CROKER TO START FIGHT TO OUST CHARLES MURPHY

Former Tammany Boss Is Not Satisfied With the Present Leader.

NEW YORK, July 14.--Richard Croker, the old-time leader of Tammany Hall will return to New York from Ireland next September and seek to oust Chas. F. Murphy from the leadership of Tammany Hall, according to H. W. Walker, confidant of Croker, who reached here today from a visit to Croker in Ireland. "Big things are going to happen here when Croker comes in September," Mr. Walker said. "He has in his possession confessions that he is going to make public. These will have an important bearing on his fight against Charles F. Murphy, which he will vigorously renew."

Recount Opens In South Oxford

The Validity of About 30 Ballots is Under Dispute.

[By Special Wire to The Courier] WOODSTOCK, July 14 --Deputy Judge J. G. Wallace this morning opened the recount of the ballots cast in the South Oxford election by which V. A. Sinclair, Conservative candidate, was declared elected by a majority of four. Col. Mayberry the applicant for the recount, was represented by Gideon Grant of Toronto, Col. Hegler and W. J. Elliott, of Ingersoll, while Mr. Sinclair was represented by Edmund Bristol, K. C., of Toronto, and Donald Sutherland, M.P. Unless the scrutiny reveals something unknown by the deputy returning officer, the ballots to be argued upon before the judge will number only about thirty. The proceedings will likely last about three days.

TURRET CHIEF IS RELEASED FROM ROCKS

Required Many Weeks to Accomplish What Was Thought Impossible Feat.

CALUMET, Mich., July 14--After many weeks of effort Captain Alexander Cunningham, and his crew of wreckers have succeeded in releasing the Canadian steamer Turret Chief, which was driven on the rocks six miles east of Copper Harbor, Lake Superior, in the rear storm of last November. Except for damage to the hull, the vessel is said to be in a good condition. The steamer was floated yesterday and is to be taken to Port Arthur for repairs. In releasing the Turret Chief, Capt. Cunningham accomplished a feat few vessels believed possible. The ship had been driven nearly 100 feet out on shore, so far out, in fact she was almost high and dry. To release the steamer hydraulic jacks were used. With their aid the Turret Chief was dragged a few feet at a time toward the water. It was necessary to repeat the operation many times before the steamer was carried far enough back to float off the rocks.

PASTOR DROWNED

WHITE HAVEN, Pa., July 14--Rev. Walter Peterson, pastor of the Presbyterian church here, was drowned in the Lehigh river yesterday while fishing in a canoe. No one saw the minister go down, but his straw hat floating on the water led to the dragging of the river and the recovery of his body.

Five Thousand Masons Expected At Niagara

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., July 14--Over 150 of the advance guard of the Masonic Grand Lodge arrived in the city today to make arrangements for the convention which opens here on Wednesday morning when 2,000 delegates are expected. The Clifton Hotel will be the headquarters for the Grand Lodge officers. Dr. L. U. Phillips, rector of St. Phillips' church, St. Louis, Mo., will be the principal speaker at the grand peace ceremonial on Thursday, which will bring the convention to a close. It is estimated there will be 5,000 Masonic members in attendance.

GRAND JURY PROBING MURDER MYSTERY TODAY

Dr. Carman, Husband of Suspected Woman, to be Called as Witness.

[By Special Wire to The Courier] MINEOLA, N. Y., July 14--At the grand jury investigation today into the murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey in the office of Dr. Edwin Carman at Freeport on the night of June 30 District Attorney Lewis J. Smith planned to call the member of the dead woman's family to trace her movements from the time she left her home in Hempstead until she arrived at the physician's office. To-morrow Thursday, Mr. Smith announced that he would give Mrs. Carman, who is held here in the county jail charged with the murder of Mrs. Bailey, an opportunity to tell her story. Previous to hearing Mrs. Carman, however, the District Attorney it is said, would call the Carman negro maid, who is expected to change her original story. Another striking development in the case came today with the announcement that Dr. Carman would also be called before the grand jury and that he would be asked to waive immunity. The search for the revolver with which Mrs. Bailey was shot has led to the rumor that Dr. Carman would be asked to tell the grand jurors what he knows of the murder and what knowledge he has, if any, of the missing weapon. Detectives yesterday in their hunt for the weapon went over the route taken by Dr. Carman on the day following the murder. Mrs. Ida Powell, a sister of Mrs. Carman, probably will be called before the grand jury. Mrs. Platt Conklin, mother of Mrs. Carman, is ill at the Carman home and it is feared she may not be able to testify.

C.P.R. DEMANDING HEAVY DAMAGES

Suit For Two Million Dollars Against Storstad Owners Will be Pressed.

[By Special Wire to The Courier] MONTREAL, July 14--"We shall proceed immediately with our action against the former owners of the Storstad for $2,000,000 for the loss of the Empress of Ireland," declared A. R. Holden, K.C., solicitor for the C. P. R., yesterday afternoon. "The action will be heard," he continued, "in the admiralty court in this city, in September. Money paid by the Prudential Trust Co., on behalf of the Norwegian purchasers of the Storstad, amounting to $175,000, has been paid into court, and we will, of course, lay claim to it on behalf of our clients." Mr. Holden claims that the unanimous finding of the commissioners shows the C. P. R. is not liable for damages to the relatives of drowned persons or injured passengers.

WAS HEIRESS TO MILLIONS

PHILADELPHIA, July 14--Two-year-old Nancy Carpenter, heiress to millions and niece of United States Senator Henry A. Dupont, of Delaware, was drowned yesterday in a shallow pool on the estate of her uncle, Iere S. Dupont at Kenneth Square, near here. The child was the daughter of R. M. Carpenter, a banker of Wilmington, Del. The accident happened during a brief absence of the child's nurse. Judge Hazel at Buffalo appointed receivers for the United States Lighting and Heating Company.

NARROW ESCAPE FOR MOTORMAN FROM DEATH

Employe of Street Railway Came Near Being Electrocuted Today.

Motorman Tolley of the Street Railway had a very narrow escape from death shortly after one o'clock today noon when in attempting to move a live wire, that had crossed the railway wire on West Mill street, he received such a severe shock that he was rendered unconscious. Tolley is the driver on Car 43, Holmedale, and he was returning along West Mill street, when he noticed another wire crossed over the trolley wire. He stopped the car and when he went to throw the wire off received a severe shock that badly burned his left hand. The peculiar part of the accident is that while Tolley got on the car in a dazed condition he did not completely lose consciousness until the car reached the corner of Colborne and Market streets, when he suddenly lapsed into total unconsciousness. Constable Stanley called for the emergency ambulance, but just before Tolley was placed in the ambulance it was found that he was coming around again. He was rushed to the hospital.

SNATCHED PURSE

Foreigner Made a Get-a-Way Near Police Station Today.

Pavil Herink, snatched his wife's purse and made a dash for it from the police station this morning. He was given a stern chase down Dalhousie street, a string of youngsters getting after him and P. C. Boylan got hold of him and brought him back in a breathless condition. The purse, recovered, was opened and a few cents were all that contained. Herink and his wife had had a quarrel and he was charged with assault before the bench who decided that as it was his first appearance defendant would be given a chance. He therefore, warned Herink to treat his wife more kindly in the future, and the wife beater promised to do, when he was told of the penalty which he would incur by further belaboring his beloved. The magistrate thought that the payment of the interpreter's fee would settle matters, and he told defendant so. Herink had no money and asked his wife for the loan of it. She shook her head negatively and he thereupon snatched her purse and bolted. When he was brought back he and his spouse patched up the breach of the peace and went their way together.

ASTOR'S PLANS MAY FALL FLAT--FAMILY QUARREL

Father, Wife and Son Have a Bitter Dispute--Son Disinherited.

[By Special Wire to The Courier] MONTREAL, July 14--A London cable to the Daily Mail says: William Waldorf Astor's intention to sell The Observer and The Pall Mall Gazette is said to be due to a family quarrel which may affect the eventual disposition of his immense fortune and bring about the disinheriting of Waldorf, the eldest son. The trouble originated in a remark by Mrs. Waldorf Astor, who was Mrs. Nancy Langhorne Shaw before her second marriage in 1906. The outcome is a complete breach between father and son, the latter taking his wife's side. The proposed sale of The Observer and The Pall Mall Gazette is the first move in the open war which is now declared between father and son. The original purchase of these two papers was designed in one case to advance the son's political ambitions, and in the other to realize the father's dream of founding a family which should rank among the titled nobility. Both dreams are now at an end.

Home Rule Bill Passed Today

[By Special Wire to The Courier] LONDON, July 14.--The House of Lords today passed the third reading of the bill to amend the Irish Home Rule bill and sent it across to the House of Commons for consideration.

ENGLISHMEN ARE CONVICTED

Journalists Mixed Up in Big Japanese Naval Contract Scandals.

[By Special Wire to The Courier] TOKIO, Japan, July 14--Andrew M. Pooley, an English journalist, was today sentenced to two years imprisonment and a fine of $100 on the charge of receiving stolen documents in connection with the recent Japanese naval scandals involving officers in the receipt of illicit commissions for influencing the allotment of contracts. Pooley received the documents from Carl Richter, an employee of a German armament firm, who had stolen them, and was alleged to have used them for blackmailing purposes. Two other prisoners were also convicted today in the same case, V. Herrmann, the Tokio representative of the German armament firm, being sentenced to one year in jail, and G. Blundell, also connected with English journalism, to ten months' imprisonment. The sentence of these two men were, however, suspended for three years.

WESTERN WRECK

EDMONTON, Alb., July 14--In a head-on collision in Edmonton yards of the C. N. R. last night between an incoming freight train from Morinville and a yard engine switching some freight cars, Geo. Marshall, engineer of the freight train, was scaled to death by escaping steam. Frank Scott, fireman of the freight train, saw the danger and jumped, shouting to Marshall to do the same. Instead the engineer blew his whistle and jammed on the brakes, but was unable to stop in time. The Orange celebrations in Ulster were carried out without any noticeable disorder.

IS BIGGEST GUN KNOWN TO WORLD

Will Project Missile Twenty-three Miles Out From Panama.

[By Special Wire to The Courier] WASHINGTON, July 14--When its breech locking device has been perfected at Watervliet arsenal, the great 28-inch gun, the biggest piece of ordnance in the world, which has just been shipped from Sandy Hook proving grounds, will be practically ready for service on the Panama canal fortifications. Some idea may be gotten of the tremendous power of this gun, destined to protect the Pacific entrance to the Panama canal, by the fact that it is fifty feet long, weighs 143 tons and fires a projectile about six feet long. It requires eight men to carry the powder charge. This gun has a maximum range of from 22 to 23 miles. The elevation permitted by its carriage will enable the gun to fire a projectile about 11 miles across the Pacific ocean. It has sufficient power to theoretically pierce two feet of the best armour at the muzzle. At 11 miles the gun is calculated to pierce a 12-inch armour plate, or dry side armor afloat. Army ordnance officials believe this gun will be a tremendous instrument of peace when it is finally in position on the Panama canal.

WAS MURDERED ON BUFFALO STREET

Martin Cook Set Upon By Robbers and Fatally Wounded It Is Thought.

[By Special Wire to The Courier] BUFFALO, July 14--Martin Cook, 30 years old, was set upon by two thieves within halting distance of his home on Illinois street early this morning and was so badly beaten and stabbed that he died a few minutes later. Thieves were frightened away by the approach of two other men. Cook managed to stagger to his own door and rap. He fell dead when his father, James A. Cook, opened the door. He was able to gasp, "They tried to rob me," before he fell. The murderers had tried to cut some rings from Cook's fingers. One finger was nearly severed and two others were cut to shreds. The experts working on the America have decided to turn the airboat into a gigantic "sea sled."

J. L. SUTHERLAND

ORANGEMEN HAD A GREAT DAY

St. Thomas Was the Scene of an Enthusiastic Celebration Yesterday.

Tired and dusty, the local Orangemen arrived home from St. Thomas last night at 9.30, after taking part in the big demonstration there. The members report that they had a great time and enjoyed the day immensely. Sir Knight Henry Fielden made a splendid marshal for the local lodges and kept the parade in good order.

Brantford came off on top in the band contests. The Indian band from Oshweken taking the first prize for brass bands and the newly organized fife and drum band of Commercial L. O. L. No. 742, capturing the second prize.

Splendid accommodation was provided each evening lodge, and the local members are loud in their praise of the kindness and attention shown by the St. Thomas brethren.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., July 14.—What was beyond doubt the biggest Orange celebration ever held in Western Ontario took place here yesterday, when upwards of 15,000 people from as far east as the borders of the Niagara peninsula were poured in by the six railways centering here. All the forenoon the air vibrated with the roll of the drum, the shrill note of the fife, the wild shriek of the bagpipes and the soiter notes of the brass bands. Shortly after 1 o'clock, the big feature of the day, the Orange walk, commenced with 32 bands, and nearly 8,000 in line. The procession took close to 50 minutes to pass a given point. The place of honor in the procession was given to the Detroit contingent, 150 strong, with the two St. Thomas lodges brought up in the rear. At Pinafore Park a long programme of speeches was carried out interspersed with sports, hand competitions and baby shows.

Following the opening of the day-making by the chairman, Rev. W. P. Brownlee, rector of St. John's Anglican church, Mayor Johnson extended a warm welcome to the Orangemen, women and children of Western Ontario to the "prettiest city for its size in Ontario or the Dominion." He tendered them the fullest freedom while within its borders. Mayor H. C. Hocken of Toronto, and Deputy Grand Master of Ontario West, was the principal speaker. He was accorded a great ovation as he arose.

The day that orangemen here and at hundreds of other points throughout the British Empire were gathered to celebrate, he claimed, the birthday of democracy and one to be celebrated in a spirit of thankfulness and tolerance; thankfulness to God for all that it means to humanity and tolerance to those of another faith founded upon the assurance that our cause is just. The strength of the order had been shown within the past few weeks to two governments. To that at Ottawa a warning that bilingual schools would not be tolerated had been plainly and unmistakably given, and a similar warning given in no uncertain manner to the government of Manitoba of Friday last when Orangemen repeated their action of 1866. God, he declared, will not permit His works to be made manifest by cowardice. The cause could only be advanced by men who are true, brave and intelligent. The Roman power in the province was becoming very aggressive and it is the order's great mission to resist to the utmost that expression with courage and determination.

Other speakers were Finlay MacDiarmid, M.P.P.; E. T. Esery, ex-Mayor of London and P.G.M. of Ontario West; and Rev. N. H. McGilivray, of Knox Presbyterian Church; Chief Tobias of Moravian town, and Rev. W. H. Ebersoll of Kingsville, and John R. McCullough of Detroit. Thunderstorms came on before the celebration and after.

WATERS CLAIM MANY BATHERS

Drowning Cases Reported From All Sections of the Province.

ROUSSEAU, Muskoka, July 13.—While bathing from the cliffs near the residence of Mr. C. K. Beley, Saturday afternoon, Leo Hopps, 17 years old of Grimsby, was drowned. The young man was employed as kitchen boy on the steamer Sagamo, which runs between here and Gravenhurst on Sundays, and had gone into the water immediately after eating a heavy dinner. It is believed that he was seized with cramps.

Hopps was accompanied by the steamer's cook, and was swimming in about 12 feet of water, when he suddenly went down. His companion was not a good swimmer, and was unable to dive for him, but within five minutes a number of people from Rossmoyne and other nearby places were on hand. It was 15 minutes, however before the body was recovered with a pike-pole.

Eat Less Meat if Kidneys feel lead or Bladder bothers.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

THREE NEAR BELLEVILLE

Man, Girl and Boy Perish While Swimming.

BELLEVILLE, July 13.—Three drownings in this district were reported on Saturday and Sunday. Gladys Bongard, aged 15 years, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Bongard, of this city, was drowned on Saturday afternoon in the Bay of Quinte, off Massagosa Park, where the family are summering. The victim, in company with another girl, was bathing off the shore when she slipped off a ledge of rock into a deep hole, and never came to the surface. The body was shortly after recovered, but all efforts at resuscitation proved fruitless.

Everett Ketcheson, son of Thomas H. Ketcheson, was drowned near Frankford Sunday morning, about one-half mile above the bridge, on the east side of the Trent canal. He was in bathing with Fred Harrison and Ross Turley. Harrison and Turley were brought around about 15 or 20 minutes after they had been taken from the water, having been over come in attempting to rescue Ketcheson. Ketcheson was assistant to the engineer on the Trent canal.

An Italian, whose name could not be learned, was drowned Sunday afternoon while bathing in the Bay of Quinte, off Burch's Island. He had been engaged on sewer construction work in this city.

CRIES FOR HELP

DISREGARDED

Four Companions Heard Boy's Cry for Aid and Gave No Assistance

HAMILTON, July 13.—John Gavers, a Poleander, seventeen years' of age, was drowned in Gage's Inlet yesterday afternoon. Small boys playing near the inlet saw the fatality and ran to the Sherman Avenue Police Station and gave the alarm. Four companions of the unfortunate boy heard his cries for help but gave no assistance. To-day the authorities were looking for these lads. Gavers it is said, was bathing and two of his companions were dressing on the bank and the other two were swimming when the lad was seized with cramps and cried out that he was drowning. His companions, instead of going to his rescue, went running across the field near the Grasselli chemical works. The body was recovered by Constable John Smith, Coroner Hopkins has ordered an inquest.

Deceased was a member of the Woodmen of the World, Brantford camp.

The funeral will take place on Thursday to the Hartford cemetery from the late residence, 8 Lewis St.

The Appreciation of Diamonds

More and more diamonds are bought, sold and worn every year. And this in spite of the fact that the tendency of diamond prices is steadily upward.

Which last fact makes the purchase of a good diamond a worth-while investment.

Our diamond display to-day is away above the average. We import our diamonds direct from the cutters and set them in our own workshop.

We are positive we can save you money.

Lots of Fun At the Brant Pitches Exchanged by Those Desiring to Ride the Mule.

A little excitement was added to a good bill at the Brant Theatre last evening by a local enthusiast, who wanted to ride the kicking mule, which is the main part of the feature act. The manager of the act offers $1.00 a minute to any one who can ride this mule, and the local rider who went after the money failed to wait until his appointed time to ride and consequently got mixed in a lively scrimmage, as he felt he did not have a fair show. Mr. Staines has promised to give him a clear stage at any of the performances, when none of the other riders will be in the ring. The circus manager asks that local riders wait till the main performance is over, when they will be given an uninterrupted chance to show their broncho busting abilities.
Last night the local enthusiast was so eager that there were some punches exchanged in the scrimmage to ride the mule, both sides claiming that the other was the offender. Only a few of the audience got on to what was doing.
The remainder of the bill outside of the feature mule was up to standard.

Workman Injured
A workman by the name of Fellstead, met with an accident while at work at the Waterous Engine Works. Fellstead was employed in the foundry, and was engaged in moving a casting when it fell on him, causing a concussion of the right knee joint. Dr. Hanna was summoned and had the injured man removed to his home on Brunswick street.

Canadian Engineers Inspect Concrete Roads
Party of fourteen visit Wayne County, Michigan, and get first hand facts.

Last week a party of Canadian Highway Engineers and Municipal Officials interested in good roads, under the guidance of Mr. L. S. Bruner of the Canadian Cement Company Limited, visited Detroit and Wayne County, Mich. to learn how this progressive American community is building a comprehensive concrete road system of which it is justly proud.
The party included J. F. Ure, Woodstock, Ont., Engineer for Oxford County; R. H. Spencer, Acting Mayor, Trenton, Ont.; G. R. Marston, Simcoe, Ont., Engineer for Norfolk County; F. M. Rutherford, Lincoln County, Ont., Engineer for Lincoln County; W. J. Hollingsworth, Hamilton, Ont., Assistant City Engineer; M. Manigault, Strathroy, Ont.; J. H. Jackson, Brantford, Ont.; R. Clarke and W. E. Nesbitt, Merriton, Ont.; L. J. Wooley, C. P. Botsford and W. Coles, Toronto; L. S. Bruner and R. S. Muller, Montreal.
Wayne County now has nearly one hundred miles of the finest concrete roads in the world, one stretch of which extends in a smooth unbroken surface for a distance of 31 miles passing through the villages of Wayne and Dearburne and it is a noteworthy fact that after much experimenting with every kind of road building material the Board of County Road Commissioners has adopted concrete as its standard.
The party covered about eighty miles of highway of every description and in every condition from the worst to the best. The tour proved an exceptionally strong object lesson to everyone of the party and much gratification was expressed at the completeness of the building equipment and the excellent results obtained.
Fortunately, the party was enabled to see practically every operation of road building from the grading of the sub-soil to the finished road, of which one machine can lay 750 square yards of road in one day. The method of reinforcing and its advantages was shown and explained. Much interest was shown in the thorough manner in which every operation was carried out, especially the curing of the finished road and the hauling of materials to where the road was being built.
As a whole the methods used by Wayne County Road Commissioners are very simple and undoubtedly the most economical for the construction of an extensive and permanent road system, at any rate, they are the result of years of study and experiment by able engineers.
One of the engineers expressed the opinion that if Wayne County, could afford to have such excellent roads, there is no excuse for Canadian municipalities to delay the building of systems that will be as good as the Wayne County roads, for there are few Canadian counties that are not infinitely richer in natural resources if not in actual capital, and we can greatly benefit by the experiences of the county across the line.

WHAT HAPPENED IN OLD IRELAND

Celebration of Boyne Anniversary Marked by No Untoward Event.

BELFAST, July 14.—The 25th celebration of the anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne yesterday passed off without any untoward event. In Belfast, as throughout the Province of Ulster, it was the greatest and most enthusiastic celebration of the Twelfth of July ever held in the North of Ireland, yet up to a late hour reports from all parts of the province tell how the day passed off quietly, more quietly even than an ordinary Boyne Day, although it had been feared and freely predicted that there would be serious trouble on account of the existence of the two volunteer armies and the feeling of the Ulstermen against the Home Rule measures.
Credit for this preservation of order must be given to the Unionists and Nationalists alike. The self-restraint shown by both in such an electrical atmosphere has been marvelous, and while it is a matter of congratulation for men of all parties that the day passed without bloodshed or even a riot, in that very fact may be seen the true seriousness of the situation. The day of the more or less light-hearted "fight" is over; the days of the scrimmage and the shillalags are over. As one commentator remarked last night: "The Twelfth is no longer an excuse for excesses. Armies now march where rabble once rioted."

As may readily be imagined, there was nothing lacking to provoke an outbreak on a huge scale of riots and disorders, which, on a smaller scale, have so often marked the celebrations of the Boyne anniversary that they have recently not even been reported outside of the local papers.
One hundred thousand persons gathered in the fields of Drumbragh, five miles outside of Belfast, and 30,000 men marched behind the carriage in which Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster Unionist leader, rode under a broiling sun and through choking dust.
From 7 o'clock in the morning all of these men had been assembling with drums and fife bands in order to leave Carlisle Place, the starting place of the parade, by ten o'clock, while other small columns, composed of country Orange lodges, marched to the meeting place without giving or receiving the slightest provocation for a row.

The Scene at Drumbragh
That this is accountable for by apathy on either side cannot for a moment be maintained. When the speeches began at Drumbragh at 1.30 p. m. Sir Edward Carson, who was the fifth speaker of the ten who addressed the crowd, was received with wild enthusiasm, as he stood with his hands on an ancient leather-bound Bible of the Belfast Grand Lodge which was cracked, cracked with pistol shots on all sides, and it was several minutes before he could speak. Then followed a speech which stirred the passions of his hearers to the depths, but the return of the procession to Belfast and through the streets of the city with all the bands playing Orange airs and amid cheers was perfectly orderly.

The Nationalists were equally orderly. They obeyed the injunctions uttered by the priests from the pulpits yesterday and also by their leaders and remained quietly in their own quarters. Volunteer officers who were not distinguished by any mark patrolled the streets carefully and on the slightest sign of an inclination toward disorderliness of their own men they produced a badge of their rank and became authoritative.
They sometimes so-operated with the police, who save here and there were few and far between. There were no armed patrols in the streets and all places of business were closed.
When the processions and bands had passed it seemed as if Belfast was filled with an extra large Sunday night throng, so quiet were the holiday-makers in the streets. It was a triumph of discipline on both sides.

Carson's Defence

Sir Edward Carson's speech at Drumbragh was one of the "no surrender" type throughout. "We will go to the bitter end," he declared, and continued:
"You ask me to take a forward step. I tell the Government that unless they are prepared to leave us alone we will recognize the Provisional Government and no other one. I am not going to tell the members of the press of anyone else what we are going to do, but I do say this, that an assemblage representative of the whole of Ulster has given me authority, acting with our other leaders, and in any way I like to assert your authority so as to prevent some Rule from being put on the statute books. They have given me that power and I mean to exercise it."
Speaking of the Government, Sir Edward said: "They seem to be in great difficulties. They help them out. I will give them the alternative of giving us a clear sheet for Ulster or come and fight it out as there are no other alternatives possible."

OLD HOME WEEK

Within less than a month the above event will be in full swing in this city and it promises to prove a splendid success.

The last occasion of such a celebration here was in December of 1899. It passed off with the greatest possible eclat, despite the fact that it occurred in one of the coldest of winter months, and many Old Boys and Girls, by reason of the duties of the Christmas trade, and Christmas preparations were unable to come.

The various committees have been hard at work, how hard only those in the know really appreciate, and prospects are of the best. There is one thing those having matters in charge are very desirous to see and this is that with plenty of fun there shall also be due decorum.

THE ST. LAWRENCE ROUTE
Apart from the horror and the heart-felt sorrow with reference to the heavy loss of life, the physical fact is worth emphasizing that the St. Lawrence route was not a contributing cause to the Empress disaster.

And pretty soon it will be the furnace and not the ice box which will have to be filled.

The Borden government, on succeeding to office, has practically done the same thing. Where then did the alleged miracle working power of Laurier come in? He was in office during the last world-wide depression, when the Dominion felt its effect just as much as during the existing recurrence.

DOMINION ELECTION
Certain Liberal papers have set up a straw man to the effect that Borden and his colleagues had just about concluded to hold a Dominion election in the Fall, but that the result in Manitoba has caused them to hesitate.

There is not one title of evidence that an early appeal had even been thought of at Ottawa. Scribes who are making the assertion that it has, are simply drawing upon their own vivid imagination.

The fate of the Upper House does not depend upon the Prairie Province or the recent outcome there. The recent struggle involved many Provincial matters, local in their nature—matters which would not have any place with reference to a contest in the larger sphere.

The Borden Government has made good. It has proved itself to be clean and progressive, and has done nothing to impair public confidence. On the other hand, the Laurierites are at sixes and sevens, with no man of outstanding ability, except Sir Wilfrid and he, since his overthrow in 1911, seems to have lost a good deal of his political cunning.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

Two German aviators remained up in the air for twenty-four hours. As to that a good many people are there all the time.

Bar-tenders on lake boats paid $1,416 in fines in Toronto police court. It will take a good many schooners to make up that amount.

There is one thing about the cellar position of any baseball team. It shows that the players know the best spot to be these warm days.

A lawyer has just died in the Old Land at the age of 103. He handled plenty of briefs but didn't adhere to the practice with regard to his own life.

British sport has been decadent enough for John Bull's representatives to come out on top of the heap in connection with pretty nearly all important events lately.

Two Paris editors have issued a challenge to a German to fight a couple of duels and it turns out that he has been dead for two years. That's the kind to throw your gauntlet at.

The Hindus who for months have been in a vessel off Vancouver have now wired the Governor General to send them some provisions. As invaders of this Dominion about the only grub they have been fattening on is food for thought.

THREE BOYS AT ST. KITTS

Current Swept Two Young Lads to their Death in Twelve-mile Creek

ST CATHARINES, July 13—Three boys drowned within 24 hours is the record for this season at St. Catharines. Friday evening Frederick Gauthier, aged 16 while swimming from a raft near Lock 2, old canal, remarked to his companions "See me dive," and took the plunge, but never appeared again until his body was recovered some time after.

Saturday afternoon, two young boys, James Comrie, aged 10, and Galbraith Emslie, aged 9, while in swimming in the Twelve-mile Creek were carried into deep water by the swift current and both were drowned. Their bodies have not yet been recovered.

Mr. Basil Stewart of Bracebridge, and Harry Pearson of Hamilton, were drowned.

Thousands attended the 12th of July celebrations yesterday throughout the Province.

THE CHIGGER.

The little chigger, it toils with vigor, when days are long and warm; with zeal it burrows its winding furrows along my shrinking form. The meagly chigger! I cannot figure why it was placed on earth, to make life tougher, to make us suffer, and banish peace and mirth. We fear to ramble or lightly gambol in fields of grass or hay, for there the chigger, persistent digger, is waiting for his prey. We dread the forest, for there we're sorriest, with lumps the chigger made; we turn our faces from pleasant places, and shun the tempting shade. The sneaking chigger, that is no bigger than a needle's eye, can make man shiver, from lungs to liver, and raise a doleful cry. I loathe and scorn it! The sizzling hornet, that comes into my lodge, with red-hot stinger, is trouble bringer, but gives me chance to dodge. The bee that humbles my spirit, hounds a warning ere it stings; the fierce mosquito gives warning, ditto, with vocal legs and wings. But oh, the chigger! It pulls the trigger and shoots me full of juice, by night and morning, without a warning and makes me raise the deuce!

ALD. BRAGG'S DENIAL

To the Editor of the Courier:

Sir, in last night's issue of the Courier you published a letter from Mr. Ham to Mayor Spence. Now I have no desire whatever to enter into the controversy now going on between these two gentlemen, but there is one statement which Mr. Ham makes which is not correct and I cannot allow it to pass without a public denial.

Mr. Ham states that I was in Brock Lane on the Sunday night previous to the election in my capacity as an alderman to see if any more lights were needed in that vicinity mentioned. Now that statement is not true in any way whatsoever. Mr. Ham has been misinformed. After leaving church I was called upon and told that certain things were happening in Brock Lane and my presence was desired. I went down there and met and spoke to several gentlemen high up in the Reform party. We discussed the coming election and I told one particular gentleman who was a very prominent worker for Mr. Ham that the Conservative party desired only a straight and clean fight and no crooked work would be tolerated by us.

Golden Rule For Police Fails In Pasadena, Cal.

PASADENA, Cal., July 13—"There will be no more 'Golden Rules' in Pasadena," says Chief of Police Wilbur S. McIntyre.

"I have been in office for a year now, and while I realize that in theory the 'Golden Rule' in regard to making arrests may sound all right, in practice it does not work out that way.

Theoretically a policeman who detects a person who is guilty of a minor offence, reprimands the offender and tells him to go on his way and have a care. In Pasadena, practically, it has resulted in having the policeman allow all first offenders, with a few exceptions, to avoid arrest.

"Policemen are hired to enforce the law. They are not there to act as judges. When the public knows that a policeman can release an offender and not get into trouble every offender expects to get off the first time he breaks an ordinance, and that goes as well for the chief of police as well as a patrolman.

"It is hard enough to get uniform judgment in courts without asking every member of the police force to take a hand at judging. As a result of the 'Golden Rule' policemen are prone to make an arbitrary practice of overlooking the first offence, unless it be a very serious one, no matter what may be the merits of the case.

"I do not mean by this that people who are clearly ignorant of some technical local rule established for some condition that they could not know anything about, should not be warned and released. That is and will be done, as it always has been done, but there is no sense in forgiving a man who leaves his auto standing without lights when the man must know that lights on autos are required at night everywhere.

"Under our 'Golden Rule' practice, people have grown to believe that they have a valid right to expect to be released the first time they infract an ordinance. They know the law but believe they are safe until they break it twice. That's foolish."

An Ulster rifleman captured the trophy in the first match of the Biscley meet.

China's Dethroned Emperor Educated By Moving Pictures

The dethroned Emperor of the Celestial Empire—still a mere child—permitted to retain his full rule over state in private life.

He is living with a dozen or so of very exalted relations of the Imperial clan in a great country palace some distance outside Peking, and is being educated almost entirely by picture films.

"The boy," says a Chinese, imported of the third degree, involuntarily inclining his head as he referred to his fallen Emperor, "is a fine little fellow, and could be very happy if circumstances would permit of his living in Europe on the enormous income which still remains to him and has been guaranteed by the Republic.

But unfortunately the Imperial one must be jealously guarded and preserved from outward communion from 'foreign devils.' Otherwise most extraordinary revolution is occurring in what is the usual education of an Imperial Prince of China, and particularly in that of a young Emperor.

"He is actually being informed," continued Mr. Chang, "that there are other lands outside China, and of equal, even greater, power; that there are a fair number of kings and emperors on this earth, and that they are not barbarians, as was the creed of China in regard to other nations, but might be considered by an unprejudiced mind as passably civilized.

These things are being impressed upon the boy-Emperor largely by cinema pictures. Hundreds of films have been imported into China showing European and American cities, and also Japanese and Indian scenes. The interior as well as the exterior of houses and palaces are depicted, and with all life of prince and peasant, and the grades between have been filmed for the Imperial teaching. The Emperor is being made acquainted with the faces of monarchs and statesmen and of the other leading men of the world outside China.

The boy is shown pictures of marching armies and of fighting ships of every description. He is not bored with technical scenes, first, because he is too young; and, second, because wonders of machinery or intricate manufacture are hardly novel to the Chinese mind.

But the boy is being taught the history and habits of Europeans and

BREAD AND WATER AND CEMENT BED

Brought Promise of Good Behaviour From Penitentiary Occupant.

[By Special Wire to The Courier] NEW YORK, July 14.—A bread and water diet for 130 hours and a cement floor for a bed yesterday brought promises of good behaviour from Frank Tannenbaum, the youthful Industrial Worker of the World leader, and to-day Warden Hayes of the Blackwell's Island penitentiary promised to end his stay in the solitary confinement cells. Tannenbaum, who was sent to the Island for raiding a church, was one of the ring-leaders in the recent riots.

While the number of insurgents has decreased by about a score more than 100 were still holding out to-day for their "rights." All of these remained in their cells. They include the leader of the insurgents, all of whom are in solitary confinement.

With the City Police

The Police Court session were quite lengthy this morning when an interesting number of cases were dealt with.

A county court case was dealt with when Leonard Marralle was charged with doing damage to the buggy of James McNaughton. It appears that four young people in the McNaughton rig were driving from church on Sunday, June 14th, when they encountered Marralle in a rig and a race ensued which ended up in a smash in which the McNaughton rig was damaged to the extent of 225. The question was which rig had endeavored to head off the other, and the magistrate decided after hearing the evidence of both sides that the defendant was at fault and he must therefore pay the damages, also costs.

WHEN SHOULD OFFICER USE HIS WAR CLUB?

An Incident on the Street Last Evening—P.C. Pickell in the Limelight.

When should a policeman use his baton? This question will probably be aired at a special meeting of the Police Commissioners as a result of a street disturbance on Dalhousie St. last night following the arrest of Harry Rolands by P.C. Pickell. The policeman used his baton on Rolands inflicting a nasty cut across the forehead, and the result was an ugly laceration created among a crowd of spectators which added to its numbers in a few minutes. The crowd went to the police station, but Sergeant Donnelly, Detective Chapman and others soon dispersed it in a quiet but firm way, after a demand had been made by two half drunken friends of Rolands for his release.

The police received a telephone call to come to the American Hotel to remove Rolands whose presence was objectionable there. P. C. Pickell responded and it is said on Rolands's refusal to give his name or address the officer proceeded to arrest him. Eye-witnesses of the affair state that Rolands was getting the best of the officer although he was not assisted by anyone in the crowd. It was stated that a couple of bystanders offered to help the officer but their offer was refused. At any rate the scuffle grew so warm that Pickell finally let go of Rolands and then drew his baton, administered a crack which could be heard on the Market Square. Friends grabbed Rolands and hustled him to the Market Square where they were seen by P. C. Cobden. The latter officer suspecting something unusual ran up and affected the arrest, the patrol wagon arriving shortly afterwards. Rolands was not at all seriously injured, although there was a great flow of blood on the sidewalk.

One bystander of reputable standing who saw the entire affair states that the crowd was generally in sympathy with the officer in making the arrest until the baton was used, and then were several if called upon, as an officer has a right to do, who would have assisted. At any rate Pickell will be given a chance to explain before the commissioners.

The affair was rather a trivial one but it showed how crowd excitement can be worked up, as later in the evening there were two more gatherings for still more trivial causes. In discussing the incident afterwards it was pointed out by one member of the force that in over 25 years he had never used his baton once on a prisoner.

In Police Court.

The fracas upon Dalhousie street last night which nearly resulted in a riot was investigated at the court when Harry Rolands was charged with an assault on a police officer, and also with obscene language. Defendant presented a sorry spectacle as he sat in the dock resting his head, which was plastered, upon his hand. He only lifted his head when addressed by the Magistrate. He pleaded not guilty to assault or obscene language but admitted being drunk.

P. C. Pickell gave his testimony. He was sent to quiet a drunk at the New American and arriving upon the scene found Rolands's outside. When asked for his name he gave it, but swore at the officer when asked for his address. Taking hold of defendant to take him, the constable was tripped and fell, being separated from his man. He got up and defendant made two terrific punches at him which might have injured him. Rolands's friends then took him down Dalhousie to Market street. By that time the patrol wagon arrived and P. C. Cobden arrested defendant. They then got back to the station where a crowd gathered. Mr. Heyd who defended, said that he had many witnesses. The gist of their evidence was that they gathered around and saw Roland and Pickell fall after an altercation between the two. Pickell, they said, had struck Rolands when he was held by two men, who were endeavoring to assist the constable. Under cross-examination they all proved to be members of the 25th Brant Dragoons, with which Rolands has some connection.

The Magistrate said he was satisfied that Rolands was at fault and had caused the trouble. Defendant had already served six months for a similar offence, and he did not want to send him to prison again. He, therefore, would let him out on a suspended sentence in order that he might have a chance to make good. The costs of the case amounted to $7.85.

There was quite a stir in the court room during the hearing of the case that P. C. Pickell was one of the quietest constables on the force. Immediately there was a howl of ridicule, which was instantly hushed by the chief. Orders were then issued for the clearing of the court and with many snorts of indignation and yells of defiance, the crowd went down the stairs and left the building.

McClinton Irvine, Hamilton, accidentally shot and killed himself while playing with a revolver.

Poet Plays Adam Without Clothes In Western Wood

CHICAGO, July 14.—Naked and without any of the implements of modern civilization, and superior to Adam, the first man, only because of education, Joseph Knowles of Boston, who arrived in Chicago recently, plans to live the life of a primitive man in the mountain wilderness of California, for two months this summer.

Knowles has just left for the coast city, and expects to enter the woods early this month. He is accompanied by B. E. Lamebrt, of Columbus, Ohio, an old hunting companion. While in Chicago Knowles spent much time with Battling Nelson, who has been his friend for years.

Last year Knowles started the world by laying aside his clothes and plunging into the Maine woods without even a match or a knife. Sixty-one days later he returned to civilization, clad in bearskin, after living during the two months on berries, fish and wild game which he trapped.

Now Knowles plans to repeat his experiment, this time in the forests which cover the Sierra Nevada range in California, a section of the country with which he is not familiar.

"I want to show beyond any possible question of doubt," Mr. Knowles said before leaving, "that any man with a thorough understanding of nature and animal life can live in the wilderness without the support of his fellow man and without the aid of the tools of modern civilization. I am trying to get people to live closer to nature and to know the truth about animal life."

"Practically all of these writers of nature and animal stories don't know what they are talking about. They write thrilling stories of man being attacked by wild animals, which are untrue, because the animals of the woods seldom attack a man unless first attacked. These writers get their experience in luxurious camps and their stories from guides who know how to tell yarns."

May Metcalf, Toronto, aged nine, was crushed to death under the wheels of an auto truck.

LONDON UPSETS RED SOX BY GALAXY OF SQUEEZE PLAYS

Nichols Falls Easy Prey to Kockneys Bunting Game, Losing 8-1.

LONDON, July 14—Squeeze plays featured yesterday's game at Tecumseh Park, which greatly assisted in living up an otherwise dull contest between London and Brantford, which was an easy victory for the locals by the score of 8 to 1.

Nichols and Steiger opposed each other in the box and, while London did not need the number of hits they secured, they served to place men on the paths to be scored later by the finest array of bunts ever assembled in one ball game. Nichols was easy prey for this sort of a battle, while his opponent was master of the situation throughout, providing only six hits and would have been winner without being scored upon but for an error.

Squeeze Plays Galore

Five of the runs scored by the Tecumsehs were the result of grand team work, as bunts were the cause of these, a pair scoring on the one's sacrifice in the third inning when Linneborn and Dunn talked on Bierbauer's damped ball before Ivers could throw to the plate and catch Dunn. Another run was scored on Lamy's sacrifice fly in the seventh.

The Brants played without Deneau their leader, who is reported to be scouting for new ball players. Both teams fielded well, with perhaps the exception of Thrailkill, although he was given some stiff work to perform in his territory, accepting five chances out of seven.

With one out in the second inning Brantford had three men on bases when Taylor hit a long fly to Lamy, whose throw to the plate caught Lacroix, nipping the visitors' best opportunity to gather in several runs. In the fifth the Brants secured their only run when Thrailkill was safe on Linneborn's error. He went to third on Taylor's hit and scored when Long grounded out to Linneborn.

In the second inning Lamy walked and was advanced on Reidy's bunt, going to third on Nichols' wild pitch. Reidy bunted and beat Ivers to first scoring Lamy. In the third Mullin, who was the hitting star of the pastime, opened with a two-base smash. Steiger's bunt advanced him to third, when Linneborn bunted. Mullin beat Ivers' throw to the plate. Linneborn stole second and Dunn singled and with Linneborn on third, Dunn also stole second. Dunn moved up near third on Nichols' throw to Bierbauer, who bunted, scoring both runners before Ivers could catch Dunn going home.

In the seventh Mullin singled and Steiger beat out a bunt to Nelson. Linneborn fouled out trying to bunt and Dunn singled, filling the bases. Bierbauer bunted scoring Mullin, the ball going safe. Steiger scored on Lamy's long fly and Dunn was caught going to third.

In the eighth Reidy singled and Reising was safe on Thrailkill's error, the former going to third. Snyder bunted to Ivers and was safe, scoring Reidy, but Reising was out going to third. Mullin singled and Snyder scored after having stolen second. Mullin was put out when Steiger flew out to Long, thinking it was the third out.

Sport Comment

It is the cellar for Brantford unless something is done at once. Deneau did a most commendable thing in taking a scouting trip, but he should have taken it weeks sooner. The truth of the matter is the Red Sox were loaded down from the very start of the season with two or three joke players, and when the pinch came, Brantford has been found nowhere. Wagner, Burns, a joke right fielder, Dolan, Asher, Sandusky, all these combined, have led to the present lowly position of the team. The season has a little less than two months to go. With anything like a winning streak the fans will be back there strong, although the chance for first place may long ago have been passed up. Last night, President Nelson had not heard from the Rube and did not know the results of the latter's trip to Toledo. If the trip was successful there may be an awakening. If not, we are due to stick around in the Slough of Despond.

The reserve seat plan for the big game here Old Home Week between the world's champions and the world's cellar champions, opens July 20. One dollar admission it is understood, is to be charged for this stellar attraction. The guarantee to the visiting team is understood to be $2,000.

There is no getting away from the fact that Brantford fans are in a very much disgruntled state of mind, disgruntled not so much because the team is what it is, but because the team is where it is. It is the standing which hurts. Last place is ignominious.

Every now and then a London paper sneers at Rube Deneau, particularly because a flat-headed newspaper man quoted Deneau last spring as calling "Doc" Reising a lemon. As a matter of fact, and it has been pointed out in these columns before, Deneau used no such term about Reising personally. But, because he was grossly misquoted, the Rube has been subject to all sorts of cheap sneers during the summer. The clubs which look as if it will win the pennant this year, is the very club which Deneau largely got together, one, Bobby Heck, being pretty nearly the whole works, while other good ones were sold at a profit.

Any club which didn't start off good this year has been severely handicapped by reason of the existence of the Federals, make no mistake about that. Players have been scarce. This month may witness some clubs breaking up, and they may come this way. If so, we are lucky. It is understood that Toledo, where Deneau visited Sunday, is one of those bankrupt places.

The runners will again start in Ontario on Wednesday at the spring meeting of the Windsor Jockey Club.

THRILLING NINTH INNING RALLY FAILS TO OVERCOME ERIE'S LEAD

St. Thomas Loses Great Battle Before Crowd by 5-4 Score—With Kubat in Fine Form, Ottawa Beat Peterboro—Beavers Trounce White's Athletics.

St. THOMAS, July 14—After staging one of the most thrilling ninth innings in many a long day, Midge Craven's Saints fell one run shy of taking the measure of the Erie Sailors yesterday afternoon, the final count being 5 to 4 in favor of the Yankees. Nearly 3,000 fans got a run for their money. It was a well-played, hard fought battle and worth the money.

The Erie gang won the pastime in the second and third innings, when they gave Vern Hughey and his splitter a mauling. They hopped on him for further orders, clouting his salivary shoots to all portions of the enclosure. Craven hurried Reilly into the game and the big fellow pitched real ball, holding the hard hitting Erie crowd to one run.

The Saints got one in the sixth on Dawson's muff and in the eighth on some consecutive clouting.

Reilly deserves a lot of credit for the game he pitched. It was a good one, make no mistake. The gang played well behind him. Erie showed a new catcher in Cooper from Indianapolis, a big lad with a lot of stuff.

The umpiring of McFarlin was bad, a decision at the plate on Burns, probably costing the pastime.

World's Short Story No. 1
A LODGING FOR
By Robert Louis Stevenson
Twenty-four famous short stories in one volume. The choice of the world's greatest writers. Includes "A Lodging for a Night" by Robert Louis Stevenson.

PART I.
It was late in November, 1450. The snow fell over Paris with rigorous, relentless persistence. Sometimes the wind made a sally and scattered it in flying volleys; sometimes there was a lull, and flakes after flakes descended out of the black night air, silent, circuitous, interminable.

The cemetery of St. John had taken its own share of the snow. The clock was heard on 10 when the patrol went by with halberds and a lantern, beating their hands, and they saw nothing suspicious about the cemetery of St. John.

Yet there was a small house, backed up against the cemetery wall, which was still awake, and awake to evil purpose, in that snoring district. There was not much to betray it from within, only a stream of warm vapor from the chimney top, a patch where the snow melted on the roof and a few half obliterated footprints at the door. But within, behind the shuttered windows, Master Francis Villon, the poet, and some of the thievish crew with whom he consorted, were keeping the night alive and passing round the bottle.

A great pile of living embers diffused a strong and ruddy glow from the arched chimney. Before this straddled Don Nicolas, the Pleading monk, with his skirts picked up and his fat legs bared to the comfortable warmth. His face had the veery, bruised appearance of the continual drinker.

On the right Villon and Guy Tabary were huddled together over a scrap of parchment. Villon making a balled which he was to call the "Ballad of the Pleading Monk" and Tabary's uttering admiration at his shoulder. The poet was a rag of a man, dark, little and lean, with hollow cheeks and thin, black locks. He carried his four and twenty years with feverish animation. Greed had made folds about his eyes. Evil smiles had puckered his mouth. The wolf and pig struggled together in his face. It was an eloquent, sharp, ugly, earthly countenance. His hands were small and prehensile, with fingers knotted like a cord, and they were continually flickering in front of him in violent and expressive pantomime. As for Tabary, a broad, complacent, admiring imbecility breathed from his squash nose and snobbering lips. He had become a thief just as he might have become the most decent of burgesses by the imperious chance that rules the lives of human greed and human donkeys.

At the monk's other hand Montigny and Theremin Pansette played a game of chance. About the first there clung some flavor of good birth and training, as about a fallen angel. Something long, lithe and courtly in the person; something agile and darkling in the face. Thevenin, poor soul, had done a good stroke of knavery that afternoon in the Faubourg St. Jacques, and all night he had been gaining from Montigny.

"Doubles or quits?" said Thevenin. Montigny nodded grimly.

"Some may prefer to dine in state," wrote Villon. "On bread and cheese on silver plate. Or, or—help me out, Guide?"

Tabary giggled.

"Or parsley on a golden dish," scribbled the poet.

The wind was freshening without. It drove the snow before it. The cold was growing sharper.

"Can't you hear it rattle in the gully bet?" said Villon. "They are all dancing the devil's jig on nothing up there. You may dance, my gallants. You'll be none the warmer. Whew, what a gust! Down went somebody just now! A mediator the fewer on the three-legged mediator tree! I say, Don Nicolas, it'll be cold tonight on the St. Denis road?" he asked.

A LODGING FOR THE NIGHT

By Robert Louis Stevenson

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON

BOOTH TARKINGTON

Twenty-four famous authors were asked recently to name the best short story in the English language. The choice of Booth Tarkington, Jack London, Alfred Henry Lewis and Richard Harding Davis was "A Lodging for the Night," by Robert Louis Stevenson.

PART I.

IT was late in November, 1450. The snow fell over Paris with rigorous, relentless persistence. Sometimes the wind made a sally and scattered it in flying volleys; sometimes there was a lull, and flakes after flakes descended out of the black night air, silent, circuitous, interminable.

The cemetery of St. John had taken its own share of the snow. The clock was hard on 10 when the patrol went by with banners and a lantern, beating their hands, and they saw nothing suspicious about the cemetery of St. John.

Yet there was a small house, backed up against the cemetery wall, which was still awake, and awake to evil purpose. In that snoring district. There was not much to betray it from without, only a stream of warm vapor from the chimney top, a patch where the snow melted on the roof and a few half obliterated footprints at the door. But within, behind the shuttered windows, Master Francis, the poet, and some of the thievish crew with whom he consorted, were keeping the night alive and passing round the bottle.

A great pile of living embers diffused a strong and ruddy glow from the arched chimney. Before this straddled Dom Nicolas, the Picardy monk, with his skirts picked up and his fat legs bared to the comfortable warmth. His face had the veery, brusque appearance of the continual drinker.

On the right Villon and Guy Tabary were huddled together over a scrap of parchment, Villon making a ballad which he was to call the "Ballad of Boats, Fish, and Tabary's spluttering admiration at his shoulder. The poet was a rag of a man, dark, little and lean, with hollow cheeks and thin, black locks. He carried his four and twenty years with feverish animation. Greed had made folds about his eyes. Evil smiles had puckered his mouth. The wolf and pig struggled together in his face. It was an eloquent, sharp, ugly, earthly countenance. His hands were small and prehensile, with fingers knotted like a cord, and they were continually tickling in front of him in violent and excessive pantomime.

As for Tabary, a broad, complacent, admiring imbecility breathed from his squish nose and stobbering lips. He had become a thief just as he might have become the most decent of burgesses by the superluous chance that rules the lives of human geese and human donkeys.

At the monk's other hand Montigny and Thevenin Pussete played a game of chance. About the first there clung some flavor of good birth and training, as about a fallen angel. Something long, lithe and courtly in the person; something aquiline and darkling in the face. Thevenin, poor soul, was in great feather. He had done a good stroke of knavery that afternoon in the Faubourg St. Jacques, and all night he had been gaining from Montigny.

"Doubles or quits?" said Thevenin. Montigny nodded grimly. "Some may prefer to dine in state," wrote Villon. "On bread and cheese on silver plate. Or, — help me out, Guido?"

Tabary giggled. "Or parsley on a golden dish," scribbled the poet. The wind was freshening without. It drove the snow before it. The cold was growing sharper. Tabary laughed immoderately over the medallars. He had never heard anything more lighthearted, and he held his sides and cowered. Villon fetched him a bill on the nose, which turned his snarl into an attack of coughing.

"Oh, stop that row," said Villon, "and think of rimes to 'fish!' Look at Montigny!" All three peered covertly at the gaunter. He did not seem to be enjoying his luck. His mouth was a little to a side, one nostril nearly shut and the other much inflated. The black dog was on his back, as people say, in terrifying nursery metaphor, and he breathed hard under the greyness burden.

There was a brief and fatal movement among the gauneters. The round was completed, and Thevenin was just opening his mouth to claim another victory when Montigny leaped up swift as an adder and stabbed him to the heart. The blow took effect before he had time to utter a cry, before he convulsed his frame. His hands opened and his heels rattled on the floor, then his head rolled backward over one shoulder, with eyes wide open, and Thevenin Pussete's spirit had returned to him who made it.

Every one sprang to his feet, but the business was over in two twos. "My God!" said Tabary, and he began to pray in Latin.

Villon broke out into hysterical laughter. He came a step forward and ducked a ridiculous bow at Thevenin and laughed still louder. Then he sat down suddenly all of a heap upon a stool and continued laughing bitterly as though he would shake himself to pieces.

Montigny recovered his composure first. "Let's see what he has about him," he remarked, and he poked the dead man's pockets with a practiced hand and divided the money into four equal portions on the table. "There's for you," he said.

The monk received his share with a deep sigh, and a single stealthy glance at the dead Thevenin, who was beginning to sink into himself and topple sideways off the chair.

"We're all in for it," cried Villon, swallowing his mirth. "It's a hanging job for every man Jack of us that's here — not to speak of those who aren't!"

Then he pocketed his share of the spoil and executed a shuffle with his feet as if to restore the circulation.

Tabary was the last to help himself. He made a dash at the money and retired to the other end of the room.

Montigny stuck Thevenin upright in the chair and drew out the dagger, which was followed by a jet of blood. "You fellows had better be moving," he said as he wiped the blade on his victim's doublet.

"I think we had," returned Villon, with a gulp. "D — his fat head!" he broke out. "It sticks in my throat like phlegm. What right has a man to have red hair when he is dead?"

And he fell all of a heap again upon the stool and fairly covered his face with his hands.

Montigny and Dom Nicolas hunched about, even Tabary feebly chiming in. "Cry baby!" said the monk.

"I always said he was a woman," added Montigny with a sneer. "Sit up, can't you?" he went on, giving another shake to the murdered body. "Tread out that fire, Nick!"

But Nick was better employed. He was quietly taking Villon's pulse as the poet sat limp and trembling on the stool where he had been making a ballad not three minutes before. Montigny and Tabary dumbly demanded a share of the booty, which the monk silently promised as he passed the little bag into the bosom of his gown.

In many ways an artistic nature unites a man for practical existence. No sooner had the theft been accomplished than Villon shook himself, jumped to his feet and began helping to search for extinguish the embers. Meanwhile Montigny opened the door and cautiously peered into the street. The coast was clear. There was no meddlesome patrol in sight. Still it was judged wiser to slip out severally, and Villon was the first by general consent to issue forth.

The wind had trimmed and swept all the clouds from heaven. Only a few vapors as they were the stars. It was fed rapidly across the street. It was bitter cold, and by a common optical effect, things seemed almost more definite than in the broadest daylight. Villon cursed his fortune. Would he were still snowing! Now, wherever he went he left an indelible trail.

Two things preoccupied him as he went, the aspect of the gables at Montfaucon in this bright, windy phase of the night's existence, for one and for another, the look of the dead man with his bald head and garland of red curls. Both struck cold upon his heart, and he kept quickening his pace as if he could escape from unpleasant thoughts by mere flight. Suddenly he saw a long way before him a black clump and a couple of lanterns. The clump was in motion, and the lanterns swung as though carried by men walking. It was a patrol. Just on his left hand there stood a great hotel, with some turrets and a large porch before the door. It was dark inside after the glimmer of the snowy streets, and he was groping forward with outstretched hands when he stumbled over some substance which offered an indescribable mixture of resistances, hard and soft, firm and loose. His heart gave a leap, and he sprang two steps back and stared dreadfully at the obstacle. Then he gave a little laugh of relief. It was only a woman, and she dead. He knelt beside her to make sure upon this latter point. She was freezing cold and rigid like a stick. A little ragged flannel fluttered in the wind about her hair, and her cheeks had been heavily rouged that same afternoon. Her pockets were quite empty, but in her stocking underneath the garter Villon found two of the small coins that went by the name of whites. It was little enough, but it was always something, and his one feverish movement, a door burst open and he slipped out into the street. He had not time to breathe before she had spent her money.

While these thoughts were passing through his mind he was feeling half mechanically for his purse. Suddenly his heart stopped beating. A feeling of cold scales passed up the back of his legs and a cold blob seemed to fall upon his scalp. He stood petrified for a moment; then he felt again with a burst upon him. He cursed. He threw the two whites into the street. He shook his fist at heaven. He stamped and was not horrified to find himself trampling the poor corpse. Then he began rapidly to retrace his steps toward the house beside the cemetery. He had forgotten all fear of the patrol, and had no idea what a deep sense of right and left upon the snow. Nothing was to be seen. He had not dropped it in the streets. Had it fallen in the house? He would have liked dearly to go in and see, but the idea of the grisly occupant unmanned him, and he saw besides as he drew near that their efforts to put out the fire had been successful. On the contrary, it had broken into a blaze, and a changeful light played in the chinks of door and window and revived his terror for the authorities and Paris gibbet.

He returned to the hotel with the porch and groped about upon the snow for the money he had thrown away in his childish passion. But he could only find one white, and he had probably lost the other three, sunk deeply in. With a single white in his pocket all his projects for a roving night in some wild tavern vanished utterly away. And it was not only pleasure that fled laughing from his grasp; positive discomfort, positive pain, attacked him as he stood ruefully before the porch. His perspiration had dried upon him, and although the wind was setting in stronger with every hour, and he felt numb and sick at heart. What was to be done? Late as was the hour, improbable as was success, he would try the house of his adopted father, the chaplain of St. Benoit.

He ran there all the way and knocked timidly. There was no answer. He knocked again and again, and then with every stroke, and at last steps were heard approaching from within. A barred wicket fell open in the iron studded door and emitted a gush of yellow light.

"Hold up your face to the wicket," said the chaplain from within. "It's only me," whimpered Villon.

"Oh, it's only you, is it?" returned the chaplain, and he cursed him with foul, unpriestly oaths and bade him be off at such an hour and bade him be off to hell where it came from.

"My hands are blue to the wrist," pleaded Villon; "my feet are dead and full of twings; my nose aches with the sharp air; the cold lies at my heart. I may be dead before morning. Only this once, father, and before God, I will never ask again!"

"You should have come earlier," said the ecclesiastic coolly. "Young men require a lesson now and then." He shut the wicket and retired deliberately into the interior of the house.

Villon was beside himself. He beat upon the door with his hands and feet and shouted hoarsely after the chaplain.

A door shut in the interior, faintly audible to the poet down long passages. He passed his hand over his mouth with an oath. And then the humor of the situation struck him, and he laughed and looked lightly up to heaven, where the stars seemed to be twinkling over his discomfiture.

What was to be done? It looked very like a night in the frosty streets. The idea of the dead woman popped into his imagination and gave him a hearty fright; what had happened to her in the early night might very well happen to him before morning.

He passed all his chances under review, turning the white between his thumb and forefinger. Unfortunately he was on bad terms with some old friends who would once have taken pity on him in such a plight. He had lupooned them in verses; he had beaten and cheated them, and yet now, when he was in so close a pinch, he thought there was at least one who might perhaps relent. It was a chance. It was worth trying at least, and he would go and see.

In Daily Fear Of Death—Until "Fruit-a-lives" Brought Relief.

CHATHAM, ONT., April 3rd, 1913. "Some two years ago, I was a great sufferer from indigestion. One day my eye caught a billboard of 'Fruit-a-lives' and I said to myself 'if Fruit-a-lives will build me up like that, it is good enough for me'. I bought some. After taking these wonderful tablets for only three weeks, I found myself wonderfully improved. In a short time longer, I cured myself entirely. My case was no light one, either. Gas would often form in my stomach and I was in daily fear that it would get around my heart and kill me. 'Fruit-a-lives' is the only remedy for indigestion'."

and pointing out the spot where he was yet a child. His mother, if he only knew where she lived he might make sure at least of shelter. He determined he would inquire upon the morrow—may he would go and see her, too, poor old girl! So thinking, he arrived at his destination—his last hope for the night.

The house was quite dark, like its neighbors, and yet after a few taps he heard a movement overhead, a door opening and a cautious voice asking who was there. The poet named himself in a loud whisper and waited, not without some trepidation, the result. Nor had he to wait long. A window was suddenly opened and a pallid of slops splashed down upon the doorstep. Villon had not been unprepared for something of the sort and had put himself as much in shelter as the nature of the porch admitted, but for all that he was deplorably drenched below the waist. His boots began to freeze and exposure stared him in the face. He remembered he was of phibetical tendency, and began coughing tentatively. But the gravity of the danger steeled his nerves. He stopped a few hundred yards from the door where he had been so rudely used and reflected with his finger to his nose. He could see only one way of getting into the house, and that was not far away which looked as if it might be easily broken into, and thither he betook himself promptly, entertaining himself on the way with the idea of a room still hot, with a table still loaded with the remains of supper, where he might pass the rest of the black hours and whence he should issue on the morrow with an armful of valuable plate. He even considered on what viands and what wines he should prefer, and as he was coasting the roll of his favorite dainties roasting fish presented itself to his mind with an odd mixture of amusement and horror.

"I shall never finish that ballad," he thought to himself, and then with another shudder at the recollection, "Oh, his fat head!" he repeated fervently and spat upon the snow.

HERE'S WHAT GOOD EDUCATION MEANS.

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—What are the evidences of a good education? This was the question asked by Dr. W. A. Plummer, president of the Principals' Club, of the school principals. Here are some of the answers: If a man slaps you on the cheek, turn the other to him.

Courtesy, refinement, ability to do, to say to lead, to serve.

Ability to use one's native language correctly.

Culture, power, efficiency. Good morals and manners; freedom, careful speech.

Ability to mix with people. Knowledge of the three "r's." Individual thought and action. Self control at all times.

Ability to hold down your job, whatever it is.

A sense of humor.

Confidence in your fellow man.

"TOMMIE" FOULGER HAS PASSED AWAY

A Well Known Local Clerk Succumbs to Illness of Some Years.

Place a very sad death occurred in Echo Place this morning, when Thomas Foulger passed away, at the age of 31, after an illness of over two years.

The deceased, who was well known and deservedly popular, was for some years employed with Messrs. Hughes & Howie, but about two years ago, his health failing him, he was forced to recuperate, and with this intent had travelled extensively, and on his return to Brantford last February, he was a member of the Knights of Pythias and leaves to mourn his loss, besides a wide circle of friends, a widow, his mother, Mrs. Foulger of Detroit, three sisters, Mrs. Green of Eagle Place, Mrs. Grieves of Church and Mrs. Elliott of Echo Place, and one brother, Charles of London.

The funeral will take place from the residence of his sister, Mrs. Elliott, of Echo Place, to Mount Hope cemetery.

Mr. Higgins inherits his love of music from his mother, who was a noted singer in Rosendale for many years. The letter "B" has been closely associated with the whole of his career. Born at Bacup, he chose banking for his profession, was promoted to Brantford, where he soon made a name for himself in musical circles, and now he is about to go to Brantford, Ontario, where further advancement, we feel sanguine, awaits him.

It is eighteen years since Mr. Higgins, who, by the way, celebrated his 41st birthday on Sunday, came to Brantford. As an organist, he is admittedly one of the best in the borough. He has respectively held appointments as organist at the Adelaide Street Wesleyan Chapel, the Baptist Tabernacle, the North Shore Wesleyan Chapel and the Alexandra Road Congregational Church (a post he still occupies) four of the largest Nonconformist places of worship in Brantford.

As conductor of the Blackpool Orpheus Society for the last twelve years, and as conductor of the Blackpool Amateur Operatic Society for nine years, he is, however, even better known for the numerous notable achievements of the Orpheus Ladies' Choir under his capable direction have won him fame both near and far. He has held the conductorship of the Orpheus Society from the establishment of the Society. During that period his Ladies' Choir has been brought to such perfection that premier honors have been carried off at Blackpool, Barrow, Preston, Southport, Lytham, and Bury musical festivals and in the international competitions at Paris a few years ago, the choir also won a trophy.

The brilliant success of the ladies' choir at the Blackpool Festival two years ago, when Dr. McNaught awarded them maximum marks, brought Mr. Higgins into touch with Dr. Vogt, conductor of the famous Mendelssohn choir at Toronto and director of the Toronto Conservatoire of Music, who was over in this country at the time for the special purpose of studying the music festival movement, and it is directly due to the acquaintanceship established that Mr. Higgins has been offered this valuable Canadian appointment. Dr. Vogt told him at the time that the Dominion presented a good field for an ambitious musician of his abilities and generously offered to assist him in every possible way if he made up his mind to go out there. Mr. Higgins remarked that he would have no objection to trying his luck in Canada if the prospects were sufficiently good. Dr. Vogt returned to Canada, and true to his promise, in April last he sent Mr. Higgins particulars of two vacancies for organists, one of which he accepted.

Mr. Higgins leaves England on August 7th on the steamer "Virginius," arriving here on August 15th ready to commence his duties at the choir practice immediately before Sunday, August 23rd.

NEW ORGANIST FOR BRANT AVE. CHURCH HAS BEEN CHOSEN

Mr. Clifford Higgin is New Man-He Comes From Blackpool, England.

Mr. Clifford Higgin, who comes from Blackpool, England, has been chosen as the new organist of Brant Ave. Church. As will be seen by the following from a Blackpool exchange Mr. Higgin has won a high place in the musician world. The following is the tribute paid:

Blackpool is about to lose one of its most popular and most promising conductors and composers. Mr. Clifford Higgin, a musician of whom Blackpool is justly proud, has this week-end been offered and has accepted an important and lucrative appointment as organist and choirman of a church at Brantford, Canada. Whilst everyone will regret the departure of a musician of his exceptional attainments, the warmest congratulations will be extended to him by a host of friends both here and in Rosendale upon the fact that his talents have received this notable recognition, for the appointment is unquestionably a personal compliment and a tribute to his skill as a conductor and an organist. In this new and wider sphere "across the sea," Mr. Higgin will find larger scope for the exercise of his talents, and every friend and admirer throughout the world will unite in wishing him great success in his future career in the Dominion.

Mr. Higgin inherits his love of music from his mother, who was a noted singer in Rosendale for many years. The letter "B" has been closely associated with the whole of his career. Born at Bacup, he chose banking for his profession, was promoted to Brantford, where he soon made a name for himself in musical circles, and now he is about to go to Brantford, Ontario, where further advancement, we feel sanguine, awaits him.

It is eighteen years since Mr. Higgins, who, by the way, celebrated his 41st birthday on Sunday, came to Brantford. As an organist, he is admittedly one of the best in the borough. He has respectively held appointments as organist at the Adelaide Street Wesleyan Chapel, the Baptist Tabernacle, the North Shore Wesleyan Chapel and the Alexandra Road Congregational Church (a post he still occupies) four of the largest Nonconformist places of worship in Brantford.

As conductor of the Blackpool Orpheus Society for the last twelve years, and as conductor of the Blackpool Amateur Operatic Society for nine years, he is, however, even better known for the numerous notable achievements of the Orpheus Ladies' Choir under his capable direction have won him fame both near and far. He has held the conductorship of the Orpheus Society from the establishment of the Society. During that period his Ladies' Choir has been brought to such perfection that premier honors have been carried off at Blackpool, Barrow, Preston, Southport, Lytham, and Bury musical festivals and in the international competitions at Paris a few years ago, the choir also won a trophy.

The brilliant success of the ladies' choir at the Blackpool Festival two years ago, when Dr. McNaught awarded them maximum marks, brought Mr. Higgins into touch with Dr. Vogt, conductor of the famous Mendelssohn choir at Toronto and director of the Toronto Conservatoire of Music, who was over in this country at the time for the special purpose of studying the music festival movement, and it is directly due to the acquaintanceship established that Mr. Higgins has been offered this valuable Canadian appointment. Dr. Vogt told him at the time that the Dominion presented a good field for an ambitious musician of his abilities and generously offered to assist him in every possible way if he made up his mind to go out there. Mr. Higgins remarked that he would have no objection to trying his luck in Canada if the prospects were sufficiently good. Dr. Vogt returned to Canada, and true to his promise, in April last he sent Mr. Higgins particulars of two vacancies for organists, one of which he accepted.

LORNE BRIDGE

Work by the Railway is Proceeding at Satisfactory Rate.

Lorne bridge is a very busy scene these days, the work on the L. E. N. at that point being pushed along at great rate. The inner retaining wall is now nearing completion, the forms having been erected and the concrete dumped in. The steam shovel is busy excavating under the temporary bridge approach, and with the assistance of Constables Thomas and Burns, the work is being carried on with little interruption of traffic over the bridge.

A number of residents of West Brantford have been anxious as to what fire protection they would receive when the bridge is being raised. However, Chairman J. E. Ryerson of the fire and light committee, stated this morning that during the hours that the bridge was being raised a fire truck and men would be stationed in West Brantford to answer all alarms.

Latest Comment On Local Soccer

There were three clubs in the Brantford and Paris Football league, who up until Saturday had not tasted defeat in league warfare. They were the Duffs, Tutela and the Scots. With the clash of Duffs and Scots one of the clubs was due to lose its prestige, and that club turned out to be last year's champions, the Dufferin Killies. And they went down badly too. Six goals against the opposition. So far the Duffs have said nothing about being weak, and they have made no holler.

The victory has been ascribed to the ingenuity of Jimmy Morrow, who planned out the mode of attack and defence with twenty-two corks, showing every man his position and how to watch his man successfully. That is all very well this time, it would seem to have succeeded, but there are other things that count. Would the Scots have won so handsomely if Jones, their new centre forward, had not been there to meet the ball when occasion demanded? It is doubtful. You cannot put science into raw material and expect it to materialize immediately. It is more than likely that Jones won the match from his ability to shoot and net. Jones is a good centre forward and the Scots are aware of it.
