THE STORY OF A GREAT LOVE

Remarkable Confession of a Young Man's Sin and Repentance
FROM TIT-BITS

I know that the story I am about to tell will brand me a scoundrel in the eyes of all decent men and women. I tell it as part of a self-imposed penance for conduct which has filled me with a remorse and penitence that has come too late.

If I had the courage of my penitence I would put my name to this confession; but I am still a moral coward, and always shall be, I fear until my last day.

This cowardice has been the curse of my life and of the lives of others.
It broke the heart of one of the noblest of women. It killed her, and I bear—hidden, it is true, from the eyes of the world—the pitiless mark of a murderer.

Twenty years ago I was a bank clerk in a certain town. I was young and supposed to be clever. I had my share of good looks and certain qualities that made me popular. I found the world a pleasant place, and hoped to do well.

THE SHADOW FALLS.
I had not many months in B—when one day, at a tennis party, I met a girl over whom I was to cast a baleful and tragic shadow.

I can see her now as vividly as when I first set eyes on her—a sweet idyllic picture, in a simple frock, with a hat wreathed with daisies.
She was beautiful with the beauty of raven hair, large grey eyes, dimpled cheeks, and the complexion of a wild rose, and lips radiant with smiles. At sight of her I lost my heart entirely.

For her, indeed, as for me, as I learned later, it was a case of love at first sight.

She was, I discovered, the daughter of a doctor in a remote village, beloved by all who knew her good heart.

After the first meeting I knew no peace until I had seen her again and again, and when I at last summoned up courage to ask her to be my wife, I knew what her answer would be,
for I knew that she loved me as I loved her.

Then followed for both of us halcyon months. We dwelt in a fairyland of our own, such as only lovers know, and longed for the day that would make us one in life, as we were one in heart and soul.

A BREAKER OF HEARTS
That day was never to come, for the sergeant had come into our Eden.

Before I met Helen I had got entangled with a pretty girl in the town. It was a silly passing fancy, but it was fated to wreck two lives.

Well, the day of our wedding was fixed. All preparations had been made or it. Then the "bolt" fell from a cloudless sky.

Three days before that which was to have made me the happiest of men this girl came to see me. She told me tearfully, that there was the strongest of all reasons why I should marry her—and soon. She threatened that, if I did not, she would expose and ruin me.

I was horror-struck; the blow was so utterly unexpected. I was in despair. I racked my brains all that day and night (I had promised to give her my answer on the morrow) to discover some way of escape. I could find none. To marry Helen meant certain exposure and disgrace. I could not face such an alternative, coward that I was, and I promised to marry her quickly as possible.

I made my plans to take her away to Leeds and marry her by special license within a few days; and as I faced them, shame, remorse, despair, had me in their clutch, until I thought I should go mad.

I dared not tell Helen—I was too cowardly. I met her, once again, hiding my treachery under the mask of love. My last words to her were, "Only two days more, darling." I can see now the light in her eyes as she kissed my lying lips.

The next day I met in Leeds the girl whom I was to make my wife, and then I sent the following telegram to Helen: "Deeply sorry. Suddenly called away on most important business. Postpone wedding.
Letter follows." Then I wrote to her, making a full confession of the truth, and begging her to keep it secret.

(To be continued)

NO FURTHER NEED OF IT

"Smart boy wanted."
Such was the notice hanging outside a busy warehouse.

It had not been there long before a littie fellow, red-headed and freckled, calmly lifted it down and went inside briskly.

"Did you hang this outside, sir?" he asked the manager.

"Yes!" was the stern reply. "Why did you pull it down?"

The boy looked at him for a few moments. "Fity for the man's ignorance was expressed on his ace.

Then he spoke and his reply was short but to the point:
"Why?" he said. "Why, because I'm the boy."—Exchange.

HOW TO CATCH A BIRD.

Don't hunt him with a sling or gun,
For that would surely spoil the fun;
For when all life would leave his breast

You then can pick up all the rest—
A crumpled body, red and small,
A bit of plumage, that is all.
You haven't got his song or call!
Don't kill him!

I'll tell a secret that I heard—
The perfect way to catch a bird.
Just get a bird book, called a guide,
And with field-glasses at your side
Go out into the woods and see The birds perched up in some tall tree;

Stop, too, and hear his melody—
YOU'VE got him!

REBUKED.

Old Lady (to druggist)—"I want a box of canine pills."
Druggist—"What's the matter with the dog?"

Old Lady (indignantly)—"I want you to know, sir, that my husband is a gentleman."

The druggist put up some quinine pills in profound silence.

Mother—"And so my little man didn't cry, when he fell down? That was brave."

Little Man—"There was't anyone to hear!"

THE ETERNAL GOODNESS

While in the maddening maze of things,
And tossed by storm and flood,
To one fixed trust my spirit clings;
I know that God is good!

I know not what the future hath
Of marvel or surprise.
Assured alone that life and death,
His mercy underlies.

And if my heart and flesh are weak
To bear an untried pain,
The bruised reed He will not break,
But strengthen and sustain.

And so beside the Silent Sea
I wait the muffled oar;
No harm from Him can come to me
On ocean or on shore.

I know not where His islands lift
Their fringed palms in air;
I only know I cannot drift Beyond His love and care.

—Whittier.

"I do," answered the teller. That's what aroused my curiosity.—Dry

MORE ADVICE

One day a well-to-do-farmer in need of legal advice sought a struggling attorney with reference to a suit he desired to bring against a neighbour. The lawyer looked up the statutes and adviser his client what course to pursue. As the latter rose to leave the office, he asked,
"What's your fee?"

"Oh, say three dollars," carelessly responded the attorney.

Whereupon the client proffered a five-dollar bill. The lawyer seemed embarrassed. He carefully searched his pockets and the drawers of his desk without finding the necessary change. Finally he met the exigency by pocketing the bill and observing, as he reached for a digest:

"It would seem, sir, that I shall have to give you two dollars' worth more of advice."

RULES FOR Making Cod Liver Oil For the Guidance of Manufacturers

- 1st. The manager in charge of factory must see that the livers are fresh; that all brown or poor livers are thrown out; that there is no gall bladder attached to any livers.
 - 2nd. The good livers must then be washed in a tub of clean fresh water.
 - 3rd. The pan in which the livers are boiled must be perfectly clean inside, before any livers are placed in it.
 - 4th. Before you start to boil any livers, you must have sufficient steam.
 - 5th. Turn on the steam, and use as much as you need to have for the quantity of livers you have in your pan. Boil until the white scum floats off (which will take about thirty minutes.) Don't forget to stir the livers, and see that at those in the bottom and those around the sides are brought into direct contact with the steam all the time.
 - 6th. Turn the steam off, and allow all to settle, not exceeding five minutes, according to capacity of liver boiler.
 - 7th. Then you dip all the oil you can get, which is the finest white oil. Put this oil in a cooling tank made of galvanized iron, and let the oil remain there till next morning. Don't forget to put a straining cloth over the cooling tank before you put any oil in, so that it will catch any bits of blubber; allow to remain 12 or 14 hours, or longer if possible, then dip from cooling tank and strain through double calico bag, inside bag to be one inch smaller all around; then strain into a tin shute under the bags, the cask to be at the end of the shute with a funnel, to lead oil into casks, which funnel to be covered with oiled cloth.
 - 8th. When you have dipped the finest oil from the top of the liver boiler pan, take all the blubber from the pan while it is warm. The oil from this blubber is not fit for medicinal purposes.
 - 9th. Then clean four liver pan with warm water and washing powder. Have it bright and clean for the next boiling.
 - 10th. Every bag, cloth, tank, funnel and pan, must be washed only with warm water, soap and water. Soda must not be used.
- The best results for medical oil can only be obtained by the use of tin barrels. Wooden packages generally make the oil dark, and destroy its fine flavor. Keep all oil in barrels in a cool place, and covered from the sun.

REGULATIONS For Salting Scotch Pack Herring

- One barrel salt to five and a half barrels herring—Large Fulls.
One barrel salt to six barrels herring—Medium Fulls.
One barrel salt to six and a half barrels herring—Matt Fulls.
(This amount of salt is for dredging and laying on rows only. It does not take into account that put on the herring before gibbing.)
All salt falling off herring in rousing tubs is put on rows as you pack unless very dirty or scaly; in that case, you have to make good the same amount, or otherwise you could not have any fixed rule on salt.
- Matt Fulls..... 10½ inches long..... Milt or roe Medium Fulls.... 11½ inches long..... Milt or roe Large Fulls..... 12½ inches long and upwards. Milt or roe Medium Filling.... 11½ inches long and upward Large Filling.... 12½ inches long and upwards
- Filling Fish may be branded as Scotch Cure without the Crown Brand.
- No drowned, stale, or scaleless herring can be used as Scotch Pack, nor herring in half frozen state.
- The root cause of light salting is to come as near as possible to the pleasing of the palate of the consumer; and if we bear in mind that over three-fourths of all Scotch-Pack Herring are consumed as a tonic before the mid-day meal, just as they come out of the barrel, without any fire cooking, we can see the reason at a glance for the right salting. The herring is dressed by the head and the tail being cut off, the main bone taken out. It is then cut into squares of about one inch, and is served with vinegar and other condiments. This gives power to the stomach to digest the following meal and keeps the consumer in the best of health.
- People with bad stomachs please note that the art of cooking and eating right is just as essential as the art of curing; and based on the best medical directions, and with the chemical analysis of the constituent parts of herring as a food ever kept before the consumer, we need not be surprised that the people who eat most herring are the most healthy and efficient.

LUCY GRAHAM'S SECRET

The young man was a great favorite with his uncle, and by no means despised by his pretty, gipsy-faced, light-hearted, hoydenish cousin, Miss Alice Audley. It might have seemed to other men, that the partiality of a young lady who was sole heiress to a very fine estate, was rather well worth cultivating, but it did not so occur to Robert Audley. Alicia was a very nice girl, he said, a jolly girl, with no nonsense about her—a girl of a thousand; but this was the highest point to which enthusiasm could carry him. The idea of turning his cousin's girlish liking for him to some good account never entered his idle brain. I doubt if he even had any correct notion of the amount of his uncle's fortune, and I am certain that he never for one moment calculated upon the chances of any part of that fortune ultimately coming to himself. So that when, one fine spring morning, about three months before the time of which I am writing, the postman brought him the wedding cards of Sir Michael and Lady Audley, together with a very indignant letter from his cousin, setting forth how her father had just married a wax-dollish young person, no older than Alicia herself, with flaxen ringlets and a perpetual giggle, for I am sorry to say that Miss Audley's animus roused her thus to describe that pretty musical laugh which had been so much admired in the late Miss Lucy Graham—when, I say, these documents reached Robert Audley—they elicited neither vexation or astonishment in the lymphatic nature of that gentleman. He read Alicia's angry crossed and recrossed letter, without as much as removing the amber mouth-piece of his German pipe from his mustached lips. When he had finished the perusal of the epistle, which he read with his dark eyebrows elevated to the center of his forehead (his only manner of expressing surprise, by the way) he deliberately threw that and the wedding cards into the waste-paper basket, and putting down his pipe prepared himself for the exertion of thinking out the subject.

"I always said the old bluffer would marry," he muttered, after about half an hour's reverie. Alicia and my lady, her step-mother, will go at it hammer and tongs. I hope they won't quarrel in the hunting season, or say unpleasant things to each other at the dinner-table; rows always upset a man's digestion."

At about twelve o'clock on the morning following that night upon which the events recorded in my last chapter had taken place, the baronet's nephew strolled out of the Temple, Blackfriarsward, on his way to the city. He had in an evil hour obliged some necessitous friend by putting the ancient name of Audley across a bill of accommodation, which bill not having been provided for by the drawer, Robert was called upon to pay. For this purpose he sauntered up Ludgate Hill, with his blue necktie fluttering in the hot August air, and

The young man drank his soda-water in silence, and then, leaning his elbows on the table, covered his face with his hands. There was something in his manner which told Robert Audley that his disappointment, trifling as it may appear, was in reality a very bitter one. He seated himself opposite to his friend, but did not attempt to address him.

By and by George looked up, and mechanically taking a greasy Times newspaper of the day before from a heap of journals on the table, stared vacantly at the first page.

I cannot tell how long he sat blankly staring at one paragraph among the list of deaths, before his dazzled brain took on its full meaning; but after considerable pause he pushed the newspaper over to Robert Audley, and with a face that had changed from its dark bronze to a sickly chalky greyish white, and with an awful calmness in his manner, he pointed with his finger to a line which ran thus:

"On the 24th inst., at Ventnor, Isle of Wight, Helen Talboys, aged 22."

CHAPTER V.

Yes, there it was in black and white—"Helen Talboys, aged 22." When George told the governess on board the Argus that if he heard any evil tidings of his wife he should drop down dead, he spoke in perfect good faith; and yet, here were the worst tidings that could come to him and he sat rigid, white and helpless, staring stupidly at the shocked face of his friend.

Journal of Rev. Henry Gordon

SATURDAY, NOV. 9th.
Another day at the freight, carrying it away and stowing it inside the stores. The barrels of salt were the heaviest handling. The weather was now very frosty. Another death took place today, little Billy Martin. Also, late at night, news came in that John Hamel had died at Muddy Bay, about five miles further up the bay. One was only now getting seriously alarmed about the disease. We had rather imagined that it had been confined to Cartwright. The possibility of its having spread all over the bay and on to the outside coast was too serious to ponder over. Little homesteads of one family, separated from the nearest neighbour by ten, fifteen or twenty miles, could only share one fate—extermination for share want of help.

SUNDAY, NOV. 10th

Sundays and weekdays are both alike now. We have no service in the church. I have organized the few sound men into two parties. Mr. Clark, Mr. Doan, Mr. Fequet and myself have taken on the task of grave-digging, two working to the shift. It takes a whole day to dig, or rather hew out a grave in our cemetery. The other party, consisting of Mr. Parsons, Fred Groves the cooper, and Robert Pardy, are responsible for the making of the coffins. We hope that we shall not have to bury anyone without a coffin. To-day, we got a grave ready for little Billy Martin, and I buried him before night. Mr. Fequet and I still feel the effects of the sickness, and do our work rather slowly at present. Mr. Clark and Mr. Doan, two strapping men, perform wonders with pick and spade. The ground is frozen so hard, that sparks will even fly from the soil. A tour of the houses to-day reveals the unpleasant fact that several more of the people are growing worse. Mrs. Payne still lingers on. Her sister, Rebecca, was taken sick two days ago, and to-day began to take a turn for the worse. I have noticed that a sort of pneumonia seems to attend the sickness, and when the patient develops this it becomes only a matter of a few days before the end comes. I offered to share the night watch with Johnny Payne.

Obituary

There passed peacefully away on Sunday morning May 20th, after a brief illness, Malena, beloved wife of Benjamin North.

Deceased had been in fairly good health until quite recently and on Sunday the summons came for her to go to her eternal rest. The late Mrs. North was in her 73rd year and leaves to mourn her husband, two daughters, one of whom resides in Canada and Mrs. Mercer of this town. Also one son residing in Canada.

Her funeral took place from her late residence to the Methodist Church followed by her many relatives and friends.

Rev. S. Baggs took for his text, Revelations 7th chapter and part of the 13th and 14th verses. The remains were then conveyed to the churchyard where burial took place in the family plot. To the bereaved husband and family the sympathy of the community is extended, in which the "Guardian" joins.

PREFERS THE SIMPLE LIFE.

New York, May 30.—The splendors of the old world did not appeal to him, asserted Bishop H. T. Renouf of Newfoundland, who returned yesterday on the Majestic from a European tour that included a visit to the Vatican. He declared he was glad to return to the quiet simple God-fearing ways of his people along the Newfoundland coast.

STRAY POINTS

The more debts are contracted the more they expand.

Divorce suits are always pressed with the seamy side out.

Always purchase umbrellas in dry weather as they are sure to go up when it rains.

After you have climbed to the top don't forget the fellow who held the ladder.

The man who talks much about himself will always have a tired audience.

It frequently rains on the just because the unjust has carried off his umbrella.

Judicious diet and exercise will frequently improve a man's opinion of his neighbour.

The only way to find success quick without working for it, is to look it up in the dictionary.

Our observation is that a little boy's favorite disease is the one that keeps him out of school longest.

Whatever troubles Adam had, No man could make him sore. By saying, when he told a joke, "I've heard that thing before."

REFUSE TO SEE

MOTHER'S FACE.

On the tablets of my memory there is painted a face—sweet and kind.

I see it in my dreams at night and unannounced—in the stress of busy days, making duty a joy and placing wings beneath burdens.

I have seen this face, not once or twice, when the tempter beckoned, and lo! the good, safe way was made clear!

When dark clouds gathered and the path seemed like night, that face—rainbow crowned—has appeared, rifling the shadows and scattering the mists.

Often, when Anger whispered "Vengeance!" and Hate said, "Strike back!" then that face has appeared, smothering the hot fires of malice, and holding in leash the tongue that would revile again.

Many times, when walking among the weak and unlovely of earth, that face has caused me to reach down in pity, rather than turn away in scorn.

Always, when doubts come and anxieties, that face shines as a flaming sword between these dark things and my soul.

This face never comes alone. Associated with it are treasures, inexpressibly precious.

There is a smile as beautiful as a summer sunrise!

There is a voice whose music is like a harp, angel-touched!

There is a love that never fails!

There are hands made glorious by the scars of unselfish service!

There are feet always swift to go on errands of mercy!

There is a prayer that opens the gates of heaven!

There is a faith that removes greater things than mountains!

There is a hope that blazes the road, through the shadows, to the goal!

There is a patience which forgives and endures, where it can not conquer!

All these, and more, are woven, as a halo, around this face of my dreams.

And whose face is this, that has survived the yesterdays of life, lends its beauty to the day that now is, and promises to outlive all the days yet unborn?

It is mother's face—yours and mine!

Just everybody's mother!

WATCH A COMPASS

If you are lost in woods or field you can find your way out if you have a watch just as easily as if you carried a compass. By pointing the hour hand of your watch toward the sun, the south may be found exactly half way between the hour and the numeral 12 on the dial. For example: Suppose that it is 4 o'clock. Point the hand indicating 4 to the sun and 2 on the dial points south. If it is 8 o'clock, point the hand indicating 8 to the sun, and the numeral 10 on the watch points to the south.

Sifted tomato pulp may be used instead of cream in clam chowder.

MONDAY, NOV. 11th.

Our patients were very restless all night, and Rebecca was perceptibly going down. She had always been considered one of the strongest women in the place. It seems as though these were the people to have the sickness the worst. Invalids and children seem to be almost immune. This may have very serious consequences. I paid a complete round of visits, and sawed up wood and brought water for one crowd who were helpless. As Rebecca Bird was sinking so rapidly, I gave her the Sacrament in the evening. It was awfully sad to see such a splendid woman going so soon. Late into the night I was sawing and splitting wood, for my own house and for the teacher's house. Roly has gone to help out the Paynes, and I am alone in this great barn of a house. To return to an empty, cold house—but this is grumbling and I had better shut up.

TUESDAY, NOV. 12th.

Very cold and miserable weather, wind N.E., with snow. Ever since the sickness began, the weather has been abominable. Not a single boat has been in from the outlying places, and no one has been able to get from here to seek news or other settlements. What little bits of news have come by land. Early this morning, John Lethbridge died. He is the third out of the crowd in the tilt, and there will most certainly be several more.

THRIFT.

Maybe you'll be wanting my definition of the difference between thrift and stinginess. Thrift is keeping your money in your "pooch" biding the day when you'll need it. Stinginess is putting a padlock on your pocket—and your heart—to keep from helping the other chap when HE'S needing it.—Sir Harry Lauder.

UNEQUAL LOSSES

Frederick was sitting on the curb, crying, when Billy came along and asked him what was the matter.

"Oh, I feel so bad 'cos Major's dead—my nice old collic!" sobbed Frederick.

"Shucks!" said Billy. "My grandmother's been dead a week and you don't catch me crying."

Frederick gave his eyes and nose a swipe with his hand and, looking up at Billy, sobbed despairingly.

"Yes, but you didn't raise your grandmother from a pup.—Harper's Magazine.

Hard Work Means Success

There never was a goal worth getting but you must work to attain. You must suffer and bleed for it, cling to your creed for it. Fail and go at it again.

Success is no whim of the moment, no crown for the indolent brow. You must battle and try for it, offer to die for it. Lose it yet win it somehow.

The Pathway to glory is rugged, and many the heart-aches you'll know. He who seeks to be master must rise from disaster. Must take as he giveth the blow.

There's no royal highway to splendour, no short cut to fortune or fame. You must fearlessly fight for it, dare to be right for it. Failing, yet playing the game.

The test of man's merit is trouble, the proof of his work is distress. Much as you long for it, man must be strong for it. Work is the door to success.

HEALTH is the greatest blessing in the world

If you are HEALTHY you can work hard but not otherwise. HARD WORK means SUCCESS but you will NEVER be able to work very hard without HEALTH and STRENGTH. If you require HEALTH and STRENGTH use

NOTICE

To Owners and Masters of British Ships

The attention of Owners and Masters of British Ships is called to the 74th Section of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894."

75.—(1) A Ship belonging to a British Subject shall hoist the proper national colors—

- (a) on a signal made to her by one of His Majesty's ships, including any vessel under the command of an officer of His Majesty's navy or full pay, and
- (b) on entering or leaving any foreign port and
- (c) if of fifty tons gross tonnage or upwards, on entering or leaving any British Port.

(2) If default is made on board any ship in complying with this section the master of the ship shall for each offence be liable to a fine not exceeding one hundred pounds.

At time of war it is necessary for every British Ship to hoist the colours and heave to if signalled by a British Warship; if a vessel hoists no colours and runs away, it is liable to be fired upon.

Stall's Books

Rev. T. Albert Moore, D. D., General Secretary of the Dept. of Social Service and Evangelism of the Meth. Church of Canada, who visited Newfoundland in Sept., 1917, in connection with the Social Congress, says:

"Stall's Books on Avoided Subjects have been standard works for such a long time that it seems almost unnecessary to say a word in their behalf. I believe they have accomplished great good, and are written with care and delicacy, at the same time with sufficient frankness or the modest discussion of these delicate subjects. They are safe books for general reading, especially if from the various books there is proper selection for the youth or adult, man or woman, as the case may be."

HUMBER ACTIVITIES STIR UP BUSINESS

It is understood there are about six hundred men now engaged on the Humber works and every preparation is being made for starting, as soon as possible, the big development. A contingent of 200 men was arranged for by Major Butler in the last few days.

Various business firms and factories in this city have received large orders of supplies, material and provisions and the initial activities have already made favorable impressions on the general trade. It is to be hoped that no time will be lost in completing preparations for the engagement of considerable numbers of men in this great undertaking and that no hindrances will be encountered by the House of Assembly in the speedy finalization of the Government's Humber Policy.

In all parts of the country there are considerable numbers of people seeking work and, while the Humber works will not furnish employment to any indefinite number of men, we feel it will considerably relieve the situation, and thereby assist those who cannot possibly go to the fishery or engage at other industries.

At the same time it will be advisable for many of those seeking employment, not to depend entirely upon the Humber for immediate employment but to take advantage of anything that is procurable otherwise as it must be realized that very considerable numbers are seeking work.

The general tendency to choose as between the possibility of work on the Humber and the fishery, is not to be encouraged at this initial stage of the development, and those who are at present engaged in work at Grand Falls, Bell Island or elsewhere, should feel the necessity of keeping their work so that others more anxiously needing it, may be given a chance.

The need of employment and increased earnings at the present time, certainly justifies the Government's industrial policy and, now the people have endorsed that policy, no stone should be left unturned and no obstacles placed in the way to turn that policy into practical development in the interest of the people and of the general trade.

And, towards that purpose, lies the patriotic duty of everybody, irrespective of personal or political differences. - Advocate.

WHERE LAZINESS IS A VIRTUE

An old colored woman in the employ of a Virginian family, though not unconscious of her virtues, never overlooks an opportunity to disparage herself. Her most laudable trait is her unfeeling industry.

"Surely you must be tired," Aunt Sarah, said a young visitor. "How can you work so long without a rest?" "Land's sake, Honey," was the reply, "I reckon hit's because when I begins a piece of work I's too lazy to quit."

Miss Gertrude McLead who has been visiting friends in St. John's returned home by the noon train on Saturday.

SECRETS OF THE KITCHEN.

A lady who had just engaged a new cook, made a tour of inspection after she had kept her a week and found a policeman locked up in the pantry. "How did this man get here?" she asked severely. "I'm sure I don't know," was the cool reply; "he must have been left over by then last cook."

WISE AT LAST

The shy young man had been calling on the sweetest girl in the world for many months, but he was so bashful that his suit progressed slowly. The girl decided to give him a helping hand.

The next time he called she pointed to the rose in his coat and said: "I'll give you a kiss for that." A crimson flush spread over the young man's countenance, but the exchange was made. Then he reached for his hat, and started to leave the room.

"Where are you going," she asked, in surprise. "To the—er—florist for more roses he called back from the front door. "I shan't be long."

Bell Isle reported to the Marine and Fisheries Department yesterday that there was clear water on the northern side of the Straits with loose lice.

Busy Summer in St. John's

The dry dock premises, St. John's presents very busy scene, a scene which is to be the forerunner of the greatest activities witnessed at the railway shops for a long time.

The Red Cross Liner Silvia moved up from Harvey's Friday morning and berthed at the dock pier to discharge 350 packages, consisting of 150 car trucks, steel frame work and other fittings for the building of the 75 flat cars and box cars, 25 of the former and 50 of the latter. The trucks and other parts have been imported from the works of the American Car Foundry Co.

The work of building these cars will be done at the Reid Company's car shops, and all the material, except the trucks and steel framework will be local. Several carloads of lumber are at the other end of the line waiting to be brought in here to be trimmed and put in readiness for use.

The work of building all these cars will mean the employment of many extra hands, and the shops will be running full time during the whole of the summer. It is expected to have the cars in readiness to meet the increased rush of fall traffic.

There are also due here shortly a number of new boilers, fire boxes and other material, which will be used in thoroughly renovating several of the older engines of the older engines of the railway company, and this will mean increased employment for a large number of men in the locomotive shops also. From present indications it would seem that the present summer will be the busiest period at the railway works in St. John's for many years, and in consequence many of the mechanics who have been out of regular employment for so long will be able to obtain congenial and remunerative work.

This increase in the company's rolling stock is the direct result of the starting of the Humber operations. The railway during the next two years will be called upon to handle the transportation of practically all the material for the Humber construction both from this end and from Humbermouth, and a large increase in the railway equipment, which is now being attended to, will be necessary.

HOME'S REPORT.

The following report was received from the S.S. Home which arrived at Humbermouth yesterday morning:—"Made all ports to Port Saunders. No ice north of Cow Head, very little this side."
