CHAPTER XVII.

Bobby woke with a headache the next morning—Champagne and port do not mix very well. As he woke, he was conscious of a faint odor of perfume in the room. It proceeded from his dress clothes, and it was the scent which breathed in Mrs. Dalton's hair, the subtle perfume which emanated from her dress. Bobby must have been standing very near to her before it could have got into his dress-coat.

It recalled the previous evening, and Bobby, as he got into his bath, thought of Mr. Morgan Thorpe and his fascinating sister, and of Trevor.

Now, Bobby was not altogether a simpleton, and there were some things about the small house in Cardigan Terrace which rather jarred upon him; a headache makes you rather critical. Mr. Morgan Thorpe was a little too suave and smiling; the rooms certainly were rather soiled and vulgar; and Mrs. Dalton—But Bobby could find no fault with her. She was altogether beautiful, and charming, and sweet, and he glowed when he thought how gracious she had been to him.

He thought of her all the morning while he was grinding French and German with his crammer; and in the afternoon who should call at Prince's Mansions but Mr. Morgan Thorpe himself.

"I was just passing on my way to the club, my dear Deane," he said, with his winning smile, "and I thought I would look in and ask you to go down with me."

Bobby said he should be delighted, and gave his visitor a chair.

Mr. Morgan Thorpe looked round the handsome room with interest and admiration, as if he had never seen it before.

"You have tremendously swaggy chambers, my dear Deane," he said. "Your friend must be a man of nice taste as well as wealth. What did you say his name was? I didn't catch it last night."

"Gaunt," said Bobby. "Lord Gaunt. He's a splendid fellow, and awfully generous. I'm half ashamed of accepting his offer and living in this splendor. His place, Leafmore, is near where we live, and we see a great deal of him. He is doing wonders for the place, rebuilding the cottages and setting up schools, and all that sort of thing."

"Ah, playing the model landlord!" said Morgan Thorpe. "Is he—or a married man?"

"Oh, no!" said Bobby.

Morgan Thorpe nodded, and looked round the room; and Bobby following his eye, said, with a little blush:

"I—I hope Mrs. Dalton, if she will be so kind as to dine here, will like the room."

"Oh, Laura will be sure to admire it," said Mr. Morgan Thorpe. "These etchings, and bronzes, and fur rugs, are all in her way, for as I dare say you noticed, my dear fellow, she is artistic to her finger-tips. But I'm not sure that she will come. She is quite a home bird, and rarely goes anywhere; but of this I am very certain, that if she were to make an exception, it would be in your favor; for, between you and me, my dear Deane I must tell you that you made quite a favorable impression last night upon my dear girl."

Bobby colored to the roots of his hair.

"By the way," continued Mr. Morgan Thorpe, "I think it would be as well, perhaps, not to tell her that these rooms are not your own; she is so very particular, and she might object to come. In fact, if I were you, I shouldn't mention it to any one."

Bobby scarcely saw any reason for this concealment, but he nodded in assent, and was full of admiration of Mrs. Dalton's delicacy.

They went down to the club, and there met Trevor, and the three men went into the billiard-room; and Bobby took his first lesson with all the eagerness of a novice.

They dined together at a restaurant, and Mr. Morgan Thorpe insisted upon paying for the banquet, much, apparently, to Trevor's surprise; for he eyed him with a sullen curiosity and suspicion.

From the theatre, which followed, they went to a little club where Mr. Morgan Thorpe said they could get some decent grilled bones.

It was a very different club to the Orient, and neither so large nor so quiet. A piano was going in one of the rooms, and a gentleman was singing a popular ditty, and there was a good deal of laughter, excepting in one corner, where some men were gathered round a green table playing baccarat.

As he called for champagne, Mr. Morgan Thorpe explained somewhat apologetically that he rarely visited the club, but that it was a capital place to look in at late in the evening, and for a few minutes. On this occasion the few minutes extended to some hours; and with champagne and cigarettes Bobby had a remarkably good time of it. As he went home in one of the small hours, with a flushed cheek and a hot head, he felt that he was "seeing life;" and there is nothing more flattering to youth than this conviction.

He met Mr. Morgan Thorpe nearly every day at the Orient; and in a day or two received another invitation to dine at Cardigan Terrace. As on the previous occasion, he and Trevor were the only guests. Mrs. Dalton received him with a softly murmured welcome. "I thought you were never coming again!" she said in her low, clear voice.

She wore a dress of old rose silk, and she looked, if that were possible, more lovely and bewitching than she had done the first night he had seen her. As before, the dinner was excellent, and Mr. Morgan Thorpe a charming host. The dinner was excellent, and Mr. Morgan Thorpe a charming host. The dinner was excellent, and Mr. Morgan Thorpe a charming host.

"I shall have to have some help, sir," she said; "or perhaps I'd better get some of the things from Fortnum & Mason. It won't cost much more, and they'll sure to be first-rate."

"All right," said Bobby, cheerfully and innocently. "And you'd better get a man to wait."

On the morning of the dinner he rearranged the rooms, shifting and re-shifting the furniture that it should all appear at the best advantage. He had ordered a huge basket of flowers and orchids from the man in Bond Street—it was the bill for the flowers that, more than any other, afterward made Bobby's hair stand on end—and he set a great bunch on his dressing-table beside the silver-backed brushes and combs he had purchased for Laura's use; also he placed another, but smaller posy, beside her plate.

When at home he drank beer; but for this occasion he ordered some of the most expensive wines on the wine merchant's list, and procured cigars of the choicest brand. He was very particular about the coffee, which Fortnum & Mason were to sendiced at the precise moment it would be required.

Concerning the cost of the affair he did not trouble himself, seeing that everybody was willing and more than willing to give him credit; and having dressed himself with extraordinary care, he surveyed the table glittering with Gaunt's plate and silver and the costly orchids, with a feeling not quite of satisfaction, but, at any rate, cheerful anxiety.

How his heart beat and the color rose to his handsome face when he heard the bell ring and Mr. Morgan Thorpe's soft voice! Stiffing his nervousness he went forward to meet his guests and stammered his welcome. He could scarcely believe that she was really here in his (this is, Lord Gaunt's) room, until he felt the soft pressure of her gloved hand; and heard her musical voice murmuring: (To be continued.)

Bobby hesitated. He had not promised any one that he would not play cards or bet on races; but he was conscious that he was not rich enough for either amusement.

"Don't play unless you like," murmured Laura.

Something in her tone nettled Bobby.

"Oh, I'll take a hand, as they want me," he said.

"Then you must not play high," she said, letting her hand fall upon his arm lightly, with an almost tender little pressure. "Morgan, you must not play high."

"We'll play 'for love,' if Mr. Deane likes," said Morgan Thorpe.

Trevor growled contemptuously, and Bobby, as he seated himself at the table, said, with a flush:

"I'll play for anything you like."

The little nap commenced, and was played for some time to the accompaniment of soft music. At intervals Laura moved about the room, arranging some flowers or looking over a ladies' fashion paper, and now and again she would come to the table and look on at the play with a little yawn and gesture of petulant impatience.

As is not unusual with the novice, Bobby held good cards. Fortune smiled upon him, as the Goddess of Luck has a trick of doing when she wants to lure the young devotee still closer to her shrine, and he won steadily.

"Really, my dear Deane," said Morgan Thorpe, "you play remarkably well; for, let me tell you, there is more play in nap than in generalisimo."

"He held all the cards," growled Trevor, who was the larger loser.

"The cards are not everything," said Morgan Thorpe. "Deane plays with discretion; he has a cool head and a quick eye."

Now, this is the kind of praise which is as sweet as honey to the inexperienced youth, and Bobby, as he gathered together the little heap of sovereigns, was delighted with himself and his new friends; and as he went home with his winnings jingling in his pocket and the divine Laura's musical voice humming in his head, he felt that he was indeed "seeing life" under peculiarly pleasant auspices.

It was true that on his next visit he lost; but not so much as he had won; and on this occasion Morgan Thorpe assured him that he had only lost because he had held such vile cards.

Excepting when he was working with his crammer, Bobby spent nearly all his time with the Thorpes and Trevor; and he was rapidly becoming quite a man about town. He learned to play billiards, and other card games less innocent than nap; he could drink a fairly large quantity of wine without growing hot and dizzy about the head; and he did not blush so frequently; not even when the divine Laura's smile grew more tender and her voice more soft and thrilling when she looked and spoke to him.

After a week or two he grew bold enough to give a formal invitation to dinner.

It was his first dinner-party; and for days beforehand he was in a fever of anxiety and excitement lest everything should not be right, and the entertainment not be worthy of—of the beautiful woman who had been so sweet and gracious to him.

He spent hours thinking over the menu, and filled his cook with amazement by ordering a meal which would not have discredited a Rothschild.

"I shall have to have some help, sir," she said; "or perhaps I'd better get some of the things from Fortnum & Mason. It won't cost much more, and they'll sure to be first-rate."

"All right," said Bobby, cheerfully and innocently. "And you'd better get a man to wait."

This plan is very acceptable when the Testator's wife is named as Executor. Both drys and wets factions in Glasgow express confidence. Edinburgh is considered doubtful. Glasgow drys organized for to-night a whole night of prayer for deliverance from the drink evil.

CONSIDER THE LOSSES.

LONDON, Oct. 29. Miners and coal mine owners are about equally congratulated in the newspapers to-day on the provisional settlement of the strike arrived at. There is a general disposition to deprecate the use of the word "victory" by either side. It is pointed out that while the men have got their cherished two shillings advance, the government has secured the principle of increased production to coincide with the raise in wages. Meanwhile it is also regretfully pointed out that Europe has lost twelve million tons of English coal which is badly needed, the miners have lost millions in wages and the government has lost a large slice of surplus coal profits. One expert is bold enough to assert that the arrangement ensures ten years peace in the coal trade. The miners have still to vote on the proposals which, however, are considered as eminently likely to receive ac-

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex, pour it into a 10-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made and saves easily $2. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

NEWSPAPERS APPROVE OF SCHEME.

LONDON, Oct. 29. The newspapers here commenting on the settlement of the coal strike if the miners' referendum is favorable, generally recognize the scheme is a compromise. There is universal approval of the scheme by which a sliding scale would apply to profits to owners as well as wages to men. It is remarked the settlement makes for future peace and may prove an introductory step for a new era in British industry.

PRINCE PAUL PROCLAIMED KING.

ATHENS, Oct. 29. Prince Paul, younger brother of the late King Alexander, was proclaimed King of Greece by Parliament last night.

IRISH VOTE WILL SPLIT.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. The Irish vote as a possible factor in the election was the fore to-day. Attention was called to this phase of the campaign by a report that the recent battles between the rival factions of Irish Nationalist organization here, the Judge Cohalan group, and the DeValera enthusiasts, had broken out anew on the eve of the election. John Devoy, Editor of the Gaelic American, in a statement issued to-day indicated that the entire Irish vote will not after all go to Cox. His statement was in reply to an announcement made yesterday by Harry Boland, Secretary to President DeValera, that the Irish Republican Brotherhood had severed relations with the Clan Na Gael because of Judge Cohalan's attitude towards DeValera.

BODY SENT TO CORK.

HOLY HEAD, Wales, Oct. 29. The shipment of MacSweeney's body direct to Cork, was preceded by a violent scene, in which blows were struck and members of the Lord Mayor's family were dragged from coaches. A letter signed by Sir Hamar Greenwood, Secretary for Ireland, gave order for direct shipment to Cork. The letter said, "I am advised that the landing and funeral of the Lord Mayor in Dublin may lead to a demonstration of a political nature. I therefore regret that the Irish Government can't allow the disembarkation of the remains at any port but Cork. The letter also said a steamer would be placed at disposal to carry the body direct to Cork. The steamer would also carry the funeral party.

FAMILY OBJECTED.

HOLY HEAD, Wales, Oct. 29. Brothers and sisters of MacSweeney were forcibly expelled from a railway carriage by the police here yesterday night as a result of a fight over the coffin of the dead hunger striker. The members of the family objected to the coffin being placed aboard a special boat going direct to Cork and a violent scene ensued. The fight lasted five minutes before the coffin could be placed aboard the boat.

BODY AT QUEENSTOWN.

QUEENSTOWN, Ireland, Oct. 29. The body of Terence MacSweeney, late Lord Mayor of Cork, was landed here to-day from the steamer Rathmore. It was received by the Urban Council and thousands of the city's inhabitants. A draft of armed troops was present.

MEDICAL STUDENT SENTENCED TO DEATH.

DUBLIN, Oct. 29. The first murder trial by Court Martial in Dublin has ended in condemnation to death of Kevin Barry, eighteen year old medical student, convicted of complicity in an attack on soldiers in which one soldier was killed. Barry made an affidavit before the magistrates to the effect he had been tortured by jailers and soldiers

SOVIET CARGO SEIZED.

LONDON, Oct. 29. British warships have seized and taken to Batum, the Italian steamer Ancona, bound for a Russian port with a cargo for the Soviet Government, says a Moscow despatch to the Labor Herald. It is claimed this is a gross violation of International Law.

BROTHERS ASPHYXIATED.

SHERBROOK, Que., Oct. 29. Asphyxiated in their place of business in a lunch cart, two brothers, Emile and Ernest Boutin, were found dead by a passerby to-day. From the story that was told at the inquest, it appears that the two men had started to prepare their breakfast and had put a pot of coffee on a gas burner to boil. It is assumed that they fell asleep and the contents of the pot boiled over putting out the flames and allowing the gas to escape. The two brothers came to Sherbrooke last spring from Breakeville, Quebec. A coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

THERE IS ONLY ONE GENUINE ASPIRIN

Only Tablets with "Bayer Cross" are Aspirin—No others!

If you don't see the "Bayer Cross" on the tablets, refuse them—they are not Aspirin at all.

Your druggist gladly will give you the genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" because genuine Aspirin now is made by Americans and owned by an American Company.

There is not a cent's worth of German interest in Aspirin, all rights being purchased from the U. S. Government.

During the war, acid imitations were sold as Aspirin in pill boxes and various other containers. But now you can get genuine Aspirin, plainly stamped with the safety "Bayer Cross." Aspirin proved safe by millions for Headache, Toothache, Earache, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Colds, Neuritis, and Pain generally.

Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets—also larger "Bayer" packages. Aspirin is the trade mark (Newfoundland Registration No. 761), of Bayer Manufacture of Monocaceticacid-ester of Salicylicacid.

Bodies Not Found.

In answer to a message sent by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, the following was received from Mr. J. D. Fitzgerald, of Conche, yesterday, relative to the motor boat disaster which occurred at that place on Sunday last:—"Just returned from off Engloe where boat was last seen; one hundred boats trawling for the men; got no sign of the four men's bodies. Made thorough search of the coast; nothing found." The disaster has been the worst to happen in the locality in recent years, and has brought a gloom over the settlements where the unfortunate men belonged and very little hope is entertained that their bodies will be found.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

FROM THE CLERK'S SIDE OF THE COUNTER.

Some weeks ago I wrote about the take it or leave it I don't give a continental class of service which one gets in so many shops nowadays because of the peculiar labor conditions, and about the great opportunity a far-seeing salesman or woman has to stand out in contrast to this background, and make her enduring friends among his customers.

It is always interesting to hear what the prisoner at the bar of public opinion has to say for himself. Listen, then, to a clerk's very interesting plea for her brother and sister workers:

Why Not Ask for the Right Sheet?
 "Sometimes they make these nice remarks if a clerk walks up pleasantly and ask, 'Something, please?' 'Yes, if I see what I want.' (At a shirt-waist counter). 'What size?' Customer: 'If I see what I like I will tell you the size, and then she goes all through sizes 46-44-42-40 until she finds one, and it is a 46, and she wears a 36, and of course they are all mixed up by that time, and then the clerk will have to go through and hunt that very one—no other will do. If she finds it, it's a blessing. But, oh, if she don't! Then the customer says just what she thinks of her. Please print this and tell the people not to make a fool out of a person if they want a pleasant clerk to wait on them. A clerk is just as human and has a heart just like they have, and we have plenty of work to do. We are kept just as busy when we don't have customers as when we have them.

"From a Clerk That Knows and Could Write More, But Thinks This is Enough."
 It is enough to remind those who stand on the other side of the counter of some ways in which they can be a little more careful and courteous, isn't it?

Schr. Elsie S. Smith, Capt. Leander Pike, arrived from Carbonear, in ballast, this morning, to take back a load of flour.

Why Not Tell What She Can Pay?
 And, another thing, why can't a customer tell the clerk just what she wants and the price she can afford to pay, not let her drag out and show, and look, then the customer might find what she likes, but don't want to pay the price, and make this remark, 'It's not worth it,' turn away and give the clerk a dirty, ignorant look and talk out just like it's the poor clerk's fault because she can't buy it. Perhaps the clerk can't, either, but don't think that far.

This is another point I hope will be home to many: After a poor clerk's been all morning putting the goods in place, a busy-doin'-nothing customer comes along, never needing anything on that counter, and will start from one end and mix till she reaches the other end before she is satisfied; then the clerk has to go all over just on account of that unreasonable customer who wants something to amuse herself with.

THOSE PRICES.
 The price of silks and motor cars has reached a lower spot; but necessary, like cigars, sell at a frightful price. The price of many silks is lower, I admit; but when I price a peck of a p u d s straightway have a fit. I could exist without a hat all trimmed with costly lace; but I must have some bacon fat to feed my haggard face. Expensive hats have slumped, they say, but bacon does not fall, and so I bash my headpiece gray against the kitchen wall. The price has slumped on limousines, which ought to soothe my soul; but when I buy a can of beans it puts me in the hole. The things we really do not need are slumping, you will find, and here a buck and there a seed the prices have declined; the doodads worn by gilded loons cost less, if loons will buy; but oh, my friends, the poor man's prunes are still too beastly high. Don't think the profiteers are dead because some prices shrink; still, still they cinch us on our bread, on all we eat and drink. Until this profiteering stops, the situation's blue; we can't afford to buy the hops and raisins when we'd brew.

THE LITTLE HOMES OF LAUGHTER.

The little homes of laughter can be found on many a street. And it's there that men and women in the bonds of friendship meet; Oh, the mansions on the highway may be handsomer to see, And the rich man's lawn be lovely with the bloom of plant and tree, But the glory of the nation and its strength from day to day Are the little homes of laughter where the children romp and play.

There are millions of them smiling underneath the flag at morn— The homes that know the bedroom where the little ones were born, The homes without pretension, very That know the scars of sorrow, and the room where one has died; It's beneath these roofs of kindness and within these walls of love Where abides the strength and courage that shall keep the flag above.

The little homes of laughter, homes the thousands know and keep, Where the mothers crouch at evening as they rock their babies to sleep And the fathers in their shirt sleeves find some little task to do— Oh, it's there you'll see the glory of the old red, white and blue; In the little homes of laughter, standing North, South, East or West, It is there you'll see the nation at its finest and its best.

Hallowe'en; a Pagan Festival.

It is not surprising to find paganism and Christianity intertwined in obscure corners of Europe, and it seems natural enough when we stumble upon it among those sublimated savages, the American negroes. But how many people realize that in this day and generation in practical America the games we play on All Saints' Eve are survivals of pagan observances?

The first religious observance of All Saints' Eve was in the seventh century in Rome at the time that the Pantheon was converted into a Christian temple. And, of course, All Saints' Day is observed with a regular service in the Roman Catholic and the Episcopal Churches. But the secular English manner of celebrating Hallowe'en which we have preserved is purely pagan. In fact, the old English idea of Hallowe'en was practically the same as the Irish May Eve superstition—the time when fairies are abroad to work mischief or miracles, when spirits become visible and may be communicated with; the time when all the sprites cavort and when the powers of the invisible world are loosed and become all powerful.

It is also the night for informing oneself—should one be possessed of curiosity on the subject—upon one's matrimonial prospects for the future, and especially for the following year. There are manifold devices for ascertaining these important facts—principally founded upon the miraculous divining power of nuts and apples. Everyone, in childhood at least, if not later, has bobbed for apples in a tub of water, the securing of the apple, of course, insuring the ultimate possession of the partner of one's choice.

Some of these means are boisterous and in the manner of peasant celebrations, like the game of bobbing for apples, or the attempt to catch in the teeth an apple suspended from a swiftly untwisting string. Others partake of the ghostly, such as the custom of mounting the stairs backward, muttering some incantation, after which the seeker for knowledge must enter a dark room alone and look in the mirror; then over her shoulder she will surely see the face of her future husband. Another English game consisted of going into the kitchen garden blindfolded to pull up a cabbage. The amount of earth attaching to the root was supposed to be indicative of the material welfare of the future husband. These two tests seem to have been designed especially for the young women. There are a number of these time-honored games that require the propounder of the question to be blindfolded while making the momentous choice—another survival evidently of that ancient belief that fate is present in the accidental selection. The mysterious spirits, powers of darkness, or whatever they were conceived to be who were in possession of the facts about human destinies were supposed on Hallowe'en to guide the fingers of the girl reaching out for the empty bowl which proclaimed her a desolate spinster or toward the bowl full of water which signified a happy marriage, just as surely as fate was supposed, by those given over to the fatalistic in times past, to lie in the turn of a pack of playing cards.

Every boy who has grown up in a village or in some small community has played pranks upon Hallowe'en. There is no limit to the fantastic nature of the tricks, from the familiar custom of removing gates and disabbling door bells to the wildest feat their united brains can concoct. The boys do not know that they are part and parcel of a pagan festival that stretches back into the days when men believed in elves and in fairies and in the tangible powers of evil. Yet even the most unimaginative boy infected with the spirit of Hallowe'en feels something—an implicit sense of the freedom and the cool autumn night—that is in reality the survival of the primitive heathen instincts that all boys possess, and that ally them with the early life of the race. As long as there is anyone left in the world to thrill at the thought of fairies, so long as Peter Pan's appeal across the footlights is answered in the affirmative, there will be the little responsive sensation along the spine at the words Hallowe'en and May Eve. One of the poet Yeats' most exquisite plays in a dramatization of May Eve with all its symbolic human and poetic significance, "The Land of the Heart's Desire," "The Tempest," "A Midsummer Night's Dream," Fiona McCloud's primitive fantasies, the scenes in the kingdom of the trolls in "Peer Gynt" and of the wood-creatures in "The Sunken Bell,"—all these have the power to create that thrill, to set in motion that inexplicable current of our inherited memories reaching far back into the unknown, binding us to that remote past, the beginning of things.

What Does it Mean?

Labrador fishermen will have read with mingled astonishment and indignation the Circular Letter from the Advisory Board to Exporters, published in Thursday's Telegram, for, as the introduction stated, the benefit of all concerned. A copy of this letter was handed us for perusal, whereupon we requested and received permission to give it space in our columns, in order that the fishermen themselves might note whom they had to thank for the difficulty they have experienced in disposing of their season's catch. Those who labored strenuously, late and early, on the rock-bound shore of Newfoundland's dependency during the summer, and brought home their voyage in anticipation of receiving better prices than if they had shipped from the coast, now have this latest instruction thrown in their face, and the result of it is a further slump in the current price of Labrador fish. Fishermen must now realize—if they did not previously—that promises made to them are going unfulfilled. It has been the sole protest of the organ of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, in each succeeding issue since the operation of the Codfish Export Regulations, to deceive fishermen into the belief that had not these been put in force, prices would have dropped alarmingly and their pockets would have suffered commensurately. But it is now perfectly patent that the regulations have proven the bane of the Labradormen who did not ship off the coast, and who are to-day obliged to hawk their fish around St. John's, beseeching that it be taken off their hands, without any material result. Who or what is responsible? Not the newspapers opposed to the Government, whose sole idea is to present facts to the producers in an endeavour to convince them that their guardian friend has gone over to the enemy. The "Graballs" have absorbed Mr. Coaker and his protestations no longer appeal to the fishermen.

It is high time now that the fishermen of Newfoundland begin to realize who are their real friends, and who are doing them the best service. The Coaker organ daily declares that the President of the Fishermen's Protective Union, yclept Hon. W. F. Coaker, Acting Prime Minister and head of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, is the one and only friend of the fishermen, and that if his strong (?) hand were not on the helm of the ship of state to-day disaster would follow closely on the heels of depression. How much longer will the fishermen permit themselves to be fooled by this demagogue, this political wolf in sheep's clothing, this loud mouthed dictator, whose sole notion and idea is unrestricted and untrammelled rule. Are fishermen not already cognizant of the desires and wishes of this local Kaiser? If they are not aware of it, as a body, in the North, let those of their associates who have viewed conditions in St. John's at the moment, enlighten them when they get home again and prove to them by incontrovertible argument that the man Coaker is the greatest enemy of the fishermen toilers of Newfoundland. His autocratic dictates have left their impress upon both trade and commerce. His handling of affairs and his whimsical and out-of-date ideas have played havoc with foreign markets and have antagonized customs of century old repute and standing. Not only that but his regulations have sent the price of fish, locally down with a bang, and have made it next to an impossibility for Labradormen to get anything like a paying figure for their voyage. Only those merchants who are in entire disagreement with the Fish Regulations are buying fish at all, the members of the Advisory Board, who are exporters, and those others of the infamous ring, handling practically none whatever. The "White Nape Labrador" fave has ended disastrously for those who followed the instructions, and this grade of fish is now going a-begging for purchasers. On the whole then, there is ample evidence to support the claim that the friend of the "underdogs" is their friend no longer.

Why Broken Faith?

The amended rules for sales of fish to Italy require that the sales shall be made through Hawes & Co. Ltd., exclusively. No sales through any other person will be permitted. No sales direct to would-be buyers may lawfully be made. During the Exporters' Convention, last September, in this city, existing rules to the above effect were vigorously assailed, and they were abandoned. On that occasion, Mr. W. A. Munn said, "We cannot carry on business with a man (Hawes) in whom we have no confidence." Mr. R. B. Job said, "the consensus of opinion was that Mr. Hawes should not, on any account, be asked to sell for any shippers who did not want him to do so." The Hon. Mr. Coaker (chairman), said, "It has been decided that Hawes is not to represent the Fisheries Department in Italy the coming season."

In face of these positive assurances, Hawes has again been made the sole selling agent in Italy, and the very men who outspokenly opposed him have been ordered to sell through him or not at all. It is pretty well understood too, that the Italian Consorzio will not on any account deal with or through Hawes, and that Italy is a closed market to our fish until he is removed from control of our sales. What is the secret at the bottom of this mystery? It is obvious that Hawes and certain export merchants in the city of St. John's have a working agreement. What is it? Who are the shareholders in the Hawes Company? Does anybody in St. John's share in the commissions earned by the Hawes concern on fish exported from Newfoundland? If so, who are they, and what is the share? Is there anything to cover up in this matter? If not, why not publish the Hawes agreement? Why does not the Minister of Marine and Fisheries use his powers to enlighten the public on this matter, and on the reason why the Hawes Company are the sole agents for selling to Italy. Why has his faith been broken with the exporters?

Notes and Comments.

What price "White Nape" Labrador?

Are the fishermen now satisfied that Coaker has gone over to the "Graballs" and "Bloodsuckers," he once so roundly condemned?

Read Coaker's petulant and offensive reply to the Board of Trade, re S.S. Clyde. No third form schoolboy but would put up a better argument. The Union first and to hades with all others, is the sentiment of the Big Chief.

The confusing of the various grades of fish by Royal Proclamation is well emphasized in yesterday's Herald. The lampoon in that paper on the explanation of the exporter is very clever. Our congratulations to the writer. Blatantly a certain nameless personage in the dark has nothing on the bulldozing of the fishermen by the Advisory Board.

That Faustus contributor to the Advocate is certainly some scribe, but he, in common with other Advocate writers, dispenses the truth with penurious frugality. How much Cash is being paid for fish at Port Union, Faustus? Don't hedge now! The Northern fishermen who "shipped off" there know, and you know also that Faustus is a very sinister nom de plume.

Isn't it wonderful what weird stuff the Dal-He Star unloads on its numerous readers. Yesterday it "whined" like a whipped canine, beseeching the Telegram to drop its criticisms of Mr. Coaker and the Fish Regulations. Time was when the acting editor of the Star had a few things to say about Mr. Coaker also. Have you been financially converted, brother?

The Prince of Wales was forced to refuse all requests for autographs whilst on his tour. The story goes that just before he left Queensland a girl begged for his autograph. "I'm sorry," said the Prince, "but it wouldn't be fair to others to make an exception." "Oh, but I've got your sister's; can't I have yours?" pleaded the girl. The Prince was interested. "Well, how did you get that?" he inquired. Then the girl explained that she was English, had been in the girl guides at home, and Princess Mary had signed her book. So with a smile the good-natured Prince gave way.

Police Court.

A carman for not having a pritchett under his cart had to pay costs, and for not having his name on the vehicle he had also to pay further costs. In a breach of the Street Traffic Regulations, a carman was fined $5 or 10 days; in another breach of the same regulations a carman had to pay a fine of $2.00.

A laborer belonging to Port au Port was sentenced to 30 days imprisonment for looting and disorderly conduct.

Two boys aged 9 years were brought in the Magistrate's Room and in the presence of their mothers were charged with the larceny of the kits and inner tyres from the motor cars left stalled near the Post Office on Monday night last. The kits were recovered but the lads could not remember what they did with the tubes. After a reprimand from the Judge the boys were allowed to go on the mothers paying the cost of the tubes.

STEELE MAGNATE HAS SATISFACTORY REPORTS FROM N.F.L.D.

MONTREAL.—R. M. Wolvin, president of the Dominion Steel Corporation, has returned to Montreal after a two weeks' trip of the company's properties in Nova Scotia, etc. The steel industry, Mr. Wolvin stated, was in a satisfactory condition, and he had been successful in arriving at an agreement with the Government of Newfoundland, whereby the export of iron ore would be carried out under conditions favorable to the corporation and along the lines desired by those who had conceived the British Empire Steel Corporation.—Financial Post.

Fell Off Lumber Pile.

Yesterday evening Mr. E. Soper, Manager of an East End Lumber Yard met with a nasty fall but luckily escaped serious injury. He was up some 10 or 12 feet on a lumber pile and in grasping a piece of scantling to support himself it tipped and he fell backwards to the ground.

Dedication of New Church.

At Caplin Bay, Ferryland District. On to-morrow (Sunday), October 31st, the new and beautiful church at Caplin Bay will be blessed and dedicated to Our Lady of the Immaculate Conception, by His Grace Archbishop Roche, who together with a number of the city clergy and priests of the neighbouring parishes, will arrive in that settlement about 10 a.m., when a High Mass will be celebrated by the energetic parish priest of Ferryland, the Rev. A. Mahar and assistant clergy. Great and extensive preparations have been made by an enthusiastic people, who have looked forward to the opening of this church as a long prayed for and ardently desired blessing. That the whole Parish, from Admiral's Cove to Cappahayden will attend, goes without saying; but many of the prominent Catholic laity of the city are also expected to put in an appearance on this day of rejoicing in Caplin Bay. The church in itself will delight the visitor, as it is unquestionably the most handsome on the Shore.

Dry Goods Imports Will Be Curtailed.

A leading dry goods merchant in speaking to the Trade Review this week on the dry goods situation, said: "You need not look for any considerable importation of dry goods till next Spring. Water Street houses are well stocked in most lines, and whilst they might be induced to replenish on the few lines that show depletion under ordinary conditions, they will not as a rule do so this fall, but will hold off and try to get along the best way they can without adding to their obligations.

"Buying was heavy in 1919 and the early part of 1920, and now there will be a full of several months, all hands waiting for improved Exchange Rates and market conditions generally. Stores meantime are buying from one another in those lines, in which they are short.

"The general tightness of money and the realization that there will be short buying amongst Newfoundland consumers this fall, is also a strong factor making for caution in laying in stocks, as it is believed that nine-tenths of the cash realized from the summer's operations of the people especially the fishermen will be spent in the absolute necessities of life.

"You may be absolutely safe in saying that there will be less revenue derived from import of dry goods into Newfoundland the coming six months than in any corresponding period the past forty years."—Trade Review.

Seal From Labrador.

S.S. Seal arrived in port at 9 o'clock last night from Labrador, bringing a full freight of fish, oil, and salmon. On the trip North the she met very stormy weather, being for 3 days anchored under Cape Bauld, and a delay of nearly a week was made before the ship could cross the Straits. On the return trip summer weather was met up to arriving in St. John's. The Seal brought about 300 fishermen and landed them at their various home ports. Any fishermen remaining on the coast will be picked up by S.S. Neptune.

Hunting for Treasure.

"What I like to do when I go shopping," said a lady friend of mine the other day, "is to encourage the sense of the unexpected—Give myself a pleasant surprise."

"Yes?" I queried.
"What I mean," she went on to explain, "is that instead of mapping out a cut and dried program to which I must stick to, whatever happens, I like to be guided by what I see when I arrive at my favorite shopping centre. To me such a course adds just that touch of adventure, almost romance, to my day's outing which I need every now and again to save me from boredom, in fact it changes the word 'shopping' into 'treasure hunt'."

"I see exactly what you mean," I said, "but does the joyousness which you experience by following out this little plan of yours lessen in any way the physical weariness which even you must feel in going from store to store for the best part of a day?" This was said by way of a trap—I had my reasons.

"Oh, but," she resumed, eagerly, "I don't go from shop to shop! I know much better than that—and you know I do, too, which just reminds me, I'm going on a 'treasure hunt' next week, could you—could you just hint at something I might find."
"Well, what would you say if, for instance, you were suddenly to find yourself in the midst of beautiful dress fabrics—Silk and Woolen—Heavy Coatings, Silks, etc., in an array of dazzling colors that delight the eye."

"I know I should be very much tempted to buy—if only the price—she paused. "Nothing much to fear there," said I, all things considered, but you should really see them—and then—I waited purposely before proceeding—"then I know of some beautiful Blouses in Crepe de Chine, Georgette, Silk Nets, etc.,—the last word in good style, which if I were a woman and could describe as they deserve . . . but I'm not. I do know, however, that the prices are amazingly low. All the Blouses are marked down for next week's selling. Then again I know of some Sports' Coats and Separate Skirts—"

"That's enough to be going on with surely," said she. "I know I should have enjoyed my 'treasure hunt' if only you had remembered to say where I should find these things."
"There is only one place possible, surely," I concluded; "It's the Royal—"

"The Royal Stores—of course!" she exclaimed.

Our Philatelic Corner.

BY PHILATELOS.

REVENUE OR POSTAGE STAMP.

I have received a letter from a philatelist signing himself A.R., who has asked me to give him what information I can about the 5c. ultramarine of the 1910 (Guy) issue, overprinted in red, in three lines, "Money Order—Stamp Tax—only." Some of the stamps have a stop after only, and others have not. Whether this represents two settings of the overprint is doubtful, since neither sheets nor blocks of these stamps are known to exist. These stamps were made necessary by an Act passed in 1915, ordaining that their should be a stamp tax on all cheques, drafts, money orders, etc. Ordinary postage stamps were used for this purpose, except in case of money orders, for which this special stamp was prepared.

After a time this law was amended to exempt all Government papers, and this stamp ceased to be of use and all copies on hand were burned. The inscription "Stamp Tax only" places the stamp among fiscal beyond question but, being originally a postage stamp and intended for use on a postal form, it is a matter of opinion as to whether it is collectible or not. Some time ago, I noticed an advertisement in the Telegram inserted by an American dealer, offering 25c. each for them. So some people must think quite a lot of them.

SEEBECK.

The Philately has become such a thriving hobby as to make it profitable for stamps to be made especially for collectors. There are an enormous number of these superfluous issues, the best known of which are those emanating from various South and Central American States, which are familiarly known as "Seebecks."

In 1890 Mr. F. N. Seebeck, representing the Hamilton Bank Note Co. of New York, made a contract with the republic of Salvador in which his firm undertook to supply a new issue of postage stamps each year to the government of Salvador, and that the Bank Note Co. should have the right to "use the plates to make such reprints as the engraving companies may want to sell again to stamp dealers and collectors." This price, for it deserves no milder term, went on from 1890 to 1898, and in spite of the fact that these issues of Salvador and the other republics, which contracted with Seebeck on similar terms, were made for collectors, nevertheless they are at the present moment very popular; though for how long this popularity will continue is a matter for conjecture, for one might well say with the poet "Inconsistency, thy name is Philatelist."

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

W.A.C. Grand Bank—I believe that a Newfoundland collector advertised some weeks ago for surcharged stamps, offering to pay 25c. for the 2c. on 30c. and 30c. for the 3c. on 15c. and 35c. If he is now buying them I do not know. It is rather early yet for any price to be fixed on these stamps.

Entire Body Covered—Doctors Said It Was Scrofula.

Would my few lines help some sufferer from skin disease? A year ago I was a fright; you could not put a pin on my whole body. I was tormented beyond words. I could not sleep. I tried several doctors. They said it was scrofula. Then Mrs. Ryder, of Brookvale, said, "Try D.D.D. it helped me and I think it will help you." I used two sample bottles and three dollar bottles. I have seen no sores or pimples for five months, thanks to your wonderful D.D.D. JOHN M. CLARK, Brookvale, N.B., Canada.

Remarkable results have been accomplished by D.D.D. in healing all forms of skin trouble from pimples and blackheads to severe cases of eczema. It should reach your case too. Ask your druggist about it. Your money back unless the first bottle relieves you.

Requiem Mass at St. Patrick's.

The Solemn Requiem Mass, celebrated this morning at St. Patrick's Church, for the soul of the late Lord Mayor of Cork, was very largely attended by the people from all parts of the city and suburbs. The celebrant was the Rev. P. Sheehan of St. Patrick's, assisted by Revs. O'Callaghan and Flynn, with Rev. Father Wilson as Master of Ceremonies, the Rev. Monsignor McDermott presiding. Sadly impressive was this Requiem Mass, and as the voice of the chanters rose in the solemn Lament, a wave of emotion swept the congregation, who heard in it the cry of the Irish race, sad, strong and sorrowful through all the bitter years.

"How long Oh Lord, how long?" The ceremony closed with the organs rendering of the Dead March in G, the congregation standing the while.

A tiny bottle of Freezone costs but a few cents at any drug store, but is sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation. Freezone is the sensational discovery of a Cincinnati genius. It is wonderful.

Towing the Nordica.

The Deputy Minister of Customs received a wireless from the captain of the s.s. Western Comet, via Cape Sable, as follows: "Nordica picked up latitude 41, longitude 49.15; undecided where towing vessel." This position is 300 miles south by east of Cape Race. It is very evident that the vessel is being towed toward New York and will not be brought here. The Western Comet is owned by the S. S. Shipping Board and is 5,317 tons gross, 3,579 net. She Nordica was built 1912 at Allandale, N.S., with a registered tonnage of 95.

Forty-One Years in the Public Service—the Evening Telegram

Mr. Morine Deals With the Advocate.

Editor Evening Telegram

Sir,—The Advocate, on the 27th inst., contained defamatory editorial references to me. Yesterday afternoon I sent to the Advocate Office the letter appended hereto, containing the request that as a matter of decency and justice it should be published. That request has not been complied with, or even the small courtesy of an acknowledgment been given, and I now have to ask that you will be good enough to give the letter space in your columns. I speak with some authority, from experience as an editor, as well as a constant reader, when I say that it is an unusually cowardly and contemptible thing for a newspaper to refuse to publish the demands or explanations of a person who has been attacked in its columns, and I am confident that no paper in the colony other than the Advocate could be so lost to every instinct of decent fair play as to suppress my defence. Next time, I shall not defend, but shall prosecute, and expose a persistent vilifier in the courts.

Yours truly,
 ALFRED B. MORINE.

St. John's, Oct. 29, 1920.

To The Editor of the Advocate.

Sir,—You have on several occasions referred in a defamatory manner to my receipt of sums of money in 1919 from the Colony for professional services. It may be that you have been misinformed, and therefore I supply certain facts of which you should be apprised, and I shall deem it merely an act of decency and justice if you publish this letter.

The Advocate contained the following on Wednesday last:—

"Let Charlie James ask A. B. Morine to hand back the $5,000 he got from the treasury after his defeat last November as a Labrador boundary fee. Let him ask A. B. Morine to hand back the $5,000 he got last November as a Commercial Cable case fee. Let him ask A. B. Morine to hand back the $5,000 he took for law books he dumped in the Justice Department while he was there as minister last year—old law books owned by Morine that he craved to turn into cash."

The Hon. W. F. Coaker was the first man to ask me to accept a retainer in the Labrador Boundary question, Sir Wm. Lloyd, then Premier, repeated the request, and on the 16th of May, 1919, I was appointed solicitor by order in Council. The amount of retainer was agreed upon at the time, and I received it early in July, 1919, soon after the change of Government. I was relieved of my duties, after the present Government came into office, and the Boundary question has been, I take it, the chief purpose of the Hon. Mr. Warren's long continued visit to England, where, it is understood, he has retained the services of Sir John Simon, P.C., K.C., as senior counsel. I venture to believe that the cost of Mr. Warren's visit will throw into the shade the very reasonable retainer paid to me for this matter.

Early in May, 1918, I was retained by Sir William Lloyd, the Premier, to act for the Colony against the Cable Companies, in the matter of taxes upon cables landed in the colony. On the 18th of May, 1918, the Premier consulted me about a draft bill then before the Assembly. Later, I made formal claim against the companies for $216,000 in all. I conducted, and won in the Supreme Court an action against the Commercial Cable Co. for $112,000 and interest from the 6th of June, 1918, and the Direct and Western Union Companies thereupon paid the Claims against them in full. The Commercial Cable Co. appealed to the Privy Council and lost, and the judgment is now on the verge of payment I understand. I have been in charge of the Colony's case from the outset to this moment, and received $2,500 in May, 1918, and $4,000 in November, 1919, on account of my legal services in all three claims. I do not consider that I have been overpaid, in view of the amount at issue, and the difficulty and length of proceedings. I wish to point out that in this matter, as in the Labrador Boundary, I was employed with the knowledge and consent of the Hon. Mr. Coaker, by a Government I was not supporting at the time.

No financial advantage—rather the opposite—accrued to me from the defeat of the Lloyd Government. I earned much more money proportionately while it was in office than after it was defeated, and I was very much the loser, financially, by my few months in office as Attorney General.

I received $1029, I think, for the law books I sold to the Department of Justice—not $5,000 as stated by you. The books are not "old," but a current revised set of English reports of old cases, and I charged exactly the price the books had cost me. Such books never decrease in cost or value. The Justice Department needed those books, and more also. Finally, I did not pay for them by departmental cheque, as I might have done, but brought my bill to Council, and it was paid under Order-in-Council.

Yours truly,
 ALFRED B. MORINE.

Note.—I have inquired since writing the above, and find that the present cost of the law reports mentioned above is now about $1300 in England.—A.B.M.

TRINITY.

In the list of those things that have been put in public places, either by communities or individuals, as memorials to the men who fell in the Great War, it is pleasing to find that the great majority, if not all, of such things have been placed, either in the church, or in connection with the church. It is pleasing, because it shows that those who have done so are actuated by higher motives than ordinary publicity, and have learnt that the value of their offerings is enhanced by sacred associations.

Of those memorials that have been placed in the open, under the shadow of the church, the beautiful statue of the Saviour, keeping guard over the names underneath, at Placentia; and the chaste, Celtic Cross at Christ Church, Port Rexton, come to my mind. There are others, I know, that are thus entrusted to the guardianship of the church in Newfoundland, and other countries. And where? I ask, could a memorial of those whose bodies lie in a foreign land or in the ocean be more fittingly placed than in the sheltering care of the church at home; on the hallowed ground in which those bodies would be laid to rest if they could be brought home.

Those memorials, however, that I know most about, are those that have been placed in the churches of the Parish of Trinity. In number, design, and quality of workmanship, they are worthy of honorable mention, and will, I am sure, be to some a pleasant surprise. In addition to the five beautiful windows in the Mortuary Chapel in Trinity, which I have fully described in a previous article—so beautiful in themselves, and so precious to those who placed them there—in addition to them are the following memorials:—

In St. Matthew's Church, Trouty: A brass Altar Desk, in memory of George Johnson; a brass Alms Bason, in memory of Walter Spurrell, R.N.R.; an oak Pulpit in memory of Walter Spurrell, George Johnson, and George A. Miller.

In Spaniard's Cove School-Chapel: A stained glass window—Subject the Ecce Homo—in memory of George H. Miller.

In St. John's Church, New Bonaventure: An oak Eagle Lectern, in memory of the brothers, W. J. and A. King. A Bishop's Chair in memory of Henry A. King.

In St. Luke's Church, Old Bonaventure: A stained glass window—Subject—The Crucifixion, in memory of Arthur Pitcher, Aaron Bailey, and Henry George Stone.

In St. George's Church, Ireland's Eye: A brass Altar Desk, and an Altar Service Book, in memory of Corporal Ernest Toop.

In St. Augustine's Church, British Harbor: A brass Altar Desk, and Altar Book, in memory of Frederick J. S. Gardner; a brass Alms Plate in memory of Arthur LeDrew; a brass Font Ewer in memory of Theophilus Gardner.

In the Church of the Nativity, Little Harbor: A brass Cross and Altar Lights, in memory of Henry Vokey.

Those things are not cheap, or shoddy in any respect. They were made to order by first-class workmen, and at a cost consistent with good workmanship. In nearly every instance the offering has been made by the father and mother, who are proud of the fact, that their boy's name is not only on the roll of the Empire, but that it is also on some part of the equipment of God's Church; on something that has been consecrated to the extension of God's glory. Port Union leads us all in this respect, inasmuch as the church itself, now being built there, and its whole beautiful equipment are to be consecrated as an offering to God, bearing the names, and in memory of the men who fell, and is to be known as "The Church of the Holy Martyrs." A truly beautiful idea, and ideally Christian! May we never wish to change it!

Nor should we overlook the fact, that this association of memorials exclusively with the church, is not a modern idea; is not a new departure on our part; is not an invention of our superior selves; at least, so far as Trinity is concerned. Like the majority of the good things we know and practice to-day, it was taught by those who laid the foundations of right action in our midst; by those who gave us birth; by those long gone to their rest; and we, to our credit have followed their good examples.

Hence we find, what some of our people seem to have overlooked, that every thing that has ever been placed in our midst in Trinity to keep before us the memory of those "we loved, and lost awhile"—everything, I say, without exception, has been placed either in the church or in the church-yard. Why change it?

The mural tablets in the Methodist Church; the memorial Bell in the Roman Catholic church-yard; the windows, the altar, the font—in fact, nearly every article of equipment in St. Paul's, Church of England; the mural tablets in the Mortuary Chapel—those, plus the stones in our church-yards and cemeteries—are our only public memorials to-day.

Nor are they all memorials of those whose bodies lie beneath the stones, or in God's acre at home. At least four of the mural tablets in the Mortuary Chapel, and one of the stones in the Methodist Cemetery, bear the names and perpetuate the memory of those, whose bodies lie either beneath the ocean's wave, or commingle with the dust of a foreign land.

When I asked last week, for information that would lead to the identity of the woman who, so many years ago, refused to give a stranger some dog-berries, I hardly dared to expect to get the information. Yet, it has been supplied. For good reasons, I withhold the name of the woman, who has long ago gone to her rest. She was one of the eccentric old bodies of the past, to whom truth or courtesy was often of secondary importance to her ideas of what is usually called "smartness." She was not a Newfoundlander. She did not feed dog-berries to the hens. She did not represent the good people of Trinity. Yet, in spite of her action and remark (which cannot be recalled) she was really too good-natured to intentionally hurt another's feelings. May she rest in peace.

The members of the S.U.F. have resumed their weekly Thursday night meetings in their Lodge Room, in the Parish Hall.

The Trinity Benefit Club will hold its semi-annual meeting on Monday next, All Saints' Day, November 1st, in the Parish Hall.

Mr. Maurice Devine, of King's Cove, was a guest at Garland Hotel last week, on his way to visit friends at St. John's and Cape Broyle. Mr. Devine has been living in Boston, U.S.A., for fifteen years, and is now paying a flying visit to Newfoundland. He controls one of the few compressed-air-and-blast machines in Boston, and reports himself as a contractor in all the branches of exterior and interior house renovation. We were glad to meet him.

A parson in one of the outposts had a brother priest spending a while in his parish. In times of stress the visiting brother undertook the pulpit duties. Not long ago the parson was making some parochial calls, and in one of the houses, mention was made of the visiting priest. Upon hearing his name, an old woman, who is a regular attendant at church, said: "Oh, yes, parson, I do like to hear him preach. I could go to sleep a listenin' to him."

Miss Blanche Earle, who has been ill for some weeks, is up and about again.

Miss Mason, of Catalina, who is teaching school at Summerville, was a guest at Garland Hotel on Tuesday last.

Harvey Small, Esq., M.H.A., for Burgeo, representing Messrs. Harvey & Co., St. John's, spent a few days here last week in the interests of the business of his employees. Glad to see him.

The Reid Nfld. Railway Company is constructing a Y in connection with the station at Trinity Junction.

The steamer Wren, Capt. Barbour, came in on Tuesday from Northern Labrador, and left again for St. John's.

Mr. Ambrose Clarke, of Dunfield, went by Prospero to Newtown, Bonavista Bay, where he will meet his wife, and they will spend the winter there.

Mrs. McClelland, nee Blanche Somerton, is visiting her parents in Trinity, and probably will spend the winter here. We are always glad to see the girls coming back to the old home occasionally.

Mr. Jacob Dewling, of Trouty, died at Dunfield on Wednesday last, aged 74 years.

Why Egg-Cups for Eggs?

The average man or woman, when eating a boiled egg, uses, of course, an egg-cup in which to stand the egg. But there is a simple device whereby the egg-cup can be done away with and yet the egg enjoyed without the fear of the egg upsetting. There is no need to hold with the fingers to keep upright, as would imagine.

It is only necessary to break the egg-shell at the side and not at the top. After taking the first spoonful you will find that the egg will not overbalance at all. This idea was a discovery of our soldiers in France, when egg-cups could not be expected, and it should prove a boon to picnic parties.

LONDON GOSSIP.

THE PRINCE'S RETURN.

LONDON, Oct. 29th, 1920.
I understand that the arrangements for the reception of the Prince of Wales on his return from his tour will resemble closely those which were made for his return from Canada. This was practically decided on at a meeting of those who are concerned with the plans. The Duke of York and Prince Henry will probably go to Portsmouth on Monday to welcome him when he steps from the battleship Renown, but the King, the Queen, and the remainder of the Royal Family will await his coming at the London terminus. There will be an extended drive to Buckingham Palace, where the King and Queen, who will have driven direct from Victoria, will again welcome the Prince. A luncheon or a banquet will be given at Buckingham Palace, probably on the following day, at which the High Commissioners, Agents, Generals, and other distinguished Colonial officials will be present. The function will have a semi-official status. I hear that the Prince is being inundated with invitations to attend functions all over the country, many of them specially in his honor, but some of their promoters, will be doomed to disappointment.

A BOOM IN DOGS.

There is at present a boom in dogs of all sorts. The terrier tribe is popular, but dog breeders do not find them so profitable as the smaller dogs, such as toys, Poms and Pekingese breeders are doing well. Quite an ordinary Pekingese will easily make £10 ($40) or £15 ($60), while show specimens run to 50 or 100 guineas (£20-$420). It is a breed, curiously enough, which has been maintained truer to type in Scotland than in England. Bull-dogs are doing well, but are not so popular for certain constitutional reasons. The biggest boom, however, is in Alsatian wolf dogs, most of the best animals are imported from Germany or Switzerland. They run with a long, easy stride, and are used in Germany for police work. There seems to be a danger, I am told credit of having developed the proposal.

THE COFFEE-STALL FASHION.

A pleasant way of making a living in London these nights is to buy one of the new painted coffee stalls decorated with shining urns and clean glass and china and stocked with bread and eggs and pastries to suit the taste of the neighborhood you select. The stall will cost £300 ($1,200) and the task of working up a connection may at first be anxious, but one reward will be in the variety of the customers drawn from all classes of society. In the old days the coffee stall was a dingy affair, depending on its charm for its lights and the aroma of hot coffee, and it was patronized almost entirely by night workers or impoverished wanderers. It had an air of tragedy. Perhaps the canteen habit is partly responsible for the change, but all sorts of people have now learned the value of the stalls, and in West End streets you may see men and elegantly dressed girls, going home from the theatre or from dances, standing in front of a flaring stall enjoying coffee, sandwiches, and cakes. One man who has a stall by the gates of Hyde Park and works from half past seven at night till the same time in the morning, says he serves the taximen, night workers, dance guests, men taking an early stroll in the park, and people now requiring to travel by cheap workers' trains. He is one of London's 150 new coffee stall keepers.

MENAL INSTABILITY AND CRIME.

The opinion is growing that an amendment of the criminal law is becoming necessary in view of the number of offences put down, from medical authority, to mental instability caused by shell shock. It has long been urged by reformers that crime is a disease, and should be treated as such in justice to the individual, whereas the penal code is founded less upon the basis of providing suitable punishment for each class of offence than upon the principle of deterring others from committing the same crime. For the modern mind this is too rough and ready a method of dealing in wholesale fashion with breaches of the law, which are plainly attributable in many cases to definite mental disease. One of the results of the war has been to draw prominent attention to this more scientific view of the problem of criminality, and the idea is certainly gaining ground rapidly that the question is one upon which doctors as well as lawyers should be called to adjudicate. Those who are appointed to administer the law find themselves, owing to the limitations placed upon their discretion, considerably handicapped in dealing with these cases of chronic mental aberration, which demand treatment rather than punishment, not only as a measure of justice, but in the interests of the community at large.

that plenty of books are being sold—indeed, the sales are wonderful—but except in the case of those novels which reach a very large circulation I am assured there is little profit for the publisher. The cost of paper, printing, and binding not only remains excessive high, but it threatens to go higher still, owing to the never-ending demands for higher wages. The public, it appears, will not pay the prices for books which would be necessary if all charges were met and a fair profit left for the publishers. So the latter have to do without the profit, and from this comes a tendency to restrict trade and to choke off enterprises.

PIPE SMOKING BY WOMEN.

Pipe smoking by women is not very new, as everyone knows who has visited the rag-picking quarters of any big city. Very often these smokers were Irish women, and they were always aged. In Glasgow there was a coffee house 25 years ago with a special smoking room for women. The customers were old rag pickers who were only allowed to travel with their packs on the river boats at certain hours, and they spent the waiting time smoking in this place. Lately in London there has been an effort to prove that pipe smoking by women has become fashionable. I doubt it. Still, the idea has been attractive enough for the stage to make a show of it. Miss Sybil Thorndyke has introduced a pipe smoking scene into the revue entitled "Oh Hell!" at the Little Theatre. She smokes a pipe with a richly grained briar bowl and a slim black vulcanite stem marked with a tiny white spot and encircled by a gold band. Another actress is said to have smoked a pipe not by way of business behind the scenes at the Palace Theatre, and women smoking pipes are said to have been among the audience at the Princess Theatre. That, I think, is as far as it will get. Mrs. Patrick Campbell's quite successful effort to smoke a cigar when she appeared recently as George Sand does not seem to have set a fashion for women smoking cigars, although it received more publicity than the play.

A Safe Bet.

One of the best stories told by George Goodchild in his newly-published book, "Pinches of Salt," concerns an old sailor named Thomas who, having read innumerable prophecies on the subject, was firmly convinced that the world would come to an end on a certain date last year. Another seaman named Wilkins scouted the idea, and offered to lay his odds of one hundred to one about it.

The bet was taken in pounds. The day that was to be the end of all things dawned fine and warm, and nothing extraordinarily happened. At breakfast next morning Thomas handed over his Brabury, gloomily. "Thanks," said Wilkins, cheerfully. "I'd have made it a thousand to one if you had stuck out."
"I say," whispered a friend, "supposing he had won, how on earth could—"
"S-h!" hissed Wilkins. "He never thought of that!"

Making Ships Jump.

A wonderful new invention is a mechanical fish that can jump. Many tributary streams would team with traffic but for the places along their course where canals or locks would have to be built. The new contrivance does away with these difficulties. A system of dams is constructed, each dam being furnished with a machine which lifts the boat over the obstruction. The boat-lifting mechanism is a structural steel framework composed of two triangular shaped side members joined at the top by a horizontal transverse pivot-shaft; on this is mounted a bridge-like cradle. The two sides are made rigid by transverse girders, which also provide for mounting the whole upon four four-wheeled trucks running on a track laid on the bottom of the river and extending up over the dam. The boat is hung from the overhead pivot-shaft by two bridge-like members. These are provided with a longitudinal track on which run two small carriages with pulleys, over which the boat-lifting cables extend downward from the drums in the house mounted midway between the bridge members.

In operation the boat is first floated between the side members and under the lifting platform. Then the small carriages are moved until the ropes drop perpendicularly, when they are connected with the special cables attached near each end of the boat.

This done, the boat with its cargo is lifted by electrical power body out of the water. The framework is set in motion, and the gear-wheels toothed in the track so that they cannot slip. Freedom permits the platform to hold the boat in a horizontal position.

W. C. T. U. Meets.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union held their first meeting for the season in the ladies' parlor of Gower Street Church on Thursday evening last. Owing to the unavoidable absence of the President, 1st Vice-President, Mrs. Johnson occupied the chair. For the Methodist Missionary Conference had important doings the same afternoon. The meeting opened with a hymn, followed by Scripture reading and talk, then prayer. The minutes of June meetings were read and approved. Some cases of want were brought to notice and were to be relieved. Congenial work was found for a young woman just released from prison where she had served a term for vagrancy. The splendid victory for Prohibition in Canada was commented upon. An interesting reading was held over till next meeting which will be the usual one, when officers will be elected for the ensuing year, and it is hoped all members will show their interest by being present. The summer period of rest now over, activities must begin anew. The annual meeting will be held in the same place on the afternoon of Thursday, the 11th of November.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at Topsail, on the 28th inst., when Mr. Albert Somerton, formerly of Topsail, led to the altar Miss Ethel, daughter of Mr. Azariah Squires, of Topsail. The bride, who was prettily attired in a travelling costume of navy blue serge with hat to match, and carrying a bouquet of carnations and maiden-hair fern, entered the church leaning on the arm of her brother Frederick, who gave her away. Miss Nellie Miller acted as bridesmaid, while John H. Fowler did the honors as best man. After the ceremony the party motored to The Holland Hotel, where a sumptuous repast was partaken of. The bride and groom then motored to Kelligrews where the honeymoon will be spent, after which they will be leaving for Port Arthur, Ontario, where the groom holds a responsible position.

Board of Trade Correspondence

Mr. Coaker Treats St. John's Interest in a Cavalier Manner—Union Interests Come First.

The Evening Telegram
 Sir,—I am instructed by the Board of Trade to forward you a copy of a letter addressed to the Minister of Shipping. A copy of the letter will be forwarded to the Acting Prime Minister, also copy from Hon. W. F. Coaker dated 25th.

Individual firm or enterprise for its exclusive use.
 The Council will welcome an explanation from you on this matter, and would also like to be informed as to whether or not it is the intention of your department to divert any other mail steamer (or the Clyde for any further trips) to St. John's for flour and other supplies, and if so whether freight space will be available for any firms who have shipments to forward.
 We are sending copy of this letter to the Acting Prime Minister.

I have the honor to be,
 Sir,
 Your obedient servant,
 for and on behalf of the
NFLD. BOARD OF TRADE.
 (Sgd.) Ernest A. Payn, Sec.-Treas.
 Hon. W. H. Cave,
 Minister of Shipping.

(COPY)

St. John's, Oct. 22, 1920.
 Sir,—At to-day's meeting of the Council of the Board of Trade, the question of the present trip of the S.S. Clyde was discussed. It was reported to the Board of Trade that the Clyde had been diverted from her regular service and was in St. John's taking freight for Northern Ports, but acting freight for the Union Trading Company only.

October 25, 1920.
 Sir,—I beg to enclose copy of a letter to the Minister of shipping, on the subject of the diversion of the S. S. Clyde from her regular service to St. John's for freight for the F.P.U. Co.
 I have the honor to be,
 Sir,
 Your obedient servant,
 for and on behalf of the
NFLD. BOARD OF TRADE.
 (Sgd.) Ernest A. Payn, Sec.-Treas.
 Hon. W. F. Coaker,
 Acting Prime Minister, City.

(COPY)

The Secretary of the Board of Trade telephoned the Freight Department of the Reid Newfoundland Company asking whether the S.S. Clyde was in town. The answer being yes.
 Whether she was accepting freight? Answer Yes, for the F.P.U.
 Whether freight would be accepted from other shippers to which the reply was "No," but any freight at Port Union would be looked after.
 It has since been informed that Clyde is loading flour for Port Union and other ports, that she will discharge a portion of her cargo at Port Union, filling space from freight awaiting there, and will then proceed North to other ports where the Union Trading Company are operating.
 The Council fully recognize the importance of getting an adequate supply of flour North before the close of season, and has already addressed Acting Prime Minister on this matter, but as representative of the business community of the Colony is compelled to protest against the setting of a subsidized steamer to any "Prospero" in the busy months because she was always loaded to the hatches here. There was no complaint from us, although our Northern connections would entitle us to considerable space by her.

It would be interesting to know what busybody asked your Council to write about the matter. It certainly was not anyone who had freight to ship by the "Clyde."

So far as Port Union is concerned, we intend looking after our own business as it appears to us, and if at any time we do anything not acceptable to the Trade's interests here, or to some political busybody North, we will be sorry, but it will not influence us in matters which we are the best judges of and which concern the Northern Service operating from Port Union.

For the information of the above referred busybodies, I might say that we operate the following Coasters regularly between Port Union and La Scie:—

Hattie A. Heckman, 104 tons, Standard Cull, 74 tons, F. P. U., 84 tons, Cecil and Belle, 58 tons, besides a half dozen others not owned by us.

We, therefore, do not depend on the Coastal Service as all other firms North are doing.

St. John's has connections with the North per "Prospero" direct and with the "Earl of Devon," "Home," "Sener," "Clyde" via Lewisporte and "Susan" direct.

Why therefore it occasions annoyance to your Council because the "Clyde" gives Port Union direct connections between Port Union and La Scie is difficult reasonably to understand.

Yours truly,
 (Sgd.) W. F. COAKER,
 Ernest A. Payn, Esq., Sec.-Treas.,
 Newfoundland Board of Trade.

Inter-Collegiate Football.

What was probably the best game of the inter-Collegiate series this year was played between St. Bon's and the Felldians yesterday afternoon. Right through the first half the ball was rushed from one end of the field to the other and the defences of both sides were hard put to it to keep their goals secure. In spite of their efforts, however, neither side was able to score and what was undoubtedly the best half hour of college football seen on St. George's Field for some time ended leaving both sides still on an equal footing. If anything, the Felldians had the best of the play in the first half. Right after the interval St. Bon's got away and Bransfield soon scored their first goal. Try as they could the Felldians could not equalise, and a few minutes later Phelan notched up St. Bon's second goal. The Felldians now began to play harder but although they made some very good attempts all their efforts to score were unsuccessful. The final whistle left St. Bon's the victors by a score of 2-0.

This afternoon the St. Bon's and M. C. meet in the final game of the second round. A win this afternoon will give St. Bon's the Championship.
