Notes and Suggestions of Practical Utility

FOR THE FARM, FIELD, GARDEN AND DAIRY.

Meanings of Interest for Our Country Readers.

There is entirely too much feeding done in a blind way.

Thin out surplus roosters, now, without regard to price.

It is quite an item to get a good laying strain of hens.

Lake county, Ohio, expects four tons of grapes per acre.

Large crops of fruit are not always the most profitable.

Lewis Dana of Pomfret, Vt., has raised 2000 chickens this year.

Fruit carefully selected, dried and packed, always brings good prices.

Some farmers think they are saving money by using old worn-out tools.

To make good breeders fowls should only be in a good, thrifty condition.

To make most profitable ducks they must find the greater part of their food.

Cotton growers will get what some of them have been wanting, a light crop.

If best fruits only are grown, there is little danger of overstocking the market.

The condition of the fence rows will tell something of the farmer's ingenuity.

The flavor of eggs depends very much on the kind of food given to the poultry.

Early maturity in all kinds of stock is of prime necessity if we grow for profit.

Nebraska claims to raise 24 bushels of wheat and 200 of corn to each inhabitant.

Every dollar spent for trees is a good investment if they are properly cared for.

You can haul out every bit of the manure, and put it on the field where it is wanted.

The daily use of fruit helps materially to make people independent of the doctor.

An orchardist recommends throwing the fish and wash water around the fruit trees.

Pick up all the good fruit on the ground and turn the hogs in to eat the remainder.

Stock at the World's Fair includes 1237 cattle, 1135 horses, 1755 sheep and 1347 swine.

Debt is the rock on which so many farmers are ruined. Better have less and have it paid for.

The only possible chance for profits is in crowding to ripeness at the earliest possible age.

Diarrhea is generally caused by improper food, filthy quarters, damp or cold temperature.

Varieties of cabbage which have firm close heads are least affected with the cabbage worm.

Bread soaked in milk is one of the very best feeds that can be given to very young ducks.

Do not feed too much at a time, too often of the same article or too long in the same place.

If given in the very first stages, a little alum in the water will cure diarrhea in poultry.

The Kansas wheat crop is estimated at 21,000,000 bushels this year against 70,000,000 last year.

Quality rather than quantity is what, to a considerable extent, at least, determines the profits.

A sow to obtain best results should be in good flesh and gaining, not overfed or fat, when bred.

Reports from all parts of the country show that the fruit crop will be very small, especially apples.

Land hunger, and the itch to have every new implement invented, keeps many a farmer poor.

All testimony by experiment is unfavorable to feeding hogs above 200 pounds for the greatest profit.

A comfortable house for the ducks is one of the first things to be provided to insure successful raising.

Soft shelled eggs are sometimes caused by overfeeding and sometimes from lack of proper material.

It is a good plan to look about in the fall, and see what can be done that will lessen the work next spring.

Let the man who says we get but little rain in dog days, stick a bent pin in his memory for this year.

Warm, sweet milk is one of the very best tonics for sick fowls and can nearly always be given with benefit.

It is not possible to lay down set rules whereby feeders are to be governed, or to prescribe a given ratio.

The care that will give comfort to the lower animals will make them much more profitable to their owners.

In most parts of the country fresh eggs and fine butter have both commanded good prices all through the summer.

If you expect others to join you in an enterprise you must impress them with the idea that you have faith in yourself.

The kind of hay that suits the French market is clover mixed and must be bright in color, very dry, sound and sweet.

In order to meet the competition, use great care in preparing it and use good fruit. The best always brings the best prices.

You can trim out the dead brush from the small fruits for one thing; and set out more of them, if you have not enough of them already.

A smaller range of crops, each one grown as a specialty, will give better returns than a wider range and less careful methods.

Packing eggs and holding them for a higher price we have never considered as part of the legitimate business of the poultryman.

Eye is better for an orchard than grass; and if the poultry yard is near it will often furnish good winter pasturage for the fowls.

With less land expenses may be reduced when times are hard, and fewer implements will be needed in order to cultivate it perfectly.

When the cows come up at night from a pretty dry pasture they should have some kind of feed; a molting crop, or some meal or both.

One thousand seven hundred and thirty-five car loads of live stock were received at Chicago stock yards on July 10, being the largest of the year.

There is no other class of men who have to exercise faith in the future as farmers do. Quick turns are almost out of the question with them.

In order to keep up a good supply of small fruit it is better to plant two or three varieties of each kind so that one will follow another in ripening.

Feeding is likely to remain an art, and the results will vary according to the skill employed, the quality of stock and condition of the weather.

Farmers who succeed in growing and harvesting good crops often sell at a sacrifice, because they do not observe prices and study the markets.

An experienced laborer on a farm will seldom fail in securing good wages. In fact, farmers have much difficulty in securing suitable help.

When prices are high almost any yield may pay, but when they are low we must decrease cost, and it can be done better by increasing the yield an acre than in any other way.

Fruit should be looked upon more as a necessity than as a luxury. To such an extent should this view prevail that every farmer would raise fruit sufficient for home use.

A high grade of goods cannot be made from a mixed mass of good and poor cream. The good never makes the poor better but the poor always brings down the grade of the best.

It is reported that in a certain district in Colorado dairy cows which could have been bought a short time ago for $20 a head are now worth $40, owing to the establishment of a creamery and cheese factory.

Do not build a creamery where there is no dairying, hoping that farmers will go into cow keeping. It costs about as much to make the butter from 200 cows as from 500, and the cost of make is what swamps so many small creameries.

To make a calf feeder take a box 18x24x 24 inches with a hole through one of the longer sides, large enough to set a bucket two-thirds in. It is to be used in feeding calves, as it prevents their tripping the bucket, and one person can do the feeding, or they can be left to themselves.

The Practical Dairyman suggests to those butter makers who are blessed with ice apartment cream vats that if they wish to keep their cream at a low uniform temperature, they should draw the water out and use ice alone. We find it does better work than to cool the water down, and takes less ice.

If the extror or separator is not used, and the creaming of the milk is done at the farm, all the patrons should use one kind of creaming apparatus; and practice as near as can be one plan of setting the milk, so as to have the cream as nearly alike in quality as possible, and its care and keeping should be as nearly as possible one plan.

Here is an object lesson! It is said that some of the milk dealers at Watertown, Mass., are "talking of cutting one-fourth cent on the prices paid the producers. Here we have the dealer where we can get a good view of him. He stands between the producer and the consumer and fixes his own prices for his time and labor, and when the consumer complains of hard times he turns upon the producer.

MRS. GEO. FARRELL, 7222, N. S. RHEUMATISM AND EFFECTS OF LA GRIPPE BANISHED! Mrs. Geo. Farrell, of Etna, Kings Co., N. S., 68 years old, had been troubled with RHEUMATISM for 20 years. In winter of '91 was taken very sick, with LA GRIPPE, and became much reduced, no Appetite, bad Cough, Pains all over the body, producing swelling of feet and legs. Neighbors thought she must die. Six Bottles—same course—of Skoda's Discovery with Skoda's Little Tablets, Completely Cured her, and she says it has added 20 years to her life. Is it strange she should consider it a WONDERFUL MEDICINE? SKODA DISCOVERY CO., WOLFVILLE, N. S.

er whose pasture is dry and whose product cost nearly double what it would in lush feed, and says he must sell for less because other people complain of hard times. The farmers are accustomed to such abuse and will probably submit.

Those who have had experience know that, other things being equal, there is less fat lost in the buttermilk and the butter is of better quality when the cream is thick than when it contains a large amount of milk and is, consequently, thin. Knowing this one would naturally think, says Western Farm Journal, it best to take as little milk as possible in skimming off the cream, and this is advised by those who do not stop to look at all sides of the question. Experiments show that in raising cream by the gravity system the milk immediately under the cream is very rich in fat. We have found that the inch of milk next under the cream line frequently tests as high as eight-tenths of one per cent. fat and in many instances higher. The next inch of milk is not so rich, testing from two to six-tenths of one per cent. fat, depending upon circumstances and conditions. It will always pay to take the first inch of milk with the cream and will usually pay to take the first two inches. While the butter may not be of quite as good quality when this is done and the loss of fat in the buttermilk may be a little greater, yet these will not balance the loss that would result from taking the cream alone.

It is said that in the city of Demars about sixty per cent. of the grocery stores sell oleo representing it as butter, and for the prices of the best butter. In Omaha it is said that about 80,000 pounds of oleo and only 40,000 of butter are used in a month. This is not done because the trade demands it or even knows of it but because there is a profit to the retailer of ten or fifteen cents per pound. It is true that the national law attempts to regulate the sale of oleomargarine, but since the passage of the law it has been found an easy matter to evade it. For example, a pretending purchaser asks the polite attendant "if he has any good butter to-day," to which he immediately replies "yes," and says "how do you like this?" at the same time showing her a roll of oleomargarine. She could smell nothing rank or rancid about it, and takes it home. The law requires that the wrapping paper be stamped, or have printed on it what the p c kage contains. This is evaded by using a rubber stamp and a pale shade of ink printed on brown wrapping paper, and is wrapped up in the inside of the package. When it is taken to the kitchen by the delivery boy, the hired girl takes off the wrapper and sticks it in the stove or waste basket, and the real purchasers never know that they have been deceived, but still they feel that the butter they are getting to has not the fragrant aroma or delightful taste it had when they were younger."

Kingsley:—"Don't you think it retards digestion to read a newspaper at mealtimes?"

Bingo:—"On the contrary I find it a great help. When my wife makes a failure of the breakfast I devour the paper."

Mother:—"For mercy's sake, child, what do you expect to do in this world? You can't cook nor sew nor teach school, and you are not an heiress; what can you do?"

Daughter:—"Well mother, I can get married can't I."

HORSE NOTES.

Everybody regrets Doble's act. Will Kerr, 2.08½ wears hobbles.

Water horses sparingly and often. Harrietta, 2.11½ is the best Alyoune out.

Hobden Jr. proved a phenom after all. New Hampshire had its horse show last week.

An Orloff trotter has gone a mile close to 2.20.

Vic H., 2.12½ has been bred to Directum 2.07.

State Grange fair opened at Tilton this Tuesday.

The cool weather horses will begin to stop now.

What trotter wants to tackle Nancy Hanks now?

Coralloid went a mile in 2.10½ at Grand Rapids.

Woodbine 2.22½ is a new one for Quarter-master.

Directum (4), 2.07, is the greatest colt trotter ever produced.

Fanny Wilcox proved another surprise party at Fleetwood.

Old Harry Wilkes pulled a cart the other day a quarter in 32s.

Sentiment against ringing is too strong to be trifled with.

Allen Wilkes 2.29, gives one more 2.30 trotter to Abdallah Wilkes.

Brown Hal, 2.12½ is an own brother to Little Brown Jog 2.11½.

Alicante 2.23½ by Alicantara has turned Fleetwood track in 2.17½.

Glencoe Wilkes will make a big family parade at the State Grange fair.

Only a four-year-old and King of the world. This is what little Directum is.

Vera by Viking, won the 2.25 $1,000 stake at the New York State Breeders' meeting.

A son of Mambrino Wilkes was a premium winner at the Vermont Breeders' meeting.

Brigolito Wilkes has set a new mark for the entire sons of George Wilkes. It is 2.14½.

Never allow horses in a field with a barbed-wire fence separating them from other horses.

Lord Clinton keeps up with his get of improvement he will set all tongues wagging.

Old Johnston isn't so dead but that he went a mile at Toledo in 2.14½ breaking the track record.

Hickock says that Silverone 2.19½ could speed faster than any trotter he ever sat behind.

Theris 2.23½ ranks next to Arthur Wilkes 2.10, as the fastest of the get of Mambrino Wilkes.

Little Rich is out for the fall money with Twang and he got a good piece of it at Saugus last week.

Allie Gaines, sire of Ira Gaines 2.13½ is full brother to Hamlin's Almost Jr., the leading sire of 1893.

The owner of Ontonagon offers to bet $5,000 that his great five-year-old can pace Independence track in 2.05.

Now then, let us have a race between Nancy Hanks, Allie, Hulda and Directum. Pick the winner if you can.

Directum trotted eight heats last week the last in 2.04 and wound up by going a mile on Monday last in 2.07.

With Directum (4), 2.07 and Director's Flower (2), 2.11½ the fame of game old Director is being kept green this season.

Director's record-breaking mile was taken as follows: First quarter 30½; half 1.00½; three-quarters 1.32½; mile 2.07.

For a horse only nine years old Chimes makes a wonderful showing. He has 13 in the 2.30 list, 8 of which are in the 2.20 list.

Budd Doble after years of highest standing on the turf, has perpetrated an act that will for a time at least, disgrace his name.

Dartmouth by Dictator, the handy pacing stallion in Fred Reynolds' string, took a record of 2.27½ in a six-heat race at Stansstead.

New York had the greatest meeting in its history last week and the greatest of the year. There is nothing so good about the metropolis.

Ontonagon's record 2.07½, made at Lyons, Neb., is being questioned. Nearly every watch that was held outside the stand registered 2.10½.

Much ado is the fastest New Hampshire four-year-old of the year by the record. He took a race record of 2.23 at Old Orchard last week.

Solicitor made a grand showing of his family at the Vermont Breeders' meeting. He easily won the blue ribbon in the open stallion class.

King Charles, a race winner at Old Orchard and Saugus, was sired by Wm. J. Simmons' handsome son of George Wilkes, Prince Charles.

Lowland Girl, 2.19½, has entered the Great Brood Mare list. General Alger, 2.24, and Dancourt, 2.21½, have been placed to her credit. Both are by Ambassador.

Ontonagon, 2.07½, the champion five-year-old pacer, goes in 64 or 65 in freest and 44 behind, all made of aluminum with steel feet, and wears grab and coronet boots.

The men who pull horses in one town expecting to make a killing with them in the next often lose money that they could have won and get slipped on their "sure thing" besides.

At the Toledo meeting the judges were so severe that if a nag did not trot or pace all the way he could not get a heat, losing breaks being chalked down as black as handy mistakes.

Nelson has not only broken track records all around New England this season, but he has lowered his own record to 2.09 and contributed eight new performers to 2.30 list. Who has a greater horse?

Falfa by Allerton and Axonite by Artell, two of the greatest trotting two-year-olds of the year, meet at the Northwestern Breeders' meeting. It will be a battle between the rival houses of Allerton and Artell.

One of the plainest qualifications of the successful starting judge is a correct conception of the equities, and no man can hope to be popular who cannot appreciate the fact that the rights of all the spectators and nine out of ten of the drivers are paramount to the protection of one inconsequential, crazy-headed performer, the only remarkable attribute of which is a sour disposition.

Madge Wilkes (3), 2.23½ is a credit to Vermont breeding. By the way the year book only credits her sire Victor Wilkes with a record of 2.32½. A mark of 2.29½ is claimed for him. He is a siring trotter and lots of them anyhow.

Bonner Steel came dangerously near giving Steels another 2.30 trotter last week. In the match against Home Rule 2.21½ which he won at Concord, the plucky four-year-old took a race record of 2.30½. He is out of a Mambrino Wildes dam.

Hamlin's Almost Jr., continues to lead the sires of 1893. His 2.30 list to the date numbers eleven. Nelson has eight and Onward seven. Bourbon Wilkes and Chimes have six apiece, and Electioneer. Guy Wilkes, Nutwood, Rumor, Sidney and Strathmore, five each.

Robert Bonner makes a generous suggestion when he says that perhaps his stable of horses would prove an interesting feature at the World's Fair Horse show. Well wouldn't they? Thousands would crowd the exhibit to get a look at Sunol, Mand S. and the other celebrities that the Bonner stable might send.

In racing suspicion is always rampant. The appearance of evil is always present, if the onlooker cares to see it. Whether this horse or that one wins, the man who chooses to imagine that fraud has been meant or has been consummated, may find or think he finds, a reason there for.

Masoc, by Stamboul out of Minnehaha, a horse that L. J. Roe sold at auction in New York as a two-year-old for $20,000, and was knocked down at a clearing-out sale last spring for $800, took a record of 2.23½ at Poughkeepsie the other day, making the sixth of Minnehaha's get to enter the list.

As a proof that the pace is faster than the trot it can be said that when many of the fast trotters have been put to pacing after having obtained their lowest possible trotting record, they have paced still faster. For instance Direct trotting, 2.18½ pacing 2.06½. Jay-Eye-See trotting 2.10 pacing 2.06½. Vassar trotting 2.21½, pacing 2.11½.

Gems of Thought.

Never lose sight of an honorable enemy; he will make a good friend.

Character gives splendor to youth, and awe to the wrinkled skin and gray hair.

The surest and shortest way to prove a work possible is strenuously to set about it.

We are always complaining that our days are few, and acting as though there would be no end to them.

Circumstances form the character, but, like petrifying water, they too often harden while they form.

Nature has written a letter of credit upon some men's faces, which is honored almost wherever presented.

If you have great sorrows keep them to yourself, unless you have some bosom friend that will listen to you with a sympathetic ear.

The talent of success is nothing more than doing what you have to do well, and doing well whatever you do—without a thought of fame.

To be full of goodness, full of cheerfulness, full of sympathy, full of helpful hope, causes a man to carry blessings of which he himself is as unconscious as a lamp is of its own light.

It is an error to suppose that a man belongs to himself. No man does. He belongs to his wife, or his children, or his relations, or to society in some form or another.

We make unlovely all our days by the little soul we put in our efforts, by the way in which duties push us forward, by the lack of that electric something which makes all words all deeds quiver and glow.

Never affect or assume a particular character, for it will never fit you, but probably give you ridicule; but leave it to your conduct your virtues, your morals, and your manners to give you one.

Oh, thou that pinest in the imprisonment of the actual, and artiest bitterly to the gods for a kingdom when in to rule and create. Know this of a truth: the thing thou seekest is already with thee, here or nowhere couldst thou only see.

Every temptation that is resisted, every noble aspiration that is encouraged, every sinful thought that is repressed, every bitter word that is withheld, adds its little item to the impetus of that great movement which is bearing humanity onward toward a richer life and higher character.

All the best things and treasures of this world are not to be produced by each generation for itself; but we are all intended not to carve our work in snow, that will melt, but such and all of us to be continually rolling a great, white, gathering snow-ball higher and higher, larger and larger, along the Alps of human power.

I'm so nervous—before taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. I'm so well—after taking Hood's. Moral—Be sure to get Hood's.

NIGHTY SANDOW.

The Strongest Man in the World a Simple Medical Exercise.

Engene Sandow, who is probably the strongest man in the world, is, it is reported, to wed Actress Mary Anderson.

Sandow is a remarkable man, not only because of his great strength, but because his extraordinary power is due entirely to development. He was born in Konigsberg, Prussia, 26 years ago. When a mere lad his father took him to Rome where, he saw and was deeply interested in the Greek statues. He took an especial interest in the various statues of Hercules and wanted to know why the men of modern times were not were not likewise in physique Sandow, though only 10 years old decided that he would make himself as much like his ideal as possible.

Sandow has a method of his own by which he develops his muscles. It consists of various exercises with two five-pound dumb-bells. He declares will these he had developed, not only the external muscles which are so apparent, but internal muscles which strengthen the walls of his chest, enable his heart and other organs to endure great strain and assure him a long life, barring accident. In private life he is a very pleasing type of the simple-minded German. His head is shaped exactly like the heads on the old statues of Hercules. The forehead is low and broad and the head is closely covered with a short crop of thick golden curls. Compared with Sandow, Curbett the Champion pugilist is like a lean spring chicken beside a well-muscled bull-dog. Sandow, is five feet eight inches high and weighs 200 pounds. He measures 29 inches around the waist and 58 inches around the chest when it is fully expanded. He can lift a 500 pound weight with his little finger; lifts a dumb-bell with two men upon it above his head with one hand; lifts a man sitting on the palm of his hand as easily as the average man lifts a small dog; places himself upon the floor with his chest upward and supported only by his hands and feet, his body forming a bridge. A gang plank is placed across his chest and three horses stung upon it at one time. He lifts enormous weights by sheer muscular force and says he despises the tricks employed by some other strong men who use a harness and other "softies" to assist them in raising great burdens. Sandow's blow would kill an ox, and he declares that, with his knuckles protected, he can drive his fist through a three-inch plank. He is as agile as he is strong and though he has been importuned to enter the pugilistic arena he obstinately refuses. You cannot fight a prize-fight and be a gentleman says Sandow. "I care more about keeping my friends than making money."

And yet he makes $50,000 every year by exhibiting himself.

Theatrical Gossip.

Guy Lindsay has been engaged to support Miss Woodstock in the coming season.

Louis Courtenay will play the subordinate roles in Martin Hayden's "Held in Slavery" company.

Edwin Warner, manager of Hanlon's Super company, has been making new engagements.

Lola Biggar is negotiating to play the leading role in Abe Sisy's Amusement company of Boston.

The World Against Her, under management of Samuel T. Villa, will open season in New York Sept. 25.

Frederick de Belleville will be a member of the Coghlan company only during the engagements in Chicago and Milwaukee.

According to the Chicago papers, Minnie Dupree has made a big hit as the aloof daughter of the blacksmith in "In Mizoura."

W. E. Rice, last season business manager of the Potter-Bellows company, has been engaged by Henry E. Abbey to go in advance of Henry Irving.

Sara, the child dancer who has just finished her season with Lillian Russell, has been engaged to do an original dance in Kathrine Clemmow's company.

J. H. Filmour arrived from Minneapolis the other day and will remain in New York until he begins to rehearse as leading man of Daniel Frohman's comedy company.

Marrie Bress has been engaged by L. E. Stockwell for his stock company at San Francisco. She started last week and will open next week in Ye Earle Trouble.

George W. Monroe will revive My Aunt Bridget this season, with all the salient points of Aunt Bridget's Baby. Owen Westford will play the leading light comedy part.

John M. Cooke, in past seasons manager for Arthur Rehan, Madame Janaschek, Evans and Hoey, Rich and Harris and others, will this season be the business representative of the Edwin Arden company for W. A. Edwards.

Free Philanthropy.

To the Editor of the Globe:

Please inform your readers that I will mail free to all sufferers the means by which I was restored to health and manly vigor after years of suffering from Nervous Weakness. I was robbed and swindled by quacks until I nearly lost faith in mankind, but thanks to heaven, I am now well, vigorous and strong. I have nothing to sell and no scheme to extort money from anyone whose ever, but being desirous to make this certain cure known to all, I will send free and confidential to anyone full particulars of just how I was cured. THE OLD AND THE NEW.

The Duke of Edinburg Succeeds to Saxe-Coburg and Gotha.

The New Ruler of the Little Thuringian Duchy will no longer be a Ruler of the Queen's Navy—Author, Composer, Hunter.

The death of Duke Ernst of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, who was born June 21, 1818, has brought about a curious complication in European affairs. The Duke being childless the throne now falls to the Duke of Edinburg, the second son of Queen Victoria, and her late consort, Prince Albert, who was the brother of Duke Ernst. The Duke of Edinburg thus becomes a reigning German Prince.

The Emperor William arrived at Reinhardtbrunn shortly after the death of the Duke, having travelled from Berlin on a special train. He went there at the request of the Duke of Edinburg, who has been spending some time in Germany. When the condition of Duke Ernst became critical the Duke was notified and at once came Coburg, where he was formally recognized as the ruler of the duchy.

The Duke of Edinburg was at Schloss Reinhardtbrunn when his uncle died and there he took the oath of allegiance to the constitution in the presence of Emperor William and all the ministers. Prime Minister Strasse formally thanked the Emperor William for attending the ceremony. The Diet then met for the purpose of swearing allegiance to the new ruler of the duchy.

Alfred Ernst Albert, Duke of Edinburg, now Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, is the second son of Queen Victoria and was born at Windsor Castle August 6, 1844. After a course of private tutoring he went to Geneva to study modern languages. Then he entered the naval service after a strict examination in 1868, was appointed a naval cadet and joined the screw steam frigate Euryalus, afterwards serving on various foreign stations. In 1872 he was offered the throne of Greece, which was afterward accepted by his brother-in-law George, brother of the Princess of Wales. He was subsequently created Duke of Edinburg, Earl of Kent and Earl of Ulster, and took his seat as such in the House of Lords. He was sworn in a Master of Trinity House and has received the freedom of the City of London. In 1867 he was appointed to command the frigate Galatea, in which he visited the Australian colonies.

While in Sydney an attempt was made by an Irishman named O'Farrell to assassinate him, at Clontarf, near Port Jackson, New South Wales, March 12, 1868. The Prince was only slightly wounded in the back by a pistol shot and O'Farrell was tried and found guilty and executed on April 21. On January 23, 1874, the Duke's marriage with the Grand Duchess Marie Alexandrovna, only daughter of Czar Alexander II, of Russia, was celebrated with great pomp at St. Petersburg. Of this marriage there are issue surviving one son, Prince Alfred, and four daughters. His second daughter, Princess Marie, was married a short time ago to Ferdinand, Crown Prince of Roumania. The Duke was promoted in 1882 to the rank of Vice Admiral of the British fleet.

By accepting the rulership in the little Duchy of Coburg the Duke of Edinburg becomes a petty member of the German Empire, with one vote in the Imperial Council. The question is can the Duke as a German reigning prince still hold on to the large salaries and emoluments which he receives from England as Admiral and for other services to the British Empire? The Duke has been frequently described as parsimonious, but the fact is that through his wife he is probably the richest member of the English royal family, and each one of his children will ultimately be wealthier than any other of Queen Victoria's children. He may have resolved to enjoy his life henceforth and establish a dynasty, even if it is not an important one.

The Duke of Edinburg will inherit vast estates, not only in Thuringia, but others of even larger extent and income in Austria and the Tyrol. He will also find a splendid field for the exercise of his musical abilities, of which the English people have not been too appreciative, for he is an able executant on the violin and is not altogether unknown as a composer. The Duchess, too, in Thuringia is free from the restraints of etiquette to which she has been compelled to submit in England.

The Duke will be the owner of many beautiful castles—homes enough for hosts of his English relatives. There will be first the great palace in Coburg, and if he pleases he can occupy the Fuerstenbau or Princes' Apartments, of the interesting old fortress that looks down upon his capital and study up German history or carry on the late Duke's musical work. It was in the old fortress that Luther resided for a long time, where he translated a good portion of the New Testament and composed his celebrated hymn, "Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott."

Near Coburg the Duke will have two of her castles, which were the favorite residences of the dead Duke—namely, Schloss Kallenberg and Schloss Rosenau, with its park, a masterpiece of landscape gardening. In Schloss Rosenau his father, Prince Albert, was born, and here, after his death his mother, Queen Victoria, spent several weeks mourning her dead consort. Tiring of these he can reside at Reisharkabanna Hinterer, Altenstein, Schwarzburg and Gotha, and a dozen little hunting chateaux.

And his titles, to be added to those he already wears—Duke of Edinburg, Earl of Ulster and Earl of Kent—will be His Royal Highness the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, Duke of Juliers, Cleves and Berg, of Enghem and Westphalia; Landgrave of Thuringia, Margrave of Meining, Count of Haunberg, Count of Mark and of Ravensberg and Seigneur of Ravenstein and of Tonna Alt.

His son, the heir to the duchy, was born October 15, 1874 and is a Prussian lieutenant in the Sixth Thuringian regiment.

THE DEAD RULER.

Interesting Sketch of the Late Duke of Saxe-Coburg.

The Duke of Coburg was seventy-five years of age and had long been ailing. His death was brought about by exposure in a storm, when he was returning from the theatre at Coburg to Schloss Reinhardtbrunn. He was stricken with apoplexy and died after an illness of five days. The Duke had two capitals, Coburg and Gotha, and when he moved from one to the other the theatre followed him, as did the literary celebrities whose society he enjoyed. The Duke was an author himself; he had travelled much; had hunted in Africa and elsewhere in his earlier days, and to the last he liked to see about him men of ability, while travellers and explorers of distant climes found him a good listener. Among the men of letters and travel whom he used to invite fifteen or twenty years ago prominent were Gustav Freytag, Berthold Auerbach, Bayard Taylor, when he resided in Thuringia, and the Plattdeutsch author Fritz Reuter.

Duke Ernst had a good round dozen or so of residential castles, and he was with perhaps the single exception of the Emperor of Austria, the owner of the largest and best stocked game preserves in Europe. Beside innumerable palaces and summer residences in his own duchy, he was master of large properties in Austria. The two largest and by far the most interesting of his sporting domains were in his own duchy, and they comprised the greater part of the vast Thuringian forest. In the sylvan fastness of this grand forest he hid Schloss Reinhardtbrunn, a small chateau, and some twenty or thirty shooting lodges.

It was in Schloss Reinhardtbrunn that the Duke breathed his last. It was his favorite residence as well as the museum of trophies of the chase and moments of his travels. The billiard room was crowded with picturesquely arranged trophies, huge heads of wapiti, dozens of different kinds of antelope horns, huge tusks of monster bears and the skins of Russian and polar bears.

Duke Ernst was a sagacious ruler. The great social upheaval of 1848 and the war of 1866 passed harmlessly over his head. When he became ruler of his little country of barely two hundred thousand inhabitants he is reported as having said to his secretary, "It is impossible for me to occupy myself with the government of this little country all day long." Consequently he devoted himself to theatricals and to the composing of music and to the writing of poems, which are said to have a striking resemblance to those of Heine. A few years ago the duke published his memoirs in two volumes. They created some excitement at the time, but are of little political value.

It may be remembered, however, that after the establishment of the Third Empire the Duke was the first foreign sovereign to visit Paris, where he was received with great favor. He repeated his visits to Napoleon's court and was witness of Orsini's attack; indeed, it was he who led the Empress safely out of the crowd, Emperor Napoleon having completely lost his self-control. The Duke was under the impression that Prince Plon-Plon had a hand in the conspiracy. His intercourse with Napoleon's family and later a confidential misive taken by him from the Emperor of Austria to Berlin caused him to lose the favor of the Prussian court for many years. But really the Duke was of not particular importance in European politics, his attempt to form a league of the smaller princes met with little response, and he was happiest when he could get one of his operas performed. One of the greatest joys of his life was when his opera of "Santa Chiara" was given by order of the Emperor Napoleon with great pomp at the Grand Opera of Paris.

The Duke of Edinburg Resigns. The Duke of Edinburg, who succeeds to the titles and dignity of the late Duke Ernst of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, has resigned his position as Admiral of the fleet of the British Navy, retaining only the honorary title.

It is altogether probable that the Duke of Edinburg has accepted the dukedom of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha with the intention of retaining the dignity permanently and not, as once rumored, of giving it up to his son, Prince Alfred, when the latter shall become of age. It is probable, too that the Duchess of Edinburg, has had great influence upon His Royal Highness in coming to this decision.

As a matter of fact the Duke himself, though once the Sailor Prince of England, never achieved through popularity in England. In 1882 Edmund Yates published in the London World, among a series of "Letters to Eminent Persons," one to H. R. H. the Duke of Edinburg, in which the following passage occurred:

"Though the Prince of Wales cannot pretend to a title of your nautical skill, and though he is, even as regards the music which he loves, a mere dabbler in comparison with yourself, though you can control an orchestra, scrape a fiddle or lead an orchestra with equal ease and excellence, the fact remains that you are not a national favorite to the extent or in the sense in which your elder brother is. How shall we explain the fact? If the music of the spheres is always ringing in the ears of Your Royal Highness can you be expected to suppress your indifference for the garrulous discords of commonplace men and women? To be popular it is above all things necessary not to be serious; one must not even be in earnest. One must lounge through life in a jaunty and degage manner, with a gently simulated sigh sometimes and a rippling music of laughter usually.

The Duke now goes to a land where life passes slowly and pleasantly, where he may indulge in music and philosophy to his heart's content, and where his dynasty may hope to flourish and produce consorts for future royalties, and where the Duchess herself will be supreme. Kaiser Wilhelm himself will find some benefit in having an Anglo Russian dual family in the German empire. He will have more opportunities to see the Czar, in case of friendly relations being desired by the two in which case the many castles of the Coburgers in Thuringia and the presence of the Duchess as hostess will assist in taking him away, low and then, for a portion of his holiday, at least, from his Danish relatives in the north.

JINGLES OF HUMOR.

A Little Nonsense Gathered for Leisure Reading.

She—From the time I was 10 years old until I was 21 papa gave me a $10 gold piece for my birthday each year.

He—I knew that about ten of your birthdays were missing, but I never knew before that you got $10 apiece for them.

A well known broker was saying last night that a few days ago he had been engaged at his office (that's what he said) until far into the morning. I boarded a car, he said, at Madison street. At Congress street a crowd of people got on and filled the car. As we proceeded several other passengers entered and had to stand, among them an old Irishman.

As street after street was passed and not a seat was vacated a comical look of weariness stole over his face, until at last, just as we passed Twenty-second street, he could stand no longer, and looking slowly around the car, he said: For the love of heaven is there none of youse have homes!

HOME RULE.

The defeat of the Home Rule Bill in the House of Lords at one o'clock last Saturday morning was an event which, although of considerable importance, was not entirely unexpected. In fact it has long since been conceded that that irresponsible body would not long entertain a measure so directly opposed to the traditions and prejudices of their class, and which came to them fresh from the hands of the Grand Old Man and his intrepid associates. Aristocratic is the complexion of the House of Lords; a measure aiming at the comparative subversion of the power heretofore possessed by aristocratic landlords in Ireland, and which seeks to equalize as far as possible the political position of the several classes of Irish society, naturally aroused their instinctive jealousy, their supercilious pride of position, and that unjust feeling of exclusiveness which is without doubt strongly rooted in their dispositions, and which only requires a slight troubling of the waters to bring it to the surface.

These are the real feelings which animated the Lords to throw the whole weight of their influence, powerful as it is at present, against Mr. Gladstone's cherished scheme; and the fact that these feelings were disguised under the hollow cry of "Separation of the Empire" will not serve to blind the British people to the actual cause underlying their action. It is not the first time in the course of British history that the same body has unreasonably opposed the express will of the British people; but we fail to read the signs of the times aright if it be not the last. At any rate we firmly believe that any persistence in their course in future will imperil their very existence. What course Mr. Gladstone will take just at present is not known, but it is more than probable that, before taking any extreme steps, he will send the bill to the House of Lords again. Should that body repeat the vote of last Saturday, and again reject the measure, there are two courses open to the Premier. He can either create enough new Liberal peers to ensure the passage of the act; or he can dissolve the parliament and go to the country upon the question. The former alternative, though it would finally dispose of the matter, is open to objection on two grounds. In the first place, as the majority against Home Rule in the Lords was upwards of 425, it would necessitate the creation of that number or more new peers, thus vastly increasing the weight of what is already a cumbersome load on the back of national progress. In the second place such a course might appear arbitrary in the eyes of the British people, who are proverbially jealous of despotism, and would probably resent such a course by inflicting defeat at the polls on those responsible for it. The second alternative is open to no such objections. The appeal to the people for their pronouncement upon any public question is the course most in accord with the spirit of the British constitution, and especially at this time of revolutionary measures such as Home Rule. If, after submitting to the people's verdict, Mr. Gladstone goes back to the Lords clothed with greater and stronger authority from them he will have a moral prestige which it will be dangerous for the Lords to resist. This course then, Mr. Gladstone will probably follow. A second victory at the polls upon the question of Home Rule will leave no doubt in any one's mind that the British people desire it; and with this assurance to strengthen his hand, the Grand Old Man may approach the conflict with the Lords with almost certain prospects of ultimate triumph.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING.

If it be true, as the rumour goes through the city, that the Fredericton gas and electric light company has proposed to the street light committee to make a contract binding themselves to supply arc lights for the city streets at $62 per light, we think the city council, if they are in earnest about the matter, should not much longer delay the proposed improvement. The price named is only a trifle of $2 per light in excess of that named under competition by Mr. Geo. F. Calkin who probably had figured his tender price down as low as he possibly could in order to obtain the award. That the city streets are sadly in need of electric lighting no one will dispute. Those who have been collided with, and jostled and hustled about by crowds on Queen street returning from the various churches on Sunday nights of which there are not a few, will agree with that statement, as will the dwellers on the back streets of the city, who are in almost total darkness after sundown throughout fall and winter and spring. Then, besides the added comfort to the citizens, the electric light would be an added beauty to the city's many attractions, and as for the increased cost, we are of opinion that it will be more than counterbalanced by the considerations just mentioned.

THE LIBERAL LEADER.

Those who have thus far followed Hon. Mr. Laurier's tour throughout the Province of Ontario cannot help being astonished and gratified at the magnificent receptions which have on every side been accorded to him; as well as the general enthusiasm displayed at his meetings. We know that there are some individuals in our own community, chiefly of the ultra orange stripe, who revile at Mr. Laurier because he is a French Canadian Roman Catholic; and who declare that as long as he remains in leadership the Liberal party's attempts to win the day must be in vain. Although we have never in the least given heed to any such uncharitable comments, still we have been curious to know just how the leader would be received in protestant Ontario, where, if at all, his origin and religious beliefs would very naturally bring him into odium. We have narrowly studied the reports of his public meetings appearing in newspapers of both political persuasions; but we have failed to discover the slightest evidence of the least diminution in the respect and esteem felt for Mr. Laurier all along the line. On the contrary, we see the plainest signs that the warm admiration which his honesty manliness and sincerity have always inspired in his nearer personal and political friends has been extended through the whole rank and file of the liberal party, and not a few of the conservatives, and that it has been deepened and intensified as it went. We will venture to say that there is not a public man in Canadian political life today who can begin to compare in this respect with the honoured leader of the liberals. He is a man to be proud of, as he inspires confidence and esteem in his foes as well as his friends. And his splendid personality is going far to make his present tour the magnificent success that it is. When his western journey is finished, we hope that the liberals of New Brunswick will make a strong effort to have him visit this province, and give his followers here the pleasure and benefit which would result from a personal meeting with him as well as from listening to his eloquent expositions of the public affairs of Canada.

THE EXHIBITION.

Everyone will be pleased to learn that the prospects for the complete success of the Provincial Exhibition next week are of the best. The management have worked long and arduously to bring things into proper shape and their labors seem about to be rewarded by results greater than they ever expected. The character of the previous exhibitions, and the favourable impressions made by them on the people of the province, added to the extensive advertisements circulated this year, have all had an effect in attracting attention, and it is probable the attendance next week will be very much larger than ever before. The number of exhibitors, too, is in excess of that of previous years; the exhibiting space is greater than previously; the races for the 20th and 21st promise to be interesting and exciting events, and in fine there will be no department which will not be completely arranged for, and satisfactorily carried on. All that is necessary is fine weather, and we sincerely hope that the committee may be favoured in this respect as well as in all others.

SPORTING NEWS.

Sai Hach Fear For the Valkyrie.
New York, September 14.—The usually elected cup defender Vigilant, who fought her recent battles with the first pitted against her, lies at City Island ready to be lifted out of the water and scraped from stem to stern.

The Colonia is still at Bay Ridge, resting from the long throb to windward in Monday's race. She has been selected as cup defender in case the Vigilant is disabled. This is somewhat remarkable, in view of the splendid showing of the Jubilee. That veteran enthusiast at Gen. Paine does not seem to be in it this year. Still his ideas have held good, and if it came to a question of Volunteer and Jubilee, it is likely that the bets of the general run of yachtsmen would be cast upon upon the newest Paine boat.

The old General's red suspenders will not shine in the yacht races this year but he will undoubtedly be given a place of honor on the American boat if he so desires.

After all, it matters but little which American boat wins. They all fly the Stars and Stripes.

The Pilgrim and Jubilee left for Boston early yesterday morning, and the Colonia was left in solitary state at Bay Ridge.

Although the "Valkyrie" has not yet been sighted no anxiety is felt on her account. None of the English cup defenders has made the trip in less than twenty-two days, and it is not likely the "Valkyrie" will strain a point to get over in a hurry. Too much depends on the rigging to strain it unnecessarily, and a "dry rig" will not drive a boat at racing speed. All New York yachtsmen are pleased with the selection of "Vigilant" for cup defender. We selected her because we judged her to be the best boat," said Commodore Smith yesterday. She seems to be equally good in all winds and seas.

The World's Fair Races.
CHICAGO, Sep. 14.—The first real sporting event of national interest to take place within the Exposition grounds was the swimming contest yesterday under the auspices of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States. Results: 100 yards dash—L. Arthur T. Kenney, University of Pennsylvania; time 1.12 2/5. 400 yards race—L. Arthur T. Kenney time 5.24 1/5.

Half mile race—W. G. Douglas, New York; time 13.39 3/5, being one-fifth of a second more than the world's record.

One mile race—L. George Whittaker, Milwaukee; time, 28.45 2/5.

A Question.
How can we raise more corn to the acre? Why, of course by using Putnam's Corn Extractor. Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor has given universal satisfaction, for it is sure, safe and painless. Like every article of real merit it has a host of imitators, and we would specially warn the public to guard against those dangerous substitutes offered for the genuine Putnam's Extractor. N. C. The Genesis Agreed.

The schooner Genesis, 110 tons, owned by Mr. John Gibson of Marysville, while running out the river Tantramar, opposite Annapolis, Monday morning, ran aground on Green Point. The vessel was running at a good rate and slid about two hundred yards over the soft mud before bringing up. As the tide was very high when she grounded she will likely remain upon the point until high tides a month hence. This makes two vessels, including the new one on the bar at the Mouth of the Nashwaak, that Mr. Gibson has lying high and dry awaiting a rise of water to float them.

Weddings this Week.

Two interesting events took place on Tuesday last. One at the Exchange Hotel in this city, in which Mr. Woodford Harper of Prince William and Miss Jennie Carson of Dumfries played the leading parts. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. H. Sherwood of St. John. The happy couple are spending the honeymoon in this city, and will take in the exhibition before leaving for their new home. The other event was celebrated at St. Peter's Church, Kingsclear, Rev. Mr. Montgomery officiating. In this Mr. Reuben C. Quartermain of Kingsclear who recently returned from the North West, and Miss Florence L. Stone of this city were the principals.

The Temperance Picnic.

A fine day, a fine steamer and a large crowd were the conditions that made the Margerville picnic the best that they have ever held. There were over six hundred on board before the boat reached her destination at Ferris' landing on Grand Lake. Owing to the limited time on the grounds the full programme of sports could not be carried out. There were two one hundred yard dashes. In the first race Fred Hart captured the prize. The second was closely contested by Messrs Peppers and Estey, the latter winning by a few feet. About four o'clock the picnickers started for home. The crowd grew smaller at every landing and about 10.30 the Fredericton contingent arrived well pleased with their days outing.

Progress in Gibson.

On the 29th of June last the town of Gibson was visited by a terrible fire which laid waste the whole town in a few hours. Today, as an example of what New Brunswick pluck and energy can do, the buildings that were destroyed have nearly all been replaced by much larger and more comfortable homes. On Mr. Arthur Sewell's lot where the fire started, a handsome residence is nearing completion. Mr. Sewell has also purchased the lots facing the river above the railway track a neat and commodious fence encloses the whole end. Soon the whole space will be converted into a green and smiling lawn. Coming further down we find the Baptist church being rapidly pushed along. This structure, when completed, will be a credit to the village. Just above "Closs's corner" our attention is attracted by a magnificent barn on the premises of Mr. Robt. Macklin. Mr. Macklin has also rebuilt the ell of his house and next year a comfortable farm house will be attached to it. Just around the corner on the Marysville road a number of buildings have almost reached completion. These have been built by Messrs Bradley Evans, Kyle Belyea, and Bailey. These buildings will give the town a "natty" appearance such as it never had in the days of old. Further down the river road is the farm of Mr. John Miles who was probably the heaviest loser by the late fire. Despite the fact Mr. Miles has erected a mammoth farm house close at hand. Mr. Pickard has erected a new building on the old site. Other buildings are to be started shortly, and in a few short months Gibson will be as thriving and prosperous as ever.

While some of our people are complaining of hard times, and no business, Mr. John J. Weddall, seems to be of a different opinion. He has just added another large room, to his already extensive establishment which we understand is to be devoted exclusively to ladies and children's jackets, we would recommend his store to the visitors to the exhibition.

Sheriff Dibble of Carleton died rather suddenly Saturday morning at his home in Woodstock. The sheriff had been in failing health for two years but was only confined to the house for about a week. He was about sixty-seven years of age. He leaves a widow, a son and a daughter to mourn their loss. Col Dibble, commander of the Woodstock field battery, and Mrs. A. B. Connell.

Mrs. Meehan, wife of Daniel Meehan, the well-known blacksmith of this city, died very suddenly at her home, Regent street last Monday night. She retired at the usual hour in apparently good health. About eleven o'clock Mr. Meehan was startled by a short, sharp shriek from his wife, and when he turned his eyes upon her she was dead. Deceased's son Patrick and daughter Lena were on the Calais and arrived home about an hour after their mother's death. Mrs. Meehan was an estimable lady, about 53 years old. The funeral, which took place Wednesday morning, was largely attended. The remains were conveyed to St. Dunstan's church where requiem mass was said by Father Savage, thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery above town where the interment took place. The bereaved husband and family have the sympathy of all.

TOPICS OF THE DAY

What the Gossips have to Remark about

The Trend of Matters Political Parliamentary or Otherwise.

Some Touching-Go Notices of all Mentionable Matters of the Day.

The Fredericton Electric Light Company have offered to supply the city with 50 arc lights at $50 each per year, said lights to burn all night. In case the contract for gas is renewed, the company will insist on three years as the term of such renewal.

General Herbert was here inspecting the R. R. C. I. Wednesday and Thursday. He was at the barracks yard shortly after nine Thursday morning and Capt. Hemming put the men through company drill under the critical eye of the general. About 9.30 a company under the command of Capt. Hemming, was despatched to the old race course, and there some skirmishing manoeuvres were gone through. The prizes won by the men of the infantry school in their last rifle competition were presented by General Herbert. After the presentation all departments of the barracks, including the hospital, were inspected. The general left for Quebec by the Canada Eastern railway yesterday morning, to meet Lord Aberdeen on his arrival at Quebec.

Geo. H. Needham, a commercial traveler of St. John, has instructed a lawyer to enter suit against the Star Line company. Mr. Needham sent his sample trunks and baggage to the company's wharf Tuesday night labelled for St. John. They were taken in charge and placed on the David Weston. Next morning when Needham went down to the wharf shortly before 8 o'clock, the hour advertised for the departure of the boat for St. John, he found the boat had left half an hour earlier with a picnic for Grand Lake, and also with his trunks. He returned to his hotel and at once proceeded to his lawyers' office, where he was advised he had a good right of action against the steamboat company, and has instructed the lawyers to take the necessary proceedings at once.

The formal opening of the Exhibition will take place Tuesday next, when Lieut. Governor Sir Leonard Tilley, escorted by a guard of honor from the Royal Regiment of Canadian Infantry will deliver an address. The official programme for the three days contains features that will greatly interest everybody. The city firemen, assisted by the St. Mary's fire company will have a grand torchlight procession Wednesday evening, and on Thursday evening give a beautiful display of fireworks on the exhibition grounds. Every department of the exhibition promises to be filled with the best display ever seen in a provincial exhibition in this city. The live stock exhibit will be especially interesting. The Park Association races Wednesday and Thursday should draw large crowds. The committee have succeeded in securing such low rates on the railways and steamboats that all can afford the trip here next week. Plenty of good hotel accommodation at reasonable rates. Everybody should visit the fair.

CHARGED WITH NEGLIGENCE.

The Verdict of the Jury on the Rustler

The coroner's jury charges Capt. John Russell with negligence. This has been inferred by the jury from the evidence: it was proved directly. The evidence showed that Capt. Russell was at his post, attending strictly to business, but the jury believed that only careless steering could account for the steamer being so far off her course. There was no fog, lights were visible, Kerr's mill had been seen distinctly from the middle of the river by Capt. Bullock fifteen minutes before, and Capt. Russell stated that he had a range of lights to steer by and did not discover that he was out of his course till one minute before the collision. The jury seeing no other explanation for the steamer's being off her course; accused the helmsman of failure to exercise due diligence. The inquest exploded a host of wild stories that were in circulation about general neglect, carelessness and misconduct on board. It shows that the fireman was not neglecting his work to flirt with young ladies in the cabin; that the engineer, though taking a glass of ginger beer at the time, was close to his engine, and that Capt. Russell was alone in the wheelhouse, at the helm. If Capt. Russell had said he was steering by the land, as Capt. Bullock says he steers, an error of judgment as to the distance of the land would account for his getting so close in, but, as he was steering by a range of lights, the jury could find no reason except carelessness for his failure to keep them in range. Those who undertake to steer steamers or run trains must be made to feel that they are responsible for the lives on board.

Hard Lines for Howard.

Alex Howard slipped away from Chatham with a hundred dollar Scott Act fine hanging over his head, and subsequently did business in Moncton and Fredericton. He was put in jail in Fredericton for a Scott Act offence on the day of his release. Inspector Menzies, who was in Fredericton, took possession of him and carried him there. He was taken to jail on Tuesday, handcuffed, and will serve two months. Howard, though quiet, sober and slick, has had a harder time than the majority of violators.

Sir Charles H. Tupper Minister of Marine, will hold an examination into the Rustler's disaster in a few days.

afresh. Dr. Pease amputated an inch of the bone, and it healed. Four years later it once more opened, and for eight years how I suffered! I do not believe it possible for a human being to suffer worse agony. During this time I had to go on crutches, being unable to wear a wooden leg. Whenever possible I relieved my sufferings by taking opiate, but when I was obliged to go without it, I suffered fearfully and though I should go crazy. I tried every thing I could get with my limited means. Physicians said I would never be any better. Finally my and it broke out all over my face and on some parts of my body so that my face is all covered with scars now. One day I read of what Hood's Sarsaparilla would do. The first dollar I got I sent and bought a bottle and began taking it. A week or two later, my wife in dressing my leg, said it seemed to be improving, and after taking a few months, thank God (and I say it reverently), the sores all over my body had healed, and now four years later, have never shown any sign of re-opening." GEORGE W. HAMMOND, 219 Magnolia Street, Syracuse, N. Y.

A Synoptic History of the Times.

A double murder occurred in an old hotel near Brighton, a suburb of Rochester, N. Y. The hotel had been set on fire and two persons burned to death. The house which had long been deserted had been used as a boarding house for a gang of Italian laborers. The row began in a drunken carousal Sunday, during which one Italian was shot and is supposed to have been killed. The fight was resumed Monday night and one of the combatants was stabbed. The building took fire at 7 Tuesday morning and burned like tinder. Two of the boarders are missing and it is believed their bodies are in the ruins.

A train on the Lake Shore road was held up near Kendallville, Ind., late last Monday night by a score of masked men. They shot and seriously wounded the engineer of the train when he refused to throw up his hands. Dynamite was exploded under the express car, while armed guards were placed at the door of each car of the train. The messenger of the express car was beaten into insensibility, the safe blown open with dynamite and it is said the robbers carried away $250,000 in gold that was being shipped east by a Chicago bank. None of the passengers were molested. The express car was the one used by the United States Express Co.

The New York Herald's cable from Montevideo, Uruguay says: "The Brazilian naval rebels are having a hard time of it. Hemmed in within the Bay of Rio they fear to run the gauntlet of forts and torpedoes at the entrance and put out to sea, and an attempt to land has been repulsed with considerable loss of life. The English consul has warned all British vessels of the risk of putting into Rio."

Fire in the lumber yards of the Pullman Palace Car Company in the town of Pullman, this week, caused a loss of a quarter million dollars. Twenty acres were burned over and between nine and ten million feet of lumber destroyed.

M. V. Cannon, president of the Irish National League of America, is in Chicago. He says the alleged manifesto sent out from New York city on Sunday night never came from the executive committee of the league and he repudiates it altogether.

Dick O'Brien, welter weight of Maine knocked out Maxie Flaherty Monday night at the Cribb Club Boston in the second round.

Rev. G. P. Begar, a prominent Dunkard preacher, aged sixty years, hung himself at Salemville, Pa., on Monday morning. He held the service the previous evening and appeared to be then in the best of spirits.

Lord Hannen, who was on the Behring Sea arbitration, has definitely resigned as Lord of Appeal in Ordinary, and Sir Charles Bowen has been appointed to succeed him. Sir Charles, who was regarded as one of the soundest lawyers at the bar, was made a Judge at the Court of Queen's Bench in 1879 and in 1882 a Lord Justice of the Court of Appeal. The vacancy will be offered to Sir Horace Davey, C. C., the oft-defeated Liberal politician, who is now on his way home from South Africa.

Mrs. Halliday, who killed the two women and her husband at Middletown, N. Y., recently, is believed now to have fired the barn in which her sleep was burned. She told her late husband that she had killed her first husband, and described the way she did it; but he did not believe her. He told his son of it, however. That the woman has a terrible thirst for blood is certain, and there is a most ingenious theory in some of the papers by which it is sought to connect the activity of her passion with the fact that it had the fiercest hold upon her at times when she expected to become a mother.

In every Episcopal church in Washington on Sunday prayers were offered for the recovery and health of Mrs. Cleveland and her youngest daughter. At Epiphany, the largest Episcopal church in the city, every pew was filled, and when the priest began the eloquent invocation every head was bowed, and but for the sound of the voice of him praying, a stillness of death existed. For several seconds after the conclusion no one of the kneeling figures stirred, and the vast congregation seemed rapt in silent prayer. In Washington Mrs. Cleveland is loved as few wives of presidents have been; and though a Presbyterian, and a strict member, yet the Episcopal church paid her a pretty testimonial affection.

A fragment of bas-relief discovered in Egypt has shown how the obelisks and other large monoliths were transported from the quarry to their site. The stone is depicted upright on a great galley or vessel, which is being towed by a number of small boats alongside. This method of detaching a monolith from the mother rock is also explained by a semi-detached block in one of the quarries of Syene. After having been hewn clear on three sides, a deep groove was cut into the side still attached to the rock, and holes were pierced into which dry wood pegs were driven. The pegs were then wetted, and the wood in swelling broke off the monolith from the quarry.

A despatch from Paris says: General De Mirabel was thrown from his horse at Hauterive this week and received injuries which caused his death.
There has been a severe outbreak of cholera in Leghorn. 205 cases and seven deaths were reported one day this week.
A new estimate of the British wheat crop for 1893 has been published. It puts crop in round numbers at 54,000,000 bushels, which is slightly under the last estimate given out. The imports continue large, and the receipts from Canada are expected to be greater. With a British consumption to 220,000,000 bushels from all sources it is believed there is a possibility of higher prices.

For Sunday Contemplation.
No man shall ever be poor that goes to himself for what he wants.
Good manners is the art of making people easy with whom we converse.
He that rebukes a private fault openly betrays it rather than reproves it.
People who blow their own horns seldom furnish good music for other folks.
Those who are formed to win general admiration are seldom calculated to bestow individual happiness.

A little love rapidly develops the sensibilities and intelligence of women; it is through the heart that they ripen or mold.
A man is relieved and gay when he has put his heart into his work and done his best but what he has said or done otherwise shall give him no peace.
A man can carry his mind with him as he carries his watch; but like the watch to keep it going he must keep it wound up.
The manly way is to treat lightly the judgments passed on us by others, but to be honorably sensitive about the judgments we are compelled to pass on others.

No man ever realizes how poor a son he was until he gets into his father's place by becoming a father himself. Then he finds how much love and thought and toil were expended upon him, which he took as a thing of course, and with hardly a thought of thankfulness.
In no way is self-mastery more distinctly shown than in a diminishing self-consciousness. Many good men are hampered and distressed by self-consciousness; by the fatal intrusion of self at the moment when a clear field and a clear vision are necessary.
Men can be as original now as ever if they had but the courage, even the insight. Heroic souls in old times had no more opportunities than we have but they used them. There were daring deeds to be done—were there none now? Writings to be made—were there none now? Wrongs to be redressed—were there none now?

Don't sit down with a long face and "hope for something to turn up." Spring to your feet! Grapple with every adversary, and never fear to give battle in duty, virtue, truth and justice! I hope that something will turn up! For shame! Nothing will "turn up" till you turn it up! Go at your work with a will, with an indomitable determination and make dust fly from obstacles, then things will have turned up to your satisfaction and you will have reasons to show.

One Honest Man.
TO THE EDITOR OF THE GLOBE:
Please inform your readers that I will mail free to all sufferers the means by which I was restored to health and manly vigor after years of suffering from Nervous Weakness. I was robbed and swindled by quacks until I nearly lost faith in mankind, but thanks to heaven, I am now well, vigorous and strong. I have nothing to sell and no scheme to extort money from anyone; however, being desirous to make this certain cure known to all, I will send free and confidential to anyone full particulars of just how I was cured. SISTERS OF PROVIDENCE.
A Chat with the Secretary of St. Mary's.
She Explains why the Sisters and their Pupils are so Healthy—Due to strict Rules followed and the use of the Home-Information of value to Everybody From the Terre Haute, Ind. Express.

Four miles to the northwest of Terre Haute, lies the beautiful and picturesque village of St. Mary's. This is Roman Catholic institution which has attained something more than national celebrity. Fifty years ago it was established by six sisters of Providence who came from the shores of France to lay the foundation for this great charitable order. It now consists of the home of the Sisters of Providence, known as the Providence House; a large female seminary, one of the finest chapels in the United States, and a Rectory in which the priests make their home.

A reporter of the Express while being shown through the establishment recently asked Sister Mary Ambrose if there was any apparent reason for the good health with which the sisters and their pupils are blessed. The answer was that particular attention is paid by the sisters in charge to the health and happiness of the students. Bodily ailments, she said, "cannot help but have its effect on the mind. In order to keep the mind bright and active and perfectly clear at all times, the student's condition must be as nearly perfect as possible. Some time ago there was more or less ailment noticeable among the sisters and students, which was probably due to atmospheric causes, though of course I do not know just what its origin really was. Shortly after this became noticeable a friend rightly recommended a medicine called Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and so urged upon me to give them a trial that I ordered some of them and they have been used in the institution ever since. A few days ago the manufacturers wrote me for an opinion of Pink Pills and my reply was as follows:

RESPECTED SIR:—In answer to your kind request for an opinion of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, please to say that these pills were so highly recommended to me that I was induced to try them, and we think our repeated orders for them are sufficient evidence that we find them all they are represented, a good blood builder and an excellent nerve tonic.

Yours very respectfully,
SISTER M. AMBROSE,
Secretary for Sisters of Providence.

Medical scientists concede that weak blood and shattered nerves are the fruitful cause of nearly every disease to which human flesh is heir, and if Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is as Sister Ambrose says they have found it, "a good blood builder and an excellent nerve tonic," the source of good health at St. Mary's is easily traced. Sister Ambrose says they are never without Pink Pills, and that now they order a gross at a time.

This is certainly a very high recommendation for the medicine, for there is probably no class of people that gives more attention to the physical health and welfare of its members than the Sisters of Providence, and they would not use anything in which they did not have unbounded faith.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are truly one of the greatest medical discoveries of the age. They are the beginning of a more healthful era. Every day brings reports of remarkable cures that have resulted from the use of this wonderful medicine. In many cases the good work has been accomplished after eminent physicians had failed and pronounced the patient beyond the hope of human aid. An analysis proves that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain in a condensed form all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of a grippé, palpitation of the heart, that tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration; all diseases depending upon vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppression, irregularities, and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood and restore the glow of health to pale or sallow cheeks. In the case of men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature.

These pills are manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, of Boston, Out. and Schenectady N. Y., and are sold in boxes (never in loose form by the dozen or hundred) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, from either address. The price at which these pills are sold makes a course of treatment inexpensive as compared with other remedies or medical treatment.

THE EAGLE FURNACE.

FOR WOOD.

The Most Powerful Heater ever Invented.

EASY TO MANAGE DURABLE.

Warranted to give double the amount of Heat of any other Furnace from the same quantity of fuel.

For Quickness of operation it is unsurpassed, there being no escape of heat into the cellar or chimney; neither gas nor smoke into the rooms above.

SATISFACTION IN EVERY RESPECT GUARANTEED TO ALL MAKING A TRIAL OF THE FURNACE.

FAVORITE DIAMOND. FOR WOOD OR COAL.

The fire box for Coal is oval, and is the heaviest and most durable made. The stove is supplied with either the Duplex Grate or the new patent Flat haking and Dumping Grate. When the fire box for coal is removed and the Fire Back and False Fire Bottom and front fender put in, they surpass all other cooking stoves for burning wood, as they have a large fire box, with the advantage of a central delivery of draft to the wood, making a quick, hot fire with a small amount of fuel. The reservoir is large and made of copper, and water can be boiled in it. The ornamentation is very beautiful, and the castings fittings, etc., are guaranteed to be of the best workmanship.

ROYAL DIAMOND, Reservoir and Heating Shelf. FOR WOOD.

This Handsomely Finished Stove has a large and well ventilated oven, with an unusually large feed door and Fire Box, admitting very coarse wood. It is entirely new and First Class in finish, while every point of excellence is embraced in its Construction.

REASONS WHY

The STEEL CLAD is the Best.

It is open and accessible. No place for accumulation of impurities. Dampness cannot affect it. Nothing about it to shrink or decay. It cannot leak. It is light, but strong and durable. It is handsome in appearance.

It is THE CHEAPEST BATH IN THE MARKET.

Hilborn's Hot Air Furnace

MADE IN 2 STYLES. 8 SIZES. BRICK SET OR PORTABLE.

The body is corrugated and made very heavy. The Furnace is arranged so that it can be operated from the rooms above, obviating the necessity of going to the furnaces for regulating drafts.

The drums are of heavy sheet steel well riveted together.

It is the only wood burning furnace that can be easily cleaned out at all times. This very necessary arrangement is too often overlooked by parties buying furnaces, and as a result, they are forced to take them apart in order to clean them.

A Big Mistake.

The moulting season, or the season when hens shed their feathers will soon be at an end. The process is one that in certain respects debilitates and prevents hens from laying. The reason of this is that the growing of new feathers requires all the nitrogen and phosphates contained in the food and there is none left to form the egg. A curious fact about the hen, and one that illustrates the foregoing statement, is this, if a hen's leg be broken during the laying season, she will lay her eggs without shells until the break is mended. The reason for this must be that all the lime contained in the food is required to unite the broken bone, there is therefore none for the formation of egg shells. The formation of new feathers does not require any carbonaceous or fat producing food, neither eggs without shells until the break is mended. Many farmers and poultry raisers not understanding all about these things kill off their old hens because they think they have stopped laying and are fat. This is a great mistake, because if the proper material be furnished them with their food to supply the increased demand for nitrogen and phosphates before mentioned the old hens will be through shedding feathers much sooner and will begin laying on the approach of cold weather and they will continue to lay vigorously all winter, while the young pullets, reserved to take the place of the old, hens may not begin to lay until much later in the season. Very many people have learned from experience that Sheridan's Condition Powder mixed once daily with their food will supply the extra material needed to strengthen and invigorate their hens, enabling them to grow new plumage quickly and commence laying early. Those who commence now to use Sheridan Powder, will find that their young pullets will commence to lay at from four to six months old, and will lay continuously through the winter. The Farmers' Poultry Raising Guide, published by I. S. Johnson & Co., at 22 Custom House St., Boston, at 25 cents, contains a vast amount of information on this subject, Johnson & Co., will send post paid, two 25 cent packs of powder and one Guide for 60 cents, or a 24 lb can of the powder postage or express prepaid for $1.20 and a guide free.

POOR DOCUMENT

AN OPEN LETTER.

Grand Lake Range, Queen's County, N. B.

March 10th, 1898.

THE GROSSER DYSPEPSIA CURE CO., LTD.

GENTLEMEN:

I am 72 years of age and have had dyspepsia for several years. I have employed numerous physicians and taken many patent medicines, but all were of no use in my case. I began to grow worse. There was severe distress in my stomach; everything I ate, even the lightest food caused me intense agony. My appetite was poor and I could not sleep. I was almost without hope when I saw a testimonial in the newspaper stating what Groder's Syrup had done for others. As a last effort to regain health, I thought that I would buy it. Just before Christmas last my son Fred went to St. John and brought me home a bottle of your remedy. I used with the following results:

I eat as I wish and have no distress from my food; my appetite is first-class, my food tastes good to me now, I sleep as sound as a child, I do all my own work without the aid of a servant and can do a day's washing without feeling much tired whereas I could not do it at all before taking Groder's. I do feel grateful to you, gentlemen, for placing so valuable a remedy upon the market. I give all the credit for present state of good health to your medicine.

I am willing to answer any questions concerning the above, for I firmly believe your remedy will cure other sufferers as it has cured me. I conscientiously make this statement without any inducement or reward knowing it to be one of the best medicines in the market for Dyspepsia.

Respectfully yours,

ELEANOR BURKE.

The Broken Shaft.

A STORY OF THE SEA.

Little Brown cupid, eh auntie? A peal of merry laughter framed the sentence in music and the words and joyous tones were the first intimation to a young man who sat under the life-boat on the starboard side of the Pacific Mail steamship "Colon" that there were other passengers in his immediate vicinity. He looked meditatively at his cigar. No, the smoke wouldn't betray his presence, for the light wind wafted it toward the stern and away from the two persons who had just drawn up camp stools under the protecting shelter of another lifeboat, the hull of which kept off the burning rays of the sun.

For at this time the "Colon" was plying between New York and that port known to all Americans as Aspinwall, even though the name has been changed to suit certain English fancies. At this hour the "Colon" was tied up at the wharf taking in the last tons of cargo—a lot of green bananas. The train from Panama had just rolled in and passengers who had taken the water route from San Francisco were already coming aboard. The two women whose conversation interrupted the thoughts of the cigar were the first to arrive and they were already making themselves comfortable. Raymond Curtis had been on board two days. He had come up from Callao, where he had been on business, and the steamer "Isaly" of the Pacific Steam Navigation Company had arrived four days since on the Pacific side of the isthmus. Two days in Panama had sufficed and the two days in Aspinwall seemed even worse. For the heat was intense even for this steaming region. The isthmus is never baked by the sun's rays. First it pours for half an hour a warm rain that makes one think nature has turned on the hot water faucet by mistake; then out comes the sun and draws up the moisture until sufficient has been raised to warrant another downpour. Thus it seems to be raining all the time, first up and then down, a continual vapor bath. At the time the above remark was made the sun was having his innings and making good use of his time. A score of perspiring laborers were running about the wharf swinging in the bunches of bananas. They were stripped to the waist and from forehead to the soles they wore looked like so much polished mahogany. Plying on some bales that stood at some distance back were a half dozen children. Following the custom of Aspinwall, adolescence they were clad as they came into this world, only in their tight-fitting skins. These were the little brown cupids that a certain person referred to then, and Mr. Curtis listened for further conversation. But at this moment that fend on ocean steamships, the deck hand appeared, and with a "Beg your pardon, sir, please move your stool, began to sweep the lifeboat deck in the vicinity of the young man. The noise made by moving attracted the attention of the younger of the two women. Her pretty face flushed crimson as she recalled the remark made for her companion's ear only, and rising hastily, she exclaimed, Come auntie, the sun is so hot; let's go to the social hall. The two disappeared, and Raymond Curtis, effectively routed from his reverie, snatched forward to try and find the captain, with whom he had become fast friends. As he passed the spot where the two had been seated he noticed something on the deck. Stopping down he picked up an elastic affair with a silver buckle. Nobody was looking, so he dropped it into his pocket and continued his promenade.

In the pilot-house, busy with some charts stood Captain Griffin. We will be out of this hole within a hour or two, Mr. Curtis, he said, and then for the cool ocean breeze.

They talked a few moments on unimportant matters and Curtis interrupted a story about how the "Colon" had on the last trip been compelled to put to sea because of a northerly gale.

Who is that pretty girl who came over from the Frisco boat and is travelling with an elderly relative. Ah! So that's the way the wind blows, is it? I thought you didn't look quite so bored. And you really think you may take some interest in the trip after all? They are aunt and niece. They have been out for a three months' visit on the Pacific Coast, where the young woman's father lives. They came out with me four trips ago. Hard study at a seminary had somewhat affected her health, but I think it has returned, don't you?

Captain can you arrange the seats at the table so that I can be near her? Let me see. I did think of placing Miss Thornydyke on my right and you on my left, but there is a friend of one of the managers on board, so I reckon I will place him at my left. I will tell the purser to put Miss Thornydyke on my right, then Miss Campbell, then yourself.

But how will that get me next to Miss Thornydyke? Near Miss Thornydyke is the aunt, Miss Campbell's mother's sister, a jolly, fat creature, senile all the time. Miss Campbell—Minnie Fay Campbell—is the niece. Nominally, Miss Thornydyke will be at my right, but before dinner time this evening she will be stowed away in her bunk, and except on very calm days none save the stewardess will see anything of her. So I will have a good view of the young lady, who is an excellent sailor and so will you.

Thanks, replied Curtis. Have a cigar? Well, this is smart bribery, but those wads of yours are so good I think I will accept it.

Minnie Fay Campbell, Curtis was saying to himself a half hour later. What a pretty name. That intolerant gong that always warn people who are not going with the boat to disembark, and is so often the signal for tears to flow, interrupted his thoughts and he went up on the bridge, where Captain Griffin acceded him the privilege of standing. But no one shed tears at leaving Aspinwall, and everybody felt better when the good ship pointed into a northwest breeze and began to pitch just enough to occasionally toss a few drops of spray over the bow, that is, everybody save the unfortunate beings who sink into a dull stupor when the boat leaves the dock, persons always anxious to take ocean voyages where they can only be miserable. Miss Thornydyke was one of this class. She enjoyed telling of the many times she had crossed the Atlantic, to say nothing of other trips, but the history of each on her could be condensed into hour after hour passed lying in a lower berth, nibbling cracked ice, taking a drop of lemon juice and now and then a biscuit and a sip of beef tea, all the while gazing out of a little porthole at the green sea, then at the blue or cloudy sky as the ship rolled from side to side. It had become a second nature with her to flop into a berth before land was lost from view, and she was therefore absent from dinner that evening.

Poor auntie, said Miss Campbell. I am afraid it will be several days before she is at table. Captain Griffin expressed some sympathetic words, though he did not look especially distressed, and then introduced her to Mr. Curtis. The young woman did not show by her manner that she recognized her comrade at table as the one who had overheard her on deck, and the three soon entered into a lively conversation.

The fourth day out one of those sudden changes came. The wind died down and the sea became like glass; it was like riding on a river. It became quite warm and the swaying was spread over the after deck, when steamer chairs were placed in requisition. It seemed as if more passengers had come aboard during the night, so many new faces were to be seen. Raymond Curtis and Miss Campbell amused themselves looking at and talking about individuals whom Neptune had released from the cabins below. At the luncheon table every seat was taken, even Miss Thornydyke allowing the good-natured stewardess to help her to her place. There was much merry laughter, light banter, hopes expressed of a calm trip the rest of the way, and to all the talk the rhythm of the propeller as it churned the water astern was the only accompaniment sound.

Miss Thornydyke, try some of the curry, said the captain. He passed the dish, and was about placing it by the side of her plate, when he dropped it on the table and jumped to his feet. At the instant every face was blanched, for it seemed as if a power from the infernal regions was delivering blow after blow at the vessel's hull, while the massive iron framework quivered under the attack. This awful noise seemed to continue indefinitely, but in reality it was over before the captain and chief engineer reached the deck. Both had started at the same moment. Then there was silence, a quiet more fearful than the noise, for even the reassuring sound of the propeller was stilled. Women and children cried and men looked solemn. The officers who had remained in the saloon did their best to still the alarm. Only a slight accident to the machinery, they said. We will be all right in a few hours.

Instinctively, Miss Curtis had drawn near her male companion during those awful seconds, and neither noticed till afterward that he had placed his arm around her. Come, Raymond, help me with auntie, she said a moment later. For, worn out with three days and three nights of torture, Miss Thornydyke's nerves had given away and she was lying back in her chair in a dead faint. But so were other women, and the stronger ones were kept busy for awhile. In ten minutes the captain reappeared. The shaft is broken, said he, but there is no danger, as no damage was done to the hull. The break is in the collar where we cannot get at it, and the only thing to be proceeded under sail. We have plenty of provisions, and must make the best of it and pray for good weather.

Some men cursed the delay. They were those whose hours were precious, and a few days' loss at sea meant business losses. One little woman at the end of the table wept bitterly. Her husband would be down on the dock to meet her on the day the "Colon" was due, and what agony he would be in. But before night all were cheered up somewhat and were prepared to make the best of it. Curtis was really delighted at the delay, though he kept his thoughts to himself. She had in a moment of terror called him "Raymond," and he—well he now thought she might be persuaded to some day use that name forever.

Captain, said he an hour after the accident, is it not strange that the shaft broke during such smooth weather?

Yes it is unusual, but I suppose it cracked a little during the norther we ran out in last trip, and the crack has been spreading since. It was fortunate it did happen in fine weather and not in a gale. How fast can we go under sail? Oh, perhaps four or five knots. You see in these days of steam we don't carry much canvas. At present we are barely making stowage way. But if the average wind keeps up we can make good time in ten or twelve days and a tug. There are so few steamships running this course that the chances are we will sight nothing but sailing vessels till we see the coast. All we want is good weather. There will be no danger unless a gale comes on, and then you know what might happen if we should get into the trough of the sea. Curtis shuddered, but he was thinking of Minnie for just then she stepped out of the companion way into the glowing sunlight that flickering in her hair wreathed her face as with a halo.

A pretty picture said the Captain, as pretty as one as could be wished. The girl came forward. Captain, she said, you and Mr. Curtis come and play some. You must do something to interest your passengers.

Laughingly he complied, and a merry evening was the sequel to an afternoon of fright and worry.

For five days fortune seemed to be with the Colon. The wind came from the southwest, and with every bit of canvas set she sailed off at an average of 100 miles a day. Sunday morning the wind was quite heavy and the Colon was rolling with a sea just off the quarter. But all the sails were drawing well and the officers assured the passengers that the little gale was helping them along. At 10 o'clock the stars and stripes were spread over the deck in the dining saloon, a large Bible was opened and an Episcopal clergyman began the service. The beautiful words were repeated and then the divine came to that solemn prayer, "For those at sea." Just as it was being read Curtis noticed a quarter-master beckon to Captain Griffin. The young man, who was seated near the companion-way, also arose and went out.

First officer wishes you on the bridge, sir, said the sailor. The commander hastened there, then went to his room, where Curtis followed him.

As I feared it's coming. The glass is falling rapidly. We will catch it soon. I wish you would go down below and as soon as the services are over tell the people not to be alarmed if they hear noises on deck, for the wind is freshening and we may have to take in sail.

Curtis did so and in ten minutes returned. Miss Campbell clad in a waterproof, accompanied him upon the bridge. Captain, she said, we are going to have a storm and I want to stay up here. See I am not a bit afraid. I won't be in your way, and I don't want to be cooped up in that close room. The captain hesitated. But your aunt—Oh, auntie is lying in a stupor. She hardly knows what is going on. Well you can stay. Curtis watch out for her. Then: Around with those yards haul in the starboard sheets; hurry men. These words were shouted, for the wind from the south had suddenly ceased, the canvas was flapping to and fro and in the northwest a low bank of cloud was moving toward them with inaudible rapidity. No not cloud; it was water—water caught up from wavetops by the rushing wind.

Let go everything! Clew up! yelled the captain. By this time the crew of twenty men was re-enforced by officers, firemen, engineers and a few passengers. Curtis left the bridge and helped. In a few moments all the canvas save the first to gallantail was fastened as to be protected for the time being. As Curtis came on the bridge again a blinding rush of spray swept over the steamer. He caught the little woman, who seemed to beud with the wind's fury, and helped her resist its power. Over, over to the starboard rested the "Colon" until the water was level with the snappers, and even the heavy steamer under the strain of the one sail scudded along at a right angle. The forecast bent like a flagstaff; then there was a report like the discharge of a cannon and the ship righted a little. That one sail had been blown from the boltropes.

Come, you had better go below, this is no place for you, said Curtis, and she allowed him to help her along the lee side to the companionway. In spite of their cloaks, both were drenched, for the air was full of salt water and the decks were covered with foam.

In the saloon there was a deathlike silence save for a sob heard now and then. The passengers were huddled together, waiting. There is nothing more dreadful than this inactivity, this waiting during a storm at sea. All the afternoon the gale kept up, and soon the steamer began to pitch and toss as the sea rose. Waves swept over the port side, and the water dashing against the deckhouse oozed down the companionway. About three o'clock Captain Griffin came below a few minutes for a cup of coffee. He whispered to Curtis, We are all right if the canvas holds.

Miss Campbell noticed this, and when he has gone asked him what had been said. He told her. She was showing great bravery, this girl barely out of her teens. And if the sails give way. Oh, I know. I have read and heard people talk about the trough of the sea.

But she did not seem afraid, and with Curtis's assistance did her best to reassure others, laughing at the efforts of the stewardess to pass around a few odibles at the dinner hour, for it was impossible to set the tables. The first part of the night was like the day. Wildly the wind whistled through the rigging and the wired screech was blended with the creaking of the woodwork and the splash of water, then interrupted by the dull, heavy sound of a blow as a wave struck the steamer, bringing her for an instant almost to a standstill. One by one the passengers fell into slumber, some lying on the floor, some on the sofas. A few crouched in corners. At midnight there was another sharp report. Curtis knew what it meant and, glancing at his companion, saw that she did also. No one else seemed to pay any attention to this one among so many hideous sounds. Come, let's go to the head of the stairs, said Curtis.

She went with him. A deckhouse sheltered the companionway. It was strong and well protected. Through the windows in front they could see the deck and the heaving snow-capped sea. The moonlight had broken through the scurrying clouds and revealed the truth—the main-sail had gone. Men, clinging to lifelines, often knee-deep in water, almost hauled themselves along the deck toward the forecast. Captain Griffin on the bridge, trumpet in hand, was issuing orders, but his words could not be heard where they stood. As the Colon pitched, he was at one moment below, and next above them. The spray glistened in the moonlight as it blew from the oil suit, and he looked like a specter.

They are trying to set the foresail, said Curtis. Slowly the canvas unrolled, was caught in the wind and bulged out like a balloon. The ropes tightened and stretched. Inch by inch they were hauled in, and none too soon for the steamer's head was falling into that grave, the trough of the sea. But added by this new force the Colon was tossed so far he had once more.

Will it hold, Raymond? I don't know. Nobody knows. If it does not there is nothing else. We are near death and it may come at any minute. Minnie, Minnie Fay, I want to tell you that I love you dear heart. And if this means life or death my love is the same. In answer she put her hand in his and nestled close to him.

For an hour they stood watching the spray-dashed window, watching the ropes that held the sail, the ropes the straining of which meant death. The sail tugged at its restraint and at times seemed ready to burst its bonds, but it held. At 2 o'clock the moon that had been shining occasionally through the angry mass of vapor cast a soft light over all and the clouds seemed to melt away.

In half an hour the captain came into the deckhouse, smiled as he saw the two so near together and said, The worst is over. Five days later the Colon, in tow of a tug, passed up the Narrows. It was a beautiful morning, and the grass on Staten Island never looked greener. Raymond and his betrothed stood together when they passed Fort Hamilton. Then it will be as soon as you hear from your father? said he. Yes.

Minnie dear, I have a confession to make, he said a minute later. I stole something of yours the day we sailed, I picked it up off deck. See! and he drew the elastic affair from his inside coat pocket.

She looked perplexed for a minute; then her face grew crimson and bursting into a hearty laugh she exclaimed: Why Raymond, that's auntie's garter. I should think you would have known better.

WANTED--A WIFE

Beautiful and with a Clear, Healthy Complexion

Of course every man wants his wife to be beautiful; but how can she be beautiful if her face and hands are disfigured by rough skin, freckles, or eruptions? Nothing will throw such a damper on love as a blemished face.

By the use of "GEM CURATIVE SOAP," an article which combines the best known remedies for the cure of all cutaneous diseases, a refined healthy complexion is assured.

When GEM CURATIVE SOAP is used according to directions the effects are marvellous and gratifying. Time has proven this to be true, as thousands of the most flattering testimonials are on file from customers in England, Scotland, France and Germany, in which countries the Soap is a staple toilet article.

For Thirty Days Only

Write this sentence on a piece of paper

And send to with twenty cents for a sample cake of Gem Curative Soap. To the first lady from whom a slip is received will be given a handsome Gem Soap Mantle, valued at $300.00, or its equivalent in cash less 20 per cent. To the first Gentleman from whom is received a similar slip will be given an 18-Karat Gold Watch set with one karat diamonds, Appleton & Tracy's movement, valued at $250.00. In addition to these, we have prepared five thousand sample cakes numbered 1 to 5000. Every number ending with naught (0) will receive a prize valued at not less than $10.00. Sample cases postpaid. All goods for the United States free of duty.
