IS WAR FOR HUMAN RIGHTS, SAYS KING

Ferdinand's Striking Proclamation To Bulgarians

PATIENCE IS EXHAUSTED

Brothers in Blood and Religion, the Macedonian Christians, Unable to Obtain Conditions of Life Bearable—"Forward," He Says to Army, "May God Be With You"

(Canadian Press)

Sofia, Bulgaria, Oct. 18.—A striking proclamation to the Bulgarian nation has been issued by King Ferdinand. He recounts the sufferings of the Macedonian Christians and the efforts of the European powers to secure better treatment for them, and says that he has called his people to arms only after the patience of the Balkan nations has been exhausted.

(Canadian Press)

The proclamation opens with a reference to King Ferdinand's peaceful reign twenty-five years and says he has hoped that it would have continued. "But Providence judged otherwise. The moment has come when the Balkan race is called upon to renounce the benefits of peace and to resume arms for the solution of the great problem."

(Canadian Press)

"Beyond the Rilo and the Rhodope mountains our brothers in blood and religion have been made to live for thirty-five years after our liberation, to obtain conditions of life that are bearable. The tears of the Balkan slaves and groaning of millions of Christians could not stir our hearts and the hearts of our co-religionists."

(Canadian Press)

"Our love of peace is now exhausted. There remains to us no other means than to turn to arms. After the massacres of Jellin and Kotschani, instead of according justice and satisfaction Turkey ordered the invasion of her military forces. Our long patience has thus been put to a rude test."

(Canadian Press)

"With faith in the protection of our Almighty God, I bring to the cognizance of the Bulgarian nation that this is a war of defence. I order the brave Bulgarian army to march on to Turkish territory. Forward, may God be with you. Today special services are being held in all the churches of the kingdom for the success of the Bulgarian arms. The ministers and other dignitaries were among the large congregation in the cathedral where a 'Te Deum' was sung."

(Canadian Press)

The government has ordered the Bulgarian minister at Constantinople to communicate a note to the Ottoman government setting out that the relations between Bulgaria and the Ottoman empire are now broken off."

(Canadian Press)

The Bulgarian minister at Constantinople has been ordered to inform the Porte when he presents the note that Bulgaria considers herself at war with Turkey and that his mission has ceased. He is to leave Constantinople at the earliest possible moment. T. Turks residing in Bulgaria, who will leave the country may do so with their possessions, may be assured of protection of the law."

(Canadian Press)

Paris, Oct. 18.—The European powers, in the opinion of diplomatic circles, must now await a favorable moment to take concerted action. This might be in the form of mediation between the belligerents or if the war should have definite results one way or the other their action might be expressed concretely at a conference.

(Canadian Press)

None of the powers is yet ready to commit itself or specify actions, but all recognize the wisdom of keeping in constant communication with each other. In the meantime France is exercising her friendly influence at St. Petersburg, while Germany is doing the same at Vienna in the endeavor to prevent Russia and Austria taking sides in the Balkan conflict.

(Canadian Press)

Richmond, Romania, Oct. 18.—The Romanian government has decided to prepare for mobilization three of its army corps. In semi-official circles here it is thought that Romania considers that any eventual success of the Bulgarian arms will be dangerous to herself. She is waiting attitude and to order the mobilization immediately upon Bulgaria gaining an important victory.

(Canadian Press)

French Press to the Powers
Berlin, Oct. 18.—Germany's benevolent neutrality during the Balkan war was requested last evening by the Bulgarian, Serbian and Greek ministers here.

(Canadian Press)

Paris, Oct. 18.—The French press insists upon the necessity of a complete accord among the European powers. The fear is expressed that should contentment and antagonism develop as the result of the opportunity aggrandizement arising out of the trouble in the Balkan peninsula the world may see the bloodiest war in its history.

(Canadian Press)

The figure is of the opinion that the danger of European conflict is merely retarded and not suppressed.

Grown Up Children

By BETH CAMERON

THERE are several kinds of grown up children in this world. There's the kind that everybody loves, the folks whose hearts have refused to grow old with their bodies, who have somehow miraculously avoided the cynicism and disenchantment which usually come with the years, and have kept all the fine enthusiasm and optimism of youth.

And there is the kind of people who really have grown old but refuse to admit it by their manners or their clothes. Too often we laugh at them when we really ought to pity them.

And then again, there is the kind of grown up children, who, while they have lost all the fine qualities of youth, have still kept the pettiness—and as for those, well, to me, at least, it's pretty hard to remember that they aren't big enough to deserve dislike.

In our neighborhood there is a person who see him on the street or know him... usually think he deserves to be called one. People who know him better usually come to realize that he is simply a grown up child of the least desirable class. Here is a little example of the tricks by which he has earned this reputation: In company with several other young couples he and his wife used to play cards two or three evenings every week. One very lovely summer evening the rest of the party naturally saw no reason why they should all give up to please one member, and pleasantly responded that they would walk and he might play cards if he preferred. So angry was he at this refusal to yield to his preference that he not only stayed at home and played cards, but he actually "got mad" and refused even to speak to the offenders any more.

What do you think of that? He saw them constantly, on the street, at social gatherings and at the restaurant they all frequented, but he passed them by in stony silence. The other day he found himself on the street car getting next to one of the women, and although she was quite ready to say good morning and pass the time of day, he hid behind his paper and hugged his "mad." And all because they wouldn't play what he wanted to!

Do you remember what Fortis says of one of her lovers? "God made him and, therefore, let him pass for a man." That is a very expressive description of some people, isn't it?

Again, I know a hostess of a boarding house who says she has to be very careful to have all her helpings alike, because there are some of her guests who would be much upset if they thought anyone else was getting an ounce more of pudding or more plum in their sauce than they.

To have grown up and lost all the glories of childhood, and not to have compensated one's self by getting rid of its pettiness and peevishness, surely this is one of the tragedies of life.

ABORN OPERA CO. NEXT WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY

Local theatre goers have for years been clamoring for what they termed a real opera company, and hundreds have welcomed the announcement that at last the great Aborn Opera Company will be heard here in three presentations of the Bohemian Girl, for which the name of Aborn is justly famous.

As presented by the Aborn Company this opera is probably more popular than under any other circumstances. Not only Blanche Morrison as Arline has a cast of high class soloists, and a mammoth chorus of fifty well trained voices have been procured, but to give realism to the scenes, and incidentally to vary the entertainment, Sergeant Aborn is carrying Hunter's hand very badly. Dr. Gilmore dressed the wounds and hopes to save the hand.

Daily Hints For the Cook

Take a round steak and spread it an inch thick with chopped bread and butter, seasoned with pepper and salt, egg and a little onion if liked. Roll steak up, tie with twine, lay in a baking pan, with thin slices of salt pork on top, pour round it pint of water, cover closely and bake in moderate oven three hours.

CRACKER PUDDING The following recipe contains no molasses, although some use both molasses and sugar. Take about six crackers, one quart milk and cook well. One egg, scant cupful of sugar, about a cupful of raisins. Spice to taste with nutmeg, cinnamon and a little salt. If eaten without sauce it might have a rounding cupful of sugar. Serve with or without sauce.

TORY METHODS. Some of the methods adopted by the Tories who won the by-election in Manitoba were a disgrace to Canada. Two Liberal workers were arrested and thrown into jail. These men had been guilty of no infraction of the law. Yesterday they were dismissed, as the prosecution stated that it had no evidence to offer against them.

There was another item of important news which was unaccountably overlooked by the Standard. It was the resignation of the Hon. F. D. Monk from the Borden cabinet. One would suppose that so important a fact would be worthy of publication, but the Standard was waiting for instructions. Mr. Borden's troubles increase. Having assented to an unworthy compact in the alliance with the Nationalists he has ever since been dodging this way and that to escape the effects of his own lack of statesmanship.

ARTILLERY OFFICER GETS IN BAD SCRAPE. Ruas Away With Dancer And Now Has Prison Sentence For Loose Money Transaction.

Paris, Oct. 15.—Lieutenant Alfred Sewich, a young German artillery officer, has been condemned by the Tenth Correctional Chamber to a fine of $10 and six months imprisonment for an attempt to obtain money by false pretences. A year ago Lieutenant Sewich, who is of good family, left Germany with a young actress with whom he was infatuated, and settled at Nice. One day when his money had almost given out he read in a Berlin paper that a certain Herr Schuster wished to borrow $375,000. Accordingly he wrote to Herr Schuster under the false name of Count von Hardenberg, offering to lend the sum requested, but demanding the sum of $125,000 to cover the expenses of the journey to Berlin.

LIGHTER VEIN SMALL FRY. Exchange.

Two young anglers were exhibiting with great satisfaction the results of a day's sport when a young woman asked demurely, "Fish go to school, do they not?" "I believe they do," said one; "but why do you ask?" "Oh, nothing, only I was just thinking that you must have broken up an infant class!"

WHERE? The spread of tuberculosis had come up in class, and teacher had spoken most impressively of the opportunity the Red Cross stamps provided to help in the cure and prevention of the dread disease. The children listened eagerly, much impressed. By and by a boy in a rear seat asked anxiously, "Please, teacher, where do you have to put the stamps to cure you?"

ALWAYS A DEMOCRAT. (Ladies' Home Journal.) During a Republican campaign an orator became quite exasperated at the remarks of an old farmer, who kept insisting, as he interrupted the speaker, that he was a Democrat.

"And, why, sir, are you a Democrat, may I ask?" thundered the orator. "My father was a Democrat, as was his father before him," replied the farmer. "Well, now," asked the orator, "suppose your father was a fool and your grandfather was a fool, what, under your line of argument, would you be?" "I'd be a Republican," drawled the farmer.

THOSE SAME FELLOWS! In the early days in Indiana the only reading book used in school was the Bible. One day the class was standing, reading the account of the three Hebrew children in the fiery furnace. A little tow-head fellow, who stood near the end, had the verse which the unpunctuated name; he turned up Shadrach and Meshach woefully and went all to pieces on Abednego. Hearing under the blows which followed, the little fellow sobbed aloud. The reading then went on, each boy reading a verse in turn and the tow-headed boy read intently on the verses ahead. Suddenly he gave a pitiful yell, at which the school-master demanded, "What's the matter with you now?" "Look there," said the boy pointing to the next verse, "there comes those same three fellows again."

MONK GOES OUT OF THE CABINET

Nationalist Breaks Away From Borden on the Navy Policy—Nantel May Follow

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—The inevitable split in the Nationalist-Conservative cabinet was openly avowed tonight, after a long cabinet meeting this afternoon, followed by a conference of ministers in the premier's room, which lasted until 10 o'clock tonight.

As foreshadowed by your correspondent yesterday, the attitude of Hon. F. D. Monk, minister of public works, towards the government's naval policy has made necessary his resignation from the cabinet. This resignation is now in the premier's hands, and has been accepted.

L. T. Marchal, the prospective minister to succeed Mr. Monk, arrived in the city today from Montreal, and was in conference with Mr. Borden, the premier. Mr. Marchal will probably join in Hochberg, where Louis Coderre, M. P., is expected to make way for him on promise of a Quebec judgeship. This is about the only Quebec constituency which the government claims to be in possession of.

Mr. Marchal will, it is expected, come in as secretary of state, following the cabinet shift of Hon. Dr. Roche to the interior department, and Hon. Robert Rogers to the public works portfolio, in succession to Mr. Monk.

Mr. Monk's resignation does not as yet, at any rate, involve his retirement from politics. He has resigned on a question of policy holding firm to his pre-election views that before embarking on any naval policy, even an emergency contribution, the people have a right to be consulted and should be consulted by the cabinet in the house, and will, during the coming session, oppose the naval policy of his late colleague.

Monk to Battle in Parliament.

Mr. Monk sincerely believes in his views both as regards the navy and in regard to non-interference of Canada in Great Britain's foreign policy. He does not wish to go into retirement by accepting the proffered Quebec judgeship and will fight for his opinion in the house. Whether or not he will be joined by Hon. Mr. Nantel, minister of inland revenue and mines, remains to be seen. The latter is apparently wavering between the desire to hold on to office and the desire to keep his pre-election promise.

Hon. Mr. Fallis has chosen the former option and will swallow everything the government proposes.

In view of today's developments, it is certain that there will be in the commonsense session an emergency session, which will make things decidedly uncomfortable for the government.

No official announcement yet forthcoming as to the date of the opening of parliament. Yesterday Premier Borden had hoped that Mr. Monk would make quiet exit, unembarrassing to the government. If this could have been accomplished the government would have postponed the opening of the session until January, even at the risk of damaging thereby the arguments of an emergency contribution. But now that Mr. Monk has taken the bull by the horns, the little use in further delay and the probabilities are that an announcement will be made in a few days of the parliament for Nov. 21, as originally intended.

ANOTHER OUTRAGE

Morden, Man., Oct. 17.—The case against R. J. A. Prince, of Winnipeg, who was arrested at Morden today for connection with the MacDonald election, was dismissed here this morning by Magistrate Morley. The government will probably institute a writ of habeas corpus for the young man should not have been arrested at all, and that it was time to put a stop to such proceedings.

Sorel, Que., Oct. 17.—Nominations were made at noon today for the by-election in the county of Richelieu. The Conservatives nominated E. D. Morgan, and the Liberals J. A. Carlin, the former member. There was considerable enthusiasm, and there is every indication of a warily contested election. Both candidates made speeches. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is to speak here on Tuesday next.

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—An order-in-council was passed yesterday appointing Harry Corby, ex-M. P. of Belleville, to the vacant position, ex-M. P. of Sturgeon Falls, to the senate, to fill the vacancies caused by the death of Sir Richard Cartwright and Senator Wilson, St. Thomas.

DON'T BE FUSSY ABOUT EATING

Your Stomach Will Digest Any Kind of Food When Given the Proper Assistance.

We are prone to fall into the error of singling out some article of food and soundly berating the fiend who first invented the dish. The habit grows with some people till almost all food is put on the blacklist. This is all wrong. What is required is a little assistance with those agencies upon which scientific students for many years have set their seal of approval because they have become absolute facts. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets for all stomach disorders are recognized; they have a fine record; they are rated reliable, dependable and worthy of confidence just as the president of a big bank puts his O. K. on a depositor's check. And so you can eat what you want, whatever you like, knowing well that should indigestion, sour rains, gas formations, fermentations or any other stomach distress arise, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in a few moments will put you right.

Coated tongue, flat breath, heartburn, belching, flatulence, bloating—all the symptoms of digestive troubles disappear quickly when these tablets are used. They are not a cure for anything but dyspepsia and kindred complaints. But they have brought relief to more sufferers from digestive diseases than all the patent medicines and doctor's prescriptions put together.

The stomach does the heaviest work of any of the bodily organs, yet it's the one we treat with the least regard. We eat too much of the wrong kind of food at any time. The patient stomach stands such treatment as long as it can and then it rebels. You get notice of the rebellion in the shape of the gases and pains caused by undigested, fermenting food.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold and recommended by all druggists at 50c. a box.

A BOON TO THE NORTH END

The announcement today that Chas. R. Wasson will open tomorrow a Rexall Drug Store in the north end is another indication of the boom in that section of the city. Patrons of Wasson's King street store know the modern methods, up-to-date goods and low prices that have made the main store so popular.

The new store is at 579 Main street. It will be under the management of Harry W. Myers, who is well known to very many local people, having served in several prominent city drug stores. The fact that it is a Rexall store assures it such success as it is the public mind that he is generously treated at Wasson's, 579 Main street.

YOUNG MAN ARRESTED HERE MAKES STATEMENT

Mr. Morton, arrested here yesterday on a telegram from Montreal, last night made the following statement regarding the case which he said was alleged misappropriation of funds of the Empire Securities Company, in which he was a partner.

The Securities Company in which I was a third partner and manager, was organized by me and was composed of myself, J. C. Redmond and James Robinson, all of Montreal. The company was organized to serve as the selling medium for the public for an issue of a million and a half of stock of another proposition of mine, viz., the Citizens' Artificial Ice Company, Limited, of which James Robinson, Robert Rickerdick, M. P., J. C. Redmond and David S. Friedman were directors.

"In order to facilitate the transfer of the shares in the ice company to the securities company I had the latter company registered in the name of Mr. Redmond, who was at that time my intimate friend, although retaining the management and conducting the securities company's affairs myself.

"The latter part of August some matter in which I and Redmond differed came up and these finally led to me removing my office quarters from the rooms which Redmond occupied.

"Legal proceedings were threatened and to save unpleasantness I, through my attorney, endeavored to adjust matters. But at no time were matters considered of a serious nature by me or by my lawyer and it was supposed that merely an explanation of the details would be necessary to adjust things to the satisfaction of all."

Mr. Morton says that it was at this stage of the case that his lawyer informed him it would be quite all right for him to come to St. John and arriving here he registered at the Royal Hotel as was his habit when on visits to this city on previous occasions. He says he is quite surprised at the turn of affairs and considers the whole matter so absurd that it partakes of the humorous.

He will proceed to Montreal tomorrow and meet any charges that may be alleged against him.

BEUTLER HAD GREAT NAME AS A DETECTIVE

The Times yesterday reported the death of Seymour Beutler, a noted ex-Pinkerton detective, who in his latter days, made a specialty of following crooks at horse race tracks and who was in St. John on the occasion of a meet here.

Mr. Beutler was one of the men employed to protect the Duke of Cornwall and York, now King George, during his tour of Canada some years ago. On that occasion he impressed His Royal Highness that before departing he presented Mr. Beutler with three handsome scarf pins. Mr. Beutler was also retained at the time His Majesty visited Quebec on the occasion of the Tercentenary, and was again presented with a scarf pin by the King.

Mr. Beutler's methods were peculiar. He seldom had anything to do with arresting a man. His aim was always merely to identify. It is said that he knew 15,000 crooks, most of whom he had never seen. His memory for descriptions was unerring and he could detect a man instantly by a written description. The feature which he found most useful to observe was the ear, which he said was always distinctive, and never changed in an individual. Until about two years ago he was with a Pinkerton agency, but lately operated a detective bureau of his own. He was often summoned on journeys of thousands of miles to identify a criminal, and was connected with many famous cases.

WHAT MAKES A COMPLEXION?

The season's programme of evening parties, social events, etc., is before you. Why not look your best? Why not ensure a good complexion? Matter of time and perseverance only if you will use Zam-Buk.

Zam-Buk is a skin food; and complexion is purely a matter of skin health. Zam-Buk smears lightly over the face, each night, acts as a skin tonic. It stimulates the cells beneath the cuticle to healthy action, makes the capillaries and blood vessels work, and the vigorous circulation, thus started, carries away secreted impurities. Wax, yellow deposits are thus removed. That yellow tinge gives place to the pink of health.

Isn't this wiser than relying upon talcum powder and cosmetics? Zam-Buk builds up a complexion from blood and tissue. It lasts!

BARONESS ESCAPES FROM THE ASYLUM

Another Sensation in Case Already Marked by Sensationalism. Brussels, Oct. 18—There has been a sudden and sensational development in the case of a wealthy and pretty young Dutch baroness, Mademoiselle Van Coehoorn, who this summer was carried away by detectives in an auto-car from Ostend and conveyed to a lunatic asylum near Brussels on the plea that her fancy for her young coachman proved a disordered mind. Despite a close watch which prevented even her legal adviser from approaching her, the young baroness has disappeared from the asylum, leaving no trace of her movements, and this just as proceedings were being entered upon by her family to get her debarré from disposing of her fortune and hand on the ground of insanity. The police naturally assume that the baroness managed somehow to communicate secretly with her young lover, and arranged, with his help, a flight to Paris or London. The public, while somewhat excited at this fresh chapter of a real life novel, rejoices at the flight of the baroness, who has travelled to England in the hands of a legal defence deputy of fended the feeling of common justice. The baroness, leaving all her clothes behind her at the asylum, must have fled barefooted and in her night garments; but probably wraps had been brought for her by her rescuer or rescuers. A suspicion that she has travelled to England is based on the fact that her young coachman lover has a brother living in London. The typewriter is being used for King George's private correspondence for the first time. Queen Mary, however, still has her letters to her friends sent out in the handwriting of her private secretary or writes them herself. The public considers that disrespect is shown to friends by those who act as though they did not care to give the time needed to communicate with them in their own hand. Queen Mary's handwriting is said to be both beautiful and legible.

HOPE TO SHARE IN MILLIONS GROWING THROUGH CENTURIES

Montreal Family After Part of The Famous Wertz Fortune in Holland

Montreal, Oct. 18—Woven around three hundred millions of dollars which have been accumulating in the vaults of the National Bank of Holland for two and one half centuries and in the distribution of which a Montreal family hope to participate there is a story of adventure and intrigue which in dramatic interest rivals the conception of Dumas or Balzac. Link by link, the descendants of Paul Wertz, soldier of fortune, East Indian adventurer, restaurateur of Gustavus Adolphus and field marshal of Holland, have riveted a chain which proves that the will produced after his death in 1676, by his house-keeper, Johanna van der Planken, was a forgery and that the millions of guilders he acquired through his Dutch East India are the lawful property of the descendants of his step-children, and step-son, Peter Heinrich and Anne. These early handed themselves together to secure justice and have battled against varying forces to secure their rights. The last attempt was made in 1874 when the Dutch courts decided that the will which purported to have everything Wertz had acquired during his career of adventure to Johanna van der Planken and the child whose percentage she endeavored to fasten on the dead general was a forgery. Lack of funds then resulted in the case being dropped but now three Wertz family associations are unitedly striving to reopen the case and wrest from the Dutch heirs the money which they have tacitly admitted they cannot legally hold, an admission contained in an offer to restore thirty-two million guilders, made sixty years ago. Negotiations carried on with the Dutch government during the last summer by W. J. Snyder, of Chicago and his wife, who is a direct descendant of a nephew of the field marshal Jacob Wertz, the first of the name to come to America who landed in Pennsylvania in 1770, give the highest hopes that the present claim will succeed for the Netherlands government offered to compromise the case again. Mr. Snyder, who is a son of the late George Snyder, of Wales, Ont., and whose mother resides with her daughter, Mrs. Frank Morgan, in this city, is a descendant through a maternal ancestor of his father, and Mrs. George Snyder, and her daughter are therefore entitled to a share of the money which he has offered. "I never thought we had a chance of seeing any of this money until a few weeks ago when Will and his wife came back from Europe," said his sister, Mrs. Morgan. However, they are supremely confident that justice is about to be done and this money at last restored. Some important discoveries were made during his trip to Amsterdam which will be communicated to the Wertz family association very soon. What these are I cannot say, but they have greatly strengthened the case, I am told.

STOLEN ART WORK RECOVERED

Milan, Oct. 18—Good luck has just befallen several Legation police, who discovered a picture of Raphael's work of art which was about to be smuggled out of Italy. Until recently there, hung in the gallery of the Misericordia of the sixteenth century. An American collector made his appearance a month ago, offering $8,000 for a few nights afterwards the picture was stolen. The police suspected a member of a conspiratorial of mendicants, who during his begging rounds, was often seen hobnobbing with criminals, and he was arrested. On the police instituting a search at the house of one of his companions, the lost canvas was discovered, already packed in an attic, and labelled in readiness to be dispatched across the Atlantic. Those in the house were arrested.

BELIEVE THEY HAVE FOUND A RAPHAEL

Rome, Oct. 18—Some art critics have for some time held the view that a small work preserved in the Gallery Tonia at Brescia might be a portion of an altar piece painted by Raphael at Citta di Castello, in Umbria, and portraying the coronation of Saint Nicholas of Tolentino. Recently Commendatore Ricci, the director of fine arts, Professor Cavagnoli, the restorer of the Cenacolo of Leonardo, and Commendatore Modigliani, director of the Brera Art Museum at Milan, examined the picture, which is attributed to Timoteo Viti, with a view of determining whether it is a Raphael. The picture represented an angel with a mass of blonde hair falling on the shoulders, robed in white and bearing a mantle embroidered with gold. On either side of the head there were evident traces of a second face, the colors, which appeared to be of the right side of the face, where one could perceive the faint outline of the face of another angel.

MARRIAGE LICENSES SIX MONTHS AHEAD

Plan of Philadelphia Educator To Put Stop to Hasty Marriages. Philadelphia, Oct. 18—Dr. Robert Ellis Thompson, president of the Boys' Central High School and one of the principal educators of the country, has started a country-wide crusade through correspondence to require that a marriage license should be issued six months before used. Dr. Thompson takes the stand that an immediate stop would be put to hasty marriages and equally sudden divorces. By this plan there would be no such thing as a twenty-four hour engagement. "In this country," he says, "young people meet with such freedom and are so completely in command of their future that overhaste in marriage is the great fault."

CITIES STEEPED IN VICE

Toronto, Oct. 18—The cities are steeped in immorality. Vancouver with its legalized segregated vice centres has a moral legacy that is demoralizing the youth of the city; the white slave centres are hell holes for poor, unwilling victims and for the ruin of manhood. Thus did Rev. Dr. W. T. Graham denounce the social state of things in the cities of the west in an address to the members of the Baptist Ministerial Association on the religious and social conditions of the west and the far west.

The Comic Relief

By HARRIS MERTON LYON

Copyright 1908, by Benj. B. Hampton.

SAW old Blumentaub again to-night. He was sitting alongside the little news stand in Forty-second Street, gazing out at the lights and the hurrying crowds with an expression in his eyes which seemed anything but consolatory to conversation. Nevertheless, I spoke to him, asking him how everything went. He paid no attention to me for a moment; then, twining his hat mechanically, he looked up for an instant, dropped his head, and said:

"Oh, just the same as it was."

I began to talk to him then, vaguely feeling that I ought to say, for the life of me, I could think of nothing to say. Even in the old days there had never been anything for us to talk about save the weather and the food on the table and—just now—business; always business with Blumentaub. Money, bargains, the price of things, securities—these were pretty much his elements of conversation. And it needed no eyes at all to see that he wanted none of these to-night. So I stood foolishly around in an aimless sort of way, my heavy books tucked under my arm, my glasses held between the thumb and forefinger of one hand, feeling an embarrassment that belonged not especially to me, but rather to the condition of things around us both. Have you ever felt that way—say, when a calamity has occurred to a friend, that somehow you must act as if you felt generally responsible and were sorry you had let it occur? My tongue refused to be nimble, though, with the old man dumbly sitting there, and I remember to have come away at length, murmuring, with a fresh attempt at bonhomie that died in my throat:

"Well, just so it's no worse, you know."

But it was worse, and I knew it. His face was flushed with a little too much wine or beer; perhaps it was beer. Blumentaub never used to drink too much in the old days; and he never used to frequent beer houses and free lunches—and this is why I suppose he drinks beer now—when we first met; let me see, that was over a year ago. It is a hard sight to watch a man lose his grip. I tell you, but it is the hardest of all to see him lose it after fifty-five. It all seems so pitiless and relentless. Of course, there is some philosophy by which you can figure it all out impartially; that old Blumentaub should come to this; there is always some nice, pat little way of accounting for all things. He looked ambitious, you might say. Who doesn't at fifty-five? He should have foreseen his possible decline, should have laid in a few, that didn't do something of the sort.

The truth about Blumentaub is that he never was prepared, really prepared, for anything (the world is more than full of such people) and he would have been content to go on until the end of his days in his fifteen-dollar-a-week clerkship under his younger brother's hard-headed rule. It is a simple story, lightly told. The younger brother had ambitious notions. In a week's time he made up his mind to call the wine shop, get all his money together, go West, and invest in real estate. To Blumentaub, fifteen years his senior, these rapid events were too bewildering. He did not comprehend them until the last day; and then only when his brother laid the fifteen dollars in his hand and remarked, in German:

"Well, this ends the old shop. You go down and see Stein. Maybe he'll put you to work."

Sometimes the best way to tell a long story is to make it short. Well, then—Stein hadn't put him to work.

And now all the goodness of the thing comes back to me; it has grown on me, quietly, like the pathos of an old time, since it turned on my heel and walked home with my library books, leaving him there by the news stand in Forty-second Street, twining his hat, looking at the lights, waiting alone, and half drunk.

I met Blumentaub at Galle's. It was around on Fortieth Street then, in among the tenements there. A rickety, greasy old basement doorway and a dark, stumbly hall let you in; in the back of the old Italian, in a lean-to shanty and a dismal yard, kept his long tables and his wine. Madison strove the rasorial called it, to dodge the extortion and his license; and "The Dirty Spoon" is what some chorus girl nicknamed it on a happy night.

Ruth and I had our little table a dour in those days, and I had my wine with a card tied round the bottle telling quarts consumed. There I first met Ruthly, the shy little dark-haired pretty daughter; and Philomene, the buxom Genesee who waited on our table. I wonder if Ruth remembers the first night, when a gallant, white-haired old Frenchman cautioned her to save her knife and fork because she wouldn't be given another pair that meal?

It all happened so long ago, before we all became serious; it happened in a time before careers, I am sure. And only yesterday old Philomene said:

"Ou est la mad'moiselle? No come?"

"No come no more, Philomene," I had to answer.

"Aw, she nice-a girl, yo' girl. She purty, p'fite. Yo' better git 'er back, m'isier; she nice-a girl."

"She's the sweetest girl that ever lived, Mena," I said into my wine. And her black eyes snapped and she answered solemnly:

"Dat's a right, m'isier."

But Ruth has gone, as old Blumentaub has gone; and gone, too, is the white-headed Frenchman who shuffled down to his morning omelet in dressing gown, slippers, and pipe. Only the old black cat stands stanchly by her post, delivering to earth cargo after cargo of little ebony kittens. Ebeul Rhodens! My outer ear now hears the rush of an L train; but my inner one—I think it vibrates to some one in the old days faintly singing:

Si vous venez avec moi—

Ou, la, la! Ou, la, la!

After Ruth left I moved over to the table of the grande famille. I was shy at first, conscious of my single forlornness and probably dwelling over former meals far more fondly than over those then upon my plate. Gradually, however, I became aware of a big, solid man upon my left who looked in an audience-compelling, prudent way—not that the stout itself was marvellous, for every one of the family talked at, once and all the time, with both hands in the air, eyes snapping fire, walrus moustaches abetted with the conversational combat of the Romance tongue, but because now and then this Hercules gave to a round guttural German oath—and I am German.

I noticed the speaker more minutely. His build was that of a wrestler, but he used his muscles with the strip-halted indecision of old age; his hair was gray, and bald over the crown of his head; he ate voluminously and talked with early Teutonic aggressiveness, manifestly ill placed among the delicate French and Italians who surrounded him. Later I got his ear. "The wine is excellent," I said in his own tongue.

He beamed. "Ah, you speak German!" he cried, with the old enthusiasm of these people when they find another of their race. Somehow, to a Teuton it seems the wonder of wonders that anyone shall deliberately come into a foreign place possessed of a knowledge of the German language. "That is my wine. I mean, I sell it to Galle. It comes from California—hum—a pretty good red wine, as wines go. Now, you see, there are wines and wines. . . ."

The ice was broken. Blumentaub and I became cronies.

It went on that way a long, long time, and I got to know many twists and turns to the old man's nature in the course of it all, but that is not what I am thinking of to-night since I left him. I am not thinking of a man, nor a character, nor a condition.

I am thinking of a remark.

You know how, out of the great swirl of things heard, some little thing—perhaps it is happy, perhaps sardonic, perhaps innocent, perhaps sad—sticks in your memory foolishly while more important things slip carelessly by. You remember what Bella said about a hat you wore four springs ago. I recall a friend's remark, made at college, that my voice grew nasal under stress of excitement. Somebody else said something trivial about cabs, or teeth, or geraniums.

None of these really mattered at all; yet here, after a year—nay, a half dozen years—we can recall them almost by rote, while we cannot recollect the date of our mother's birthday! It is a queer phenomenon, almost proving that memory is a reverse process from what we imagine it to be, that memory is really a process of forgetting by elimination. Somehow I do not, I cannot, eliminate this remark about Blumentaub. It smote me in the heart to-night—as I looked down upon his bowed head. . . .

"The comic relief!" How well I remember it! We were all sitting at the table that evening, joking as old neighbors will, dully enough, about each other, the food, the weather—anything. We had our own little circle, with Blumentaub as the bait of our remarks, and we always settled down to the meal before us with a sense of jovial familiarity. To anyone who has lived long in a family or a boarding house, explanation of this happy state is unnecessary.

Darby, the stage carpenter, generally opened the rapid fire by referring to Blumentaub as "the best two-handed actor in the place." At this the old German always fired up and, what with food and Hebraic, I say "insult" because in our crowd the heavy wits were not apt to make nice distinctions in their fun, and what the jokers lacked in point they made up in Rabablaian vigor. I always used to help the old man on with his coat—in summer, if it was hot, he luxuriously went at his food in his shirt sleeves—or with his overcoat in winter; and it was just after I had performed this office for him, and had watched his best shoulders tossed lightly out by one of the circle:

"My, what would we do without old Blumentaub to poke fun at? Huh! He certainly is the comic relief around this joint!"

And so, just now it came back to me with a subtle pang, as do certain things my mother said to me when I was a child. Why should it? Let me tell you.

I have guessed one secret of Blumentaub's life. He was lonely. He was lonely as only a Teuton can be who has lived to be fifty-five without getting married. You see, it is this way. Here is a race of men who cannot conceive an old age without caper clippers, red-faced children, a pipe, spectacles, and a good train keeping the place clean; to whom the boom of a family is as necessary as the boom of the earth; in whom heredity and environment, physical and emotional, have overemphasized the joys of a well-stocked home and a sedative old age. And here was Blumentaub unmarried.

"By Gosh, I ain't so old but vot I can vup the stuff's out o' you."

I remember how pathetically he used to cling to me in the evenings, loath to let even my silent companionship go. I recall the little naive ways in which he tried to keep my attention for an extra hour, so that I would forget my waiting studies and would refill my pipe with him. It must have been hard for him to beg me to stay; but it must have been compulsory.

"Why didn't you ever marry?" I asked him one night, when I'm afraid, my patience, and which is not Teutonic, had almost given out. And he told me.

It was all because of his mother. He had been engaged once; but the girl after waiting ten years had become tired. Why had he waited that long? Well, each of the other brothers had gone away from home and had married. So had the sisters.

They went one at a time, so that it was hardly noticed until they were gone. And anyway, he—Blumentaub, the bald-headed old man—up till two years ago, when his mother died, had always been her "baby." He was her oldest son; somehow that is the one that mothers love the most, you see. The "baby" had stayed on in the old house with the eighty-year-old woman.

"You don't know vot it is," he said to me emphasizing it solemnly with his pipe stem. "Is try to move your mudder ven she's been all de ting in von place. You cannot do it. She want go live mit de brudders or sisters. She wants always de old home. Do you blame her? I ask you, do you blame her? No! You vait till you git old yourself, my boy."

So Blumentaub stayed on in the old house, waiting for his mother to die, and as he waited he grew older himself, more set in his ways, less amenable to the little things of life which were waiting for him outside. Little items like her cooking engrossed his attention. "I couldn't pay dot supper of hers anywere in New York for—two dollars!" he was wont to say afterwards. She became so feeble, in time, that she couldn't get out. He used to sit and read to her in the evenings. She darned his clothes and kept buttons on where they belonged. When she was alive, a suit used to last him five years.

Do all these things seem little and futile and silly and unworthy of comment? Perhaps they are; only, I am afraid you have never been a lonely German aged fifty-five, with only a bedroom up three flights of stairs in a cheap boarding house.

"Well, at last—you know how it is; we all got to die—my mudder she died. De brudders an' sisters all come to de funeral, yes. Ont den dey clear out again. I wait and wait in de ol' house, but I don't know vot to do vit myself. It is empty an' lonesome, like you know it must be after she's gone. I had to get my meals outside after a while, because even de ol' girl vot he had went away. I come home at night an' de place was all still. Den von day all at vonce I realise vot's de matter, my boy. I am lonesome! Bei Gott, I am alone, all alone! Vy am I alone? I think of de ol' days an' de girl vot was vaiting for me, and den I know—it is too late, I am too late! Everything is played out for me; I am old. Everything has gone on an' left me. I didn't know it till now, but it is true. I almost cry. I almost cry. It is true about me. I am a back number, an' nobody cares; nobody cares about me, about vot happens to me—I am a back number." He held me roughly by the shoulder and his eyes glistened moistly.

"I make up my mind to leave de ol' place. Von of my brudders takes it, but I can't live in it. I was her baby in dot ol' place, you see. Den I do a foolish ting. I go to live at a hotel, an'—as I gamble in Vall Street. 'Vot do I know about Vall Street? Nothing. Only I gamble an' lose. Vy do I gamble? I don't know. I am an ol' fool. But I did it. An' after a while I don't get any more money."

"Den I go back to my brudder, my youngest brudder in de ol' house. An' he gives me a place to sleep. I pay him board. He gives me a chob in de wine shop, selling gin to niggers, for fifteen tollar a week. Do I like niggers? No. Do I like to sell stuff to men vot makes 'em drunk? No. If I had my money back I wouldn't do it—no, no, no, but I gotta work."

"At last my brudder—and his family moves away out into Brooklyn; an' I come here vit some people I know. Den dey raise de rent on me, an' I move here among dese ginlies. It is nice, heh? It is nice to live an' grow ol' an' have to do ting's you alone among people you don't know, ain't it?"

"You seem to be popular, though," I commented soothingly.

"Popular? Hah! Hah! Me popular, you say. How? By lettin' 'em poke fun at me, isn't it? Dey have deir chob on me an' laugh. Is dot popularity? Voss?"

In this manner, brokenly, he retold me his story—here, there, in patches. One night in the thick hot summer we took the ferryboat to Staten Island in order to get the breeze, and I recalled to him his early youth, when he had sailed up the bay, an immigrant from Bavaria.

One night, as a wedding went by, he told me again of the girl who had waited. But mostly, in the later days, he talked of money, of how successful his younger brother was, of how necessary money was to an old man in this world.

I wonder if a grim, sardonic Deity takes notice of these idle human things? I wonder if it is not with an actual pleasure that the screw is turned a little tighter upon those souls where the getting to the end of my story, my ill-written, hap-hazard sketch of a lonely old man on his way down the road of the world, and with all my books and my readings, I can only hide my face in my hands.

For here is the bitter thing that haunted me as I left Blumentaub by the news stand to-night: it was upon the very Saturday evening that his brother had closed the wine shop and had turned the old man adrift; the careless remark had been made behind Blumentaub's back:

"He certainly is the comic relief!"

As I feel it, that is the way the world spoils always—full of gulls, callously, never seeing through to the pitiful truth beneath.

The Intercolonial Trains

Moncton, Oct. 17.—It has been decided that the Ocean Limited express on the intercolonial railway will be kept on the route between Montreal and Halifax, as a daily train, and that there will be no general change on the line as it is usual in October. The increasing traffic has made the step necessary.

The Maritime express will also be continued, thus making a double through train service. The Maritime will leave Montreal daily, except Saturday, for points east of Campbellton, and daily for points between Campbellton and Montreal. So far no changes have been announced that affect local trains.

COURTENAY BAY WORK TIED UP A WHILE BY LABOR TROUBLE

Was Straightened Away Again After Some Hours — Superintendent Fills in at One of The Shovels

Operations at Courtenay Bay were suspended yesterday owing to the strike of some of the workmen. Different stories are told by the men and their employers, but the net result of the trouble seems to have been the stoppage of work for some time and the reduction of the staff by about ten carpenters and some other mechanical force.

The company announces that, owing to the fact that their buildings are about complete, and that there is less work for the carpenters, half of the men employed in this work were laid off. They also say that owing to a disagreement several of the men employed on the machinery left the work, but that after a stop of three or four hours, work was resumed and that everything is now running smoothly again.

The story told by the men is that the trouble first originated with a dispute regarding the time the carpenters should be on the job; that, in accordance with their custom, the men met at the tool house at seven o'clock to secure their tools and then start for the places where they were working, but were met by one of the foremen who informed them that they would have to make an earlier start and be ready for work with their tools when the seven o'clock whistle blew. They declined to change their custom and in the argument which follows the foreman carpenter, it is said, threw up his job and the men working with them followed him. They went to the office, they say, to get their time and there had another dispute with the management and explained that one reason why they would not return to work was because of language used by some of the bosses to them.

The men say that soon afterwards one of the officials in giving instructions to the men on one of the steam shovels crossed the fire of the latter and he climbed down and announced that he was through. As he was walking away the man in charge of the other shovel asked what the trouble was and was informed that it was merely personal. He insisted on taking sides with the foreman, however, and also pulled out. They were followed by some of the other men employed on the same shovels and the crowd crippled the force sufficiently to make it impossible to carry on the work and the operations stopped until others could be found to take their places.

Superintendent Puffer assumed charge, and taking off his coat got into the shovel himself taking charge of one of the shovels temporarily.

LETTER CARRIER SERVICE FOR FAIRVILLE PROPOSED

Numbering of Houses a First Requisite — Board of Trade to Take up Matter

There is a prospect of the residents of Fairville having a mail delivery service from house to house established in their part of the municipality and it is to forward this plan that the Lancaster board of trade has been called together tonight. At present the residents call at the post office for their mail but it is felt that Fairville is outgrowing this stage and that it is time for a delivery service. The new post office building is rapidly nearing completion and the residents believe that a more modern service would be more in keeping with the dignified appearance of the new edifice.

It is also argued that if free delivery service is justified in the rural districts a letter carrier service is much more necessary in a community the size of Fairville. As to whether the service would be from their own office or direct from the city would be worked out by the department.

A necessary matter at the outset is that the people number their houses.

MAKING AUTOS AT GOLDBROOK LIKELY BY FEBRUARY NEXT

Model Cars Complete in Few Weeks — Plans For Germain and Princess Street Lots

Model cars of the types which are to be manufactured next year by the Maritime Motor Co. Ltd., at Goldbrook will be completed within the next five or six weeks for test and demonstration purposes. The designers have been at work on models which will come the best features found in several of the principal cars. The Maritime car will be a distinctive type, however, although the best of the standardized equipment will be used in its construction. The work on the plant is progressing satisfactorily and there seems to be nothing to prevent the occupancy of the works by February 1 and turning out cars within three weeks after taking possession.

When asked regarding the rumor that the property on the corner of Princess and Germain streets was to be used as a site for an apartment house instead of the new garage Mr. Pugsley said that he knew nothing of it. G. E. Fairweather is at present in Boston consulting the Lockwood, Green & Co. regarding the completion of the plans for the garage and the plans alone will cost more than he would throw away if he had no intention of using them.

FACTORY ACT CASE

Fine Struck on Report of Inspector in Art Glass Works Matter

In the police court a report made by John Kenney, Jr., factory inspector, was taken up against Wm. C. Bauer, of the art glass works in City Road, and his employee, Walter Preston. The report against the latter was that he had not received a certificate entitling him to operate an engine against Mr. Bauer for employing him knowing such to be the case. J. D. P. Lewin appeared for the defendants.

The factory inspector said he had instructed the engineer that he must have a certificate or give up his position, and that he told the proprietor either his employee would have to resign or else be provided with a certificate.

Mr. Kenney said that he had been told by Mr. Bauer that he would run the plant in defiance of the law, but this the defendant denied today.

On other occasions, Mr. Kenney said, he visited the plant and still found Preston in the engine. Preston had appeared before the board but had not been granted the certificate.

Mr. Kenney gave evidence that he had sent his engineer to the examining board with a recommendation but did not know if the certificate was issued. He had advised for certified engineers but the applications were not from qualified men and if he had to operate with a licensed engineer he would probably have to shut down until one was secured.

Preston told of going to the provincial government rooms on October 8, 9, and 10, and finding no money ahead of him the first two occasions that he could not get in. On the third time he gained admittance and presented his recommendation of service but found it was not properly dated. He was not able to get back again before the board adjourned.

Wm. Marvin, a certified engineer, said that he had applied at the glass works for a position as he understood they wanted a licensed man, but was told that the job was not vacant.

His honor imposed a fine of $10 on the proprietor and $4 on the engineer, instructing them to see that the act be fully complied with.
