When Long Breaths Hurt Your Side Rub Soreness Away With "Nerviline"

Prompt Action Often Prevents Pleurisy or Pneumonia.

Do long breaths hurt you? Try it, and see. If you notice a wheeze or a catch in your side, then be sure trouble exists.

Proper action consists in a vigorous rubbing of the back, chest and sore side with "Nerviline." This wonderful liniment sinks into the tissues where the pain is seated—gives instant relief. That catch disappears all sense of soreness goes, and you then know that Nerviline has probably saved you from pleurisy. Just try Nerviline for chest tightness, coughs, aches and soreness—it's a wonderful liniment, and when kept in the home saves the family from lots of ills and suffering. A large bottle on hand makes the doctor's bill mighty small, and can be depended on as a reliable and mighty prompt cure for rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, pleurisy, stiff neck, sore muscles, and enlarged joints. Get the large 50c. family size bottle; it is far more economical than the 25c. trial size. Sold by dealers everywhere.

THE HEIR OF Lancewood

CHAPTER XVIII.

"The heiress of Lancewood!" repeated Lord St. Just to himself. "What can she possibly have lost?"

Vivien hastened home. She was half annoyed, half pleased at the recent little incident—annoyed that she should have been seen, pleased that kindly words had been spoken to her. Just as she was opening the door of the room which Lady Smeaton occupied, she overheard Caroline say—

"It is true—she is heiress no longer. She has lost Lancewood."

The words struck her like a blow. Hitherto she had thought only of her own immediate share in the trouble—of her own immediate loss and unhappiness; for the first time it occurred to her that besides all this she would lose her position in the eyes of the world. She was no longer heiress of Lancewood. The homage, adulation, respect and deference that had always been paid to her would be paid no longer. It was all over. She might possibly have a large fortune, but she was no longer heiress. The world would henceforth be very different to her. She had lost her place in it. What would Lord St. Just have said to her had she told him, "I was heiress of a large estate, and I have lost it!" Would it have made any difference to him? would it make any difference to those friends she was with now? She would soon ascertain.

She walked calmly into the room. Lady Smeaton and her daughters were together alone. She knew they had been talking about her by the conscious look on the three faces. There was something of the dauntless spirit of the ancient Neslies in Vivien. She went up to Caroline.

"I overheard what you were saying as I entered the room," she said. "You are quite right. I am no longer heiress of Lancewood. It has gone from me."

"I learned it from Miss Salis' letter," replied Caroline. "I am sorry, Vivien."

Miss Neslie turned so as to face the whole group.

"Life has many hard lessons to teach," she said. "I have mine to learn. I am no longer heiress of Lancewood—my position is changed—and, if that is to make any alteration in our friendship, let me know it at once. You cared for me as heiress of Lancewood—you may not care for me as Vivien Neslie."

"My dear child, do not speak so bitterly," put in Lady Smeaton; "the news takes you by surprise, but it does not astonish me. I seemed to have a foreboding of what was coming."

"I never thought of it," said Vivien. "I felt it hard enough that Lady Neslie should supplant me, should take my father's heart away from me, should be mistress in my place; but I never dreamed of a son to take my inheritance away from me."

"But I did," remarked Lady Smeaton.

"Listen to me, Vivien. I was your mother's friend, my dear; I loved her, and for her, and for her sake I love you. I do not care in the least, so far as I am concerned, whether you are an heiress or whether you are penniless. I will say more. I like you so well, Vivien, that, if you are not comfortable at Lancewood, I offer you a home with myself and my daughters as long as you live."

"He is a wonderful baby," declared Lady Valerie; "his coming has made quite a different place of Lancewood. Will you come with me to the nursery?"

"The sooner it is over the better," thought Vivien to herself. She had to see the baby and endure its mother's triumph; she had nerved herself to bear it—the sooner it was over the better.

She followed Lady Neslie to the beautiful rooms that had been set apart for the little heir. She was struck by the magnificence of everything; no money had been spared—there had been the most lavish expenditure.

"Show us the baby, Mrs. Corby-quick," directed Lady Valerie. And with a smile at the impatience Mrs. Corby drew back the lace curtains of the cot, and remarked with some pride—

"This is baby—he is sleeping, miss—and a more beautiful child was never seen."

"Take him up," said Lady Valerie, "that Miss Neslie may see him."

"No," opposed Vivien, "do not disturb him; I can see him here."

"You cannot see his eyes while they are shut—and they are such beautiful eyes. See, Vivien—his mouth is just like Sir Arthur's, but he has my eyes and hair."

Bending over the little one, Vivien saw that it was just as she said—the pretty tiny mouth was much like his father's.

"He is a true Neslie, you see," added Lady Valerie, triumphantly. "There is no mistake about it. He is a splendid little boy."

Vivien kissed the little face. After all, her disposition was not the child's fault—and she was too noble a woman to entertain a feeling of spite toward a child.

"I could even like him," she thought to herself, "if he had a different mother."

felt. She went to Sir Arthur and kissed him; she saw his face flush as he half turned aside.

"I have been away so long, papa," she said simply. "I am very pleased to see you again."

Then Valerie came forward and raised her face as though she would caress the rival she detested. But Vivien was no hypocrite; she had never kissed Lady Neslie and never would. She held out her hand and uttered some commonplace words of greeting, and as she did so she saw the triumph in Valerie's face.

Sir Arthur tried to fill up a very awkward pause by asking about Lady Smeaton and her daughters; and in a short time he found himself talking brightly as of old to his daughter—he was so relieved to have escaped a "scene."

"You do not seem particularly anxious to embrace your brother, Vivien."

Miss Neslie turned to her calmly. "It is long since I have seen a baby," she said. "I like children, and I should like to see him."

"He is a wonderful baby," declared Lady Valerie; "his coming has made quite a different place of Lancewood. Will you come with me to the nursery?"

"The sooner it is over the better," thought Vivien to herself. She had to see the baby and endure its mother's triumph; she had nerved herself to bear it—the sooner it was over the better.

She followed Lady Neslie to the beautiful rooms that had been set apart for the little heir. She was struck by the magnificence of everything; no money had been spared—there had been the most lavish expenditure.

Vivien kissed the little face. After all, her disposition was not the child's fault—and she was too noble a woman to entertain a feeling of spite toward a child.

she had achieved such a victory as she had hoped. She had forgotten that it is almost impossible for an ignoble soul to wound a noble one.

CHAPTER XIX.

Vivien had not been many days at home before she saw that everything was made to give way to the claims of the little heir. Had he been a prince, more expense could not have been incurred. Lady Valerie would have everything surrounding him of the most costly description. No one was ever allowed to forget for one moment that he was heir of Lancewood.

With her keen powers of perception, Vivien quickly read the feelings of all those with whom she came in contact. In the servants she discerned a sense of pity, she found them looking at her with wistful eyes and she noticed also that they would have rebelled if they had dared. From the unusual kindness of her father she felt that he was sorry for her loss—that he would have preferred herself to succeed him. There was always something apologetic in his manner, as though he would fain atone to her for the wrong done. Vivien had much to bear. The change hurt her greatly, although she gave no sign.

Mr. Greston, the family solicitor, came to Lancewood on business connected with the renewal of a lease, and when there he impressed upon Sir Arthur the necessity of making a will under the new state of things. It was highly important. Sir Arthur acknowledged that. The lawyer spoke boldly.

"It is not fair to Miss Neslie," he said, "that you should delay even a single day. No one knows what an hour may bring forth. Miss Neslie has been brought up as heiress of Lancewood. If you die to-morrow, Sir Arthur, everything would go to your son, and she would have only the fortune left by her mother. It is unjust to delay."

"I will not delay another hour," replied Sir Arthur, startled by the grave, earnest words. "Come with me to my study. We will prepare the draft of the will at once. I have thought of it. It is clear enough in my own mind."

Then Mr. Greston reminded him that the papers signed during his last visit were now useless. Fresh documents must be prepared.

It was done, and they were sent from London. On the morning of their arrival Vivien, Lady Valerie, Mr. Greston and Gerald Dorman were in the library together.

"This is a disagreeable business," said Sir Arthur, "let us get over it at once. Vivien, my dear daughter—the change in your position makes the papers you signed some time back useless. Fresh ones have been prepared, and they have to be signed on the part of the child."

BRAVE SIX HUNDRED DIED IN SILENCE.

Writing home to his daughter from the Dardanelles, a member of the French Expeditionary Force describes in a letter, reproduced by the Star, how he saw H.M.S. "Majestic" go to her doom.

It was about 6.35 a.m., he says, when the battleship was struck. As soon as she was torpedoed by the German submarine she heeled over in an alarming fashion till she had a list of about 45 degrees to port. Everything on deck fell or slid with a tremendous din and whatever was not attached was thrown into the sea. But I owe it to the truth to say that there was not a single instant of panic and that many of the seamen who, recognizing the imminence of the danger, had undressed, waiting the critical instant with calm.

"They had not to wait long, for four minutes after the explosion the battleship abandoned her inclined position and turned completely over and went down, the forward keel alone emerging.

It was a terrible moment, but it was also sublime when six hundred men, facing death, mute and strong, were thrown into the sea, covered and ensnared them like an immense cast-net among the gigantic eddies of their annihilated battleship.

"We can't afford it." Mr. Herbert A. Gibbons, until recently Professor of History at Roberts College, Constantinople, declares that the United States ought to go into the war at once.

"We can't afford to let Germany win," he says. "The United States cannot remain practically disinterested in the progress of this titanic struggle. It is not only a great European war, but a world war. We have got an enemy to face, and we ought to put into the struggle every ounce of energy and resource to beat him. If we keep going on in the present spirit of apathy, it is going to be an awful day when the awakening comes."

What Will America Do?

In some quarters the last Note from Washington to Berlin was regarded as tantamount to an ultimatum. Whether it was intended as such should soon be made clear. The concluding words of the Note were clear. They contained a warning to Germany if any German commander of a submarine repeated the act complained of, the action would be held by the Government at Washington as "deliberately unfriendly." The warning has been disregarded. The German Press has openly flouted it and declared there would be no modification of the submarine warfare against mercantile vessels. A German commander of a submarine has set the warning at naught, fully a week after the Note was received by the German Foreign Office. He sunk the S. S. Iberian, and did to death among others, three American citizens. An official statement issued at Queenstown declares that three of the victims were American citizens. Acts speak louder than words. Germany by murdering American citizens on the high seas when pursuing their ordinary peaceful avocation of travelling on the seas in a non-warlike vessel has defied the Government of the United States, after receiving a positive, clear and unequivocal warning that by doing so they would commit an act which the American Government would regard as "deliberately unfriendly." This is an open defiance. What will President Wilson do now? He has been warning the Kaiser repeatedly for the past six months. The time for expostulation and words of friendly warning has passed. It is up to President Wilson and his associates in the Cabinet to take action. The world awaits that action.

How to Sink Submarines.

Veteran Whaling Captain Says Bomb Guns Would do it.

Boston, Mass., July 28.—"A submarine ought to be an easier mark than a whale," says Captain John A. Cook, of Provincetown, a veteran whaler, who is a recognized authority on that subject.

"I have often thought," said the Captain, "that if I were in one of my old whaling vessels and found myself in the danger zone, I would put out my six bombs, with a bomb gun in each of them, and would feel certain that if a submarine came within striking distance she would be sunk before she could do any damage."

The bomb used in whaling, the captain points out, must penetrate the tough skin and sixteen or more inches of blubber, and it is desired to have it pass through or between the ribs and explode in the vitals of a whale. Such an explosion, he thinks, would be sufficient to destroy a submarine, and the missile, he says, would penetrate the shell of the undersea craft.

"Can one shoot accurately with one of these guns?" he was asked. "Yes," said he. "A submarine ought to be an easier mark than a whale. There is only a small part of the whale's body that is really vulnerable. It is no use to shoot in the tail or the head. There is really about thirty feet in even the biggest whale where it is worth while to place a harpoon or a bomb. Aim just back of the fin and below the backbone, so the projectile will go through or near the heart, and that means death to the whale."

"But can you shoot under water with one of these guns?" "Yes, we always have to shoot under water. The projectile is so light so it is very slightly deflected by the water. It does not ricochet on striking a surface as a round shot is likely to do, but keeps on its course. It will vary slightly, but so accurately as shooting in the air, but the variation is too slight to be of consequence when the mark is so large. We find that when three or four shots are fired, as sometimes happens, they all strike within a space not larger than the head of a barrel. There is no trouble at all about shooting under water."

Kaiser Planned to Change Map.

OF SOUTH AFRICA.

London, July 26.—A Times special from Cape Town says: "Gen. Botha, speaking at a banquet in his honor, laid stress on the far-reaching character of the German designs in South Africa. He said maps had been discovered re-casting the chart of Africa on the basis of a peace to be concluded at Rome in 1915."

The whole of Africa south of the equator was marked "Greater Germany" except for a minute fragment of territory labelled "Boer reserve."

At the outbreak of the war, Col. Maritz inquired how far the independence of the new Republic was guaranteed. The Kaiser replied: "I shall not only acknowledge the independence of South Africa, but even guarantee it, provided the rebellion starts immediately."

GERMAN SHIPS WARNED BEFORE WAR WAS DECLARED.

London, July 26.—Godfrey Isaacs, head of the Marconi Company, at a meeting to-day declared that on August 4 last the German Government sent the following wireless to all German ships at 5 p.m.

"War declared against England; make neutral ports quickly."

As a matter of fact, the formal declaration of war was not made until seven hours later.

Placentia's Reception to His Grace the Archbishop.

PLACENTIA, To-day.

Special Evening Telegram.—Long before the train arrived at the station with His Grace and visiting clergy on board, the grounds about the station and roads leading thereto were thronged with people anxiously awaiting the arrival of His Grace Archbishop Roche, Placentia's most illustrious son. When the train arrived it ventured to say that never before in the history of the ancient capital was there such a demonstration of heartfelt joy as when His Grace stepped from the car Terra Nova, to the platform, specially erected for the purpose, it was the first outburst of enthusiasm of the waiting crowd broke forth. Cheers after cheer rent the air, and re-echoed from the surrounding hills. The road leading from the station was beautifully decorated on both sides with trees, flowers and evergreens, and clearly showed the artistic taste of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Ryan. Within this avenue lined up on both sides were the Magistrate, the President, Mr. W. J. Walsh, officers and members of the Star of the Sea Association, whilst their band rendered some very choice selections. Our President, Mr. W. J. Walsh, accompanied by Revs. Fr. Maher and Sheehan, were the first to greet him, then came the Magistrate and citizens, all anxious to show their loyalty to the representative of His Holiness Pope Benedict the XV. The procession then started for the town side, headed by the children of the place, then came the Star Society, and greater portion of the population all anxious to do the greatest possible honor to their distinguished visitor. His Grace the Archbishop with attendants, prelates and clergy closed the procession. The line of route was beautifully decorated and spanned by arches with appropriate mottoes. The whole party followed by the people embarked on motor boats provided for the occasion. On arrival at the town proper motor car and carriages were in readiness to convey His Grace and party to the Presbytery. The enthusiasm of the people during the procession was unbounded; several halts were made particularly in passing Breyfrey House, the residence of the Magistrate, where the children and even little tots of two years presented bouquets. Cheers were continuous along the line, in fact it was a scene of jubilation and heartfelt welcome from beginning to end.

T. A. JUVENILES.—The regular monthly meeting of the Juvenile T. A. and B. Society was held yesterday and was largely attended. Three applicants were admitted to membership.

TAKEN ILL ON STREET.—A woman named Armstrong, residing on the Battery Road, was taken suddenly ill on Holdsworth Street, about 11 o'clock on Saturday night last. She was taken to the police station by Const. Whalen, and was attended by Dr. Roberts, who ordered the woman to be taken home whither she was taken in a cab.

A FALSE REPORT.—A report was current in town yesterday that some twenty of our Naval Reservists had gone down in a battleship sunk in the Dardanelles. Upon enquiry at the Calypso we find that they had no official news of any fatalities. The circulation of the report caused much anxiety amongst those who have relatives and friends in the Reserve.

THE CITY'S HEALTH.—Four cases of diphtheria were reported to the Health Authorities during last week, and one death occurred from the disease. There are now in hospital seventeen diphtheria patients, and one ill of typhoid; two patients suffering from the former disease are being nursed at home. During the week, three residences were disinfected and released from quarantine.

NOTE OF THANKS.—Mr. George MacDonald and family wish to sincerely thank Mr. T. Carroll, employees of the Reid Newfoundland Company, Mrs. P. THIS EVENING'S GAME.—The Stars and Casuals will play the first of the postponed games of the League Football series this evening, and the probable line-up will be:—Casuals—Goal, Peters; backs, R. Marshall, Thistle; halves, Reid, Pike, Kirby; forwards, Chaney, Rondell, Smith, Pearcey, Goudie. Stars—Goal, Phelan; backs, Walsh, Thompson; halves, Kavanagh, Hart, Duggan; forwards, Morgan, Caul, Brien, Bell, Phelan.

POWERS COURT GARDEN PARTY.—The annual Garden Party in aid of the R. C. Church at Manuels, will take place at Powerscourt on Wednesday next. Rev. Fr. Kelly and the committee in charge of the affair have made every provision for the entertainment of their guests, and we feel sure that intending patrons will spend an enjoyable time. The beautiful scenery, together with the dainty teas for which the ladies of Manuels are famous should make this event one of the most attractive on the holiday programme.

FISHERY CASE.—In the Magistrate's Court to-day before Mr. F. J. Morris, K.C., a fisherman of Flat Rock summoned another fisherman of the same settlement for a breach of Section 48 of the Fishery Rules, re the placing of cod traps. As the defendant's trap had been taken up, prosecution was withdrawn upon payment of $4.20, the costs in the case.

McMurdo's Store News

MONDAY, August 2, 1915.

For suburban, tan, and that stiff uncomfortable feeling that always follows a day in the sun, we can recommend nothing better than Cream of Lillies which has demonstrated for several years past its qualities as a delightfully soothing application, one which speedily cools and smooths the irritated skin, and leaves the face, neck and hands soft and velvety. We believe that there is nothing to surpass or even to equal Cream of Lillies for this purpose. Many judicious persons also use Cream of Lillies Soap constantly, and find it very pleasant and unobtrusive to the skin. Price (Cream of Lillies) 25c. a crock; (Cream of Lillies Soap) 20c. a cake; box of three cakes 50c.

Says Bernstorff Tried to Use Him.

Lucien Wolf, an English Writer, Tells Story About the Diplomat's Stay in London.

London, July 10.—Lucien Wolf, a writer on foreign politics, says in an article published by the Chronicle: "Some months ago Professor Dr. Ludwig Stein contributed to the Vossische Zeitung a jubilant article on what he was pleased to discover as the swing-round of opinion (stimmungsumschlag) in America, the said swing-round being of course in favor of Germany.

"In his native way he claimed it as 'chiefly if not entirely' the work of German guile, that is to say of the German Ambassador in Washington. Count Von Bernstorff, it appears, is a master of the art of 'manipulating the press,' which we are frankly told is 'the most delicate problem of German diplomacy.' Hence it was apparently quite easy for him to capture the American newspaper magazine, Mr. Hearst, and through him and his newspaper and cinema ramifications to contrive the aforesaid 'stimmungsumschlag.'

"To any Englishman who knows Von Bernstorff, and more especially his methods of manipulating the press, the achievement attributed to him by Dr. Stein can only provoke amusement. Von Bernstorff was for some years Counsellor of the German Embassy in London, and in that capacity I frequently had occasion to meet him and to study his methods. On one occasion he did me the honor of trying to capture me, as he is alleged to have captured Hearst, but he failed in the attempt, and the only result was that he brought down upon himself some very disagreeable home truths from me and got himself thoroughly discredited in his official relations.

"The story is perhaps worth telling, if not for the instruction of our American friends, whose eyes are now wide open, at any rate, as showing how real are the danger of the press intrigues of German diplomacy, of which Dr. Stein has so unwisely boasted.

"One day in February, 1904, when the newspapers were full of rumors of the coming entente with France, I received by hand a bulky packet from Von Bernstorff. It contained the draft of an article attacking the proposed entente, and was ostensibly written from a British point of view. It argued very ingeniously that British and French interests and ambitions were bound to conflict and that in any case France was not to be trusted. A covering letter asked me to 'make use of the enclosed,' or, in the event of my not being able to do so, to 'send it back in a few days.'

"I need not say that I was as indignant as I was astonished, but I recognized the importance of the incident as shedding light not only on Von Bernstorff's extra-diplomatic activities, but also on the attitude of Wilhelmstrasse toward the entente.

"A few days later I called on Bernstorff and spoke to him plainly about the impropriety of his conduct. He was very embarrassed and protested that his sole concern was for the welfare of Great Britain, and asked me for the return of his manuscript.

"On February 22, 1904, Von Bernstorff in a letter acknowledging the receipt of the returned manuscript, said: "I should never have sent you the article if I had not thought that in this question German and English interests were identical and it would be a good thing for both countries to maintain the status quo."

Commenting upon this Mr. Wolf refers to it as "a cynical avowal that Germany was really endeavoring at the time to frustrate Lord Lansdowne's efforts for an Anglo-French conciliation."

A LITTLE CHILD SHALL TEACH THEM. School Inspector (to the infant class): "Can a hen swim?" "Yes," says Maggie, with a significant nod of the head.

"What! Do you say a hen can swim?" "Yes," with repeated nod.

"The infant mistress is appealed to regarding the instruction imparted to the class.

"Maggie," says the infant mistress, "surely you are not thinking. Do you say a hen can swim?" With persistent nod, Maggie says "Yes."

Head master enters the room. Inspector calls his attention to Maggie's repeated answer.

Head Master (to Maggie): "Do you mean to say a hen can swim?" "Yes," says Maggie.

The Eastern Trust Company.

A few reasons why an estate can be better administered by the Eastern Trust Company than by a personal executor or administrator:

1. The Company affords the estate absolute security; it has a paid-up capital of $931,000.00, and a reserve fund of $225,300.00.
2. It has a long experience in the work of administering estates; it is incorporated for this business of acting as a trustee, and, unlike many other trust companies, it does no other.
3. Its existence is perpetual. Your estate, in the event of the death of a personal executor or administrator, must look to Germany for a substitute, and the work of administration is impeded during that time, and the new executor is unfamiliar with the policy of his predecessor, and confusion results. This company's existence is perpetual, and there is a continuity of policy in its administration that the death of its officers does not break.
4. It possesses the confidence of governments, universities and prominent charities and administers their funds.
5. A number of other advantages which will appear in due course.

Buying Clothes on Schedule.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Do you buy your clothes impulsively. And yet how few women plan the expenditure of their money systematically and carry it out efficiently.

Of course, a schedule is not thoroughly efficient unless you permit it to be modified when good cause arises. But a crush on a pretty dress which does not fit in with the rest of your wardrobe, a passion for some garment so expensive that you will have to curtail all the rest of your plans, is not a good cause.

First, Use Your Imagination.

In planning one's wardrobe for the summer I think one should first of all use imagination. Project yourself into your own life for the summer. Picture your daily occupation and imagine what kind of clothes you will need the most. The average woman doesn't buy what she needs, but what she needs most, and so her problem is one of selection and elimination.

Next, plan your color scheme. A friend of mine has decided that the two colors most becoming to her are dark blue, for dark things, and lavender, for light things, and she almost never wears anything but these two colors. Of course, this results in monotony, but on the other hand it insures her becoming clothes and is less expensive because, if your clothes all follow the same general color scheme they can be carried over from season to season more successfully.

Why Not Write It Down?

I suppose many women will laugh when I suggest that having made a definite schedule, covering colors, style and price you can afford to pay. Perhaps such a business-like proceeding is funny, and then again perhaps it isn't.

And now, having made your schedule, be wise enough to depart from it when it is advantageous to do so and firm enough not to be beguiled away when it isn't.

How shall you know? Well, my friends, that's part of your business as the manager of the family money. All responsible positions demand the ability to make decisions. How wisely you decide is the measure of your fitness.

MR. ASQUITH AS PILOT.

"It is the accident of events that has made Mr. Asquith the pilot during the most stormy period of British politics for, certainly, a century," writes Mr. A. G. Gardiner in the Atlantic. "He is himself, by temperament, the least adventurous of statesmen. His quality is intellectual rather than imaginative, and he is congenitally indisposed to pluck the peach before it is ripe. At no time in his career has he forced issues on the public. He is content to leave the pioneering work to those who like it, and prefers to make his appearance when the air has been warmed.

"To some extent, no doubt, his reticence is due to a certain shyness, which often assumes a protective shield of cold indifference. That, behind the rather frigid public exterior, he cultivates the sensibilities, is known to his friends and has more than once been revealed to the public. He is the only man I have seen break down in the House of Commons under the stress of emotion. It was on the occasion when he announced the final failure of his efforts to bring about a settlement in the memorable recall of 1911."

There are many charming and becoming adaptations of the suspender dress and they all afford ways of making over last season's dress.

AT THE CRESCENT.
Everybody who has read "Martin Chuzzlewit," by Charles Dickens, will have an opportunity of seeing a Biograph picturization of this great story at the Crescent Picture Palace, to-day. The quaint old English customs and costumes of Dickens' days are finely portrayed in this great 2-reel feature. There are four other comedy and drama pictures accompanied with appropriate music, making a first class "picture" show, that costs no more. Harvey Collins, vocalist from New York's big theatres, is due to arrive by the Stepano on Thursday. Mr. Collins comes to the Crescent for a limited engagement and is highly recommended.

"THE EVIL MEN DO" GREAT SOCIAL DRAMA.
Don't miss the Nickel Theatre to-day, as the programme is an elaborate one and all should make an effort to see it. Beside "The Evil Men Do," Maurice Costello is in the leading role and he is supported by all star cast. This is a marvellous story wherever produced, and has been very favorably spoken of. The comedy is a Keystone "Fatty's Jonah Day." Forbes Law Duguid sings "Oh Frontisee of a Joy Divine." Be sure and attend to-day; it is a great show.

BRITISH THEATRE.
Great interest is being evinced locally at the initial appearances at the British Theatre of Madame Olive Timmins, a grand opera "star" of the first magnitude. Possessor of one of the most magnificent mezzo-soprano voices, of wonderful range, flexibility and power coupled with a beautiful stage presence, Madame Timmins is undoubtedly the greatest singer at operatic arias to have ever appeared in St. John's. Prospective patrons of the "British" may confidently look forward to and be assured of a musical treat both from an artistic and voice-culture point of view when they listen to the wonderful renditions of this most accomplished and wonderful woman.

WHICH FRENCH TROOPS ARE ALL VEGETARIANS.
One of the best fighters in the French firing line is the Algerian, who is practically speaking, a vegetarian.

His usual food consists of wheat and dates, oil and milk, and beyond that, figs, oranges, eggs, cheese, and vegetables of all kinds.

It is only twice a month that the most that France's North American troops at home eat meat, and that is when a goat or a lamb is killed, and then the whole village take part.

Even now, while serving in France, the Algerians feed practically on nothing but dates and wheat porridge mixed with oil.

These troops are the finest of all African soldiers. They live in an extremely rocky country, and are accustomed to enduring long fatiguing climbs from the very earliest infancy. They are able, in fact, to outmarch any European troops, and to do it on very much less food.

All able-bodied men in Algeria are compelled to serve three years in the French active army, and seven in the reserve. At war strength the Algerian troops number over a hundred thousand.

England's Answer

TO THE HYMN OF HATE.

Full many a hate has been our share From those who would our laurels wear; But none so causeless and none so foul As that, long-nursed in your sullen soul; We've given you freedom, shelter and food, An open mart for your damnable brood, An equal chance and an honest hand, Beneath our flag in every land.

Headless, the nations went their way Peaceful and happy; day by day But you!—in treacherous silence spent Your days and years, on murder bent Out of the sea and out of the sky— Murder below and murder on high And your bloated captains hailed When your murderous will should work its way.

Hear! at the judgment seat, we vow We hated you not, but we hate you now! Now we hate with a righteous hate, By the Outraged Heart of the World we hate.

Hate of Freedom for driven slaves, The Hate of Honor's Soul, for knaves; Hate for your infamy, hate for your creed, Hate for your murderous Prussian breed.

Shining, swift and savage; our sword Keen to the call of the outraged Lord! See—where the clouds of his vengeance loom.

Driven by lightning, flashing your doom; Crowd up your cursed legions there On the field of fate where we front you fair Your tyrant hosts shall be shattered and crushed.

And your Hymn of Hate forever hushed.

NOTE.—These verses are the composition of Mr. E. Allen, of the Bronx, New York. Mr. Allen is a brother's son of Mr. James Allen, who is now on a visit to St. John's. The Allen Bros. are natives of Manchester, England, but they have been residents of New York for many years.

YOUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Although a baby under two years should not be given a sea bath, a word of caution about sea bathing may not be amiss. The cruelty with which well meaning parents treat young, tender children by forcibly dragging them into the surf, a practice that may be seen at any seaside resort in the summer, can have no justification.

The fright and shock that a sensitive child is thus subjected to is more than sufficient to undo any conceivable good resulting from the plunge.

On the other hand, a child who is allowed to play on the warm sand, and becomes accustomed to the water slowly and naturally will soon learn to take delight in the buffeting of the smaller waves, but he should not be permitted to remain more than a minute or two in the water, and should be thoroughly dried, dressed immediately, and not left to run about the beach in wet clothing.

Lessen Your Living Expenses!
 "Be economical." is the cry in England, and this slogan has the same significance in Canada. We all must economize. There is more actual waste in our dress expenses than any other item. When a garment becomes soiled we throw it aside, when for a few cents it could be restored to original freshness and beauty by Dry Cleaning. A saving of at least 35 per cent. in the expense of dressing is possible by using the processes of Dry Cleaning and Dyeing.
 Our agents will gladly give you full particulars.
