The humiliating insult.

The openly expressed attitude of those who favor a policy of contributions in naval matters is one of the most humiliating to Canadians. They declare that Canadians cannot now build warships, and as such as a question they cannot learn. They question Canadian courage in battle, and contend that Canadians have not sufficient national spirit to make the necessary contribution to the Empire's defense. Not only are Canadian skill, intelligence, courage, enterprise and patriotism questioned, but Canadian honesty is implied also, for it is constantly being asserted that any Canadian Navy is impossible owing to the cost and penalties which would certainly permeate the whole management. Such declarations and insinuations are humiliating and unjust, and in the extreme and would seem the pillory or tar and feather if spoken in any other country, and instantly there would be a demand for reparation. That is to say, because a mother resented her boy receiving a mild punishment and was angry, she would accordingly, if proven beyond doubt that Canadians cannot manage a Navy! Nothing seems to be too childish to be used as an argument by these people who think that it is easier and safer to pay in current cash than to stand in the front themselves.

This grudging, cowardly and unparliamentary state of mind and method of argument seem to have justly caused Mr. Arthur Hawkes, one of Mr. Borden's most active supporters two years ago, as well as Mr. Cooper, the editor of the "Canadian Courier" and a life-long active conservative, in a speech delivered in an Ontario town a week ago, Mr. Hawkes referred to the matter in burning words. I cannot tell you what I feel when I read and hear contemptuous remarks by men and newspapers to the position of Canada, Mr. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, and a life-long active conservative, in a speech delivered in an Ontario town a week ago, Mr. Hawkes referred to the matter in burning words.

There has been a London fish hawk who could trace his family 300 years back and lived 21 children. 71 grand-children and 26 great-grandchildren. None of the children married out of the London district in which they lived except a soldier son, who emigrated.

Flocks of blackbirds fly from the thousands of feeding on the reeds along the shores of the Delaware river at Beverly, N. J., but gunners fear they may be thinking they may be protected from the potting of any migratory fowl birds.

When the water mains of the Bronx Zoo in New York City became clogged, the animals protested so strongly against not having their daily baths that the keepers had to spend most of each day carrying buckets of water more than half a mile. The animals were the only animals which did not make trouble, and apparently did not mind their punishment.

Henry W. Judd, a wealthy retired businessman and director in several Cleveland, Ohio, corporations, was sealed to death in his bathtub Sunday. His body was found several hours later by his wife on her return from church. His bath had been prepared by a servant, and it is supposed that he had fallen into the tub while unable, because of the enfeebled condition, to climb out.

What is the question that is to be taken up at Washington by the Secretary of Agriculture on November 8, 1932? The question is the government's policy on the export of wheat to the United States.

John Lamb, aged 51, was asphyxiated at his home, Fall River, Mass., early Sunday morning. He retired at 10 o'clock Sunday night and at five in the morning his wife was awakened by the odor of gas. She ran into her husband's room and found him dead, with gas escaping from an open gas valve. When retired, he had thrown his necktie over the jet and at the same time it is believed he had turned on the gas cook.
