OFFICER EXPLAINS REASON FOR VISIT TO MANOR PARK

Alleged Thieving Denied, and District Entirely Free of Crime.

BYLAW IS ADOPTED

Before a crowded schoolhouse in Manor Park last night County Constable Cook explained to the members of the Progressive Ratepayers' Association his connection with a newspaper article which appeared in a local daily concerning alleged thieving in Manor Park. As far as Mr. Cook's knowledge went he had received no complaints of thefts, nor had he been assigned by his superiors to work on the case. The rumor apparently arose from the fact that Cook had been assigned to oversee gravel-hauling operations in the Manor Park pits, and his presence was regarded as more than coincidence by a zealous reporter, with the resultant unpleasant notoriety for the residents of the district, due to the distorted construction placed up-on the fact of the constable's presence in the park. Mr. Cook's explanation was entirely satisfactory to the meeting.

The building restriction bylaw draft was read by the secretary of the association, and it was moved and seconded that the bylaw be adopted as read. The motion carried almost unanimously.

The residents of the district feel Madden, Diary of Master William Science: Grey, Shepherd's Crowns; Ridge, Story Teller—Forty Years in London; Taylor, Mediaeval Mind; Osborn, Saar Question; Corbett, Naval Operations; Russell, True Adventures of the Secret Service; Tilly, Modern France, Mediaeval France;

The Girl Whose Chum Has Deserted Her-Why Do Men Marry Widows?-Shall "Thirty-Nine" Marry a Man Fourteen Years Younger?

Dear Miss Dix—For a long time I have been friends with a girl chum whom I love dearly and for whom I have done many things that were great favors to her. Now she has transferred her affections to another girl, and hardly has anything to do with me at all. All of our old intimacy is gone. We have had no quarrel and I have done nothing to offend her that I know of, but I am broken-hearted over it. What shall I do?

SALLY.

Her hands were cold, the red lips parted like crimson petals against Kneeling, he clasped the sweet face in his hands, calling a little wildly, "Katy—Katy-kid, what's the wildly, "Katy—Katy-kid, what's the matter? Don't you hear?"

It seemed as though the heart was laid open; shame to offend her that I know of, but I am broken-hearted over it. What shall I do?

It seemed as though the heart was laid open; shame bed, chafing her hands, begging her to speak, waiting in a blind, half-sobbing frenzy for her eyes to open. When he saw a faint color creep-wall of the whiteness of her cheeks.

Answer: Go to the girl, Sally, and ask her if there is any reason for her coldness to you. You owe that much to your old friendship. Don't let pride keep you from making an effort to regain your friend. Very often a little oversensitiveness on our part, or some little act that was misinterpreted by another, an offense taken at some careless word or deed, or a malicious story told by a scandalmonger has estranged two friends that a few plain words of explanation would have kept together for all time. Friendship is too priceless a thing to lose if you can prevent it.

But I am afraid, dear little Sally, that you are having your first experience with human fickleness and are finding out that those we love do not always really love us. There are fair-weather friends who only care for us as long as we can amuse and entertain them, and add to their comfort and pleasure. Then when somebody else comes along who is newer and fresher than we are, or who can give them more than we gave them, they are off with the old love and on with the new.

As you go along the journey of life this will happen to you so often. Many people will be your intimate friends for a few weeks or months or years and then forsake you; many people will profess to love you, because you can open doors to them through which they wish to pass, or you can boost them up the ladder, or because they want to ride in your automobile, or because you give good dinners, or because of a thousand other selfish reasons. And they will forsake you for somebody with more position, more money and bigger cars. And you will get used to it, and just shrug your shoulders over it, but you will become very chary of giving your real

But when you are young and find that a friend is faithless, it is a stab from the hand you trusted, and the wound leaves a scar that is never obliterated. Something lovely and beautiful has gone out of life that you will Dever have again, for our first friendship is surrounded by a cloud of glory that no other friendship ever has. Would that we could always keep it! But alas! there are few first friendships that survive the changes and vicissitudes of existence. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix-I wish to ask your kindness in settling a dispute on the following question:

Why do men seldom marry a widow or divorcee, but always look for woman who has never been married, while girls marry widowers and often divorced men? MARGARET.

Answer:

It's news to me, Margaret, that men object to widows, whether grass or sod. My observation is that a widow can marry all around an unmarried woman of her own age, looks and financial class, and give the single woman cards and spades to boot.

Why, widows are such experts at the marrying game and have such fatal fascination for men and they are universally held to be so dangerous that every father repeats to his son, as he starts forth in the world. Mr Weller's famous advice "Samival, Samival, my son, bevare of vidders."

Consider this, Margaret-a woman, say, of forty, is called an she will never marry. But a widow of forty is called a young widow. Everybody considers her highly eligible and prophesies that she will soon marry. And she generally does.

As a matter of fact, a woman who has been married-excepting, of course, young girls—has a better chance to marry than the woman who has never been married, for men are like sheep so far as women are concerned. They follow their leader, and it sort of gives a woman a prestige with other men to know that some other man admired her enough to mar-

There are many other reasons why the widow has a lure for men, and anywhere under sixty she can always marry again, if she so desires. For one thing, the man who marries her can be pretty sure that he is getting a good housekeeper and a reasonable wife who will look on with a lenient eye at many of his little faults and foibles. For she has cut her wisdom teeth on one husband, and has learned that marriage is a give-and-take proposition and not a romantic paradise presided over by a little tin god of a husband. Nor does it detract from the widow's charms that she most often has a nice little wad of insurance money.

Men marry widows rather than women who have nover been married for the same reason that girls marry widowers. They know a good thing when they see it. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix-I am a woman of thirty-nine, and very much in love with a young man of twenty-two. My husband died a few years ago, leaving me a small fortune, and I can give this boy anything he cants. Do you think the difference in our ages should keep us from marrying?

I certainly think that any woman who marries a man fourteen years younger than she is takes a foothardy risk on her happi-

Perhaps while you are thirty-nine and well preserved and think of yourself as still being girlish the difference does not seem so prohibitive, but how about it when he is forty and you are fifty-four? Then he will still be a boy, wanting pleasure, romance, and you will be a faded woman who looks like his mother.

But one thing is sure, Gray Hair, before you marry him get some good lawyer to tie that fortune up for you tight and fast. Then if you lose your boy husband you will still have a comfortable DOROTHY DIX. Copyright, 1924, by Public Ledger Company.

Answer not a fool according to his folly, lest thou also be like unto Answer a fool according to his folly, lest he be wise in his own conceit.-Proverbs xxvi., 4, 5.

This looks like contradictory advice.

But it is really a careful view of both sides of the same subject. Some letters are so unreasonable, some questions so impertinent some arguments so foolish, and some attacks so full of blind prejudice, that to answer them is to descend to their level. Silence is the best reply.

Christ gives us an example. (Matthew xxvii., 12.) On the other hand some forms of folly are so vain, virulent, and dangerous that they need correction. The ignorant and conceited should not be permitted to drive automobiles, or to write text books, or to claim censorship in church or state. A searching inquiry is often the best answer to this kind of foolish-asking them a question which they could not answer. (Mark xi., 27-33.) But for us frail and fallible men, in the daily run of life, I think it wise to follow the first counsel of Solomon oftener than the second. To go around the world trying to expose the folly of all the com-

Tonight's card at the Winter Gardens is in the nature of an experiment | Will Play Return Game in which will prove whether or not the apparent demand for high-class boxing covered a very large portion of the citizenry. Indications are that the answer will be in the affirmative.

That was the reason two main events found their way into a four-bour card as a premier offering, despite the danger of starting out with too high a standard. There is no reason why London should not aim at seeing some of the crowned heads of fistiana as well as some of the uncrowned crew. A few who have abdicated their thrones, such as Britton, would be some-

Assembling a fight card is much safer than it once was, thanks to egislation, but much more expensive, due to the same legislation. Protec tion is afforded the public, fighters and promoters, the latter two bearing

So-called stomach troubles, such as indicestion, gas, sourness, stomach-ache and inability to retain food are in probably nine cases out of ten, simply evidence that excessive secretion of acid is taking place in the stomach, causing the formation of gas and acid indigestion.

Gas distends the stomach and causes that full, oppressive, burning feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the excess development or secretion of acid.
