THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

KING COLE TEA

Here is a real tea-treat that will surpass your fond recollection of 'the nicest cup of tea I ever tasted!' King Cole Tea will truly make an even nicer cup of tea an everyday reality. Such richness, such vigorous fullness of flavor, such pleasant smoothness were never concentrated so deliciously in your tea-cup before. And the cup you enjoy a month hence will be as nice as your very first sip. Its delicious flavor never varies. You will love it more and more.

YOU'LL LIKE THE FLAVOR.

A Close Resemblance.

(New York American.)

"The cold weather is coming on, and we shall soon see some very remarkable cold weather motoring suits."

The speaker, Coker F. Clarkson, of the Association of Auto Manufacturers, sat in his New York office. He resumed: "I'll be glad when cold weather motoring clothes are made more sightly. They give us such a shaggy look now, don't they? Did you ever hear about the performing bear?"

"Well, a country hotel, a good deal frequented by motorists, took in a showman and his performing bear, and one morning the bear escaped from the stable.

"Everybody fled from the animal. The hotel man, however, pursued it courageously. It entered the hotel, mounted the stairway, pushed open a bedroom door and vanished.

"Then the hotelman, close behind, heard from the bedroom, angry exclamation in a feminine voice, and the words: "George, dear, how often have I forbidden you to come into my room without knocking—and in your automobile coat, too!"

Women Opponents of Suffrage Meet.

New York, Nov. 19. Although the New York State Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage was organized in this city seventeen years ago, and has done a vast amount of campaign work in the intervening years, the organization has never held a formal social session. To offset their tardiness in this respect the women who form the membership are going to have an elaborate luncheon at Sherry's next Thursday afternoon.

There will be more than three hundred women prominent in the social or business life not only of New York but of Connecticut, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Maryland and other states who will participate in the affair.

Among the women who will take a prominent part are: Mrs. Greer, wife of Bishop Greer; Mrs. E. Terhune, Grace Greenwood Goodwin, Mrs. Otto Kiliani, Mrs. Arthur Dodge and many others.

There will be in attendance just one lone man. He is Mr. T. Williams of Philadelphia, who will address the women on the various phases of the opposition to suffrage. Mrs. Wm. Scott will talk on the proposed repeal of the suffrage amendment in California, Grace Goodwin and Ida Tarbell among others, will also give addresses.

While the luncheon is to be a social function the purpose for which the women are organized will not be lost sight of and plans will be made for the winter's work. One of the officers declares that the price of success is eternal vigilance, and they will not forget to be vigilant. They argue that if women are allowed to vote it will be a burden upon them which most of them will not have the time to attend to and yet will be obliged to make time to protect their own interests, which are heavy, as most of the women engaged in the movement are large owners of property and have other interests, which they would not care to have jeopardized by irresponsible women voting.

Farmers of West Stacking Grain in the Snow.

Brandon, Man., Nov. 14. People arriving in the city from the Acrola district and other east Saskatchewan localities tell of a novel sight. Last is very common in that district just now, which is nothing less than farmers employing sleighs in stacking wheat. The grain growers had depended on getting threshing done from the stack, but winter breaking in so suddenly made that impossible. When the danger of delay became apparent a few weeks ago, the farmers found it difficult to get any stacking done on account of the continued wet weather. The grain growers' tribulations were multiplied when threshers began to suspend operations without serious loss. Some of the threshers who had drawn out their outfits are being induced to resume operations for a time, but help is none too plentiful, and threshing is done only under the greatest difficulties, so that many of the farmers have resolved to stack their snow covered sheaves and hold the grain until some shift can be made to get it ready for the market.

The Peace Movement.

(Boston Advertiser.)

A report from Rome shows that trouble has broken out among the members of the International Peace Bureau, at Berne. The Italian members of that Bureau have become involved in a quarrel, because they are unwilling publicly to condemn the act of the Italian government in making war on Tripoli. In effect the Italian members insist that, instead of censure, their country deserves high praise for having undertaken to free Tripoli from the rule of the unspeakable Turk, and also for "making war in such humane fashion." They argue that Italy might easily have conducted the war more barbarous and brutal methods, but they point out that Italy earnestly desires to end the war at once, if the Turks will only agree to allow no further resistance to be made, to the theft of Tripoli.

It is a curious coincidence that this high handed annexation of Tripoli comes just at a time when the city of Rome had been bidding for the next meeting of the International Peace Congress. It is self-evident that there would be something quite incongruous in making the Italian capital the scene of the next great peace conference of Europe; but the Italian members of the peace bureau angrily resent the twittings by their fellow members on that point. Their reply to such criticisms, however, is not so bad. They merely call attention to the fact that what Italy has really done is to imitate, at this late day, the former acts of England, France, Spain and Germany in Africa, and those of Austria in the Balkans or of Russia in Manchuria.

It is evident that, if only those countries are to be represented in the peace movement, that have absolutely clean hands in the matter of aggression that may result in war, the ranks of the Berne society would be small, indeed. It is gradually growing plain that Germany egged Italy on, to the demonstration against Tripoli; and there is more or less reason for believing that German is trying to arrange some terms with Russia, whereby that country is to have a big slice of Turkish territory, if Russia will finally consent to the award of some portion of the African coast of the Mediterranean to Germany. The cool way in which the "big powers of Europe have already begun to regard the Turkish territory as their own territory renders it possible for the Italians to feel some anger at being singled out as the sole offenders against the peace movement.

However, it remains to be said that the Italian members of the Berne society would not be likely to accept criticism from Americans, any more readily than from Europeans. It must be admitted that at present the friends of the world's peace movement are disposed to regard the politicians of the United States as somewhat hypocritical, on the matter of working against that movement. They insist that the action of the United States Senate, in refusing to confirm the peace treaties negotiated by President Taft, has been construed all over Europe as a severe setback to the peace movement, and they ask, pertinently, if public sentiment in the United States honestly favors the peace movement, why the Senate is allowed to prevent any advance towards more honest relations with European powers.

There is not the slightest misunderstanding of the situation in Europe. The statesmen there have studied the Taft peace treaties and they know that the Senate has been asked to agree to no surrender of its powers, nor to consent to anything more than an honest test of the loud professions of American statesmen of their desire to substitute international justice for international greed and bluster. European opinion is unanimous that the hostile attitude of the Senate towards the Taft peace treaties puts the United States in an unenviable position of loudly professing virtue, with impudent hypocrisy, while clinging to most unvirtuous principles of action.

Burglar and Dummy Fight to the Death

San Francisco, Nov. 7.—A burglar who jimmied his way into the bachelor apartments of A. B. Treadwell, Police Judge, had a desperate hand-to-hand battle with an automaton, operated by the electric burglar alarm, which the judge had devised.

The dummy was no match for the burglar and now lies hopelessly wrecked with his head crushed, but from the appearance of the room the electric man put up a hard fight. Chairs were overturned and one was broken. The weapon with which the burglar won the battle was a heavy window weight.

The judge lives in a cosy flat. In an alcove just at the head of the stairs stands or rather stood, a well-designed figure of a man made of plaster of paris and metal. It was life-size and represented a man reading a paper. It was really a work of art and most life-like.

In the hollow head of the machine-made man was an electric light which was connected with the house current so that when any stepped on the top step of the stairs the current was turned on and the man moved. When the burglar stepped on that step he thought his time had come, as the man seemed ready for him. When he stepped from the step the light went out, but, like a brave chief, he went at his enemy in the dark, using his window weight as a club.

The wreck of the electric man tells the rest of the story. Its head is crushed and the one-time work of art is a shattered mass of plaster and metal. The thief escaped.

Musquash Woman Has Lively Holiday.

The arrest of Mrs. Jessie Jones, aged 20, of Musquash, on Charlotte street late Friday night, ended a rather swift two weeks' absence from her home. According to her husband's story, she left Musquash about two weeks ago with the intention of visiting her sister in Carleton. She never went there, however, and her husband states that shortly after her departure a young man was missing from Musquash. The husband learned that his wife and this young man, left St. John together and went as far as Houlton, Me. The husband came to this city a day or so ago and complained to the police, giving a description of his wife, Jessie, who returned to St. John a few days ago and was found wandering about Charlotte street by Officer Kane, shortly before midnight on Friday. This morning the magistrate allowed her to go back to Musquash with her husband.

What the Philippines Have Cost the U. S.

(Hartford Times.)

The war department figures the cost of the occupation of the Philippines since the date of the treaty of Paris, December 8, 1898, $167,486,403. It is said that the officers who made this statement "were directed to furnish a statement showing the cost of the military occupation of the islands under the assumption that if the army had not been in the Philippine Islands an equal number of troops (exclusive of Philippine scouts) would have been maintained in the United States." But the army would not have been as large as it is, probably by at least 50,000 men, if we had not taken the Philippines. The cost of maintaining these 50,000 soldiers for a dozen years has been over $600,000,000. The total cost of our Philippine adventure has been nearer $1,000,000,000, than the smaller sum above mentioned.

A Crime to Corner Food.

Following upon the bill for the establishment of bake houses and butchers' shops, designed to prevent illegitimate increase in the cost of necessities, the French government has introduced a measure for combating "cornerers" in provisions or any kind of merchandise. The proposed legislation would punish with imprisonment ranging from two months to two years and with a fine ranging from 1,000f. ($200) to 20,000f. ($4,000) any individual or association of individuals who, even without employing fraudulent methods but with the intention of illicit speculation shall have brought about a rise or fall of prices in provisions or merchandise above or below the price which would have been determined by the natural and free competition of commerce. "Illicit speculation" is defined as speculation which is not justified by the requirements of the speculator's stores, by the covering of his operations as a merchant, or by the exercise of legitimate industrial or commercial foresight.

Impregnable Rock Is Never Asleep.

It has always been known that Gibraltar, which belongs to Great Britain, is one of the strongest forts for both defence and offence in the world. It is said that an immense fleet could be sent to the bottom before getting within five miles of Gibraltar. Not even a torpedo boat could succeed in entering the bay unobserved on the blackest night. The most eminent naval experts are of the opinion that this world's greatest fortress is almost impregnable, according to Cassel's Saturday Journal.

Gibraltar never sleeps. By day and night two perfectly equipped signal stations, proudly flaunting Britain's flag of ownership, sweep the seas around to a distance of fifteen miles on a clear day, instantly reporting the coming and going of each vessel.

Modern "needle" guns, the finest in Europe, are installed on all the most prominent points. They are unreachably from the sea, even as they are indiscernible owing to the skill with which they are planted and draped to match the surrounding vegetation, while huge screens drop automatically before each shell is fired. They have a range of fifteen miles and could drop shells in Ceuta in Africa, opposite, quite comfortably.

One gun weighs 110 tons and is capable of throwing a shell weighing three quarters of a ton. In that marvel of engineering under great difficulties, the galleries, are concealed for every day in the year.

There galleries are divided into three sections, entry to which is guarded, while one is closed even to high officials containing preserved stores, munitions of war, rain water (for Gibraltar has no springs) and a complete condensing plant all calculated to outlast a siege of seven years.

The firing is the most mathematically perfect imaginable. The surrounding waters are mapped out into squares, upon which certain guns are kept ready trained, so that it is almost impossible to miss.

He Had Told It.

Next to Joseph Chamberlain, Birmingham honors no citizen more than Jesse Collins. In politics and friendship Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Collins have been inseparable for many years. They even shared their platform anecdotes, and in regard to one story they arranged that when both were taking part in a meeting the first speaker was entitled to it.

It so happened that Mr. Collins arrived late at a meeting one night, but was due to speak before Mr. Chamberlain. As he was launching out into the story he felt his coat-tail pulled and a voice behind him whispered, "I've told it." So Mr. Collins desisted, but what was his surprise to hear Mr. Chamberlain tell the story as soon as he got on his legs a moment into the shrubbery and then passed on.

"I presumed," he remarked scoldingly to himself, "that Burke and his gang through."

Then he started in to work. In five minutes he had finished a column.

Having done this, he crept into the house and dropped to the cellar floor, closing and fastening the window behind him.

Once inside, there was no trace of him or his work left without. All that he had to fear now were the occupants of the house.

"This is a cinch," he muttered underneath his breath.

But not so much of a one as he thought. He had to break an entrance through three doors before he stood upon the ground floor. Once there, however, he felt his way cautiously to the pantry where he knew the butler slept.

The door was wide open, and a gas jet in the room was turned down low. Loud snoring proceeded from the bed. The butler lay upon his back, his mouth wide open. The man with the black mask was pleased to note that much.

It is said that the chloroforming burglar is a myth—or, if not a myth, a failure. Chloroform gas and stifles—it is bound to wake its victim.

But the man in the black mask knew his business. He took all chances, because of this fact.

He was ready for the gas, the cough, the gurgle—he anticipated the fact that his victim would wake. Listening carefully to the respiration, he grasped his man by the throat each time there was an expiration of air, and sprayed the vapor down his throat as he released his grasp.

There was a struggle—there was found to be—but the butler was no match for the iron muscles and trained science of the man in black, and

Sure Signs of Kidney Trouble

If your back is constantly aching and if you experience dull shooting pains, your kidneys are out of order. If your urine is thick and cloudy or your passages frequent scanty and painful, your kidneys and bladder are out of order. Neglect quickly brings on rheumatism, diabetes, lumbago, sciatica and etc.

Mrs. John Wagner of 1179 Hollis St., Halifax, N. S. says: "Dull shooting pains would catch me across the small part of my back and extend in to my shoulders and neck, often causing me to suffer with severe headaches and spells of dizziness. Spots would dazzle before my eyes and everything would turn black. I would fall to the floor and be unable to get up again without assistance. A friend told me of Booth's Kidney Pills and I began their use. The first box gave me relief and I am now well and strong."

THE STANDING ALIBI OF

H. STANLEIGH STORME

(Copyright by Publishers Press Ltd.)
(By Wm. Hamilton Osborne.)

He was waiting for someone quiet within the house. And when that quiet reigned, he waited many minutes longer before he stirred.

Finally he made an imperceptible movement, and somewhere, within his apparel a small bell struck the hour. He sighed with relief.

"I'll try it now," he exclaimed softly to himself. But still he did not move.

"Let me see," he mused, "I want to get this straight. I must make no mistakes. From what I have learned, the thing is safe. There are six people in the house."

He checked them off on his fingers as he spoke.

"The girl, the old lady, the man, and three servants. The three servants are on the upper floor, but they sleep, and they don't count—they never do. The man is on the ground floor—that eliminates him. The old lady in the front room—she's too far off to be dangerous."

"That leaves no one but the girl to face—and if she hears me, why then—I can get away in time, at any rate. This thing seems safe—safer than many others. It's worth trying, and I'll try it. Here goes."

There was an open space of eighteen feet between the shrubbery and the house. The man, who up to this time might have been a shadow or a tree, now disappeared from view beneath the bushes.

An instant later he emerged from the protection of the leaves. By means of some subtle burglar's trick, he wriggled, half prostrate, across the open space—he was a passing shadow, a bit darker than the others, nothing else.

Once across he became a portion of the house—he became again unseen. This man did nothing at random—he did not reckon beyond host. He had made himself carefully acquainted with the details of the job before him. He was an expert in his line.

Night after night he had lurked in the vicinity of this house, alert and wide awake to everything that went on. He knew now all about the outside and all about the inside of the house; he understood the habits of the occupants.

He had determined the exact location of his booty; if surprised, he knew just which way to run. He was prepared for all emergencies.

Outside a policeman swung along with easy gait. He stopped and peered into the house and dropped to the cellar floor, closing and fastening the window behind him.

Once inside, there was no trace of him or his work left without. All that he had to fear now were the occupants of the house.

"This is a cinch," he muttered underneath his breath.

But not so much of a one as he thought. He had to break an entrance through three doors before he stood upon the ground floor. Once there, however, he felt his way cautiously to the pantry where he knew the butler slept.

The door was wide open, and a gas jet in the room was turned down low. Loud snoring proceeded from the bed. The butler lay upon his back, his mouth wide open. The man with the black mask was pleased to note that much.

It is said that the chloroforming burglar is a myth—or, if not a myth, a failure. Chloroform gas and stifles—it is bound to wake its victim.

But the man in the black mask knew his business. He took all chances, because of this fact.

He was ready for the gas, the cough, the gurgle—he anticipated the fact that his victim would wake. Listening carefully to the respiration, he grasped his man by the throat each time there was an expiration of air, and sprayed the vapor down his throat as he released his grasp.

There was a struggle—there was found to be—but the butler was no match for the iron muscles and trained science of the man in black, and the struggles became faint and fainter, and the man on the bed succumbed.

For ten minutes the burglar kept his chloroform cone in place over the other's face, and then deftly gagged him and tied him hand and foot to the bed whereon he lay.

Then he softly stole upstairs.

Every bedroom door was locked. The recent burglaries had made everybody timorous.

"It's just as well," he laughed to himself.

He carefully secured each door from the outside with ropes tied to the handles in such manner that it would be impossible, by the exercise of ordinary force, to open them at all.

He heard no sound. Then he crept stealthily to the rear hall window and stepped out upon the extension roof.

A rap upon the flags outside startled him. It was nothing, though, but a roundabout on his rounds. The man on the roof felt perfectly secure, for he was unseen from the street below.

Without a sound he crept warily across the roof and paused just before he reached the farthest window. He fumbled once more in his waistcoat, and the mysterious little bell tinkled again.

"I must hurry up," he told himself, "for in just an hour I'm due to leave the club."

He laughed noiselessly, and then stepped to the open window and raised the mosquito bar.

Then he disappeared within.

CHAPTER X

Miss Dumont Solves a Mystery.

Helen Dumont had not retired upon the departure of her guests. She sought her room and threw herself into a large chair facing one of the two side windows.

She was in no mood to sleep. The night was close and sultry. But there was something else that made her wakeful, and prayed upon her mind.

"What can it mean?" she kept repeating to herself, "what can it mean?"

Yes, there was no mistake about it. Once more she scanned the three letters. They were in the same handwriting. They were in the same hand.

She read and re-read them. There was nothing in them that appealed to her. All were cold and formal.

The first two to herself, mysterious as they were in text, contained no hidden word of endearment, nothing which she could call her own. And why was it, she asked herself, that this man, who had thus come into her life—why was it that he clothed himself in mystery?

Yet she still had faith in him—would have but for this last strange note.

Why should he write a note to himself, to call himself away? Why had he done that? What was it all for, any way?

The devil, doubt, crept into her mind and possessed it, until his moving the small lamp she caused its rays to fall upon a photograph of Storme that stood upon the table.

She grasped it eagerly and looked longingly at it. It was a good face—the face of a man of honor and of honesty, or at least so it seemed to her.

She kept the letters into a drawer, and she kept her glance fixed upon the portrait. And as she looked, tenderly she bent down and kissed it.

"I believe in you, H. Stanleigh Storme!" she said.

And then she extinguished the light, and sank once more into her place by the eastern window.

Then all was dark. He moved stealthily toward the window.

He made no attempt to touch the door. He half suspected what was in her thoughts, and knew perhaps that he was safe.

He reached the window and placed one foot outside. But as quickly he withdrew it.

For there, dimly outlined in the darkness, he saw the head of a uniformed policeman peeping carefully above the roof.

The burglar, once more within the room, and now regardless of the presence of the girl, stepped hastily to the inner door. He would make his exit by another way.

He hastily unlocked it, and tried to throw it open. But he was foiled by his own petard.

His rope outside was fastened to the knob, and the door would not yield. He stepped to the eastern window and looked out.

On the lawn below was another officer standing motionless with something glinting in his hand.

The burglar swore beneath his breath. He halted for a moment and debated with himself.

Then stepping to the foremost of the eastern windows, he put out his head and let forth a blood-curdling scream—a scream that might have been a woman's, so shrill was it in its intensity.

The attention of the officer below was attracted to that window. The burglar immediately dashed out through the northern window upon the extension roof, and brushed aside the officer who was prepared to make an entrance there.

He leaped and sprang to an arbor at the back and jumped to the ground.

The officer fired a shot in the air. "Halt!" he cried in a loud voice.

The burglar laughed a mocking laugh and sprang upon the low wall, cleared it, and disappeared. But as he did so the officer took aim and fired.

The shot was followed by the shriek of a man in agony. The bullet had reached its mark.

But the burglar, though he shrieked with pain, never halted for an instant. He sped on his way.

The officer kept on firing. Then he was startled by the faint scream of a woman.

Falling Hair.

Mrs. Jas. Harris of Wapella, Sask., says:—

"I have found Parisian Sage to be the best scalp and hair tonic and dressing I have ever used. My hair had been coming out in combs, full and was very dry and brittle and the scalp was always itching and full of dandruff. I have used two bottles of Parisian Sage and it has stopped my hair from falling out, the itching and dandruff have disappeared and my hair is fine and soft and glossy. I would not be without this fine hair tonic for many times the price."

For women, men, or children Parisian Sage is without any doubt the finest preparation for the hair. Daintily perfumed, it is free from grease or stickiness and ought to be where every member of the family could use it daily. Large bottle 50c. at all druggists or from the proprietors The Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont., postpaid. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package. Sold and guaranteed by J. Sutton Clark.

Value of Silence.

Many of the failures in business and professional as well as social life are due to injudicious talking. A young man of apparently very moderate ability has recently astonished his fellow workers by his noticeable success in business.

"Pure luck" it has been called, but a policy or natural habit of silence is the real cause.

In his first position he succeeded a man of long experience and excellent judgment, a circumstance that made his youth and inexperience conspicuous by contrast. He made no apologies and asked little advice. He was courteous to his superiors, considerate of his business inferiors, but absolutely deaf to all gossip and irresponsible talk so prevalent in every large business office.

He had held his position for a year; gossip had it that he had failed, for in that time he had not suggested a single innovation or enlarged his department in any way. But soon it became known that he had proposed a change that would result in an annual saving of $2,000.

Gradually his step became firmer, his manner more assured, and he no longer outstayed the janitor at night. Slowly but surely he gained the confidence of the general manager and the heads of other departments, and it soon became their habit to come to him for advice. At the end of five years when his former associates were wondering if they could afford to get married, he was admitted to membership in the firm.

In every establishment where a number of persons is employed there is always an unobtrusive gossip. A dissatisfied stenographer talks her troubles over with a bookkeeper. The bookkeeper confides to the telephone operator that he expects to get an increase in salary. The elevator boy explains that he is going to leave soon for a better job. These bits of news are exchanged until they become common property.

The employer, learning that the stenographer is dissatisfied, tells her that she may leave at her pleasure. The bookkeeper fails to get his increase in salary, and the elevator boy does not get his new job. Especially if you are dissatisfied should you refrain from discussing your position.—Ex.

Getting Rid of Flies.

"We do not use screens in our upper windows, yet are never troubled with flies and only occasionally by mosquito," said a careful housekeeper. "For an hour each morning the windows and shutters are opened wide to air and sun, but very early the rooms are put in order. This means that all dust is carefully removed and that all crockery is dry and perfectly clean. Then the blinds are closed and the curtains partially drawn, leaving the room dark and cool and sweet, not at all attractive to flies. On retiring we leave the shutters closed and use candles for light, because they give sufficient light without diffusing much heat or attracting insects. I have never been troubled with moths in rooms so treated. I keep all the house rather dark during intense heat, as it is cool and refreshing after the hot glare outside, but several times each week I let in plenty of sunshine to dispel any possible dampness, and there is an abundance of fresh air at all times."

A Cruel Alusion.

(New York Sun)

Representative Sherley of Kentucky apropos of his pure food and drug bill, told in Washington a story about a milk adulterator.

"This chap is a millionaire," he said. "He has made his millions out of his milk trade. Last summer he decided to give a ball masque at his magnificent country house."

"Discussing the ball masque with an aristocratic old lady, she was the guest of honor at a large society party—the millionaire said:

"I don't know whether to go myself to the ball as Louis XIV. or Shakespeare. What do you advise?"

"The aristocratic old lady put her tortoise-shell lorgnette on her high-bridged and aristocratic nose, she looked the millionaire milkman slowly up and down and she replied:

"If I were you, I'd just put on a pair of pumps and go as a waterfall."

Knicker. So he contracted the quick lunch habit at home?

Appreciate the Home Paper

Things will indeed come to a sorry pass when the people of a community fail to give the local paper their loyalty and assistance along material lines. The news paper in a small community is sometimes the only means of letting the outside world know that there is such a place. Kindly excuse our slang expression, but did you ever see a town or community without a newspaper, that amounted to a hill of beans? If you have it is the only existence. When the local paper is missing from a community, the spirit which inspires growth is also missing. Don't be a knocker on your home paper. It is the one thing that will make your town grow.--World.

Mi-o-na! An Excellent Stomach Remedy.

Mrs. J. R. Whyte, Killarney, Manitoba, who says: "I have found great comfort and relief from Mi-o-na. I had been greatly troubled for months with heartburn and a heavy burning feeling in my stomach. A fair meal would disturb me so much that I would have to sit up at night—the food would sour on my stomach and form a gas which would cause belching and dizzy spells. These distressing troubles disappeared after using Mi-o-na and I shall always speak highly of this excellent remedy."

Mi-o-na is the best prescription for stomach trouble ever written. It gives quick relief and cures permanently. Mi-o-na is put up in tablet form and is small and easy to swallow. Sold by leading druggists everywhere, with a guarantee to cure or refund your money. Or postpaid from the R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont. You will search the world over and not find a stomach remedy half so good as Mi-o-na. Sold and guaranteed by J. Sutton Clark.

CONQUEST OF THE AIR

History and Progress of Aeronautics and the Wonderful Possibilities in Connection with the Air Services and Work of Exploration.

The fundamental principles of aerostatics were discovered by Archimedes and formulated as follows: "Every body plunged into a fluid is subjected by this fluid, to a 'pressure' from below to above which is equal to the weight displaced by that body." The first application of this principle was to balloons, care being taken to produce a body whose total weight was less than that of the volume of air it displaced.

But although the principle was thus applied as far back as 1783, it was not until 1854 that the first balloon capable of being steered was produced by Col. Renard, who accomplished a circuit flight in what deserved the title of a dirigible. The reason for this was that in order to steer a body floating in a fluid it is absolutely essential that this body should possess an independent speed, to permit it to move in the fluid of its own accord. In 1885 Col. Renard succeeded in obtaining an electric motor of 8 horse-power, weighing only forty kilograms, a horse-power and capable of great endurance.

Today's mechanicians have succeeded in perfecting motors especially designed for aviation of the almost incredibly light weight of two kilograms a horse-power and of such perfect action that they can start in an instant without preliminary preparation. Professor Perget explains clearly and briefly the mechanical difficulty of the problem, and the scientific reasons why it took a century to discover how to guide the machine which the Professor's motor should be launched into the air in 1783.

Next came the problems connected with the resistance of the air, which determine the shape of the envelope for a dirigible balloon. A spherical balloon cannot be steered. So long ago as the beginning of the nineteenth century Marey-Monge predicted the necessity of adopting a shape, should it be possible, to propel aerostats, which should have "the head of a cod and the tail of a mackerel."

The applications in civil life of locomotion in the air will be numerous and varied, and it will doubtless be possible to travel by public service or by private vehicles. The special use of the dirigible in the air will be Prof. Berget foresees is by the most office with aeronautic messengers from city to city every hour, the service, interrupted only by heavy storms. The exploration of unknown regions in such difficult countries as Africa, the heart of Asia, Australia and South America, with accurate maps, is one of the important scientific uses to which the new ships may be put. The whole of Central Africa, for example, could be mapped from air-balloons, under international sanction, with ship over Timbuctou and the shores of Lake Tchad, in French territory; Leopoldville, for the Belgians; Densola and Lake Albert for the English stations.

Progress Comes by Death One of the straight facts about living beings is that so far as this earth is concerned, they die, and the question is whether we can hope to find that this fact of death has a use for life. That would be a great discovery, for we are apt to think that death is useless and cruel.

Well, death certainly has a value for life—not for the life of the creature that dies, but for the lives of others. If there were no death there would be no parenthood and childhood, for plainly there would soon be no room for the introduction of new beings if those already there did not make room for them. Without parenthood and childhood and all that they mean, no kind of life—human, animal, or vegetable—would be anything like what we know; and there would be no more progress, for that depends on new and higher kinds of life being born in the world. Thus, without death, mankind could never have been produced.

The Parnell Monument

The elaborate Parnell monument in Dublin, which has been in course of construction for a long time past, at a cost of about $45,000, is now complete, and the unveiling will take place on October 1, when the ceremony will be performed by Mr. John Redmond, M.P. Parnell is represented standing in oratorical attitude, with his left hand resting on a table. The inscription, an extract from one of Parnell's own speeches, reads as follows:—"To Charles Stewart Parnell. No man has a right to fix a boundary to the march of a nation. No man has a right to say to his country: 'Thus far thou shalt go and no further.' We have never attempted to fix a plus ultra to the progress of Ireland's nationhood, and we never shall."

A Salutary Lesson

An artist, a barrister, and a doctor, motoring from Dijon to Chalons-sur-Saone together, devised a novel method of punishing an unprovoked act of aggression by a peasant who, out of sheer prejudice against motor cars, threw a large stone, which struck the artist on the chest. The occupants of the car pursued and captured their assailant, took him into the car, quietly divested him of his coat, watch, and money, and then, after proceeding at full speed for over 30 miles, set him down on a lonely roadside to walk home in the broiling sun. His clothes and other property they sent back to him subsequently.

In 1910 Great Britain took of our animals and their products $42,000,000 out of $24,000,000 which were exported equal to 71 per cent. Of our agricultural products she took $71,000,000 out of $81,000,000, equal to nearly 88 per cent. In the same year the United States took of the first 20 per cent. and of the second 9 per cent.

ABANDONED RAILROADS

Timber States South of the Line are Dotted with Rusty Remains of Tracks, for Which There is no Traffic.

Recent reports show that in the United States there are eighty-one abandoned railroads, says the Railway Magazine. From eighteen the rails have been removed and thirty-four are described as "not in operation" or "operations suspended."

In regard to the first class, the franchises seem to have expired by disuse, but the tracks are still in evidence; in the second class the company had pulled up stakes and quit, in the third a variety of causes may have contributed to the stopping of wheels.

The shutting down of a railroad may simply mean that it has outlived its usefulness. The neighborhood served by the line may have developed in a fashion that the builders hardly contemplated and with which the rails and rolling stock are incapable of dealing.

Along comes capital and either solves the problem or the line is abandoned or put out of business by other means. The travelling facilities and accommodations that it cannot attempt to rival. It is really prosperity that shuts down such a road.

Then there have been roads built on the basis of the anticipated boom of a resort, a town or a section. The hope of the boomers not being realized, the line goes into the discard.

Again, the initial promises of a mining district are such that a line is built for its benefit. The district doesn't run out or goes barren after a time and in consequence the road is abandoned.

The same is true of regions in which the natural resources are many or ending, notably in those that yield oil. The disuse of lumber roads is inevitable also. The timber states are dotted with the remains of rusty rights of way and almost every year adds to their number.

Of course the list of derelict lines does not indicate that the judgment of modern railroad builders was in every case at fault but rather that the possibilities of the country are increasing, and with them the need for the larger facilities that the abandoned lines could not supply.

One of the smallest and perhaps most unprofitable railroads in the United States was the Kentucky Northern that ran from Simcoe, Ky., to a junction with the Louisville & Atlantic railroad a distance of eight miles. It was incorporated in May 1902. From the first it proved to be a drain on the pocket-books of the stockholders. The surrounding population seems to have disliked the line. Not enough passenger tickets were sold and not enough freight was shipped to pay for the keeping of its locomotives, its lone passenger coach or its solitary flat car.

In the year ended June 1908, its operating expenses were $12,323, and its net earnings $697.

The housewife says: "Our summer trip won't cost us much this year; I've planned just how to save some coin."

Her husband says: "You dear!" "Yes," she replies, "we don't need much."

For our vacation rest; I'll get but six new gowns, while you can have your old suit pressed."

Arthur Henderson was a passenger on Monday's train to St. John.

Walter McKenzie of Mascarene was in town Wednesday.

Berie Tucker of Blacks Harbor spent Monday in town.

Rev. E. A. McPhee was in St. John for a few days this week attending the Laymen's Missionary meeting returning on Wednesday.

Elery Johnston and friend George Macrose of St. John were here to attend his sisters wedding on Wednesday.

Vernon McNeil of Letete left on Thursday for St. John where he will enter the employ of the Bank of N. B.

Miss Gertrude Dick was here this week for the marriage of her brother.

M. A. Sherwood and wife of Second Falls were in town Tuesday.

Mayor C. H. McGee arrived home on Saturday having finished his season's trip and expects to remain here till after the holidays or late winter, when the spring trip commences.

Mrs. Geo. Craig and Henry Goss are reported on the sick list this week.

Lyman Chambers of Lords Cove was in town Monday for a few hours.

Mrs. James Jack will be at home to her friends Nov. 29th and Dec. 6th.

Mr. Nicholas Meating was taken quite ill while at the Laymen's Missionary Meeting at St. Mark's church on Wednesday evening, but he is now improving.

Mrs. Horace Bridges of Milltown, Me. arrived on Monday and is visiting her sister Mrs. Walter Messenett.

George and Allan McDougall who have been employed at Danforth, Me. arrived home on Saturday.

Mrs. Henry Hinds who was so seriously ill last season but partially recovered, has for the past few days been lying at death's door with very little hopes of her recovery.

Miss Etta Marshall spent a few days in St. John last week.

Miss Ella Leavitt is visiting friends in town this week.

Miss Hazel Stewart spent Sunday at her home here.

Clarence Miller who went out west this fall on one of the Harvest excursions, returned home on Monday, and says he is satisfied with N. B. and thinks it better than the northwest.

Willard Hanson and Eldridge Craig went to Woodland, Me. on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. David McAdam and children of Hillsboro, Albert Co. arrived here on Monday.

Misses Lila Lafin and Eleanor DeWolfe of St. Stephen returned to their home on Thursday.

Mrs. Henry Hinds whom we report in another place as very low, died about 2 p.m. Thursday. She was formerly a Miss Galbraith of Lorneville and had lived here since her marriage about 11 years ago and for about two years previous she taught in the public school, during her residence here she was most highly esteemed for her cheerful and kind disposition. She leaves to mourn a husband and two daughters who have the sympathy of the whole community in their early and irreparable loss.

Ottawa, November 16. The report of the Census and Statistics Office for the month ending October 31 shows that the total area in potatoes, roots, fodder crops hay and clover this year was 9,007,492 acres, with a total products value of $219,955,000. This is $1,600,000 more than last year, and there is a decrease of $3,120,000 in hay and clover. The largest increase is shown in potatoes, which is nearly $6,000,000 more than last year, although the product is less by 8,000,000 bushels, the average selling price being 60 cents per bushel as compared with 45 cents a year ago. The value of this year's product of hay and clover and fodder corn is $159,965,000 which is less than last year's value by $2,608,000, being more than last year's value by $1,213,000. The quality of all the crops this year, 80 per cent and over excepting sugar beet, which is 88 per cent, and last year all crops excepting potatoes, turnips and other roots were over 90. The values of all root and fodder crops this year by provinces were $5,784,000 in Prince Edward Island, $12,228,000 in Nova Scotia, $12,595,000 in New Brunswick, $73,315,000 in Quebec, $99,498,000 in Ontario, $5,883,000 in Manitoba, $3,790,000 in Saskatchewan and $6,321,000 in Alberta.

The area sown to fall wheat this season is 1,097,900 acres, being 797,200 acres in Ontario and 300,700 in Alberta. This is 2.95 per cent less than a year ago.

The per cent of fall ploughing completed ranges from 73.57 in Ontario to 80.40 in Prince Edward Island for the eastern provinces, and from 18.73 in Alberta to 34.12 in Manitoba for the western provinces, which is less than the averages of last year at the same date. For summer following the average in all the provinces is well over 90 per cent for each of the three years 1909-1911.

Archibald Blue, Chief Officer, Census and Statistics Office, Nov. 1911.

Bigger Docks For London.

The inadequacy of the London docks for the accommodation of the great merchant ships now afloat and the prospective increase in size of those already contemplated has stirred the dock authority to a scheme of enlargement and construction which will cover a period of at least five years and entail an expenditure of $20,000,000 or more.

The largest docks now in existence on the Thames are the Victoria and the Albert, which have a depth of 25 1-2 and 27 feet respectively. This is to be increased within a year by 2 1/2 feet in each bringing the depth to 28 and 29 1/2 feet respectively.

The most important enterprise, however, will be the proposed South Albert dock, on which work will begin early next year and occupy about five years in completion, at an estimated cost of $10,243,982. The plans show that it will have a total length of 4,600 feet, a width of 200 feet at its eastern end and 500 feet at the western extremity. Its depth will be 38 feet, and it is believed this will float any ship likely to enter the Thames in the next 50 years. It will also have a dry dock of 35 feet depth, with a present length of 650 feet, which will ultimately be extended to 800 feet.

The East India group of docks and also the West India groups are to be enlarged during the next two years in order to afford relief to the overcrowded docks above and below.

A large proportion of the total outlay will be expended on the building of a range of six modern sheds, from 710 to 780 feet long, the widening of quays, and the provision of other equipment of the latest type.

The Proper Stock, All Right.

(Glasgow Baillie.) Some of the Macgregors, when their own name was proscribed, took that of Dochart, for a romantic reason. A party of them, hard pressed by their pursuers, escaped by swimming the stream which issues from Loch Dochart in Argyllshire and afterwards assumed the name in grateful memory thereof. It is told of a youth of this stock that, upon being sent to Glasgow college with a letter of introduction from his minister he gave his name as Dochart. The recipient of the letter suggested that there must be some mistake, since the letter spoke of a Macgregor. "Weel, sir," the youth explained, "that's the way they spell the name in our country."

Russia and Persia.

Another war seems to be looming up in the East. Russia has lost all patience with Persia, and is sending troops to secure the satisfaction which diplomacy has failed to obtain. The trouble has been brewing for some time, and a feature that attracts attention is that an American citizen, Mr. Morgan Shuster, is the storm centre. Mr. Shuster is financial adviser to the Persian Government, and apparently possesses influence and power. The beginning of the trouble was the confiscation of property belonging to the deposed Shah's brother because the latter was contributing money to the armed effort to overthrow the present Persian Government. Russia was backing the ex-Shah and the Russian Vice-Consul at Teheran sent a force of Cossacks to recover the confiscated property. Mr. Shuster objected to this proceeding and dispatched to this country a telegram commending by another American and drove the Cossacks off. As we narrated in the despatches a few days ago, the Russian government sent an ultimatum to Persia, setting forth that unless the Persian foreign minister apologized for the alleged insult to the Russian Vice-Consul and made other reparations Russia would occupy the provinces of Gililan and Masanderan. The Persian Premier was willing to make the necessary amende, but the American financial adviser and members of the cabinet take the opposite view, and Russia therefore resorts to military action—St. J. Harvester Trust Ousted From Missouri.

Jefferson City, Mo., Nov. 14. The Supreme Court of the State of Missouri has issued a writ of ouster against the International Harvester Co., and assessed a fine of $50,000 for the violation of the anti-trust law.

The International Harvester Co., in September, 1910, was found guilty of violating the Missouri anti-trust laws by a commissioner appointed by the State Supreme Court.

The court ruled that the fine must be paid on or before Jan. 1, 1912, and that if the International Harvester Co. proves to the court by March 1, 1912, that it has ceased all connection with the International Harvester Co. of New Jersey, which the court held to be unlawful, that the ouster of the International Harvester Co. of America will be suspended.

The harvester company must file proofs of its willingness to comply with the judgement of the court. The proofs must be approved by the attorney general.

The case was submitted to the Supreme Court for affirmation last April. The effect of the decision is to prevent all the companies which make up the International Co. from conducting further business in the State.

One of the witnesses was George W. Perkins of J. P. Morgan & Co. Perkins was the guiding spirit in the organization of the International Harvester Co.

Easier Tendency Noted in The Coffee Market.

New York, Nov. 14. The easier tendency recently noted in the coffee market was accentuated late today by a sharp decline in the quotations for spot supplies in the local market. Stocks of coffee have been accumulating rather rapidly at the Brazilian ports, over 3,000,000 bags now being reported at Santos, and during the past day or two the offers received here from Brazilian shippers are said to have shown increase willingness to sell. Previously, this had exerted little influence on the local spot situation, as available supplies in this market were considered very closely held, but while the contract market was rather steadier today at a decline of about 1c. a pound from the recent high records, the spot market was decidedly unsettled, with local merchants quoting the grade known as Rio 7's about 15 1-8c. and in some instances quotations were heard as low as 14 7-8c. comparing with the recent high price of 16c. a pound.

A rally of from 5 to 17 points in the quotations for figures was attributed to covering by speculative shorts, and rumors that leading bulls were coming to the support of the primary markets. The day's firm offers from Brazil were lower, however, and the unsettled feeling noted in the spot market was supposed to be partly due to a continued slack demand from the interior.

Four New Features in the Spring Modes.

Toledo, O., Nov. 19.—Members of the National Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' Association closed their annual meeting by adopting the styles for women's dress next spring.

There will be four new methods in the spring modes. In both suits and separate coats the sloping shoulder is a coming style. Belted and collarless effects will be a second new departure. Rolling revers, longer than those at present fashionable, is a third item. The side buttoning and trimming effect will become more pronounced as the spring advances.

Rare Books for Yale.

London, Nov. 17.—It is announced that 42 lots of Shakespearian folios and quartos have been withdrawn from the Huth Library Auction Sale, having been privately bought by Alexander Smith Cochran of New York, who will present them to the Elizabethan Club at the Yale University.

The gift comprises four folios and thirty-eight rare quartos of plays and poems by Shakespeare. While the price paid for these works has not been made public, their total value is estimated at near $200,000.

WHAT FOOLS WE PEOPLE BE.

Ever seeking for something new, the leaders of fashion in Paris have decided upon an innovation for this winter, which is likely to cause considerable sensation if it is ever transplanted to this northern clime. In fashionable soires women are to have the feet and ankles bare. Although delicate white satin soles with floral borders may be allowed in exceptional cases, on condition that the flowers shall be natural and shall climb upward, trellis fashion, around the bare ankles.—Ex.

Paying Cash Pays!

Running an Account is very convenient at times, we readily admit; but you must have observed that when you run an account, you are very apt to buy many a thing you would go without if you were paying cash - things no doubt you could easily dispense with, without injury to yourself or family. And when those extra things come to be paid for - maybe you must then deprive yourself of other things that you actually need or at least go without them for a time, now "Paying Cash" enables you if you want to, to save money. Its very easy to "Charge the Goods" Its not so easy to "Discharge the Debt." So for economy's sake "Pay Cash" And since we have adopted this Cash System we find it moving very satisfactory both to our customers and ourselves, your money will buy you "Better Goods and More of Them" than if we were making bad bills by reckless credit giving.

Cleaned up $110,000 on Port-Avenue.

Messrs Pirrie and Stone of Parry Sound, have just cleaned up an even $110,000 on Portage Avenue frontage, which cost them a little over thirty thousand dollars three years ago. The property comprises 190 3-4 feet on the north side of the avenue, between Parry and Langsile streets, and was sold to English clients of Pattinson & Gun this morning for $140,000. This figures at $1,250 a front foot, which constitutes a record for this section of the street. The property has a depth of 130 feet to a 30-foot right of way.

Three years ago the Parry Sound owners brought the property at $28,000 and were mighty chary about doing so.

There are no buildings on the site at present, but the new owners, who have purchased as an investment, will put up a handsome block covering the entire frontage next spring.

Ottawa, Nov. 18--Fifty thousand dollars' worth of automobiles were burned yesterday afternoon, when the garage of Park & McViey, on Sparks street, caught fire by the explosion of a gasoline torch held by a mechanic on the premises. Fifty automobiles were stored on the premises, but half of them were saved.

The six children of a wealthy New York widower were so pleased when their father fell in love with a widow who had long been a friend of the family that they organized themselves into a committee and urged her to accept their father's proposal. After this evidence of goodwill, the woman no longer hesitated.

Enrique Lievano, a Bogota importer, is in New York and has been talking to a "Sun" reporter. "The feeling in Colombia today," he says, "may be summed up in the comment made at the time by one of our leading men who said: 'Colombia has lost Panama; the United States has lost in honor.' And that feeling extends outside of Colombia. The Germans and the English are very much liked there."

The following dispatch has a large sized grain of suggestion:
Winnipeg, Man. Nov. 15--Gain is being shipped from Manitoba to North Dakota and Minnesota, and the farmers are making more money on the transaction than if they sold it on this side of the border.

One broker is shipping several cars of wheat daily to Minneapolis. After paying $360 a car duty he realizes for his farmer patrons two cents a bushel more than he could in Winnipeg.

Berne, Switzerland, Nov. 18--Reports during the day indicate that earthquake shock was the most severe that Switzerland has experienced in fifty years. It traversed the country from Geneva to Constance, and was most violent in the Central Alps. Several towns were plunged into darkness by the disarrangement of the electric lighting systems, and in some places the people spent the night outdoors, fearing that the mountains would fall on them. Observatory instruments were damaged. Many houses were partially wrecked. At St. Gall several persons were slightly injured by falling chimneys.

CANADIANS AND AVIATION.

Nova Scotia and the Flying Machine. Canada though small in population keeps pace in the fields of sport and science and in the latest combination of both--aviation--she has produced one or two good men, probably the best known being the doughty J. McCurdy, who has lately achieved a number of triumphs against the best aviators of the world.

Mr. McCurdy was born in that province of nerve producing men--Nova Scotia--in a little place called Baddeck, in the year 1886.

Though still young he has already invented two successful machines--the "Silver Dart" and "Babcock No. 2". Canadians are looking forward to further triumphs from her worthy representative in this new field.

Another case of deluded American emigrants has come to light through a recent application to the State Department for the relief of a small colony of about 28 families from Mobile and the Gulf coast who were taken to the Caribbean coast of Honduras to work on plantations there. The American minister and consul officer reported to the State Department that these people were in great distress and private funds were procured from charitable Americans to defray the costs of their passage back to the United States. The gunboat Wheeling has been sent to Honduras to investigate and report upon conditions there.

LOCALS

Red Granite Division held a field meeting on Wednesday evening at which six new members joined.

T. A. Hartt M. P. has been elected as Conservative whip and Frank Carvell M. P. for Carleton County Liberal whip for the Maritime Provinces.

Rev. E. V. Buchanan of Second Falls who, during the past season has been erecting a handsome dwelling at that place has during the past week been moving in to it.

The St. George Band are making arrangements to hold a dance and social in the Drageorgian Hall on Monday evening. Music will be furnished by the Band, Orchestra, and a pleasant evening is assumed all attending.

Work is progressing on the Rink and it is expected everything will be in order and ready for the first hard frost. The new position on the Mahany field will be a great improvement over the old, and much easier of access by the skaters.

A meeting was held in the Basement of St. Marks Church on Wednesday evening in the interest of the Laymen's Missionary Movement which was quite largely attended, and at which a short programme was given and addresses and papers by the rector and members of the congregation.

The fishing season is about over and most of the weirs are stripped or being so, the season mostly has been above the average while many have made little fortunes, others have been less successful, some barely paying their expenses but on the whole the season will go on record as one of the best for some years.

"You'll Like the Flavor."

G. E. Harbour Company, St. John, are to be congratulated on their selection of "YOU'LL LIKE THE FLAVOR" as an advertising slogan for "King Cole" Tea. Of all the nice things that could be said in four words about a brand of tea, surely there is none more impressive than this one "YOU'LL LIKE THE FLAVOR," and just as soon as we can, we are going to try a cup of "King Cole" to see for ourselves that it is really true that everybody ought to like the flavor.

As noticed last issue the marriage of Miss Grace L. Johnson daughter of Capt. Chas. Johnson to J. Ward Dick took place at the home of the bride here on Wednesday 1 p. m., the happy couple leaving by the afternoon train for their future home in the far west.

For the winter they will reside at High River the groom's ranch being about 40 miles from that place.

At the station a very large crowd (apparently most from the town) assembled to bid their farewell. The bride was one of the most popular young ladies of the town and all very much regrets her departure from the town and the friends of her life, while wishing her and her partner success and happiness in their new surroundings.

St. Stephen Buildings in Flames.

(Special to the St. J. Standard)
St. Stephen, Nov. 22 One of the worst fires that this town has experienced was discovered at midnight in the stables conducted by Archie Johnson, near the corner of King and Prince William streets and despite the hard work of the St. Stephen fire department with that from Calais Me., Milltown Me. and Milltown N. B., it was 2.30 o'clock this morning before the fire was got under control. At this time seven buildings had been destroyed along with seven horses, and the loss is estimated at about $60,000 and only partially covered by insurance. Adjoining the Johnson stables was John Manuel's blacksmith shop and carriage store and this was soon at the mercy of the flames from the John stables, which is better known as the Hardy and Bridges' stables.

The fire went north to Fred Rose's general store, which is adjoined by a grist mill for his own use. From the mill the fire went to the Lawlor House, which is a country boarding house owned by Jas. McGrath. This building and large stable in the rear were burned.

The fire then went south to the building owned by S. M. Murchie and occupied on the lower floor by Frank M. Carter as a meat market and on the second floor as a dwelling by Mrs. Logan.

From this building the fire went to the adjoining building owned by T. F. McKenna and on the lower floor as a ware house. The building was also occupied by the Murchie Wrapper Co.

The fire was stopped there by a very hard fight which saved Peter P. McKenna's building. Other buildings saved were the St. Croix Soap Factory and a large stable owned by Peter McKenna.

All of the seven buildings destroyed, were wooden and were burned flat to the ground.

Fred Rose is probably the heaviest loser, the amount being about $25,000 he having it only about two thirds insured.

F. M. Murchie's loss will exceed $5,000 Among the seven horses lost in the Hardy and Bridges boarding station, was a valuable mare owned by Dr. B. Sullivan.

When the fire was discovered the flames had control of the building. An alarm was quickly sent in and the St. Stephen fire department responded, but the fire had such a hold on the buildings that it was quickly seen by the chief that he would need assistance from his Calais friends as well as the two Milltown brigades. He quickly sent in an alarm for their aid.

A large number of streams were turned on the flames, but they could not stop their advance. The fire worked its way from one building to another. The flames lighted up the sky and thousands of people from both sides of the St. Croix turned out of their houses and gathered as near to the fire as possible.

It was only a short time after the fire had been discovered, when the flames had worked through the Rose store and into the grist mill, and the water that poured on it by the firemen was without much effect. In a short time these buildings with their entire stock were a complete loss.

At 1 o'clock this morning the fire was threatening the St. Croix Factory and every effort was being made by the firemen from the four towns along with the citizens, to save the factory, but an hour after the fire was under control.

Aroostook Cut Will be Greatly Reduced.

Bangor, Me., Nov. 21--The Aroostook log cut this winter will show a decrease of about 70 per cent., according to lumbermen conversant with the situation, who say that the operations in Northern Maine will cut only about one-third of the timber harvest of former years.

Three factors, the lumber market, which has been off this season, and which causes some curtailment; the fact that many operators had logs to the extent of 10,000,000 feet hung up on the drive in St. John and other Aroostook county rivers, because of the low pitch of water, and the repeal of the Pike law, which went into effect in August, and which puts a duty of $1.25 a thousand feet on American lumber manufactured in New Brunswick--are responsible for the decreased timber cut.

The Eastport correspondent of the Bangor Commercial says that officials of the Seacoast Canning Co. of Eastport are interested with prominent residents of St. Andrews in the erection of a large sardine plant at Chamcook, N. B.--Talk of this kind has been going on for years past. It has been rumored that a $500,000 plant, including can making, packing and fertilizing works, with cottages for 1000 or more work-people, was to be established at Ross's Point, Chamcook, also that leading C. P. R. magnates were associated in the enterprise, and that markets for the product of the factory were to be sought in Australia, South America, West Indies, etc., but the men who are supposed to be promoting the mammoth say that no company has been formed and that much of the talk is premature. Beyond the acquirement of some valuable properties at Chamcook little has been done toward the rumored enterprise, and it would not surprise anyone if the whole scheme assumed an entirely different shape before it was through.--Beacon.

Big Contract Awarded.

Weeks ago the Globe announced that Mr. Michael Connolly was the lowest tender for the new wharf in Carleton. Now comes announcement that the new government has decided to go on with the work and has accepted Mr. Connolly's tender. Mr. T. P. Charlson, is associated with Mr. Connolly in the work. The job, as the Globe has pointed out, is a big one, involving an expenditure by the government of more than a million dollars. It will give practically two new berths, for there is to be a 500 foot berth addition to the C. P. R. wharf, so called on the harbor front, making that one of the best berths, and an 880 foot berth running inward from the end of the extended C. P. R. wharf towards Beateav's Rocks, with a head piece 300 feet long, which will act as a retaining wall to keep in place the dredged material, which will be dumped behind the new wharf to fill in and build up the section to be used by the C. P. R. as a yard. The new wharf is to be of birch, with a concrete superstructure, and will be the first construction in St. John along the new lines.

How Berlin Lives.

(New York Sun.)
The foreigner in Berlin is usually astonished at finding restaurants after restaurants, large and small, filled nightly, although the cost of living at them must be considerably greater than if the meal were taken at home. The crowding of the restaurants is largely explained by the fact that only the rich classes of Berlin society "eat warm" in the evening.

The great bulk of the middle classes content themselves for the evening meal with bread and butter and a dish of cold meat composed of sausage, ham, pickled herring and cheese. The meal is never very cheering or satisfying, and the result is that occasion is taken as often as possible to seek outside the warm and substantial food which is lacking at home.

The reason for the almost universal cold buffet is not only economy but also the desire to avoid the trouble the preparation of a substantial warm meal entails. The objection is all the more intelligible since most German families have only one maid of all work, and the mistress of the house plays a principal role in the arrangements for the daily meal. She has spent a good deal of her time in the kitchen in view of the midday dinner and has had enough of such work for the day.

Another reason for the cold buffet is that the German business man usually remains late at office and the exact time of his return is uncertain.

Awkward Position of Town of Forward.

Forward, Sask., Nov. 18 The town of Forward has been in transit to a new site a mile away. The work of moving Forward was going forward at a fairly satisfactory rate, when winter took a hand in the game, and the cold snap changed operations probably until next spring. While part of the town has been moved forward successfully to the new site and while part is still reposing in awkward lethargy on the old, another portion of the town is betwixt and between. The leading cafe of Forward succeeded in moving only about half a mile, and now stands in solitary magnificence in the centre of a snow covered, wind swept flax field. Visitors may secure certain commodities in the portion of the town on the new site. For certain articles it may be necessary to go on an exploration expedition through the fields and among the bluffs in order to find the desired emporium, Globe.

The "Philosopher Stone"

The philosopher's stone was something which the chemists of long ago were looking for. In those days they were called alchemists, alchemy being the old name for chemistry. They are the same words, al simply meaning the.

The general name of philosopher was given by other people to all who studied Nature in any of her aspects. The object of the search was to find something that would turn base metals into gold. This was really not worth aiming at, but in the search, which never succeeded, the alchemists found out all manner of chemical facts, for which we must always be indebted to them. And we must do them the justice to suppose that many of them were deeply interested in what they found out, for its own sake. The philosopher's stone would not have been worth finding for the sake of the gold, for directly gold became common it would lose its value. It has no real value in itself beyond that of a great many other metals. We are learning now that one metal can be turned into another, especially through the action of radium.

It is not certain that we shall be able to make gold for a long time yet, but radium already goes a very long way towards being what our ancestors looked for in the "philosopher's stone."

The family of a young English marquis are somewhat troubled over a romance which grew out of coronation season; the young man lost his heart to a Hindu princess, and intends to marry her. It is a new precedent for the peers. The Gaiety chorus has a rival in the Orient.

Shakespeare was asked if Hamlet was insane.

"Impossible to tell till he wrecks a bank or leaves a will," the bard replied. —Herewith the plot proceeded. —New York Press.
