verses—I was so anxious to tell you that she's actually had some printed! Just sent 'em to a Cincinnati paper, and the next week they came out. Think of it! Eveline and I just set down and cried—we were so pleased." James Herrick was trying his horse. He made a sound expressive of only a limited satisfaction in his sister's announcement.

Then he took up the butter-jar and followed them into the house. Beyond the entry, a large table stood in which two girls were sewing. A cutting-table and the various furniture of a dressmaking establishment were heaped also. And through two windows in the back of the apartment a vista of garden showed in a shady reach of low fruit trees and grape-vines and rose bushes and hollyhocks and beehives.

"Just step out and call Freda, brother James," requested Harriet. "We're right busy to-day. Miss Larkin's wedding is on Monday, and we're bound to finish off her things to-day. Freda's out there under the trees. I argued with her to go out and sit in the sunshine for a spell. Seems like she doesn't get air enough, being housed up all week in school. I'd rather stay in and help you," says she. "Is, honey," I told her, "all 'Brelina and I want you to do is just to keep your health and improve your mind." I tell you, James, nobody knows what sunshine she's been to us! Ever since brother John died and left us his little girl, she's been more to us than tongue can tell."

"Well," said Mr. Herrick, unconsciously, "I maintain that you humor her too much for her own good. You've raised her in idleness. But I'll have nothing to say if she takes right hold and helps y'all when she leaves school."

Harriet's little face stiffened.

"We don't want she should help us."

Eveline's soft eyes flashed.

"We want she should rest and read and—and commune with nature so to fit herself for the life of distinction—distinction, brother James, which we feel is before the child."

"Well, there 'tis!" rasped out Mr. Herrick. "You humor her."

"No, brother James. You don't understand. We only want she should cultivate her talents. I reckon you've no fault to find with that!"

"H'm! I don't hold with folks cultivatin' their talents at the expense of everybody else's comfort. But I ain't trying to interfere with you girls. And I'm as fond of Freda as any person. Where'd you say she was? All right, I'll find her." He stepped into the yard.

All about the back porch numbers of fantail pigeons were parading, puffing their throats in an arrogant fashion and displaying feet that were like little sprays of red coral. Up under the eaves a row of pigeon-houses stretched their tiny doors. Here, too, was the flash of white plumage. And among the gathering about porch and eaves and dim garden spaces, a few doves bent their burished necks and called to one another in a perpetual sobbing cadence.

"Howdy, Sis Harriet and Eveline," said he, lifting aside a small jar of butter. "How y'all doing?"

"Oh, we're as well as common, brother James! Mighty glad you stopped. Jinny well? The farm must be looking mighty pretty these days."

"Well, I've nothing to complain of. Here's some eggs and things Jinny sent y'all. And a bunch of flowers for Freda. Where is Freda, anyway? and how's she doing?"

"Freda—well, to tell you the truth, brother, she's a little mite pale. She studies too close. Eveline and I have to fahly weedle her from her books. We do so."

"Hoh! Study won't hurt her none. She's well and strong. Let's see—she's sixteen, ain't she? Well, you've pampered her right smart, girls. I've only hope you haven't spoiled her so she won't be any use to y'all when she graduates from school this June. That's all I hope, girls. Mebbe she'll realize all our hopes. I d'know. They tell me she's a good scholar."

"She is, indeed!" cried the old ladies, in a breath. "She's a fine pupil."

"And gifted," added Eveline, with a proud accent.

"Oh, very!" supplemented Harriet. "Why, James, her essays are considered quite remarkable. And as for

The Voice of the Turtle.

It was a country buggy, whose ribbed, ancient top, heavy with dust, was honey-combed from the droppings of bygone rains. It squeaked and mumbled in the querulous way of age, as it labored up the street behind a plump red horse, also old, but carrying his age more comfortably than the inanimate companion of his travels.

The driver, who was plump and red and elderly too, held the reins slack as he directed his eyes at the row of cottages on the right of the road.

"I reckon you know where to stop, Billy?" he said to the horse.

Billy snuffed out a damp breath and tossed his mane with an air of knowing a thing or two. Then he trotted briskly toward the mossy curb, and drew up before a long, old house with one dormer window blinking sleepily in its slant roof.

A strip of yard stretched greenly before the neat doorway. May we well forward, and the air was fresh with the smell of grass and leaves and flowering things.

A great elm rose just behind the house, tossing webs of pale green fall above the chimneys and away up into the mixing blue and white of the sky. From somewhere close by came a soft, reiterated murmuring—the confused cooing of doves.

Suddenly the house door opened disclosing two old women whose faces expressed pleased greeting. Each had on a quiet-black silk apron, and each wore at her belt a housewife arrangement of ribbons and pincushion. The white locks of one were crowned with a black and purple cap. The other woman was younger, with a gloss of thin, silvery hair on her temples. Both had delicately wrinkled faces, gentle eyes, prim little mouths, and small chins which, as the two women nodded and smiled at the man in the buggy, drew their crumpled throats into networks of white wrinkles.

"Howdy, Sis Harriet and Eveline," said he, lifting aside a small jar of butter. "How y'all doing?"

"Oh, we're as well as common, brother James! Mighty glad you stopped. Jinny well? The farm must be looking mighty pretty these days."

The next morning as she stopped in the post office on her way to the high school a letter was handed her. She set down her books on the window ledge and tremulously tore off the envelope. It was not a long letter, and it was written in the peculiarly unsympathetic characters of a typewriter; but Freda's eyes blurred in a rush of ecstasy as she read it. For there was hope in it.

The editor said that her name had come to him just when there chanced to be—as so seldom chanced—an opportunity in his office of the humble kind she spoke of. It involved, he said, the addressing of envelopes rather than the writing of letters. But since she wanted to begin at the beginning, it might suit her to try it. He stated, further, that the work was not heavy, though rather monotonous; and he mentioned the salary which the paper would pay.

That was all; but Freda went forth filled with a sort of rapture. Distinctly here was the first round of the ladder of glory waiting for her foot. She passed the day in a kind of trance, now and then thinking how she should tell her aunts of her good fortune. At first it seemed easy enough to tell them—easy enough to ask them to rejoice with her in this opportunity which had opened to her. But the more she thought of the two old ladies the less easy it grew to frame the sentences which should inform them.

She began to dread it, to desire to put off as long as might be the moment when she must witness their amazement in the news and their pain in the idea of losing her. With an object of delay Freda went home from school by a roundabout way which led over a wooded hill on the skirts of the northern Kentucky town.

The sun was getting low as she came to the bottom of the rise. All toward the southern valley, where the town lay, a serene amber glow spread far and wide. Northward were long reaches of rolling blue-grass stretching off and off to the world of her hopes. Above her was a dense shade of slim cedars, through which a beaming light wavered in slender shafts. Freda looked down at the town, with its spires and roofs touched to a wonder of gold. She could see her own home lifting its stone chimneys and bending its gambrel roof above the shady nest of old garden.

How peaceful it looked down there close to the earth's heart! And soon, instead of this gentle quietude, there would be in her ears the din of a city. She would feel the pulse of the world there in that busy office. But she would remember all this restful beauty. And it would be sweet to come back here and tell her aunts of her progress, and show her love upon them because they were so fond and proud of her. It would be sweet to come back, clothed in triumph, bearing a name which was

A Clinching Statement.

A CURE THAT WAS PERMANENT.

The Medicine Used Was Paine's Celery Compound.

Day after day home and foreign cures are heralded as the result of using this or that medicine. It is safe to assert that many of the published letters are bogus, and others will hardly bear the light of investigation.

The cure effected by Paine's Celery Compound, and noted in the press of the country, have all the ring of genuineness and honesty about them, and the original letters can be seen at any time by an interested public.

It has also been proven in numberless instances that the cures made by Paine's Celery Compound are permanent. Another letter has just been received, this time from Mr. J. Kilbride, Postmaster, Inverness, P. E. I., testifying to the permanency of his cure. His case was one of the most serious and critical ever given to the public, and his complete cure astonished his many friends and the residents of his town.

Mr. Kilbride says: "Over three years ago I gave you a testimonial for Paine's Celery Compound after it had cured me, and I have not been sick a single day since I used the famous Paine's Celery Compound."

"I certainly owe my present health and strength to your medicine, and I am fully convinced it saved me from a condition bordering on insanity. I can now sleep and eat well, and I thank God for Paine's Celery Compound and the great change."

"I have received and answered 250 letters since my testimonial was published. These letters came from all parts of Canada and the United States. It has been a pleasure answering these letters from sufferers, and I trust my recommendation of Paine's Celery Compound will help suffering humanity."

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., SEPT. 17, 1897.

Public Library Wanted.

The organization of a public library in Wolfville is a proposition which is not unfamiliar to the readers of the ACADIAN. Once again we would respectfully submit it to the consideration of the people of the town.

It is somewhat surprising that in Wolfville, a town which is almost Athenian in its educational tone, an institution of this kind has not, long before this, found a place.

The utility of an institution of this kind cannot for a moment be questioned. For the citizen who has no large library at home, to have access to the best and most helpful of books with which he may consult whenever occasion demands, is an education in itself.

The expense of such an undertaking would not be at all great. Of course we do not propose to start with an Alexandrian library all at once, but if a beginning were made, the contributions of publishers and others would be found to fill the shelves to a considerable extent and it would grow of itself.

The lot-holders of the Grand Pre dike are contemplating the construction of an arboretum for the purpose of abutting the tide out of the large creek near Long Island.

The days of the Exhibition will be made interesting to farmers and others by the meeting of the Maritime Breeders Association.

The interiors of some of the most attractive homes in the United States have been photographed by the Ladies Home Journal.

The Provincial W. C. T. U., in preparing for their annual Convention, which meets this year at Windsor, on Oct. 5th, 6th and 7th, have in prospect the attendance of Miss Agnes Slack, of Derbyshire, England, Cor. Secy. of the World's W. C. T. U.

A Chapter of Accidents.

Mr Owen Davison, of Black River, met with a serious accident last Friday night. He was returning to his home from Wolfville, and when passing through Gasperen the colt he was driving became frightened and unmanageable.

Mrs B. W. Wallace, of Canaan, met with a mishap while on her way to Wolfville one day last week. She was driving down a steep hill when her horse stumbled and becoming unmanageable ran into a lumber cart.

Miss Ella Crandall, who has charge of the public school at Grand Pre, met with an accident last Friday evening, while en route from Long Island on her bicycle.

A Pleasing Entertainment.

Temperance Hall was filled to overflowing last Friday evening on the occasion of the concert given under the auspices of St Francis' Church, this town.

Among those whose names appear in the Newton Seminary list, is that of Mr Charles R. Macnelly, B. A., '97, who is pursuing an advanced course in theology.

It is with feelings of regret we note the departure of our friend Mr R. W. Ford, who has recently left Westport for Wolfville, as principal of the school there.

Personal Mention.

(Contributions to this department will be gladly received.) Rev. W. J. Routledge was in town this week.

Mr and Mrs J. K. Martin, of Hantsport, spent Sunday in town. Miss Agnes Johnson, of this town, is visiting friends in Truro.

The principal and teachers of Acadia Seminary will be at home to the friends and patrons of the school on the following Mondays: September twentieth, October eighteenth, and November twentieth.

A Farmers' Picnic, similar to the one recently held at Aylesford, is to be held to-day at Bridgetown. Addresses are to be delivered by directors of the Nova Scotia Apple and Produce Shipping Co., and others.

Ladies would do well to read the announcement of Chase, Campbell & Co. This house has received a large lot of jackets and capes direct from Germany and buying from the manufacturer are in a position to give especially good values. We bespeak a run on those goods when their merits are known.

Mr W. S. Wallace has had his shop moved back a number of feet, and is having a large addition built on in front. A plate glass front will be put in, and when the improvements are completed the shop will be a handsome and commodious one. Mr Wallace's increasing tailoring business has made it necessary for him to have larger quarters.

Company 9, of Wolfville, arrived home from Aldershot last Saturday, after having had a most enjoyable ten day's drill during which they covered themselves with glory. They were in every respect the best company of the three battalions. The people of Wolfville should be proud to have such a splendid lot of defenders in their midst. We congratulate Capt. Taylor and his Lieutenants on their success.

We have much pleasure in announcing the departure advertised by Mr Blanchard in this issue. Quite a number of people in Wolfville have been obliged to go to Windsor or Halifax when they wanted to see novelties in Dry Goods. Now these are brought to them. Mr Blanchard will have his samples on exhibition at the hotel sample rooms in a few days—definite date we will be able to give next week.

Races at Kentville.

The races at Kentville last Wednesday were fairly well attended. In the Green Race Dr. Bowles' pacer Fair and Easy, won easily, with Gypsy Queen second, Bonnie, third, Fred Clay 4th. Bonnie is the property of Mr J. A. McNeill, of this town, and was cleverly handled by Mr J. E. Bill. She finished second in each heat. She should enter the charmed circle another year.

In the 238 class six horses started. Frank, a pacer driven by H. C. Lydiard, won first money, with Nellie Bashaw an old mare who has just attained her majority, second, Bellair third, Peter Clinch 4th.

The judges were Messrs C. E. Bill, F. J. Porter and F. W. Steadman, to whom much credit is due for the successful manner in which the races were carried out.

A quiet wedding took place at the residence of Mr John Godfrey, this town, on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, when his daughter, Ellis, was united in marriage to Mr W. S. Wallace. Only the immediate friends were present. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr Higgins. The newly wedded couple embarked on the "Bluenose" for Boston and will be gone for two weeks. The ACADIAN extends congratulations.

Wolfville people will read with pleasure the advertisement of Blanchard & Co. in this issue. Their many customers in Wolfville will be saved the expense of a trip to Windsor, and others who would buy there but do not now do so will have an opportunity of comparing Windsor prices with those obtainable in Wolfville. Blanchard are large importers of foreign goods, Mr Blanchard going to the old country every year to make his purchases.

A Thresher's Life.

ONE OF EXPOSURE TO INCLEMENT AND CHANGEABLE WEATHER.

He Easily Falls a Prey to Disease—Rheumatism One of the Natural Results—One Who Suffered for Upwards of Nine Years Gives His Experience.

From the Intelligence, Belleville, Ont. It is doubtful if there is any other occupation more trying to the constitution than that of the thresher. Exposed to the rains and storms of the autumn season, and at the same time choked with the dust consequent upon threshing, he easily falls a prey to disease. Mr. J. H. Davis, a resident of the township of Wicklow, Hastings county, follows the threshing machine for some months every fall. For eight or nine years he was subject to attacks of inflammatory rheumatism. The disease usually made its appearance in the fall, and continued throughout the winter, causing not only much suffering but great inconvenience. Mr. Davis' most serious attack occurred during the winter of 1893. It first made itself manifest by the swelling of the right hand, and before twenty-four hours had passed the disease appeared to have gone through the whole system, so much so that the joints were not visible through the swellings. For ten months the trouble continued and during that period Mr. Davis was unable to put on his own clothes, and the pain he endured almost passed comprehension. One doctor after another was tried but without any beneficial results. Then advertised medicines were tried but with no better success. "I can hardly say," said Mr. Davis, "how much money I spent on doctors and medicine, but it amounted to a considerable sum, and yet I would most willingly have given my farm to be rid of the terrible pain I was forced to endure. But all my expenditures seemed of no avail, and I began to despair of a cure. At this juncture, acting on the advice of a friend, I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The first six boxes I used seemed to have no effect, and I felt almost like giving up in despair. I thought, however, that possibly that was not a fair trial for one in my condition and I procured a further supply. By the time I had used three boxes more there was a considerable improvement noticeable, and from that out each day found me growing better. I continued using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills until I had taken eighteen boxes by which time every vestige of the pain had left me, and I was feeling in every respect a new man. I believe, too, that the cure is permanent, for I have not known what it is to suffer with rheumatism since.

It will thus be seen that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills released Mr. Davis from the painful thralldom of rheumatism at a comparatively small expense after doctors and other medicines had utterly failed to give him even a fair measure of relief. It is obvious therefore that it Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are given a fair trial they are sure to bring relief and a cure. Every box of the genuine Pink Pills has the trade mark of the wrapper around the box, and the purchaser can protect himself from imposition by refusing all others. Sold by all dealers at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50.

Fostering Gambling.

Men who foster the gambling mania in children should be made to pay handsomely for the gains which they hope to secure thereby. The evil of gaming lies not in the value of the stake simply—the principle is the same whether dollars or cents be risked. To teach a child to plunge a penny on the chance of gaining half a pound of candy is more, rather than less, wicked than to ask a man of the world to risk a dollar that he may win ten on a horse race. The latter knows what he is doing; but the child, unknowing the base of the venture, is thus early seduced from righteous ways and led to form a habit that can but prejudicially affect his whole life. Yet there are men who will, defying law and risking its penalties, thus prey upon innocent childhood for the sake of the small profits they can make out of it. A small confectioner was lately brought up in the Westminster, London, English police court for permitting a lottery on his premises. It seems that there was in the shop a box full of envelopes tightly pecked together and called by the children "the penny dips." The child paid a half penny and drew out an envelope. On this envelope was marked in numbers the weight of sweets which fell to the lot of the person who drew. In some cases there was as much as six ounces and it was suggested that these big prizes tempted the children to steal the money. The defendant had been cautioned by the police, but continued his business. The magistrate said he was liable to a fine of £100, but he only inflicted £1 and 3s. costs, with 10s. on the girl who sold in the shop. This was a case where the heavier penalty might well have been imposed.

An advantage of taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla to purify the blood is that you need not infringe upon your hours of labor nor deny yourself any food that agrees with you. In a word, you are not compelled to starve or fast, while taking it. These are recommendations worth considering.

The hardest of all cements is that known as Portland cement, which, when hardened, attains the appearance and properties of the celebrated Portland stone, from which the most magnificent structures in England have been erected. It was introduced in 1824 by Joseph Aspin, a mason of Leeds.

Miss Agnes Slack, Secretary of the World's W. C. T. U.

BY FRANCIS E. WILLARD.

Miss Agnes E. Slack, the corresponding secretary of the World's W. C. T. U., is a young woman of ability and independent means, who has had excellent advantages of education, and who comes of a family well known for its alert strength intellectually and its devotion to Christianity in action. Miss Slack is a member of the Woman's Liberal Federation executive committee which is the right arm of the Liberal party in England. She is also a member of the executive committee of the central suffrage society and of the same committee in the British Women's Temperance Association, and she was chosen at the last convention honorable secretary of that society. Her home is in Derbyshire, where she was for some time the only woman "Poor Law Guardian," though now there are several others. All matters associated with the poor law interest her greatly, and she devoted nearly the whole of her time last November in speaking at various strategic points in England on behalf of women candidates for poor law boards. It is well known that women are now fully acknowledged in this important branch of public work, and are moving forward in harness to the great advantage of those societies for which they work.

Miss Slack is best known as a speaker on temperance and political platforms. She has for years taken a vivid interest in all social movements, and her visits to prisons and workhouses in all parts of England have helped to make her an out and out temperance reformer. For this reason she now devotes her time chiefly to forwarding the interests of the World's W. C. T. U., and in speaking for that society and for the B. W. T. A.

The religious aspect of the white ribbon movement doubly endears the work to Miss Slack, for she has all her life been closely connected with the Wesleyan Branch of the Christian church, and for some years has been a class leader. Recently she was made delegate to a district synod and spoke before its members with excellent acceptance. As a speaker she is eloquent, clear voiced and the mistress of pure, grammatical English.

On the evening of June 16th, 1896, when more than two hundred women were preaching in various parts of London, Miss Slack preached in John Wesley's pulpit at City Road Chapel. Her text was, "Ye are the salt of the earth," and her sermon was full of terse sentences forcefully delivered. The press commented upon her address in terms of eulogy, characterizing it as clearly reasoned and powerful. Her words were an earnest plea for temperance and for womanhood and were backed by the strong evidence of her own experience, for Miss Slack has visited many of the great prisons of this country and her facts are consequently first hand, not made up from "blue books."

Miss Slack first visited America about a year ago. With reference to that visit Miss Willard says—

No English philanthropist among women with the exception of Lady Henry Somerset, has been so helpful in America in advancing the cause she has at heart, as Miss Agnes Slack, honorable secretary of the World's W. C. T. U. She has travelled fifteen thousand two hundred miles since reaching America last August. She spoke at several summer meetings, including Chautauques, before her return to England, and she has introduced there by Bishop Vincent the anniversary meeting of the foundation of that great summer meeting. She also addressed the New York Methodist Conference, one of the most important in the country, at which were present several hundred ministers, and attended the annual meetings, not only of the National W. C. T. U., but of the Dominion of Canada. Her last meeting was in the Congressional church, in Washington, D. C., December 19th; on the 14th she was received by Mrs. Vincent, and many other courtesies of the capital of the nation were extended to her. She has travelled from Quebec to St. Auguste, from Maine to Missouri, and we have yet to see an unfavorable criticism from the press concerning either her method or spirit. The single-hearted devotion of Miss Slack's nature, the all-litery, combined with great gentleness of manner and utterance in a young woman of undoubted culture and education make up a personality at once attractive and unique.

Miss Slack, like her English associates who have preceded her, is winning for herself a very warm place in the hearts of American white-ribboners, and of her own feelings toward the people of this country, she writes: "In every day warm-heartedness, and with our alert, all-rounded women here. I feel the joying lies which are being formed between us, and am full of loving gratitude."

THAT TIRED FEELING is common on wash-day if you use common soap.

THE OLD SYSTEM GONE.

Better and Easier Work Done By Diamond Dyes. The dyeing of cotton rag for the making of carpet, mats and rugs was for a long time a tedious, difficult and unsatisfactory operation owing to the crude and old-fashioned dye stuffs that home dyers were obliged to use. Of late years all this has been changed for the advantage and benefit of every home. Science has given the world the Diamond Dyes that have brought joy and comfort to millions of households. The makers of the celebrated Diamond Dyes prepare special cotton colors such as Fast Pink, Fast Orange, Fast Purple, Fast Green, Fast Navy Blue, Fast Yellow, Fast Red, Fast Carmine, Fast Black and other colors that are un fading in washing, and fast in rain or sun. No other dye in the world can give such brilliant results on cotton goods, and no other but the Diamond Dyes are fully guaranteed.

Advanced Womanhood.

The idea of advanced womanhood which dominates every theory and modern day, may all seem well, appear to be a strong road on which to lean, a very essential mental staff on which a very plumes itself, and if the truth be told, gives itself little air of equality and manly vigor, and is a very poor substitute for the little genuine petting and being made much of in the same foolish fashion prevalent before the question of woman's rights came up for discussion and possession. It does not matter that a woman can write and deliver a brilliant oration on abstract topics, the very intellectual caliber of which makes her argue to cut her lungs, wear her eyelids, and lose some one near and dear to her, meet with a great disappointment or be called upon to bear some rampant injustice, that she is happy to forget all about her progress toward those intellectual heights to which she has set her footsteps in earnest, honest endeavor to be so strong, robust in her own independence. The little crossing picture that places a wrap over her shoulders comes far more than the diploma she received from the school of philosophy. The action thought that prompts a kindly action, the assumption of authority on the part of one of the very beings of the opposite sex, now delights her where they were called her, and after all, she does not pay to workers. Scraps for Odd Moments.

"Do you think you could learn to love me, Maud?" "I don't know, George," she answered, smiling. "I might," I learnt German once."

Minards Liniment Cures Dandruff. A janitor of a school building seeing the words, "Minards Liniment Cures Dandruff," on the blackboard, exclaimed in good faith, "Well, is that thing just again?"

Minards Liniment Relieves Neuralgia. A lady, in returning the set of long printers' proof slips of her book, remarked to the publisher that it was all right, but she did not like the pages quite so long, nor did she want the "book printed on one side of the page only."

The prompt use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla will invariably cure all affections of the kidneys. The other day X., the Bohemian, on receiving some money from a rich uncle, took it into his head to clear off some of his most pressing debts. He first called at his tailor's and heard that the poor man had just died. His widow, all in tears, desired to know the visitor's errand. "I have come to pay my bill," he simply replied. "Ah," sobbed out the widow, "if my poor husband had only lived till this morning the shock might have brought him around!"

Bockingham's Dye for the Whites can be applied when at home, and is uniformly successful in coloring a brown or black. Hence its great popularity.

A famous actress was playing some time ago at Miami in the "Corymbus," and towards the close of the play was supposed to commit suicide by jumping into the river. When, however, she reached the usual eminence of rock, she found her dismay that no matrons had been placed in the boat to save her, and she more than the others, burst into a fit of hysterics with a heavy thud. Her confusion was intense; but it was increased tenfold when a voice from the gallery, crying out in a rich brogue, "Och, be jabers! the water's frozen!"

C. C. RICHARDS & Co. DEAN SIBB.—For some years I have had only partial use of my arm, caused by a sudden strain. I have used every remedy without effect, until I got a complete cure from MINARD'S LINIMENT. The pleasure of MINARD'S LINIMENT. It caused me to benefit I received from it. It caused me to say my arm is completely restored. Glens, Ont. R. W. HARRISON.
