Newspapermen are the last of all business men to increase rates to harmonize with the high cost of living and production, and a change will have to be made to prevent many of the smaller papers from going to the wall.

MOTHERHOOD

Advice to Expectant Mothers

The experience of Motherhood is a try-ing one to most women and marks dis-tinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes G once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. P. Maham Medicine Co. (confi-dential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

WATFORD, MAY 17, 1912.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

A little while ago, an English paper offered a prize for the best definition of a lady. This is the answer that took the prize: "To be a lady means, rightly, to be a gentlewoman who shows by her every word and action a sweet and gentle dignity, with a gracious charm of manner; a woman whose heart is pure and true. who is tender toward all suffering, who sympathizes with those in trouble, and is ever ready to give that which costs her some effort and selfdenial. A lady thinks no work derogatory, and no one is deemed too low to receive courtesy and kindness. She is pure and good in every detail of life, a true friend, and a 'ministering angel' in sorrow and in sickness.

Two farmers were not long ago discussing their local paper. One thought it had too many advertisements in it. The other replied: "In my opinion the advertisements are far from being the least valuable part of it. I look them over carefully and save at least five times the value of the paper each week through the business advantages I get from them. Said the other: "I believe you are right-I know that they pay me well and rather think it is not good taste to find fault with the advertisements after all." Those men have the right idea of the matter. It pays any man with a family to take a good local paper for the sake of the advertisements if nothing more. And if business men fail to give farmers a chance to read advertisements in the local paper, they are blind to their own interests, to say the least of it. "You never trade with me," said a business man to a prosperous farmer. "You have never invited me to your place of business and I never go where I am not invited; I might not be welcome," was his reply.

If you would increase your happiness and prolong your life, forget all the slander you have ever heard. Forget the temptations, forget the fault finding, and give little thought to the cause which provoked it. Forget the peculiarities of your friends, and only remember the good points which make you fond of them. Forget all personal quarrels or histories you have heard by accident, and which, if repeated, would seem a thousand times worse than they are. Blot out as far as possible the disagreeables of life; they will come, but they will grow larger when you remember them and the constant thought of the acts of meanness, or worse still, malice, will only tend to make you more familiar with them. Obliterate everything disagreeable from yesterday; start out with a elean sheet for to-day, and write upon it, for sweet memory's sake, only those things which are lovely and lovable.

Deafness Can Not be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Laugh and Grow Fat.

A good hearty laugh is one of the best tonics anyone can take, says The Onward. If a man is reckoned ctor to the race who makes two blades of grass grow where only one grew before, surely the man who makes his fellow take an extra laugh should be credited with doing an equal amount of good. When we are in a blue funk, think everything is going to the dogs and it's full time we made our will and prepared to shuffle off this mortal coil, the very best thing that can happen to us is to have some genial, good-natured, merry-hearted soul drop in and tell a few stories and jokes until we hold our sides with laughter and forget all about our cares and worries. The world has a very different look after such an experience to what it had an hour before, and we begin to think that life, after all may still have in store a few more enjoyable days for us. Someone has said, "Here's to laughter, the sunshine of the soul, the happiness of the heart, the leaven of youth, the privilege of purity, the echo of innocence, the treasure of the humble, the wealth of the poor, the bead of the cup of pleasure. It dispels dejection, banishes blues and mangles melancholy; for it is the foe of woe, the destroyer of depression, the enemy of griefs; it is why kings envy peasants, plutocrats envy the poor, the guilty envy the innocent; it is the sheen on the silver of smiles, the ripple on the waters of delight, the glint of the gold of gladness. Without it humour would be dumb, wit would wither, dimples would disappear, and smiles would shrink; for it's a glow of clean conscience, the voice of a pure soul, the birth-cry of mirth, the swan-song of gladness—Laughter!

The Control of Insect Pests in Canada.

The Division of Entomology of the Experimental Farms Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, has recently issued a bulletin by Dr. C. Gordon Hewitt, Dominion Entomologist, on "The Control of Insect Pests in Canada."

An account is given of the history of the war against insect pests in Canada and of the manner in which insect pests have invaded the country as it has been gradually opened up and cultivated. The manner in which the Dominion and Provincial governments are endeavoring by legislation and other means to prevent by legislation and other means to preven the introduction of insect pests into Can ada and the increase and spread of those pests already here is described. An in-teresting summary of the various lines of work undertaken and carried on by the Division of Entomology at Ottawa is given and the general public will no doubt by surprised at the many problems that come within the scope of the Entom-ologists who are called upon to deal with insects in their relations to all the varied activities of man; insects affecting farm activities of man; insects affecting farm crops, fruit growing, forest and shade trees; insects attacking man's possessions and infesting houses, attacking domestic animals and finally affecting the health of man. All insects, however, are not injurious and the work of the Entomologist includes bees and bee-keeping and the study of parisitic and other enemies which may be of assistance in obtaining which may be of assistance in obtaining control of insect pests.

J. T. Finding some difficulty in bending—a stiffness with pain having settled in his back, it occurred to him that his kidneys might be at fault. "This was a happy idea, for by it I not only got rid of the pain but many other troubles as well. I for by it I not only got rid of the pain but many other troubles as well. Science Versus Fraud

A Vast Fortune Was Saved by Recently Discovered Scien-

By F. A. MITCHEL Copyright by American Press Association, 1911. *********

Something over a century ago a maid en lady named Hinchelwood, the last of her line, died on her estate in the environs of London. The property was put on the market for sale, and. since the neighborhood was an aristocratic one in which a few old families had for many years resided, it was deemed undesirable by the other land holders in the vicinity that the Hinch-elwood estate should pass into the hands of a parvenu or be built upon for business or manufacturing purposes. Twenty gentlemen clubbed to-gether, each putting in £500, and bought the property. Then they put it into a trust, each nominating a baby boy or girl less than one year old, who was to inherit his interest. The last one of these children to remain alive was to be deeded the property by the

The expedient did not long delay trade from entering the neighborhood. the framers of the trust gradually moving away or dying, and at the begin ning of the present century the Hinch elwood estate, surrounded as it was by business property, was valued at £1,000,000. Two of the nominees were living, Nicholas Baxter, aged ninety-two years, and Timothy Ogilsby, aged ninety-two years and six months. Here was $5,000,000 dependent upon two lives that were sure soon to go out. It was to be expected that those who were heirs to these persons should take a marked interest in their longevity. If Baxter outlived Ogilsby the estate would go to a great-grandniece living in America. If Ogilsby lived the longer he had willed the whole property to a grandnephew living in London. The American candidate was Miss Gladys Hinchelwood, aged twen ty, a descendant of the famliv who had originally owned the property, whose parents had emigrated to the new hemisphere before her birth. Both the aged men lived in London in houses situated on the Hinchelwood estate and across the street from each other. One morning Miss Hinchelwood called at the Institute For Experimental Research and asked for Dr. Willard Searle, one of the staff. Dr. Searle was at the time substituting a new liver taken from a subject whose death had occurred but a few minutes before for a diseased liver in an otherwise healthy man. As soon as the operation had been completed he went to the reception room, where he met Miss Hinchelwood. Since Dr. Searle was a bachelor of little more than thirty, a call from a young lady who possessed a remarkably intelligent if not beautiful face was not displeasing to him. The young lady announced the object of her call by giving an account of the formation of the Hinchelwood trust and her present interest in

it. Then she continued: "Many of our vast American estates have passed into the hands of Brit-ish men by their marriage with our heiresses. Here is a property which hangs in the balance between an Englishman and an American girl, myself. Mr. Baxter and Mr. Ogilsby are ill in London. If my great-great-granduncle, Mr. Ogilsby, lives the longer I shall inherit $5,000,000. If. Mr. Baxter survives him I shall get

Dr. Searle's interest was excited. "Now, I have read," continued Miss Hinchelwood, "in magazines and other places of the wonderful work you are doing here in this institute. I understand that you are studying the very source of life. I have come to you to ask if you know of any method of prolonging a life that must soon pass from the body."

Dr. Searle leaned back in his chair, looked at the ceiling, then at the speaker, and said:
"Well, go on."

"These two old men are likely to die within a few days, hours, minutes or even seconds of each other. Whoever survives the other owns the estate, which he may transmit to his heirs or, rather, has already willed. One in my interest in London has informed me that unfair means will be used to keep Mr. Baxter's death a secret in case he dies before Mr. Ogilsby. I desire to meet these unfair methods by scientific methods. I mean by this I would prolong Mr. Ogilsby's

Dr. Searle arose from his chair, paced the floor meditatively for several minutes, then said:

"Of course I should have to go to

"I have been thinking of taking

"You would get that on the ocean." In one week from that day Miss Hinchelwood, accompanied by her mother, met Dr. Searle in London, and the three drove to the residence of Mr. Ogilsby. He was in the care of a woman who had been his housekeeper for many years, his wife having died some forty years before, and he had never begotten any children. Mrs. and Miss Hinchelwood at once assumed charge of the old man, dismissed his physician and placed him under Dr. Searle's care. That he might not be obliged to rely on any medical assistance in a foreign land, thus revealing any scientific methods he might use, he brought with him one of the younger members of the staff of the — institute.

The Americans found the situation about as it had been described. Both men were on their "last legs." When the party drove up to the Ogilsby residence it was evident that a commotion had been caused in the Baxter house opposite by the heads that appeared at the windows. The heir in case Baxter survived Ogilsby was a Colonel Drummond of the British army, an old man, who would soon turn the property inherited over to a host of grandnephews and nieces, who had descended upon the house like vultures on a

No sooner had Mr. Ogilsby's case passed into the hands of the girl who would inherit in case of his survival beyond his rival for the property than every movement in and about the house was eagerly watched from across the street. Dr. Searle wrote to the physician in charge of Mr. Baxter suggesting that a person representing the Baxter interest be admitted to the Ogilsby residence, and vice versa. These persons were to be called in to certify to the death and the hour, minute and second of the death of the men on whose lives depended an immense fortune. This the English doctor agreed to, and the representatives were appointed and admitted.

Miss Hinchelwood continued to be informed of the fact that the heirs on the opposite side of the street were hatching all kinds of devices to conceal the exact time of Mr. Baxter's death and that a living person would be placed in his bed if necessary to represent him. Upon this Dr. Searle stipulated with the physician in charge of the Baxter interests that the representatives should not only see the patient, but Lear him speak.

The case had resolved itself to one hetween rascality and science. Dr. Searle felt that if he could cause his patient to remain alive a little longer than Mr. Baxter he would be fully justified in meeting fraud by this means.

As soon as Dr. Searle took charge of his patient he made a careful examination of the different parts of his body to determine their condition. He found the kidneys diseased to an alarming extent. Acting on his experience in the - institute, he substituted new kid-

The patient having suddenly be-come afflicted with bronchitis, the doctor put in a new throat. These two improvements made a marked change in the patient's condition, though it was feared for a time after each operation that the patient would succumb. In order to give him strength to bear up under the effects of the second operation Miss Hinchelwood gave him a pint of her blood, which was transfused from her to him by Dr. Searle.

A fortnight after these operations those watching the patient opposite were alarmed to see Mr. Ogilsby drive out under the care of his nurse and Mrs. Hinchelwood. Miss Hinchelwood had not yet regained the blood she had lost. It must be confessed that this patching up an old man with new kidneys and new windpipe did not make a new one of him. Besides, the operations could not have been performed successfully without the administering of stimulants. Dr. Searle did not expect to prolong Mr. Ogilsby's life for any great length of time. He simply expected to tide him along until after his rival in the race for life had died. He was therefore not surprised one morning when his patient collapsed and life could not be expected to remain in his patched and stimulated body for more than half a day at

However, it was evident from manifestations opposite that Mr. Baxter was in the same condition. Oxygen tanks were seen being carried into the house, and this was in itself a bad sign for the life of the patient. Finally matters quieted down, and Dr. Searle, believing that Baxter was dead, started one of the servants out into the street with a report that Mr. Ogilsby had died early in the morning. The announcement was immediately made that Mr. Baxter had just breathed his last, and the Oglisby representative was admitted to the room where he lay, finding him stiff and stark.

As soon as Dr. Searle knew that Baxter had passed away he summoned the representative in the Baxter interests into the room where Ogilsby lay.

Now, the deaths of the two men though Dr. Searle did not know it, occurred within half an hour of each other. But there was no reliable evidence which had died first. When the Baxter representative was called into the sick chamber, or, rather, the death chamber, Mr. Ogilsby had expired for-ty minutes before. Just before he entered the room Dr. Searle made an incision over the dead man's heart, inserted his hand and clasped the organ. Then he began to squeeze it gently at intervals, representing the heartbeats, at first some twenty, then thirty, then sixty to the minute. Presently color began to come in the cheeks, and the eyes opened.

Withdrawing his hand and covering the body to the chin, the doctor directed that the Baxter representative be admitted.

"Speak to me," said Searle. "Are you still living?" "I am dying," was the response.

The doctor held up his watch to all present and asked them to note the

This accounts for the great many liver regulators now pressed on the attention of sufferers. Of these there is none superior to Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. Their operation though gentle is effective, and the most delicate can use them.

Duke's Private Income.

Thamesville, May 8.—John Bert died on Wednesday of blood poisoning. About two weeks ago Mr. Bert was scratched by a fowl. The mark was hardly perceptible, but blood poisoning set in and he became very ill, suffering great pain the past week. Mr. Bert was well and favorably known in this vicinity for a great many years, He resided in Howard, where, in addition to farming, he followed his trade as carpenter. After the death of his wite, about two years ago, he moved to town and has since lived with his son. He leaves three daughters and one son, Mrs. Martin, of Detroit; Mrs. Henry Secord and Mrs. Geo. Barber, of Thamesville, and William Bert, Thames-There are only a few wealthier men in the Dominion at the present time than his Royal Highness, the new Governor-General. In addition to the salary Canada will pay him the Duke enjoys a yearly income of $126,000, which was settled on him for life by the British Parliament because of his being one of the younger sons of the late Queen Victoria. Nor does this exhaust the amount of his income from official sources, for he also draws some $25,-000 annually as Field Marshall in the British Army.

Besides his revenue from official sources, the Duke of Connaught enjoys the returns from his share of the estate left by his mother, Queen Victoria, the total value which has never become known to the general public. That the whole estate was very large is common belief, rumor estimating the Duke's share at varying amounts from five to fifteen million dollars. It is said in well-informed circles that his total income is greater than that of King George

At a long row of seaside bathing At a long row of seaside bathing rooms, an important young man walked up to the door of one of the compartments, and, knocking at the same, testily enquired: "When in thunder are you going to get those trousers on?" There was a faint giggle, and a silvery voice replied: "When I get married, I suppose." The young man fainted. He had mistaken the door.

Hard on the Other One.

One hot summer day a Kentucky beau stopped at a florists to order a box of flowers to send to his lady love. At the same time he also purchased a design for the funeral of a friend. On the card for his girl's box he wrote, "Hoping these will help you to bear the heat." The other card bore the one word, "Sympathy."

Very soon the girl telephoned, "I thank you so much for the flowers, but why did you write "spmpathy" on the card? There was no answer from the other card.

mo one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her system, soon loses her personal magnetism. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her amiability and womanly charm. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for woman's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

PIONEER DAYS

In School Section No. 10, Warwick.

In 1840 our grandparents and their children knew few of the comforts we uow enjoy. Think of a trip across the ocean lasting 14 weeks, in a sallboat. The boat drifted on the rocks near where the Titanic met her fate, but Providence willed it that instead of going to the bottom of the ocean as the centain exbottom of the ocean as the captain expected, all were safely landed with but little damage to the boat. Many of the old settlers left comfortable homes and loving friends in the old land to settle SPRING

SOMEtimes these houses contained no bedrooms, and if they had bedrooms there were no window in them—just one window in the libying room. The springtime coming men walked to London for a bushel of potatoes, taking turns carrying them on their backs. Finding the task too heavy they sat down and cut. the eyes out of the tubers for seed and left the residue in a heap and proceeded towards home.

Women often walked to London and back. The trails were rough, many of them traced by nicks on trees (called blazes). Oxen were used instead of horses in those days and each family tried to keep a cow or two, a few sheep and some pigs, the latter becoming very wild through being turned out in the woods. They lived chiefly on beechnuts and roots and became very fat. Dogs were required to catch them. Occasionally one would be penned up so as to be ready for killing when required. One night a

Some of the settlers had old-fashioned hand looms and did weaving for the settlement. Girls were well pleased to get 50c. a week for their services in those days. Alas! they have nearly all of them long since their long homes. When the they have nearly all of them long since gone to their long homes. When the first school house was built it was of unhewn logs. Long sticks called chinks, V-shaped, were placed between them and the crevices filled with mudito keep out the wind and cold. The roof was made of long poles with slab-boards three feet long laid across them in rows, then another row of poles laid on top to answer for nails, which were expensive. A chimney was made by expensive. A chimney was made by crossing sticks one upon another and lining the inside with mud. Doors were made of rough boards and the hingesmade or rough boards and the imbesses were wooden. A fireplace was made sixinches below the floor. Its walls were of stone lined with mud. A back-log thrown on made it cozy indeed. Long benches without backs and with round sticks for legs were brought up close to the fire and about 40 or 50 children sat ond tried to keep warm in cold weather. and tried to keep warm in cold weather. The floor was of slabs made with ax and wedges. No saws then. The boys had good times bringing mud into the schoolhouse to make marbles which they burned to make them white. They had few books in those days and the children were not allowed to write until in the second book. Many other instances could be recorded would space allow. In a few years another school was built in this section. Mr. John Mitchell taught here in 1864. A severe frost came on July 4th of that year cutting off nearly everything. Cattle were let go through the woods all through the winter and eat brouse cut from the trees, and many horses and cattle died the following spring. Some of the boys had to leave school to cut brouse.—Mrs. J. B.
