CHAPTER XI.
LOVE'S SUBTLE SPELL.

"Do not say that," she said, in a low voice, almost inaudible indeed.

"You are as beautiful as an angel, and as clever. Why you are famous already! And I'm—he laughed, with self-scorn—"I'm just an ordinary fool of a fellow. Of course there is no hope for me, and yet somehow I felt that I must tell you. You won't laugh. I know. You'll tell me that I'm very foolish, and that we mustn't meet again, and touched her arm reverently—"and you'll send me away and—perhaps forget all about me in a week or two. While I—well—he pushed the short, crisp hair from his brow with impatient gesture—"well, I shall get over it in time. No!" he said, simply, passionately, "I shall never forget the other day when I opened my eyes and saw you bending over me, or those next two nights when I looked at you in the theatre! I shall never forget nor cease to love you! I know it as surely as I stand here!"

He rose and thrust his hands in his pockets, and looked down at her, his handsome face set hard, his eyes dwelling upon her with the hungry look of the man who loves and yet does not hope.

"And now I've told you," he said, with a short breath, "and now I suppose it's good-bye, Lord Neville. I hope you will be happy and—" His voice broke, and he knelt beside her and caught her hand. "Miss Marlowe—Doris—if—if there is the slightest chance for me, if there is the least bit of hope in the world, give it to me! I'm—I'm like a man pleading for his life! For his life! For more than that—his happiness."

He drew back from her in a feint of leaving her, and her small, soft hands closed upon him.

"No, no!"

He asked for no more. With a cry of joy he drew her to him and kissed her all unrebuked this time.

"My darling! my beautiful!" he murmured. "Oh, Doris! is it true—can it be true? Tell me, dearest; I can't believe it otherwise. Tell me, do you love me just a little?" and he looked into her downcast eyes as if he would read her soul.

She put her hand upon his arm and raised her eyes to his slowly, and let them rest there.

"Yes," she said, as if the effort cost her much. "I do love you!"

A linnet, perched upon a branch of the tree above them, burst into song; a lamb, that had been regarding them curiously, drew near and bleated, the brook bubbled over the stones; all Nature in its lappy springlike seemed to take up the harmony of these two souls bound in love's subtle spell, and to find voice; but they were silent.

At last he spoke.

"It is like a dream!" he said, removing his eyes from her face for a moment and looking like a man awaking from sleep. "Like a dream! Tell me once more, Doris; just once more!"

"Is it so difficult to believe? Well, then I love you!" he murmured, and a smile—the first fruit of love—beamed from her eyes.

"Difficult to believe!" he said. "Well, I should think so! Great Heavens! what on earth do you see in me to love?"

"Quite enough," she said, the smile growing sunnier, as she looked at his handsome face and ardent eyes.

"It's wonderful!" he said. "Just look at the difference between us; you, so beautiful, so clever, such a genius; oh I know! Why, you will be famous—are famous already. I daresay—and I!" he laughed with self-scorn. "It is wonderful!" and he drew her hand to his lips and kissed it.

"Isn't it?" she said, slowly, with loving mockery.

"Yes, it is," he asserted. "Simply wonderful! And to think that you belong to me! You—you—you!" and his eyes flashed upon her lovingly, betwitching face. "By Jove! I shall wake up presently, and find it really only a dream."

She started, and would have withdrawn her hand if it had not been so tightly clasped in his.

"It is only a dream," she murmured. "Only a dream?" he repeated.

"Yes," she said. "A—very pleasant dream—"

"Thank you."

"But a dream still, Lord Neville—? Your name is Cecil, I'd have you to know!"

"Lord Cecil—"

"Cecil without the 'lord,' if you please."

"It is only a dream! We must wake now! I—and you—have forgotten!"

"Forgotten what, dearest?" he said.

And the Worst is Yet to Come—

"Forgotten who you are, and what I am."

"You are an angel!" he remarked, seating himself beside her and stealing his arm round her waist.

"I am an actress, and you are a viscount," he said.

"I believe I am," he said, smilingly. "But, all the same, you are angel! Every moment I expect to see you spread your wings and fly from me."

"So I shall directly," she said, with a smile that was half-sorrowful. "I am an actress—one of the people. One who has no status, no standing in the world; and you are a nobleman. You will be a marquis some day, will you not?"

"I daresay," he assented, carelessly, trying to decide whether she was more beautiful, grave or smiling.

"There is a gulf between you and me, Lord Neville."

"Cecil, if you please."

"A gulf—"

"Which love can stride across," he said. "That is, if you are going to draw up a list of comparisons. As if there could be any comparison between Doris Marlowe, the great actress, and Cecil Neville, the stupid dragon!"

"And future marquis," she said. "Ah, I know. Yes, there's a gulf."

"Look here, Doris," he said, taking her hand, which she had withdrawn, and kissing each finger separately, "don't talk nonsense. I'm a future marquis. All right. I don't deny it."

"You cannot."

"Just so—I cannot. But I'm not a marquis at present. I'm simply Cecil Neville. I'm not even a dragon, for—confound him!—the marquis made me retire. I'm simply nothing, while you—you!"—he emphasized the pronoun by raising one edge of her dress and kissing it—"you are a great and famous actress—"

"And outside the pale of society," she said with sudden wisdom.

"Society!" he exclaimed, "what do I care for that! I never cared very much for it. At this moment I care less. You are society enough for me!"

No woman could have been otherwise than touched by his devotion. She allowed him to retain her hand.

"If you only knew what a sacrifice you are making, my darling!" he said, smilingly. "Why, presently you will appear in London, and will find the world at your feet; and they will all be in love with you, peasants—only there, are no peasants in London—and peers! I daresay you would have an offer from a duke. Think of that! And you have pledged your truth to a simple viscount!"

"I am satisfied," she said, with a smile.

"And precious little you have to be satisfied with!" he said, "for I am a poor kind of viscount. I am entirely at the mercy of the great marquis—the Marquis of Stoyie. He forced me to leave the army, when I had a chance, and he keeps me on starvation allowance. Oh! you had better have waited and hooked your duke, Doris!"

She laughed softly, but the laugh was rather a grave one.

"What will the marquis say?" she asked, looking at him, with her brows drawn, her lovely eyes half-curious.

Lord Neville smiled.

"He will be sure to say something disagreeable; he always does."

"But tell me," she insisted, gently. "Or shall I tell you?"

"You couldn't," he said. "That beautiful face of yours couldn't manage to look like the marquis's hard, stony one; and certainly your voice that is just like music—"

"Shall I get up and curtsy?" she put in, with a faint smile.

"You needn't. It's no compliment. No, you couldn't harden your voice to anything approaching the marquis's steely, icy tones."

"No?" she said, absently; then suddenly she sat upright, and her face grew set and cold and her eyes hardened with a disdainful hauteur. "So, Cecil!" she said, and her voice was stern and cuttingly scornful, "so you have made up your mind to marry what is it?—a dairymaid—no, pardon me!—an actress! An actress, a social paria, a person one pays one's money to see upon the stage, to make us laugh for an hour or two, but with whom one would rather not be seen walking in the public streets; and you propose to marry this—this girl? Well, do so; but remember that in marrying her you cut yourself off from me and the world in which you belong, and that you sink into the mud from which she sprang, and are utterly ruined, a social suicide!"

Lord Neville sat and stared at her.

New Relief For Constipation, "LES FRUITS"

Physicians agree that with the modern habits of living, constipation is likely to be always with us. They also agree that the constant use of any drug for the relief of constipation is exceedingly unwise—unwise for two reasons. First, a drug constantly used loses its effect and requires a constantly increased dose. Second, because the constant use of any drug is bad anyway.

So the cry is constantly going up from the constipated, "What can we do?" It will be interesting to a great many to know that an answer has been found in the re-discovery of a method which was used with great success by our Forefathers, and in Arabia far back in the twelfth century. The food is called "Les Fruits" because it is composed entirely of figs, dates, prunes, raisins and the leaves of each with the substitution of the Alexandra leaf for the raisin leaf. The taste is pleasant, if not to say delicious, and the effect is exceedingly satisfactory. Try it and be convinced.

Britain Celebrating Peace.

Holland Will Hand Over Wilhelm---Treaty Means French Security---General Smuts Pleads For Irish Settlement---High Cost of Living Embarasses French Government.

FREIGHT EMBARGO.

NEW YORK, July 18.—A freight embargo on coastwise traffic was announced to-day by the Coastwise Ship Companies operating under Federal control, as a result of the strike of seamen and engineers. The order for the embargo was forwarded to shipping points by the United States' railroad administration.

WILL VISIT LITTLE WILLIE.

LONDON, July 18.—The former German Crown Princess Cecilie will visit the island of Weiringen where the former Crown Prince is living, it was semi-officially announced to-day at the Hague according to a Central News despatch. Divorce proceedings were said to have been begun by the former Princess Cecilie in April, according to a Zurich despatch there has been nothing to show however, that papers in the case ever were filed although a statement, giving alleged incidents of cruelty, was issued by the former Princess' mother, the former Grand Duchess Anastasio of Mecklenburg-Schwesin.

GENERAL ALLENBY IN CHARGE.

PARIS, July 18.—The inter-Allied Council decided to-day that General Allenby of the British Army should take entire charge of the occupation of Asia Minor with supervision over British, French, Greek and Italian troops. It was believed that this settlement would stabilize conditions in Smyrna and other parts of Southern Asia Minor and prevent clashes between Greek and Italian troops.

HOLLAND WILL CONSENT.

PARIS, July 18.—(Havas Agency.)—Nord Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung of Berlin, mouthpiece of the Government under the former Imperial regime declares it has information that Holland will consent to the extradition of Emperor William, according to a Berlin despatch to Paris newspaper. Formal handing over of the former Emperor to the Allies, it adds will take place at the Hague.

ADVISES THE CHRISTIAN SPIRIT ATTITUDE.

ROME, July 18.—Pope Benedict has addressed to the Bishops of Germany a letter expressing joy over removal of the blockade. The letter recommends that an attitude of Christian Charity be taken toward the Question of Reparation for war damages.

GOVERNMENT IN MINORITY.

PARIS, July 18.—By a vote in the Chamber of Deputies the evening followed interpellations on the high cost of living, the government was in the minority by fourteen votes. The issue arose over the order of the day. The government accepted that of Deputy Renard which implied confidence in the government but the Chamber adopted by vote a resolution presented by M. Augagneur, former Minister of Marine, which the government rejected. After the vote announcement was made in the lobby of the Chamber of Deputies by M. Bourret, Food Minister, that he would resign his portfolio, but that he was the only member of the Cabinet affected by the vote. Premier Clemenceau, however, will decide what will be the attitude of the government. The general policy of the government did not come up during the debate.

GENERAL SMUTS IN A LOFLY STRAIN.

LONDON, July 18.—Lieut. General Jan Smuts of the Union of South Africa and Member of the British Peace Delegation, in a farewell message appeals for an abiding faith in high ideals, despite what he terms delusions produced by the Peace Treaty. He says, the fundamental significance of war has been the victory of spiritual and moral over material factors, a victory of the finer elements of human nature over the baser, and hence there should be no bitterness left in the minds of the people. He pleads for appeasement and reconciliation means for the regeneration of exhausted Europe, which he says is the most awful spectacle in history. Smuts concludes by dealing with the questions concerning the Empire and the Dominions and says that the most pressing of all is the Irish question. It has become a chronic wound—whose effects are spreading to our whole system and through the influence of America. It is beginning to poison our vital foreign relations and unless it is settled on the great principles which form the basis of this Empire, this Empire must cease to exist. Our statesmen in Paris dealt with racial problems resembling Ireland and in every way as difficult as the Irish question and may not shrink from applying to Ireland the same medicine they applied to Bohemia and many other parts of Europe.

PEACE CELEBRATIONS BEGUN.

LONDON, July 18.—Great Britain's peace celebrations begun formally to-day with many ceremonies. A large part of the population stopped work to-day and filled the parks and streets watching the many contingents of British and Allied soldiers and sailors marching about and the processions headed by Marshal Foch of France and General Pershing on their way to various functions in their honor.

GENERAL DEMORALIZATION.

PARIS, July 18.—Despatches reaching the Peace Conference circles from Budapest indicate that general demoralization has struck Bela Kuns army which is staggering back from different fronts with utter lack of discipline. Breakdown in spirit of troops is attributed to discontinuation of the fighting against Czechs and Rumanians in consequence of the armistice and to the hasty increase of the well drilled loyal army of 60,000 to more than 125,000 men.

THE RETURN OF GERMAN PRISONERS.

BERNE, July 18.—According to official despatches from Germany it is expected that the return of German prisoners in France will begin about the middle of August. It is said that these prisoners will return to Germany by way of Switzerland at the rate of about two thousand per day. Germans still held by the French number about 45,000.

A CORRECT OPINION.

PARIS, July 18.—Premier Clemenceau to-day appeared before the Committee of the Chamber of Deputies appointed to consider the Peace Treaty and decided that the Treaty and its attendant guarantees insured the security of France. The Premier said that if British and American aid in case of attack by Germany had been guaranteed in nineteen fourteen the war would have been avoided even with Germany strong and redoubtable. He expressed confidence that on the verge of a just war should come, the United States and Great Britain would give their whole effort to securing this.

NEARING COMPLETION.

PARIS, July 18.—The final clauses of the Peace Treaty to be presented to the Austrian Delegates are nearing completion and the document will be delivered shortly.

Fish That Glow.

The inhabitants of the ocean differ in many respects according to the depth at which they live, but most of all in their powers of vision.

Fish that live at very great depths have either no eyes at all or enormously big ones. There are two methods of getting about in the gloomiest abysses—by delicate organs of touch, or by sight, that collects the few rays of light due to phosphorescence or other accidental sources.

The fish which live near the top of the ocean have smaller eyes than those, say, eighty fathoms down. One hundred and twenty fathoms deeper, where daylight disappears, the eyes are bigger still. Beyond the depth of two hundred fathoms, small eyes prevail, with long feelers to supplement them.

At this depth, in fact, sight is practically useless. In the great abysses the fish are usually blind, feeling their way about solely by means of their sensitive bodies. Some, indeed, show signs externally of having once possessed eyes, but that is all.

In others—the oldest and most confirmed abysmal species—the eye has disappeared altogether externally, though traces of it are still to be recognized, embedded deeply in the tissues of the head.

Many deep-sea fish have a curious system of hollows in the skull or about the body which hold a kind of phosphorescent slime. Others have round or oval shining opalescent spots, placed on the head or along the body or tail.

All of them are abundantly supplied with nerves, and they are apparently organs for the production of phosphorescent light. If so, such a fish must swim about surrounded by a faint glow, somewhat like that thrown off by luminous paint.

One scientist even suggests that these fish may have the power of directing their rays in any direction, like a searchlight.

"Sunlight" in Belgium.

Soap became so scarce during the war that in Belgium the great majority of people were without it for months on end and had to resort to all kinds of methods to get themselves clean.

Now soap is being rushed out to the Continent, and to Belgium in particular, by the hundred tons. Special trainloads of "Sunlight," for example, each containing consignment of 500 tons, are being shipped across the water. Each of these mammoth trainloads should supply over two million Belgian families with soap for a week.

To show how scarce soap has been in Belgium the price of a tablet which would cost 6d. to 9d. here was selling at four to five shillings during the last year of the war.

The home-made soaps of the Belgians are very poor because of the immense shortage of fats. Most of these soaps, in fact, were about three-quarters clay and one-quarter soap, and the actual price of the soap then worked out at ten times the amount we paid when soap was at its dearest.

Italy Don't Like It.

Resents Exclusion from New Alliance.

Rome, July 11.—The newspapers, to-day for the first time print the full text of the Franco-Anglo-American treaty. The Italian public comment with asperity and bitterness over the exclusion of Italy from the Alliance, as it seemed logical to them that a country of the same race as the French should have been asked to take part in the treaty. All this, without counting the sacrifices of the Italian nation, which now finds itself isolated and exposed to possible aggression without any ally upon which to depend, is irritating.

Speaking to a member of Parliament who had been at the Paris Peace Conference on this subject, the Gazette correspondent suggested there was the League of Nations upon which Italy might place her reliance. He replied: "If the League of Nations were truly able to prevent wars, then there would have been no necessity for the formation of the Franco-Anglo-American alliance. But if President Wilson, who was the chief exponent of the League, has seen the necessity of making this alliance for reciprocal protection of the signatory Powers, then this is all the more reason why Italy, which as a much weaker power, when compared to America, England, and France, should be included in the Alliance; unless, as is generally felt here, her exclusion has been accomplished purposely to relegate Italy to a secondary position."

Got Any Amber?

ITS VALUE HAS INCREASED 2,000 PER CENT.

Weight for weight, amber to-day is far more costly than gold. If you should be so unfortunate as to break your mouthpiece, it would cost you five pounds to replace it. Amber cigarette holders are priced at from £15 to £25. A cigar holder of the same material costs from £60 to £80, but you would have to make the rounds of many scores of shops, probably, before you succeeded in finding one.

Before the war, similar articles could be bought for as many shillings as they now cost pounds. In other words they have advanced in price 2,000 per cent.

The reason for this is that all amber comes from enemy countries, and as none has been imported since August, 1914, there are practically no unused stocks left in this country. Moreover, there is no substitute that is really satisfactory. Nor can amber be produced artificially. Which is strange, seeing that it is merely fossil resin.

Nevertheless, the fact remains that for these forty or fifty years many of the world's cleverest chemists have been trying to find a way to manufacture amber out of its raw material, resin, without avail.

Needless to say a fortune awaits anyone lucky enough to hit upon the long-sought for secret.

Die-Hard Superstitions.

WHY WE HANG UP HORSE-SHOES.

Over the door of almost any old farm-house or cottage you will find a horse-shoe nailed up. If you ask the owner why he has put it there he will say, "For Luck."

Ask him where the luck comes in and ten to one he cannot tell you. The origin of the superstition is interesting. From earliest times the moon, the new moon especially, has been looked upon as a lucky symbol, and the moon goddess was represented as wearing horns. In some old pictures Moses is shown as wearing horns when he descended from Mount Sinai.

Cock Crows—Evil Goes.

The horse-shoe nailed over our doors is nothing but the same crescent symbol, and should, of course, always be fixed with the points upward. The commonest ornament on harness is the Greek cross enclosed in a circle. This is the ancient symbol of the sun, and was originally used as a protection against witchcraft.

Upon old buildings the weather vane is so often seen in the form of a cock that we have come to speak of a wind vane as a "weather cock." In

CURIOS WITH TRAGIC STORIES.

From the very beginning of history men have believed that certain objects, particularly jewels, were endowed with powers beneficial or evil, and even if you class 90 per cent. of all these beliefs as superstitions pure and simple, the other 10 per cent. will be quite enough to set you thinking hard—that is, if you study the stories carefully.

Take the case of the famous or infamous Hope diamond, which figures prominently in the tragic news of the death of Vincent McLean, the "100,000,000-dollar baby," who was recently killed by a motor-car. His mother owned the Hope diamond, the unluckiest stone in the world.

A Tornado of Misfortunes.

From the day in the seventeenth century when it was brought from the East, death, illness, disease, and misfortune have followed in its wake. Marie Antoinette wore it and perished on the scaffold. A beautiful French actress who borrowed it was shot. May Yoh, who married Lord Francis Hope, attributed many of her matrimonial troubles to possession of the jewel. Abdul Hamid's favourite was assassinated and he lost his throne after acquiring the stone.

When Mr. Edward McLean, the father of Vincent, bought it for $52,000, he actually stipulated that payment should be deferred for six months so that he might see whether any misfortune came upon his family.

A few months later, his mother died of pneumonia, and now his son, the folizled heir to millions is dead too. What is the explanation?

Ring of Death.
But a diamond may bring good as well as bad fortune. Cecil Rhodes always carried in his pocket a rough, uncut diamond which he would not exchange for the Koh-i-noor itself. It was his luck stone, and not only he but also his friends believed in it.

Rings have frequently been counted among unlucky objects. When, some years ago, Count Zozowski was killed whilst motoring at Nice, he was wearing a ring which has a truly terrible history. Five times within the past fifty years that ring has come to the Paris Mogue on the finger of a corpse.

Years ago a curse was put upon the ring by an unhappy woman whose prayer was: "May whoever wears this ring die a miserable death."

At the Victoria and Albert Museum in London can be seen two of the world's unluckiest objects. The first is a weird-looking figure of Guatama Buddha, which arrived in the museum in 1911, having been sold by its former owner because she was literally afraid to keep it any longer.

Cast Into the Sea.

Made of curved teak, it stands about 7 1/2 high, and its history is certainly strange. In 1853 the father of its late owner, a sea-captain, acquired it in Burma and sailed with it for England. The ship had fearful weather all the way, and at last, off the Welsh coast, caught fire.

The sailors, who ascribed their misfortune to the image, flung it overboard, and the vessel reached Liverpool in safety. Three weeks later the Buddha was washed up on a Welsh beach and restored to its owner.

During his lifetime it remained "quiet," but as soon as he died and it passed to his daughter, trouble began.

The servants "met the image prowling the house at night," friends staying at the house saw its eyes move, and children were terrified almost out of their lives. So the image came to South Kensington, and there it has remained peaceably enough.

The second of these "hoop-ooes" articles is an Ivory statuette of a child lying upon a bed hung with Neapolitan and Burmese charms. You will find its story in Lady Dorothy Neville's Reminiscences. From the day it was brought into her house everything went wrong. Her daughter's dog was killed, her pony was paralyzed in its stable. Then worse—a great chimney-stack fell, doing dreadful damage to the house, and then her son's affairs began to go wrong.

She sent the curious toy to the museum, and there it seems to have lost its power for harm.—Tit-Bits.

Household Notes.

Boston ferns are the coolest of house decorations on hot days. A mixture of lard and beef suet is very satisfactory for frying.

Folded newspapers, upon which to place soiled pots, are handy.

Rub dusty wall paper with a flannel bag containing wheat bran.

Clothes will last better if the surface of the iron board cushions.

Old comfortable cases can be folded, covered and used as porch pillows.

If hot icing is put on a cake it usually gets very hard and cracks.

Light sandwiches may be made with butterthin crackers instead of bread.

A solution of caustic soda applied to old putty will enable one to remove it.

BUSINESS BEFORE PLEASURE.

Spiders and Their Webs.

"As fine as a spider's web" is rather a misleading comparison, as all spider's webs are not alike; nor are all the threads of which they are made. These may be dry and sticky, fine and regular, or coarse and rough, according to the will of the spider, and the use he wishes to make of it.

One kind of web is that seen on the grass on dewy mornings. This is merely a level floor on which the spider runs and catches his prey. The thread is not sticky, and the web may last, if undisturbed, a whole season. Attached to it is a tube of web, in which the spider hides.

Another web is in large meshes, but of indefinite shape. Insects get entangled in the mesh, but are not held by any glutinous nature in the thread.

Then there are some webs, in which the spider runs about to catch the insects which get entangled. In addition, there is the familiar geometrical pattern. In making these, the insect first places the radiating lines in position. On these are woven the circles of sticky thread, which, however, never reach right to the centre. These are the webs which catch insects by their stickiness.

There are, in addition, many varieties of spiders which build no web at all, but catch their prey by running after it.

A CHAIN MADE INTO A BOND.

"That fine old Saxon point of view—What is the good of a family if one cannot be disagreeable in the bosom of it?" has been modified by the simple circumstances that the family bosom is no longer a fixed and permanent asylum."—Agnis Reppiler.

In our town live two middle aged sisters. Some years ago they decided to give up the old home, which had been built for a large family and was no longer suited to their needs. Of which step the town thoroughly approved. But when they decided to board in different houses in different parts of the town—well you can imagine what Our Town thought of that.

"Maybe they have quarreled over the dividing up of the property." "Oh don't look well when two own sisters, all that's left in the world, can't live together."

"What would their mother think?" "The Town is Not Resigned."

These are just a few of the comments that were exchanged and re-exchanged in those first days. In the years that have passed since then, the town has acquiesced but I could hardly say it has become resigned.

How deeply the idea that people of a family must live together—whether or not they need to or want to is implanted.

As a matter of fact, these sisters enjoy each other much more under the present circumstances than they ever did before. They were always very congenial in certain ways but were on each other very much in certain other ways. As things now stand, they are together a great deal apart just enough to make that togetherness a pleasure. What was an iron chain of circumstances has been transmuted into a golden bond of affection.

Not Because They Like The Chum Better.

We all know how often sisters or brothers seem to find little joy in FISHING.

I take my patient jointed pole, which cost me quite a hefty roll, and hie me to a sylvan nook, infested by a babbling brook, and there I sit, a patient s o u t, and fish, and fish, and fish for trout. Oh my equipment's out of sight, in each detail exactly right. Through Walton's stuff I often toil; I study up the works of Hoyle, to see just what I ought to buy, what kind of bait, what sort of fly. My reel and sinkers and my line imported are, and vastly fine. I bought my raiment at a shop where sporting vestments are on top. And so I sit and fish and fish, and think of what a princely dish we'll have at home when I return, with all the troutlets in the burn. But when at last I homeward go I have no speckled trout to show. I have a grouch, a temper sore, my costly rig, and nothing more. And meanwhile Johnson's freckled lad goes toiling homeward to his dad all burdened with a string of trout that weighs a ton, or thereabout. He caught them with a pole of pine to which was tied a cotton line. In agony my voice I lift, and ask you, whither do we drift? There's something wrong with congress, sirs, when anything like this occurs.

Household Notes.
Hardened soap lasts much longer. Oil of cinnamon will reduce warts. Natural foods are the most wholesome. A fish salad is a good summer luncheon. Reliable rubbers save much loss in canning. All deserts should be of fruits on hot days. One pound of tea is enough for sixty persons. Vegetables should be kept in a cool, airy place. Iced tea is best taken alone rather than with meals. Fourteen small cups of iced coffee go to a quart. In an emergency cold potato will make a good paste.

What Do Rings Around the Sun Signify?

(From the Scientific American.)
Rings around the sun or the moon are properly called halos. They may be defined as somewhat complicated arrangements of arcs and circles of light surrounding the sun or the moon accompanied by others tangent to or intersecting them, with spots of special brightness called parhelia appearing at the points of tangency and intersection. Parhelia are most often observed about sunrise or sunset, frequently when the intersecting arcs are themselves invisible, except at the points of intersection. In order of frequency, halos average about 22 degrees, 46 degrees, or 90 degrees in radius, but on rare occasions other sizes have been observed. Halos are observed only when there is present in the higher atmosphere a cloud sheet which meteorologists term cirro-stratus. The floating moisture particles forming this cloud sheet are ice crystals, as the cloud is always above the plane of permanent freezing temperatures. These are the highest clouds known, the average height being five or six miles. When the sun or the moon is observed through such a cloud sheet, refraction and reflection of some of the sun's rays by the ice crystals produce rings in which the colors, when visible, are invariably arranged with the red on the inside of the arcs. Halos are good weather signs. Many weather proverbs based upon the observation of halos are founded upon sound scientific principles. Studies of the relation of halos to rainfall show that during the summer months 50 to 60 per cent. of all halos are followed by rain within 36 hours. During the winter months 70 to 75 per cent. are so followed. Precipitation follows sooner in winter than in summer because storms move more rapidly then.

Early in the mornin' an' the roses wet with dew
The sun just risin' in the east to bid you howdy-do;
When you're first to see the pictures in God's wondrous galleries,
Where the humblest bit of color is enticin' all the bees
Oh it's then I stand enraptured as I view the beauty spread
An' I'm sorry for the people who prefer to stay in bed.

Early in the mornin' fore the fires begin to burn
An' the whistles start to blowin' an' the wheels begin to turn
When the world is calm an' restful, then you get a chance to see
Just how beautiful an' lovely every living thing can be.
When I'm all alone with nature an' the songbirds over head
I can't help feelin' sorry for the folks who're still in bed.

If you've never felt the silence of those early mornin' hours,
Never tip-toed round your garden when the dew is on the flowers;
Never faced the east an' marvelled as you caught the flash o' gold
An' the dazzlin' change o' color all about you as you strolled,
If you've never seen the sunrise on the glory of a tree
You don't know the world you live in nor how lovely it can be.

WELL MERITED.

The wonderful story of Naval Reservist Rideout, published in the Telegram yesterday, is a thrilling epic of a great and glorious deed, in the doing of which Rideout has gained immortal renown and added another laurel wreath to the gallant record of Newfoundland's sons during the great war.

It is difficult to understand why such an exploit as that performed by Rideout, should have remained for so long unknown and unheard of. Obviously there was and is something very much out of order with the intelligence system of the Navy, for had it not been for certain street rumours heard on Thursday, the presence of such a gallant sailor in our midst would have passed unnoticed and unchronicled.

The deed for which it is stated, Rideout was recommended for the premier distinction—the Victoria Cross—by the Captain of H.M.S. Niobe, is one which stands out preeminently. Told in the words of the interviewer it glows and sparkles with scintillations of the highest courage, and the reader can in imagination picture the weird night scene as the hero of the hour and his two equally brave, but unfortunate companions, make their way to the enemy trenches, their one object, regardless of everything else, being to cut the telephone wires leading from the observation post to the hostile batteries, a feat at once vitally necessary and highly dangerous of accomplishment. Yet it was done. The redoubtable spirit of the Newfoundland carried him through successfully, and the hazardous voluntary task was successfully completed, the cost being the lives of the two dauntless men who went over the top with Rideout on "the forlorn hope." Their sacrifice saved their comrades under fire in the British trench, for with their communications cut the enemy had perforce to cease fire, the range being no longer obtainable.

It is a great pity that something was not known officially of this deed of highest courage, so that the honor due the man who carried it out could have been accorded him by admiring comrades-in-arms and fellow-citizens. It is not, however, too late for the proper authorities to take up this matter, and recommend to His Majesty the King that Rideout be decorated with the well won V.C. by the Prince of Wales, when visiting St. John's next month. Then all the people could participate in witnessing the ceremony and acclaim Terra Nova's Sailor V.C. in a manner which would show our royally distinguished guest the high regard in which we hold the men who fought. Such a ceremony would be a fitting feature of the Prince's stay in the capital of the Oldest Colony, and we suggest to the proper department the advisability of instituting the formalities necessary to have the awarded distinction conferred on Rideout in the presence of as many of his fellow countrymen as can be assembled in one place, so that all may have the pleasure of seeing the man "whom the King delighteth to honor."

Reviving Long Distance Running.

The most interesting item of the sports being held at Pleasantville on Wednesday by St. Joseph's Parish will be a long distance running bout. Handsome prizes are offering for the first and second places. The race will begin at Pleasantville grounds, where the Party is to be held, and the course will be up the north side of the Lake, up King's Bridge Road, and thence via Forest Road to the starting point. Spectators will have the advantage of seeing the start and finish, and also a view of the runners as they pass down the south side of the Lake.

Father Nangle Lectures.

The Rev. Father Nangle, who is leaving by the Gramplan on Tuesday, will lecture at the Casino on Monday night, in continuation of his "Trail of the Caribou." In addition to the narrative, we understand that the reverend lecturer has several charts and photographs from which slides have been made to illustrate graphically some of the engagements. Also new films (never shown before), of the Regiment in France and Winchester. A short concert programme is also being prepared, in which some of our local artists have very kindly agreed to assist as well as the C.C.C. Band. Included in this will be the famous song of the "Fighting 29th" as sung by the Divisional Concert Party in France and some of the famous marching songs of "Ours" when on the long hike to death or glory.

Empress of Britain Sails.

The C.P.O.S. Liner, Empress of Britain, sailed at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, taking 600 of the Gramplan's passengers, a quick transfer having been made. The passengers were taken aboard by the John Green, while their luggage was transferred by a barge of the Furness Withy Co. Mr. Alfred Shrubb, champion marathon runner of the world, who called at this office yesterday to say "Good-bye," also left by the big liner. "Altogether," he said, "I have enjoyed my forced stay here and much appreciate the kindness of the citizens of St. John's."

League Football.

Before a goodly gathering of spectators, the Saints last evening defeated the C. E. I. by 2 goals to nil. The former won the toss and elected to play against the wind, and through hard work secured one goal in the first half. In the second they again found the net, despite a fine defense by their opponents. In this half an opportunity to score was lost by Churchill, who took a penalty kick, but drove the ball wide of the net. Both teams were hampered in their play by the high wind, which made combination very difficult. Mr. W. J. Higgins was referee and the players were:—C.E.I.—Goal, Neasworthy; backs, M. Churchill, Thistle; halves, Drover, Fox, Hunt; forwards, E. Churchill, Earle, Adams, Wellman, Chafe. SAINTS.—Goal, Lush; backs, Crawford, Curran; halves, Burns, Elton, Hammond; forwards, Irvine, Burridge, Young, Munn, Patersoon.

St. Bon's Association.

To-morrow, Sunday, after last Mass the St. Bon's Association will hold its annual meeting, Sir M. P. Cashin presiding. The election of officers and several other important matters will come up for discussion.

The enthusiasm and loyalty of the "old boys" were shown in a marked degree at the Annual Re-union this year. It was the greatest success of any of the series, excepting that of 1915, the consecration year of His Grace the Archbishop, when he and his fellow members of the Association had the honour of entertaining His Excellency the Papal Delegate, the representatives of two Archbishops, four Bishops, and over one hundred prominent clergymen. With this exception the 1919 Re-union edified all others financially, socially, and in its representative character. Every phase of our social fabric was represented, clergymen, doctors, lawyers, merchants, tradesmen, workmen, and a large sprinkle of soldier and sailor boys, and all fraternizing, spent a genial and pleasant hour. The Prime Minister presided, having as guests of honour, His Grace the Archbishop, Bishop Power of St. George's, Rev. (Capt.) Nangle, "Padre" of the Regiment, and celebrant of the Mass, Dr. Kitchin, the "golden tongued" orator of the occasion, and the members of the College Board, including the President of the Legislative Council.

To-morrow's meeting will be concerned with the election of officers, the erection of a suitable memorial to those of the college who "died at the front," and to the institution of a "Memorial" Scholarship. Sir Michael Cashin with his proverbial generosity, has intimated his desire to defray all the expenses in connection with the College Memorial. All the officers of the Association have donated a gold medal each to be awarded by the Principal, Rev. Bro. Ryan. With their usual enthusiasm, no doubt, but the boys will turn up in large numbers at to-morrow's meeting.

Meets Accident.

Little Miss Dorothy Byrne, the three and a half year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Byrne, of Alexander Street, met with a painful accident last evening, when, while playing on the street, she slipped and fell in a drain, inflicting an ugly gash in her forehead. Dr. John Murphy, who was hurriedly summoned, stitched and dressed the wound and to-day the patient is much improved.

"The Banks of Newfoundland."

We had the pleasure of hearing the C.C.C. Band wind up their concert in Bannerman Park last night with the soul-stirring strains of our National melody, "The Banks of Newfoundland," and we heartily congratulate Capt. Bulley and the other members on the manner in which they rendered the time-honored and familiar tune. As an old-timer remarked, "if that would not make the oldest of us trip on the light fantastic, we would not have a drop of fative blood in our veins. It reminds me of the good old days, when Bennett's Band discoursed its sweet strains on Sunday and other evenings at St. Bonaventure's College, Government House, on the parade, at all hauls of wood, and at all public and social gatherings." Again we congratulate the talented performers on keeping alive our historic National melody. There's nothing like it, and it is now familiar in England, France, Belgium and wherever our gallant regiment covered themselves with glory.

True Courage.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—Will you please allow me a little space in your valuable paper to remark the bravery of three officers and a member of the crew of the mail steamer Gramplan. Their names are, Mr. Purr, deck officer, and Messrs. Quarrie and Hunter, engineer officers, also W. Payer, fireman, who went to the rescue of the stewards and fireman pinned beneath the wreckage after the ship had been in collision with the iceberg. As soon as the ship struck the water went about that there were men pinned beneath the wreckage. Without fear these brave men went forward; they did not know if the ship was sinking or not and at any moment the battered plates may fall in on them, but they carried on like British sailors. I think the company and the crew should be proud to think they have such brave men in their service.

I remain, yours truly,
A PASSENGER.

Regatta Committee.

The regular weekly meeting of the Regatta Committee was held last night President Hiscock in the chair. The largest attendance since the opening meeting was present, and enthusiasm was evident on all sides. The various committees appointed, submitted reports of the work during the week which showed that public sentiment had been aroused and the old-time interest is being taken. The president informed the meeting that some thirty odd crews had already made application, and in only one or two cases were the available boats uncrowded for every race. The collectors also reported a splendid response from those called on, and it looks as if the Victory Regatta will be one of the most enjoyable and best contested on record. Secretary Noonan, read letters from Hon. John Anderson, Hon. W. J. Ellis, Dr. Scully and Dr. Rendell, thanking the committee for appointing them as judges for the day. With regard to the visit of the Prince of Wales, on Regatta Day, at the suggestion of Mr. F. W. Hayward, it was decided that the executive—President Hiscock, Vice-President Higgins, Treasurer Slattery and Secretary Noonan, communicate with His Excellency the Governor and Hon. J. R. Bennett, Colonial Secretary, with the hope that the Prince's landing could be timed so that he could be present at the first race. Several functions are being arranged for during the brief stay of His Royal Highness, and the committee is anxious that a visit to the Regatta be not omitted. After some other matters had been discussed adjournment was taken until Friday night next at 8.30.

Erecting Arch of Welcome.

Yesterday morning, Mr. G. Kennedy, of M. & E. Kennedy, began the erection of a magnificent triumphal arch which is to span Water Street opposite the Seamen's Institute in honor of the Prince of Wales who is visiting this country in August. Eight telegraph poles will be embedded in four feet of concrete to uphold the wood and ornamental work, which will be the most artistic ever seen in a local arch. The architect is Mr. W. F. Churchill, of the Board of Works Dept.

At the quarterly meeting held last night, President T. White in the chair, it was decided that badges to be worn by the members be obtained. A charter was granted to the newly formed branch which is to be known as the Brotherhood of Clerks and Assistants. The reports of the Treasurer, Financial Secretary, Co-operative stores and Industrial Worker, were presented and adopted. The letter recently forwarded the Government by the Municipal Council asking for a per capita share, amounting to $70,000 of the special Grant of $500,000 was read and strongly endorsed. Some other business was also transacted after which the meeting adjourned.

Title Hunters Must Come to Him.

Chicago, July 14.—Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, left for Los Angeles last night after spending a day in Chicago, and announcing that this city would be made his headquarters for the western trip. His manager, Jack Kearns, was talking all day with promoters and agents of theatrical and circus concerns, anxious to have Dempsey sign contracts for exhibitions. But Dempsey said theatrical work was tiresome and he would much prefer to fight. As to meeting Georges Carpentier, French champion, or Joe Beckett of England, Dempsey said: "I am the champion and I am an American. If any of these foreigners want a crack at the title, they will have to come to America." Both Dempsey and Kearns insisted the fight with Willard ended with the third round. Kearns said that their official timekeeper informed them there were eighteen seconds left of their rest time.

of E. Educational Campaign.

It is very encouraging and inspiring to have this important campaign launched. The objective is to be $50,000. At last we are beginning to take a big view of education. This is our country credit, for it is the most backward people in the world that fail to understand how ill a country can afford to be niggardly in the provision made for the education of its people. Ignorance and illiteracy cost more than education by long, long odds.

The only thing I regret as a Churchman is that we were not the first to show that we had faith in the good sense and generosity of our people in so good a cause. The Methodists were first in the field, and showed the way. While I envy them—not with malice—I congratulate them upon their venture of faith, and upon the great success of their venture.

This campaign for the raising of $50,000 is to be among Church of England people, and it cannot be thought for a moment that the Church will fall where our Methodist friends have done so handsomely. While I feel sure that there are citizens, who do not follow the Church, who will desire to help in the campaign—so important to the country as a whole—yet in the main the campaign is an invitation to Church people to make a generous contribution to the cause of education in Newfoundland. The war has emphasized the importance of education among the nations and there is not an important people that is not investigating its educational work, and planning to give of its best for the early training of its sons and daughters.

We all know that our own educational system lacks much—very much, and that there is not done for the education of the young much that should be done. Some blame this lack exclusively to the denominational feature of our system, but if they knew more they would be less certain about it. Be that as it may, the lack is great, and it is a fine thing to find the several churches vying with one another in the contribution that they shall give to provide the means of war for making our eduational work much more complete than it has been possible to make it hitherto.

The invitation by the Church to her people to make a contribution to education worthy of the day, and of the occasion (which marks the close of the war) is made in no narrow or sectarian mood. The Diocesan Synod has, on two occasions (1916 and 1918) endorsed, in principle,

(1) The appointment of a general Council of Education.

(2) The establishment of a State Normal School for the training of teachers.

(3) The union of effort in the field of higher education, and in technical education.

The other large denominations are to the best of my knowledge and belief, likewise in favor of these. There is among the denominations an ever-growing desire to co-operate in educational work, to wit, speeches from His Grace the Archbishop of St. John's, and resolutions of the Methodist Conference.

The quickest way to kill this fine spirit that is growing so rapidly is to have a portion of the community endeavor by might to over-ride the consciences of another portion. Let us continue in brotherly love, and all things shall come unto us.

If I may, I shall continue these notes on Monday.

Army Purchase Abolished.

On Thursday, July 20, 1871, a Royal Warrant, abolishing the appointment to the position of officers in the British army of those for whom they had been purchased by themselves or their families, was signed by Queen Victoria. An Act of Parliament for this purpose, introduced and advocated by the late William Ewart Gladstone, then Prime Minister, had been accepted by the Houses of Commons and Lords. This Royal Warrant declared that on and after the 1st day of November in that year, "all regulations made by us or any of our Royal predecessors, or any officers acting under Our authority, regulating or fixing the prices at which any Commission in our Forces may be purchased, sold, or exchanged, or any way authorising the purchase or sale or exchange for money of any such commission shall be cancelled and determined"; for which last word we now in modern common English should say "terminated." The last war has shown the benefit of this abolition by the efficiency of officers and by privates rising to commissioned rank.

BIG PEACE PARADE.

LONDON, July 18. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—The Peace celebrations to-morrow will culminate with the lighting of at eleven o'clock at night, chain bonfires throughout the kingdom. The Great Peace Pageants will be inaugurated this afternoon, by the arrival of the fleet at Southend when four submarine flotillas will be anchored between Westcliff and Southend pier. Opposite which will lie the first, second, third, fourth, and fifth destroyer flotillas, with the repair ship Assis-tance, and the flying ship Furious, which was originally one of the four famous mystery cruisers. Between them and the shore the deadweight will stretch westward, in a long line, headed by the Queen Elizabeth, Lion, Tiger, Barham, Valiant, Malasia, Revenge, Royal Sovereign, King George Fifth, Conqueror, Orion, Monarch and Thunderer. The public will be admitted to practically all the ships, excepting the Queen Elizabeth. The ships will be illuminated on Saturday night, and rockets and deck fares will be fired from the decks of all the ships.

It is announced that five thousand officers and men, of all ranks, have been chosen to represent the British and Dominions' forces in the victory march to-morrow. Regiments, and various sections of artillery, signalers, Royal Engineers and infantry will be represented by composite battalions. A composite battalion, comprised of officers and men, will be selected from the English, Scottish, Irish and Welsh regiments. Detachments from the headquarters of Australian New Zealand and South African forces will represent the Overseas troops. There will be one mounted band of pipes and drums, and eight infantry bands. Four tanks will be detailed and two sections of a machine gun battalion. Some 300 of all ranks will represent the Territorials and Yeomanry. The Labor Corps, Women's Legion, Q. M. A. C. Field Ambulance, Matrons, Nurses, Military Veterinarians, V.A.D.'s, Ordnance, Veterinary Corps, Chaplains Department, Army Pay Dept., Military Police and the W. A. A. C. will also be represented.

OPPOSED TO MERGER PACT.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 18. The report of the Foreign Relations Committee, submitted to-day to the National Convention of the ancient Order of Hibernians in the United States and Canada, in session here would place the Order firmly on record as opposed to any pact entered into by the United States that might "merge the identity of the nation."

PASSENGER STEAMER ASHORE.

YARMOUTH, July 19. The steamer Governor Cobb, of the Boston-Yarmouth service, which left Boston yesterday afternoon with five hundred passengers, bound for Yarmouth, went ashore off Green Island, about seven miles from Yarmouth Light, at six thirty o'clock this morning. Weather, which was very thick at the time the steamer went ashore, is now clearing and there is no wind. The Cobb went aground at high water, and tugs were immediately despatched to her assistance.

NEWFOUNDLAND LATER.

LONDON, July 19. Peace was celebrated by the British Empire to-day, not only in London, but in every part of the vast Dominions. London's great victory parade was of course the most spectacular event of the day, but throughout the country every city, town and hamlet held a peace carnival. Religious services, processions and sports made up the programme in nearly every place. In some places, particularly seaside resorts, battles of flowers featured the day. Everywhere returned heroes of the war were honored, whether they appeared in khaki or mufti, and these men, released from the perils and hardships of war, led the merrymaking. Those who did not return from the battlefield, however, were not forgotten, for in every town or city there were prayers for the fallen, and a many a shrine dedicated to the memory of a dead hero bore its floral tribute. To-night there will be a grand illumination throughout the country. One of the largest celebrations of the day, outside London, was held at Dublin, where Irish regiments paraded before Field Marshal Viscount French and other members of the Irish administration.

LONDON'S PEACE PROCESSION.

LONDON, July 19. Nineteen thousand Allied soldiers, all picked men from famous combat divisions, the names of which are written large on the pages of the history of the world war, marched through London streets to-day in celebration of the return of peace. The line of parade was more than six miles in length, and required over one hour to pass a given point. King George, with other Members of the Royal family, Army and Navy officers, and leaders of both Houses of Parliament, stood on the steps of the Victory Memorial in front of Buckingham Palace, ace, to receive the salutes of the warriors. A magnificent reception was given the marching soldiers. Behind the Allied section in the parade came Vice-Admirals Beatty and Keyes, and other high officers of the Grand Fleet, with a contingent of four thousand men. Then came ten thousand men from the mercantile marine, and five hundred women from various war services. Next came Field Marshal Haig and his staff, leading fifty thousand British troops of every branch of the service. As a preliminary to the celebration, thanksgiving services were held in Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's Cathedral and other churches on Wednesday.

POCH PESSIMISTIC.

LONDON, July 19. "The next time England will be in the same position as last time. She will not be ready, and we will have to wait for her," is the words of a statement made by Marshal Foch to a correspondent of the Daily Mail, which prints an interview with the Commander-in-Chief of the Allied armies this morning.

Airship Stewards.

Long flying trips will bring with them new occupations. For example, passengers will require to have food prepared for them. Consequently stewards will be necessary for the purpose of waiting at table, and so forth.

Food will need to be got ready. Even cold collations require a certain amount of attention, and some cooking will be necessary. So the airship steward and airship cook are jobs that will be vacant shortly.

Fat cooks will be at a discount. The lithe and light men are the proper crew of the airship and aeroplane; and few cooks are thin.

Ticket collectors and inspectors, baggage men and porter-packers, will have their places.

Engineers, carpenters, designers, in fact, every kind of workman will be called for in the assured industry of the future.

Challenged Winner.

Paris, July 13.—Bob Martin, heavy-weight champion of the American Expeditionary Force, and the winner of the Inter-Allied championship at the S. Pershing's Stadium, has issued a challenge to the winner of the Carpenter-Dick Smith fight. If he falls to obtain a match, Martin says he will return to the United States and attempt to meet Jack Dambore.

Street Car Derailed.

Coming down Theatre Hill yesterday afternoon at five o'clock, the No. 2 west bound car left the rails and ran down the street to the drain opposite Stafford's drug store. The No. 2 was brought to her aid and after an hour's delay she was replaced on the track.

Uncomfortable Consistency.

(From the Boston Transcript.) "Twenty-five dollars fine," said the justice of the peace. "Oh, now, see here, judge," said the culprit, "be consistent. I wasn't going a bit faster that I was last summer when I was hauled up and you acquitted me." "All right," said the justice, "if you feel that way about it, we'll make it $50, covering both offences."

BUSINESS 100 YEARS AGO.

(H. F. SHORTIS.)
Article XXIII.

In my last article, referring to the House of Danson of Harbor Grace, with which Mr. Kelson had dealings, I omitted to mention that the above great firm had also a branch business at Bay de Verde, as well as Trinity and Bonavista Bay ports. The business premises of Danson at Bay de Verde, after his failure, were purchased by the enterprising firm of Messrs. J. & W. Stewart, of St. John's, for Mr. Edward Moore, who conducted a large and prosperous trade there for many years, and his sons Edward and Thomas were very successful business men, and were noted over the whole country for the purity of their cod oil, which was eagerly sought after, more particularly for medicinal purposes. The property is still occupied by the Moore family. Old Mr. Moore was a native of Kilmaganny, County Kilkenny, Ireland, and came to this country in the early decade of the past century. The probability is that, like so many of our ancestors who arrived here during that period, he was one who did not "fear to speak of '98," and was compelled to leave the land of his birth to seek that liberty and freedom which was denied him during the terrible trials and persecutions of the Penal Days. He married into the O'Neill family, the first to come to this country being a native of Cork. There are many changes since those far-off days, and let us hope that the good understanding which is about to take place between England and Ireland will smoothen the memories of the past, sweeten the relations of the present and project a light into the far distant future.

The Berry Industry.

There is another reference made by Mr. Kelson which calls for more than passing notice, and that is, he shipped on several occasions between 2 and 3 tons berries (I presume partridge or marsh berries), 2 or 3 tons sounds and tongues, and barrels of caplin. I had no idea that our berries were exported to England one hundred years ago, and also I have never known our cod sounds and tongues to have been exported in large quantities, like Kelson did, by the tons. As to the caplin, I can understand that all right. There is not a more toothsome morsel (as our old friend of the Standard would say) that could be placed on the table for breakfast or tea than a properly cured caplin, either dried or smoked. But of later years our people when curing them smother them with salt, and they become too hard and the relish taken out of them. You know yourself, Mr. Editor, that you could not have a daintier "bit" to take after "the same again—wet the other eye," with 4 lumps sugar and a squeeze of a lemon in it, than a good well-cured caplin, whether smoked or dried, and I am certain they would find a ready market if we could ship them abroad. I have seen them cured and put up and they would be as wholesome and palatable after six months as they were the day they were taken out of the weak pickle, after about two hours' immersion. But now we smother them with salt. The late Mr. Golder cured and smoked them in Harbor Grace about 30 years ago, and, to my personal knowledge, the demand was so great, both at home and abroad, that he could not supply the market. I should say that the tongues and sounds sent by Mr. Kelson to Poole, England, by the tons, found a profitable market, because, if you notice, he repeatedly made them part of the cargo.

Jam Satis.

With regard to the large shipment of berries, I should say that they were manufactured into jam in England, and no doubt to great advantage to the purchaser. In my young days, every householder with a garden had a large number of fruit trees, particularly black and red currant, gooseberry, plum, cherry, etc., and I have often heard it said that Mr. Cousens, of Brigus, about 85 years ago, grew apples on his large farm as good as could be produced anywhere, and the same was said with regard to his plums. The late Mr. Stone, the farmer, corroborated this in conversation with me some years ago. No house-wife would be without her black or red currant jam during the winter months, as it was a safe and sure remedy for sore throat, mumps, tic-doloureux and all such kindred complaints. In conjunction with the black currant drink which performed its part internally, in extreme cases, a roasted Labrador herring, as hot as you could bear it, was clapped to your throat, and another sure remedy was roasted potatoes, as hot as possible, placed in your stocking that you had just taken off, and wrapped round your throat, or from the chin to the crown of your head if you had neuralgia or such like. A rasher of fat pork, liberally sprinkled with pepper was also a favorite application. They were always successful. Grandmother was never without her crock full of jam, and it has been immortalized and handed down from generation to generation by a bygone poet of no little ability, and who in all probability, rests peacefully under the willow tree unhonored and unknown, while his poetic talent lives after him. It was sung at all social gatherings in my young days, and I remember some of the lines:
My Grandmother's crock was the last of the stock,
It was picked in the Bight, Labrador;
It was picked in the Bight and sent home by the Kite—
My Grandmother hugged it and cried,
But it fell from the shelf and it broke of itself
When the old Gran died.
CHORUS:
By some marvellous power,

Used in Millions of Tea-Pots Daily

Its Intrinsic goodness in Tea Quality - make it the most Economical in Use - -

"SALADA"

BAIRD & CO. WHOLESALE AGENTS ST. JOHN'S

Jam, jam, jam, jam!
It cured scores in an hour,
Jam, jam, jam, jam!
But it fell from the shelf
And it broke of itself
When the old Gran died.

It was broached in the Fall when the girls gave a Ball,
(It was always her joy and her pride),
But it fell from the shelf and it broke of itself
When the old Gran died.
It cured Uncle Bill when he had a bad chill
And his mouth was all warped on one side;
But it fell from the shelf and it broke of itself
When the old Gran died.

But I must hurry along with Mr. Kelson's epistles; besides I've forgotten the remaining verses. "Tempora mutantur nos et mutamur in illis."

A Planter's Indiscretion.
Trinity, Dec. 5th, 1811.

Mr. Robert Slade,
Sir,—Having written you so lately I have now but little more to say than to beg to refer you to the enclosed copies of what I sent by brig Amy. From what I have written Stanworth, and the improbability of his obtaining a freight in St. John's, I think it very likely we shall see him here this Fall, and in that case he will carry the Books which are now in a fair way. I am sorry we could not get the Remains ready for this opportunity. With regard to provisions, I think myself pretty well off till the Spring. I am just now sending off our wood crews (10 hands) up the Sound for cutting Room stuff and firewood for next year. We have the upper bends on the new schooner and everything bids fair for having her one of the first out of this Harbor, provided our master-shipwright (Newhook) recovers from his present illness. He has been laid up for the past 3 or 4 days, and I fear his complaint is dangerous, but as it will, we have a second hand who is capable of finishing her. The forge is built and the blacksmith (White) is settled in it with his tools, etc. I am glad to say that he seems to be rather more steady than at first. He is no doubt a good workman and will be very useful as he becomes acquainted with the country business. Lannigan behaves very well hitherto and Mr. Colson will keep the Books when Mr. Burt leaves us. The quantity of produce that will be left in this country the winter I am inclined to think will be far less than has been for many years past. From all accounts it appears that there has been in the Western Ocean the whole of this Fall, nothing but tremendous gales of wind and many vessels have had very long passages. Poor Harion I fear has met with some serious misfortune. I am sorry to inform you we have lost one of our dealers, Mr. William L. of Catalina, who died in Trinity suddenly a few days ago (whilst I was in St. John's) from the effects of liquor. For several months past he had given himself up entirely to drinking, and on the day of his death he drank off a whole quart of rum at once which terminated his existence. It did not happen on our Room, neither had he the liquor from our store.

Disappointed With Returns.

Dec. 30th, 1811.
I this day received your letters Nos. 22, 23 and 24 per Charlton and Carbonar via Carbonar (but 21 has not come to hand) accompanied by a letter from Messrs. Watts & Elson of that place, who informs me that thinking the packets might be of consequence, they sent a special messenger with them and some letters for Mr. Durrell, across the country to Perlican. From thence they were forwarded here by a boat of Mr. Garland's, sent on purpose, which together I expect will be attended with some expense. Messrs. Watts & Elson say the Charlton left Poole on the 19th Nov. I am extremely glad to learn from Mr. Durrell (who has letters up to the day the Charlton sailed) that the Alpha has reached Poole although with the loss of her mainmast, and sorry to find by your letter that her fish heated, etc., and am as much surprised at McMahon's not mentioning one word of the kind to me, in the several letters I have received from them (and in one of which they stated particulars of her cargo) as at Stanworth's not having heard one word of it. The people entrusted to collect the fish were not unacquainted with the nature of it. They collected fish last year and many years before, and it was well dried and also shipped in fair weather. The cause of its damaging must have been owing to the continuance of fine weather and the short space of time in which it was made. It was apparently well cured otherwise I certainly should not have shipped it. I was anxious to get her away very early, agreeably to your instructions, hoping also she might be nearly one of the first cargoes to market and did not calculate in her having a long passage or detention at Lisbon. However, as it seems I was wrong, I shall, by paying a strict attention to your remarks on this subject, be very particular in guarding against giving any future reason for such similar complaints. I have Heavy Doctor's Bill.

Dec. 15th, 1811.
By a boat of Sleat & Read's, now unexpectedly getting under way for St. John's, I have just time to advise you of the Gannet's arrival here on the 12th inst. We are now discharging her salt and she will sail with the Books and Mr. Burt from hence direct to Poole, as soon as we can get the fish and oil with a little lumber into her, and which I hope will be before Christmas. The Benjamin sails for Poole next Sunday by which opportunity I shall send the Remains, and the Success also bound for Poole will afford an opportunity of sending a copy after the Benjamin is gone. At foot is a List of Bills drawn since my last, viz.:

Dec. 7th. Favor Jas Brine for Oil, Pelts and Fish (No. 125)	£100
Dec. 7th. No. 126 do	80
Dec. 7th. No. 127 do	35
Dec. 7th. No. 128 Josh Burt

Dec. 7th. No. 129 do	3
Dec. 7th. No. 130 Jno. Clinch, Esq., Doctoring, etc	56
Dec. 7th. No. 131 do	49
Dec. 7th. No. 132 do	24

The boat by which the above was intended put back again and did not go afterwards. Sent per Benjamin.

Stricken With Illness.

Dec. 22nd, 1811.
The Gannet has now the whole of our oil, 18½ cwt. picked fish, and two barrels tongues and sounds with a few thousand feet of board, not being able to take spars without cutting. I shall not ship any. She is now waiting for nothing but a few fine days to take in the fish, which I expect will be about 1200 qts. merchantable, and which with the oil, etc., will be just sufficient to ballast her. I have receipts from Lisbon up to the 24th October and am extremely sorry to observe the bad prospects of a market for fish. I am sorry to inform you that I am now (and have been for a fortnight past) afflicted for the first time since I have been in this country, with a very severe cold and which has much retarded the taking and making out the Lists of Remains, etc. However, thank God, I am now

Tribute to Trawlers.

The Prince of Wales, who was recently admitted "to the freedom of the Fishmongers' Company," at London, said in his address: "Looking back into history one traces the continuous and useful activities of this great corporation, both as a protecting power of the fish commerce and as a social and charitable societies. The fishing trade has naturally suffered during the war owing to the difficulties of transport and to the demands made on the manhood of the country. In the general process of reconstruction may we not hope that a more extended system may be devised both for the distribution and the storage of fish caught on our seaboard, bringing it within economical reach of the public at large? Though

I have been unable to see as much of the Navy as I should have liked during the last four and a-half years of war. I do know of the splendid and unostentatious work which has been done by the drifters and trawlers. As of old the fishermen of England played their part nobly. Their casualties have been very heavy, and I need not dwell on all the great hardships that they so uncomplainingly endured during their incessant and dangerous work of patrolling and sweeping the seas."

every reason to think that Spencer is a man who wishes to promote the interests of the trade as much as any servant belonging to it, and I have accounted him with your donation of Five Guineas, for which he returns you his sincere thanks. I have thought of building a new Counting House detached from the stores. Had we such a one there certainly would not be the risk there now is of burning the stores, and besides at present there is about 1/2 of the compass from whence if the wind blows, it smokes so intolerably that we can't live in it, and of course is a great hindrance to our work. Please say whether you approve of a new one or not. It won't do to build a brick chimney to the old one. It will make some addition to our shop which is at present too small.

Forecasting Failures.

Trinity, Jan. 5th, 1812. Notwithstanding the failure of fish, our catch and collection amount to about 400 qtls. more than last year, and although we could not find cargoes for all the vessels, yet it does not argue that the tonnage for the present extent of the trade is too much, for if we calculate from the quantity caught for the 4 or 5 preceding years our collection and catch ought to have been 11,300 qtls. instead of 8,600, and which after allowing for Madeira, West India, etc., would have been quite sufficient and we may certainly look forward for such a quantity next year. I am glad to find you have no idea of lessening it. I believe this year will strike some of the new Newfoundland speculators, and I shall not be surprised if we have Trinity all to ourselves again in a year or two. Ryland, Durrell & Co. did very little, got tired of the place and are gone to Perlican, and it is rumored that McBraire & Co. were much deceived and disappointed in their expectations, and that they also intend giving up the business here. Messrs. Slat & Read's House seems to have been rather unfortunate lately, and to add to it, none of their vessels have arrived out this Fall. Many of the planters don't feel easy, are whispering that they would wish their money was somewhere else, etc., but I should suppose without the real reason, and upon the whole the occurrences and apparent prospect of things this year, in this place, has tended much to enhance and brighten the character of two Houses (G. Garland's and yours) which are considered by every one equally substantial and as much so as any Houses in the Island. No other House in this place collected so much produce in proportion to the trade as we, most of them fell away far short of last year's collection. We have had uncommonly bad weather ever since I wrote you 22nd Dec.

which has prevented the fish from being shipped on the Gannet.

Not Responsible for Advance.

McBraire's agent (Capt. Jenkins) offered 19/- and I advised a man by all means if that was the case (not thinking it was) to take it to Jenkins, as I could not think of giving it. The man immediately left our wharf and obtained his price from Jenkins, part Bill and part goods. I soon found that all the fish that came into the Harbor was going that way, and that if I did not choose to give 19/-, I must go without it, and as to the oil, Burrage was the first who offered 22/- to 22.10 in order to carry to St. John's, where it was selling for 22/- to 22.7 St. John's gauge, 24 gallons less than Trinity. I mention this just to let you know (and Mr. Garland if you choose) that I was not the cause of raising the price, and therefore I did not act in opposition to his trade. Although I shall not be led by Durrell, I shall take every possible care not to fall out with him, and I have no doubt but that you also consider it good policy to act upon the same plan with Mr. Garland. Mr. Durrell, I suppose, did not tell Mr. Garland that he was the cause of 20/- and upwards being given in the beginning of the season. In former years it was customary to collect a good quantity of fish before naming a price and to consult the different Houses on that point, but this year Mr. Durrell acted from St. John's after having made a contract to deliver a certain quantity of fish there at 26/- or 26 1/2, and contrary to former seasons, sent down one of his clerks to English Harbor (without letting any other House know) assuring the planters they should have 20/- at least, and in all probability 22/-, requesting them to let him have their first fish. The planters were thunder struck at this unexpected news—their utmost expectations not exceeding 18/- and with which I am confident they would have been satisfied had it not been for the man who now endeavors to saddle upon the back of another, what every one here knows he ought to carry himself. After this the planters formed such enormous ideas of the value of fish (and no wonder), that it was almost impossible to do anything with them.

The Last Mail.

January 9th, 1812. This I hope will be handed you by McBurt, who now goes in the Gannet, with the books and sundry papers as per annexed list. Mr. Clinch has desired me to ask you to purchase for him at Liverpool next Spring (should there be any of your vessels going there) 30 hds. coal and to forward them to Trinity, charging freight and insurance, etc. Our "Gallop" is hauled up and moored safe for the Winter, which will be short. Ice hunting will then be the next thing and I hope I shall have to give you a good account of the schooners. By a ship of McBraire's, now loading fish here, I may perhaps write you once more this Winter via St. John's, to which place she is bound, but she certainly will run a great risk of being frozen up and I therefore do not depend upon having the opportunity, and shall conclude this (being probably the last for the Winter) with wishing you and family good health and a pleasant Spring, and assuring you ("as I know the tonnage") I shall endeavour to have my share of whatever may be going, and not doubting that I shall see a vessel here from you, with part of the indent, in good time in the beginning of May or latter part of April, I remain, sir,

Your humble servant,
WM. KELSON.

Mount Carmel Sunday.

This Sunday will be Decorated Day at Mount Carmel Cemetery, and the Catholic citizens of the community are reminded of the Anniversary Mass which will be celebrated in the Mortuary Chapel at the Cemetery at 10.30 by the Rev. Dr. Kitchen. The committee in charge have expended a large sum of money this year in repairing the grounds and walks, and in addition have acquired a valuable piece of property lying to the north east of the present Cemetery. The City of the Dead on the little hillside now presents a very pleasant aspect, and shows that the resting places of our dear departed have been lovingly cared for. Several monuments have recently been erected by sorrowing relatives in the memory of those gallant lads who lie far away on the plains of Gallipoli and in Flanders' Fields.

Wedding Bells.

HAVILAND—UDLE.

Cartwright (Labrador) was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when on May 10th, Mr. B. Haviland, of Marmarack, N.Y., Assistant Manager Porter's Post, led to the altar Miss Viola Udle, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Udle. The bride entered the beautiful little church, which was suitably decorated for the occasion, leaning on the arm of Mr. Hayward Parsons, Manager Hudson Bay Co., who acted as father-giver, while Miss Nellie McKenny acted as bridesmaid. The groom was ably supported by Mr. E. P. Clarke, Manager of Porter's Post. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Henry Gordon, Missionary Priest in charge. The bride was the recipient of a number of valuable presents from employees of Porter's Post, and Hudson Bay Co., also from children of the school at Cartwright.

LACEY—WEIR.

On June 9th, a very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Weir, of 36 Eastmount Ave., Toronto, and formerly of Little Bay Islands, Newfoundland, when their daughter Thyra was united in marriage to Mr. Alexander Lacey, formerly of Botwood, Nfld. The wedding ceremony was conducted by Rev. F. Gordon Weir, brother of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Lacey left on an evening train for a few weeks' visit to Mr. Lacey's mother at Botwood, after which they will return to Toronto where Mr. Lacey takes up work on the Staff of Victoria College.—Com.

23 Wars in Progress.

When Mr. Bonar Law told the British House of Commons a few days before the signing of peace that twenty-three different wars were still in progress, he set the newspaper editors to figuring out for themselves what contests were on his list. Enoch Arden Case.

In New Brunswick. Fredericton, July 11.—The war has produced numerous stories of strange relations between wives and husbands and their children, but the strangest has recently come to light in this city, a returned soldier finding on his return after several years service overseas, that he had been reported killed in action, that his wife had married a second time, after drawing pension for herself and children until her second marriage, that she had died in the influenza epidemic and his children who had survived their mother had been adopted by relatives living in the United States.

Circumstances of Case. The soldier in question enlisted here early in the war in a unit of Canadian Mounted Rifles and after one of the engagements in which the C. M. R. battalion were badly cut up was reported killed in action. The report was official and a pension was granted the supposed widow and her children. In the course of time she married a widower who himself had children, and a child was born of the union. During the severe epidemic of influenza last autumn she died leaving another child a few days old which died. Later relatives of the deceased who reside in the United States took the children of the first husband who was supposed to have been killed in France and gave them a home.

Returns Though Officially Dead. The final touch of the confused situation was given within the past few weeks when the soldier who was officially dead returned from overseas.

Knew Her Case.

General Pershing, who is expected shortly in London, tells an amusing story—which may or may not be true—considering a certain English gentlewoman who, having volunteered for war work with the Y.M.C.A., was assigned to scrub the floor of the Eagle Hut in the Strand. She was (says General Pershing) a blue-blooded aristocrat and she had done little manual labour in her life, but accepted the job without protest, and went down on her hands and knees with a pail of hot water, a cloth, a cake of soap. Soon the water in the pail was black. A man in uniform passed. The woman looked up and asked if he would mind emptying the pail and refilling it with clean water. There was a pause, then this reply: "Hang it, madam, I'm an officer!" This time there was no pause, but she took a flash the scrubwoman retorted: "Hang it, officer, I'm a duchess!"

Household Notes.

With careful investors, safety of income and principal is the first requirement.

For institutions, partnerships, business men and investors generally, investments should be readily marketable, and also readily acceptable as collateral.

One of the types of issues which best fulfills these requirements is usually the short term bond or note. Early maturity adds stability to its market course and the issue is paid at par, and in some instances at a premium, within a few years or less. Among business men and institutional investors who may desire to sell these investments at almost any time, there is a strong preference for short term issues. Let us furnish our proposals. We will do so on request.

It May Be True—

That a human sponge seldom soaks up water.
That most free advice is given to influence—not benefit—the recipient.
That the only secret between some people is what they think of each other.
That some women measure their happiness by their ability to make men miserable.
That a great many books are purchased because their binding matches the wall paper.
That if a fool had only sense enough to keep his mouth shut, nobody could ever prove that he was a fool.
That the modern short skirts expose a lot of family skeletons which might well have remained hidden.
That we begin, at the age of forty, to learn a lot of things we thought we thought we knew when we were twenty-one.
That a lot of men who wouldn't work for you for a pound a day are willing to teach you your job for nothing.
That the bravest man in existence is the dried-up little specimen who knows he is so small that nobody will hit him.
That although a wife knows her husband is not an angel, it does not prevent her making him fly about a good deal.
That a lot of matrimonial trouble comes along simply because the husband is so easy to get on with that it is no fun to get on with him.

Who Won the War?

(From The Montreal Gazette.)

"Don't forget, it was the British Empire that won this war. For the last two years of it we bore the brunt of the struggle." So declared Sir Douglas Haig, field marshal, in a speech at Newcastle.

"Then America went, and if it had not been for America the war would not have been won." These words are quoted from an address delivered by President Wilson at sea on the fourth of July to the soldiers and sailors on the steamship George Washington, which brought him home from France. The two statements do not altogether conflict, but each will be criticized, if not contested, in rival quarters. Various interests take pardonable pride in their war accomplishments. It has been jokingly said that the Australians defeated the enemy, with the assistance of the other allied belligerents. There are Canadians who believe that their own army was superior to any other, while all of us are convinced it was second to none, relatively, as a fighting force. Supporters of the British Navy have on many occasions declared that His Majesty's Ships alone prevented disaster; that had it not been for the navy the Germans would have overwhelmed the world. Army men in reply declare they would have beaten the enemy, navy or no navy. So the assertions go. It was like the old question of "Who won the battle of Waterloo?" Meanwhile, the ordinary thinking individual, in the United Kingdom and elsewhere, recognizes the great part played by France, and gives due credit to Belgium and other forces, including Russia, which put forth a tremendous effort in the first years of the struggle. What would have happened if the Russians had not marched into Eastern Prussia and into Austro-Hungarian territory at that very critical period? Who cares to think of that? In truth, there is credit aplenty to go round. The Allies and Associated Powers won the war, a fact which the defeated and broken-up enemy peoples realize full well. So what is the use of arguing?

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES COLDS, ETC.

An Interrupted Game of Bowls.

On the evening of July 19, 1888—three hundred and thirty years ago—the summer's sun was casting its lengthening shadows upon the bowling green behind a hostelry, well known to officers of the British Navy as "The Pelican" Inn, Plymouth, where an exciting game of bowls was in progress. Standing around the bowling alley, watching the play, was a little throng whose names naval warfare and the victory of adventure will not easily let die. There on that memorable occasion stood Lord Howard of Effingham, the Lord High Admiral of England; Sir Robert Southwell, his son-in-law, the Captain of the "Elizabeth Jorca"; Sir Walter Raleigh, and Sir Richard Grenville, Martin Frobisher, and John Davis; and last, but far from least Sir John Hawkins, "the patriarch of Plymouth seamen," lazily watching the movements of his pupil Sir Francis Drake, Vice-Admiral of the Fleet. Raising his form to his full height, then slowly bending forward, the better to give impetus to the swing of his right arm, Sir Francis was about to send the ball speeding along the alley, when he suddenly stayed his hand and gazed open-mouthed at an old sailor, who, with the news-ferret burning hot within him, had rushed into the midst. "My lord! My lord!" cried the weather-beaten old salt, to the Lord High Admiral, "they're coming—I saw 'em off the Lizard last night—they are coming full sail—hundreds of 'em a-darkening the waters!" The cool Vice-Admiral turned to his chief, as he hurled the ball along the smooth, worn planks, and said, "There will be time to finish the game, and then we'll go out and give the Dons a thrashing!" It was the first intimation of the approach of the Spanish Armada. Its dispersal and total destruction soon afterwards are matters of history.

Matches Come in Coffins.

There are four main reasons why so many matches were made in England are made in Sweden. The first is that "safety matches" were invented by a Swede; the second, that there are many forests in Sweden, and its neighbors, Norway and Finland, and the minerals required for the lighting part abound; and lastly, because labor is cheap.

Further, the cost of carriage between Sweden and Great Britain is not heavy enough materially to increase the cost to the buyer, since the matches can be packed in the coffins, which Sweden exports so large ly to England.

It was not till 1885 that the Swedish inventor, Lundstrom, patented the first "safety match," which, by the by, was first manufactured in the United Kingdom by Bryant and May.

Following Lundstrom's invention, Sweden became a match-making country. One of the most extensive match factories in the world is at Jonkoping in South Sweden; it employs over 6,000 match-makers. The town is connected by railway with the port of Gothenburg, only some 115 miles distant; from there hundreds of millions of matches are yearly exported to England and other parts of the world.

Living is comparatively cheap, hence the low cost at which the Swedish matches can be produced.

Before the war matches were absurdly cheap in Great Britain and were lavishly used and often wasted. From six to ten matches per head of the population are daily used in the principal countries of Europe, and Sweden alone exports over fifty thousand million matches a year. England turns out over fifteen million matches annually.

Fishing With Spider Webs.

Spider webs as fishing nets! That is what many of the South Sea Islanders use when they are fishing, but naturally the spider webs are very different from those we see in England.

These spider webs are six feet across and are woven in a mesh of about one inch square. The natives are very ingenious in making the spider spin these huge webs for them. They set up long bamboo poles, bent over in a loop, just where the spiders are plentiful.

In a very short time a spider spins the convenient framework and spins his web. With this ready-made fishing net fish up to a pound in weight are caught without fear of breaking the web.

These webs are so strong that when they are stretched across any of the paths through the woods they have to be broken with thick sticks. In these webs small birds have often been found entangled.

NOTE OF THANKS.—ex-Sergt. Ambrose Conway, C.E.P., wishes to thank Drs. Keegan and Carmel, also Sisters Fleming, Nurses Hyde, Miller, Scott, Fitzgerald of the General Hospital for their kindness to him during his stay at that institution.—adv.

The Myth of the Monkey Chain.

An interesting article by Prof. E. W. Gudger, in a recent issue of Natural History, deals with the time-honored story on which most of us were brought up that South American monkeys are in the habit of crossing alligator-infested streams by linking their tails and legs to form a living bridge. Pictures of this feat once figured extensively in the school geographies and Professor Gudger reproduces such a picture from a Fourth Reader published as late as 1897. The story was first told, so far as known, by the Jesuit Padre Padre Jose Acosta in a work published in 1599. Several later writers have repeated the tale. The first person to dispute its veracity was Baron Humboldt. Recent explorers of South America, when they mention the story at all, express scepticism. Finally, Messrs. Leo E. Miller and George K. Cherrie, of the American Museum of Natural History, who have done so much travelling and collecting in South America, have suggested to Professor Gudger a plausible origin for such tales. They think that the story of the "monkey bridge" has come about through observation of a procession of monkeys crossing a ravine or stream on a pendulous liana.

Camping Out.

One of the most delightful and least expensive ways of spending a vacation in summer is to camp out. Two weeks or more spent in the woods with the sunshine all around can so rest tired nerves and build up depleted systems as to make doctor bill almost unnecessary.

For the health and happiness of the campers the location of the tent is important, as a whole summer's vacation may be ruined by lack of care in this matter. You will be rewarded if you select a quiet spot near a river or lake, or even a brook, but, above all, choose good, dry ground that will drain well and that is convenient to pure drinking water. Inexperienced campers should not locate too far from a base of supplies, for it takes a seasoned camper to live successfully without butter, eggs, milk and vegetables for any length of time.

Without the doubt the best place for the tent is on a slight elevation or hillside, even though the floor has to be leveled, as in this way all danger of flooding out in a heavy rain is avoided. As there should be shade as well as sun, the most desirable way is to pitch the tent near trees, but not under them. It is a wise precaution to avoid dead trees, which a heavy wind might fall, or any obstruction, as a stone wall, or fence, which would prevent the stakes being moved as the ropes stretch. It is also well to remember that dampness will contract the cloth and ropes, so before going to bed it is a good plan to slacken the guys a little, or otherwise if it rains in the night you may be awakened by a tent pin flapping about your ears. State laws regarding the setting of fires should be investigated, as in some states it is necessary to obtain a permit to set a forest fire.

The Right Kind of Tent.

The first and main part of the equipment for camping out in comfort is a waterproof tent, for the winds may blow cold and the rains fall wet. The regular wall tent is the best for ordinary needs, the price varying according to the material used. In the opinion of many campers khaki is better than white duck, and it tones down the glare of the sun and is less of an attraction for insects. A fly which can usually be bought for half the cost of the tent is a most necessary adjunct as a protection against the sun and inclement weather, and if extra long the extension in front will make a very convenient porch.

An additional fly to put up adjoining the tent as a shelter under which to cook and eat when the weather is bad, is a wise investment. Strips of waterproof material make excellent covers for the cots and will be found most useful while in camp. A wooden platform or a floor cloth is absolutely necessary, especially if there are children or persons unaccustomed to living in the open in the party.

Comfort While You Sleep.

If you must economize on something let it not be on your bed if you are accustomed to a soft one and have gone camping for a rest. Folding cots are greatly to be preferred to beds made of those sweet-smelling but back-breaking fir boughs. Beds filled with hay or straw make fine mattresses. Sleeping bags are very convenient, but they are expensive. A good army blanket doubled, with steel eyelets fastened to one side and across the bottom and then laced together with a heavy cord will afford ample protection except in the coldest weather.

It is a good plan to provide netting covers for the cots and to hang over the opening in the tent, for there was there ever a time when there wasn't mosquitoes to spoil utterly the joy of sleeping in the open? Two ounces of citronella, two ounces of camphor and one ounce of oil of cedar, mixed and used copiously, will keep the little pests at a respectful distance, for they hate it. There are folding camp chairs, folding tables, folding axes, folding pails, folding wash basins. Although great improvements have been made in canvas furniture within the last few years, even yet it is better to test such furniture before buying it, for the reason that, while the chairs may look substantial and comfortable, when you try them there is a threatening lack of support that promises ill for the comfort of those who have passed their first youth.

Sanitary Precautions.

Careful attention to matters of sanitation is most important for the health and comfort of the campers. Experienced campers realize how necessary it is to keep everything neat and in order both in and around the camp. A dirty, disorderly camp is too uncomfortable for words. The dishes should be washed immediately and put away, and all refuse burned or buried. Tin cans, which accumulate amazingly, should be buried—never thrown into the nearby bushes or the lake.

proper fireplace for cooking. Camp life will be one long nightmare unless the campers have mastered the all-important process that lies between the raw food in the cupboard and the cooked food on the table.

Probably the simplest way to cook in the open is over a fireplace made by digging a hole about two feet square by one foot deep and partly filling it with stones.

A wall about eight inches high should be built around the sides, leaving a small opening at the back for the smoke to escape. Place a large flat stone on top, and for frying and baking purposes you will have a fine substitute for a cooking-stove. In a permanent camp where there are plenty of stones, you can build a pier about three feet high of the stones, leaving a hollow in the centre for a fireplace, which may have a bottom of turf. This device does away with the low fire and will save a good many backaches.

When Wood Refuses to Burn.

While it is great fun to cook in the open under favorable conditions, it must not be forgotten that, in all probability, there will be many rainy days when all the wood is soaked and refuses to burn, and for this reason the camp stove should not be overlooked when getting together the camp equipment.

A small alcohol stove will cook the breakfast regardless of the weather, and if a hot breakfast is ever needed it is on that morning when a steady rain is pouring down.

Aluminum cooking utensils, especially designed for camp, consisting of covered cooking pots, frying pans, plates, cups, soup bowls, knives, forks, spoons, salt and pepper shakers, can be bought, or if the cost seems too great you can select your own cooking utensils. But a folding baker of aluminum will be most useful, as it can be placed in front of the fire and the baking will be evenly and quickly done. It consists of a horizontal food pan protected by a slanting wall of aluminum above and below, the angle being such that the heat is reflected to the top and bottom of the pan.

A folding grate to place over the fire will come in handy many times. Among the articles necessary for comfort are a lantern, a can of kerosene, candles, plenty of matches in waterproof holders, a strong hunting knife, a hatchet, a compass for each person a reliable watch, etc.—Ex.

Real Wildcat With "Wildcats."

A Columbia wild cat, a real animal accompanied the "Wild Cat" division to France last year, and up to the end of 1918 was the mascot of the division. The cat had to be smuggled to France, and thereby hangs a tale of a wild cat.

A Columbian smuggled the cat to France. The Columbian is a popular officer of the division. The cat came into the possession, rather mysteriously, of some of the men of one of the 51st division outfits when the division was in training at Camp Jackson. When the division left for New York the wild cat, the sure enough wild cat, went along too. But when the division was about to embark, the divisional commander, Gen. Lewis, gave orders for no animals, no pets or mascots, to be taken on board the transport. This order meant good-bye to the sure enough wild cat. The Wild Cats were about to bade the wild cat farewell.

But the Columbian officer had set his mind on getting his wild cat to France, and it is said that one of the officers higher up was anxious to have the mascot go along too, and so the smuggling plot was framed up.

The Columbian officer was taking a typewriter to France, as part of his military equipment. (The typewriter on modern warfare is mightier than the sword.) By the simple method of purchasing another typewriter box, a reservation for the wild cat was arranged. The officer's typewriter box was arranged as a cat's cage and the typewriter was put into another box. The cat went to France, labelled as a typewriter, safely stored away in the hold of the transport.

But there came a day when the mascot's voyage was not "bon." The cat got out of the typewriter box and the captain of the vessel was advised that a dangerous animal was loose in the hold. Orders were given over board. The order reached the ears of the Columbian officer and he was alarmed for the safety of his pet. Another plot was formed. Another typewriter box was secured, the wild cat was caught and nailed in it, the box which has formed the cat's first state-room was nailed up too, but with emptiness within, and it was ceremoniously thrown overboard. Most everybody on the transport thought that the wild cat had been drowned, nine lives thrown in the Atlantic in a typewriter box. But the truth was known only to a few of the soldier "Wild Cats," and the Columbia wild cat was landed safely on French soil.

The animal stayed with the outfit for a long time, and last Christmas day it got away, never to be caught again, no longer to be the mascot of the men of the Eighty-First.

While in France the Columbia wild cat, like his master "Wild Cats" were the object of open mouthed interest on the part of Europeans. They had never Helping the Market.

Agreements by the British Government to take over from Scotch curers unsold herrings to the extent of 400,000 barrels on September 15 has given a new stimulus to the herring fisheries in that country. The schedule of prices as arranged cannot be but satisfactory, and it is understood that the fishermen have agreed that 56 shillings will be acceptable to them. The limit placed on the quantity of herring to be taken over by the government may restrict fishing operations somewhat, but fishers have apparently accepted the principle that a "half a loaf is better than none." The herring being taken in Scotland at present are still of poor quality and prices have ruled low. The sale of Scotch herring in the American market and in Europe will depend largely upon its quality, so that it would seem ill-advised for fishermen to undertake heavy packing operations until the quantity is satisfactory. The poor herring will not sell anywhere, and it would certainly be an imposition on the British government if it were to be obliged to take over a stock that the trade would not dispose of.—N. Y.
