CHAPTER XXXII.

"You are very kind," she says, and the hectic flush grows deeper. "It is hot, very hot. I left my sunshade at home. Why did you leave it, Weston?" turning her eyes to the maid, who stands silent at her side.

"You said, miss—"

"Yes, I remember; I didn't think I should want it. Thank you," to Paula; "but how about yourself? If I take it you will be baked," and a smile that lights up the delicate face as a piece of Dresden is illuminated by a flash of sunlight, passes over it.

"I like being baked," says Paula, putting up the sunshade. "I never use it. My complexion was irrevocably ruined years and years ago," and she puts the sunshade into the thin, white hand.

"Years and years ago!" retorts the other, and a faint, pleasant mockery curves her lips, making the face quite eloquent, and conveying the speaker's meaning in an instant. "Then it must have been when you were quite a child."

Paula colours and laughs.

"Yes, when I was quite a child," she says, "is that better? You don't feel it so much now?"

"No; that is much better," says the other, gratefully, her blue eyes fixed with a distinct gaze of admiration on Paula's face. "It is very kind of you. I am afraid you are sacrificing yourself!"

"Not at all," says Paula.

There is silence for a moment, during which the beautiful invalid has glanced indifferently at the beach, and, with anything but indifference, back again at the fresh young face above her.

Paula stands, struggling against the fascination that has taken hold of her, striving for some commonplace remark and finding none.

At last the silence grows oppressive, and she says, suddenly, after her manner:

"Have you been ill long?"

"Ill!" replies the other, and a faint smile curves the delicate lips. "Yes; if I am ill. That is a question that puzzles the doctors. I have been like I am, as you see me, for—how long is it, Weston?"

"Nearly a twelvemonth, miss," says the maid. "But—emphatically—you are better, much better now."

"I am better, much better now," repeats the invalid, with a strange smile at Paula—a mocking, yet by no means bitter smile. "I think I am quite well, really; only the doctors will not let me walk about, and insist upon my being treated like a mummy," and she draws her other arm from under the multitudinous wraps.

Paula notices that the arm—as much of it as is seen—is white and beautiful shaped, though thin, and that a magnificent bracelet, set with diamonds, glitters on the wrist; there are also costly rings half-way up the tapering fingers.

The invalid holds her hand in the sun for a moment, then plunges it behind the costly furs that envelop her as if she had received a chill.

"Oh, quite well," she says, with a laugh. "Nouvelle is working wonders for me. Have you been ill?" and her eyes seek Paula's face with evident interest.

"I," says Paula, with a smile. "No, I have never been ill."

The blue eyes look at her rather keenly.

"No! I thought you had been."

Paula colours rather under the keen glance.

"No," she says, with a smile, "excepting the measles and the whooping-cough, I have suffered nothing."

The blue eyes rest on her face still with their look of curiosity.

"Have you been here long?" says their owner.

"A few months," says Paula. "And you?"

"How long it is?" asks the other of the maid.

"Ten days, miss," is the prompt, respectful reply.

"Ten days," repeated the invalid. "I have been travelling about. I don't like to say where I haven't been; I have been to so many places. The doctors order me about as if I were a volume in a circulating library."

"And do you like Nouvelle?" asks Paula, intensely interested, and yet marvelling to herself why she should be.

"I hated it," said the invalid, with a vehemence that makes Paula stare. "I hated it until now; but I think I like it better now that I have seen something of it. Are you staying at the hotel?"

"No," says Paula. "I am living with my sister at Cliff Villa—that little white house there," and she points to it.

The invalid nods.

And I am lodging at—what is the name of the place, Weston?"

"Acacia Villa, miss."

"Acacia Villa, though there is nothing like an acacia in the place," says the mistress, with a smile.

Paula remembers Acacia Villa; it is one of the best houses in the place. Evidently the pale, blue-eyed invalid in one of the swells, perhaps a young lady of title.

"Yes, I know," she says; "it is nicely sheltered."

"So the doctors said"—wearily, and with a smile, as if it were a fine feat. "And you live on the cliff? I will be sure and remember. Will you take your sunshade now?"

"No," says Paula; "keep it till you return home. I will send for it."

"But—"

"Pray, pray do," says Paula, eagerly. "I do not want it. I shouldn't use it. Keep it; it will guard you against the heat, and it will send for it."

"Thank you," says the invalid, still keeping her eyes fixed on the dark ones above her. "You have been very kind to me. Why, I wonder? You are the first person that has spoken to me since I came. Would you think me very rude if I asked your name? My name is Hamilton—Florence Hamilton."

Paula repeats the name absently, mechanically.

"It is a very pretty name," she says; "mine is not nearly so pretty. It is Estcourt—Paula Estcourt."

"Paula—Estcourt!" gasps the invalid. "Paula—" and she falls back in the chair, the hectic flush flying from her face, and the sunshade slipping from her hand.

"Poor girl!" murmurs Paula, "the heat has been too much for her." And in her gentle pity she bends over the chair, to the exclusion of the maid, who has uttered a cry of alarm, and lifts the frail form in her arms.

For a full minute Flossie Hamilton lies lifeless in the arms of the girl whose life she wrecked and ruined, her head, with its short, sunny curls lying against Paula's bosom, her white, thin hand, sparkling with costly jewels, lying across Paula's strong arm.

"Poor girl!" she murmurs, her heart beating, the dark eyes filling with tears, "how ill she looks."

"Yes, miss," says Weston, acely, as she kneels beside the chair and bathes with eau-de-Cologne the white forehead, in which every vein is traced so distinctly, "my mistress is very ill indeed, but she has been worse."

"Does she often faint like this?" asks Paula, standing so as to guard the unconscious form from the curious eyes.

Weston shakes her head.

"No, miss; I have only known her to faint once before—that was at the beginning of her illness; then she broke a bloodvessel. She frightens me dreadfully; my mistress is generally so—so brave and plucky. It is the heat, I suppose. No offence, miss, but I think she has been talking too long."

"I am very sorry," says Paula, remorsefully. "I had no idea that I was doing any harm."

"Oh, no, miss, certainly not. She is coming to."

The blue eyes open with a vacant gaze that grows intelligent as it falls upon Weston.

"Where am I?" she asks. "I've had a dreadful dream. Weston—and she shudders—"dreadful!"—then, as she sees Paula, she starts, and shrinks from her. "Why are you here?" she says, with a thrill almost of terror in her voice. "You have been a long time coming. Have you come to reproach

TURKS REJOICE OVER RETENTION OF CONSTANTINOPLE.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 22. The British squadron, consisting of five battleships and four torpedo destroyers, under command of Admiral Fremantle, arrived Saturday and anchored in the Bosphorus near the Italian and French battleships in the waterway and within a stone's throw of the Parliament Building where peace decisions are taking place. The newspapers are so jubilant over the retention of Constantinople by the Turks, that details of possible Peace Treaty are overshadowed.

PLEADING FOR AVIATION.

PARIS, Feb. 21. Plans that something be done for French aviation which is described to be in a state of paralysis, are made by the newspaper "Liberte," which asserts the next war will be won or lost through the state of efficiency attained by air forces in peace time. It is argued that commercial airplanes should be capable of being transferred into war machines at the shortest period of time and that the country should have enough civil aviators to put in to the field a powerful fleet of planes during the first days of any conflict. Such a fleet would have a tremendous advantage, it is pointed out in bombing towns and points of strategic importance.

FISHING BY AEROPLANE.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21. The bureau of Fisheries plans to encourage fishing by aeroplane. The planes will be used to aid Tuna and Sardine fishermen in finding schools of fish. The use of aircraft to locate submarines during the war time gave the bureau the idea.

SIMMS' CRITICISM.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 21. Admiral William Simms, orator at the University day exercises of the University of Pennsylvania to-day to celebrate the birthday of George Washington, criticized the tendency of Americans to resent adverse comment on the military unpreparedness of the United States. He said, "the missing element in Americanism is that it does not include adequate solicitude for our safety. The Government, to a certain extent our people, resent criticism of anything American. This is a dangerous attitude that has cost us many thousands of lives and many millions in treasure." After saying his father was a native of Pennsylvania, that his mother was a Canadian and happened to be in Canada when he was born, he added, "Perhaps you may be kind enough to consider me also an American, notwithstanding the title that has been given me by certain unfriendly critics of the leading British Admiral in the American Navy."

GUILTY OF CRIMINAL SYNDICALISM.

OAKLAND, California, Feb. 21. A verdict of guilty was returned last night by a jury which tried Miss Anita Whitney, social worker writer and lecturer, on a charge of criminal syndicalism. She was the first woman arrested in California under a law which makes it a felony to advocate violence as a means of accomplishing a political or industrial change.

TROUBLE IN POMERANIA.

BERLIN, Feb. 21. Herr Von Braun, Prussian Minister of Agriculture, is noted by the Tageblatt as saying that a very serious situation exists in Pomerania because of the exasperation of numerous land workers who have received notices of dismissals while the states are occupied partly by armed Baltic troops. The newspapers say the incidents are inspired by reactionary political moves.

SWITZERLAND AND AUSTRIA.

BERNE, Feb. 21. Switzerland has decided to deliver to Austria immediately several hundred cars of foodstuffs and oats. The shipment will be valued at about six million francs and a short delay will be granted to pay for it.

GERMANS SPEEDING UP PRODUCTION.

BERLIN, Feb. 21. At a conference of employers and employees of the coal industry yesterday the men agreed to overtime shifts for half ordinary working hours on two days a week, while mine owners promised increases in overtime pay of from fifty to one hundred per cent. The object is to speed up production.

A Big Success.

On Tuesday evening American Chain Overshoes, in which the principle of the weed chain used on automobile tires has been humanely adapted to horses' shoes, were first tried on the streets of St. John's and created quite a sensation among horse owners. Attached to the fore hoots of a heavy truck horse they enabled the animal to get a footing on ice and snow without exertion, which his bare hind shoes were unable to hold. Later they were tried on a cab horse and worked with the same results, except owing to a mistake in size one chain got detached. American Chain Overshoes are not sold by blacksmiths. "Watch Your Feet"

"The Confessions of the Admirals."

The British naval writer, Archibald Hurd, published in a recent issue of an English review an article bearing the happy title, "The Confessions of the Admirals," which dealt with what might be termed the retrospective pessimism of naval commanders. It was a review of the revelations as to the conduct of the war that have been made by various Admirals since the conclusion of hostilities. Viscount Jellicoe has spoken; Lord Fisher has spoken; Sir Percy Scott has spoken; Admiral Bacon (in what is said to be the finest naval book written in many years) has spoken; even Admiral von Tirpitz has spoken. Now Admiral Sims, of the U.S. Navy, has spoken. And the tone of all their utterances has been one of partial gloom. Much was accomplished, they admit, but much more could have been achieved, if only this, that or the other person had not been possessed of a mind impenetrable to ideas. Really the layman would gather that the Allied navies escaped destruction as by a miracle, and if we accepted the conclusions of every great man who has spoken as definitive or infallible, we would all be obliged to fall back on the old proclamation of pessimism: "What's the good of anything? Nothing!"

Yet, if we accept another old adage, that the proof of the pudding is in the eating, we must, however, admit that the only Admiral who need view the naval history of the war in a spirit of gloom is Tirpitz. His life-long dream of seeing Germany a great and predominant naval power, prosecuted with undeniable ability, was shattered. What was left of the German navy lies scuttled in Scapa Flow; the German merchant marine that it was devised to nurture and protect has vanished.

Therefore we may accept the sad suggestions from English-speaking commanders of what might have happened, but didn't, with a considerable degree of resignation. The senior naval officer, not only in Great Britain, but of other lands which possess real navies, is the most highly trained type of professional man in existence. His fund of exact knowledge must greatly exceed in scope and variety that of the most highly trained man in any other calling. It embraces astronomy and diplomacy, marine jurisprudence and meteorology, ballistics and sanitation, and other things too numerous to mention. In addition he must have the faculty of command and the instinct to act effectively in a crisis. Altogether the tried and proven naval commander comes as near to being a superman as any being likely to be evolved on this earth. As such he has the defects of his qualities. He has a profound belief in his own convictions, otherwise he could not command at all; and an intense impatience with anything or anybody who delays or thwarts the execution of his plans. That is why there is so little unanimity of opinion among admirals of the highest qualifications; and such intolerance of expedients and policies which in his view produce inaction. Did admirals not experience such emotions keenly they would never have accomplished anything or become fit for command at all.

Bearing in mind the qualities which go to the making of a great seaman, we need not take too seriously the charges which British admirals make against-civil control in the motherland. What is perhaps true is that U.S. assistance was not so effective as Admiral Sims believes to have been possible; but British writers whose sincerity cannot be doubted, have borne strong testimony to the fact that substantial assistance was rendered in the anti-submarine campaign by American destroyers from the time they arrived in Irish waters in May of 1917, until the signing of the armistice. There was a prevailing opinion among educated Americans long before the war that Josephus Daniels was a man of too much levity and ignorance for the responsibilities of his position of Secretary of the Navy, and as such he must have gotten on the nerves of experts. But it must be remembered that he had as assistant secretary, Franklin Roosevelt, a man whose efficiency and zeal for the Allied cause is not open to doubt. As for the knave or fool who told Admiral Sims the preposterous lie that the American Government would as soon fight the British as the Germans, publicity should be his punishment.—Toronto Saturday Night.

Press Cuttings.

AGENCIES WHICH WATCH WHAT THE PAPERS ARE SAYING ABOUT YOU.

Fifty years ago there was not a Press-cutting agency in the world. To-day there are several hundreds. There are fifty or more in this country, and more than that in the United States. In these two countries alone some fifty thousand persons are employed in the business while the capital invested is upwards of £10,000,000.

Every capital city in the world has an agency of the kind. You find them not only in London, Paris, and New York, but in Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Ayres, Melbourne, Johannesburg and Yokohama.

Their customers are numbered by tens of thousands. Practically every man who holds any public position subscribes. All public companies, especially railway and shipping companies are subscribers. Every Royalty has albums full of Press-cuttings, while, naturally, actors, authors, and artists, and all those belonging to similar professions are strong supporters of the agencies.

Probably there is not one man or woman who has ever published a book or written a signed article for a periodical, who has not posted up a collection of criticisms from the Press.

Patronized by Everybody.

Your dramatist gets more notices than any other writer, and is naturally greedy to know what the critics think of his work, and the bill he pays to his agency may amount to four or five pounds a week, or even more.

Prize-fighters and politicians are equally good customers of the Press-clipper.

Journalists or authors who are working on some special subject find the Press-clippings invaluable. They order from several different bureaux at once everything that may be appearing in the World's Press on this particular subject, and so obtain information which could not be obtained in any other way.

Some agencies make a speciality of this sort of thing—that is, supplying information; others will go in for personal matter, others again for criticism. Some include all kinds of work. The papers which get most heavily clipped are the Society Journals. Society women are greedy to collect every paragraph in which their names appear, and, more particularly, photographs or pictures reproducing their features.

There is one agency which confines itself to scientific and medical journals. Its clients are mainly doctors and scientists, and some of them are uncommonly good customers.

The late King Edward not only subscribed to two Press-cutting agencies, but sometimes himself clipped pictures of his royal features appearing in the public prints. His sense of humour protected him against annoyance, and caricatures of himself merely made him laugh.

It is interesting to note that he ordered cuttings from American as well as from British sources.

Montreal Man Twice Thought Time Had Come

Case Was Pronounced Hopeless —Is Picture of Health, Now Grateful to Tanlac.

What is doubtless one of the most remarkable statements ever published in connection with a medicine, was made by Georges Boudreau, a grocery clerk, living at 1288 Notre Dame street West, Montreal, a few days ago.

The story of Mr. Boudreau's restoration to health is profoundly interesting and is given below just as related by himself in a conversation with a Tanlac representative:

"Two and a half years ago I began suffering from stomach trouble and twice during that time my case was pronounced hopeless and I was thought I could not live. My trouble began with a feeling like a big lump, after nearly every meal, in the pit of my stomach. I would then have to drink a great quantity of water in order to get a little relief. I had to live mostly on milk and my stomach pained me so at times that I fainted and thought I would surely die. The least efforts would cause me to perspire a great deal; my legs were swollen terribly and my heart would palpitate at a frightful rate. Six months after my trouble started, I had to give up all idea of work. If I ventured to go for a walk on the street the least little breeze would almost take my breath away, and I had to go back to the house. I could not sleep at night and had to prop myself up in bed with pillows. I was bloated all the time with the gas on my stomach, was constipated, the worst kind, and had absolutely no appetite. I also had rheumatism in my joints so bad that I had to take something to ease the pain. My case seemed to be a puzzle, as no one understood it, and I got worse in spite of all that was done for me. I was often caught weeping in despair over my condition.

"But I am now a happy man and my gratitude towards Tanlac is unlimited. It has not only restored my health, but I believe it has saved my life, and I can see that I will soon be able to take up the work again that I was doing before my troubles began. Why, my appetite is so ravenous that I simply can't get enough to eat, and my digestion is so good that I never have any gas or an uncomfortable feeling no matter what or how much I eat. My legs do not swell any more, the rheumatic pains are gone, and I sleep every night just like a child. In fact, I am feeling perfectly well and I mean to say by that that I haven't an ache or a pain of any kind. My recovery has been a surprise to just lots of people, and some who have met me on the street lately seemed absolutely amazed at the wonderful change that has taken place in me. All the praise, thanks and good wishes being sent to Tanlac. It is simply wonderful and I wish every one knew its value as I do."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connor, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac representative in Harbor Street, by Thomas Wakely & Sons; in Placentia, by James Murphy & Son, and in Topsail by J. K. Russell.—adv.

Peach salad is made with the halves of canned peaches filled with any preferred mixture of fruits or vegetables.

Flanked steak with a foamy border of white mashed potatoes is a most pleasant change after the ordinary method.

When you see a very busy day ahead, plan a stew in which your vegetables and meat can be cooked in the same pot.

A memorandum pad and pencil hung close beside the pantry shelves is convenient for jotting down supplies which are needed.

Orange juice squeezed into a tall glass and served with cracked ice is much more luxurious than when served the usual way.

An outside window-box may be filled with American arbor vitae, boxwood or little cedars, and will make a hiding place for the birds.

Serim makes a very artistic curtain, when stitched with a color corresponding with the color scheme of the room in which it is hung.

It is a good idea to cut the dough for baking powder biscuits with a sharp knife. The biscuit will be in squares and there will be no waste.

WILL YOUR HELPER PAY INCOME TAXES?

RUTH CAMERON

An interesting warning has been issued to employers of domestic help in the United States. They are reminded that all persons making payment to another person of fixed or determinable income of $1,000 or more in a taxable year, must render a return thereof to the commissioner.

I suppose the average employer of domestic help will give a sigh of relief and say, "Well that doesn't mean me. Goodness knows, domestic helpers are getting big enough wages, but thank goodness, it is only the rich people who pay over $20 a week for cooks and laundresses, even in these days."

But before she rejoices in deliverance from that burden, the average employer must consider one more regulation:

Remember Their Board and Lodging

The names of all employees to whom payments exceeding $1,000 a year are made, whether such sum total is made up of wages, salaries, commissions or compensation in any other form, must be reported, etc."

Moreover, for failure to make such return, "a penalty of not more than $1,000 attaches."

Of course "compensation in any other form" includes the board and lodging which almost all domestic helpers get.

The author of the warning thought that board and lodging should not be reckoned at less than $7, probably more, since it would be hard to get a room and three meals a day for that sum.

What a Large Room and Private Bath Would Cost.

A woman with whom I was discussing the matter agreed with fervor. "My daughter's maids," she said, "have a large room and a private bath and the same food the family has. They would not pay less than $13 for that at any boarding house."

True, except that the maids supply their own table service and care of the rooms, which they would not do in a boarding house.

Nevertheless, it does seem a startling thought that the class of workers who, within my memory, received from $2 to $4 a week for 12 or 13 hours a day, should be having the shortened hours, the vastly enlarged privileges, and be paying income taxes.

One is reminded of the story that is going the rounds, of the cook who had been engaged to come and then backed down because she found the family had no garage; "I must have a place to keep my car," she said!

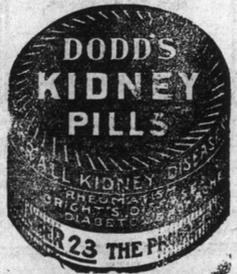

But Why Isn't the Field Overcrowded?

To some people facts (and fancies) like these are the proverbial red rag. They almost foam at the mouth at them. I suppose there is no doubt that, considering their wages in comparison with what other classes of labor get, domestic helpers are overpaid.

But the people who rage should not forget to take this fact into account. The law of supply and demand regulates wages. When work is overpaid and is in other ways preferable, desirable workers rush into it and bring down the wage level.

Wages for domestic service has been soaring for several years. Why haven't workers from other fields rushed into this field?

Can it be that there are still other ways in which the work is not perfectly desirable. How about it?

To make a restful house be sure there is nothing in it but what is beautiful or useful.

An egg-slicer is one of the "conveniences" which really is worth while in the kitchen.

The outer layers of grain are those which contain the vitamins so necessary for health.

Don't knead the left-overs of pie-crust too hard if you wish to make crisp tarts out of them.

Laces should be washed in milk and water, then "floated" clean and put away in blued flannel.

A bag hung at the end of the sewing machine is handy for disposing of scraps and trimmings.

The severely correct afternoon tea is simply tea and wafers or paper-thin slices of buttered bread.

A pot roast should be browned on all sides in a hot pan before it is put into the pot for stewing.

Starch for the dark calicos should be made in the usual way, then add to it one pint of clear coffee.

When one is badly stopped up with a cold put a few hops in vinegar, let boil, then inhale the fumes.

THE OTHER FELLOWS.

We keep on sadly saying, "Why don't our neighbors save? The chumps are not obeying our counsel wise and grave. They glow themselves insanely, their orgies do not halt, although we've told them plainly to put their dimes in salt. We've argued and implored them, we who are up to snuff; for long, long hours we've bored them with wise Ben Franklin stuff; and still they blow their plunder for gilt and gingerbread, and bid us go to thunder and likewise soak our heads." And we who talk so sanely, and weep the loud boo-hoo, hand out our wisdom vainly, because we're spenders too. We're strong on admonition, on precepts high and fine; our neighbors' sad condition brings from our eyes the brine; we'd like to see them dropping their coin in savings banks, and not keep Hades popping with wanton, wasteful practice. And then we buy some rubies, or cars not made of tin, as well as other boobies who blow their money in. Among the scraps we wander, to see what is for sale; for the gumbobs we squander the useful, wholesome kale. And then when we are buffed we take our new-found way and say we are disgusted, the way men blow their pay.

100 Pounds for a Spoon.

THE GREAT VALUE OF OLD SILVER.

Silver is now just about double the price it was in 1914, and a great number of those people who did not make fortunes during the War are taking the opportunity to sell all sorts of silver ornaments, things rather more pretty than useful, to be melted down.

These consist chiefly of candlesticks, inkstands, photograph frames and the like, but there are also silver forks, spoons, sugar basins and other table plate.

If these are modern, well and good. They are not worth more than their weight in silver. But it is well to warn intending vendors not to rashly dispose of old silver. Old silver is very valuable, being worth far more than the five-and-sixpence an ounce which is the bullion price.

Only the other day a Queen Anne milk-jug was sold for 125 shillings an ounce! It came from an old farmhouse, and its original owners had no idea of its real value.

Those perfectly plain silver spoons with a large flat bowl are known to experts as Puritan spoons, and are worth their weight in gold.

A dealer recently offered a man £50 for the worn old silver sugar basin the family were using. It was really a seventeenth century porringer, and was worth at least £20.

Apothecary spoons are treasured by collectors. Each has a figure of one of the Apostles, with his emblem. St. Peter for instance, holds his key. In olden days they were given as christening gifts. Single specimens, if old, have brought as much as £30, while £100 was paid for a sixteenth century Apostle spoon.

The age of silver can be accurately told by its hall mark. Any encyclopaedia will give information on this subject.

The Habit of Old Age.

(From the Manchester Guardian.)
It was said long ago that a man is just as old as he feels, and now some Americans are trying to act on this principle systematically. In New York they have started a Life Extension Institute, where research into longevity will go forward on new lines. The plan is not merely to control disease infections, or to work out a healthy way of living that would get the best out of the Biblical three score and ten. The Life Extensionists have more positive hopes than that. It is argued that the most vital period of life may even be extended indefinitely.

The Rift Within the Lute.

Disagreeing with the Fish Export Regulations in so far as they applied to Brazil, one of the members of the Advisory Board to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries has resigned from that body, and has given the reasons which led him to take this step. Not being in perfect accord with his colleagues on their policy with regard to the markets of our greatest South American consumer, Mr. Walter S. Monroe felt that he had no alternative but to resign. In doing so he showed considerable moral courage, for it is evident that the other members of the Board were not inclined to concede one iota in favor of Brazil, and therefore Mr. Monroe was in a hopeless minority and his advice and suggestions apparently went unheeded. His presence on the Board was consequently of no value whatever to the trade, which, it is obvious, is still being controlled by the combine to suit its own desires, and contrary to that spirit which makes for equal rights to all.

The Board apparently is mightily pleased that this should have happened, for it can now pursue the mapped-out tenor of its way without fear of internal opposition, as the successor to Mr. Monroe will be appointed from the ranks of those who are in agreement with the policy at present being carried out at the instance of the Board, and with such an acquisition to its personnel there is no telling what arbitrary acts may be committed. So far as the Board itself is concerned, there is the statement of Mr. Brookes that the resignation of Mr. Monroe will make no difference whatever. Of course not. The Board has mapped out its procedure and intends to carry on, under, we presume, the original regulations published in November last. "The Board's policy remains the same." From that it must be inferred that, so far, there has been no inclination whatever to act upon the series of resolutions adopted unanimously by the full Board of Trade at the general meeting held on Monday, February 9th. If the policy of the Advisory Board "remains the same" (vide Mr. Brookes) then there has been no changes made in accordance with the desires of the Commercial Body interested in the export of fish, and the combine still is all-powerful.

The resolution adopted without dissent at the meeting referred to above, will bear reprinting, because in it is embodied the consensus of opinion of all those most intimately acquainted with the fish shipping business:

(A) That the Newfoundland Board of Trade recognize that Fish Export Regulations are essential; but those now in force do not entirely meet the requirements of the Trade of the country.

(B) It is the opinion of the Newfoundland Board of Trade that the Advisory Board should, if at any time it is essential that prices are to be adjusted, and supplies regulated, meet the whole body of the St. John's Fish Exporters, and as many Outport shippers as possible, and fully discuss the matter, and recommend to the Government the necessary alterations.

(C) That the Newfoundland Board of Trade is of the opinion that the shippers should have the right of offering their supplies of codfish direct to the buyer, in all markets, excepting Italy at present, and in Italy as soon as conditions will permit, provided they maintain the prices and regulations set forth.

(D) That the Newfoundland Board of Trade write the Government requesting them to grant the desires and wishes of the Trade.

Again in 1948.

In the Telegram of January 3 it was asked if some reader of a calculating turn of mind could tell when next there would be a five Sunday February. The question not being answered, the information, with a bit extra, is given herewith: February, the shortest month in the year, has five Sundays this year, which is unusual. In Leap years the month has 29 days, and as February 1st, 1920 was a Sunday, the month began and will end on Sunday. This has not happened since 1880, and will not occur again before 1948. For those who are curious to know when this has happened before, here is a record of five Sunday Februaries: 1604, 1632, 1660, 1688, 1728, 1756, 1784, 1824, 1852, 1880, 1920. It will be noted that the periods of recurrence are 28 and 40 years, the former leading.

Supreme Court.

(Before the Full Bench.)
The Grand Jury was present and was addressed by the Court re The King vs. Eilreda Flynn for bigamy. The Grand Jury brought in a true bill. On being arraigned defendant pleaded guilty. The court retired to consider sentence, and on returning the prisoner was sentenced to twelve months' hard labor from date of commitment.
In the matter of the Election Act and the Election for H. Main, held on Nov. 3rd, 1919, and the petition of R. Kelly; Gibbs moves for a day for hearing. Howley moves for Wednesday; Gibbs opposes. It is ordered that the hearing be set for Thursday, March 2.

Cook's Bath Tablet. Soap is no bad thing either for the bath or for general toilet purposes. A generous sized tablet fits the hand well enough, and as for quality it is fully up to the mark for general knockabout use. Price 52c. a tablet.
Some people desire to go no further than Rose Water and Glycerine when coming to preventing or repairing the ravages of February and March winds. For the convenience of these folks we put up a handy sized bottle of this mixture at 20 cents a bottle.

Going to Louisburg.

The Sagona leaves in a day or two for Louisburg, via Port aux Basques. She takes freight and will return with freight.
The Melgie sails in a day or two, also, touching in at some ports along the South coast. She will not call at Port aux Basques, but will continue on from the last port to Louisburg.

Opening of the House.

The Prime Minister is the Telegram's authority that it is not known when the House of Assembly will open. Although stated unofficially that it would open in the third week of March, the Premier says that the opening will not take place "until the Government gets its legislation ready."

Mr. Eric Bowring Resigns.

QUITTED BECAUSE HE COULD NOT CONDONE THINGS OF WHICH HE HAD NO KNOWLEDGE.

ADVISORY BOARD NOW MINUS TWO MEMBERS.

Mr. Eric Bowring, director of the firm of Bowring Bros. and member of the Advisory Board to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries in connection with the Fish Export Regulations, has resigned from that Board.
Seen by a Telegram representative this morning, Mr. Bowring stated his reason for resigning.
"I was never a regularly constituted member of the Advisory Board," said Mr. Bowring. "I was asked to attend the meetings of that Board, and in the place of a regular member who is away, I agreed to do what little I could to help things along. But, I feel, that while I was asked and expected to bear the full responsibility of a member of the Board, I was not treated as a full member and was excluded from information held by the members of the Board. In a word, I was not and not prepared to condone anything which the Board may order or do unless I am treated as a full member and have full knowledge of what that order or action is."
Questioned as to his stand on the Fish Export Regulations, he replied: "I am in favor of the Regulations as long as they are properly carried out."

MR. BARR'S EXPLANATION.
Queried by the Telegram reporter as to his view of Mr. Bowring's resignation from the Board, Mr. G. M. Barr, member of the Board and one of the leading champions of the Regulations, said:

"Mr. Bowring states that he has resigned because he was not treated to information which the other members of the Board possessed. Regarding that I may say that some messages were received but that they were of such an indefinite nature that they were not sent to ascertain their meaning. Mr. Bowring did not see those messages which were received because he was not around at the time and because, as I have said, they were of such an indefinite nature. Neither Mr. Bowring nor Mr. Cave saw them."
Questioned as to Mr. Bowring's membership, he answered: "Mr. Bowring was an unappointed member." "He would have been gazetted in the ordinary run of events," he added.
"The statement that I had sold fish under prices set is incorrect," he said. "The vessel Ophelia was outside Oporto and the price demanded by us was 84 shillings. Oporto was willing to pay only 52 shillings, so the Ophelia was diverted to Naples, where she is. I presume, now unloading. Her cargo was sold to the Consorzio at the regular price set by the Board."
Regarding the rumor that he stated that he still believed in them, the rumor that he would be the next to resign was wrong, he said.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—In reply to Mr. E. J. Horwood's letter in Friday's issue of the Herald, I would say:

- That the evidence I gave before His Honor Judge Morris, was "The truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth."
- That I made no reference to any evidence given by Mr. Horwood on a prior occasion at the Magistrate's Court.
- That I did not excuse the sale of a commodity by Mr. Horwood, but I did justify a business transaction between his firm and ours.

Very truly yours,

BOOSTING LABRADOR.
 NEW YORK, Feb. 22. There are great possibilities for Canada in the development of the mineral resources of Labrador, Dillon Wallace, an American writer, who has made a number of trips to that part of the Dominion told members of the Canadian Club at a luncheon Saturday. He declared that Labrador would be to Canada what Alaska is to the United States. Wallace described several exploration trips he had made through Labrador.

 LONDON, Feb. 22. Rear Admiral Harry Knapp, commander of the United States naval forces in European waters, in the course of a speech before the London Section of Navy League of the United States, last night, said, "God forbid that we should ever have war with Canada, but I don't know whether I would apply that to a country bordering the United States on the South."

Denies Anuthorship.
 Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—From what I have heard during the past two or three days, it seems that the opinion is pretty general that the letter which appeared in The Post over the nom de plume "M." a few days ago, criticising the production of the opera, San Toy, was written by me.

I beg to say I did not write the article in question. I saw it first in the Morning Post. I neither heard nor knew anything of it before its publication. Criticism of operas or musical comedies is not in my line, and were I inclined to slam such a production for any reason whatever I would employ some one to do it for me if my qualifications for the task were no better than the person who undertook the criticism of San Toy, to which I refer. To my mind the writer of the criticism was actuated more by a desire to gratify a personal grudge than help towards the improvement of local talent and the elevation of amateur productions. The object of the production was well known and should have shielded those who gave such time and effort to that worthy cause from disparaging criticism in the public press. Even if it fell short of the high standard set by its cultured critic, true manliness should have influenced him to condone the troupe's shortcomings, and observe what Sterne so happily calls "the small sweet courtesies of life," and reserve his criticism for the next professional company that appears in the Casino.

The Evangelists

At Gower Street Church.

The two weeks' services in the city, so faithfully and earnestly conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Demarest, came to a close last night, and though they may never come back to Newfoundland again, the inspiring and eloquent message of cheer and salvation will linger in the memories of those whose privilege it was to hear the gifted speakers until life's latest hour. It will be impossible to know all the incalculable good done, because scores that never went to the communion rail, made the quiet, firm resolution to let God rule their lives, and trust in the strength He will by His grace and Divine assistance afford them to endure temptation, and enable them to fight the good fight. As the greatest number had requested by the slips sent in that "The Prodigal Son" should be the subject, Mrs. Demarest read that parable recorded in St. Luke's Gospel, 15th chapter, commencing on the father's hope centred in the two sons, anxious that they should do well, working with them, that what accumulated should be theirs when he was gone; when unexpectedly the youngest son demands the share that will come to him. Realizing his independence, that he could do as he liked, without any thought of the aged father, he says hand over what is mine. How cruel and selfish but many have done that and broken a father's heart. God lets every person go their own way; if He did not, man would be only a machine, and and if a father and mother suffers, God suffers more. And so off goes the proud young man, proud of his powers of mind and body; proud of his possessions, the cattle and sheep and servants. To whom did he owe all this? His father. To what do we owe all our gifts of mind, strength of body, etc? The infinite mercy of our Heavenly Father. Think of our responsibility—we are answerable to God for all our talents. The young man went on in his career. Oh, yes, he had a good time, indulging in every pleasure, gratifying all his passions; wasting his substance in riotous living; seeking company with the vicious; sinking lower and lower down until he reaches the bottom of degradation—feeding swine. What a change from the company of the well ladies and gentlemen to pigs; and the speaker said, if I were a respectable pig I would consider myself insulted to be classed with some men and women who do such awful, unquestionable things as some men and women have done. We shudder!

to think of the Huns when their passions were let loose, and they committed crimes that made us tremble. But still some fall lower than the level of the animal. When a father will kick his son so badly that he dies from injury, and a mother will murder her own offspring; when little children (she exclaimed) with terror fly from their own father when he comes out of a stupor from dope, as they would from a wild beast. There is a great deal of sin in St. John's. God knows all about it. Splendid men wrecking their own lives. The prodigal came to himself. He was insane before. "I will arise and go home to my father," and ask if he will take me as a slave servant. Good resolution: very dutiful—but the way to hell is paved with good resolutions, but they don't save any one. But we read, he arose; he did it, he acted. The devil suggested, you are foolish to go home like a sneaking beggar, like a dog that has a whipping, whining for mercy. Some feel very bad over their past life of sin, and if they make a bit of noise or confession and penitence people are annoyed. If so, let them go to the cemetery. It is absolutely quiet there. Everybody is dead. No life; where there is life, in the forest, in business, everywhere, there is noise. Going back to the young man in rags nearly home the word picturing of the old father looking out was very real. Straining his eyes to see if it was his long lost boy. Yes, it was he, though his step dragged, and he was emaciated with hunger, it was he, and the old man ran and embracing him, blessed him, before the wayward boy could say a word. He didn't give him a chance to ask for a hired man's work. The speaker closed with explaining that the best robe, is Christ's righteousness, ours is filthy rags, the ring of the covenant, fellowship with God—God does not forgive like men. He forgives and forgets. With contempt, the speaker scored the elder brother, the Pharisee with his horrible jealousy, who refused to go in, and remonstrated with five 's and three 'm's against the discrimination in favor of the younger brother. Yes, but the drunkards and harlots, Jesus said, should get into the kingdom of God before the Pharisees. That is why. The parable was thrilling, and will be long remembered. Revs. Dr. Bond and Curtis offered prayer and the results sternly only will reveal.—A.W.M.

THE BOY AND I

He wonders what it's all about!
The clang of heavy steel on steel,
The grinding of saws everywhere,
The smoke from chimneys pouring out,
The sound of feet as men go by—
And very often, so do I.

He looks upon the world and sees
Frail women over tired by care,
And haste and hurry everywhere,
And tries to solve these mysteries,
Why did men live and young men die—
And very often, so do I.

He is so very young that he Knows nothing yet of caste or creed,
Or any difference of breed;
From prejudices he's wholly free,
He hears men sneer, and wonders why—
And very often, so do I.

Solid as the Continent.

JUSTLY DESCRIBES THE POSITION OF THE NORTH AMERICAN LIFE.

Taking as we may the Annual Report of an institution as large and important as the North American Life as a gauge of financial conditions, we have reason to view with optimism the outlook for the future. In every important feature of the business marked increases were made. After pointing out the great strides in business written, the President, Mr. L. Goldman, at the recent annual meeting of Directors and policyholders referred with just pride to the Company's assets now amounting to $13,869,550.26. After Liabilities have been fully provided for there is a substantial net surplus of $2,694,338.13 establishing beyond doubt the unexcelled financial position of the Company.

Policies issued and revived during the year amounted to $22,199,547.00, which sum is over $3,500,000.00 in excess of the previous year's business. The total assurance now in force amounts to $84,597,490.00, the highest mark reached in the Company's history.

The management of the Company bend every effort towards advancing the interests of the Policyholders. During 1919 over $2,299,000.00 was paid to Policyholders. Of this amount $378,265.18 represented Dividends and at the same time the company announces that the Dividends payable in 1920 will be on the same liberal basis. It is to be noted that during the past ten years this Com-

Prospero Had Hard Time.

Was Gone 50 Days—Frozen in Ice of Seven Feet Thickness and Three Miles in Extent.

S. S. Prospero, Capt. John Field, after a trip of 50 days, the longest on record, returned to port yesterday. This trip was a terribly hard one and the ice conditions with which she had to contend were such as none of the passengers or crew had ever known. Getting jammed in a sheet of ice which was seven feet thick and three miles in extent, she was forced to lay helpless for some weeks. After drifting with the sheet for this long period she eventually got clear and reached Twillingate, where the Sagona, which was sent north to her help, supplied her with coal. From there she sailed down the coast, the ice having by then moved off. Some 25 passengers, all of them extremely weary, but none the worse, came by her.

Inter-Collegiate Hockey.

The first of the inter-collegiate hockey games will be played to-morrow morning by the Methodist and Felldian teams, and a good contest is expected, as both have been hard at practice for some time. St. Bon's and Felldians will play on Thursday, and the Methodists and St. Bon's on Saturday next.

Mr. J. D. Henry, manager of the Parsons' Pond oil fields, who arrived Saturday by the Sachem, was too ill to come ashore. He was feeling the strain of his eight weeks' journey from the North-West coast, but it is hoped that under the care of Dr. Ryan he will be sufficiently well to leave by the Sachem for Liverpool. Thence he goes to Egypt, to the oil fields. Howard Verge, one of the General Oilfield drillers, accompanies him. The remainder of the staff will be taken off at London. Despite the delay, Mr. Henry hope to be able to return shortly after navigation opens.

Isn't It Wonderful?

THIS tin of Klim, pasteurized separated milk in powder form, represents the modern development in the use of such milk. Just as the flour mills make better flour than the old-time grind-stone method, so is Klim purer, less expensive, less wasteful and easier to keep than the same milk in liquid form.

Get Klim from your grocer. Use from the tin as needed. Will not freeze nor turn sour. No bottles to wash, no tickets to buy.

Write for "The Wonderful Story of Klim," an interesting recipe book. 55c. at your Grocer's.
