Mgr. Satolli on the Press.

The famous G:idiron Club, the organization of Washington newspaper correspondents. had Mgr. Satolli as its notable guest at the tenth annual dinner at the Arlington Hotel, Wash ington, on the evening of January 19 The Apostolic Delegate's address or the press was the feature of the occasion. Among the other guests were Dr. Rooker, ex-Speaker Reed, Associate Justice Brewer, Major-General Schofield, the German, Hawaiian and Argentine Ministers, Senators Teller, Dubois and Gorman, Representatives Hopkins, Weadock, Baker, Caruth, Springer and Connor, Judge Rufus B. Cowing, of New York City; Thomas Nelson Page and First Assistant Postmaster-General

Mgr. Satolli's address, which was read by Dr. Rooker, was as follows: "From Aristotle to the renowned outhor of 'L'Espirit des Lois' learned men have divided the functions of government into classes—the legis-lative, the executive or administrative, and the judicial-which are, in truth, but three activities of one and the same power which is vested in him who has the care of the people and represents them. Now, however, an adequcte dissolution of the powers of government would have to include a fourth element, and this public opinion, exercising its activity through the organism of the public press. It is consequently a great pleasure and honor to me to be with you this evening, feeling, as I do, that I am surrounded by the representatives of this fourth power in the greatest and most glorious of modern republicsa republic emulous of the glory of

"And is it not the public press which makes known the deeds of society from day to day? Charles Dudley Warner declares that the purpose of the creation of the newspaper is that it should be a "mirror of con-temporary life." Is it not the public press which at the proper time should make known to the makers of law what should or what should not be done for the common welfate? Can any one deny to the public press the right, in matters which concern the people at large, to estimate the value of public acts? "Up to the fifteenth century there was no vehicle of intellectual and moral light except the manuscript codices for the few, and monuments and the spoken word for the many and therefore it was more necessary than in our times to have monument pictures and statues, by the sight of which youth might be inspired to imitate the generous and glorious acts of heroic men. The Hebrews at the time of their greatest glory had their temples and tombs. The Greeks had their temples, statues and pictures. The Romans had their trophies, columns and arches; and today, even in her treasures of monumental literature, can be read without books the records of centuries of civil, religious and moral virtues. "Then followed the days of schools and universities, which became the centres and sources of knowledge. From the invention of printing in fifteenth century, to the eighteenth, books were multiplied and instruction was facilitated and generalized, and libraries sprang up like so many temples of the human encyclopedia. It was left for the public press to provide fully and universally for the teaching of the masses.

"So great being the importance of the public press, it is evident how much those who labor in the ministry merit the good will and esteem of the
