telegraph system of Switzerland. This article says:

> This government also operates the telegraph system—for the public benefit—maintaining what is said to be the best telegraph service in the world. In proportion to the population, Switzerland has more miles of line, and I think, more offices than any other country. You can send a telegram anywhere in Switzerland for six cents and half a cent a word. Thus a message of ten words costs eleven cents. You can put postage stamps on a telegram and drop them into a post office or letter box and you do not have to think of it again; it will be forwarded promptly.

In Switzerland, where they have public ownership of telephones and telegraphs, in Norway and Sweden, where they have the same, and in all the countries in Europe the cost of telephoning is one quarter of what it is in this country. This legislation which is being introduced to-day, instead of placing this great convenience within reach of the people at the smallest cost, is all in the direction of making a monopoly of it in the interest of the Bell Telephone Company. So, I say that this measure which has been introduced here to-day is not in the public interest. It is almost altogether in the interest of the Bell Telephone Co., and what we are going to do is to give them a monopoly of the long distance telephone business. We intend, apparently, to give them power to water or increase their stock to $50,000,000 and the people of the country, instead of getting a telephone service at cost price—and they ought to get it at cost price as they do in other countries—will be obliged to pay the price which this monopoly demands. Surely the Globe newspaper and papers of that character speak more or less for the Liberal party. We were told by them that we were on the eve of the public ownership of telegraphs and telephones, but instead of that the Postmaster General who was friendly to public ownership leaves the cabinet and his place is taken by the then counsel of the Bell Telephone Co. On top of it comes this legislation, which, while it goes a short distance, does not go to the length it ought to go, does not go in the direction of public ownership, but it does go in the direction of strengthening the Bell Telephone Co. In addition to this we are to-day creating another monopoly in regard to telegraphs in connection with the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company. Everything is being done by this government and by this parliament to strengthen the hands of these monopolies. The Prime Minister said that this was the country of the twentieth century. If it is the country of the twentieth century. tury why do we not have twentieth century principles applied to our problems? Why have we not public ownership of telegraphs and telephones? Can the Postmaster General stand up in his place and by figures, by statistics, by any evidence whatsoever, show that public ownership is against the public interest? I defy him to do it. On the contrary I ask him to justify what is being introduced here to-day as carrying out the pledge he gave to the people of North York that he intended to follow in the footsteps of the late Postmaster General. When we go into this in detail and after I have had a chance of examining the Bill I will have something further to say, and while I may be somewhat violating what Mr. Speaker has said has been the custom of the House I think I am perfectly justified and especially am I justified in going the length that I have gone when there has been such a departure from the promises that were made to this House. The hon. Minister of Justice had a good deal to say about my remarks to-day. He still likes to be the champion of vested interests as he calls them. Let him be the champion of the vested interests of corporations. The public have vested interests and they are entitled to what the President of the United States the other day spoke of as at least a fair deal and to a fair chance for their money. They are not getting it. This parliament seems to be occupied with measures for the entrenchment of corporations at the expense of the people. There is no work being done in the way of emancipating the people, but everything is being done to increase the privileges and monopolies of corporations. It may suit the Minister of Justice still to continue that line of argument and always be ready to take the part of vested rights of corporations, but there are some left yet in this country and in this House who will take the part of the public rights whenever they are assailed.

If there is anything worth maintaining to-day in Canada, whether in provincial or Dominion politics, it is public rights; because public rights are being assailed in all directions by great corporations, and the regrettable thing is that those who are in power appear to be the allies of all these corporations in the assaults they are making upon public rights.

Mr. INGRAM. Last session of parliament the attention of the Minister of Railways was called to the fact that the Railway Act made no provision to compel the railway commissioners to furnish a report to parliament. It is very important that the report should be furnished by the railway commissioners, but nevertheless an amendment to that effect seems to be omitted from this Bill.

Mr. EMMERSON. There will be other amendments; some have been suggested to me even to-day, and of course there will be an opportunity for discussing them in the committee.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Carleton, Ont.). The suggestion of the hon. member (Mr. Ingram) should receive the attention of the government. If we have a report each year from the Railway Commission, we may in that way receive suggestions from time to time as to improvements in the Act. The Canadian Railway Act is a remarkably comprehensive enactment. I suppose the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada is in many respects the most important of our judicial bodies; it more closely touches the rights of the people than any other court in Canada; it has not only judicial powers but it has administrative powers; and the suggestion made by my hon. friend (Mr. Ingram) should certainly be acted upon. A moment ago I suggested to the Minister of Justice that I thought there might be some doubt as to whether the clause referred to by my hon. friend from Lanark (Mr. Haggart) went as far as the Minister of Justice thought. I had not then read the clause, and I would not now be inclined to persevere in the suggestion which I made as to its effect. The clause as a whole, seems to go about as far as language could be expected to go for the purpose. There seems to me to be quite as much reason for the regulation of telephones as for the regulation of railways, and perhaps more reason. If the Bill does not go as far in the direction of regulating and controlling telephones as the Act already goes in the direction of controlling and directing railways, then I would support and indeed introduce any amendment necessary to that purpose. The government has not yet seen fit to embark upon the principle of public ownership. It was thought by those who observed the attitude of the late Postmaster General that it was in that direction he was tending when he moved for this committee. The scope of the investigation before that committee seemed to indicate that. Apparently the views of the Postmaster General did not commend themselves to the rest of his colleagues, and we do not know how far that particular question may have had to do with the retirement of that hon. gentleman. But, if the government are not prepared to go any further in the direction of public ownership, then the only alternative is the most effective control that can be devised by statute with respect to what is in most cases a monopoly. A monopoly should either be operated by the government in the interests of the people—there are arguments for and against that policy which I will not discuss now—or else, the government should create the most efficient control of it that can possibly be devised. I trust that when we come to examine this Bill we shall find that it gives every possible control over the operation and regulation, and especially over the tolls of telephone companies, including compulsory interchange connection between the great telephone companies and the smaller companies whose usefulness is greatly impaired by their being debarred from direct communication with the great trunk lines.

Mr. R. BLAIN (Peel). This would be an opportune time to suggest for the consideration of the government, that it is in the public interest, that the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada should be given the same control over freight and passenger rates on the Intercolonial as they are given over the rates on other railways. We have discussed that question for the last three or four years, and we have been generally met with the statement that the Railway Act had not yet an opportunity of being tested. Now that the government has decided to make certain amendments, it seems an opportune time for them to provide that the Railway Commission should have absolute control over the freight and passenger rate of the Intercolonial Railway.

Hon. CHAS. FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice). I expect to suggest other amendments to the Minister of Railways at an early date, and I think I may say it is the intention of the government to insert a provision that the railway commissioners shall make an annual report to parliament. It is proper that we should have such a report, and it apparently was in contemplation when the Act was passed. I quite agree with the leader of the opposition with respect to the importance of the Railway Commission. It undoubtedly is one of the most important tribunals we have in this country; not only that, but I think I am safe in saying that it is the greatest step in advance that has been taken in any country in the world with respect to control over railways, short of public ownership. In that connection I would draw the attention of the member for York (Mr. Maclean) to what has been said by the hon. gentleman from Peel (Mr. Blain) with respect to public ownership ; he does not want public ownership to the extent that my hon. friend (Mr. Maclean) wants it ; he sees what has occurred on the Intercolonial Railway. I do not say that I am very far apart from him, I cannot commit myself beyond that, but in the judgment of that hon. gentleman we should have control of the freight and passenger rates on the Intercolonial Railway. To my hon. friend from York (Mr. Maclean) I would say that one swallow does not make a summer, even in the House of Commons.

As to the telephone clauses in this Bill, they go as far as it is possible to go in the direction of consecrating the principle of private ownership with effective government control. The intention of one of these amendments is to meet the difficulty that was suggested with respect to the Port Arthur case. Hereafter when a telephone company applies for leave to enter a railway station it will not be in the power of the commissioners—when they are determining the condition on which that telephone system shall have the right to enter the railway station—to take into account the exclusive contracts which the railway company may have with the telephone company already in possession.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Is the provision retroactive in this sense, that it applies to contracts already made ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. To all contracts in existence at the present time.

Mr. BERGERON. Last year it was stated before the telephone company that all these contracts had been abrogated by the last Railway Act.

Mr. BLAIN.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. If there are no contracts in existence, no harm is done. If there are contracts in existence, this will provide a remedy for the difficulty that arose in the Port Arthur case. Then, the government intend to provide for the complete and effective control of telephone rates, as complete and effective as we now have with respect to passenger and freight rates on railways.

Mr. SPROULE. That simply means, if I understand it correctly, that you cannot reduce rates, but you can refuse to approve of a new schedule.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. No, it does not mean that at all. My hon. friend is aware that by the Railway Act as we have it today, every railway company, in order to have a tariff of rates which it can apply, must submit that tariff to the Railway Commission, and until it is approved of the company cannot collect anything. That is the condition with respect to railway companies at the present time, and that will be the condition with respect to telephone companies if this Bill passes. In the next place, it is intended to provide for interchange of traffic between all existing telephone companies ; and it is intended to provide for direct oral communication. Provision is to be made for interchange of messages between two telephone companies, subject of course to conditions to be fixed by the Board of Railway Commissioners, and, in addition, when the conditions are such as to enable it to be done effectively, there may be direct oral communication from one telephone system to another subject to conditions to be fixed by the Railway Commission. There is one condition with respect to that to which I wish to direct the attention of the House, that is, that the equipment of the telephone company seeking to obtain the privilege of direct oral communication with another company must be up to such a standard as will permit of effective communication and not be a nuisance or a detriment to the other company. I have explained briefly what the situation is, and I am bound to say to my hon. friend from South York (Mr. W. F. Maclean) that when this Bill comes up again, we shall be prepared to discuss the question of public ownership if he desires ; but we do not think that this is the time for that discussion. So far as I am concerned, I look upon the telephone at the present time as being an essential requisite of our modern civilization. It is as necessary, it seems to me, under existing conditions almost as water and light, and in that view it is important that we should make provision for as effective control over telephone companies as we can have consistent with private ownership ; and I think myself that private ownership, with effective government control, is an ideal system.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

QUESTIONS.

EMPLOYMENT OF UNITED STATES DREDGES.

Mr. TAYLOR asked :

1. Were any of the dredges owned by Messrs. Daly & Hanman, of Ogdensburg, N.Y., employed by the government during the season of 1905 ?
2. If so, how many of the said dredges were employed, and what are the names of the dredges so employed, and what was paid per day for the same ?
3. How long did each dredge work, and during what months ?

Mr. R. LEMIEUX (for the Minister of Marine and Fisheries) :

1. Yes.
2. Two dredges employed, Nos. 3 and 5 Eleven dollars per hour.
3. No. 5 dredge 36 hours in October, 1905 ; No. 3 dredge 200 hours in October and November, 1905.

WILSON'S BEACH BREAKWATER.

Mr. GANONG asked :

1. What was the total cost of the breakwater at Wilson's Beach, N.B.?
2. What was the total amount paid to James M. Johnston, in connection with this work ?
3. What was the total cost of tools and other appliances supplied by the government, in any way connected with the erection of this work, and what disposition has been made of such tools and appliances ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works) : All of this question, except the last part was answered yesterday. In reply to a telegram from the department the resident engineer has replied that no disposition had been made of the tools in question.

CENTRAL EXPERIMENTAL FARM.

Mr. TAYLOR asked :

1. What has been the total expenditure in connection with the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa for each year from 1890 to 1905, inclusive ?
2. What has been the total revenue received from the same for each year from 1890 to 1905, inclusive ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (for the Minister of Agriculture) :

Year.	Expenditure.	Revenue.
1890-91..	$49,142 18	$2,426 81
1891-92..	30,416 52	2,561 93
1892-93..	26,261 21	3,150 12
1893-94..	36,071 43	2,186 56
1894-95..	39,563 73	3,784 74
1895-96..	37,396 13	3,785 84
1896-97..	41,429 26	3,182 09
1897-98..	37,717 63	2,814 84
1898-99..	38,357 46	2,886 53
1899-00..	49,573 25	2,446 47
1900-01..	42,040 82	2,553 80
1901-02..	56,375 07	2,254 63
1902-03..	49,615 64	2,972 60
1903-04..	47,671 76	3,074 64
1904-05..	48,250 12	4,971 58

JOSEPH DEMERS CLAIM.

Mr. BOYCE—by Mr. Cockshutt—asked :

1. Has the Department of Marine and Fisheries been made aware of a claim by one Joseph Demers, of Sault Ste. Marie, that his property at the corner of Superior and Hudson streets, Sault Ste. Marie, is injuriously affected by the erection and maintenance of a range light abutting and encroaching thereon ?
2. If so, what action has been taken ?
3. Is the erection to be removed ? If so, when ?
4. Has the department offered compensation ? If so, how much, and has it been accepted ?

Hon. L. P. BRODEUR (Minister of Marine and Fisheries) :

1. Yes.
2. The tower will be removed.
3. This spring.
4. No; as the grievance will be removed compensation is not necessary.

PROTECTION OF GREAT LAKE FISHERIES.

Mr. BOYCE—by Mr. Cockshutt—asked :

1. How many officers are employed for the protection of fisheries in the Great Lakes ?
2. Who are they and where are they stationed ?
3. What are they paid respectively ?
4. What are their duties ?
5. Do they all report periodically ? If so, how often ?
6. Has it been reported to the department that fish spawn lodged in Canadian waters around the shores of Manitoulin Island, and of lakes Huron and Superior, in Canada, is annually taken by American boats to American hatcheries ?
7. If so, when and by whom were such reports made ?
8. Has the matter been investigated ?
9. Has any action been taken by the department ? If so, what ?

Hon. L. P. BRODEUR (Minister of Marine and Fisheries) :

1. Three inspectors of fisheries and three officers on board the cruiser 'Vigilant' are so employed by the federal government.
2. J. M. Hurley, Belleville, salary $1,200 per annum; O. B. Sheppard, Toronto, salary $1,200 per annum; A. G. Duncan, Marksville, salary $1,200 per annum ; the cruiser 'Vigilant' patrols the waters of Lake Erie. The officers on the cruiser are: E. Dunn, captain, salary $1,250 per annum ; J. Inkster, 1st officer, salary, $60 per month; J. McPherson, 2nd officer, salary $55 per month.
3. Answered by No. 2.
4. The inspector's duties are to carry out a general supervision of the enforcement of the Dominion fishery laws within their districts.

The cruiser's duty is to exercise a general supervision and to prevent encroachment by foreign fishing vessels.

5. Yes ; annually, monthly and on all matters referred to them or which may arise in their districts from time to time.

The captain of the cruiser makes daily reports.

6. It has not been reported to the department that fish spawn lodged in Canadian waters around the shores of Manitoulin Island and of Lakes Huron and Superior in Canada is annually taken by American boats to American hatcheries.

7, 8 and 9. Answered by No. 6.

INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY CONTRACTS.

Mr. GAUVREAU asked :

1. How many persons have tendered, respectively, for the following contracts : (a) The water tank for the Intercolonial Railway at Rivière du Loup ; (b) the round house for the Intercolonial Railway at Pictou ; (c) the Intercolonial station at Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island ?

2. What are their names ?

3. What are the amounts of the tenders in each case ?

4. To whom were the contracts awarded ?

5. Were they the lowest tenders ?

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (Minister of Railways and Canals):

1. (a) 4. (b) 7. (c) 4.

2. (a) Canadian Fairbanks Company, Chicago Bridge and Iron Works, Emile Dubé, E. A. Mallberg. (b) Emile Dubé, E. A. Wallberg, H. McDonald, Rhodes Curry & Co., R. P. P. Fraser, Dixon & Falconer, Willard Kitchen. (c) Rhodes, Curry & Co., E. A. Wallberg, Emile Dubé, H. & S. Lowe.

3. (a) Canadian Fairbanks Company, $4,900 ; Emile Dubé, $4,900 ; Chicago Bridge and Iron Works, $4,780; E. A. Wallberg, $4,470. (b) Emile Dubé, $98,185.20 ; E. A. Wallberg, $62,523.55; Rhodes, Curry & Co., $70,763.90; H. McDonald, $88,076.95; Dixon &Falconer, $65,699.95; R. P. P. Fraser, $68,689.55; Willard Kitchen, $73,011.60; (c) Rhodes, Curry & Co., $86,390; E. A. Wallberg, $58,900 ; Emile Dubé, $67,890 ; H. & S. Lowe, $83,698.

4. (a), (b) and (c) to E. A. Wallberg.

5. Yes.

LAPRAIRIE ICE PIER.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. Did the government give to Messrs. Amiot & Lemay the contract for constructing new work in connection with the Laprairie ice pier, after the final payment on their original contract had been made ?

2. What is the amount involved in said new contract ?

3. Did the government call for tenders in connection with this new work ?

4. If not, why not ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works) :

1. Yes.

2. $13,500.

3. Yes.

INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY PENSION SYSTEM.

Mr. DANIEL asked :

1. Is it the intention of the government to inaugurate a pension or superannuation system in connection with the employees of the Intercolonial Railway ?

2. If so, will such system be inaugurated this year ?

3. If not this year, when ?

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (Minister of Railways). The matter is under consideration.

OTTAWA ASTRONOMICAL OBSERVATORY.

Mr. AMES asked :

1. What steps were taken to obtain competition for the electric wiring of the Ottawa Astronomical Observatory ?

2. Were tenders called for by public advertisement ?

3. If so, what offers were received ?

Hon. CHARLES S. HYMAN (Minister of Public Works). Ahearn & Soper, Lt'd., were asked to submit prices, their tender was thought to be reasonable and was therefore accepted.

CORNWALL CANAL ELECTRIC POWER.

Mr. LANCASTER asked :

1. Has the government a contract or arrangement with any company or individual in reference to supplying electric power for hauling vessels in and out of the locks of the Cornwall canal ?

2. If so, when, with whom, and for how long was such contract made ?

3. Has the government, since the opening of navigation in 1905, received any protests, remonstrances, or petitions from vessel owners, masters or others, in respect of delays consequent upon the carrying out of the new arrangement governing the hauling of vessels by electrical power in and out of the locks of the Cornwall canal ?

4. Will the government lay on the table of the House a copy of the said contract, and of the rules issued in consequence thereof ?

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (Minister of Railways and Canals) :

1. The government has a contract with a company for the supply of electric energy for the various purposes of the canal, such as driving the machinery in the workshops, lighting the various buildings and the canal itself, opening and closing the lock gates, valves, &c., working winches for the purpose of towing boats into and out of the locks.

2. The contract is dated June 25, 1896, and made with Mr. M. P. Davis, and is for twenty-one years from July 1, 1896, and is renewable for eighty-four years from July 1, 1895, and was supplemented and varied by agreements, dated October 19, 1900 and August 13, 1903, respectively. These were assigned to the St. Lawrence Power Company by assignment dated May 2, 1904.

3. Yes, a memorial has been received from the Dominion Marine Association. The rules so far as they apply to passenger steamers and small tugs are now under revision.

4. There appears to be no objection to this, but I think they will all be found in the sessional papers.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY LANDS.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE asked :

1. When was the arrangement made by which the Canadian Pacific Railway completed its final selection of lands in the Northwest, exclusive of British Columbia ?

2. What limit of time was allowed said company in which to complete their selection ?

3. After the areas of selection were determined, how long a period was granted to the company to file their list of final selections ?

4. Will the minister lay on the table of the House a copy of said final arrangement ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

1. August 22, 1903.

2. For the main line subsidy, till June 30, 1904. For the company's land subsidies other than the main line subsidy, till December 31, 1903.

3. Answered by the answer to question 2.

4. Yes, on an address being moved for and presented.

RIDING MOUNTAIN TIMBER RESERVE.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE asked :

1. Has any change been made in the boundaries of the Riding Mountain timber reserve since 1st January, 1904 ?

2. If so, what are the changes ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

1. Yes.

2. The following lands which were included in the said reserve on the 1st of January, 1904, have been withdrawn therefrom, viz.:—the west half of township 18, the west half of township 19, and the two westerly tiers of sections in township 20, range 15; sections 1, 12 and 13 in township 21, range 16; section 23 in township 18, range 17; sections 25, 26, 27, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35 and 36 in township 18, range 18; sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12 and 13 in township 18, range 19; the south half and northwest quarter of township 18, range 20; sections 6, 7 and 18 in township 20, range 21; sections 12, 13, the north half of section 22, sections 23, 24, 25, 26, the south halves of sections 27, 28, 29 and 30, sections 35 and 36 in township 23, range 21; the south half of township 20, range 22; the south halves of sections 25 and 26 in township 23, range 22; sections 31, 32 and 33 in township 23, range 23; sections 3, 9, 15, 22, 27 and 34 in township 24, range 25; section 6 and the west half of section 5 in township 23, range 26, all west of the principal meridian.

The following lands which were not included within the boundaries of the same reserve on the 1st January, 1904 have been added thereto, viz.:—

The west half of section 1, sections 2, 3, 10, 11, the west halves of sections 12 and 13, sections 14 and 15 in township 22, range 17; sections 19, 20, 29 and 30 in township 23, range 18, west of the principal meridian.

TRANSCONTINENTAL SURVEYS.

Mr. CROCKET asked :

1. How many parties are now at work surveying and locating the proposed Transcontinental Railway between Quebec and Winnipeg and between Quebec and Moncton, respectively?

2. Between what points are said parties working ?

3. Has survey and location work been continuous during the winter on both sections, or on either, and which of them ?

4. If the work was suspended on both sections, or either of them, when was it so suspended, and for what reason ?

5. When does the commission expect that the work of survey and location will be completed on each section ?

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (Minister of Railways and Canals) :

1. Between Winnipeg and Quebec, 31. Between Quebec and Moncton, 3.

2. Winnipeg to Lake Nepigon, eleven parties. Lake Nepigon to Kebinakagami river, three parties. Kebinakagami river to Kenojevis river, six parties. Kenojevis river to Waymontachene, five parties. Waymontachene to Quebec, six parties. Quebec to Moncton, three parties.

3. Yes, on both.

4. Answered by No. 3.

5. Impossible to say at present.

MARCONI WIRELESS STATIONS.

Mr. FOSTER asked :

1. What amount has been paid up to 31st December, 1905, on account of Marconi wireless stations and expenses ?

2. What stations are now being operated ?

3. What vessels are now equipped ?

Hon. L. P. BRODEUR (Minister of Marine and Fisheries) :

1. Paid to Marconi Company up to 31st December, 1905, on account of wireless stations and expenses $118,542.73.

2. Fame Point; Heath Point ; Whittle Rocks; Point Amour; Belle Isle; Point Rich, Newfoundland ; Cape Ray, Newfoundland ; Cape Race, Newfoundland ; Sable Island ; Camperdown, Halifax Harbour; Cape Sable; Partridge Island, (entrance St. John Harbour) ; Cape Bear, Prince Edward Island.

3. The government vessels equiped are the 'Canada' 'Minto' 'Stanley' Montcalm' 'Druid' 'Lady Laurier'. I cannot give the names of other vessels. Did the hon. gentleman wish for other vessels ?

Mr. FOSTER. Only those that are equiped at government expense.

Mr. BRODEUR. Then these are the only ones.

FOG SIGNALS.

Mr. FOSTER asked :

1. What amount of money has been paid to date to the Canadian Fog Signal Company ?
2. Were the goods supplied on calls for tender and contract ?
3. Will the minister lay the calls for tenders and the tenders received and the contracts ultimately entered into, on the table of the House ?

Hon. L. P. BRODEUR (Minister of Marine and Fisheries) :

1. 1903-1904.. .. ..$ 14,600 00
   1904-1905.. .. .. 428,489 00
   1905-1906.. .. .. 1,132 63

2. No tenders were called but agreement was made as to prices.
3. Copy of agreements as to prices can be furnished.

PAYMENTS TO GEO. T. MERWIN.

Mr. FOSTER asked :

1. What amount of money has been paid to date to Geo. T. Merwin ?
2. Were the goods supplied on calls for tender and contract ?
3. If so, will the minister lay the tenders and resultant contracts upon the table of the House ?

Hon. L. P. BRODEUR (Minister of Marine and Fisheries) :

1. $404,308.87.
2. No.
3. See answer to preceding question.

CONTRACTS FOR GAS BUOYS.

Mr. FOSTER asked :

1. What amount of money has been paid to date to Thomas L. Willson for gas buoys ?
2. Were the goods bought in tender and contract ?
