U. S. CONGRESS AND SENATE WERE OPENED THIS MORNING

Crowds Attracted to the Capitol by the Opening of Washington "Smart Set" Were Present in Droves.

Washington, Dec. 7.—The ever interesting spectacle of convening of a congress today brought to the Capitol building the usual throngs bent on gaining admission to one house or the other where the opening exercises of the second session of the sixtieth congress were held.

For many days the demands for cards for seats in the respective galleries has been so great that when the doors were thrown open at 9 o'clock a crowd more than sufficient to take up the entire seating capacity of the two chambers had assembled.

There was very little change today in the condition of the very Reverend Father Chapman, V. G., who is critically ill with pneumonia.

The regular meeting of the common council is being held this afternoon in the court house.

Woman Who Walked at Night

By M. E. M. Davis

As Sinclair drew near Mrs. Lawson's house, he slackened his somewhat nervous pace, and halted with an air of decision. But Mrs. Lawson had caught sight of him from the porch where she sat, with a huge handkerchief on her knee, waiting for her boarders to come home for supper.

There was a shade of embarrassment on his handsome face. "Mrs. Lawson," said Sinclair, with visible effort, "I came by to see if you would take Katherine and myself to board."

"In the name of the blessed lamb!" ejaculated Mrs. Lawson, staring at him over the gate pickets, "what have you happened? What do you want to go anywhere and board for? Ain't the Catalpas?"

"It is a wrench to me to leave the old place," Sinclair interrupted, "and my father will be very lonely now that my mother is dead. But Katherine has set her heart on it, and if you will take us—"

"I haven't a sign of a room left, Allick," Mrs. Lawson broke in, "except the room on the roof," she added dubiously. "Well, what is the matter with the room on the roof?" demanded Sinclair whimsically.

He threw back his head as he spoke and screwed his eyes up at the bozzies structure placed on the roof of the cottage. "Nothing," returned Mrs. Lawson, "besides the fact that it is a ladder. Katherine would never consent to go there. All right, I'll take it like a soldier, Mrs. Lawson."

Sinclair slackened his pace again as he approached the house, and he looked into the quiet garden at the Catalpas. His heart beat violently. He lifted the latch with as little noise as possible. But, as he was about to enter, he heard a slight rustle from the porch where she was sitting, and he turned to see a woman in a white dress and a black hat moving up and down the room.

"My poor Katherine!" exclaimed her husband, who had been in the room, where she lay pallid and almost lifeless. She was very beautiful, the golden-haired girl whom Allick Sinclair had brought a bride to his father's house less than two years before. The mysterious malady which developed shortly after her marriage, and which had become more and more pronounced, had robbed her cheeks of their color and bloom. But it added an indescribable charm to her delicate face, and drew figure. An unearthly expression dawned into her large blue eyes—a great grief, as if her vision, like her sense of hearing, had become abnormally acute. Something almost akin to awe filled those around this exquisite young creature at sight of her strange and inexplicable sufferings. She had, apparently, no bodily ailment. But the slightest irregular sound thrilled her with nervous convulsions that attended frame shook with convulsions at an unexpected appearance; she paled at a whiff of unaccustomed perfume. She ate but little, and seemed to have lost the faculty of sleep. Lately a morbid distaste for the old Sinclair household had possessed her. She breathed with difficulty within its lofty walls; she was oppressed by the atmosphere of its shadowy garden.

The same night saw them installed in Mrs. Lawson's room on the roof. The room was small. A four-posted mahogany bedstead, with bed curtains of blue and white, occupied the last quarter of the floor space. Sinclair, seated on the side of the bed, smiled as he compared this cramped room with his wife's ample dressing room at the Catalpas. But he felt an unwelcome lightness of spirit. He could see the reflection of Katherine's face in the mirror opposite. She stood with her back to him, brushing out her long hair. There was a look of content on her white brow; he even fancied a touch of color in her lips; her golden hair seemed to have regained somewhat of its lustre. "What was right," he thought; "the change had already helped her."

He watched with delight the rhythmic motion of her slender arms. Meanwhile he chatted gaily of his boyhood days, and the recollections aroused by Mrs. Lawson's motherly gossip. Katherine listened, turning from time to time with a nod or smile. "Once, I remember, he went on," Mrs. Lawson came to the Catalpas with a—"

He stopped abruptly, staring confusedly into space. He passed his hand across his forehead and continued his story. But the words were uttered mechanically. Was there—he was asking himself—was there something moving between Katherine and himself? Something faint and shadowy?—cloudlike mist? Yes! No. He shut his eyelids tightly and opened them again.

ers and held him at arm's length for a moment without speaking. Her eyes were brimming with unshed tears, and she looked about her red lips. "Allick," she said, "I know why you wish to go, but you are afraid of me. Did you think I had not seen her?"

Sinclair and his wife returned to the Catalpas. It was Katherine who insisted, with a sort of gay pretentiousness, upon this. But even as they passed under the arched gateway the mysterious gloom fell back upon her; Sinclair, now almost as morbid as herself, could have sworn that he saw its descent in visible form. Her hair on the instant became as white as snow, and her cheeks fell hollow, the red on her lips changed to a gray pallor.

A month passed, hardly a month later, looking down on his wife's face, he saw a more than a shadow of death. A mocking bird whistled in a catalpa tree by an open window, and he saw a woman enter and lifted instinctively a warning hand, and dropped it, remembering.

"What did it all mean?" he questioned, stooping to the face on the wall. The dead lips smiled, but withheld the response.

Yes! He could see it plainly now, the grayed figure of a woman with head drooping on her breast and arms hanging at her side. He—she was tall and slender, a veil drawn over her head concealed the upper part of her face, leaving visible only a sharp chin and pale, compressed lips. She paced slowly back and forth, from the window opening upon the roof to the washstand and passing to the window, pausing slightly at each turn, and passing through the lamp-stand as if it were not there. His heart froze in his breast. He looked at his wife, now finding the heavy coil of hair about her head.

"My God!" he groaned, inwardly, "now it! The shock will kill her! She will die! She will drop dead before my eyes!" Even while he strove to utter the word of warning which his paralyzed tongue refused to frame, she came across the room, touched her warm lips to his forehead, and passed on to the washstand. She stood, looking her slim hands; the woman's thing—Sinclair knew not how to turn at the window, crossed the room, evening space, and passed for a second time above Katherine's head and lay like a white vapor on her golden hair.

"Katherine!" the words burst involuntarily from his lips. He sprang forward with his outstretched arms. "Did you speak?" he asked his wife, looking over his shoulder. "Yes—that is—," he stammered, a cold sweat beading his forehead. The visitor had resumed her ghostly smile. "Dear Allick," said Katherine, earnestly, "I know you must be tired. I will be ready for bed in one moment."

"She sees nothing! She hears nothing!" Oh, that she might speak! turning his head he saw her in the white-robed figure kneeling in prayer by the bedside of the window, a shadow moving up and down the room.

Katherine nestled like a tired child among the pillows and fell instantly asleep. Her husband lured over her in an agony of amazement and incredulity. Could it really be that she was sleeping? Was she not rather dead? Her regular breathing, the smile on her slightly parted lips, the soft abandonment of her limbs reassured him. Yes, he thought, she is sleeping. He had slept again. "Thank God!" he breathed again, drawing the lace netting down to his eyes. Then it came nearer, steadily nearer. He saw behind the veil a pair of dark, and eyes. A chill sensation quivered along his spine. He struck out savagely—at the netting. He whirled about; it had passed through his opposing body and was already near the window. "I am certainly going mad," he muttered, staggering back with upthrown arms.

The short summer night passed with jagged monotony. Suddenly the watcher felt his tense nerves relax. It was gone. A fresh breath of coming dawn stole in through the lattice window. He sank upon the bed with a long-drawn breath of relief. "Thank God!" he thought. He was awakened by hearing Mrs. Lawson moving about in the hall below. He arose softly and descended the stair. "Mrs. Lawson," he demanded abruptly, laying his hand on her shoulder, "is there anything—has anything ever been said about the room on the roof?"

"Don't say a word, Allick," she interrupted in an awe-struck whisper. "I can see it in your face. She hasn't walked before, not that I know of, since my mother saw her, and that was before you were born. I've never seen her myself. I never dreamed that she was walking yet. Lord, what have I done? I didn't want to put you there. Poor Katherine—"

"Don't worry, Mrs. Lawson," he said, kindly. "Katherine has seen nothing as yet, but I have." He smiled grimly, yet with a certain sense of relief. "At least," he thought, "it is not quite madness. What does it mean," he asked aloud. "Who was it—?"

"They say," returned Mrs. Lawson, still speaking in a whisper, "that old Squire Lawson, my husband's grandfather, had that room built as a sort of jail for his young wife, who went out of her mind, poor thing, and no wonder, for the squire was a terrible old man! He took her baby from her and shut her up in that room and kept her there by herself until she pined away and died. My husband climbed up on the roof once when he was a boy and saw her through the window walking up and down. She had a veil on her head. That was before she died. After she died she came back and kept on walking just the same. All the lawyers went to see her. I never saw her myself, but my mother did once. That was before you were born." Mrs. Lawson was sobbing and wringing her hands. "You must take Katherine Sinclair away before she sees her. It would kill her! But don't say anything about it outside. Allick, my boarders would all leave me. I would be ruined."

Sinclair soothed the excited old woman. Katherine, in her white dressing gown, met him on the landing. "I missed you when I awoke, Allick, dear," she said. "Where were you?" "Katherine," he began with a studied carelessness, "I find this room very small, don't you? And Mrs. Lawson is well meaning, but she is a treacherous, good soul! I think I will look up more comfortable quarters during the day. Can you be ready to leave here this afternoon?" She placed her hands upon his shoulder.

Fashion Hint for Times Readers

Only the woman whose dress allows of a generous can afford the expensive luxury of willow plumes. These sumptuous plumes are made doubly long by applying the ends of an ostrich feather to another, each being separately and being fastened by hand. French willow plumes are often only pasted, and when the hats reach this country American fingers patiently knock each of the little feather tendrils—necessity a most expensive operation. This gorgeous hat is of gray tulle and silk, the two huge willow plumes in shaded gray being held under a big, dull silver buckle.

HOW SWITZERLAND HANDLES THE PROBLEM OF UNEMPLOYED

(Toronto wires) Toronto faces another winter with many unemployed on its hands, and the city in which Swiss citizens deal with the problem. The Swiss, who are frugal and practical people, have grappled with unemployment as a subject of vital importance not only to the unemployed themselves, but to the whole community. They recognize that an unemployed working man, if left to himself, is prone to become unemployable; it is likewise realized that members who could be kept employable to become unemployable is a sheer waste of life. This is for no other reason than that the unemployed man is a burden on the other members must support him and his children, if he has any.

Throughout Switzerland, says Miss Edith Sellers in The Nineteenth Century, there exists a strong conviction that any man who is out of work must be helped to find work—not so much for his own sake as in the interests of the state. The motive is economic rather than philanthropic. There is an equally strong feeling that, when the work is found, the man must be made to do it. While it is true that the Swiss are not averse to stand by the genuine work-seeker and help him, it is held to be their duty also to prevent the man from becoming a burden on the state. It is held to be their duty also to prevent the man from becoming a burden on the state. It is held to be their duty also to prevent the man from becoming a burden on the state.

The tramp or "bum" is eliminated in Switzerland. There is no resorting to workhouses as to hotels. There is no wandering about the streets extorting alms, while pretending to look for work. Begging and vagrancy are crimes and the police receive a special fee for every vagrant arrested. If a man is out of work he must try to find work. For if he does not, the authorities will find it for him, and he will be put to work. If he does not, the authorities will find it for him, and he will be put to work. If he does not, the authorities will find it for him, and he will be put to work.

DIVORCE IN THE UNITED STATES

(Mail and Empire) Divorce and marriage statistics of the United States, covering a period of twenty years, between 1887 and 1906, have been embodied in a report issued from Washington. They indicate a fine field for missionary effort, from Maine to California, and from Michigan to Louisiana. Divorce is increasing in the United States to such an extent that out of 1,000 people married each year eight become divorced in the same time. As for the chances of the average married couple separating some time or other, the odds are only twelve to one against them. This ratio places the United States in a position of unenviable leadership among the nations of the world, not even France being able to challenge a divorce rate of one in twelve.

NEARLY A MILLION DIVORCES. In the twenty years covered by the report, 1,232,044 marriages took place in the United States. The number annually increased, rising from 483,000 in 1887 to 853,250 in 1906. The total number of divorces in the same period was 945,225. For the twenty years previous to 1886 the total number was 238,716, or hardly more than one-third the number in the second period. Taking the whole forty years as a basis of comparison, divorces occurred at the rate of 10,000 a year in 1887, and at the rate of 80,000 a year in 1906. Of course, population enormously increased in this period, and the figures appear inflated out of all proportion to the number of married people. From 1870 to 1880 the increase of population was 30 per cent. In the next decade, population increased 29 per cent, and divorce 70 per cent. From 1880 to 1890 the population increased 21 per cent, and divorce increased 66 per cent; while in the last six years for which statistics are available, the rate of increase in the one was ten and a half per cent, and in the other 23.3 per cent.

DIVORCE TWICE AS COMMON. The divorce rate for 100,000 population increased from 29 in 1870 to 82 in 1906. More alarming do the figures appear when restricted, as they should be, to married people, instead of including the whole population. Thus, in 1870, the rate per 100,000 married people was 81, and in 1906 it was 200. That is to say, divorce is more than twice as common now as it was thirty years ago. The average divorce rate fluctuates widely in the different states, but no doubt the ease or difficulty in securing a separation explains this phenomenon, rather than any particular morality of the people. Divorce appears to be increasing everywhere. In only two States were there fewer divorces in 1906 than in 1880. One of them is Connecticut, and the other is—Utah. But in South Carolina, apparently, a man and woman are joined until death parts them; for all the laws permitting divorce in that State were repealed in 1878.

HARD AND EASY STATES. The states where marital ties are worn most loosely are Washington, Montana, Colorado, Indiana, Kansas, Oregon and Texas. In the order named, the divorce law in Washington binds 184 per 100,000 of population, and in Texas 121. Not counting South Carolina, the strictest laws are to be found in Delaware, New York, New Jersey, North Carolina, Georgia and Pennsylvania. Delaware's rate is only 16 per hundred thousand, and in Pennsylvania the rate is 25. But though North Carolina properly belongs to the honor roll of the States with a rate of 24 per hundred thousand, the rate of increase in twenty years is far greater than in any other state but Louisiana and New Mexico, being 400 per cent. In twenty years, the rate of generally divorces are harder to get in the East than in the West.

CAUSES OF TROUBLE. Two-thirds of the total number of divorces were granted on the plea of the wife, and by far the most common single cause was that of desertion. Nearly four out of ten divorces are ascribed to this cause, whose definition differs very widely. It is the loose interpretation of the word that makes divorce comparatively easy in many states, and permits a woman by simply becoming domiciled in a Western State to get rid of her husband, who remains in the East. As it happens, however, it is the husband who more commonly swears that his wife has deserted him. Nearly thirty per cent of divorces to men are for infidelity on the part of their wives, while almost as great a percentage is that alleged cruelty on the part of the husband. Infidelity to husbands, and cruelty alleged by husbands, account for ten per cent each. Drunkenness is the cause of five per cent of the divorces granted to wives, and one per cent of those granted to husbands.

H. B. Pickings, of the Mines Office, Halifax, has just returned from an inspection trip to several of the eastern mineral deposits, and has as a souvenir a particularly attractive specimen of micaceous showing gold freely, and obtained from the workings of the Great Bras d'Or Gold Mine Co. at Wagsmatook, C. B. It has long been a contention that one of the most important sources of gold in Nova Scotia will be found in similar deposits, and there are few districts in the province in which there are not one or more important deposits of this mineral, and they have invariably been found to carry high values in gold.

Of course, the matter of separating and saving the gold is not as simple or direct as free milling quartz, but as an offset to this there are the higher values and more even distribution of the precious material. The gold being down to the old machine workings. The pumps will probably be stopped this week. An average of two million gallons per day is being pumped from the mine continually.

Dr. Simon Flexner, Head of Rockefeller Institute, Tells New York Physicians of a New Preventative for Consumption

(N. Y. American Dec. 5)

Making the statement that three-fourths of mankind is subject some time or other to the taint of tuberculosis, Dr. Simon Flexner last night affirmed that a preventative has been discovered which will greatly lessen the dangers of the "White Plague."

Dr. Flexner, who is the famous scientist directing the Rockefeller institute, made this announcement at a meeting in the Museum of Natural History in connection with the International Tuberculosis Exhibition, and in the presence of various members of the medical profession of the United States.

He told of the many experiments which had been conducted at the institute on various animals, and which, he declared, had in many instances rendered its subjects immune.

"The antitoxin is called tuberculin and Dr. Flexner's tests with it have been told about in the American. It acts on the system as a sort of antitoxin.

"Fully 75 per cent. of human beings," said Dr. Flexner, "are at some time in their lives subject to tuberculosis lesions of the lungs, of greater or less extent. Most times they serve only to prevent more serious infection, and a high percentage of them heal themselves, and what is more, fortify the system against further attack.

"Experiments upon animals have shown that there is a partial infection of tuberculosis, which can be overcome by combative processes of the body, the system is made immune, and the infection may be increased to a remarkable degree before the animal fails to fight it further.

Dr. Edward L. Trudeau, luncheon president of the Tuberculosis Congress and the pioneer of the outdoor treatment of consumption, said that tuberculin was still an experimental stage. The public should bear in mind, he added, that the chief means of fighting tuberculosis is by the use of fresh air, and that the most important means of combating the disease was for parents to watch for any sign of it in their children, and to plan their mode of living and future work accordingly. The chief success in curing the disease was attained by early diagnosis and prompt precaution.

Among those on the platform with the speakers were Health Commissioner Livingston, Abraham Jacoby, Henry Phlips, Dr. F. P. Kinnicut, Dr. S. A. Knopf, Dr. Carl Beck, Dr. T. M. Pruden, and Dr. L. D. Range.

SUFFRAGETTES MAKE LIVELY SCENE AT A LONDON MEETING

Chained to Their Seats They Howl and Jeer at Lloyd George Until He is Unable to Speak—Police Finally Eject the Disturbers.

London, Dec. 5.—The gulf between the suffragettes and the suffragists, the latter being the term generally used to describe the militant section of the female agitators, who believe in street riots and attacks on cabinet ministers as the quickest means of attaining the suffrage for their sex, was further widened this afternoon by reason of a fierce demonstration by the suffragettes at Albert Hall against David Lloyd George, chancellor of the exchequer.

The chancellor was addressing a suffrage meeting under the auspices of the Women's Liberal Association. He had hardly got beyond announcing that he was there to make known the government's intentions regarding woman suffrage when a great uproar broke out. Strident voices from all parts of the hall shrieked: "We want deeds, not words." The stewards of the hall, and there were 300 on hand to deal with the anticipated disturbance, at once moved down the aisles on the women who interrupted the speaker, with the idea of ejecting them. They found them chained in their seats. There was then a confused struggle between the men and the women, but finally the chains were cut and the suffragettes were expelled. But the numbers of the disorderly seemed to increase.

Some of the women were armed with whips and they repelled vigorously every attempt to eject them. There were fierce tussles every few minutes in different parts of the hall and every time Mr. Lloyd George made an attempt to speak his voice was drowned in mingled groans and cheers.

Finally the chancellor, who for a quarter of an hour had been trying to get in a word, sat down, and the organizer tried to soothe the hysterical sisterhood by playing "What Can the Matter Be?" but it was of no use, and pandemonium reigned. Appeared in Jail Garb.

The uproar was at its height when a dozen suffragettes, who were recently released from prison, divested themselves of their outer wraps and appeared in their jail garb. These gowns were liberally stamped with broad arrows. This exhibition acted on the sisterhood like a red rag to a bull. Megaphones and bells were brought into use and the noise became deafening. The stewards at length lost their tempers and as they continued their work of throwing out the demonstrators the clothes of many of the women were torn off their backs.

At the end of half an hour or more the opposition wore itself out and Mr. Lloyd-George was able to continue his speech with only occasional interruption. He assured his audience, which totaled fully 8,000 persons, that there was a majority in the cabinet and in the Liberal party in favor of woman suffrage and that a suffrage clause would be included in the government's franchise bill which, however, could not be introduced until the eve of dissolution of parliament.

The chancellor added that the time of dissolution had not yet arrived, though the end of this parliament was not so distant as some people thought. The Liberals, however, still had several accounts to settle and they would demonstrate to the house of lords that the house of commons was not so impotent as was imagined.

SIX GOOD REASONS. But, said the good old lady, why don't you go to work? Why, ma'am, began the disreputable old man, you've got a wife and five children to support.

"But how can you support them if you don't go to work?" "I was sayin', lady, I got a wife and five children to support me."—The Catholic Standard and Times.

"PUSS IN BOOTS" "BUTCHER'S DREAM" Magnificent colored Fairy Tale by Pathe Freres. MISS ANNIE EDWARDS, in New Song "Grandma" MISS DEWITT GARNES, in Late Hit "Jungle Town."

It is understood that before long some steps will probably be taken to put a stop to evidence of disagreement between the police magistrate and the chief of police.

An interesting debate took place on Saturday night among the students of the law school on the subject: Resolved, That Oriental Exclusion is Preferable to the Existing Law.

"If examinations were made of everyone, people would be surprised at the number of persons talking about suffering from heart disease."

"I should not like to say that heart disease is as common as this would imply," said the expert, "but I am sure that the number of persons who die of it is very large."

"But undoubtedly heart disease, not disease, is more prevalent nowadays. I should think that the stress of living, the wear and rush of modern business life, have a lot to do with heart trouble."

There is no doubt but that this is correct, and we would strongly advise any one suffering in any way from heart trouble to take a course of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

The deceased was 35 years of age and leaves a wife and three children.

ADDRESS IN THE EVERY DAY CLUB
Rev. J. J. McCaskill Delivered an Excellent Address on Socialism Last Night.

Socialism was the subject of a clear cut and eloquent address by Rev. J. J. McCaskill at the Every Day Club last evening. He defined the Socialism of Carl Marx as purely materialistic, making food, clothing and housing the three things at the base of all human endeavor. The great object of human endeavor, the Marxian Socialist, was not interested in present day problems, but awaited the time when individualism would be replaced by collectivism, thus overturning the whole social system.

The weakness of this system, in Mr. McCaskill's view, was that it took no account of the higher ideals, for which men had gladly suffered, and were willing to suffer cold, hunger and even death. These ideals were taking a greater hold upon the world than ever. They were revolutionizing the thinking of the churches, and gripping the hearts of the people.

His greatest exponent was Jesus, and never did the world realize as now the true significance of His life and death. Even Socialism, he asserted, and there was a branch of Socialism which had a true spiritual message.

Mankind had been and would be swayed by ideals, by dreams and visions. The highest ideal was that which made love dominate the human heart and prompted men to labor for the uplifting of others to a higher manhood. When they had closed the saloons they had not completed the work. The road led ever up a hill, and there was work to be done from the dawn of day to its close. There was hope for every man so long as he kept his ideals pure, and realized the spiritual meaning of human life.

The musical programme included solos by Mrs. Worden and Mr. Wasson, whistling solo by Walter Nixon, a duet by Nita Brown and Lulu Colwell, and a trio by Mrs. Cocher and Messrs. Colwell and Wasson. Miss Worden and Mrs. Colwell played the accompaniments. The hall was crowded.

Rev. C. W. Townsend will be the speaker next Sunday evening.

THE PRODIGAL SON
"The Prodigal Son," one of Sir Arthur Sullivan's most popular works, which is to be given in St. David's church this evening at 8 o'clock, promises to be a rare musical treat. This oratorio commences the week of the celebration of the diamond jubilee, and lovers of good music should not fail to attend. The soloists are Mrs. F. C. MacNeill, soprano; Miss Blenda Thompson, contralto; Mr. John Kelly, tenor, and Mr. S. J. McGowan, bass. Miss Edith Cochrane will preside at the organ and Mrs. J. M. Barnes at the piano. There will also be an orchestra under the leadership of Prof. Bowden.

All taking part in the oratorio are requested to meet in the school room at 7.30 p. m. The ladies will not wear their hats during the performance.

STIRRING WORDS BY BRIGADIER ROBERTS
Salvation Army Officer Delivered Addresses in West Side Hall on Saturday and Sunday.

The following is an outline of the addresses delivered by Brigadier Roberts at Carleton Saturday and yesterday. The Brigadier during a month's revival meetings in this city.

SATURDAY EVENING
Ps. 81:11—
"The Lord God is a Sun and Shield. The Lord will give you grace and glory. No good thing will He withhold from them that walk uprightly."

Two figures are used to show what God is—a sun and shield. Two facts stated to show what God gives—"grace and glory," and a startling declaration made concerning those who make a religious profession and live accordingly—"No good thing will He withhold from them that walk uprightly."

The two figures: "The Lord God is a sun and shield." First a sun. Think of our natural sun in the heavens is to all the inhabitants of this earth—the source of light, heat, life, and every blessing we enjoy. We are informed by scientists that the sun produces every minute as much light and heat as could be obtained from eleven billion tons of coal. But whether we attribute to the sun, our God is all that and much more.

As a sun He is the source: (1) of spiritual illumination to the mind II. Cor. IV, 6; (2) of spiritual and eternal life to the soul and (3) of all the comforts and blessings which go to make up the Christian experience from day to day. Without God we could pray effectually, rejoice or be glad but when possessed by Him, "New songs do thus our lips employ, and dances our glad hearts for joy." There are times when the sun is so powerful that we are glad to seek shelter from his rays and the Lord God is this shelter for He is a shield as well as a sun. As a sun He produces spiritual life in the soul, but, as a shield, He protects and preserves the life He has produced. "No weapon that is found against" such "shall prosper" for "If God be for us who can be against us. To Abraham God said: "I am thy shield."

SUNDAY MORNING
I. The two facts: "The Lord will give you grace and glory." It is His nature to give. On Calvary He gave His Son and "He that spared not His own Son but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things," and among the "all things" are "grace and glory." First He will give grace.

By "grace" is meant something opposed to debt and cannot be obtained by works. Rom. IV, 4. It is the unmerited favor of God bestowed freely on those who repent and turn from their sins to their Saviour—they are "justified freely by God's grace."

(1) To the penitent He gives the grace of pardon. Rom. V, 12.
(2) To the backslider He gives the grace of restoration. Gal. VI, 1.
(3) To the Christian He gives the grace of purity.

"They which receive abundance of grace shall reign in life by Jesus Christ."
2. Thus He gives glory. The word "glory" means—"greatness," "grandeur," "magnificence," "holiness in all its glory." And all this the Lord will give—"grace and glory." Grace on earth and glory in heaven, but with a goodly share of glory here while travelling to the fulness of the glory hereafter.

"The men of grace have found glory before below." The "glory" of a gracious and a useful life.

SUNDAY EVENING.
III—The startling declaration: "No good thing will He withhold from them that walk uprightly."
"He," of course, must be the Judge of the "good things," and not those who "walk uprightly." "He" is their Father, and they are His children, and it is the Father who has to be the Judge as to what is right and "good" for His children.

To "walk uprightly" is to walk as "Enoch did, of whom it is said he "walked with God."

This implies conversion, reformation. Men by nature are "dead in sin," and therefore cannot move, much less "walk" born again." We once read on Duncan Matheson's tombstone in Perth, Scotland, "born in 1829, born again in 1840, and died in 1860."

If you have not experienced this new birth you cannot "walk uprightly," and neither can you tell what calamities may be awaiting you. "All things work together for good to them that love God," but all things work together for ill to those who persist in grieving God.

We have not originated the doctrine of the new birth. Our Lord said to Nicodemus and through him to the whole race, "Ye must be born again."

Those who yield themselves to God become possessed of God's spirit and He effects this wondrous change within and imparts power to "walk uprightly."

The lives of such regenerated persons become, 1st, useful; 2nd, Christlike, and 3rd, consistent. The "walk" circumspcctly or carefully, "not as fools, but as wise," God is their Friend, for He is "a Buckler to them that walk uprightly," and "no good thing will He withhold from them," either here or hereafter, world without end.

"I feel tonight," said one of the converts at the close of the meeting, "that I have been born again."

WINTER PORT NOTES
Allan line steamship Grampian, Captain Gamble, arrived yesterday from Liverpool, via Halifax, and docked about noon. When the steamer left the other side she had on board 197 passengers; all but 32 landed at Halifax. The trip across the Atlantic was uneventful, except that the ship met with head winds. A Grampian was here last year. She is the third Allan liner to arrive this season. The steamer is docked at No. 1 berth, West End. A large crowd of people visited the West End yesterday.

C. P. R. steamer Montfort, Captain Francis, sailed Sunday for London. She took away 700 cattle and 15 horses. Among her cargo is about 40,000 bushels of wheat.

C. P. R. steamer Lake Erie, Captain Carey, with over 600 passengers, sailed Saturday night for Liverpool. This steamer also took a large amount of grain.

Steamship Manchester, Importer, Capt. Haworth, left port Sunday for Manchester. She took 655 head cattle for Manchester, also a large amount of grain.

John Connors, of Boston, came in on today's train to attend the funeral of Mrs. Carleton, wife of Judge Carleton.

W. C. Cross was passenger to the city on today's Boston train.
