SAMUEL GURR'S MURDER.

"statute" (he probably meant "stature" or "height") and he looked like him in the back. He could not identify his clothes, although he was dressed conspicuously in white overalls and vest, such as plasterer's laborers wear. Neither could he identify his face; he went alone by his size. He wrote down that the man who struck "the murdered man," as witness always termed him, "ran quick away and he could only see his back." When it came to the identification of the woman, witness wrote down that she was "dressed in a dark flat hat with feathers, dark jacket and a printed dress." The women prisoners were all stood together, and witness the could not pick out any of them as rested a great deal of excitement in St. John's ward, and yesterday and last night it was the sole topic of conversation in the streets contiguous to the scene of the crime. The murder is still enveloped in mystery. The county attorney and Detective Reburn have a "theory," but as yet there is very little to connect any of the persons detained in custody with the infliction of the fatal stab on Curr's neck. It was expected that the deaf mute, George B. Broomfield, was to give very important testimony, but when it is taken into consideration that probably by disusage he has forgotten the meaning.

by disusage he has forgotten the meaning of many of the simplest words in the English language, when reduced to writing, his evidence will not bear out the expectations placed upon it.

The prisoners John Falvey, William Neal, Mary Cross, Hattie Jeffreys, Georgian Woods and Minnie O'Brien were arraigned in a row outside the railing and listened attentively to the evidence. None of them were represented by counsel, and only two of them, John Falvey and Hattie Jeffrey, ventured to indulge in any cross-examination.

Jeffrey, ventured to indulge in any cross-examination.

Mrs. Elliott and her daughter, aged 11, and John Cole, jr,, were the first witnesses examined. Mrs. Elliott keeps the boarding-house at 150 Elizabeth street where the murdered man, William Neal and John Falvey stopped. Neither her or her daughter could say whether Falvey was out of the house or not Monday night after supper. Their evidence was unimportant. John Cole, jr., testified that he retired to bed at 11 o'clock Monday night. He and his father slept in the same room with Falvey and Jim Neal, brother of the prisoner, William Neal. When he got to the room, the murdered man, Falvey and Neal were talking together. Falvey was lying on the outside of the bed with his clothes on. They were all drunk. Curr got up and said he was going out. Witness told his father not to mind him, but to let him go where he liked. Witness and his father then fell asleep and he did not awake until he was called by Mrs. Elliott next morning, when she told them that Curr had gone-out and got murdered. Drs. Pillbrick and Macdonald, who made a post-mortem examination of the remains, were next examined. Dr. Phill-rick and Macdonald, Dr. Phill-rick and Macdonald, Who made a post-mortem examination of the remains, were next examined. Dr. Phill-rick examined. Dr. Phill-brick described the wound very minutely to the jury, and pointed out the exact lo-calities of the different arteries on his own calities of the different arteries on his own neck, but owing to venerable doctor's flowing locks of silvery hair covering his hands and the indicated spot of the wound, it is not likely that the jurymen were much enlightened by this portion of the evidence. Dr. Phillbrick could not say with what kind of a cutting the wound was made or how long cutting the wound was made, or how long it was inflicted before the man died. He could not swear that the man could receive such a wound in front of 118 Edward street and walk to where he was found without assistance. However, he said that he once knew of a woman who cut her throat from ear to ear and ran from one room to another for a long time before she dropped. A portion of the coat collar was carried into the mouth of the wound and this might tend to suppress profuse bleeding." As that portion of the neck was very movable, the doctor could not inform an enquiring juryman whether Curr was stabbed from behind or the cepted these proposals the placard says the nihilists would have ceased their prop-aganda. The czar is now warned that the Dr. Macdonald agreed with the above witness, and after describing the man's death just on his arrival at the scene, he said the bloed on the fence against which the body was lying looked as if it had been there two hours. He would not attempt to say how long before the man's death the would was inflitted. Witness could not say whather a man having such a tround of Mme. Witness is an elderly many who described himself as a stockman in the employ of King & Brown, shoe manufacturers. Mr. Broomfield is said to have possessed a thorough knowledge of the common English phraseology at one time, but he has forgotten a good deal of it. For instance, he did not know what the words "long" or "describe" or Mr. Shaw of Tamatave. LONDON, May 28.-Rev. His story, as understood by the coroner and Mr. Fenton and explained by them to the jury, was that at a quarter to 4 on Tuesday morning—he was positive of the time as he consulted both his watch and clock of property and his personal losses at the time of the bombardment of Tamatave. THE PENN BANK FAILURE

A SHORTAGE OF OVER A MILLION DISCOVERED.

Fictitious Accounts—A Heavy Defalcation Reported—The Thing Going On For

PITTSBURG, May 28.—Examination of the books of the Penn bank thus far shows a shortage of over a million. The indications are that the bank's liabilities are over two millions, and that the depositors will not get 5 per cent. The concern has been completely gutted. Capitalists like Vanderbilt have been made to masquerade on the ledgers for parties who drew money out of the bank in some unknown way. The bank has been losing steadily for three years. The stealing dates back to the time of the Cherrygrove oil excitement. President Riddle has filed a confession of judgment in favor of the directors for $99,000.

The deficiency still grows and this evening reached $1,260,000. Heavy defalcations are also hinted at which it is claimed will reach nearly a million. The directors will reach nearly a million. The directors have been in session all day and have decided to have a thorough investigation into the whole matter and a full statement fur-the whole matter and a full statement furnished the public. If wrong has been done by any one he shall be made to pay the penalty. Many of those who made deposits Friday threaten the bank officials with criminal proceedings for false pretences in obtaining money.

Cashier Reiber is now under police surveillance. President Riddle is much better to-night. He will probably be strong enough to come to the city to-morrow.

The Pennsylvania mutual protective association, organized a few years ago for the object of insuring the lives of its members, is now believed to have been primarily designed to bring grist to the Penn bank in the shape of the collection of assessments the shape of the collection of assessments where deaths occurred. The barge arrived at 6 o'clock this morning with a cargo of rough timber for R. Thompson & Co. Captain Collier immediately set his hands to unload, promising them 25 cents an hour. A lot of men who had been waiting the arrival of a boat to get a job, and who had previously threatened the crews of other vessels, surrounded the barge and demanded the work be given to them at $50 for the load. The captain offered some of them 25 cents an hour, the same as his own hands were getting, but they would not accept, and when told that they could not get the job they immediately threatened to shoot the first of men who had been waiting the arrival of a boat to get a job, and who had previously threatened the crews of other vessels, surrounded the barge and demanded the work be given to them at $50 for the load. The captain offered some of them 25 cents an hour, the same as his own hands were getting, but they would not accept, and when told that they could not get the job they immediately threatened to shoot the first man who touched a plank. The bark hands stopped work, and Capt. Collier telephoned for police protection, which was promptly sent and work resumed. The crew worked all afternoon under the protection of a batch of policemen, who had instructions to arrest anyone who interfered.

Benefitting by the experience of Montreal during the carnival week the citizens of Toronto ought to discountenance anything like overcharges on the part of those who lodge or supply the visitors. The city is better so than any other city in the country, and therefore there is no reason for excessive charges, and from all we can hear there is not likely to be any such.

Moses Oates' Cycle Again. Every one is talking about the cold dip which set in yesterday morning, and no greater part of this province. In noticing on April 8 the predictions of Moses Oates on the general character of the spring and early summer, the present cold wave was pointed out as very probable, and as merely the recurrence, at comparatively regular periods, of a sudden depression of emperature, followed by a gradual increase of heat for several weeks. This remarkable cycle was noticed last autumn, and has been very marked ever since the beginning of February. Our readers will remember the sudden and very marked cold | perhaps, in no reading of history at all. dips of February 27, March 28 and April It is an utter mistake to suppose, as 29-now we have another-May 28. Not unfreshould be over this year before that stage is reached, and its repetition need not be looked for till the end of June, when the season is too far advanced for hoar frost to occur. The season has been dry, but not too much so, and the fact favors the expectation of generally fine weather for some time to come. There is every hope, therefore, that the wheat crop, escaping injury from frost and rain, will recover in large measure from the bad condition in which winter left it in several important

This respectable array of "no doubts" is taken from less than half a column of the editorial matter of yesterday's Telegram. Every one of them is part of "a hedge"the writer for some reason or other no sooner makes an assertion than he takes it back immediately. Next to "no doubt" his other great holds are "but" and "still."

The St. Catharines Journal has been entertaining its readers with accounts of the water supplied to the citizens of Toronto. It says that it makes women sick; that it is not filtered; that it is full of dead worms and fish; that the ice cut from the bay is very bad, of a yellowish color and smells mouldy; that visitors to the city are often made sick by drinking the water that is in the hotels, and a lot of more stuff of the same description. The object of the Journal would appear to be to keep people away from Toronto. Our own opinion of the matter, and we have seen most of the water in the towns of Ontario, is that the water of Toronto is equal to that of any other place in the province.

What has been at the bottom of all the Carlist agitations and wars that have distracted Spain during half a century and more? This, namely—the existence in the Basque provinces of a race of hardy mountaineers, half soldiers and half brigands, who are determinedly opposed to liberal government of any kind, and who, if they could, would speedily put some Don Carlos or other on the throne, against the wishes of the great majority of Span-

Provincial Toryism.

John Maclean in the Week.

The question as to the limits of dominic and provincial powers, respectively, is undoubtedly the one that more than any other now engages public attention in Canada. A few years ago the issue be-tween protection and free trade stood at the front, and on that issue alone a change of government was ordered by a large majority of the popular vote. But it has gone somewhat to the background since, not because its intrinsic importance is counted any the less, but chiefly because of prevailing belief that it is practically settled-for Canada. This belief will probably turn out a mistaken one, the fact being that Canada is so much weighed upon by old country influences—political, this can only be done by the work being begun in time. It will not do to let the financial, social and literary-that our free traders here have always a solid stronghold of English opinion for their base of operaaged to renew the fight. The fight for the establishment of a Canadian Pacific railway is practically over, though the question as to government control over all railways is still to be disposed of. It so happens that at the present time the ques tion as to what provincial rights are or should be is the most absorbing one of all before the people of Canada.

In the discussion of this question, so far,

ern acceptation of the term. They were in reality slaveholding aristocracies, in which think that the third week of June will, in the working bees of the hive-the large majority of the whole-had no rights that their masters were bound to respect. They tainly scored a success on the cycle carried provincialism to the length of which he detected months ago. That | political insanity, and the result was their the cold dip is on us at present is rather subjugation by Philip of Macedon. There was no king in Athens or Sparta; only quently the last frost of the season in the what our North American Indians might quently the last frost of the season in the higher levels of Ontario occurs in the first or second week of June, when the grain crops are at a critical stage. But the dip should be over this year before that stage which winter left it in several important tionists were not always friends of liberty, and some of their atrocious deeds well justified the remark that "revolutions are wheat districts of the province. On the whole, the outlook is cheerful, even if whole, the outlook is cheerful, even if the sunny side of the street is eagerly courted.

Substitute the remark that "revolutions are not made with rose-water." But the political earthquake of that time gave to the courted.

Substitute the remark that "revolutions are not made with rose-water." But the political earthquake of that time gave to the will never fully recover; and the net result is a gain to the cause of human liberty the world over. One most remarkable thing there is to be observed in the history of France during that period. While dif fering seriously on many other points, the good and the bad among the revolutionists agreed in making war against provincial rights, and in rendering the national authority supreme over all. They believed that provincial toryism was and must continue to be bitterly opposed to the republic, and one of their most important acts was to blot out the very names of the province. was to blot out the very names of the prov inces, and to substitute new territorial names of departments instead. The tory historian, Alison, calls this radical tyranny, and so it unquestionably was from his point of view. But from their point of view—that of the safety of the republic—they were just as unquestionably in the right, as was seen in the desperate resistance maintained for a time by the royalists of La Vendee, who would have no seen the result by the royalists. who would have none of the republic, and fought to restore the monarchy and the aristocracy. All the old provincial bodies were abolished by the revolutionists, for the plain reason that they were nearly all hot-beds of toryism, and opposed to the revolution.

What has been at the bottom of all the war upon the radical nation in order to perpetuate human slavery. The nationalists were radical, reform, liberal, or what you please of that sort; the States rights men were just as certainly tories of the most pronounced kind. That lesson ought to stick; it is surely too momentous and too recent to be already forgotten.

These few recollections of history may for the appearance of the state of the state for the present suffice to give pause to those who think that it is and must necesfor the present sumes to give pause to those who think that it is and must necessarily be true liberalism to sustain extreme views of provincial rights, and that defenders of national rights and powers must be tories. Precisely the reverse of this is the solemn truth of the matter, as will very clearly appear ere confederation has completed its twenty-fifth year—its first quarter of a century. The situation in Ontario, which has blinded the eyes of many, is not according to the rule of history; but is a mere temporary exception—a result of accident and circumstance. Its true and inward political meaning is hidden by certain outward and visible circumstances, which can be of but ephemeral duration, and must soon be brushed aside by the hand of time. And then must the real character of the contest between provincial toryism and national liberalism stand revealed, even to those who now refuse to see it.

liberalism stand revealed, even to those who now refuse to see it.

"What fools we mortals be!"—or have been—Ontario reformers will be saying some day, when they realize how blindly they have been led into a huge political blunder. Let it be hoped that they may hasten to retrace their steps, while there is not time.

She has just produced several very large eggs, among them one, which has been left at this office, measuring $7\frac{3}{4}$ inch round and $8\frac{3}{4}$ inch lengthwise. Its weight is close on $5\frac{1}{2}$ oz. Can any ruralist beat this record?

Independence not Treason. If the confederation holds together and

In the discussion of this question, so far, the view has been strongly advanced, and widely accepted too—that there exists a natural and necessary—alliance between toryism and the extreme dominion position on one hand, and between liberalism and extreme provincial position on the other. It is probable that a considerable majority of the people in Ontario, at all events, fully believe that, while it is and must be liberal policy to push to the utmost the powers of the dominion, it is and must be liberal policy to push to the utmost the powers of the provinces. Now, this is a profound mistake, having its origin in a remarkable misreading of history, or oftener, perhaps, in no reading of history at all.

Sir Richard Cartwright's words are significant. Nothing can be treason which is countenanced by a knight. We have now the highest assurance that unabated attachment to the mother country, just pride in our connection with her, the heartiest feeling of interest in her fortunes and a determination to take no step without her consent, are compatible with a conviction that dependence, at all events when the colony is adult, becomes a false relation and injurious to both parties. A few years ago men who held this opinion and had the honesty to avow it were being hunted down like wild beasts by loyalists whose loyality was in their pockets. It is notable that even the tory papers have been cautional aspirations would no longer meet with a general response. Their own leaders have asserted fiscal independence. No match was made, and Sullivan left on the 4½ p.m. train for Boston.
Al Smith says the combination in their eight months' trip made a clear profit of $100,000. He offered to bet $5000 to $100,000 that Sullivan can best any man in the world with gloves or bare knuckles, Marquis of Oueensberry or London ring. Marquis of Queensberry or London ring rules. There is little doubt that a match will soon be made between Sullivan and Mitchell, as both men are eager.

A Young Lady Pursues Her Fields swalm and Makes a Capitve.

Lunay, Va., May 28.—Miss Jelis Storm and Mr. Randolph Claycey got on the Shenandoah Valley train at Patterson. The girl is a pretty brunette, aged 25, and Claycey is a red-headed and not handsome young man of 21. They got aboard the train early, bound for this place to get married, as the passengers were not slow in finding out.

Shortly after the train started the young man suddenly left the side of his expectant bride and took a passenger into a corner of the coach and proceeded to inform him that he had arrived at the conclusion that Clayery, acting upon the suggestion, stole away undetected, and got upon the down train and was ten miles away before the young lady discovered his desertion, and at the next station she left the train, refusing indignantly the offer of the escort and money for her return. She then pro-ceeded to walk down the track in the direction her recreant lover had taken, and reached Patterson after walking twentyseven miles. She went at once to the store in which Claycey clerked and asked him pleasantly to step outside. The result of the conversation was that he joined her an hour afterward, and the two got on the train for another direction. They reached Hagerstown and were married.

Geo. Morrow, druggist, has an interesting story to tell. Last year he had a license to sell liquor, and upon one occasion received an order from a doctor prescribing a quantity of liquor for a patient with the words: "Repeat the treatment if necessary." This he did. He was "pulled" by the inspector and fined $50 and costs. He has since taken legal advice on the matter and finds that he did per fectly right in filling the order as he did. This point will in all probability be tested before long.

at a time will not remain there over night, but prefer going to Brampton and returning in the morning. Brampton merchants offer to pay the railway fare of any party in Georgetown who will come to the former place and buy $5 worth of goods. When the act came in force two years ago there were four dry goods stores in Georgetown, each one had a tailoring establishment in connection with it, and a large number of hands enaployed. Now there are only two dry goods stores and one tailor shop with each. Consequently when a merchant say his business has increased, his statement must be taken in the light of the fact that he has much less opposition to contend against.

week, but enteric has fallen out of the list of twenty most prevalent diseases. Amongst the contagious zymotics there is none showing any marked prevalence except mumps, whooping cough still continues to maintain much the same position it has held during the past three months; and scarlatins appears within the list of prevalent diseases. Nothing new regarding small pox has to be reported other than that the disease seems to have become practically extinct in all the several centres in which it has been present during a whole or a part of the last two months.—Health Bulletin, week ended May 17.

The well known Brooklyn preacher lectured before a very large audience last evening in the pavilion of the Horticultural gardens, and upon his appearance on the platform he was greeted with prolonged applause. Mr. Beecher began by saying that a great change in human thought had taken place within a few years, and that the doctrines of evolution and revolution in their various forms and applications had spread, developed and come to blossom during the past twenty-five years in a manner that had no parallel. Evolution, he said, was revolutionary, but is not destructively so except in that sense in which every step towards the better necessarily means the destruction of the inferior quality. All steps of progress necessitated abandonment of something. Evolution is simply a revolution of God's method of creation in this world. It is supposed simply a revolution of God's method of creation in this world. It is supposed that on one Monday God called oat of nothing and made this globe; that on Tuesday He called for light, on Wednesday He made man, and that on Saturday He made man, and that on Sunday, having considered that He had done a good work, He rested. Science says that the blade of grass as well as all other things must have been countless ages in coming to perfection. These matters have had a biography and were the products of millions of years of time in reaching perfection. Evolutinn will destroy so many organizations and will throw new light upon the question of the origin of man; it will make splinterwood of a good deal of theology. Many say that man came into existence one step higher than the monkey family. They are not so proud of their ancestors when they find that they were monkeys. The lecturer said he would not mind descending from a monkey if he only descended far enough, and he would not linger on the way as some men do. He would leave the monkey entirely behind him. He however was not a monkey but a man of reason. The descent of man he
