Remarkable Electric Storm on Lake Erie.

On Saturday night, those who happened to be at Port Stanley witnessed one of the grandest electrical storms ever seen. It started about 7 p.m., and continued far through the night. There was little rain, but considerable wind, causing the waves to break in violence on the beach. As the battle of the elements waged chiefly to the southward, over the lake, there was an unobstructed view from the shore. The blackness of darkness stretched across the sky, forming a contrasting background for the electrical display. From point to point "leaped the live thunder." Sheet lightning flashed in white and rose colors, and shades of violet. The "forked lightning" was grand in the extreme. It played horizontally and perpendicularly. It made straight bars and zig-zags of white heat. One effect was of a bar which split off into three divisions, as in the case of some rockets. Another conformation was that of many simultaneous dividing lines, as of a map in outline. Another effect was that of a nearly perfect wheel. All this to the accompaniment of a continuous undertone of thunder, augmented now and then by a reverberating crash. A spectacle more sublime one has seldom seen the good fortune to witness.

As if the imagination had not been sufficiently appealed to, the night brought another sensation. At about half-past ten a flash of blinding white was seen to run its irregular course, and immediately after the ghostly outlines of a schooner in flames presented themselves to the spectators. As the ship was a good many miles out, and its features could be seen only through banks of cloud, the effect was of the most ghostly character, as if it had been some phantom ship like the "Flying Dutchman" of the old legend. In about an hour the flames seemed to grow dim, and the outlines of the vessel were presently lost to sight. An attempt was made to get out the lifeboat, but it was found impossible to face the sea. No trace of the missing vessel has yet been found, and it is impossible to tell her name, her destination, or the fate of those on board.

The name of Daniel Spry, postoffice inspector of the London division which includes Windsor, is mentioned in connection with the position of Deputy Postmaster-General under William Mulock. Mr. Spry is a Liberal in politics, and a prominent Mason—Detroit News.

We do not know what truth there is in this report, but it may have some basis. Mr. Spry is one of the best, as he is one of the most experienced, postal officials in the service of the country. It is now 40 years since he began his career as a postoffice clerk in the Toronto office, and he has served the country faithfully and well ever since. It is not generally known that one of the last acts of the defeated Tupper Government was to attempt the superannuation of Deputy Postmaster-General White. The papers were prepared and submitted to the Governor-General, but he very properly refused to ratify them, or to confirm the appointment of a new incumbent—not Mr. Spry—for the office.

Time All Speakers.

The way in which Dr. George C. Davis (who has no superior as a chairman) put through a dozen or twenty three-minute speeches at the recent Irish Benevolent Society's picnic, was refreshing. We think that where there are several speakers, all addresses should be strictly timed by watch and bell. Experience teaches that when the average speaker begins by saying he is unprepared, and will therefore be brief, that he will be brolx and tedious. Now, lying must be damaging to our orators' immortal souls, and a strict chairman can avert such damage by keeping him in accord with his promise to the audience. Besides, some speakers, if they get an early chance, are selfish enough to consume time that belongs to other speakers, if all are to have a fair show, and that adds theft to lying. Time all speakers!

Britain's fleet is being steadily increased. Six years ago 71,000 men were required for British warships. Now 93,160 are needed—an increase of 22,160 in six years. And experts like Lord Charles Dersford say the warships are yet undermanned. It is a costly business.

Great Rebuff for Salisbury's Government
--Commotion Caused by the Peers--Li's Significant Sentences.

Salisbury's Possible Successor—Strike of Professional Cricketers—Rhodes' Downfall—Wolseley's Words Create a Rumpus—Praise for Canadians.

London, Aug. 9.—The conflict in the House of Lords over the Irish Land Bill has been the political sensation of the past week. The newspapers are full of the subject, and there is much speculation as to the outcome. It is a long time since a government has received such a slap in the face from the peers, and the Ministerialists have taken a very narrow view of the situation. However, the situation has somewhat improved as a result of the Cabinet Council, which considered the critical state of affairs and decided to practically restore the measure to its original condition on its return to the House of Commons, and it is now hoped that the landlord people have been persuaded to refrain from further contest. It is now hoped that a compromise will be arranged which will yet permit of proroguing Parliament on Saturday next.

The peers seem somewhat amazed at the position in which they find themselves, and one of them, who voted against the Government, said to a representative of the Associated Press: "I did not imagine that so much chaos would follow the Government's defeat, or that so much stress would be laid upon the 'Unionist' alliance, requiring the peers to sink their individual opinions in a matter touching their pockets for the sake of 'Unionist' prestige, and it may therefore happen that when the bill returns to the Commons the peer landlords will find that they cannot give way in their private interests in favor of the greater party needs."

SALISBURY'S COURSE EVOKES CRITICISM.

The resignations of several members of the Ministry which it was predicted would be tendered because of the action of the House of Lords on the Irish Land Bill, are unlikely to occur, but the position of the Government has been seriously weakened. While landlords have done nothing better calculated to explode the contention that the Upper House is governed largely by patriotic motives than checking the House of Commons only in support of the deliberate judgment of the people, the Liberal view of the matter, that a majority of the peers are swayed by purely selfish motives, has received an enormous impulse.

SALISBURY'S POSSIBLE SUCCESSOR.

In reference to the debates in the House of Lords on the Irish Land Bill, there is the curious fact that the Marquis of Salisbury completely resigned his functions as leader of the House to the Secretary of State for War, the Marquis of Gathorne, and this, says the St. James's Gazette, "tends to force to the impression that Lord Lansdowne is training for the leadership of the House of Lords, if not for the Premiership."

The fact that Lord Salisbury took no part in the debate has caused a great deal of comment in various quarters. The Prime Minister did not seem to be at all affected by the untidily displayed by his followers, but, on the contrary, assumed an air of unusual gaiety, joking on the subject with the Lord High Chancellor.

FRICTION.

Friction regarding the inquiry into the affairs of the British South Africa Company has arisen by the appointment of Mr. Edward Drake, member of Parliament for the south division of Longford, to membership of the commission, as he is unsatisfactory to the Healyites who want their own nominee.

LI'S SIGNIFICANT SUGGESTION.

A phrase which Li Hung used in his speech at the banquet tendered him at the Hotel Metropole Saturday night, is much commented upon. He is looked upon as having pleaded for the independence of England in case the independence of China is threatened from within or without, when he said: "Our interests run parallel. We would like to be able to reckon upon the support of the commercial powers should our independence ever be threatened from any quarter." This is interpreted here as referring to Russia and to the French from the direction of Tonquin, and the Daily Chronicle says: "His words have a political significance which cannot be missed. That Li Hung Chang, after enjoying the unstinted and even overdone hospitality of these nations should appeal to Great Britain in a thinly veiled phrase for help against them if necessary, is the most striking fact of his tour."

STRIKE OF PROFESSIONAL CRICKETERS.

The conflict in the House of Lords almost sinks into insignificance by the side of the professional cricketers. For Monday's rubber match between the English and Australian players, Lordman, Gurn and Hayward demanded $100 instead of the usual $50, and the Surrey Cricket Club, as organizers of the match, engaged other professionals to replace the strikers. Pears are expressed that the English team will be defeated if its best professionals do not play. The professionals claim that the Surrey Club will probably make $100 out of the match, and that the players deserve a higher share of the profits. They also point out that many amateurs receive more money in expenses than the professionals receive in wages, and it is claimed that Dr. Grace is receiving expenses more than the wages of all the professionals put together. Moreover, it is added, the old-time professionals received $100, which sum was only reduced during recent years.

RHODES' DOWNFALL.

Cecil Rhodes, whose connection with the British South African Company and his alleged complicity in the Transvaal raid of Dr. Jameson, are well known, will undoubtedly shortly be brought to book for the part he took in bringing about an invasion of a friendly state. A comparatively short time ago Mr. Rhodes was made a member of her Majesty's Privy Council, but his name will now be stricken from the list, and he will be summoned to give evidence before the Parliamentary Select Committee of inquiry into the charges. It is known that Mr. Chamberlain desired to see him in the dock, and has dismissed the question of indictment with Arthur J. Balfour and the Attorney-General. There are as ample reasons for indicting Rhodes as for the conviction of Jameson, but a trial and its peculiarities would have involved a delay of six months in the proceedings of the Committee of Inquiry, so Rhodes has meantime escaped the ordeal he challenged. When he reappears in England, it will be with ruined prestige, and as a comparatively poor man.

WOLSELEY CREATES A RUMPU.

There is no end to the rumpus caused by Lord Wolseley's remark a few days ago before the investigating committee that he would not like to lead Great Britain's Indian troops against any European soldiers. The storm of indignation protest that is already coming from India has seriously embarrassed the commander-in-chief, who deeply repents his indiscretion. The matter is made worse rather than better by an explanation made on his behalf, in which he says that for the purposes for which it is designed the Queen's Indian army could not be better fitted.

GOOD WORDS FOR THE CANADIANS.

In his address in presenting the prizes at Shoeburyness, Lord Wolseley said he had passed many happy years in Canada, felt wrapped up in its destinies, and always entertained the greatest affection and respect for its people. "I am sure," Lord Wolseley continued, "that the detachment returns with great pride to our brothers on the other side of the Atlantic, carrying with them the four prizes they have won. They will be able to tell their friends and comrades that during their stay in camp here they were not only received with open arms by all ranks, but that they were a sincere feeling of pleasure upon the part of every artilleryman connected with the camp, and that they have won the great and highly-sought Queen's prize." Lord Wolseley's references to Canada, of course, are cheered. Lord Strathbrooke assured Col. Cole that in addition to the Queen's prize the Canadians would take home the sincere congratulations of all the teams which had competed with them, and of all the volunteers of Great Britain. Col. Cole, Miles, of the Canadian team, were again hoisted in chairs upon the shoulders of the British artillerymen Saturday evening and were carried around the camp, bearing the cups won by the Canadians, and were heartily cheered on all sides.

THE CRETAN CRISIS.

Intense interest is being manifested in Europe over the developments of the insurrection in Crete, where general fighting is expected at any moment. After denouncing the Marquis of Salisbury for breaking away from the European concert by refusing to join in a blockade of the Turkish coast, opinion seems to be changing, and now even the French press admits that the British Premier stopped Europe from committing a gross mistake and stifling the legitimate struggle for Cretan liberty. In England the whole country sided with the Marquis of Salisbury, and would willingly see Crete detached from the Turkish empire.

TALK OF TURKEY'S DISMEMBERMENT.

Telegrams received here declare that Heratun, which is filled with Mohammedan refugees, only needs a spark in order to set a general massacre going, although the presence of the British and French warships in the harbor is apparently having a salutary effect. Turkey is certainly in a very bad way just now, for, in addition to the insurrection in Crete, there is a sort of revolution, aided by the Greeks and Bulgarians, proceeding in Macedonia, where the Turkish troops have been repeatedly repulsed, and the Druses uprising is causing the attention of the Turkish Government in another direction. Under the circumstances, it is not as readily believed that the dismemberment of the Turkish empire is again contemplated, and that Great Britain may now be willing to see this take place, even if it is only in order to set her continental enemies fighting over the spoils.

This morning ex-Ald. Thomas Browne and Mr. Thomas Browne, secretary of the Western Fair, left for Hamilton to attend the funeral of the late A. H. Wingfield, an officer in her Majesty's customs, and brother of Mrs. Thomas Browne. Mr. Wingfield had been sick for about a week, and was given up by his medical adviser last week. He was born in Glasgow 64 years ago, and while a young man came to this country, entering the G. W. R. service. He was employed here for some time, but went to Hamilton in 1859. In 1877 the Mackenzie Government appointed him to a responsible position on the customs staff, and he was a faithful officer till the time of his death. Mr. Wingfield was a kindly-hearted, genial man. He was a poet of no small merit, and his published pieces embraced many topics. "Ting the Bell Softly, There's Grape on the Door," was a touching production inspired by the death of a friend's child, and his poems in the Scottish dialect were always read with interest. He leaves a widow and several grown-up children.

Ottawa, Aug. 10.—The inveterate reof Dr. Rose and Dr. McCormick, who published details of their recovery were the first attacks on the citadel of their skepticism and now it appears as if the remarkable recovery of Dr. G.

so auspiciously begun. They published

Heat and Storm.

Hottest Day of the Year Followed by a Great Downpour.

Considerable Damage Done in the City by Lightning and Wind.

Grand Electric Display in the Heavens—The Mercury Ranged From 92° to 103°.

Yesterday was a scorcher—the hottest day of the year. The official thermometer registered 92 1-2 in the shade, but at many places this was exceeded by from 4 to 12 degrees. The effect of the heat was very noticeable in the churches, which did not contain the usual number of worshippers.
The heat of Saturday was oppressive, but yesterday was a killer. On Saturday the heat was the ground-work of one of the finest electrical displays in the heavens seen in this vicinity for many years. All around the city the lightning flashed, and the thunder rolled in terrible grandeur.
To the west, as the storm abated, the sky gave evidence of the lightning's awful work. People who came from the west on the late train Saturday night say that every few miles there was a fierce fire burning. It was either a house, barn or stacks of grain.
After this storm had passed over the air became somewhat cooler, but with the rising sun of yesterday morning the atmosphere grew warmer and warmer. The streets were practically deserted. Only at church time did people make their appearance, and then not in such large numbers as usual. The scene in the churches was one of continual fluttering of fans. The small boys were restless, and the general rustle, together with the heat, told even upon the ministers. The sermons for the most part were short and the hymns cut in half. It was too hot for singing.

In the afternoon Victoria Park was visited by a few, who spread themselves out on the grass under the trees and hardly moved. In the stuffy little houses every door was open, and down was open, while the occupants sought in vain for a cool spot. The rich and the poor were served alike.
At the G. T. R. station, which is justly described as the hottest place in the city, the mercury recorded up to 104. The few who crossed the platform from Clarence to Richmond were glad when the journey was completed, for the heat was stifling, the express passengers felt the heat on their journey through the country, but not so much as the line were compared to the depot. Many times did passengers thrust their heads out of the car windows and ask the constable or anybody in official uniform "When are we going to get out of this?" while their faces were a study of mingled disgust and hope.

With the sinking sun the clouds again gathered, the lightning flashed vividly and thunder-claps announced the coming of another storm. About 9:30 the rain began to fall, and the electric display in the heavens became awe-inspiring, leaving its traces in several places in and around the city.

An ominous sound was heard as the burning fluid passed into the house of Mr. Hargreaves, 222 Clarence street, and ripped the walls apart, shattering the place badly. It turned things upside down, and frightened the family nearly out of their wits.
In the adjoining house a mirror and some pictures were thrown from the wall by the crash. The fire brigade was called out, but their services were not needed.

Mr. James Elson's house on Oxford street, London West, in consequence of the storm, is without a chimney. It was struck and almost totally destroyed.

On Richmond street, in front of the postoffice, the pavement was covered with splinters, while a piece of the postoffice flag staff hung on the telephone wire. The pole was struck about 10 o'clock and badly shattered.

The telephone service was more or less crippled. This morning, as the lines were tested, many of them were found to be out of order.

The motor supplying the electric power for the Free Press Technical department was burned out by the lightning.

An electric box opposite the residence of Mr. John Labatt, on Queen avenue, suffered. The iron top was wrenched off, and now lies upon the ground.

After the first storm had subsided a cone-shaped cloud made its appearance in the west, and with it came a gale that played havoc with the trees in all parts of the city. Round the Asylum several were broken off, near the root and numerous branches torn off. The lightning, out the top of a tree in front of the residence of Mr.
John Reardon, on Ontario street. Another one was torn up in front of the residence of Mr. George Robinson, on St. James street, and another one broken in front of Mr. Fred Henry's house.

Lightning played queer pranks last night at the residence of Mr. James Gilles, 887 Lorne avenue. About 10:20 p.m. the electric fluid struck the chimney on the main part of the cottage and sent the bricks flying in all directions. Some of them tore the shutters on the next house and crashed through the window. The fluid went through every room in the house and everywhere burned circular holes about half an inch in diameter in the plaster. The holes are perfectly round and bored as clean as if done with an augur. Mr. and Mrs. Gilles were stunned for a short time by the shock but not injured. On recovering they thought the house was on fire, as the place was filled with fumes as if from something burning, and they hurried in next door. The building room there was curious work. A large mirror was broken in one corner, but otherwise was uninjured except at the corner diagonally opposite where the frame was shattered.

It was 98 in the shade in London West at 12:45 yesterday.
The grand stand in the Tecumseh Park was a mark for the electric fluid. It was struck and caught fire, but Mr. Geo. Irwin, the caretaker, was on hand before much damage was done. He looked on in hearing the report so close, and saw the stand just beginning to burn, and rushing with some water to the spot he soon extinguished the blaze. In his efforts to fight the fire he caught hold of the wire by which the fluid had been conducted, and in pulling it out received a shock that doubled him up.

At the London West police court Detective Ward's telephone was burned out and his boy knocked down on the floor by the force.

Mrs. Thos. Jeffery, who lives across the street from Ward's place is laid up as a result of the flash. Her right arm is badly burned, and at the time the lightning struck the place it was all but paralyzed.

The electric lights about the city were turned out, and in numerous houses, after they had been dispersed with, they continued to burn and sing with every flash. At the City Hall the electric song in the caretaker's apartment rang out, and ran continually while the lightning lasted.
Fruit trees all over the city were badly damaged, many being twisted off at the roots.

The Churches.

Park Avenue Church.

Rev. E. R. Hunt, of Ingersoll, at St.

Mr. G. R. Faskin, B.A., formerly of the Collegiate Institute staff, was greeted a week ago Sunday and yesterday by large congregations at the First Presbyterian Church, the pulpit of which he will occupy till the pastor's return from Europe. Mr. Faskin has many warm personal friends in London, who are pleased to welcome him again, and to note his zeal and ability in the calling to which he has devoted himself. His sermon last night was a valuable application of the great Biblical truth to modern society, presented with an eloquence and broad-mindedness that greatly impressed his hearers. He dwelt upon the holiness of the religious professions of the Israelites, and compared that people to modern society. We were given to formalities, conforming with the letter of the law, that we might save our consciences. Religion was not a dead law. We need not be mere formalists, under the miserable cloak of ritualism, but set our hearts beside the great heart of God.
He spoke of the insidiousness of the world's spirit. There were many held up in the sight of the world, the right hand pure and spotless, while the left hand covered some evil deed. They should grasp God with both hands.
The spirit of criticism in the world was hard to meet. The consciousness of the presence of God prevented men from living a life of immortality.
Other books than the Bible taught only these two factors, but here they also learned the great truth, "God is love." Conscience was not a mere moral spirit in man, but was the voice of the living God.

ST. JAMES' PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. E. R. Hunt, of Ingersoll, occupied the pulpit of St. James' Presbyterian Church at both services yesterday. In the morning the reverend gentleman took for his text: "What is in thy hand?" And he said, a rod. "Exodus 17, 2. The scene, the speaker said, was laid in the desert, where Moses received the message from God himself, which was to be the work of his life. Moses doubted his own ability to perform the task of leading and thwart the purpose of the Egyptian monarch, Pharaoh. God answered the question of doubt and subdued the fear of Moses with the words, "Certainly I will be with thee. God made the rod a serpent, and encouraged Moses to believe. The preacher dwelt upon the fact that every day of our life-work, whatever it was, we are divinely commissioned. God on the one hand had said, "I will do these things," and on the other, "Thou shalt do it." Moses became a rationalist, just as people do in these days. He had the power of God which this day taught him, and he said, "God has touched the rod and therefore it will be an almighty power. Life is commissioned with divine power. The most common things in the world are blessed with a heavenly blessing. The communication with God, said the preacher, meant success in everything, and if Moses or the Christian of today had that communion there would be no feeling of assurance that the work would be performed. "What is in thy hand?" The pastor held in his hand a parchment and Board of Health could kindly spare a few minutes to enlighten the citizens on the points I have suggested, would suggest the holding of a public meeting at which our representatives on these boards could be present to tell us what they have done towards securing us from the evil results which may follow their contemplated actions. Let them tell us the real reasons for their actions, and let us speak about results and actions and matters. Let us have light and knowledge on all these matters.

THE EXPLANATION.

The mere laying of a pipe at Spring-bank has caused the publication of some ridiculous stories and the circulation of silly rumors about the supposed mixture of the Thames River with the crystal product of the springs there. It has been actually stated by some people that the commissioners have ordered the river water to be pumped into the city mains, and that this extra supply accounts for the depth of the water in the reservoir. Old soaks have been worried that they may have to drink whisky and cognac, and innocent people have shuddered at the thought of imbibing the odiferous fluid of the Thames.

There is no necessity for any such fuss. The commissioners are not suggesting that the water be pumped into the city mains, and that this extra supply accounts for the depth of the water in the reservoir. Old

The whole story originated because a new pipe was laid the other day between the river and the pump-house to replace one which was torn up.
The fact of the matter is that for over seventeen years a pipe has lain in the same place, and for over seventeen years the river water could be turned into the city mains even more easily than today. When the waterworks was established, a gate valve, 14 1-2 inches square and 122 square inches in sectional area, was put down there so as to clean the pump well, which was done about once a month. The valve stem was on the floor of the pump house, and at very short notice the Thames water could be pumped down town. The old valve did duty for 17 years, and it became so much the worse for wear it was taken out last year and a 6-inch one put in its place, which was used for the purpose of cleaning the pump well. The thought that it would ever be used for carrying river water to the reservoir had never entered anyone's head. Then the fire insurance inspector demanded, that some

No Sewage Tainted Water Can Reach

A Correspondent's Views Upon the Sewage Question.

The Advertiser has received the following, among other communications, on the water and sewerage questions, and for the purpose of giving the public the needed information to form a judgment on the subject, has made the investigations at the waterworks chronicled below. There should be no hysterical treatment of so important a subject, or unnecessary sensational declarations on the subject. The letter is as follows:

"For the reasons following I desire to join in the protests of those citizens who are condemning the extraordinary action of the water commissioners in rendering it possible to pump the river water in the city mains:

1. The river water is admittedly unfit for drinking or other household purposes.

2. Its use is admittedly certain to cause disease.

3. Death is likely to ensue from its use. The water commissioners and their servants will in this case undoubtedly be guilty of murder. This sounds harsh, but it is true. Suppose a case of diphtheria, the patient dies.
The doctors agree that the cause of the disease was impure water. The patient was entitled to expect and receive pure water, while the water commissioners supplied instead literal poison. Who, then, caused the death of the only child, or the young man, the widow's only son, or the young wife, or the husband or father as the case may be? Who and what killed them? Let the water commissioners assume a suitable reply.

4. Every water consumer in the city would have a right of action because he was supplied with water which was unfit for use.

5. Much of the attractiveness of our city has been due to our pure water.
Once let it be known that we may have our mains polluted with sewage, and the reputation we have attained will be at once swept away.

6. It will take a very short time to fill our pipes and tanks with sewage if the water is turned into the city mains, while no lapse of time will entirely cleanse them.

7. If underwriters govern our lives and if commissioners have to degrade themselves at their bidding, let a second system of mains for fire purposes be put in. The cost would be nothing more than the cost of the danger of a contaminated water supply.

"It is said this poisonous water would only be used in case of necessity. What guaranty have we of that? If the inspector of the underwriters can make the commissioners put in the valve he can make them open it. Besides, what is at stake, the money and careers of officials who may, for any purpose, or without purpose, open the valve.

"Fellow-citizens, death is in the river water. Let us keep it out of our homes, no matter what supine officials and interested corporations may allow or insist upon. Prevention is better than cure. And funerals and doctors' bills are more expensive than a new main. All that a man hath will he give for his life.

"When this trouble began on the Blue Water, I dispatched a trusty messenger to Fort Keogh for aid. If he has gone through, it should be here tomorrow, when we can capture or destroy Bouton's people."

"I fear that the messenger you sent to Fort Keogh has fallen," said Henry Kyle, adding with a sigh, "but come what may, I shall remain here and guard this point."

"Very well. This point being guarded, duty calls me to another. We shall meet when the sun is up."

As silently as he had come the Prophet disappeared, and Henry Kyle and Kuskat took their watch on the summit of one of the loftiest crags that commanded the campfires of the outlaws. Though both should have been weary, they did not sleep, but sat side by side talking and whispering until daylight began to flush the east. Seating himself behind a rock, Henry Kyle opened his ammunition pouch to be ready for the work of destruction he had marked out. Great was his horror to find that the cartridges prepared for his repeating rifle were expended or lost. Only one was left, which, with two in the chamber of his gun, constituted all the ammunition he had depended on.

"But you have your pistols," said Kuskat. "They are loaded."

"True, but to make them effective I must get nearer. Will you follow me? Mark you, Kuskat, I would rather that you remain back."

"I will follow you even to the tents of death and through them," she replied, with her red hands on his shoulders.

It seemed impossible, looking up from the valley, to enter by any other than the route already mentioned, but Henry Kyle would at last waste time in going to the canyon, the nearest regular avenue. While he and Kuskat were climbing down the giddy cliffs, with as much security as mountain sheep, a scene of stirring activity was being enacted in the valley.

The sun was not yet up when Bouton's men, more than a dozen, were seen than even the night before, demanding that Captain Brandon should be led out and shot. Bouton was more than willing to oblige them. He went over to where the captain was sitting on the ground, and with the expression of a demon in his yellow eyes, he said:

"I owe you one, Captain Brandon. The time has come when I can pay you back with interest."

Bouton motioned to one of the guards, who unbent the captain's feet and bade him rise.

The captain obeyed without assistance, and forthwith from the place where the men were drawn up with their rifles to the entrance of the cave and thence to the cliffs and sky, but in no place did his eye rest on anything that promised hope.

"Are you ready?" asked Bouton. The captain made no reply, but, drawing himself up, he took position between the two armed men who had been guarding him.

"Move on," commanded Bouton. They led the captain to the edge of the cliff. As he went on he could hear behind him the heart-broken cries of Alice and Nora, and once he turned his eyes to look back at them.

"Do you want to be blindfolded?" asked Fairplay, who seemed to be in command of the riflemen.

"No," replied the captain, "I have never feared to look death in the face."

"My men," said Bouton, advancing with his rifle to the front, "I demand the first shot."

He raised his weapon, but at that instant a shot rang out from the cliffs and Bouton tottered and fell.

CHAPTER XXIX.

As Bouton fell the rifle he was about to aim at Captain Brandon dropped from his hand, and he wheeled about as if on a pivot and so faced his astonished men. All heard the shot, but they did not know what to make of it. There was no foe in sight, and they were on the point of concluding that it was an accidental shot from one of their own rifles, when they heard yells coming down from the cliffs, and looking up they saw Black Eagle motioning wildly at something still lower down.

The astounded outlaws forgot for the moment the man they were about to execute and scented to get a better view of the source of danger.

While they were watching Black Eagle and his Indians Henry Kyle, whose unerring rifle had stretched Bouton on the earth, never to rise again, dropped into the valley, with Kuskat beside him, and before the outlaws could realize what had happened they threw themselves before the captain, and, both having pistols, opened fire.

Fairplay was the first to recover his presence of mind, and shouting to his companions to follow him, he fired at the young hero and the Indian girl. In a few seconds a volley was poured at the devoted pair, and they fell across the captain, completely covering him. That was Fairplay's last order. Before the men could reach the wall of the valley directly in their front seemed to open, and from it a band of men swarmed out with the Prophet at their head, and Howard Blanchard and Louis Kyle close behind. The Prophet shouted:

"For God and Justice! Charge!"

A cheer was the answer, and the invaders and herders threw themselves with irresistible force on the outlaws. Ugly demoralized, though they outnumbered their assailants four to one, they fled precipitously through the canyon by which they had entered the valley.

Here Fort Bob succeeded in halting them, when suddenly a cry went up from the outlaws:

"Troops, Bob, troops! Let us retreat or we shall be lost!"

A bugle rang out clear and loud above the roar of the conflict. Neither friend nor foe was long in doubt. Out from the black rift the blue clad soldiers, including the services of an excellent staff of officers who are especially familiar with the St. Lawrence navigation, it must be recognized that the Allan Line would undertake this enterprise with advantages which could be possessed by no stranger to the trade.

Will it pay us to grant the subsidy? In the first place it is argued that a new line will bring Canada a great deal nearer to Great Britain. By the existing lines eight days is considered to be a good passage from Quebec to Liverpool. The new line, however, will shorten this distance to only 133 hours' steaming, giving a saving of 59 hours, or over 30 per cent. In winter the voyage from Liverpool to Halifax would be completed in 120 hours at this speed. Such high speed, in conjunction with the advantage of the shorter route, will enable the Canadian steamers to easily surpass the services of any of any New York steamers. Liverpool to New York at twenty knots represents 150 hours, allowing nothing for the delay which always takes place at Queenstown. The superiority of the Canadian route will thus amount to at least a whole day in summer and more than a day and a half in winter from port to port. In respect of accommodation for all classes of passengers the new steamers are fully equal to those of the New York lines, a very large passenger traffic will be attracted to the Canadian route. Not only Canadian passengers, but those going to and from Chicago and the Western States, as well as travelers to and from China, Japan and Australia, will find this route the fastest and most attractive.

"Now, at this point it will be asked, and the question is a perfectly fair one. Will the mass of the people who pay the taxes be benefited in pocket by the large expenditure which they will be called upon to make? To this it is answered that attention will be drawn to the fact that the Canadian route offers to all classes of tourists and sportsmen will be more fully appreciated than hitherto, and European travelers in search of rest and sport will find in Canada fresh and inexhaustible opportunities far superior to those of Switzerland or Norway. It is argued that the beneficial influence of such a stream of traffic will be felt by every branch of Canadian trade, and the money thus spent in the country will repay Canada for her expenditure in subsidies. It is argued also that immigrants, as well as cabin passengers, will be attracted in largely increased numbers, that a long ocean passage is a serious deterrent to emigration, and that the first line will go far to remove this obstacle.

While there is some force in these arguments we confess that we do not regard them as sufficient to warrant so large an expenditure of money unless ample provision be made for the carriage of freight. We think there is a great deal in the contention of the Patrons that improved freight facilities are of more importance than the improved service for passengers and mails. On this point the assurance is given that the fast steamers would be fitted with large refrigerators, which will enable them to carry fresh meat and eggs, fruit, cheese and dressed meat, and possibly for other perishable articles, such as fresh salmon and other food to send the goods to the British market in the best possible condition. The Allan also proposed to establish in conjunction with the fast service a line of cargo steamers of great size and high power for the further development of their cargo and cattle-carrying trade. The cargo steamers will be of 8,000 to 9,000 tons, and will be fitted with the best modern appliances for stowage, ventilation, as well as with large chilled spaces for meat shipments and dairy products. We are told that such vessels, with their large refrigerators, will supply the best accommodation for all kinds of freight, and will also be available for bringing to Canada large numbers of emigrants during the busy season, when the space on the cargo steamers may be overcrowded. These provisions for the carriage of freight ought to be embodied in any agreement that may be made for a fast service, so that there may be no doubt or dispute about them. They are fully as essential as those for the passenger service.

As to the amount of the subsidy, the cost of the mail steamers is estimated at $7,000,000, and the cost of maintenance at $3,000,000. It has been suggested to the Government that a service of 18-knot steamers might be substituted for the 20-knot service for which tenders have already been received. Against this it is argued that in comparison with the New York lines an 18-knot service would rank as second class; that it would be called a "slow line"; that no prestige would attach to such a service; that it would attract no attention to the Canadian route, and would almost certainly lead to divert traffic, either passenger or freight, from the New York route; that it would be no advertisement for Canada. Further, it has been pointed out that the proposed contract is to be of ten years' duration, and that if an 18-knot service would be obsolete before it started, it would be far out of date ten years hence, and the cost of the constant improvement of competing lines. And, while at first sight the lower rate of speed would seem to be the more economical, it is pointed out that, by accepting it, we should lose the $375,000, which the British Government is ready to grant for vessels which, in point of speed and otherwise, are suitable for the imperial service. The Canadian Government will doubtless give due weight to these considerations.

"We surrender! We surrender!" shouted the outlaws as they threw down the arms they had just nervously discharged.

They spoke too late to restrain the onset, even had the officer commanding ordered it, which he had not time to do before the blue wave broke, the sabres fell, and half of them arose again in crime. In as brief time as it takes to write it the outlaws were dead or prisoners in the hands of the troops. The few that had attempted flight were halted by the Prophet's rifles.

"Welcome, thrice welcome!" cried the Prophet, as he advanced to Captain Duncan with extended hands. "And I am glad to be here to help you, my friend," said the young officer with that defence of manner that showed his high respect for the man before him. "I think," he added, with a grim smile, "that I came none too soon."

ROOM FOR DIAMOND MATCH.

Important Deal Negotiated With an Austrian Bank.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—A cablegram was received Saturday from Director Geo. T. Smith, of the Diamond Match Company, which bids fair to greatly enhance the stocks of that enterprise. The deal with the Austrian Bank of Austria closed. It is worth more than all decline in match stock. This is the most important contract that President Barber and Director Smith were negotiating in Europe, and it was the hope of making this contract that brought President Barber home from Europe last spring, when he was accompanied by Dr. Furth, of the firm of Bernard & Furth, the largest manufacturers of matches in Austria. Dr. Furth represented the Laender Bank, one of the biggest financial concerns in Vienna, which signified a willingness, if the machines were as represented, to make a contract.

LIFE SAVED.—Mr. James Bryson Cameron writes: "I was confined to my bed with inflammation of the lungs, and was given up by physicians. A neighbor advised me to try Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, stating that his wife had used it for a throat trouble with the best results. Acting on this advice, I procured the medicine and less than half a bottle cured me; I certainly believed it saved my life. It was with reluctance that I consented to a trial, as I was reduced to such a state that I doubted the power of any remedy to do me any good."

The Fast Line.

Getting Over the Atlantic in Quick Time.

Proposed Rapid Freight and Passenger Service.

Interests of the Canadian Taxpayers in the Offers Now Before Parliament.

Toronto Globe.

It would appear that the scheme for the establishment of a line of twenty-knot steamers between Great Britain and Canada has become a question for practical consideration. Tenders were received on the 10th of June in accordance with the advertised conditions, and it is understood that the offer submitted by the Messrs. Allan, of the Allan Line, was the most favorable. The Allan Line has been widely and favorably known in Canadian trade for very many years. With the experience and reputation so gained, and having already the whole of the necessary organization, including the services of an excellent staff of officers who are especially familiar with the St. Lawrence navigation, it must be recognized that the Allan Line would undertake this enterprise with advantages which could be possessed by no stranger to the trade.

Will it pay us to grant the subsidy? In the first place it is argued that a new line will bring Canada a great deal nearer to Great Britain. By the existing lines eight days is considered to be a good passage from Quebec to Liverpool. The new line, however, will shorten this distance to only 133 hours' steaming, giving a saving of 59 hours, or over 30 per cent. In winter the voyage from Liverpool to Halifax would be completed in 120 hours at this speed. Such high speed, in conjunction with the advantage of the shorter route, will enable the Canadian steamers to easily surpass the services of any of any New York steamers. Liverpool to New York at twenty knots represents 150 hours, allowing nothing for the delay which always takes place at Queenstown. The superiority of the Canadian route will thus amount to at least a whole day in summer and more than a day and a half in winter from port to port. In respect of accommodation for all classes of passengers the new steamers are fully equal to those of the New York lines, a very large passenger traffic will be attracted to the Canadian route. Not only Canadian passengers, but those going to and from Chicago and the Western States, as well as travelers to and from China, Japan and Australia, will find this route the fastest and most attractive.

"Now, at this point it will be asked, and the question is a perfectly fair one. Will the mass of the people who pay the taxes be benefited in pocket by the large expenditure which they will be called upon to make? To this it is answered that attention will be drawn to the fact that the Canadian route offers to all classes of tourists and sportsmen will be more fully appreciated than hitherto, and European travelers in search of rest and sport will find in Canada fresh and inexhaustible opportunities far superior to those of Switzerland or Norway. It is argued that the beneficial influence of such a stream of traffic will be felt by every branch of Canadian trade, and the money thus spent in the country will repay Canada for her expenditure in subsidies. It is argued also that immigrants, as well as cabin passengers, will be attracted in largely increased numbers, that a long ocean passage is a serious deterrent to emigration, and that the first line will go far to remove this obstacle.

While there is some force in these arguments we confess that we do not regard them as sufficient to warrant so large an expenditure of money unless ample provision be made for the carriage of freight. We think there is a great deal in the contention of the Patrons that improved freight facilities are of more importance than the improved service for passengers and mails. On this point the assurance is given that the fast steamers would be fitted with large refrigerators, which will enable them to carry fresh meat and eggs, fruit, cheese and dressed meat, and possibly for other perishable articles, such as fresh salmon and other food to send the goods to the British market in the best possible condition. The Allan also proposed to establish in conjunction with the fast service a line of cargo steamers of great size and high power for the further development of their cargo and cattle-carrying trade. The cargo steamers will be of 8,000 to 9,000 tons, and will be fitted with the best modern appliances for stowage, ventilation, as well as with large chilled spaces for meat shipments and dairy products. We are told that such vessels, with their large refrigerators, will supply the best accommodation for all kinds of freight, and will also be available for bringing to Canada large numbers of emigrants during the busy season, when the space on the cargo steamers may be overcrowded. These provisions for the carriage of freight ought to be embodied in any agreement that may be made for a fast service, so that there may be no doubt or dispute about them. They are fully as essential as those for the passenger service.

As to the amount of the subsidy, the cost of the mail steamers is estimated at $7,000,000, and the cost of maintenance at $3,000,000. It has been suggested to the Government that a service of 18-knot steamers might be substituted for the 20-knot service for which tenders have already been received. Against this it is argued that in comparison with the New York lines an 18-knot service would rank as second class; that it would be called a "slow line"; that no prestige would attach to such a service; that it would attract no attention to the Canadian route, and would almost certainly lead to divert traffic, either passenger or freight, from the New York route; that it would be no advertisement for Canada. Further, it has been pointed out that the proposed contract is to be of ten years' duration, and that if an 18-knot service would be obsolete before it started, it would be far out of date ten years hence, and the cost of the constant improvement of competing lines. And, while at first sight the lower rate of speed would seem to be the more economical, it is pointed out that, by accepting it, we should lose the $375,000, which the British Government is ready to grant for vessels which, in point of speed and otherwise, are suitable for the imperial service. The Canadian Government will doubtless give due weight to these considerations.

"We surrender! We surrender!" shouted the outlaws as they threw down the arms they had just nervously discharged.

They spoke too late to restrain the onset, even had the officer commanding ordered it, which he had not time to do before the blue wave broke, the sabres fell, and half of them arose again in crime. In as brief time as it takes to write it the outlaws were dead or prisoners in the hands of the troops. The few that had attempted flight were halted by the Prophet's rifles.

"Welcome, thrice welcome!" cried the Prophet, as he advanced to Captain Duncan with extended hands. "And I am glad to be here to help you, my friend," said the young officer with that defence of manner that showed his high respect for the man before him. "I think," he added, with a grim smile, "that I came none too soon."

ROOM FOR DIAMOND MATCH.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—A cablegram was received Saturday from Director Geo. T. Smith, of the Diamond Match Company, which bids fair to greatly enhance the stocks of that enterprise. The deal with the Austrian Bank of Austria closed. It is worth more than all decline in match stock. This is the most important contract that President Barber and Director Smith were negotiating in Europe, and it was the hope of making this contract that brought President Barber home from Europe last spring, when he was accompanied by Dr. Furth, of the firm of Bernard & Furth, the largest manufacturers of matches in Austria. Dr. Furth represented the Laender Bank, one of the biggest financial concerns in Vienna, which signified a willingness, if the machines were as represented, to make a contract.

KILLED BY A CATS BITE.

Terrible Death of a Michigan Boy From Hydrophobia.

Bay City, Mich., Aug. 10.—Howard Lowe, aged 11 years, son of David Lowe, driver of an ice wagon, living at 807 Williams street, died Saturday morning at 10 o'clock of hydrophobia. Young Lowe was bitten by a cat on June 24. He was passing along on a sidewalk on McCormick street when the cat jumped out at him, putting its fangs into his wrist and leg. Two hours later a doctor was called and cauterized the wounds. The doctor, at that time, said that it was a suspicious case, and he would not be surprised if it had a fatal effect. Friday night Howard began manifesting signs of hydrophobia, and a doctor was called. The boy grew gradually worse. He could not keep his arms or legs still. He would throw himself nearly off the bed and cry out sharply, but there was no snapping of teeth or frothing at the mouth. He was in great pain most of the time, and appeared to retain consciousness almost to the last. He asked his mother a number of times in a most piteous tone if he was going to die. He also asked to be strapped down. He made frequent requests to be fanned, as he suffered intensely from the heat. At 9:45 he went into a spasm, and a few minutes later he was dead. The doctors have given him hypodermic injections of morphine, but the drug did not appear to affect him. The street in front of his home was closed and crowded with people all the morning. The boy was a favorite in the neighborhood.

IN A BURNING PIT.

Nine Michigan Miners Reported to Have Lost Their Lives.

Kankakee, Ill., Aug. 10.—Fifteen miners are imprisoned in the burning mine at Clarke City. The main shaft of the Clarke City Mining Coal Company was destroyed by fire Friday evening, and 40 miners were imprisoned. Before the upper works were totally destroyed, however, 25 of them escaped. But little news can be obtained from the mines, as the telegraph lines were badly damaged by lightning.

Clarke City is a mining city in the Bradwood district, and has a population of about 600. The shafts are about 100 feet deep, but it is reported that the air shafts are in bad shape. The miners are principally Italians and English.

The latest report is that the number of killed is nine.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

Dr. G. C. Osceola, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing upon them morphia, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

Dr. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ANCELA, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outdoor practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

The Latest Popular Song.
It is not at all certain that a late piece by the author of "My Sweet-heart's the Man in the Moon" will rival the popular success of that melancholy, but not profound, musical composition. The title of the newcomer is "It Don't Seem Like the Same Old Smile," and does not refer, as might first be supposed, to a drink of whisky or other compound beverage, but to the expression upon the countenance of a maiden of 17 or thereabouts. Popular songs owe their success first of all to the rhythmic quality of music, second to the swing of the chorus, and third to the rendering which popular performers can give such a song. The words count for little. It is a peculiarity of songs which become popular that on their first appearance they are coldly received, as a rule.

The chorus of the one in question is:
It don't seem like the same old smile that you used to give me long ago;
It don't seem like the same old smile;
something must have happened, love, I know;
Say you love another, and I'll go, though my heart be breaking all the while;
Your face is just as fair, but no sunshine lingers there; it don't seem like the same old smile.

IN NO DANGER.
"I'm afraid I'm hanging on to your leg pretty heavily," apologized the man who was trying to retain his place on the footboard of the crowded street car.
"That's all right," replied the man who had secured an end seat. "It's been pulled a heap harder than that.
I've got three boys at college."

BY FAR TOO QUIET.
From the Indianapolis Journal.
"What made that young man stay so late?" asked the father.
"We got to talking about the conjugal question," said the fair daughter.
"and did not notice the flight of time."
"I don't think that story will do," said the old man. "People who discuss the conjugal question make a lot more noise than you two did."

—Mr. Harry Robertson, the well-known Collingwood barrister, was in city over Sunday, the guest of Dr. C. T. Campbell, but Mr. Robertson is best known to many Londoners as a past grand master of the Collingwood lodge of the Odd Fellows, and on his way to Barmia, accompanied by his daughter, who is also expert on her feet. Mr. Robertson is glad to find a haven of rest in London, and to avoid the great thunderstorm. He and Miss Robertson had run up against three thunderstorms between Colling-wood and this city.

Builders at Port.

Their Fifth Annual Picnic a Great Success.

A Beautiful Day and a Long Programme of Sports.

The heights on Old Erie's shore were thronged by about 2,000 people on Saturday, when the builders of this city held their fifth annual picnic. It was an almost intolerably hot day in the city, but the balmy breeze off the lake made Port Stanley a very desirable place. The builders take a back seat from no society or organization when arranging details for a picnic, and headed by their energetic secretary, Walter Toll, they provided a programme of games and amusements that could not but satisfy the most exacting. There was a baby show, too, and one that "took the bun." No nonsense was allowed in giving decisions in the show, for the judges were women.

The prizes offered were cash ones, to which the citizens liberally subscribed.
The dancing was a feature of the evening's programme. Despite the heat the young ladies and gentlemen joined heartily in the giddy whirl. The rain held off until about 9 o'clock, when the greater number of them came home.

The games were carried on without a hitch. Following is the list: Baseball match between two picked teams captained by Jack Boon and Wm. Pring, resulting in favor of Boon's nine, by 4 to 2. F. Hayman, umpire.
Tug-of-war, two picked teams, captained by W. M. Burleigh, and Jas.

pull lasted two minutes and the last pull four minutes. The winners of
