

Allies May Compel a General Retreat In West-- Russians Retake Railway Junction at Kovel-- Germans Failed to Cross Over the Drina River--

GENERAL RETREAT

By Special Wire to the Courier.
NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The Paris correspondent of the New York World says:
The Allies' offensive is likely to become the most decisive movement on the western front since the present lines were established months ago. Such is the information that reaches me.
Unless the German resistance is far greater than expected at present, or German strategy dictates a change of plan, the Allies will be able to compel a retreat that must mark the end of trench warfare.

RETAKE KOVEL JUNCTION

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Discussing the Russian military situation, the morning papers attach considerable importance to the report that the Russians have retaken the important railway junction of Kovel.
The Chronicle says editorially: "It is a most startling achievement if the news is confirmed."
The report is unconfirmed, but if it is correct it is the most striking evidence yet of the Russian recovery in the south.
Declares the Times: "Neither special despatch or official reports contain anything to support the idea of so rapid an advance."

FAILED TO CROSS DRINA

NISH, Sept. 27, via London, Sept. 28.—An official report issued at the War Office says:
"Two attempts of the enemy to cross the River Drina on the night of the 23rd, under a heavy artillery fire, were repulsed, one in the direction of the Ratcha custom house and the other near Vishegrad, Bosnia."

BRITAIN GIVES HER WORD

LONDON, Sept. 28, 3:55 p.m.—"If Bulgarian mobilization should result in Bulgaria assuming an aggressive attitude on the side of our enemies, we are prepared to give our friends in the Balkans all the support in our power, in a manner which would be most welcome to them, in concert with our allies," was the pregnant announcement made by Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, in the House of Commons this afternoon.

FURTHER GAINS REPORTED

PARIS, Sept. 28, 1:40 p.m.—The new offensive movement of the Allies has resulted in a further gain in the Artois region, near Souchez, the French War Office announced to-day. Additional progress is reported in Champagne.
The German counter-attack in the Argonne is said to have been repulsed. The Germans left the ground before the trenches covered with dead. The Germans are offering determined resistance in Champagne. The positions to which they have retreated are protected by a system of barbed wire entanglements.

PREMIER BORDEN ADDRESSES TEN THOUSAND PEOPLE IN TORONTO, GIVING MESSAGE OF CHEER

Speech That Will be Remembered For Its Realism and Description of Battle Front—High Praise For the Soldiers.

Toronto, Sept. 28.—Citizens of Toronto accorded Sir Robert Borden a series of magnificent welcomes yesterday on the occasion of his first visit to the city since his return from England and the battlefields of Flanders.
The Premier first spoke at a civic luncheon given at the King Edward Hotel and later at the City Hall, where he was presented with an address. At night he spoke to a tremendous audience, which taxed the capacity of the vast arena.
The Premier's references to spots associated with the heroism and grit of the Canadian troops naturally evoked the most pronounced enthusiasm, and when he alluded to the historic efforts of the gas-stricken troops from the Dominion holding the vital point not for hours but for days, and saving the situation, the audience sprang to their feet and cheered with restraint.
Before proceeding with his story of conditions in Britain and near the front lines, Sir Robert Borden made appreciative references to what he had seen since returning to Canada. "I had the privilege," he said, "of seeing in the camp at Niagara a force of 14,000 men, largely gathered from Toronto and Hamilton and the surrounding country, as well as Northern Ontario. During the past three or four months I have seen great bodies of troops, both in Great Britain and

Lieut. J. R. Cornelius of the 38th Goes Off With the 58th Battalion.

Mr. J. R. Cornelius, the organist at the Park Baptist Church, the popular organist of the patriotic concert of last winter, and the founder of the children's Philharmonic choir of this city, has, it was learned to-day, accepted and received an appointment for active service with the 58th Battalion (Col. Genet's Regt.).
Mr. Cornelius, who has just qualified at the provisional school for officers at Niagara, with marked success, receiving congratulations of his commandant on his high percentage of marks for the examinations. He is an officer of the 38th Dufferin Rifles, and has been patriotically engaged giving his time since his return from training in assisting the new active service company to acquire some degree of soldierly efficiency. He is a prime favorite with the soldiers, who rather relish his faculty for painstaking and vigorous action while in command.

Before coming to Brantford he was organist at London, Ontario, and previously held similar appointments in various churches in Edinburgh and neighborhood in Scotland.
A son of a soldier, he early commenced his military career and served for over eight years with the 8th Royal Scots (Queen's Brigade) and won many trophies as one of the crack shots of the corps. He took part in the famous Queen's Brigade team and was a partner with the late Lieut. Ommundsen, the Queen's prize man of 1901 in upholding the honor of the brigade as a shooting unit, on several occasions. For some years also he was identified with the Boy Brigade, one of the finest cadet movements of Britain, and retired with the rank of captain. He is well known locally, and a host of friends and well wishers in military and civil circles will wish him every success in his new career and good luck in its vicissitudes.
BROTHERS IN SERVICE
A brother of Mr. Cornelius has served with Botha during the campaign in Africa with the Rand field forces. Another brother is with a London regiment, and has several times endeavored to enlist. The family record in respect to this war is therefore extremely creditable. The mother and sisters reside at 538 Colborne street, city.

HYDRO-ELECTRIC REPORT OF REMOVING OF POLES WAS RECEIVED BY CITY COUNCIL

Several Matters Disposed of in Good Business Session Last Night--Council Will Consider Selling Old Waterous Property Next Meeting.

WHAT COUNCIL DID
1. Passed two by-laws authorizing the construction of curbstones and storm sewers, as advertised recently in the papers.
2. Appointed a committee to deal with the question of billeting soldiers here for the winter, which committee will act in conjunction with committees from the Board of Trade and Trades and Labor Council.
3. Passed a resolution condemning the Grand Trunk Railway for backing long freight trains along the Tilsonburg line, between Colborne and Grey streets, and ordered a copy of this resolution to be sent to the railway.
4. Adopted Board of Works report which calls for the repairing of pavements taken over by the city from the Westminster Company, and the repair or rebuilding of pier of the sluiceway dam at Lorne bridge.
5. Received extensive report from Hydro Electric Commission re cost of removing poles from Colborne street.
6. Brought in a notice of motion to consider at the next meeting the offer of C. J. Mitchell to purchase 50 feet of the old Waterous property on Darling street at $150 a foot.
7. Adjourned at 9:40 p.m. to meet October 12th.
The motto was "strictly business" at the regular meeting of the council last night, and as a result the few matters that came before the attention of the city fathers, were quickly dealt with and an early adjournment was possible. Following the meeting, the Mayor and aldermen gathered outside to take in the excitement of seeing his Imperial Majesty, William II, of Germany burned in effigy.
TIME LISTS PASSED
The time lists of T. Harry Jones, as follows were confirmed:
Watering and oiling to Sept. 18th, $65.26
Street department to Sept. 18th, $1,600.04
Sewers department to Sept. 18th, $1,014.95
As were also the lists of John Thresher, cemeteries, Sept. 6th to 20th, $100.80.

The board of works will also deal with communications from E. R. Peirce, who fell on the sidewalk by the G.I. R. station on Colborne street; and from Brewster & Heyd, on behalf of Edward Sears whose auto was hit by a street car. These letters claim damages from the city.
Letters from the Brantford Cordage Co. asking for a special permit for the removal of poles from Colborne street, and from Charlton & Co., re claim already in works referred to the building and grounds committee.
ALD. BRAGG WATCHFUL
The Lake Erie & Northern Railway sent in their plans for the new station and want them approved by the city. Ald. Ryerson suggested that the railway should restore the part of Jubilee Terrace it destroyed before plans be approved. Mayor Spence concurred in this suggestion. Referred to railway committee. Ald. Bragg promising to look after city's interests in this matter.
A NEW MAP NEEDED
Jackson & Co., engineers and land surveyors, wrote that the present blue print map of the city is antiquated and does not show modern conditions, and suggesting the city obtain a new one. Referred to finance committee.

German Efforts to Minimize the Campaign or Victories of Little Avail.

By Special Wire to the Courier.
New York, Sept. 28.—The London correspondent of the New York Herald this morning says:
"Despite the efforts of the Germans to minimize the great Franco-British victory on the western front, I am in a position to say, though both the London and Paris press deprecate premature rejoicing, that the results achieved are far more potential even than the victory on the Marne. The latest figures report the capture of more than twenty-three thousand men, and all the special despatches from the battle front agree that the German losses were terrific.
No doubt, as the German communication reports, there have been heavy losses in the allied armies, but the results achieved, the establishment of the moral superiority of the Franco-British forces, and the capture of nearly all the points, on the road to Lille, were worth great sacrifice."
ADVANCE WILL CONTINUE.
More than a week ago I cabled that the artillery action along the whole of the front was the prelude to a great movement which I believe has begun and which will continue, according to the judgment of the military experts here until the Germans are driven out of France and Belgium and over the Rhine.
The French are still advancing in Champagne, whilst east of Loos the British also are going forward. All the German counter-attacks—and they have been of the fiercest character owing to the stinging comments of the Kaiser on the incapacity of his generals—have broken down. To add to the feeling of jubilation, which despite the official caution, cannot be suppressed, favorable news continues to come from the eastern theatre of war to the effect that the Germans are failing to pierce the barriers at Dvinsk and are meeting with disaster among the Russian marshes, while General Ivanoff, by re-taking Kovel, and administering a smashing blow to the Austrians has compelled them, according to the very latest information, to evacuate Brody.
ITALIANS ADVANCING.
General Cadorna and his Italian army, fighting amid ice clad mountains, is also advancing slowly but steadily.
In brief, the whole character of the war has been changed, temporarily at least, by the allies' triumphs during the last few days. This explains why Bulgaria, having mobilized, now is insisting the call to the colors is only to enforce a policy of armed neutrality to protect the country from invasion. While the Bulgarians have no sympathy with the efforts to align themselves against Russia, their own creed and race, the Greeks are rallying with splendid enthusiasm, which is being intensified by the pledge of the quadruple entente to support the island kingdom with great armies of men and millions of money. Meanwhile according to a Daily Chronicle special correspondent at Bucharest, Germany is exhausting every effort to prevent Roumania from entering the conflict on the side of the allies, but if Germany violates Serbian territory the Roumanian army, as in the last Balkan war, will be found fighting side by side with the Greeks and the Serbians. Sofia knows this now, and the knowledge has had the effect of paralyzing the campaign of the pro-German war party.

EVENING CLASSES OPEN ON OCTOBER 5TH AT COLLEGIATE

Enrollment of Students Takes Place This Week From 7.30 to 9.30.

The members of the Advisory Industrial committee held a busy session last evening in the Collegiate Institute. Members present were J. C. Coles, chairman; W. N. Andrews, A. Collette, W. Lane, I. S. Armstrong, W. Lahey, A. Brandon, E. Tench, J. W. Harris, J. Adams, A. W. Burt and J. Mutter.

The evening classes will open on October 5th, and the enrollment of students takes place this week at the Collegiate Institute, when members of the committee with J. A. Mutter, the principal will be in attendance from 7.30 to 9.30, to give all necessary advice and receiving applications. A committee of Messrs. Brandon, Harris and Coles were instructed to co-operate with the principal in conducting the classes. The day industrial classes for boys has 19 members. The teacher of Domestic Science reported that she wished to extend her work, which was hindered for lack of room. To make girls efficient, home administration, sewing and other things and all she had room to teach was cooking. The committee have her report under consideration. They are also considering establishing a day industrial class for girls, at which practical home-making will be taught. The committee who have been considering the erection of a new building for technical purposes reported the great need for something to be done, and a recommendation was made to the Board of Education, that an offer be officially made to the management board of Brant Ave. Methodist church for a suitable piece of land.

The delegates who attended the recent convention of the Association for the Promotion of Industrial Training reported a discussion of the Adolescent Act took place. The committee decided to hold a special meeting to consider the act as it applies to this city.

THE REPORT.
We, your committee, appointed to attend the semi-annual conference of the Ontario Association for the promotion of industrial training, beg to submit our report. Four members attended, namely Messrs Burt, Harris, Andrews and Coles.

The session started thirty minutes late, with a short address from President Fairburn, who stated that, owing to abnormal conditions in the finances of the country, and of the fact we had been forced to slow up, and were marking time, without the intention of coming to the halt. As we were spending no public moneys, and indeed very little money at all, we could afford to occupy that position till times changed. He was followed by Dr. Hughes, who gave a splendid address, full of inspiration and manifesting the most lofty ideals.

Dr. Merchant, the Inspector of Industrial schools and classes, followed with an address showing the standing of the various communities, in their efforts to effect a system of industrial training. Of course, Toronto occupies the prominent place, in so much that a magnificent effort has culminated in the opening of a $2,000,000 technical school, which is a credit to those responsible. About six Collegiate Institute students conduct industrial classes for boys in the day time, our own being among the number. Nearly forty conduct such classes at night for six months of the year for those who have left school. This plainly shows that those who left school early have found the need of technical training, and the numbers who return to such classes shows the need of educating ourselves to the fact that a place has to be found for such purposes, and that they must be a part of the curriculum and must be enforced.

The point is that those who most need school without entering the Collegiate Institute or High School, and at the early age of 14 years. Practically two, three or four years is then wasted, as far as mental development is concerned, and when life begins in earnest, the boy finds something is missing, for he is farther back than when he left school. To obviate the danger arising out of the two years when a boy is from 14 to 16 is the problem of the educationist. An Adolescent Act has become law, but is impracticable from various reasons, but if we are to take and keep our place among the intelligent peoples of the world now striving for commercial supremacy, the education along practical lines of the products of wealth, has got to be considered immediately and sincerely.

ance, because so long neglected, or treated apathetically.

(2) That the Public Schools should give more time to manual training and domestic science, because the majority of the boys who pass through income industrial workers, and the majority of the girls become home builders.

(3) That buildings suitable for industrial training should be erected and equipped in all centres where manufacturing industries are developed.

(4) That industrial classes, where practical home science is taught, are absolutely necessary for girls.

(5) That a greater spirit of co-operation should be encouraged between the schools and the employers of labor.

(6) That legislation should be enacted making conditions of life such that education can be properly and scientifically developed.

(7) That whereas labor is mobile, the Federal authorities should supply a large portion of the money used for educating the workers.

The report was signed by J. C. Coles, W. N. Andrews, J. W. Harris and A. W. Burt.

COLLEGIATE BOY INVENTOR BUSY ON NEW SHELL

Ottawa Will Take the Matter Up in Due Course.

A Collegiate pupil is at present busy on an explosive shell whose properties, should they reach the allied front, will further alter the Kaiser's "impregnable" burrows along the Belgian frontiers. This modest youth, who desires at present to remain anonymous, has had his project under way for several months, and as early as July 17th was in touch with the Department of Militia and Defence regarding it. At that date he was advised to forward specifications to the department where the artillery experts would pass judgment on it. They did not entirely veto its originality, and requested that a model be constructed and forwarded, and if the shell is a success they will be able to handle it.

The youthful inventor is at present quite busy on this scheme, the chemical apparatuses of his Alma Mater and equipment being at his disposal each day for the purpose of compiling this clever explosive project.

In a few days he hopes to have it completed and forwarded to Ottawa when further details will be forthcoming.

TIMES SCORES HYPHENATES AND THE PACIFICISTS

In Discussing Interest Rate of New Allied War Loan.

By Special Wire to the Courier.
London, Sept. 28.—Complaint is voiced by the financial correspondent of "The Times" because of strong opposition to the Franco-British loan from various quarters in the United States, such as German communities and the Pacificists. He asserts that this opposition has had the effect of raising the terms for the loan and says that if the report that the interest rate is to be 5 1/2 per cent is correct, it certainly will be higher than had been expected.

In an editorial on the same subject "The Times" says: "In view of German falsehoods and insinuations we think it well to put it on record that in this matter Great Britain and France are not seeking a financial favor from the United States. The loan is purely a matter of mutual accommodation. A loan on reasonable terms unquestionably is the most desirable solution of the problem. There are, however, other solutions to which the allies could have recourse. In the long run they would be far less favorable to the Americans than the advance of a loan for they might easily lead to restrictions in non-essentials and to the transfer of gold in payment for essentials."

COVERED WITH MUD

All of the wounded who have arrived here, were covered from head to foot with chalky mud. Most of them were wearing the new light steel helmets, which they declared had saved thousands of lives. One who had no helmet and whose head was cut by a glancing machine gun bullet said:

"In the thickest of the infantry attack, I arrived with my company at the German artillery positions. Gunners, mixed up with infantrymen, huddled around the pieces. All of them surrendered. Our artillery had completely stupified them."

TUESDAY, SEPT. 28, 1914

THE SITUATION.

Over the Courier leased wire today, there comes the story of further successes for the Allies. There has been still more advance in the Artois and Champagne regions, and the Russians have taken a railway centre.

The British and the French continue to hold what they gained by the memorable advance of Saturday and Sunday, and counter attacks by the enemy have been repulsed with very severe losses to the foe. The casualties of the Allies will, of course, also be heavy, but results have fully warranted the offensive movement.

The Germans, in their official report and in their newspapers, attempt disparagement of what has been accomplished. This is a characteristic course upon their part. They cannot, however, deny the advance or the fact that positions which were deemed to be impregnable after long months of preparation, were taken with an onrush which could not be denied. The entire outcome has served as a notice to the world that the Allies not only mean business, but that they are each day becoming more and more capable of discharging the task ahead of them—the complete and final smashing of Kaiserism and all that the term involves.

As upon every occasion of his public appearance, since his memorable visit to the Old Land and the front, Premier Borden was last night accorded a magnificent demonstration in Toronto. His speeches since his return have been upon a very high plane, and he has studiously avoided anything of a controversial nature. Sir Robert is one of the first statesmen of the day, not only in a Canadian, but also in an Empire sense. He is discharging the duties of a most onerous period in a way to rightly earn the unstinted thanks and gratitude of people of all classes and of political belief.

THE AMERICAN LOAN.

The fact is worth emphasizing that since the war started the export of munitions from the United States has only formed a small part of the total volume of figures in this regard. The record for the port of New York for the week ending September 11 shows that if the exports of cartridges went up from $14,771 to $257,053, the exports of dry goods went up from $150,583 to $856,231. If firearms went up from $17,245 to $191,204, cotton cloth went up from $210,193 to $534,424. If copper ingots increased by some $540,000 and copper wire by some $112,000, hardware increased by some $110,000 and leather by some $70,000, if manufacturers of brass—assuming that they were intended for direct use in war—increased by some $223,000, and likewise manufactures of iron and steel by more than $1,350,000, oil cake went up $214,000, cottonseed oil $234,000, and oleo nearly $500,000, while shoes went up $176,000 and sugar some $550,000.

It will thus be seen that the loan affects general exportations far more than it does war material. Great Britain and France are not begging in this matter. American rejection of the loan would not in any sense cripple them; but it would be a very serious extent damage the commercial and other interests of our neighbors. Moreover it has been a rule of all wars that outside nations can sell as much as they like to belligerent peoples, the matter of delivery proving the only stumbling block as in the case of Germany at present, for the simple reason that John Bull has a strangle hold on the seas and the routes of commerce. Germany did not hesitate to freely send war material to the Boers when they were fighting Great Britain, but in characteristic fashion she is yelling now because other peoples, and the United States in particular, are helping the needs of the Allies.

THE RETURN OF CONFIDENCE.

As a writer in the Montreal Mail points out in these days of restricted credits, it is good to note that the municipal and provincial credit of the Dominion remains unshaken by the war. No less than $30,000,000 of Canadian municipal bonds and $73,000,000 of provincial government bonds, have been placed on the United States market, and disposed of without difficulty since the commencement of the war. In addition to these there have been issues by railway companies to the value of $13,000,000, and by public utility corporations, $14,000,000.

Canadian bonds have also been placed in Great Britain for a nominal value of $47,000,000, and in this country for $39,000,000, giving a grand total of Canadian issues of more than $200,000,000, and that in the midst of the most serious financial crisis this country has ever known.

It will be generally recognized as an extremely satisfactory showing, and should help to strengthen the feeling of confidence which is daily becoming more apparent in all circles of commercial and financial activity. There are those who argue that a good market for bonds is sympathetic of a bad market for other issues, just as, in Britain, a rise in the price of consols is regarded by some authorities as a signal of industrial stagnation, because people buy bonds and consols when they are not sufficiently assured to venture into the industrial markets, but the circumstances do not altogether warrant that standpoint.

The general public will prefer to see in the brisk demand for municipal and other similar issues, especially on such a large scale as Canada has been able to sell them during the war period, a symptom of absolute confidence in the integral stability of the country and the first stage towards a resumption of confidence on a broader scale. The extraordinary demand for war supplies, covering so large a field of industrial activity, is another cause for confidence, and one that is sufficiently permanent to side manufacturers over the period of activity in other directions.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

The Allies are able to keep up the good news.

Hats off to the Russians in the matter of come-backing.

The fall opening on the part of the Allies was the finest of the kind yet recorded anywhere.

Berlin claims that the Allies have been checked. Seized the checks to a vast amount of German munition, baggage as it were.

The German Crown Prince almost more than any other individual in the Fatherland was crazy to try his hand at the war game. He knows better now.

Sir Robert Borden has done his share in the great national effort, and has done it well. But for his personal visit to the armies in France and Belgium he could not have infused into his remarks that personal element which most touched his audience. The sights and sounds of the most frightful of all battlefields the world has ever seen, or is likely to see, have so genuinely affected him that he was able to make his hearers realize for themselves the moving impressions conveyed in his address. — Extract from Toronto Globe editorial.

PREMIER BORDEN

whom he had reviewed at Shorncliffe, Sir Robert quoted the statement of Sir Archibald Murray, a British general, who had witnessed the ceremony. The latter said: "Among the four hundred or five hundred thousand men of the new army I have had under review, I have never seen a finer body of men than the Canadians at Shorncliffe." Major-General Sam Steele also had asserted that among the men at Shorncliffe there was an entire absence of crime and that he did not believe there were in the United Kingdom 33,000 men who were better behaved or who treated the inhabitants of the country better. Another officer had been much struck by the consideration shown by the Canadian Mounted Rifles at Canterbury for the people of the neighborhood. "I felt very proud," said Sir Robert, "and I am very glad to be able to bring back this message—from men who knew about the men who were at Shorncliffe, many of whom have since gone to the front, and who will do their duty with as great distinction to themselves and to Canada as did the first contingent." (Applause.)

TRIP TO FRANCE
 The Prime Minister commenced the narrative of his trip to France and the battle front. At Boulogne, whither he went in a stroyer, he had visited four Canadian and one British hospital and had planted maple seeds on the graves of some fallen Canadians. "It was," he said, "a great honor to do so. We in Canada have given of our best and are still giving of our best. I know that the memory of those who have fallen is very dear indeed to you in this City of Toronto. Splendid men sprang forward at the first call of duty and went to the front in a great cause. Their memory will not be forgotten by the people of to-day, and I hope by the people of generations to come." Proceeding Sir Robert then described the great achievement of the Canadian troops on that historic ground. "That," he declared, "will be something for Canadians to remember in the days to come. And the day when Canadians forget that exploit will be the day when the name of Canada should no longer exist." (Applause.)

Sir Robert then told of meeting General Alderson and his staff. "There was then a Canadian division at the front," he said. "There is now a Canadian army corps at the front, and that corps will distinguish itself as did the first Canadian division." At the front lines the Prime Minister had the privilege of speaking to the Canadians on duty.

"It was a very great privilege to tell them of the pride which thrilled every Canadian heart when the tidings came across the ocean of the heroic deeds they had done." Sir Robert found the Canadians well and cheerful and quite ready to do their full duty, no matter what the cost. While he was at the front everything was quiet, the only event being the explosion of a German mine that did no damage. He had visited the army camp at Ploegstreet Wood and had witnessed an exhibition of Canadian artillery precision. While the Canadian Premier was in the wood the 18-pound battery fired 20 rounds and entirely demolished four buildings used by German observers.

MET THE LEADERS
 Sir Robert told of meeting General French and General Joffre. "Addressing him one cannot wonder at the confidence placed in him by the whole French nation," he said. The Prime Minister prefaced his recital of his visit to the French lines by an enthusiastic tribute to the wonderful spirit of the French nation.

"It is really a great thing to see a nation in arms, consecrated to a great purpose, as the French nation has consecrated itself, to-day," he said. "We saw what universal military service means in France. The soil of France has been cultivated right up to the firing line, but that work has been done by old men, women and children. We saw what universal military service means when we saw the son of the French ambassador to one of the great nations serving as military chauffeur to General Joffre." Sir Robert told of his visit to the hospitals in France and England and of the undaunted courage of the wounded men. He had found it impossible to visit all the Canadian wounded, since they had been scattered through 143 hospitals and convalescent homes, but he had visited between 40 and 50 hospitals.

The Prime Minister paid tribute to the troops of the other dominions, the troops of India and particularly those of South Africa, who had done so much in their own theatre of war. The tremendous strength of the German Empire in equipment, in resources and in preparedness was emphasized by the Prime Minister in pointing out the resources of men of the Empire and the allied nations.

"But it will not do for us in this Empire to make our men take the place of artillery and machine guns," he said, amid applause. "They must fight on equal terms, and if they fight on equal terms, I know from the men themselves that man for man, company for company, regiment for regiment, they deem themselves to be the match and perhaps a little more than a match for the men against whom we are sending them."

"We have had to pay since the commencement of this war, both in men and resources, for our lack of preparation. I am implying no censure of any Government or group of men in the Motherland or elsewhere. I am disposed to think this lack of preparation is perhaps inherent in the form of government which we prize and justly prize. The question that we have to consider is whether adequate steps are being taken at the present time, whether we are doing everything that can be done to give our men fair play at the front."

Sir Robert stated that while in England he consulted the highest authorities to find out if adequate measures were being taken. The result was all that could be desired. "I can say to you," he said, "that the steps which are now being taken are all that we could desire for that purpose, that the British Government have undertaken preparations which I have every confidence will bear great results in the immediate future."

Sir Robert sounded a note of optimism. "If the nations of this Empire within the next few months put forward every effort which can be put forward, there can be absolutely no doubt in the mind of any man as to what the issue of this great war will be. This is not a time for criticism or lamentation over the mistakes that may have been made here and there. It is a time for inflexible determination to carry on this great war to a conclusion. That is the duty before us. That is the duty I am sure the Empire will perform."

Sir Robert brought from King George, from President Poincare of France, Gen. Joffre and from Gen. French a warm appreciation of the help the Canadian troops had given.

"We in Canada have done our duty fairly well; we shall continue to do our duty, to send men to the front. We shall watch the performances of these men, confident in the knowledge that they will do their duty, no matter what test of ordeal may come to them. And the memory of the work of our men at the front, the memory of the heroic deeds already performed and those that will be performed will always remain in our minds and will always remain in our hearts. As far as we are concerned there is no need for any memorial, no need that we should raise any monument to the memory of those who have made the supreme sacrifice. The memory of what they have done will always remain in the hearts of the Canadian people of this generation at least, and of generations to come. But it is my desire and I hope it will be the desire of the Canadian people, as it is my desire, that some splendid monument should be erected in this country, perhaps in the capital of our country, which will commemorate the deeds of the men who responded so splendidly to the call of duty, to the memory of the men who made the supreme sacrifice for Canada and the Empire and to those who come back from the conflict, to be honored from one end of the country to the other. And, lastly, it is my hope and my intention, as well as that of those who have been maimed and disabled in this war shall be provided for as the people of Canada would have that done. (Applause.) So my last word to you is a word of good cheer, a word of hope, a word of confidence, a word of belief that the great cause in which we are engaged—a cause which involves not only the future of our Dominion and our Empire, but the future of civilization, of humanity, of the world itself—cannot fail." (Cheers.)

MARKS COMPANY GREETED BY A LARGE AUDIENCE

The name of May Bell Marks seems to signify a packed house.

The May Bell Marks Co. opened what promises to be a successful week's engagement last night to a large audience, the house being sold out. The play "Held By the Enemy," a comedy drama in four acts, was well staged and acted. May A. Bell Marks won instant favor. She possesses a clear, resonant voice which carries well and is a restrained graceful actress. She had excellent support, and the performance went with a vim and snap that was pleasant to see. Pleading vaudeville filled the waits between the acts.

This season Mr. R. W. Marks has surrounded May A. Bell Marks with the best all round stock company that he has ever brought to Brantford, and the intense interest displayed by the large audience show that this class of entertainment is what is wanted. To-night's play is "Woman Against Woman," and is said to be one of the company's best bills.

Throughout the courtesy of the manager, Mr. J. Whitaker, the Battery was present and enjoyed the performance.

Y.M.C.A. AUXILIARY.

The first meeting of the season of the Women's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. was well attended yesterday afternoon. Mrs. C. Cook, president, was in the chair, and Miss Simmons, the secretary, enumerated the items of the previous meeting. Reference was made by Mrs. Cook to the great loss to the Auxiliary in the passing of a most useful and valued member, Mrs. Detwiler, whose death occurred in July. Mrs. Detwiler has been a pianist of the auxiliary and helpful in many other ways. Mrs. Pequegnat consented to take Mrs. Detwiler's place as pianist. Mrs. White gave the Bible reading most acceptably, and Miss Taylor sang, after which Mr. Goodwin spoke to the members about the campaign week, October 6th to 10th, which will be called "Health and Happiness Week." Baker of Washington, D.C., a very noted speaker on Y. M. C. A. matters, is to have much to do towards making it "helpful and happy" to the members of the auxiliary to make ready various campaign supporters. The Treasurer's statement showed a small balance on hand, after having donated one hundred dollars to the association for the purchase of towels, bed linen, etc. The meeting closed after deciding on plans for campaign week.

APPARENT LACK OF ACREAGE CLEARED UP

Visit Was Made to Mohawk by Civic Officials Yesterday.

Messrs. F. Cockshutt, E. L. Gould, G. Matthews, W. Glover and Mayor Spence of the Parks Board visited Mohawk Park yesterday, together with City Engineer Jones, Mrs. W. Acret, Mr. Fred Frank, trustee for the Lovejoy's estate and Mr. A. E. Watts, K.C., solicitor for the estate. After going over the City Engineer's survey and arranging to have the fence lines straightened and proper provisions made for the necessary roads, the Parks Board went more than pleased with the situation. An apparent shortage in acreage was satisfactorily cleared up. The City Engineer was instructed to stake out the proposed roads. The main one will be a continuation of Mohawk street to the lake front, and from there to meet the Locks road, making a very picturesque driveway on the east side of the city.

GREAT VICTORY BEGINNING TO SHOW RESULTS

Decided Impetus Given to Recruiting, Twelve Men Joining Yesterday.

The allied victory is beginning to have an effect on recruiting as it took a decided jump yesterday. A round dozen men signed up with the different detachments.

The 52nd Battery were guests of Manager Whittaker at the Grand last night and after the show, lined up and paraded to the Market Square. When they arrived they found the celebrations over but they soon rooted up enough material for another bonfire, and put on a second demonstration in honor of the Allied victory.

The following are the names and particulars of men who joined yesterday:

DUFFS HELD A PARADE LAST NIGHT OUTSIDE

The Dufferin Rifles held their weekly parade last night when there was a turnout of 321 members. The battalion was exercised in various platoon and company movements, by the officers commanding units. Skirmishing, extended order and other platoon work was taken up, the men showing considerable interest in the new course of instruction, as it provides an interlude from mere cut and dried training.

The parade was under the command of Capt. M. E. B. Cutcliffe, and his two field officers, Capt. Mc-Lean and Capt. W. F. Newman. The parade state was as follows: A 47; B 48; C 54; D 47; Signal 14; Stretcher Bearers 12; Paris 43; S. S. 3; S. O. 5; Band 23; Buglers 28; recruits 2. Total on parade, 331.

ALLIES AIDING GREECE SHOULD OTHERS ATTACK

Germans Playing for Support of Roumania—Ultimatum to Serbs.

London, Sept. 28.—The Daily Chronicle's Athens correspondent cables: Another piece of news made known here yesterday has given great satisfaction throughout the country. Last night the Ministers of the allied powers informed the Greek Government that their countries were ready in case of an attack on Serbia and Greece, or either, to land immediately a force amply equipped with artillery and other services, that force to be kept up to strength and reinforced as circumstances dictate.

Ministers of allied nations also informed the Greek Government that the allies will furnish all necessary financial assistance immediately. For the moment, then, attention in the Balkan situation must move from Greece, where matters may be, I think, he regarded as in order.

The position in Roumania becomes one of paramount importance, and there the Germans are putting forth all their strength in order to bring the Bucharest Government to their side. Germany's aim now is to force Roumania to side with her, and so allow troops and munitions to go through to Bulgaria across which country they would be permitted to pass.

ULTIMATUM TO SERBIA

A Berlin message yesterday states it is rumored there that Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria has served an ultimatum on Serbia, demanding the immediate cessation of Serbia Macedonia as the price of Bulgaria's continued neutrality.

In view of Bulgaria's attitude, it is reported from Berlin that the Emperor's representatives are preparing to leave Sofia.

"The Bulgarian Government has stopped railway service between Serbia and Bulgaria, and has forbidden the foreign diplomats and Consuls to use code in their telegrams. It has issued an order requiring that letters be post-dated unsealed."

The Greek mobilization is proceeding smoothly and 400,000 men are reported to be under arms. That Greece is fully prepared to fulfill her treaty obligations to Serbia and that an agreement has been reached whereby allied troops will be landed at Greek ports to strike at the Bulgarian flank and at Constantinople, is indicated in despatches reaching here.

ANGLO-FRENCH ARMY READY.

That a large Anglo-French army is in the district of Serbia is practically certain. A Paris despatch quotes Stephen Pichon, the former French Foreign Minister, as saying:

"At this moment we French and British must already have troops on shore at the terminus of the Serbian line of supplies."

Serbian aviators, who have just completed a long reconnoitering expedition, reported the presence of Austrian troops along the frontier, but say they saw no Germans. Large numbers of German troops, however, are reported to be passing through southern Germany towards Austria for use in the Balkan drive.

KAISER'S EFFIGY BURIED AMID MANY GROANS

Big Jubilation on Market Square Last Night.

Brantford last night had its jubilation over the glorious victory of the Allies on the western front and it was some jube at that.

The event took place last night at about ten o'clock after the theatres had emptied. The Dufferin Rifles regimental band swinging along Dalhousie street from the armories and playing patriotic airs, constituted the opening signal of proceedings and hundreds from the crowds in the streets fell in behind them. Many women and girls were also included in the bunch following.

On arrival at the market square the torch was put to a huge bonfire and the cheering and waving of flags. Then on a gibbet a figure of the Kaiser was hoisted amid jeers and laughter. It had been prepared by the help of the Brant Theatre and the Dufferin Rifles. The figure was the chief of the Huns, with the fierce moustachios in full force. After it had dangled there for a while it was set on fire and went up in smoke, just as the world domination hopes of the individual in question are destined to go.

Many thousands took part in the demonstration which in every respect voiced the general relief accorded by a genuine chance to cheer.

The University of Pennsylvania's showed an increase of 200 students now in progress. It is a surprise for

GERMAN CORPSES CHOKED UP RIVER AFTER RETREAT

French Charges Flung Huns Into Swift Stream, and Thousands Perished.

(By C. F. Bertelli.)

Paris, Sept. 28.—News reaching me from Champagne tells of fearful carnage among the retreating Germans. This is, in fact, one of the bloodiest of battles, and which, for the number of victims, surpasses any previous combat in French warfare. On a front of only 16 miles, 30,000 German infantry fell, which, in addition to over 20,000 prisoners, makes the total German loss more than an army corps. The suddenness and vigor of the attack are clearly illustrated by the number of guns taken. That the retreat was swift and bloody, especially north of Beaune-sur, is shown by the frightful slaughter on a hill above the Dormoise River. The impetuous rush of the oncoming Frenchmen, charging with the bayonet, drove the Germans from the crest of Hill 200 into the river below. The shouts of the victorious French mingled with the screams of the fugitive Germans as they plunged into the swift-running river, and as the current swept the Germans off their feet they clutched one another by the necks in a desperate death grip.

It is not exaggeration to say that in a few minutes the rushing stream accounted for several German companies and at certain points it could be forded across on their heaped-up bodies.

This hurried retreat, however, was saved from becoming a regular rout by the German batteries, which opened fire from the other side of the river and stayed the onrushing French, who contented themselves with retaining the important positions conquered, from which their guns could not only sweep the Dormoise Valley, but could get the lateral railroad within range. So far as infantry action was concerned, the section of the battle of Champagne towards Tahure ended here, and the opposing artillery resumed their terrific cannonade.

BRITISH TRY FLAN MOVE

While the mighty struggle is proceeding on land so far favorably to the allies, a tremendous flanking operation is being carried out by the British, of which the communiques have as yet made no mention. This development will probably prove the decisive factor in the huge attack now in progress. It is a surprise for the Germans and another triumph for the British fleet.

An operation analogous to the Dardanelles effort is being carried out on the shell-swept sands of what was once the most famous summer gambling resort in Belgium. This is a part of the huge effort the allies are making before winter sets in to cripple permanently Germany and Turkey on all fronts.

BUSY AT SEA, TOO.

Admiral Jellicoe's fleet's activities are by no means confined to the North Sea. Sections of his 3,000 ships, with French units, are even now covering operations on the shores of the Aegean and of Asia Minor. Everything points to the fact that the allies are delivering the blow for which they were preparing throughout the summer.

"A very brilliant tactical success, but not yet a strategic victory." This is the unanimous verdict of the military critics with whom I yesterday discussed the Champagne battle. Its immediate result is the massing of strong German forces north of Tahure in order to protect the lateral railroad supplying the German forces between Berry-au-Bac and the Argonne, and from which French batteries are now only two miles distant.

OFFENSIVE TO BE GENERAL.

These reinforcements are necessarily being drafted from other points on the western front where no infantry action is now in progress. The movements of these troops foreshadow other French attacks against weakened portions of the line, and it is confidently believed the offensive will become general.

At this moment the whole front is being drenched with shells and air torpedoes night and day. The swift movement of the Germans is being conducted behind a 400-mile curtain of fire, but is watched by hundreds of French aeroplanes. Never before have so many aeroplanes appeared above the huge battle line. Every hour new squadrons rise and a perpetual air battle accompanies the ceaseless roar of thousands of guns.

General Aluerson gave great praise to the Canadians after the battle of Langemarck, saying he didn't know of anything in history he could compare that battle to. The British troops cannot praise the Canadians too much. The Canadian Red Cross are doing splendid work at the front. People don't realize the seriousness of the war. Every able bodied man should enlist and be prepared to do his bit, for as much depends on the non-commissioned officers and men in this war as upon the officers."

Sergt. Jones was one of the first to be wounded at Festubert. He was struck in the head by shrapnel and was rendered unconscious. As the outcome, he lost the sight of his left eye and was badly hurt in the left hand. He was also through the South African war, but came through without a hurt.

THE G. T. R. AGAIN

Ald. Gress moved, seconded by Ald. Cuff, that the G. T. R. be condemned for backing their freight trains across the streets between Grey and Colborne streets, on the Tilsonburg line and that a copy of the resolution be sent to the local agent.

The Mayor thought the resolution wouldn't do much good; however, it was carried.

IT WORKS ON SUNDAY.

In this connection Ald. Ryerson said that the G. T. R. did too much shunting on Sunday and that it ought to be stopped.

AND THERE WAS LIGHT

On Sept. 9, E. W. J. Hunt requested that lights be placed on the east end of Northumberland street. His request was referred a few days later to the Fire and Light committee. Ald. Gress moved and Ald. Mellen seconded that the request be granted and that the Brantford Hydro-Electric commission and the fire chief be notified to that effect. Carried.

Mayor Spence promised Ald. Jennings that lights would be placed properly on Greenwich street between Oneida street and the Pumping Station.

HE WANTED TO KNOW.

Ald. Secord wanted to know if the Railway Commissioners' report on the Paris portion of the municipal line was in. Mayor Spence hadn't heard of it.

"Maybe the chairman of the Railway committee could tell me?" persisted Alderman Secord.

Ald. Bragg stated that undoubtedly a report would be presented soon, probably next meeting.

The Council then adjourned until Tuesday, October 12th, the regular night of meeting, October 11th, being the evening of Thanksgiving Day, a statutory holiday.

BOSTON WILL DEPEND ON GREAT PITCHERS

(Toronto Globe.)
There is now no question that the Boston Americans and Philadelphia Nationals will engage in the world's series which opens in about two weeks. Boston's victory over the St. Louis Browns yesterday put them within two games of clinching the pennant. There is no hope for Detroit. The Red Sox have a lead of four full games on the Tigers.
The Phillies are six and a half games in front of the Boston Braves, and that disposes of the Stallings lot. The date for the first game of the world's series has not been decided, but it will be either Friday, October 8, or the following day.
Boston's Red Sox will go into the series with as well faced the starting gun in an October Derby. Boston has had quite an alien population recently, keen-eyed gentlemen looking for weaknesses or strength.
The Tigers furnished the acid test. The series there was a world battle on a miniature scale, as on the outcome largely depended the American League pennant winner. And the world's series was as classy an exhibition of consistent baseball as was possible.

BOSTON'S RED SOX WEAK
It is an open secret in Boston, though that at third and at short there is much to be desired. Scott, a flashy young fielder, is woefully weak at bat and was inclined to be a trifle erratic under the consistent Tiger bombardment. Larry Gardner's work at third was a trifle off color the last week.
Carrigan undoubtedly is relying heavily on his pitching staff to carry him through. It is composed of young veterans—an extremely desirable class with a world's title to battle for.

White Sox Win Every Game Played in Philly
Philadelphia, Sept. 28—Chicago won the final game of its series with Philadelphia yesterday by 6 to 5. With the game won Scott eased up in the ninth and Philadelphia scored three runs on two hits, three passes and Weaver's tumble. Eccles was knocked out of the box in the third inning and Morrisette, who finished the game, allowed but one hit in the remaining six innings. Chicago won every game it played in Philadelphia this year.

Need Only Two More to Cinch the Flag

Boston, Sept. 28—The Red Sox closed the season on their home grounds with an 8 to 4 victory over St. Louis yesterday, approaching within two games of clinching the pennant. Two more Boston wins, two Detroit losses or a Red Sox victory and a Tiger defeat will decide the race in Boston's favor. Score: R. H. E. St. Louis 4 6 1 Boston 8 10 1

Russell of Richmond Easy for Cleveland

New York, Sept. 28—Cleveland made it three out of four from New York to-day by taking their last game of the season in New York by a score of 9 to 2. Russell, one of New York's recruits, was ineffective in the early innings and the visitors continued to score on Brown, who relieved him. Score: R. H. E. Cleveland 2 13 3 New York 9 10 3

Cobb's Bonehead Play Gets Him Banned

Washington, Sept. 28—Ty Cobb stole third with the base occupied by Bush in yesterday's game, which Detroit won from Washington, 7 to 3. Seeing his mistake, the Georgian star made a desperate dash back to second when Umpire Wallace called him out on a close decision he objected so strenuously that he was put out of the game. Score: R. H. E. Detroit 7 10 3 Washington 3 7 3

Cubs Crawl Out of Ruck by Winning Two

Chicago, Sept. 27—Chicago pulled out of last place yesterday by winning both games of a double header from Cincinnati by scores of 7 to 2 and 5 to 1. The first game was won in the eighth inning, when the locals bunched four hits, with two bases on balls and clinched the game. Chicago got the jump in the second game by hitting Snyder hard in the first inning. Score: R. H. E. Chicago 7 10 3 Cincinnati 2 7 0
George and Wingo; Lavelier and Wallace.

Game Played in Philly

Philadelphia, Sept. 28—Chicago won the final game of its series with Philadelphia yesterday by 6 to 5. With the game won Scott eased up in the ninth and Philadelphia scored three runs on two hits, three passes and Weaver's tumble. Eccles was knocked out of the box in the third inning and Morrisette, who finished the game, allowed but one hit in the remaining six innings. Chicago won every game it played in Philadelphia this year.

One fan came close to hitting the nail on the head the other day when he said: "If the Braves don't win the pennant, blame it on Evers. He could have helped the team by remaining in the game every day and fighting senselessly, antagonizing the umpires and the public, and he seriously injured Boston's chances in this year's pennant." Having failed to win the pennant this year with Eddie Collins, Murphy, Jackson and a few other talented young gentlemen, Old Roman Comiskey might meet with better success next year if he could add to his outfit by purchasing Cobb, Crawford, Veach, Speaker, Leonard and Foster, Johnson, Baker and Chapman. An inexhaustible supply of money, persistence and patience ought to win the American League bunting for Chicago in time.

BRITISH PEOPLE TAKE BURDENS OF BUDGET WITH CHEERFUL SPIRIT

(By T. P. O'Connor, M.P.)
London, Sept. 28—If the English take their pleasures sadly, they also take their sadness merrily. Never before in the history of Great Britain was there introduced in Parliament such a gigantic and crushing budget, but during its presentation by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Reginald McKenna, there were throughout the House of Commons manifestations of good humor.
As John Dillon remarked to me, "You'd think the chancellor was announcing a handsome honor to a serving member of the House."
The Budget thus served the double purpose of providing extraordinary financial elasticity and boundless resources for the analogies with Irish life are extraordinarily close. For instance, the Croat is a Serb just as much as the Serb, speaking the same tongue, although it is printed in a different alphabet and having the same blood. There is this momentous difference, however, that the Croat is a Catholic and the Serb an Orthodox. Until some years ago this difference of religious faith led to conflicts between the Catholic Croat and the Orthodox Serb like the conflicts between Catholics and Orangemen in Ulster. There was even the additional likeness; on certain days of the year in most of southern Hungary as in Belfast in northern Ireland, the Croat wrecked the shops of the Serbs and the Serbs wrecked the shops of the Croat.

HISTORY OF MOVEMENT.
The history of this movement is especially interesting to me as an Irishman, for the analogies with Irish life are extraordinarily close. For instance, the Croat is a Serb just as much as the Serb, speaking the same tongue, although it is printed in a different alphabet and having the same blood. There is this momentous difference, however, that the Croat is a Catholic and the Serb an Orthodox. Until some years ago this difference of religious faith led to conflicts between the Catholic Croat and the Orthodox Serb like the conflicts between Catholics and Orangemen in Ulster. There was even the additional likeness; on certain days of the year in most of southern Hungary as in Belfast in northern Ireland, the Croat wrecked the shops of the Serbs and the Serbs wrecked the shops of the Croat.

REMARKABLE RECEPTION
The reception of the budget was remarkable even afterward in the lobbies. Even the millionaires, who will have to pay only a few hundred pounds as the import duties, even though they were as cheerful as men who will have to pay only a few hundred pounds as their share. There was only one real growl and that was from the irreconcilable Free Traders who see in the import duties, even when confined to such luxuries as motors, the thin edge of Protection.

When the Chancellor announced that there would be no new tax on whisky, all eyes turned to Mr. Redmond and Mr. Dillon and to the members of the Irish party, who had come in large numbers from Ireland for the first time in many months, and the meaning smile was followed by the suggestion in the lobby that the "little finger" of the Irish party was still omnipotent in the British government.

Although every financial expert agrees that the whiskey tax is now so high as to make any increase fruitless and perilous, it was also recognized that any attempt to increase it would arouse the hostility of the Irish party, and the desire on the part of the government to conciliate Irish opinion made it pause before proposing such a tax.

There has never been a week since the Irish party came into existence which has so clearly revealed the inner power of John Redmond in its councils as the one just ended. Although the party has never been so reticent in public, apart from its incoherence in the budget, the presence of the Irish and John Dillon's speeches are the main factors in stemming the tide which has turned so strongly in favor of conscription. The movement for conscription, which was at one time within an ace of carrying Mr. Asquith and the cabinet in its rush, and with the cabinet won over it would have been a short step to rush the houses of Parliament into line.

POWERFUL SPEECHES
Mr. Dillon, however, made two of the most powerful speeches of his life, and rallied the democratic English as well as the Irish and conspired the conscriptionists to slow down.

Thus, for a moment, the conscription movement is quiescent and it is the general impression that it will never be carried. The Radicals and the Liberals, the chief opponents of the movement hold a great hope that the popular methods of recruiting which are now in use will succeed in bringing at least another million men into Kitchener's army within the next twelve months and by this result quiet the demand for drastic means for raising recruits.

The other day I received a visit from an interesting man who represents a type I had never met before. He is an Austrian Croat, who was at one time a deputy to the Hungarian Parliament in Budapest, and at that moment was an exile in London to avoid imprisonment or perhaps worse at the hands of the Austro-Hungarian authorities. He had, before reaching London, been to several other capitals of Europe where he had been received by all the chief ministers, as he was entitled to be, as the representative of a great and powerful, though in a sense, new movement, the movement of the Jugo-Slavs of Austria. Jugo means young, and this movement is the organized effort of the present generation of southern Slavs to take advantage of the upheaval in Europe to prosecute to success their long-cherished ideas.

As I heard this gentleman state thoroughly the purposes of his party I became painfully aware of more ignorance than was creditable to me in regard to one of the greatest of the new problems which this war has brought forth.

CHARACTER OF SERBIA
The first misconception of which I had to get rid, and which is so prevalent in England as elsewhere, was as to the real character of Serbia. It has been regarded by all of us as a small though heroically gallant nation, something in isolation from all the great powers and merely one of the many small states of the Balkans.

The real conception of Serbia is that it is the Motherland and the banner bearer of a race numbering some 25,000,000; that, in short, there is a small Serbia and a Greater Serbia, the Greater Serbia being outside its own frontiers.

The purpose of every single Serb of all these 25,000,000 is that out of the Europe disintegrated by the present war, all these Serbs shall be combined into one kingdom making up the greater Serbia.

For years I have been a student of Austrian newspapers and politics, and I had already learned from these papers, though they all represented German and Magyar ascendancy that Austria had not one, but a dozen Irelands, and that in all these Austrian Irelands there was practically the same problem as in my own country, namely, the substitution of native self-government for alien rule and that we should never have a free Europe until these different nationalities were given racial equality and freed alike from German and Magyar ascendancy that Austria had not one, but a dozen Irelands, and that in all these Austrian Irelands there HESTER, AND A LEGACY

She turned out the light of the lamp at her side and, going over to the window, looked out into the starry night with a passionate longing in her heart. Her thoughts were interrupted by a tap at the door, and the next instant a radiant figure entered. She could not see at first in the indistinct light who it was, but Molly Montague's voice broke upon her ear.

"Miss Philips, why are you not downstairs in the ballroom? I have come to fetch you. Come down at once, please."

"The girl came forward to the window and laid her hand on Hester's arm, looking into her face with a smile. 'I cannot,' replied Hester. 'I am not dressed—it is so late; besides, I don't know many people here.'

"That has nothing to do with it. I insist upon your coming down. It is my ball you know, and I am to be married to-morrow, and you can't refuse anything I ask. I missed you at the dance, and I looked round and saw you were not there, and came up to find you. I shall be offended, really offended, if you don't come down or take any interest in my ball."

Hester was touched. "It is very kind of you," she began, turning and taking her hand with a natural instinct to express her gratitude and forgetting for an instant the difference in their stations, "but—"

"I will allow no 'buts'! Put on your dress at once and come down. Lots of people will dance with you. Mr. Graham will for one and—oh, heaps of others! You must come. I want you!"

That was enough for Hester. No one ever wanted her for herself; her society was courted merely when she was useful or necessary. She said at once, and gratefully—

"I will come at once if you really want me."

"That is right! I can't allow you to mope up here alone. Be quick and I will find you some partners. Mind, I shall look out for you, so you dare not change your mind!"

She ran off, and left Hester to dress as quickly as she could. This was only the choice between the black gown and the white one, her wardrobe being of the simplest. But the white gown was a very pretty one, and with its lace ruffles round her shoulders and its satin ribbon round her slender waist was very becoming to it. It was unfortunate, however, that she was tired and in low spirits; her cheeks looked pale and wan, and when she placed a great bunch of red roses at her breast their brilliant coloring only seemed to make her look paler. She went downstairs at last with very mixed feelings. Among the most beautiful and well-dressed women she knew she could not shine, and Mrs. Vavasour's unkind speeches still weighed heavily at her heart. In her present mood, and with Lord Lynn's kindness—and he might possibly be kind to her—would only be an additional pain, she felt.

The scene was a gay one. The ball-room was large and opened on to a balcony leading into the gardens. Beautiful girls, laughing, whispering, whirling, met the eye at every turn; men, gloomy, staid, fierce, or frivolous, lined the walls and promenade the halls. Softly-shaded lamps, big plants, sweet-smelling flowers were in profusion, and through the midst of this scene passed Hester with mingled fear and longing in her heart. She slipped into the ballroom and sat down on a vacant seat near the door. A waltz was in progress, and Lord Lynn was dancing with the belle of the room. Hester happened to catch a glimpse of him at once, and as she did so the weight at her heart grew heavier. She watched them jealously. The lady was not only beautiful, but a perfect dancer. She moved like a fairy about the room, obedient to the slightest turn and movement of her partner.

Lord Lynn danced with an Englishman's usual gloom. This was not the light style he did not study the picturesque like Captain Lovelace or the slim like the Baron de Featherstone, but he was calm, serious, almost melancholy, but it was perfect in its way. Hester's eyes were fixed on this couple in particular when her sights were interrupted by a voice at her side.

"That is right, Miss Philips! I am glad to see you go," Mr. Graham wanted to know if he may have a dance?—and off walked the bride of to-morrow on the arm of a gay cavalier leaving her elderly bridegroom to win his way with Hester.

"May I have the honour?" he asked stiffly, offering his arm.

"I did not mean to dance; I only came down to look on," she replied. "It is very kind of you to trouble about me."

"Not at all; quite the reverse—a pleasure! You don't dance? Then let us sit here. Conversation is sometimes very pleasant when one is not like myself, an enthusiastic dancer."

They had just managed to struggle into a mild discussion on statistics of railway accidents, which Mr. Graham had brought forward and about which he evinced a calm and well-bred interest, when a voice at her side broke in at the first pause—

In a moment the tragedies on the railway went out of her head; she forgot the pompous Member of Parliament sitting at her side; she forgot that she was tired and that Mrs. Vavasour had snubbed her; she forgot everything except the fact that it was Lord Lynn who was speaking to her. She was very heady in love indeed, there was no denying that, when the mere sound of his voice put her in such a flutter.

"I am not dancing this evening," she said trying not to look perturbed. She succeeded fairly well; the room was warm, and if her cheeks looked hot she hoped it would be put down to the heat of the atmosphere.

"Not dancing? How is that?" he demanded.

"I am only looking on," she said lamely.

"You cannot come to a ball without dancing," he persisted. "Come and dance with me."

Her hot cheeks paled again and her lips quivered. There was something about the tone in which the last few words had been uttered—a something both persuasive and tender that set her heart beating fast. Just because she had no voice with which to object, she rose rather hesitantly and put her hand within his arm. It was easier to obey him than to argue with him, and in her present mood, whatever it was—and she did not quite know—she felt a strange, wonderful dream that made her feel as if she were in a fairy-land. He belonged to her alone for those few minutes, and though the morrow might bring misery, the present was hers and nothing else mattered at the time.

The waltz came to an end, and Lord Lynn led her out on the veranda. They went along the veranda, and down the steps and turned into one of the garden paths. The moon and stars were shining softly, lighting up the paths and the white ends of the closed hydrangeas on the ends of the garden. There was a garden-syringia-bushes. There was a garden-syringia-bushes. There was a garden-syringia-bushes. There was a garden-syringia-bushes.

ing (y) with the quick jealousy of love. "You know, I'd not!" he said meeting her eyes.

She looked down again and there was a little pause. After a minute or two he continued his story.

"The girl was sweet and good, but the man could not love her. He tried, but it was no use, for love is a spontaneous thing and cannot be forced. He never forgot the other girl, the one that he really loved. Her face used to rise up before him and come between him and the girl he was engaged to. He worried himself unceasingly over her reason for being unkind to him, and wondered what could have made her change so suddenly. He was thankful when the engagement was broken, and he felt himself free to see her again and force her to give her reasons. Before he could do this, however, his mother died suddenly and the circumstances entirely changed. He found himself a beggar, or something very like it, and in the few days that chance gave him of meeting the girl he cared for, his mind was too full of other matters for him to speak to her of love."

"I know that," said Hester in a low voice. "And I don't think you have done before, or you could never have thought—"

HALF BATTALION FOR BRANTFORD IS ARRANGEMENT

Ottawa, Sept. 28.—The Militia Council yesterday made the following arrangements for the quartering of troops in Ontario during the coming winter: First division—One battery in drill hall at Guelph; one battalion distributed in drill halls at Galt, Woodstock, Stratford and Chatham; one battalion St. Thomas factory building; one pioneer battalion London fair buildings.

Second division—Two battalions old Ottawa Hospital, Toronto; one battalion Hamilton drill hall; half battalion Barrie drill hall; half battalion Oshawa drill hall; three battalions and three batteries Toronto Exhibition buildings; one company Collingwood; one at Orillia and one-half battalion at Brantford.

Third division—One battalion old Ottawa Hospital, Toronto; one Mackenzie buildings; 400 engineers, Ottawa Exhibition buildings, Ottawa; three batteries Kingston drill hall; two companies each at Peterboro and Belleville drill halls and one company each at Lindsay, Cobourg, Picton and Napanee.

Following this devastation was an impromptu program of songs and a cornet solo, all by talent in the Battery. In the midst of the proceedings Mayor Spence appeared and made a short speech and was cheered to the echo. About 5.45 the meeting dispersed.

Thanks are due to Mr. Hawley for his great kindness, also to Halloran and Co., McPhail Bros. and Frank O'Riley for donating cigars and cigarettes and T. E. Emerson for the gift of two baskets of peaches.

city on the C. P. R. train from New York, which was delayed at the scene of the wreck a short time. Following are the Americans injured: Mrs. C. Silver, Montpelier, Vermont; three ribs broken; at Carls-Rite Hotel.

Miss Carry Silver; hands lacerated and slight bruises.

Miss Cynthia Silver; hands bruised and cut.

Mrs. D. Furness, 822 Lawrence Ave., Chicago Ill., bruise on right knee.

Mrs. J. Simpson, Westmont, Montreal; bump on head and bruised shoulders.

Miss Simpson; muscles in back strained.

Edwin Stansbury of Chicago; bruised hip.

Mrs. D. W. Tobey, Rochelle, Ill.; bruised head and complains of nervousness.

Mrs. A. C. Bradley, Minneapolis, cut and badly bruised, suffering from nervous shock; at King Edward Hotel.

Charles Taylor of Chicago, sleeping car porter, was taken to Grace Hospital, suffering from a fracture of the right shoulder. His face and hands were also badly cut by flying glass.

This was the second time within twenty-four hours that the International Union wrecked, the first occurring on Sunday near Newtonville, when the flyer jumped the track. The engineer was killed and several passengers slightly injured. In yesterday's wreck the car, an observation compartment coach, jumped clear of the tracks and plowed its way into the ditch, but did not roll over on its side.

HAD BEEN VISITING IN BRANTFORD.

Mrs. Simpson above referred to is the mother of Mrs. (Key) Jenkins of Brantford, and Miss Simpson, a sister. They had just left Brantford after a three weeks' visit at St. Jude's Rectory, and had made many friends while here. At last reports their condition was reported to be reassuring.

The citizens of Cliffside Park, near Hackensack, N.J., threaten to issue a "jag list" there.
