AITKEN—HOWARTH.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Howarth, Lorne Crescent, was the scene of a very pretty house wedding this afternoon at 3.30 o'clock p.m. when their daughter, Margaret was united in marriage to Mr. Alexander William Aitken of this city.

The bride who was given away by her father, looked very dainty in a gown of white silk crepe de chene, with point lace and pearl trimmings and veil in mob cap effect, with a wreath of orange blossoms. The couple were unattended.

The Rev. J. W. Gordon of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church officiated in the marriage.

Only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties were present.

The happy couple left for points west, the bride travelling in a navy blue suit with hat to match and mink fur, on their return they will reside in this city.

LITTLE DARLING LITTLE DAISY

The Softest, Finest, Most Durable Hosiery for Infants and Children

We cannot speak too highly of the absolutely unequalled quality of "LITTLE DARLING" and "LITTLE DAISY" Hosiery for infants and children—nothing but the softest, strongest Australian Lamb's wool.

We could not put better quality of material or workmanship into "LITTLE DARLING" and "LITTLE DAISY" Hosiery if we sold them for five times the price. It is impossible to make a better child's or infant's stocking, and the price is no more but even less than you will pay for inferior hosiery.

You of course wish to buy only the warmest, softest hosiery for your children—and when that hosiery is also the strongest, the most durable, and costs no more than inferior kinds, you will find that you can not only gratify that wish, but save money on this important item of children's dress.

"Little Darling" and "Little Daisy" Stockings are dyed with fast sanitary dyes in the colors best suited for children—Pink, Sky-Blue, Cardinal, Black, Tan and Cream.

Every pair is stamped with the Sunshine trade mark—insist on seeing it.

"Little Darling" Stockings have a silken heel and toe and are made in all sizes for children up to seven years old.

"Little Daisy" Hosiery has the heel and toe reinforced with an extra thread, in all sizes 1.0 children under twelve. Your dealer carries them.

Man Who Has Been Advising Lloyd George on Land Reform Tells How Deplorable Conditions in England Have Nearly Wrecked the Country

Mr. B. Seebohm Rowntree has won a high reputation as a social investigator, and it is an open secret that he is advising Mr. Lloyd George with regard to the land campaign.

Mr. Rowntree defines his ideal for rural betterment in an interesting article in the Manchester Guardian, which published a most excellent supplement on the topics discussed at the Church Congress.

The Ideal and the Real
His ideal is that the land should provide for the largest possible number of people the means of living a healthy and wholesome life free from servile dependence on others, and with adequate opportunities of advancement for all who are capable of taking advantage of them.

The Laborer's Wage
The number of agricultural laborers in England and Wales is about $4,000, and they are thus by far the largest class among the males engaged in agriculture, twice as numerous as farmers and small holders put together. We will confine ourselves to those whose ages are between twenty and sixty-five years. In 1901 they numbered 457,693, and of these 59 per cent. were ordinary laborers and at per cent. men in charge of animals. The 1911 census figures are not yet available, but it is unlikely that they will differ widely from those of 1901. According to board of trade returns, it would appear that in 1907 12-1-2 per cent. of the ordinary laborers lived in counties where the average wage was under 16s. and 18s., and only 41-2 per cent. lived in counties where it exceeded 18s.

Wages for Efficiency
It is important to note that the wage-figures given above include all extras and perquisites of whatever kind, whether free cottage, or milk, or potatoes, or potato-patch, or free leading of coal and all extra payments for harvest and hay time. The wages of men in charge of animals average about 6d. a week higher, but their hours are considerably longer, and the extra wage is really nothing more than payment for overtime. In order to enable us to grasp the exact meaning of these figures let us compare them with the wage necessary to maintain a family of average size in a state of physical efficiency. At present prices it takes 20s. 6d. a week to maintain a family of average size (two adults and three children) paying 2s. a week for rent, in a state of physical efficiency. This allows for a dietary approximately equal in quantity to that provided in English workhouses, but less attractive in quality. It allows not a farthing in the course of the whole year for luxury of any kind, or for any expenditure that is not absolutely necessary for the maintenance of mere physical efficiency—not a halfpenny for a newspaper, nothing for stamps, or travelling, or finery, or toys, or church collections.

Inadequate Wages
Accepting this figure, it will be seen that almost all the ordinary agricultural workers in England and Wales live in counties where the average wage is below the efficiency minimum. The great bulk of ordinary agricultural laborers are in receipt of wages which unless supplemented in one way or another, are inadequate to maintain a family of average size in a state of mere physical efficiency. If an agricultural laborer works in a garden or allotment for which, either directly or indirectly, he has paid rent, the produce of his labor should be considered by his employer as entirely independent of his wages. It must further be remembered that during summer most ordinary laborers work at least 10 or 12 and a half hours a day and when in charge of animals an hour and a half more than this. A man who has done this has not much energy left to continue the same kind of work in his spare time.

No Young Times
In the same way I think we have no right to consider the earnings of wife or children. A woman who is attending to her house and family ought not to have to go out to work—she needs all her energy for house work and for child-bearing, and the children need all their energy for school and play. Charles Lamb once remarked that the children of the poor have no young times; and Dr. Adkins, a county medical officer of health, is stated in a White Paper just published by the Home Office to have said that children cannot do both things—school and work. If you are going to improve the race you must either stop the labor they do or stop the schooling. They cannot do both; their little bodies will not stand the strain of education and the work.

Very Bad Indeed
There is no getting over the fact that in the low-paid counties in the South of England the lot of the agricultural laborers is not only bad, but very bad indeed. And this is the more serious because, while in many Continental countries the time which a man passes as an agricultural laborer is only a phase of his life, and the great majority of the men, expect sooner or later to become independent small holders in England, the vast majority of agricultural laborers who remain in the country never become independent at all.

Very Bad Indeed
There is no getting over the fact that in the low-paid counties in the South of England the lot of the agricultural laborers is not only bad, but very bad indeed. And this is the more serious because, while in many Continental countries the time which a man passes as an agricultural laborer is only a phase of his life, and the great majority of the men, expect sooner or later to become independent small holders in England, the vast majority of agricultural laborers who remain in the country never become independent at all.

How to Better Conditions
How can his condition be bettered? Firstly he must, in lower-paid counties, receive a large addition to his wage. Farmers may be inclined to say that they cannot afford to pay this because the labor is of such poor quality. But is it not poor because the pay is so small? Somehow this vicious circle must be broken. Low paid labor is seldom cheap. It is bad for the wage-payer and supremely bad for the nation. If the farmers in the North of England can afford 22s. 6d. for laborers, and the farmers in Scotland 25s., why cannot the farmers in the South, where land is just as good and rents no higher, afford the same wage? If, however, they can readily show that they cannot afford to pay the wages, then does it not follow that the landlord must lower the rents? Is not the payment of a living wage the first charge upon every industry?

The Cash Intrigue

By George Randolph Chester

(Copyright, 1909, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

"I know," granted Rollins; "but even so, I have been compelled for political reasons to give rebates which I had sworn I would never give. I have been compelled for political purposes to make concessions which I had sworn I would never make."

"You're the most persistent chap," complained Kelvin. "When we have a congress and a senate of our own choice we can carry out all the Utopian plans of both Breed and ourselves. These concessions that you are making are only investments, as Breed would say."

Rollins looked up curiously. "I don't quite understand Breed," said he. "He seems at times to possess all his old shrewdness, but at other times to be involved in a maze of mystification. Kelvin roared. "He's spending too much time with his Bible," he declared. "He's intemperate with it."

Kelvin, returning shortly after midnight from his evening with Henssler, went directly to his own sleeping apartment, which was at the extreme end of his suit. Sam, crouching on the floor in the corner with pillows and cushions at his back, opened his coal black eyes unblinkingly, passing instantly from profound sleep to alert wakefulness. Kelvin having by this time sat down, Sam removed his master's shoes and placed comfortable slippers on his feet. While he was at work he looked up with a sudden shrill chuckle and a grin so wide that it broke into queer curves the long, straight scar on his cheek.

"What are you laughing at, Sam?" asked Phillip.
 "Oh, jes' nothin'," declared Sam, and chuckled still more.
 "I bet you are thinking of Lucy," charged Phillip.
 "Ah reckon Ah am," confessed Sam, with a laugh that ended in a shrill falsetto. "Lucy an' sump'n' else."
 "Something else, eh? What is it?"
 "Ah ain' done s'pose to tell," giggled Sam. "Got t' have a secret once in awhile, boss."

Sam busied himself about the remaining preparations for Kelvin's retiring and while he did so gave vent to occasional chuckles, to which, however, Kelvin paid but little attention, for already he was immersed in the vast gilded halls of the future which was his one habitual dissipation before retiring, and he scarcely realized when Sam had departed for the night so occupied was he with his boundless enterprises and ambitions. Olympus! With that thought alone, would he be content, and he had no bodily or spiritual, mental or moral clog to weight him down.

CHAPTER XVII.

A TOUCH of bright color and a glittering eye were visible now in the crack of the door. The apparition which confronted him proved to be Lillian Breed, slender but exquisitely rounded in the silk kimono which revealed her white throat and her shapely forearms, warm against the soft crimson fabric. Her dainty feet were incased in fur edged slippers of red felt. Her hair and her eyes seemed blacker than ever. Her face, a perfect oval, was warmed by the rich color of abundant blood. Her pointed chin was dimpled, and her scarlet lips were curved in a smile, half of mischief and half of delight.

"Lillian!" gasped Kelvin.
 Her eyes sparkling, she put her fingers upon her lips and noiselessly closed her own door, then Phillip's, behind her, then advanced to him with outstretched hands. He took them in his own as a matter of course, but held her at arm's length.

"What are you doing here?" he demanded. "Have you gone mad?"
 "Not at all," she laughed gaily. "I'm quite sane and sensible, thank you. It was lonesome at Forest Lakes, so I brought Mrs. Rensselaer up to chapel me for a week's shopping, and just now, after making sure that you would be quite alone for the rest of the evening, I have merely dropped in to have a chat with my old friend."

"Mrs. Rensselaer? Where is she?" asked Phillip.
 "Sound asleep and snoring in her own apartment, which is on the other side of mine, with the bathroom between and my door locked. I attended to that all right, you may be sure. You don't seem at all glad to see me, though," she pouted with much coquetry.

"I'm not," answered Phillip, pushing her away almost roughly. "This is the utmost folly. You must return to your own room, and in the morning you must move to some other floor or I shall. No; you must go to some other hotel."

"I shan't move from the hotel," she said, looking up into his eyes and laughing as she shook her head. "I shan't move from these apartments. I shan't move from this room even until I get ready to go. Phillip, I have been ordered around like a child ever since I can remember, and now I'm going to revolt. I'm going to have the things I want, right or wrong, and among them, I'm going to have you."

"Lillian!" he gasped and drew back from her. And yet he could not look down upon her flushed cheeks, upon her moist, red lips, upon the rounded column of her throat, with revolt.
 "You are a conqueror," Lillian went on, drawing closer. "Your hand is the hand of might, the hand that could grasp and wield with relentless power either sword or scepter. You do not know how I, too, love power and all that represents power. I love it so much that I could worship it even while it crushed and destroyed me. The very strength of these arms I want for mine."

Her own arm had slipped up and slid around his neck, and suddenly she had clasped both of them about him and clung to him. For a moment longer he resisted, and then he suddenly crushed her to him and raised kisses upon her smooth brow, her sliken eyelids, her burning cheeks, her soft lips.

Kelvin met Mrs. Rensselaer and Lillian at breakfast, and they talked of the opera and gowns, of automobiles and an international wedding. After breakfast he bought the political control of an entire state with the litigious clientage of a thousand miles of railroad. He met in the hall of his floor Elsie White, and whatever an gulch it gave his soul to meet now this girl who had loved him, and loved him yet, in all purity and tenderness he talked calmly with her, chatting pleasantly about her father's garden at Forest Lakes. He let a contract for $1,000,000 worth of grading and cement sidewalks. He saw Sam and Lucy laughing in the servants' elevator, understood Sam's hilarity of the night before and had an inkling of how his door had come to be unlocked. He went to the theater at night with Mrs. Rensselaer and Lillian, and after they had returned and Mrs. Rensselaer had retired a soft footed hallman listened to the low voices in Phillip's apartments and sent a cipher message to George Blagg, who was hollow eyed and pale with suffering—and murdered!

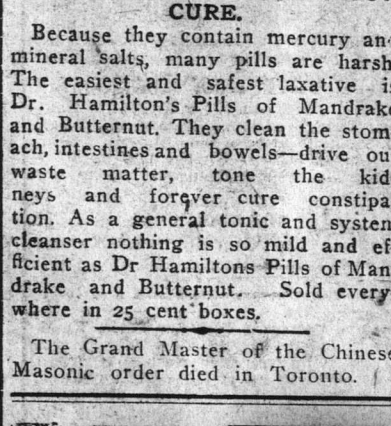

On the following day Phillip, alone with Sam in the wilderness of Long Island, was shot at. Recently had the revolver sounded when Sam, crouching low to the ground like an animal, and running with neck and head and gorilla-like arms outstretched, plunged into the woods. He was gone fully an hour and rejoined Phillip at the station. His eyes were bloodshot and he was panting, while his lips twitched back over his teeth now and then; but he was smiling. Phillip, studying his face curiously, asked him no questions, and Sam volunteered no information.

Presentation of the Brantford Courier

Willis J. Abbot, the versatile writer on International subjects and author of many books of history and travel, spent months in Panama and the Canal Zone in the preparation of this volume. He collected at first hand the complete history of the great Canal, with a wealth of historical data concerning Panama which has never before been written. The result is a human interest story of this beautiful land and its people from the early days when Columbus tried to find a natural waterway from the Atlantic to the Pacific, down to the present time.

Special staff photographers made the hundreds of beautiful views which illustrate practically every page of this exhaustive book.

The well-known artist, E. J. Read, made the sixteen sumptuous water-color studies which are reproduced by the latest color processes on specially made paper.

The Panama Canal, the greatest engineering achievement of the world's history, cost more than $400,000,000

It links the two greatest oceans, and becomes the most important factor in peace and war. So where is the red-blooded inhabitant of this globe that does not feel vitally interested in it! Truly it is the wonder of this progressive age!

PRISON FARMS SO NICE THAT SOME MEN COME RIGHT BACK TO THEM

OTTAWA, Nov. 19.—Next to a nice, quiet villa in the suburbs, situated on a nice, cheap, car line, one of the most pleasant places to live is an industrial farm, according to Rev. William Finlay, superintendent of the industrial farm in York county, which receives with welcoming arms Toronto's drunk and lecher, one of the police court. Rev. Mr. Finlay did not say this in so many words, when he lectured in the Y. M. C. A. hall last night, but he said many things about his own industrial farm that gave the clear impression that the farm was a very desirable place to live on.

Rev. Mr. Finlay is a humorist. He is a Presbyterian minister with the graceful rhetorical powers of a baseballer. He can describe a thurst.

Some Little Thirst.
 Here is Rev. Mr. Finlay's description of the thurst that belonged to one of his patients at the farm—a big Scot.

"A thurst that would make Jonah's whale look like a Finnian Haddie. That man hit the tank 15 years ago, and is going a mile a minute, with a thurst you couldn't buy."

"I have never been in a reformatory, and I have been in jail only a few times said the reverend gentleman. Two years ago, when the government first lifted its hand to start the industrial farm movement, I was a decent Presbyterian minister. Now, although I don't know much about industrial farms, I have had more experience with regard to them than any man in Canada."

This Presbyterian minister holds decided views on the subject of agriculture.

How to Build.
 "There's only one style of architecture worth anything," he declared; "the old square farm house with a hall—a big, seven-foot wide hall, with rooms on each side, two dining rooms at the back, the kitchen away at the back of that, and the bedrooms upstairs. That style of architecture has never been improved upon."

"And that is the sort of house that stands in the north of Toronto. Several other wooden buildings have been put up since the farm was started on May 5, 1912, and to-night 92 men are sleeping out at the farm."

The are well fed, are these men, who are fortunate enough to escape the jail for the healthier life of the farm. Here is a sample menu:

"Breakfast: Oatmeal porridge, milk, fried potatoes, eggs and bacon. Dinner: Soup—and it is soup," declared the superintendent. "A chef ought to get six months who serves soup on bread and water work."

"Supper: Fried potatoes, bread and something to take the place of meat."

No bread and water for the industrial farm hands. "Bread and water fare brings in bread and water work," declared the superintendent. And the penitents on the farm have to work to support the institution.

"Starvation and hair shirts may have been all right years ago," said Rev. Mr. Finlay, "but when a man has been on a five weeks' jail he doesn't know where he's at, and bread and water won't pull him round."

No Stripes There. And because they attain the dignity of useful workers they must wear workers' clothes. No stripes for them.

Rev. Mr. Finlay believes in what he calls the old system of the practice of medicine. Castor oil, "salts" and mustard plasters are his favorite remedies when the men claim to be sick.

"Where do you feel the pain," is the superintendent's first question. On hearing that the pain is located in the back of the head, the reverend gentleman mutters something about "not being able to afford to have typhoid fever, and pours a stiff dose of castor oil down the patient's throat. That and the free, open air life, keep the patients healthy."

"No first offender should ever go to jail," said Rev. Mr. Finlay, in describing the class of men to whom the farm would be of most benefit.

"There ought to be some way to get first offenders on an industrial farm. We can also deal with common drunks, and the world's common drunks, hide a multitude of other sins."

Only three men out of a hundred take it into their heads to run away from the farm, according to the superintendent, although opportunities are many.

Rev. Mr. Finlay declared that the inebriate, or "common drunk" was a result of absolutely willful civic neglect. He suggested that more supervision should be placed upon young boys to prevent their going astray.

Follow His Life.
 "You should not only register the birth of every child," declared the superintendent, "you should follow him all through life."

Dr. R. W. Bruce Smith, inspector of prisons, praised the industrial farm movement. He used the increasing number of commitments to prove the usefulness of the present prison system.

"The jail," he said, "is supposed to inculcate a wholesome respect for law and order, and a fear of punishment. It is supposed to be a salutary influence for good. Is it any of these things?"

"The torture idea of punishment has lingered too long," he went on in describing the changing attitude of society to the problem of crime and punishment.

The inmates of our prisons," said Dr. Smith, "are abnormal, as a result, directly or indirectly, of our social system."

"They are misfits. Being weaklings, they fall. Should you keep them locked up for that reason? I have yet to learn of any man being reformed by being committed."

Dr. Smith told of the case of an Ottawa man, 70 years old, who has been committed 90 times.

"A term on an industrial farm would have met his case," said the inspector.

There was great applause when Dr. Smith pointed out how the earnings of the men on the farms are paid over to their wives and children.

"No, they don't elope," said the inspector. "Every man is on his honor to help the farm."

"And if, after a man is discharged, he feels himself in danger of falling, he can come back to the farm, isn't that better than the ticket of leave system?" asked the doctor.

"Men do come back to the farm, instead of being discouraged by that damnable system of reporting to the police."

Dr. R. Archibald also addressed the meeting, presenting some interesting figures relating to the prison and industrial farm systems.

THE FAITHFUL ONE.
 "I will confess to you," she said, "that I am older than I look. I will be thirty-one my next birthday."

"Really?" he replied. "Hardly anyone would guess that you were more than about twenty-nine."

"That's the last time," she said when he had departed, "that I'll ever try to be nice to a brute."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Land of the Chrysanthemum

A Japanese Lady

NATURE has been kind to the "thousand Isles of the Rising Sun." She has arrayed them in a garb often strange, sometimes stern, but always fair. Whether they be judged by their coasts, their mountains, their rivers or their lakes, these islands of the Eastern Sea can hold their own with any of the countries of the West. The grand and the sublime are no less present than the simply beautiful, and an infinite variety comes in to complete the charm.

It has been the fashion of late to decry Japanese scenery on the score of littleness. "Pretty, but petty" is a common verdict; but it invariably proceeds from a superficial acquaintance with the country. Landscapes dominated by mountain-peaks 8,000 to 10,000 feet high cannot be dismissed as insignificant—even when, as frequently happens, they are robed in verdure to their summits. Intermingled here and there with granite giants of rugged form may be discerned the soft and billowy outlines of volcanic cones. With these also the suggestion of sublimity is not wanting. The most beautiful mountain in Japan—and perhaps in the world—was once the terror of the countryside. Fujiyama and Yariyama perfectly represent the two diverse types of scenic grandeur to be found in Japan; but even where Dal Nippon does not aspire to magnificence, she can boast the charm of novelty. There is nothing in any part of the world quite like the landscape known as the typically Japanese, which makes a peculiar but irresistible appeal to every lover of the picturesque. The traveller who sees the real Japanese is always pleased, but—unless he can repeat, or make perpetual, the new experience—he is never satisfied.

Times and Seasons.
The question is, "What is the best time to visit Japan?" has to be considered as much from the point of view of the visitor's intentions as from that of the climate. Late spring and early winter are usually recommended. People coming from temperate climes would find the heat of the "doyo," or Japanese dog-days, too trying if they purposed remaining in the vicinity of the treaty-ports and great cities. On the other hand, nothing could be more agreeable than to spend these same burning days in the mountain districts—three, four or five thousand feet above sea-level. But these very districts, with their romantic scenery and the precious boon of mineral springs, are for the most part inaccessible—or at any rate unpleasantly cold—in mid-April or November. Outside of them, Japan, essentially a land of flowers and foliage, looks her best in the first three weeks of April. "sakura" (cherry trees) are in full bloom, and "all the world" goes forth to see them. But the weather at this time of the year is sometimes the reverse of genial. The people of Tokyo, a few seasons ago, awakened one morning to find the cherry-blossoms weighed down with snow—a weird, if not pathetic, study in pink and white.

Without doubt, the season to be avoided is that known to the Japanese as the "nyubai," or rainy season, which prevails from the middle of June to the early part of July. This is of a peculiarly muggy and disagreeable description—alternately hot and cold, but always damp. In a normal year, however, these wet and misty weeks give place to a spell of brilliantly fine, hot weather, when all who can do so flee from the ports and plains to the cool, all-vegdant hills. Perhaps the most settled and generally agreeable season of the year is the latter part of October. Bright sunshine out of a clear sky atones for the inclosing days, and the crimson tints of the fading maple-leaf turn many a mountain-side into a blaze of vivid red.

A good many years ago, when Japan was slowly opening her gates to the West, there appeared a book entitled "Unbeaten Tracks in Japan." Those tracks are no longer "unbeaten"; but, from the standpoint of the traveller visiting Japan for the first time, they are none the worse for that. "Call nothing magnificent," says the Japanese, "till you have seen Nikko." Thousands of travellers from Sunset lands, arrested by the vision of the Sacred Bridge above the rushing Daluyagawa—a span of scarlet

In three weeks' time travellers can see a good deal of the Land of the Chrysanthemum. As to the best way of spending that time, if the visitor is specially interested in the arts and industries of Japan, he will prefer to spend it in the vicinity of Tokyo, Kyoto, Nara and Osaka. If, on the other hand, he desires to see as much of the country and its scenery as possible, he will leave the great cities for the picturesque interior. Much, again, depends upon the time of year. If it be April, the visitor has practically no choice. None of the mountain districts, with the possible exception of Nikko and Miyanoahita, is agreeable except in the summer months. The suggestions that follow will be found adaptable, with very little modification, to the requirements of the average visitor to Japan.

Starting from Yokohama, a day might be spent in visiting the great bronze Buddha (Daibutsu) at Kanamuro—much superior as a work of art to the somewhat larger image at Nara—proceeding thence by electric car along the coast to the pretty island of Enoshima. Two days will suffice for the sights of the capital, among which the shops of the Ginza, the popular resort of Asakusa with its temple and bazaars, and the Yoshiwara, or licensed quarter, are perhaps the most characteristic—though in early April, the banks of the Sumida (Mukojima) should not be omitted. From the northern station (Ueno) a journey of five hours brings one to Nikko (Kanaya Hotel) where a day may well be devoted to the magnificent shrines of the Shogun. Proceed by road to the Kegon waterfall (250 feet high), Chuzenji (Lakeside Hotel, four hours) and Yumoto (Nanmas Hotel, semi-foreign, two hours). Four days should be allowed for this district. Instead of returning to Tokyo the traveller, by changing at Utsunomiya and again at Omiya, could the same day reach a mountain resort of a very different type—bare, by comparison with Nikko's wealth of foliage, but much in favor among foreign residents in Japan. This is Karuizawa (Mampel and other hotels), whence the ascent of the great volcano of Asama (8,250 feet) may be made. Thirty miles to the north-by-road—horse-or-harshishina—lies the most remarkable of Japanese spas, Kusatsu (Shirane Hotel) where, in water containing free sulphuric acid and of a temperature of 135 degrees F., the bathers submit to a species of drill under a bath-master. The railway may be regained by crossing the grand Shibu-toge, a pass 7,900 feet high, to Shibu (Japanese Inns with hot springs) and Toyono (for Nagano).

From Nagano the traveller may return direct by way of Suwa Lake, Kofu and Hachioji to Yokohama, catching, en route, the neighborhood of Matsumoto, grand views of the sharp, snow-streaked summits of the Japanese Alps. Three or four days might then with advantage be devoted to the Hakone-Fuji district. On reaching Kobe, the old-world cities of Kyoto and Nara, with their numerous temples, flower-gardens and curio-stores, would amply occupy the balance of the traveller's time.

If arrangements have been made to rejoin the "Empress" at Naganaki, the traveller could, by breaking the railway journey at Miyajima, visit that sacred island, which is ranked by the Japanese as one of the "Sankei" or Three Beautiful Places of their beautiful land. Kyushu, the southernmost of the four main islands, offers as its chief attractions the great volcano of Aso (rail from Moji to Kumamoto) with the largest crater in the world, and the scene of frequent suicide; and, in the opposite direction, the solifatare district of Unzen. For either of these excursions, three days should be allowed.

lacier athwart the sombre green of the cryptomerias which overshadow the gorgeous Shogun tombs—have enthusiastically endorsed the native proverb, Nikko still is Nikko, and will be to the end of time. But, if summer has come, linger not by the scarlet bridge. Mount your horse and push on through crowds of big-hatted pilgrims to the famous brink from which the surplus waters of Lake Chuzenji fall like a silver beam into the throat of a dead volcano; pass to the lake itself—made sacred by the sacred peak which dominates it; and then ascend, in five miles, another thousand feet to the still waters of Yumoto—the loveliest lake in Japan. Those who can claim acquaintance with the little spa which nestles amidst steaming sulphur-springs and pine-clad solitudes at its head, five thousand feet above the sea, may lay the flattering unction to their souls that they know something of the real Japan.

Less of a journey, but equally delightful in its way, is that to the Hakone hot-spring district, where a group of round-topped volcanic hills forms as it were a stepping stone to the majestic Fujiyama. Four hours

VERY STRONGLY IN FAVOR OF A CHILDREN'S MAGISTRATE

President Joseph Ruddy at Annual Meeting of Children's Aid Society Speaks Out With Much Enthusiasm—Society is Doing Great Work.

That a juvenile court with a separate magistrate should be established in the city was a statement made by Mr. Joseph Ruddy, President of the local Children's Aid Society, at the annual meeting of the society held at the S. M. Thomson Home on Chatham street, yesterday afternoon. Mr. Ruddy stated that a magistrate who is used to dealing with adult offenders would naturally become so used to dealing with the adults that it would be almost impossible for him to change his methods and deal with the children the way they should be dealt with. By law, a city of this size is entitled to a juvenile court, if proper application is made. Mr. Ruddy stated proper application has been made and is wondering why the court has not been established.

Treasurer's Report. Rev. Mr. Simmons opened the meeting with prayer after which Secretary J. Leslie Axford read the report of Mr. C. Cook, the treasurer, who was unable to be present in time to give his report. It showed that $2,041.48 had been received during the year, $750 of which had been contributed by the city, $200 covering two years by the county, $50 by Paris and $25 by Brantford Township. The society has paid out $2,179.78, making a deficit of $138.30. The deficit is lower than in former years, which is encouraging. It was moved by Mrs. Kerr seconded by Rev. R. D. Hamilton that the report be accepted, which was carried unanimously.

Secretary Axford's Report. Mr. Axford then read his report which shows that he has been a very busy man and that the position is being capably filled. During the year 97 applications for children had been received, 210 children involved in 129 complaints of neglect received; 975 visits made; 1 girl sent to the Industrial school; 1 ward of the society died; 79 children placed in homes; 20 children made wards of the society; 115 children at the Shelter during the year, the average stay being 26 days; office receipts $3,061.53.

Further Revision Needed. Mr. Axford stated: "A revision of the Children's Protection Act became law during the past year, which in many ways is an improvement on the one previous, but yet falls far short of the aim of the Children's Aid workers, but it is to be hoped that some more changes will be made and the enforcement of the child's rights amplified. Here I would mention again that I believe that a study of the Juvenile Delinquents' Act by any who may be opposed to its proclamation in Brantford would entirely remove any prejudice that may now exist and the act would be speedily adopted in this city and county. I feel that the effectiveness of our work has been greatly hampered by not having some way of reaching those who contribute to the child's neglect."

Would Keep Children Off the Street.

Continuing Mr. Axford mentioned about children being on the street, in the following words: "I desire to call the attention of parents to the great necessity of knowing where their boys and girls are spending their evenings and the company they keep. Although the act regulating children out at night has been given much publicity there is no doubt that many parents are not shouldering their own responsibility, and in many cases defy the officers to do their duty. I would suggest that the selling of newspapers on our street corners by newsboys be entirely eliminated in Brantford and if such commodities are to be sold on the streets that the selling of them be given to men who are incapacitated, and thereby make otherwise and thereby make themselves supporting. This would greatly reduce the crime among children and remove the excuse for them being away from home. This would not effect the boy with a definite paper route."

Public Bathing Ground.

The necessity for a public bathing ground for both sexes was mentioned. Some of the money required has already been promised.

Infant Death Rate.

The death rate among infants could be further reduced by co-operation with the Board of Health in proper supervision of milk supply. Mr. Axford mentioned several instances where the Society had helped children who were in distressing circumstances. One of the girls wards are now married and are happy and contented. Mention was made of the Pansy Club which has so kindly furnished the fuel and several other necessities for the Shelter. Also of the former Matron, Mrs. Craig, who had to resign on account of ill health. Miss Craig, the present matron and Miss Brown, who has helped the society greatly, also to many others who had given time and money to help the work along.

Rev. Mr. Hamilton moved that the report be accepted, seconded by Mr. Frank Cockshutt, which was carried unanimously.

Report of House Committee.

Mrs. John Kerr gave a report of the House committee. A playground for the children is urgently needed which addition will cost about $1400, $800 of which has already been received. Great credit is due the Pansy Club for the help they have given and they are also holding a bazaar on Dec. 16th, in aid of the Shelter. Mrs. Peter Wood has been very kind, being always ready to help when help is needed. Rules and regulations for the governing of the Shelter, were read by Mrs. Kerr.

Officers for 1914.

There was no change made in the officers for 1914. The officers are as follows:

- President, Joseph Ruddy; Vice-presidents, Glad Whittaker, Richard Sampson; Corresponding Secretary, J. Leslie Axford; Recording Secretary, Miss S. Brown; Treasurer, C. Cook; Honorary Solicitors, Harley and Sweet; Council, T. H. Preston, L. U. M. Stanley, Very Rev. Dean Brady, G. Kippax, Chief Slemin, Rev. J. M. Whitley, Dr. Burr, Paris; N. A. McCollum, Burford; Messdames G. S. White, Peter Wood; J. M. Shuttleworth, W. H. Whittaker, J. J. Harley, John Kerr, Miss E. Sutherland, Miss E. Witty.

Executive—Joseph Ruddy, Rev. M. Whitley, G. Kippax, Chief Slemin and Mrs. John Kerr.

Rev. Mr. Peaddy, Secretary for Oxford and Woodstock Societies spoke a few words on the work in his district, complimenting the local society on the thriving condition it is in.

Mr. W. A. Gunton

Mr. W. A. Gunton, Provincial Inpector of Neglected Children, of Toronto, spoke on the work of the Society throughout the Province. The responsibility of bringing up children, correctly, primarily rests with the parents but when the parents neglect the children's training, the state should attend to it and see that all children are given a proper chance. Mr. Gunton does not believe that heredity plays a very great part in a child's character, training being the main factor. After a child has reached years of understanding corporal punishment should not be resorted to, but the child's mind and sympathy should be worked on as more can be done by kindness than punishment.

Mr. Gunton told of several instances from his own work and the cases were dealt with and the results obtained. Mr. Gunton is an able speaker and his address was listened to with great interest.

A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Gunton for his kindness in coming here and addressing the Society. Mr. Hamilton closed the meeting with a few words of prayer.

Magistrate Fined

Mr. W. D. Gainsford, chairman of the Spilshy magistrats, on Monday appeared before a full bench of his fellow justices, charged by Horace Elev. laborer, with a common assault.

Elev said he was cycling with a friend through Candesby on Sunday, Sept. 7. His friend did not ring but complainant did. His speed was about seven miles per hour. Mr. Gainsford shouted "Stop!" immediately thrusting his walking stick into the hind wheel, pulling him up short. By throwing his right leg over the handle bars he managed to alight on his feet. Riding on, however, his forks broke, and he was thrown to the ground.

Mr. Gainsford was fined 5s. and the costs.

SAGE TEA DARKENS HAIR TO ANY SHADE

Don't Stay Gray! Here's an Old-Time Recipe That Anybody Can Apply.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grand-mother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and abundant. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by using at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyle's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" you will get this famous old recipe which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and abundant. Agent T. George Bowles.

Fox Hunt in Timber Yard

Following the disappearance of several kittens in one of the canal timber yards at Birmingham, a fox was noticed among the stacks. Owners of fox terriers asked permission to hunt the animal and three dogs were sent under the timber to drive it out. For three hours the fox was chased from stack to stack and was at last driven into a corner. Some timber was being removed to make a way to it when it dashed past men and dogs and is still in hiding.

Train's Narrow Escape

There was an alarming railway mishap at Shrewsbury station on Monday. As the four o'clock train was leaving for Worcester the last coach and guard's van fouled the points and left the rails. It was some time before the driver's attention was arrested, and the derailed coach, which contained a number of passengers, was nearly overturned. Those in the coach were considerably shaken. The permanent way was damaged, and traffic was for a time dislocated.
