PAR AWAY.

"The land that is very far off."—Isiah 33, 17.

Upon the shore
Of evermore
We sport like children at their play,
And gather shells
Where sinks and swells
The mighty sea from far away.

Upon that beach,
Nor voice nor speech
Doth things intelligible say;
But whisper our souls
A whisp'ring roll
That comes to us from far away.

Into our ears
The voice of years
Comes deeper, deeper, day by day;
We stop to hear,
As it draws near,
Its awfulness from far away.

At what it tells
We drop the shells
We were so full of yesterday;
And pick no more
Upon that shore
But dream of brighter far away.

And o'er that tide
Far out and wide
The yearnings of our souls do stray;
We long to go,
We do not know
Where it may be but far away.

The mighty deep
Doth slowly creep
Up on the shore where we did play;
The very sand
Where we did stand
A moment since, swept far away.

Our playmates all
Beyond our call
Are passing hence as we too may;
Unto that shore
Of evermore,
Beyond the boundless far away.

We'll trust the wave,
And him to save
Beneath whose feet as marble lay
The rolling deep,
For he can keep
Our souls in that dim far away.

THE DETECTIVE IN AMERICA.

Being off duty for a time, and the evening close and sultry, I was just settling myself in the open window of my lodgings, to smoke a quiet pipe, when another member of the force came to tell me that I was wanted by the superintendent. I went at once as required.

"Banks," said the superintendent to me, when I was in his room, and the door shut, "I have got a clue at last towards finding that man Jennings."

"Indeed, sir, I am glad to hear you say so," answered I, and I spoke the truth. Uncommonly glad I was, for our profession, like the rest, has its pride about it, and we had been a good deal twitted in the newspapers for not having succeeded during seven months of fruitless search, in securing that particular criminal. A shy bird was that Jennings. His doubts and twists had baffled some of the deepest heads in the police, and although we had often come upon his hiding place just after he had left it, we never could lay hands on him. He was not a common offender. Well educated, and born in a very respectable station of life, he might have done well, and made an honest fortune, if he could have but kept straight. He was clever, and a first rate accountant, and got the post of cashier to the Bank while still quite a young man. I need hardly repeat his story—how he forged and altered figures in pass books, and played ducks and drakes with the floating balance of his employers. It is a common narrative. He went off at last, just when detection grew certain, and carried with him nineteen thousand pounds, besides valuable papers and securities for a large amount. Every exertion was made, no expense was spared, and many times we seemed sure of him as he prowled up and down the country in various disguises, but at last the scent grew colder and colder, and we feared Jennings had given us the slip for good and all. Five months had elapsed since he had been seen or heard of, and we had given up the job as hopeless, when the superintendent sent for me, and gave me the above information.

"Yes," said my superior, rubbing his hands together as was his way when he was thoughtful, we have got a clue to him at last. But he is a long way off—out of our reach, perhaps. He is in America.

This did not surprise me in the least.

The number of rogues that I have had, professionally, to hunt down, and who were on their way to America, or starting to go to America, would astonish you. Why when we hear of a runaway criminal, the first thing that comes into our heads is Liverpool and the line of packets.

"Banks," went on the superintendent, "I intend to send you after him. But I doubt very much whether you will be able to track him out, much less to bring him and the property back to England with you."

"I've very little to fear about the matter, if I can but come up with him. I answered cheerfully enough; for you see, during the seven years I had been in my present department of the force, I had been on similar errands three times—twice to America, and once to France—and had been successful on all occasions. Not that I am a bit more expert than my comrades, nor perhaps equal to some that I could name, but that an offender can generally be traced out, if a man will give his whole heart to the work.

"Yes," said the superintendent, "but I need not tell you that this Jennings is a slippery customer, and too wide awake to fall into the errors of ordinary scoundrels. You won't find him drinking at the bar of a Bowery tavern, nor yet lodging at a water side hotel in New York. You took your first man in New York that way, did you not, Banks?"

"Yes, sir," I replied.

"And your second at Philadelphia, where you had an easy bargain of him. But this is a different matter. Jennings has gone South Banks."

"I am ready to follow him, sir," said I.—So, after some more necessary talk, the superintendent gave me the information that had come to the ears of the government, and my instructions, and money to defray expenses, besides telling me where and how to draw for more, and handing me a warrant to apprehend the body of Caleb Jennings, properly signed by the secretary of state. One more help was afforded me—a photographic portrait of the runaway, which had been procured with difficulty, and only a very little while before, from the artist who had taken his likeness, and who had kept a copy, as usual. Perhaps if we had had that photograph to have assisted us half a year back, we might have circumvented him, for we heard afterwards, that he had twice seen and spoken with our officers, who took him for somebody else.

"Well, good-luck to you, Banks," said the superintendent at parting; "and if you wanted, which I don't believe, any further inducement to do your best in forwarding this important capture, I am in a position to supply it. The commissioner especially selected you for this duty; adding that in the event of success, you might expect your immediate promotion to be inspector. Now good-bye, and don't fail to bring Jennings back with you."

So I went. I did not disguise from myself as I steamed pleasantly over to New York, that a difficult business lay before me. My two former trips across the Atlantic, although they had only given me a sight of two or three important Northern cities, had taught me that America had differed from England by long chalk; and that there was still less likeness between North and South than between the Old Country and the New. I cannot pretend to much book-knowledge, although I improve my mind when I have a chance; but I had talked Americans a good deal, and read many of their newspapers, and kept eyes and ears open; but I knew pretty well, that, down South, the law was less respected than elsewhere, that duels and street rows, and stabbings, and gougings, and shootings, were only too plenty, and human life valued at a very low figure; and that shows the cunning of Jennings in taking his precious self and his ill-gotten cash down South, instead of staying, as all the uneducated scamps did, among the whiskey shops and fourth rate boarding houses of the seaports. He knew, Jennings did, how much tougher would be the work of any offender to ferrit him out, and bring him back, if he were to put thousands of miles of rail and river, and unhealthy climate, and lawless places, betwixt him and the usual landing place of passengers from England. Besides, in the Slave States, where people's tempers are hot and peppery, the odds were fifty to one that a Britisher would never be suffered to make a capture. It would be represented as an insult to the Stars, and I should be likely to get a leaden pill administered to me by some native boon companion of the forger. I did not lose heart when I thought over all this, but I determined I would be cautious, and not burn my fingers if I could help it. I went from New York to Norfolk in Virginia, not that it was believed the man was there, because he had been heard of in Nashville, Tennessee, at a later date, but because it was best to track him regularly, and take up every scrap of information against a rainy day. This is indeed a maxim of my profession, never to neglect trifles. Nothing is a trifle to those who have patience and wit to use it. I have known an old button, a torn envelope, a worn out slipper, serve to bring a rogue to justice when all else has failed.

From Norfolk, having picked up what little I could, I went on into Tennessee, to Nashville town. Well, Jennings had been there. Not under his own name; he was not such a greenhorn as that. At Norfolk he had been Mr. Smith; and at Nashville he called himself Captain Williams. These changes of name would have thrown me clear of the scene, but for the portrait. I showed the photograph to a negro waiter at one of the principal hotels, and says he: "Dat Massa Cap. Williams." The black remembered William, or rather Jennings, because he had won a lot of dollars at billiards, and checked Pompey a five dollar piece out of his winnings. But though I heard of his destination, and made out that he had gone west to Riddle Rock, in Arkansas State, I was six days in Little Rock before I could hear the last word of news about him; and as I do not want to make myself a cleverer person than I am, nor a more knowing one, I freely own that I found myself thoroughly out of my estimate of the difficulties of my search. You see, I had heard the Yankees were very inquisitive, never at rest till they had scoured out a stranger's business; and quite true, so they are; but they forget almost as quick as they learn, seeing they have no real interest in the matter, but just ask questions because it is their habit, and talk they must. So it came about, that when in an American city or village, I went high and low to trace out my shy customer, the work was like hunting for a needle in a haystack.

Often and often did I sigh to be in one of those nice little market-towns at home in England, where the dogs sleep all day on the pavement, and the tradesmen look at one another over the half-doors of their shops. Those are the places in which to inquire about a man in hiding. A stranger can't go into them without setting fifty tongues gossiping; housemaids cleaning doorsteps, old ladies, boys and men lounging at corners, all remarking the strange face. But in America, with all the curiosity of the people, so many thousand queer persons come and go, that they pass out of sight and out of memory at once; and especially is this the case, in the West and South, and a pretty source of trouble it proved to me.

So I staid in Little Rock, and then, after all, it was the stoker of a steamboat from whom I gleaned fresh news.—This man had come up from the river-side to see his sweetheart, and he reported Jennings to be living under his own name at Memphis in the Columbian Hotel. I suppose the rascal thought, after taking so many aliases, his own name was as safe as another for a bit. However, quick as I was in hurrying to Memphis, I found that Mr. Jennings was gone; indeed, the landlord had forgotten his personal appearance, and could only say that he was tallish and dark, which he was; but as for his being the original of the portrait, that he couldn't say, nor could the waiters, though the bar-keeper was ready to swear to it.

Old I went, right up the river to Cincinnati, in pursuit of that Mr. Jennings. At Cincinnati, I lost him again, then saw his name accidentally in the books of a steamboat officer; went after him to Chicago, and then to Buffalo, and then to London, Canada West; and the end of my wild goose chase was, that just as I felt secure of victory, I came up with this Mr. Jennings, but he was not my Jennings. He turned out to be a corn dealer, an honest townsman of London, second cashier, and no more like him than I was. Here was a blow to my hopes. I was fairly at my wit's end. I had to draw for money too, and had nothing to show for what I had spent, but the fact of my having travelled over an immensity of land and water. I declare I could have cried with vexation, as I turned from the corn dealer's door. Nor was my sorrow, I do assure you, all selfish. Of course, I knew my reputation was at stake, and my promotion to an inspector's top; but that was not all; we detectives have a real pride and pleasure in being in a sense, the protectors and helpers of the honest part of the community, and I hate rogues to get off scot-free—it does so encourage other rogues.

At New Orleans, I found a letter from the superintendent, bidding me to keep a good heart, and never slacken my endeavors; for the joint-stock company that had been defrauded were most anxious, and resolute to spend anything to effect the arrest of their treacherous servant. It was not merely out of revenge, nor yet for the nineteen thousand pounds, though that is a vast sum of money; but there were papers among those he had gone off with that had been merely deposited with the bank, title-deeds of estates, vouchers, and what not, and no coat was too great to get them back. The superintendent would send another officer to help me, if I chose. I didn't choose. After all the baffling and winding, thought I, I will run my fox to earth, if I grow gray in searching for him. If he's in America, I'll find him. Indeed I tried very hard to do so. I spent months in the chase, and to recount all my wanderings would be tedious. Here I got a clue, and I followed it for a time, and then it broke short off. At another place I would get a fancied inkling of my man's whereabouts, and find out somebody who was evidently in hiding, and get within arms' length of the person, and find him suspicious eyes blinking stranger. Bless you! Jennings was not the only rogue hiding in the South. And now New Orleans which had been deserted ever since summer had brought the yellow fever, began to be full to overflowing. I went there, now that the healthy cold wind—the norther, as they call it—had taken to blowing, and that people were crowding in for their winter's gaiety. I had a notion Jennings might be there; there were so many as bad as he, and worse, and I knew New Orleans attracted all the scamps of the county; but though I believe I went into every bar and billiard room, and cafe and gambling house in that profligate city, never a glimpse of Jennings could I get.—He had been a wild fellow in England—on the sly of course; for he was a finished hypocrite, as his masters had thought such a pious, modest, industrious young man didn't live as their model cashier. This was why I looked for him in the haunts of gay folks. But I did not see him, could not hear of him, and began to despair. I was at Vicksburg, on the Mississippi, by mere accident I had been up to St. Louis in consequence of quite false information, and on my return from that idle errand, the boat had run aground two miles above Vicksburg. Nobody was the worse except for the delay, and we all had to sleep at that place as best as we might. Knowing the tastes of Jennings, I always went to flash first chop hotels, as the likeliest wherein to hear of him but on this day I found the chief establishments crowded and went to a decayed, second-rate hotel kept by a snuffy old French creole. It was evening, and though the Americans called it cool, I found it warm enough to make it pleasant to sit by an open window of the big dining saloon, where I could enjoy my brandy and cigar in peace.

Most luckily, there was a big screen of stamped and gilded Spanish leather which cut my slice of the room off from the rest, and shut me up as completely as if I had been in a box of one of our own old taverns in the city of London. I had got but half way through my glass of delicious iced beverage—and why they are not as common at home I do not know—when in came two young men, and sat down at a distant table and called for refreshments, which a black waiter brought them. I took a peep at them through a crack in the screen. I had never seen them before. But what they said, I guessed them to be overseers of plantations somewhere up the country; or one might have been an overseer, and the other a book keeper. Believing themselves to be alone, they began to talk very freely. They talked of New Orleans, and gambling, and duels and conquests over the fair sex, and the like profitable discourses, and then of negroes crops and cotton, till I nearly dropped asleep. And yet I listened. You see I made it my duty to listen, for, who knows! queer things do come out sometimes. At last one young fellow began to rally the other about his being "smitten" with Miss Linwood, the daughter of a planter, which the other laughingly denied. "Kate Linwood is pretty enough," said he; "but if little Kitty cares far anybody it's Hervey Vaughan."

"What! that naval fellow—second lieutenant of the Vespucci frigate, ain't he?" yawned the other.

"Yes," said the overseer. "A good-looking chap enough, and no nonsense about him; but he'll find himself cut out when he returns from his cruise. Old Linwood swears his daughter shall take that new overseer of his, for better for worse, though the girl hates the skunk; and quite right too."

"Is that the fellow," asked the other, "that Linwood hired when Bill Brown cut the place?"

"The identical individual," was the answer.

"He's flush of the rhine, it seems, and has lent Old Linwood no end of dollars on mortgage. A precious ass he must be, for the Lesmoines plantation is worn out, and every nigger worth a cent has been sold at New Orleans. But perhaps the scamp did it to buy pretty Kate."

"What's his name. A Canadian, ain't he?"

"He says his name's Duff, and he hails from Canada; but to my mind, he has the cut of a Brifeler born—a dark, slim chap, that shows, his teeth, when he smiles, in the funniest way possible, just like a dog grinning."

"By Jove," thought I, "that's my man!" Of the importance of my recent discovery, I had very little doubt. To be sure, it might turn out to be moonshine, like the story of the Canada corn dealer, who had led me such a dance through the Northwest; but I felt pretty sure that this Duff, this rich overseer, was no other than the runaway cashier. And very sharp of Jennings too, very sharp and clever; to adopt a regular calling, and a calling so popular in the South as that of overseer, was a stroke of which a great many poor roustages would have been incapable. But to get a hold on this insolvent employer, marry the daughter of the house and become a land-holder in due time, allied to a respectable family—that was about the most prudent thing he could have done. How could he guess I should ever be sitting in the hotel at Vicksburg, listening to the talk of those two lads! It was by mere accident the boat grounded; by mere accident that the other houses were full, and yet see how it checked all his excellent precautions!

When the young men were gone, I slipped out, and made inquiries, in a guarded way, about the Lesmoines plantation and Mr. Linwood. First, one couldn't tell me; then another thought the estate was down stream a hundred miles; next, I was roundly asked what I wanted to know for, and whether I was a tarnation thief of an Abolition spy, wanting to steal away niggers. But I pretended I was travelling for a Manchester house, and had some book-debts to look up. I heard, at length, that the Lesmoines property lay back a little distance from the river, hard by a town called Princeton, which is built on the bank of the stream, just at the angle where three States meet. Those three States are Louisiana, Mississippi, and Arkansas. I darsay it pleased Jennings all the better on that account, increasing as it did his chance of escape.

JUNE IS THE TIME TO PRUNE FRUIT TREES.—I am aware at what a disadvantage I place myself when I attempt to controvert such authority, namely, Mr. Harry of Rochester, and Mr. Harris, editor of the Genesee Farmer, and would not put the case so strongly in opposition to common practice, had I not in every instance where I have induced any one to try pruning in June, succeeded in gaining their acknowledgment, that June is the time to prune fruit trees.

E. D. WRIGHT, in Genesee Farmer. Remarks.—We are glad to find some one occasionally, bold enough to denounce the ruthless practice of pruning fruit trees when the sap is in an active condition,—say from June 15 to the end of the month, or for a month after the leaves fall. There are physiological reasons for this which we have often referred to in these columns.—[N. E. Farmer.]

The drains of Paris are declared to be the most wonderful work of the kind ever executed. Hundreds of hollow tubes, each one a marvel of solidity and skill, run from every quarter of the town to one immense receptacle of the filth and waste water thus carried off. Before the mouth of this hideous reservoir is placed a grating through which the mass of infection pours night and day.—This grating is meant to prevent the passage of any object beyond a certain size, which might otherwise obstruct the tube. The police reports of the past year record the detection of more than ten thousand new born infants thrown at moment of birth into the drains, which had carried them to the horrid grating, there to leave them to be gathered as the most damning evidence of neglect and abandonment.

An easy method of computing interest at 6 per cent. has just been published: Multiply any given number of dollars by the number of days of interest desired, separate the right hand figure, and divide by six; the result is the true interest in cents of such sum for such number of days at six per cent.

BIRTH EXTRAORDINARY.—At 12 o'clock on Tuesday evening, Mrs. Kennaby, of No. 1, Vaughan Terrace, Shepherdess Walk, London, was safely delivered of four fine female infants, who together with their mother, are doing well. Mrs. Kennaby is in her 24th year.

The Round Table thinks a lady, at present prices, is a luxury too great for an ordinary man to contemplate; the figures attached plainly to her make-up and adornments would frighten any man who did not possess a printing press of his own that could turn out an unlimited number of green baizes. Let presents to a lady be characterized by taste—not remarkable for intrinsic value.

EUROPEAN INTELLIGENCE.

From late English papers. A large number of leading shipowners in Liverpool had memorialized Parliament in favor of an amendment to the foreign enlistment act...

The Daily News says the cotton question is becoming one of serious interest, as there is a general disposition to believe that the war in the United States is approaching to a final issue...

The Conference held a three hours' session on the 17th. All the members were present. The Daily News says they can hardly be said to have advanced a single step...

A so-called "cigar steamer" was being built on the Thames for Mr. Winans, and will be launched with her steam up and ready for sea...

The Danish advice continue to charge the Germans with plundering and confiscation after the armistice has been declared. The Danish fleet reached Copenhagen in an undamaged state.

Austria shows activity in naval matters. The Daily News suspects Russia's actions in the Conference, and suspects a holy alliance between Russia, Austria and Prussia.

The French Ministers of State had recently declared in the Chamber of Deputies that vessels suspected of being built for the Confederates would not be permitted to leave France until their destination was clearly established.

M. Rouher had also shown that the American government was not antagonistic to the Mexican question, and argued that on the contrary it was for the interest of America to see the government of Maximilian prosperously established.

La France denies the rumors of probable ministerial changes in France. The protracted trial of La Pommerais for poisoning, resulted in a verdict of guilty, and he has been sentenced to death.

Arrival of the "China." HALIFAX, June 6th, 1864. "China," Anderson, left Liverpool at 1 P. M., on 28th. Queenstown 29th, arrived at Halifax 5.30 P. M., on Sunday. She had 30 Halifax and 58 Boston passengers.

AMERICAN AFFAIRS. Times publishes a letter from correspondent at Richmond, dated April 21st, which says the Confederate Government had obtained most exact information of Federal plans for campaign in a dispatch written fortnight before Grant commenced his march.

DANO-GERMAN QUESTION. Conference would assemble day China left Liverpool. Morning Post says representatives will announce official opinions of their Governments on the proposed arrangements for subdivision of Schleswig, Northern portion being amalgamated with Denmark and Southern with Holstein.

Austria and Prussia were said to be in complete accord, and it was asserted by one of their organs that they contemplated resolution for the complete separation of the two Duchies from Denmark. Advances from Jutland recount very arbitrary proceedings by Prussians since conclusion of armistice.

battalion of Military Train, principally on account of heavy cost for hire of building accommodation for troops in Canada. Hankey inquired whether there was any foundation for published correspondence between Russell and Jeff. Davis.

FROM THE STATES. HANCOCK, June 4. Secretary Stanton telegraphs that despatches were received from Grant dated 3 o'clock Friday P. M. No operation took place on Thursday. Grant reports assaulting the enemy's lines yesterday morning, driving the enemy within entrenchments at all points, but without gaining any decisive advantage.

Another official report, from Grant, estimates the number of Federal killed and wounded at about three thousand. Baltimore American, in reference to the above attacks, has reported that it opened with the fiercest cannonading along the entire line.

The army is in the best condition and spirits well supplied and fully of confidence in Grant, declaring him to be the only man who has given them a chance to fight. Rumored capture of Furbush Lee was founded.

The Herald's correspondent with the James River fleet says a deserter from the Confederate ram "Richmond" states that Fort Darling mounts 50 guns and is considered impregnable to gunboats. Confederate ironclads are lying below the Fort, preparing to attack the Federal fleet with the aid of several fire ships and infernal machines.

Some details are given of enemy's assaults upon Warren and Hancock on Wednesday. The enemy left at his death and wounded in front of Warren. Gen. Hancock repulsed a similar attack in which the enemy's loss must have been from two thousand to three thousand. Federal loss about five hundred.

Official from Grant Saturday evening says that the enemy suddenly attacked Smith's Brigade of Gibbon's division, fight continuing half an hour. Attack unwaveringly repulsed. Wilson's cavalry came evening fell on Hittory's division, which was thrown round to his left, with apparent intention of enveloping it.

Loss in killed, wounded and missing during three days' operations around Cold Harbor, will not exceed 7,500. Official from Sherman reports his left wing around, covering all roads from South to Railroads about Ackworth. His cavalry has been in Ackworth and occupies all Altoona Passes.

DEFENCE OF RICHMOND. On the way from Carolina the roads were literally blocked with trains conveying troops and supplies, and on his arrival Richmond looked like a huge camp. The exultation over the Confederate successes in Florida, Texas and North Carolina was unabated, especially as it was declared that they would, in effect, place one hundred thousand men more at the disposal of Gen. Lee and his lieutenants for a space of at least six months, thus enabling him to swell his entire force in case of necessity to over 200,000, exclusive of the local garrison of Richmond.

Provisions of all durable kinds, arms and ammunition of the finest quality, and all conceivable appliances of war seemed to be on hand in the utmost profusion, and the fortifications would excite the wonder of even the great military powers of Europe. No less than seven belts of those in all directions or shells being so constructed as to serve the purpose of a mere decoy, involving terrible loss to the assailant before it should be abandoned, and greatly increasing his danger and embarrassment when once he should be within them.

Up to the day when our informant left Richmond, the stream of troops from the South still continued, and it was declared that by the middle of next week Lee would have been reinforced by 50,000 fresh troops for an advance, while a nearly equal number was concentrating on Butler with the anticipation of driving him to his gunboats before the next (past) week should pass.

Davis himself, who (by the way) has had far more to do with the great rebel plans of the war than is generally known, was to take care of Butler and Smith himself. In line, Monsieur D. is fully impressed with the belief from all that he saw and heard from those who had every chance to know, that the Rebels will make a superhuman resistance in Virginia; that Lee has even now at his disposal fully 170,000 men; that Davis and Beauregard will hurl 30,000 upon Butler, and that Johnston can, if needs be, part with 25,000 more, to reinforce them. The Richmond Examiner of May 24th says: "So far from losing ground Lee has gained manifest advantages by each change of lines. It is easier to defend that portion of his line which is near to Richmond than that which was far removed from it. He is far better situated now than at Spotsylvania Court House, and that was better than the Wilderness. The roads can no longer be severed with impunity. The difficulties under which he has labored are transferred to the score of the enemy. Perhaps a conviction that it would be so was the reason which made Grant prefer to encounter Lee in the Wilderness, instead of coming straight to Millford.

Considering the whole facts we think the time has come when Confederates may expect change of fortune. No reflecting man can doubt that the general situation is very much improved since the day when Grant crossed the Rapidan and Butler landed at Bermuda Hundred."

PROVINCIAL APPOINTMENTS.—Jas. R. Parley, Esq., to be a Member of Senate of the University of New Brunswick. John Thomas Allan, Esq., is approved and confirmed as Deputy Registrar for the County of Carleton; and S. H. Whitlock, Esq., is approved as Deputy Registrar for Charlotte County, during the absence of the Registrar, Harris H. Hatch, Esq.

Thomas Davis, Jr., to be Assistant to his father as Preventive Officer on the roads from St. Andrews and St. Stephen. THE STANDARD. ST. ANDREWS, JUNE 8, 1864.

THE ELECTION for the return of a representative in the room of Geo. S. Grimmer, Esq., who resigned on accepting the office of Clerk of the Peace of this County, will be held in July; the writ is believed, will be issued in a few days. The Writs for the counties of Queens and Carleton, have been received by the Sheriffs of those counties; the election in Carleton will be held on the 23rd instant; as yet only one candidate has published his card, Mr. D. N. Raymond. It is unnecessary to say anything with reference to candidates in this county, as we are assured the minds of the electors are already made up, as to who is to be the "coming man." This will account for the political calm, which has been apparent for some time.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—A young lad named Luke Norton, while fishing off the Railway bridge, at McAdam brook, on the evening of the 1st instant, accidentally fell off and was drowned. At supper time his father called him, and not hearing a reply, proceeded to the bridge, when melancholy to state, his body was discovered lying on the bottom of the brook. It was immediately brought on shore, and although but twenty minutes had elapsed from the time he was passed by his father, life was extinct. He was ten years of age, an industrious boy and a dutiful son. The remains were brought to town on Friday last, and interred in the Roman Catholic burying ground.

The steamer Queen, we notice is largely patronized this season, if we may judge from the large quantities of freight and number of passengers; this is no doubt owing to the excellent management of her obliging and gentlemanly commander, Capt. Tom, who is deservedly a favorite with the travelling public. His courtesy and attention to passengers, punctual trips, and devotion to the interests of his employes, have made him one of the most popular steamboat captains ever on this river.

The St. John TELEGRAPH is now issued as a daily morning paper, and is shortly to be enlarged. The energy, enterprise, and ability displayed by its proprietor, are deserving not only of commendation, but something more tangible—of extensive patronage. No one unless a publisher knows the difficulties which beset the starting of a paper, in a city already well supplied with able journals, with, it is presumed, a large circulation and advertising patronage; but the proprietor of the "Telegraph," nothing daunted, launched his barque on the sea of newspaperdom, and it was after a fair trial, ranked a 1—at the bar of public opinion—and ere two years have elapsed, it is found necessary to increase its size and issue it daily. This is sure evidence of its prosperity; and we trust its enterprising proprietor may reap a still larger harvest. In wishing it success, we do not disparage the efforts of other city exchanges whose proprietors we know personally, but our contemporary the editor in chief of the Telegraph we have never met, but hope ere long to do so, and in the meantime, wish him that success which he deserves.

LATEST NEWS. Our thanks are due to Mr. W. F. Alexander of Turner's Express, for late Boston papers. The Boston Courier of Monday, says: "An analysis of the despatches in regard to the fighting on Friday shows no change of affairs. After the severe battle of that morning, it appears that the Confederates were in condition to renew the contest, at several points, on the same evening. Indeed, Gen. Grant's despatch states that no decisive advantage was gained in the morning. In the evening, the assault was repulsed, but it seems that Hancock, having pursued the rebels, was in turn compelled to make a hasty retreat to his first position. We throw out of the question the poetical speculations of newspaper correspondents, who are scarcely qualified to state anything definite, at the moment, except what takes place in their immediate vicinity. Results are ascertained by reports made at head quarters, coming from many points. Our losses in the engagements have been large—7,500,—though spoken of in the despatches with singular coolness; and in officers particularly heavy.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Major General John C. Fremont has resigned his major generalship, and his resignation has been accepted. A letter to the St. Louis Republican, dated at Keesa, Georgia, May 27, states that the rebel Gen. Wheeler made a descent upon one of our trains at Cass Station, six miles below Kingston, on the evening of the 24th, and destroyed seventy wagons and captured a large number of mules.

BANGOR, June 7. Secretary Stanton telegraphs Dix, that advices had been received from Grant's head quarters yesterday at noon, but report only certain changes in position of corps and contemplated operations. Everything getting on well. Chief Quartermaster reports department in most efficient state at White House; all needed supplies on hand, and wagon transport them easily to army; wounded being brought in and transports not delayed a moment. Sherman telegraphs yesterday at noon, "I am on railroad at Ackworth, and have full possession of it within six miles of Mastrita. All well."

Flour 5 cents higher. Gold 1/4. N. B. & C. RAILWAY.—The following are the traffic receipts for the month ending May 28, 1864, compared with the corresponding month last year:

Table with 3 columns: Item, 1864, 1863. Passengers, $ 579.81, 487.31. Freight, 4171.07, 3851.32. Totals, $4750.88, $4338.63. In excess 1864, $412.25.

Mr. Maudsley, the celebrated engineer and constructor of vessels of war for the British Government, died last month at his estate near London, aged seventy-two years. He was for many years the senior partner in the wealthy and extensive firm of Maudsley, Field & Sons, and father of Henry Maudsley Esq. who is well known to most of our inhabitants—having sojourned here for several months two years ago. He is now well understood the senior partner of the firm, one of the largest in England.

James G. Stevens, Esq., has clipped from 12 of his sheep, 101 lbs. clean washed wool; the heaviest fleeces weighed 12 1/2 lbs; the lightest 8 lbs.

H. H. Hatch, Esq., and Mrs. Hatch, left here for England on Monday last. Lieut. Street who has been here on a visit to his family, has also proceeded to England to join his regiment which is ordered to India.

A kind of canker worm has made sad acquaintance with the gooseberry bushes, and caterpillars with fruit trees in this vicinity. The bushes are denuded of their leaves.

ITEMS. We learn that at the late University examinations, Mr. William H. Tilley, of Fredericton, obtained the senior class Mathematical Scholarship; that Mr. C. W. Colter, of Douglas, obtained the junior Classical Scholarship; and that Mr. James Mitchell of the same place, obtained the Freshman class Scholarship for the English Language and Literature. Mr. James Phinney of Richibucto, obtained the Douglas Gold Medal.

A new Military Engine has been received from England at this garrison. On being tested by a company of the men, she worked admirably, giving entire satisfaction to all parties. As we have always received important assistance at fires from this source, the citizens as well as the military may congratulate themselves on the new importation. [Fredericton Reporter.]

The Rothschilds have made arrangements to purchase all the Italian railways. The Queen has contributed £50 to the fund for the erection of a statue of Edmund Burke in Dublin. Germanium leaves bruised and applied to cuts and other skin wounds, are said to possess great healing qualities, causing the wound to cicatrize in a very short time. It is calculated that the expenses of the Federal Government are thirty five dollars a second. [Remarking upon this the New York Herald says:—"If we do not finish the war this summer, the war will finish us."—The old Unitarian Church in San Francisco (Rev. Starr King's first church in California,) has been sold to a negro congregation. The Portland Argus says that a debtor bid good-bye to the jail in the city last week, where he had been confined for six years. His friend settled with the creditor. A large number of wounded Maine soldiers have arrived at their homes during the last few days—others are coming as they are able to be removed.

Practice of the Louisiana Journal, says: "Some of our military officers, if they ever have occasion for wooden legs, will, we presume, get curved ones. They so like to go on benders." The 17th Maine went into fight May 13th with 600 men. The Colonel was wounded, and at roll call on the 14th inst. only 140 reported for duty a Captain commanding the regiment.

Captain Speke speaks in his history of the source of the Nile expedition, of a tribe of Africans which he visited, who wore small stools affixed to their waists ready for sitting down. A most convenient custom this would be for those people who are always complaining of not being able to find a seat. Gen. Grant's younger brother, by invitation of the General, has arrived at Washington from Galena, to dine with him in Richmond.—[As Lee's prisoners.]

The First Maine Heavy Artillery lost inclusive of seventy-one killed, four hundred and eighty-six wounded in Thursday's fight. In this loss are included 4 officers. Capt. Z. A. Smith, Co. C, in this regiment was wounded slightly in the leg.

At the dress reform meeting in Washington the other day Mrs. H. C. Ingersoll of Bangor, moved the following resolution which was adopted by the meeting: Resolved, That while, as the wives and daughters and women of America, we are ready and determined to practice self-denial for the benefit of the country and sex, we earnestly request the men of America also to abstain from the use of imported articles, especially wines, liquors and cigars. Will the "men of America" adopt it?

The Halifax Chronicle says the stockholders in the Oak Island speculation are in ecstasies of delight just now, in consequence of their chief engineer having returned to the city from the scene of operations, and reported that they have discovered the "drain" which leads the water from the sea into the "money pit." The operatives are quite sanguine that they will "strike" the "treasure" in course of a few days.

There is now in operation at the Electric Telegraph Company's offices, London, an instrument which, from its ingenuity of construction and perfection of results, deserves attention. The object is to transmit autograph messages in the exact form in which they are written; and the most complicated figures, designs, sketches, or indeed anything that can be drawn by an ordinary pen, are transmitted as readily as the simplest dot or stroke.

Among certain articles dug up at Yorktown, Va., by Northern soldiers, last winter, says the Hartford Times, was a small red stone, which, upon cleaning, proved to be a garnet; and a further inspection revealed the interesting fact that it had once formed a part of the signet-ring of the Marquis de Rochambeau, the liberty-loving commander of the French army in this country, who acted in concert with Washington in plans which won for us the battle of Yorktown.—It contains the noble Count's motto in Latin, and his family crest.

R. R. R. Diphtheria, Sore Throat, Influenza, Croup, Hoarseness, Difficult Breathing, Bad Cough, Colds, Pain in the Back, Loins, Spine, Tooth-ache, Ear-ache, Rheumatism, Lumbago. If seized with either of these maladies, use Radway's Ready Relief. It will stop pain as soon as applied. Let none fail to use it, it will afford immediate ease, break up the disease, and may prevent a serious illness.

DOCTOR, WILL MY CHILD LIVE? Asked an anxious mother of her physician:—"Madam," replied the Doctor, "all that science can suggest have been applied, I can do no more." At this instant Mrs. Cummings, a well known nurse, entered the sick chamber, and overhearing the Doctor's reply, said, "Have you tried Radway's Ready Relief?" "No," replied the Doctor, "it is a quack nostrum." "A quack nostrum," indignantly retorted Mrs. C., "and yet, Doctor, this simple remedy will cure this child, that you give up hopes of recovery. I know its virtues, and will stake my life on its curing the child." "Madam," replied the Doctor, turning to the mother, "if you suffer the woman to interfere with my treatment, you and she must bear the responsibility." Mrs. C. however applied the Ready Relief to the throat of the apparent dying child, who was suffering from DYPHTHERIA, and in a few minutes the child was safe. Had the Doctor's advice been followed, the child would have died. Let every mother keep Radway's Ready Relief in the house. Sold by Druggists.

Poetry.

THE ENGLISHMAN BY CHARLES MACKAY

I've sailed on the sea from the North to the South, the I've seen mankind both ways And loved them whosoever But never found on any ground From Erin, eastward to J. From Hudson's Bay, to Parr The equal of the Englishman The Englishman, the Englishman, the Englishman.

He leans himself with heart His love is warm, his hate And when he fights, beware If principles or acts are at Fall from foes, he aims no blow But strives to lift them if He seems to wreak upon the vengeance of an Englishman, the Englishman, the Englishman.

What'er the purpose of his He'll do it if his life allow Nor will he from his word Who finds him e'er draw On all that's just he builds On all that's base he hurls And induces bright, his heart He loves you like an Englishman, the Englishman, the Englishman.

In work he labors with a will In play is playful as a child And if the wild winds whistle He bears misfortune undisturbed On all that's good of mother earth You find his mark, you find Though some may fear, and yet None despise the Englishman, the Englishman, the Englishman.

The upright, downrig The ready, steady Eng In work he labors with a will In play is playful as a child And if the wild winds whistle He bears misfortune undisturbed On all that's good of mother earth You find his mark, you find Though some may fear, and yet None despise the Englishman, the Englishman, the Englishman.

THE DETECTIVE IN [CONCLUDED.] I lost no time in going up and there I put up a little kept by a Swiss, and where I lodged. Hitherto, I had in the printed calico line, but being a different sort. Having my time as a bell-hanger, in a years before I entered the trade again. I bought tools at Vicksburg, second hand, and every thing bran new, were a sham-stitch. A little coal dust on my hands and really made up the classic though my old master would see me in a shabby suit of swallow tailed coat, cut for and a black stock, but this I shion. I gave myself out seeking employment, and w twelvemonth at New Orleans sell off for a Yankee. I have everything bran new, were a sham-stitch.
