PREFACE.

In presenting to their numerous readers the first volume of THE WESLEYAN, the conductors of this periodical feel that it is a duty to themselves and the public, to lay before them a few remarks in what, perhaps, might be better considered as a Postscript than a Prefaceinasmuch as it is not written until the completion of the volume. Such a document has not the advantage usually attaching to a recommendatory Preface-inasmuch as it cannot be expected to be read prior to the work itself; and therefore it cannot have the privilege of pointing out so clearly the nature and design of the work laid before the public. The volume now closed has not only been read, but a general judgment upon it must have been formed, before any prefatory explanation can have been presented.

At the same time, there is a duty to be performed which properly belongs to this part of our task. Thanks are due and are hereby presented, to numerous individuals to whom we have no other opportunity of offering our acknowledgments. These belong first to our Subscribers, who have by their patronage enabled us to proceed in an undertaking commenced without prospectus or particular profession; our first number was at once our specimen number and our prospectus; and we are pleased to be able to contrast the latter part with the former, and feel a just pride that every pledge has been more than fulfilled. The paper has been doubled in size since its commencement without any additional charge—except a trifling mail charge to country subscribers—and it now stands lower in price than any other periodical circulating through the province. We are aware that we have an advantage to sweeten the toil of compilation, which is not possessed by the editors or proprietors of similar undertakings which are more literary in their character—THE WESTERAN who bear the same distinguishing name; and there is this friendly connection, that the general readers of our periodical are mutually agreed in the cordial balief of the same views of divine truth, and of pure and undefiled religion considered under its personal aspects; and while it becomes our duty to lay these truths in successive numbers before our readers, we are well assured that there is a cordiality of feeling on every point between our own views and those of our patrons. It would be useless .o analyse the system we have pursued in the volume now complete; the Index herewith presented will amply furnish the same. But there are likewise thanks due and now most sincerely proffered, to our kind Correspondents. Some of these have been indefatigable; but where all have done so well no invidious distinctions can be madewe carnestly invite a renewal of energy for the succeeding volume from the efforts of all.

A word, perhaps, is necessary with respect to the future. While we engage that there shall be no relaxation of our endeavours to present succeeding numbers of increasing interest, we profess our reliance to be on the blessing of God, the assistance of our friends, and the candour of our readers, for the success we anticipate. We shall from time to time present Biographies of individuals distinguished in the walks of piety; and whenever it can be done, the materials for this department will be selected from the field of missionary labour, in which this periodical more particularly circulates. The Ministerial and Doctrinal departments will present concise views of Christian Theology from the best authorities-while the other depart. ments will be cultivated so far, as to enable us to give to our readers a sufficiency of general and local intelligence, as shall render the absolute necessity of taking other newspapers dispensable to our country friends, and shall at the same time warrant the expectation, that in future numbers running through a series of years, a standard library shall be presented to the families of our friends, neither deficient in interest or information, even though such library should be composed only of volumes of THE WESLEYAN.

CONVERSION AND BAPTISM OF ARUMUGA TAMBIRAN, A LEARNED BRAHMIN.

By Rev. R. Carver, Wcs. Mis.

ARUMUGA TAMBIRAN was a native of the province of Tanjore, celebrated for numerous and splendid temples, and for a population inveterately prejudiced to caste and heathen superstition. He was born of highly respectable parents; and had the advantage of what is esteemed among his countrymen, a good education. He was zealous above many, his equals, in seeking knowledge; but appears never to have been satisfied in the degradation of heather worship.

At a very early age he lost his parents, and became united to the sect of Siva, under a celebrated priest, one of his relations. After making pilgrimages of many thousand miles, and which, perhaps, have been seldom equalled even in this land of pilgrinages, be came back to the place of his birth and the first associations of his life. There he had time for reflection, In those moments when he brought to mind what he had passed through, and how all his companions who set out with him on those weary pilgrimages had perished to a man-some by fevers, others by wild beasts, and he only left alive-his spirit was agitated, and he groaned within himself with disquictude of conscience. He conversed with Native Christians, and heard the Gospel from the lips of its Ministers. He felt the appeals of the Christians against the be-

Many persons began to receive min, was with me on this visit: we conversed with Tracts, and eager enquiry for instruction was made at Tambiran; and he stated that he should have much the Mission House. Numerous conversations took trouble to escape from these Heathen Delusions; but place with the Heathen, and the Holy Spirit was evi- declared his firm resolutions carry his intentions inte dently at work among the people. During the time effect without delay, or his death among them m these things were in progress, several friends visited us: Mr. and Mrs. Dwight, of the American Mission, proceeding to Madura, remained a few days, and took a lively interest in the work among the Natives. On Whit-Sunday, I baptized two very promising adults, John and Philip; Philip had been employed in a temple in Madras, decking the idol with flowers daily: John was a disciple of Arumuga Tambiran.

Tambiran heard of the conversion and public baptism of John; and this led to the first interview between Tambiran and myself. His mind was open to conviction: he had already seen that an idol is nothing: he was exceedingly candid, and wished more instruction. He read the holy records with increasing delight, and began to make his visits more frequent to the Mission House.

And now the conflict commenced. Satan, while his goods were safe, was at peace; but a stronger than he coming to spoil his goods and rob him of what he ima gined he had already security, stirred up all his rage. The Heathen, the friends and disciples of Tambiran, were alarmed. Ther mainbed him narrowly; and it required great caution to pay us a visit, or to see our people without others being present. Numbers of Heathen attended their teacher, and scarcely ever left him alone. They engaged him in reading poetry and other heathen works; thinking, perhaps, that in having heathen ideas constantly before him, he must remain strong in superstition: but there was at work an agent, the Holy Spirit, which, though anseen, and unbelieved in by them, overthrew all their devices.

From that period she appeared to retain the peace and favour of God ; but their trials became great and multiplied. She had a small family of children ; and when her little ones were on her lap, she could only ascertain by feeling at the face of the child, whether it was crying or at ease. Mr. Hall died and when she was left a widow, there was not sufficient property to support her. But God never forsakes his people in trouble; and she experienced his care and love. A few friends raised a sufficient sum of money to form a small annuity for her life ; and a little time ago, she was removed from a life of peculiar suffering to an eternity of glory.

THE CHRISTIAN CABINET.

AFFECTING DESCRIPTION-The lost Soul-We are made for the enjoyment of eternal blessedness ; it is our high calling and destination ; and not to persue it with diligence, is to be guilty of the blackest ingratitude to the Author of our being, as well as the greatest cruelty to ourselves. To fail of such an object, to defeat the end of our existence, and in consequence of neglecting the great salvation, to sink at last under the frown of the Almighty, is a calamity which words were not invented to express, nor finite minds formed to grasp. Eternity, it is surely not necessary to remind you, invests every state, whether of bliss or of suffering, with a mysterious and awful importance, entirely its own, and is the only property in the creation which gives that weight and moment to whatever it attaches, compared to which, all sublanary joys and sorrows, all interests which know a period, fade into the most contemptible insignificance. In appreciating every other object, it is easy to exceed the proper estimate : but what, if it be lawful to indulge such a thought, what would be the funeral obsequies of a lost soul ? Where shall we find the tears fit to be wept at such a spectacle? or, could we realize the calamity in future. The tale is told-we are disappointed. Time all its extent, what tokens of commiseration and concern is gone, life is past, and to what importance has it all its extent, what tokens of commiseration and concern would be deemed equal to the occasion ? Would it suffice for the sun to veil his light, and the moon her brightness ? to cover the oce in with mourning, and the heavens with enckcloth ? Or, where the whole fabrick of nature to become animated and vocal, would it be possible for her to utter a never reduced to any practical advantage. -- If it had groan too deep, or a cry too piercing, to express the magnitude and extent of such a catastrophe 2-R. THE REFLECTOR.

We spend our years as a tale that is told .-Psalm xc. 9.

EVERY thing around us speaks of the vanity of human life. The grass and flowers, the reptiles and insects give us line upon line on this subject. But how apt are we to overlook and heedlessly pass by such lessons amidst the amusements and pursuits of hile. While we are borne along by the flood of ever rolling time, spending our years in vanity and thoughtless indifference, there is now and then a word, a thought, a groan, reminding us that we are spending our years as a tale that is told .- " The word tale sometimes signifies a groan, a breath or a thought, and it intimates the brevity, vanity and misery of human life, and may here particularly refer to the unprofitable and uncomfortable manner of spending our lives." There is an extraordinary fondness in most people, but especially in youth and children to hear tales. Even when there are no important incidents worth listening to, the mind is as eager as ever in the expectation of something that is to come. It is not what is seen, and known of human life at present, but what is anticipated, something that is before, that is expected, hoped, and cagerly sought. The story of life goes on, and every present occurrence loses its importance in view of the amounted? It is a breath and is over! The boly is left an inaminate clod! The poor soul is gone into cternity! This is a thought. In too many instances, but a floating, unsettled thought-never maturedbeen seized, examined, and usefully applied, it might have been important to him who had it, and to others.

THE WESLEYAN.

"THE WESLEWAR" is not got up in opposition to any other Periodical of the day; but to afford the Wesleyan Methodists in the Provinces of Nova Scotin and New Brunswick, an opportunity of stating and defending their doctrines and discipline, and of emdoing good.-The present Number is a fair specimen of the kind of information, which, in the absence of interesting local matter, will be found in our columns. The headings will be somewhat varied, although not in every individual number, yet in the course of publication, articles will be given, under the respective heads of BIOGRAPHY, DIVINITY, BIB-LICAL ILLUSTRATIONS, BIBLICAL CRITICISM, POETRY, LITERATURE, HISTORY, SCIENCE, MISSIONARY IN-TELLIGENCE, GENERAL INTELLIGENCE, LOCAL INTEL-LIGENCE, THE CHRISTIAN CABINET, THE WESLEY-AN, THE EXPOSITOR, LADIES' DEPARTMENT, THE Youth's DEPARTMENT, THE CHILD'S DEPARTMENT; and on various subjects, the tendency of which will be to inform the mind, improve the heart, and refine the character. It is to be hoped that the Methodist portion of the Bublic, at least, will appreciate our design, and afford that liberal patronage, which will secure the permanent publication of this Paper. The terms have been, intentionally, made so moderate as to put it within the power of almost the poorest family to take THE WESLEYAN: a respectable Subscription List may be, therefore, reasonably expected.

The preservation and growth of the spirit of piety we esteem to be most essential to our connexional prosperity, as well as to your individual security and happiness. Therefore permit us, dear brethren, to urge upon you the paramount importance of cherishing in your souls, and promoting in your respective spheres, the life, power, and sanctity of our holy religion. The great mercies of our redemption, and the rich and varied promises of the word of God, are intended to lead us to the blessed experience of a state of exalted privilege and holiness. The Gospel which is entrusted to us is "not in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assuance." The doctrines of the Gospel, whether found in the sacred writings themselves, the creeds of the church, or the exercises of the pulpit, are designed to lead the people of God to the experimental attainment of the several blessings which they exhibit and offer ; and if the doctrine he received without a correspondent possession of privilege, you will have " the form of godliness without the power." By a constant believing application to the " blood of the covenant," you will "stand" in a state of gracious acceptance with God, and in the enjoyment of the witness of the Holy Spirit. All progress in the divine life is intimately connected with the attainment and retention of this great and primary blessing. No stability of principle, growth in grace, victory over sin and the world, rich spiritual consolation, close and steady walk with God, and usefulness in the church, can be enjoyed unless you cultivate the life Conference, to address you on those great religious affectionate importunity, to exhort you to employ all

We remind you that the blessings of the Gospel. as found in the sacred records and expounded and illustrated in the writings of our venerable Founder, are clear, distinctive, and experimental. It was his great object, as it has been that of your Ministers in every period, not to organize an ecclesiastical system for its own sake, but by the mercy of God to raise up a pardoned, regenerate, holy, and happy seed, who, having served God in their generation according to his will, may transmit the same blessings to others, while they themselves pass into that " inheritance which is incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fudeth not away." It is the anxious desire of the Preachers of this Conference again to pledge themselves to these high and original designs of Providence in raising them to the ministerial and pastoral office, and to invite their beloved brethren, in every place, to unite with them to preserve in their own souls, and the societies to which they belong, the spirit of a living, experimental, and practical piety.

THE GENERALOGIES OF CHRIST.

MATT. I. 2-16; AND LUKE III. 23-38.

For a full investigation of the questions which have been raised on the genealogies of Christ given by St. Matthew and St. Luke, recourse may be had to Grotius, Hammond, Le Clere, Lighthett, Dishop Kidder. Whitby, Dr. Barrett, and others who have written at large upon them. The genealogies coincide from Abraham to David; and then so entirely differ, except in two descents, that they must be regarded as two distinct tables; and the opinion now generally admitted is that of Lightfoot, that St. Matthew gives the genealogy of Joseph, whose adopted s in Jesus was; and St. Luke, that of his virgin mother. This derives strong confirmation from the circumstance that the Jewish Eabbins in their writings call Mary the daughter of Eli. This distinction in the genealogies also serves to explain the reason why St. Luke begins his genealogy with stating that Jesus was the Supposen son of Joseph, " who was the son of Eli." The natural father of as next of kin; and though the very silence of the Jews, who, upon the premulgation of the doctrine of Christ's miraculous conception, at whatever period that was first made known, whether during our Lord's life, or immediately after his ascension, must have raised this fatal objection, if Mary had not been a descendant of David as well as Joseph, proves that this first was a subject of public notoriety; yet the matter is settled by a passage in the Gospel of St. Luke, which those who have investigated this question of the two genealogies have generally overlooked, . In Luke i. 32, where the angel makes the annunciation to Mary that she should become the mother of the Messiah, he says, " He shall be great, sand shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of HIS FATHER David,"-terms which could not have been used unless Mary herself had been David's descendant. It may be added to this, that unless it had been a matter well known and acknowledged, that Mary and Joseph were of the same house and lineage, it could have answered no end for Matthew to have copied from the public genealogical tables of the Jews the descent of Joseph from David, since he knowld closes the list of descents with an account of the conception and birth of Jesus, which declares that he was not the son of Joseph, but of Mary only. But the family relationship of Mary and Joseph being well known, the one gene-alogy which as well suited to his purpose as the other. Besides that, it had also this advantage, that it established our Lord's legal right to the throne of David. through Joseph, of whom he was the son by adoption. And this was of importance in arguing with the Jews; for although Mary was descended from David, yet, had she married into the tribe of Levi, under the same cicumstances as she married Joseph, our Lord would have been reckoned in the Jewish genealogies as of the tribe of Levi, this legal chim to the throne of Da vid could not have been maintained on the ground of descent; but having married into her own tribe, our Lord was the descendant of David, both in law and by nature.

With respect to other difficulties in those tables of descent, they are to be referred to the Jewish records and not to the evangelists who copied from them. As, however, the Jews exerted peculiar care in preserving the pedigree of their priests, and also the line of David, in which they expected the Messiah, the discre pancies are probably apparent only, and the obscurity arises from the circumstance that their mode of keeping them, as being affected by their changes of name, or the practice of bearing double names, and by their laws of succession, is now but partially known. The tables are, however, sufficiently clear to prove the only point for which they were introduced, that Jesus was the son of David, and the son of Abraham.-RICHARD WATSON.

CORRESPONDENCE.

FOR THE WESLEYAN.] ON RELIGION AS AN INWARD PRINCIPLE.

Joseph was, as Matthew states, came his son-in-law; or simply, according to the vague way in which the Hebrews used such relative terms, his Son; which is further confirmed by another instance of a son-in-law being called a son in the same table, namely, Salathiel, who is called "the Son of Nevi," that is, his son-in-law; his natural father being Jechonias.-1 Chron. iii. 17.

The only point of real importance, however, in this question is, whether Mary as well as Joseph was of proportion as the profession of religion becomes cob; but Mary being the daughter of Eli, Joseph be- fushionable, is the danger increased of piety being regarded as a mere form or ceremony. In the first ages of Christianity, the Christian religion, instead of being fashionable, was the reverse: it was opposed, in whole or in part, by every other professed religious system extant: it opened not into any flowery arena at the end of which was exhibited a prize of earthly fame or pleasure; but it exposed its followers to certain contempt, poverty, infamy, and in some instances, to death. Of the painful ills then necessarily resulting the house of David, because the Christ was indubita- from an attachment to the religion of Christ, the bly to be of the seed of David " according to the Apostle, in his Epistle to the Corinthians, has given flesh," which our Lord was not by mere virtue of his graphic sketch :-- " Even unto this present hour we both hunger and thirst, and are naked, and are buffetaway; behold all things are become new"? (2 Cor. od, and bave no certain dwelling place; and labour, working with our own hands: being reviled, we bless; being persecuted we suffer it; being defamed, we entreat; we are made as the filth of the earth, and are the offscouring of all things unto this day." 1 Coel iv. 11-13.) The fierce and dreadful persecutions, under the Roman Emperors, by which the first Christians were assailed and tormented, and by which they were frequently called upon to meet death in its most terrific forms are well known: those were days of trial, in which a person's religious principles were, indeed, put to the test: -he was not likely, under such circumstances, to profess what he did not enjoy, and in proportion as this was the case, the conclusion is generally in favour of an inward principle of grace in the heart :- though it must be acknowledged that even then some had the "form of godliness" whilst they " denied the power thereof.' But in our, times the tables are changed: the days of persecution are gone, it is to be hoped, no more to return. A profession of religion, such as it is generally regarded, subjects a person now to no particular inconvenience: it is esteemed necessary to the perfection of character: a greater insult to any one cannot be affered than to with-hold from him the title of Christian. The greater, therefore, is the liability that a mere profession of piety will be rested in as constituting the nature of religion; that forms and ceremonies, and an outward observance of certain duties will be substituted for heart-felt religion-a principle of saving operative grace, exercising its hallowing and purifying influence over the heart and extending its salutary and restraining power over the conduct-and hereby a perpetual occasion be given to the Ministers of the Sanctuary to enforce the Apostle's doctrine,-" In Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision, but a new ereature." (Gal. vi. 15.)

This then is the evil especially to be guarded against in these days of religious profession; and that there is reason for caution is evident from the fact, that a great proportion of the Christian world, so called, has actually and contentedly settled down into a mere dead, lifeless form, denying the existence of an inward principle of saving grace in the soul, and branding, without cereinony, all as fanatics or enthusiasts, who profess to enjoy a spiritual, beart-felt religion. With reason, it might be asked, what is religionswithout the inward power ?- It is only a name, a shadow, a cold lifeless corpse; and as such is worth comparatively little, nay, nothing at all, as to its heneficial bearing on man's future destiny. Forms and ceremonies, the external decencies of religion, should meet with attention,-its outward duties be practised : but all these avail nothing if the kingdom of God he not set up in the heart: separate and apart from yital, experimental godliness, they are "as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal." The ancieft Pharisees, beyond doubt, carried their charities and observance of coremonies and external duties farther than their modern progeny; but with peculiar emphasis, the assertion fell from the sacred lips of our Lord, " Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the Kingdom of God;" (Matt. v. 20) And to what does our Lord here refer but to an inward principle of piety? As an universal rule, without a solitary exception in favour of the most externally moral, the inspired Volume has decided that "the kingdom of God," only another phrase for true religion, "is not meat and drink," does not primarily consist in any outward thin; "but righteonsness and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." (Rom. xiv. 17.) Were it otherwise, why did our Saviour so solemnly declare, " the kingdom of God is within you?" (Luke xvii. 21) and the Apostle so emphatically pronounce, " If any man be in Christ," that is, a Christian, "he is a new creature: old things are passed 17.) If religion be not an inward principle, the Bi ble is a fable;-an ignis fatuus, more calculated to lead astray than to guide into the way of peace and truth. The heart is naturally depraved, " alienated from the life of God;" with an unchanged or unsane tified nature, man cannot be happy in the presence of a holy God; hence the necessity of inward holiness as a qualification for heaven. (Heb. xii. 14.) To meet the necessity of the case, provision, ample and free, is made in the atonement of Christ, and in the renewing influence of the Holy Spirit :- " Christ also loved the Church, and gave himself for il; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish." (Eph. v. 25-27.) "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost." (Titus, iii. 5.) Reader! lay this to heart! If thou art resting in an outward form of religion only, be undeceived: seek now, seek earnestly, seek repentingly, seek through faith in Christ, the soul-renovating religion of the Bible, "the kingdom of God" which " is not in word but in power." (1 Cor. iv. 20.) For "except a man be born of water and of the SFIRIT, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God." (John iii. 5.) February, 1838.

[FOR THE WESLEYAN.] THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH.

How sweet the day of rest; The Sabbath-consecrated to the Lord: Part of heaven's rest to fallen man restored, Hallowed and sanctioned by God's holy word; Oh ! 'tis supremely blest.

How sweet the house of Prayer ! How pure the bliss we feel-how free the grace, While in the warmth of rapturous joy we trace, The presence of our master fills the place, The Master, Jesus, there.

How sweet the holy joy ! Which lights the features of the aged saint, While at the throng of grace, he pours his plaint :-This joy-not glowing eloquence can paint, Nor depth of woe destroy.

Hove thy blest abode .--The earthly temple of heaven's glorious King. Where sames the tribute of their prefises bring; Even heaved seems nearer while tay love we sing, My Saviour, and my God.

What : though life's path be strewn With earth's original briers-crief and pain; What ! though in passing woes the flesh complains There still doth air eternal rest remain, Where'soriow is not known.

Then in full glery crowned. A never-ending Sabbath we shall know ; Where streams of bliss uninterrapted flow, Untailing flowers of peace perchanal grow, And endless joys abound.

THE VOICE OF PRAYER.

I HEAR it in the summer wind

I HEAD it in the summer wind, I fool it in the lightning's gleam ! A tongue in every leaf I find. A voice in every running stream. It speaks in the ensurel'd flower, With grateful incease torae on high; It echoes in the dripping shower, And breathes in midnight's breathless sky. Through all their scenes of foul and fair, presents a fervent prayer; Natur tir myriad shapes of love, Nature transmits a prayer above. Day unto day, and night to night, The eloquent appeal couvey; Flasheth the cheerful orb of light

To bid creation bend an id pray The studewy clouds of darkuess steal Along the horizon's szure cope; Bidding distracted nations kneel

To Him, the Lord of quenchloss hope To Him, who died that hope might live, And lived, eternal life to give; Who hore the pangs of death, to save

The dead from an eternal grave.

Oh ! thread you tangled coppice now, Where the sweet brier and woodbine strive : Where music drops from every bough,

Like honey from the forest-hive Where waibling birds, and humming bees,

And wild-flowers round a gushing spring, And blossoms sprinkled o'er the trees, And gorgeous insects on the wing, Unite in load the gladden'd air With melody of grateful prayer : Unite their Maker's same to bless In that brief span of happiness.

And can it be that MAN alone Forbids the tide of prayer to flow ; For whom his God forsook a throne, To ween, to bleed-a man of woe Ah ! 'tis alone the immortal soul

The heaven of heavens its destined goal That this is such in shameless sin ! Scanity permitting to intrude The faintest glean of gratitude ; And but in hours of dire despair, Responding in the voice of prayer !

THE CHILD'S DEPARTMENT.

ON IDLENESS.

Slothfulness casteth into a deep sleep; and an ille soul shall suffer hunger." Prov. x1x. 15.

AT Athens idle persons were liable to an action at law and, if found guilty, were branded with infamy. I have heard of an ancient pe ple, who would not let any one come into their city that was not skilled in some useful trade or alling ; and it is said, that the Persians required that each subject of the empire should, at the end of every year, repair to a magistrate and give an account how he had been employed.

Children are often tempted to waste their precious moments, as if God would never call them to an account for it ; they are unwilling to engage in necessary and important duties, and are an danger of contracting habits of idleness, which may injuse them for the rest of their lives. To warn my young reader against this snare; I shall, I. Point out the sin of idleness ; and II. The means of avoiding it.

I. 1. To be idle is contrary to the end for which God made us. In furnishing our bodies with members, and our souls with powers and faculties, he designed that we should be actively employed. He appointed Adam to dress the garden in which he was placed. (Gen ii. 15:) If as one observes, high extraction, a great estate, large don perfect innocence, a genius for contemplation, or a small family, could have been a reason for idleness, Adam had not been set to work. After the fall, nun's subsistence was made to depend on his labour : " In the sweat of thy face shalt thou gat bread, till thou return to the ground." 2. In the natural world every thing is in motion, working towards the end designed by its Creator. The san, moon, stars, rise and set in their courses ; the earth continues to bring forth plants and fruits ; the rivers run ; the sea ebbs and flows ; the wind blows ; and from the meanest living thing we may learn diligence. (See Prov. vi. 6-8.) So that idleness is practically condemned by every creature. 8. Idleness not only makes a person of no use in the world, but a burthan to society. In China, where the produce of the soil is only sufficient to support the inhabit it is a maxim; that if there be a man or woman in the pire who does not work, somebody must suffer hunger cold. Every one is a member of some society. city, family, and if he does not labour to promote his welfare, hangs a useless weight upon it, and weakens and con its strength : Besides.

4. Idle people are constantly exposed to temptation and always ready to enter into it. They tempt the Devil tempt them. An old writer well remarks, that if our for parents had been diligently employed in dressing the den, according to God's command, instead of talking with the serpent, they would not unhappily have been sedent into sin : how much more, he adds, is idleness now to shunned and avoided by all, since out of Paradise we every where exposed to Satan's snares.

11. How is idleness to be avoided ?

1. Endeavour to impress your hearts with a deep sens the evil of idleness. You are sent upon earth to be diligent your daty to God and man, your interest in this world a the next, require you to be so. To be idle is to ruin yo reputation, sin against God, and fall into disgrace. Every idle man is guilty of injustice and theft,-he takes and us that to which he has no right. Othors labour, and he com sumes the fruit of their toil ; which is a shame to him : h St. Paul teaches, that he who would not work, should not eat.

2. Consider the value of that time which is lost by idle ness. On its right improvement depends your salvation. Have you then a soul to save ; a hell to escape ; a heaven to secure; and can you be idle ? Is there one moment that you can afford to lose ? If you wish to know the worth of time, ask the dying sinner. But do not forget, that so you shall be in his situation, if you indulge in idleness.

3 Remember that in the days of your youth, you may called away. " The living know that they must die, the event is certain, but the time unknown. It is the indecalled away. the event is certain, but the time unknown. It is that you lent man whom death surprises. Since you know that you not not the propriety of often looking. forward to the end of life, and preparing to meet what you cannot shun. Proper views of death will rouse you diligence : and seeing there is no work, device, knowle or wisdom, in the grave, whatsoever your hand finds to you should do it with your might.

Whilst you resolve to improve your time, according to t will of God, always recollect that his blessing only a give success to your endeavours. Apply therefore for assistance by fervent prayer, offered up in the name (Christ. God will hear your si cere and earnest supplication he will send down his Holy Spirit, to enlighten your mind direct your will, and renew your affections ; you shall live in a rational and scriptural manner; serving God and you generation, according to his will Your reflections will afford you comfort, and your prospects joy. Having the toptimony of a good conscience, you will possess the pleasing hope of hearing the Judge, at the last day, address you, Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thon into the joy of thy Lord."
