Martinique and Morne Rouge.

(From the Tablet.)

A preliminary account of the catastrophe of Martinique is embodied in a report sent by Dr. Hill, chief of the expedition dispatched by the National Geographic Society of Washington, to the journal of the Society. The area of devastation is described as an elongated oval of which about eight square miles were on land, the remainder extending over the adjacent sea. He distinguishes three well-marked zones in this area. In the first, including the northern part of St. Pierre, all life, animal and vegetable, was utterly destroyed. The second was ravaged by singeing blistering flame, destroying all men and animals, and scorching but not entirely killing the trees. The third was a zone of ashes, in which vegetation was injured, but life was not necessarily destroyed. A new crater which opened midway between the sea and the mountain was the focus of annihilation, and the cause of the destruction of St. Pierre. Although Mr. Hill found it impossible to ascend the crater owing to the still agitated state of the mountain, he witnessed a terrific explosion on May 26, and made observations of phenomena which he believes are quite new to science. Through the gigantic mushroom-shaped canopy of smoke and cinders which expanded to a distance of ten miles from the mountain were flashed vivid and awful lightning bolts, following distinct paths of ignition differing from those of ordinary lightning in being horizontal instead of perpendicular. "This (he says) is indisputable evidence of the oxidation of the gases after they left the crater, and explains in part the awful catastrophe. This phenomenon is entirely new in volcanic history. I took many photographs, but do not hesitate to acknowledge that I was terrified." Another observer found evidence in the attitudes of the victims, that death must, in some cases at least, have been absolutely instantaneous. Some were found shaking hands, others seated at a table, some gazing at the mountain and one with the muscles of his legs stiffened for ever in the attitude of running.

Notice to Subscribers.

The undersigned publishers of Charlottetown, respectfully beg to announce that we have unanimously adopted the cash in advance system for subscriptions. The advisability of pursuing this course has been shown by the fact that for some time past a large proportion of our subscribers have strongly urged us to do so. In yielding to their wishes we are merely falling into line with the leading publishers all over Canada and the United States.

By inaugurating the cash in advance system we shall be enabled to give our subscribers an improved paper for their money—a portion of which is now expended in furnishing papers to those who do not pay.

We confidently believe that the new system will meet with the approval of the general public.

The uniform rate for our weekly papers will be $1.00 per year.

Immediate payment is respectfully requested for all unpaid subscriptions up to the present time, as well as for all unpaid subscriptions expiring between this date and Dec. 31st, 1902, at which date all then unpaid will be discontinued.

Those whose terms expire at any date after January 1st, 1903, will be notified before the date of expiration, and any who fail to renew when their year has expired will have their papers discontinued. No new subscribers can be accepted from this date unless paid in advance.

We respectfully ask that all join cordially with us in making the cash in advance system an unqualified success, as it is in their own interests to do so.

the appearance of the Sacred Heart in the Morge Rouge at St. Marie in the island of Martinique, by a correspondent of the New York Journal, the following extract from a letter from St. Marie to a pupil at the convent at Stroud will be of interest:

You should have seen the panic of all the people besieging the confessional. On Ascension Day there were many communions before the cataclysm. Among these victims God has found some beautiful souls. If there were some wicked they were also some that were holy.

The Morge Rouge has been preserved by a miracle. The lava came with incredible quickness to about 30 metres from the church, but it turned to go and attack St. Pierre. It was at 7 o'clock in the morning. Nobody on the island could know that it was not night, the darkness was so intense. In ten minutes all the people with their arms folded in the form of a cross were imploring the mercy of God.

There were two masses in the church and many of the people had received Communion, but the Father Mary seeing, as he thought, the end, gave Holy Communion again to those who had already communicated in order to consume the consecrated species. But the Morge Rouge was preserved. The Cure exposed the Blessed Sacrament and began his Mass. Then the Sacred Heart of Jesus appeared visibly in the Host. He showed Himself only as far as His waist with His arms in the form of a cross, and the Crown of Thorns around His Head. He appeared to be very sad. This vision lasted all the time of the Mass, seen by 300 persons and the fact can be established. Afterwards all the people put the pictures of the Sacred Heart upon their breasts—even the worst of the impious came, to ask for these pictures from the Sisters who had to distribute them. Nobody left the church until the next day; rosary was recited incessantly.

At the present moment all have left the Morge Rouge except the Pere Marie, who remains at his post.

In the cataclysm there perished 22 priests, including 13 Fathers of the Coeur de Marie. All the nuns of St. Vincent de Paul who were in the seminaries, colleges and hospitals have perished. Also 23 religious women of St. Joseph de Clunay and eight of La Dolivrande.

Panama Hats.

In the first place, they are not made in Panama, nor is the Alpine shape that is popular in America seen in Southern countries. The term Panama was taken as a convenient name from the fact that most of the hats made in Peru and Ecuador find their way to Guayaquil, whence they are shipped to Panama, and after crossing the isthmus, are shipped here from Colon. Even this is not true of the hats made in Columbia, many of which are shipped from Cartagena or Savannah and have never touched Panama at all. We have a parallel case in the term Marseilles coffee. The coffee is grown in the interior and derives its name simply from the port from which it is shipped. The plant from which the hat is made is not generally understood. We have seen it variously referred to as "a species of cane," "a weed," "a grass," etc. How very vague is the last term will be appreciated when one considers that botanists recognize no less than five thousand distinct species of grass. It is a sort of palm in appearance and is commonly called the Panama hat palm, although botanists do not group it under the head of palms, classifying it under the name cyclanthaceae. The botanical name of the particular species with which we are concerned, and which is here pictured, is carladoria palmata.

The South American natives call it Palma de Pina. It is indigenous to parts of Ecuador, Columbia, Peru, Brazil and Central America.

With Panama hats in such unprecedented demand as they are this season, it is not surprising that much has been written concerning them that it is not correct. It has been said that they are woven under water. The statements that Panama hats are woven under water or that the very fine ones are woven only by candlelight, are characterized as incorrect by a man who has all his life been engaged as a first hand in the Panama hat trade, and who has not only seen the hats made, but has made Panama hats himself.

The method of preparing the straw is as follows: Young plants, not over four or five feet in height, are used for this purpose. Only the leaves that are young, stiff and in prime condition can be used. These are split into narrow strips by the native, who, for this purpose, uses his finger-nails. What we shall call the rounding, for want of a better name, is accomplished by the deft-fingered native, aided by the natural tendency of the strip to curl. The strip is rolled from each of its two edges toward its middle, and thus is formed, ready for plaiting into a hat body, that excellent straw with no raw edges and which is deceptively like a cylinder.

The great market and distributing point of Panama hats is Havana, and it is an interesting and curious fact that most of the Panama hats sold in New York go from South America to Havana, via the United States in transit. This is because of the fact that the steamers do not deviate from their regular routes. Recently, however, some shipments of hats have been sent to the United States without going to Havana and then back again.

The Alpine shape, so popular in the United States, is not seen in Havana nor South American countries, one shape that is typical in these countries, is a very high-grade Monte Christi hat, such as retails for $100.—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Priest and Prince.

The great Catholic University of Fribourg, Switzerland, has the distinction of numbering among its faculty the son of a king. Prince Maximilian, who a few years back suddenly resigned his commission in the army; and, after some difficulty, obtained the permission of his uncle, the late King Albert, to enter holy orders, is a professor of canon law and liturgy at the above institution. The recent death of King Albert placed Prince Max's father, King George, on the throne.

After his ordination Prince Max declined to accept the allowance from the Saxon treasury to which he was entitled as a prince of the blood and secured an appointment as curate in one of the most poverty-stricken districts of the British metropolis and for several years was attached to a German Catholic church in Whitechapel, bearing the queer name of St. Bonaparte, and which is more than 100 years old, and has attached to it an important German hospital, a convent and a sort of home for young men. He realized that as long as he remained in Germany he would always be treated as a royal prince, in the line of succession to the throne of Saxony, whereas in London he ran no danger of being looked upon as anything else than a priest.

It is indeed difficult to imagine any more startling transition than that from an inmate of some of the most beautiful palaces of Europe, from a dashing officer of a crack German cavalry regiment, to the position of a humble worker of the Church in the London slums.

Prince Max is the only scion of a reigning house in holy orders. The last prince of the blood to enter the priesthood was Arolduko Leopold of Austria, the patron of Beethoven, who became a cardinal very shortly after his ordination, while King Charles Albert of Sardinia took the vows of a monk after abdicating his throne in 1849. To the late Cardinal Bonaparte, although a kinsman of Napoleon III, were never accorded by his cousins any rights or privileges of a French prince of the blood, and he remained in every sense of the word a mere Italian nobleman.

Between Prince Maximilian and the throne of Saxony there are now five lives—namely, those of his eldest brother, the crown prince; the latter's three little boys, all under the age of 10, and his other brother, Prince John George.

Cardinal Lygus was requested by the Archbishops and Bishops of Ireland, on the occasion of their annual meeting at Maynooth, to convey the Queen's expression of the sympathy of the Bishops, with an assurance of their best wishes and prayers for the recovery of the King. Queen Alexandra telegraphed an acknowledgment to Cardinal Lygus, thanking him, and through him the Archbishops and Bishops of Ireland, for their kind sympathy conveyed in the message. Addressing the meeting of Bishops from which the message of sympathy was sent, Cardinal Lygus said: "I think I am expressing the opinions of your Lordships here and of the assembly in saying that we have the greatest sympathy with him (the King) and the greatest sympathy with the members of his family, apart altogether from any political considerations. It is a matter of charity and a matter of humanity that we should give expression to our sympathy—(applause)—with the monarch who is suffering, and that we should express a hope and very earnest prayer that it may please God to restore him to health and to the leadership of the State which he promised to govern so wisely. I have had an opportunity—every one who has had to read the public papers—of observing his career as Prince of Wales. Owing to the advanced age of the late Queen, he had to take up her position on occasions, and I cannot call to mind a single instance, on which he ever said a word to give offense to any of the Queen's subjects. Since he became King he showed the same genial spirit and the same deep interest in the affairs of the country, and, in fact, a fear that if his illness takes a bad turn, it is due to his own anxiety to consult for the welfare of the people. He bore with terrible pain for days past, in the hope that he might be able to go through with the coronation ceremony, and very likely but for his disinterested zeal in the welfare of country and if he had submitted to an operation earlier it might have given him a greater chance of life. For all these reasons, and though we have often had cause in this country and certainly real cause, to find fault with the King's Government, I don't think we have any cause to find fault with the King himself (applause). I believe I merely give expression to the feeling of the members of this large meeting when I repeat again that we have the deepest sympathy with His Majesty and with the Queen and all dear to them, and that we offer our earnest prayer that His Majesty may soon be restored to health again. (applause).

Some interesting statistics were given out at the recent annual meeting of the Catholic Truth Society of Ireland. Since the last annual meeting there were 803,046 of the society penny books despatched, and 140 new branches of the society were formed throughout the country. In these large tasks the society's operations were not altogether confined to Ireland. The Catholic Truth Society of England volunteered to sell books through their agencies in England, and took 5,000 copies of our books as a first instalment for that purpose. The Catholic Truth Society of Scotland gave first an order for a special edition—5,000 copies—of "A Modern Apostle, Father Matthew," by Miss Bannin, and then an order for a special edition of 6,000 copies of "Rita," the Street Singer," by Rev. Dr. Sheehan, P. P., of Doneraile. Over 3,000 thousand books were sent to New South Wales. During the year the society sent to Brisbane 2,478 books, and two large cases containing 17,568 books were shipped to a firm in Melbourne. During the past year were brought out 50 publications—49 of them penny books and one of a larger size. The one large book is entitled "Mortals Coronas," and consists of a series of papers by Rev. Dr. Sheehan, five of which have appeared as penny pamphlets. The remainder will subsequently be issued in the same form. This book, comprising 200 pages and sold for 2s. 6d. per copy, has been brought out through a publishing firm, Messrs. Brown and Nolan, and without any risk to the society, though it is to have a share in the profits. The success of the society's prayer book is phenomenal, an edition of 100,000 copies having been exhausted in eight months. It has been found necessary to contract for a second hundred thousand. Its appearance gave rise at once to a demand for a penny prayer book in Irish. After many efforts the committee succeeded in getting a most competent Irish scholar to undertake the preparation of such a book. It was hoped that this Gaelic prayer book, which is so eagerly looked for, would have been ready early this year, but the manuscript has not yet reached the committee.

The French Premier, M. Combes, on July 10 instructed the prefects of all the departments to notify the religious orders that have not complied with the Law of the Associations that unless they are dissolved within a week their establishments will be forcibly closed. Two thousand establishments are involved.

In Rome on July 4 Mgr. Sison, of Jersey City, gave a reception to Cardinal Sotillo, at which President Roosevelt, the Pope and Cardinal Sotillo were toasted with great enthusiasm.

An Ancient Foe

To health and happiness is Scrofula—as ugly as ever since time immemorial. It causes bunces in the neck, disfigures the skin, inflames the mucous membrane, wastes the muscles, weakens the bones, reduces the power of resistance to disease and the capacity for recovery, and develops into consumption.

"Two of my children had scrofula sores which kept growing deeper and kept them from going to school for three months. Ointments and medicines did no good until I began giving them Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine caused the sores to heal, and the children have shown no signs of scrofula since." J. W. $100 in subscriptions wanted by Saturday August 2nd Who will be the first to remit?

We sincerely trust our Subscribers will not fail to read over again the "Notice to Subscribers," which will be found on our first page, this issue. It is quite unnecessary for us to reiterate that we mean business in this announcement. All successful newspapers invariably demand their subscriptions in advance and the newspapers of Charlottetown in unitedly adopting this system are not asking subscribers to do anything more than is demanded of them by any foreign papers that they may be receiving. It is the only way to conduct the subscription business and we trust our friends will lend us their substantial aid in making it an unequalled success. Quite a number of our subscribers already pay in advance; they will not take the paper on any other condition. It is just as easy to pay in advance as in any other way and it is very much more agreeable and satisfactory to the publisher. In view of all these facts we earnestly trust and respectfully request that all who have not paid for the current year or for more than the current year will remit at the earliest possible opportunity. In this way only can the payment in advance system be made an eminent success.

Ottawa Weekly Letter.

BLAIR WANTED HALF MILLION.
Hon. A. G. Blair has given another brilliant illustration of his incapacity as a Minister or the Crown, and has incidentally thrown $500,000 to the winds. He rid himself of this insignificant (?) sum, by purchasing a steamer to carry the Intercolonial Railway trains across the Straits of Canso, which divides Cape Breton from Nova Scotia proper. The vessel she is absolutely worthless and now there is a suggestion that the waters in which she was to have sailed should be bridged. If carried out this work will cost several millions. Mr. Blair has fallen down in almost everything he has yet attempted and the prayers of Canadians should be offered that, if the Strait of Canso is to be bridged, the construction may be placed in hands other than those responsible for the disappearance of a cold half million in a vessel condemned during the first weeks of her service.

$10,000 ACCOUNTED FOR.

The dredging of a channel at Porters Lake, Halifax County, Nova Scotia, is one of the many cases where money has been thrown away by the Public Works department. The work was carried on by the day, and only those furnished with certificates by the Liberal district manager were given employment. About $10,000, was spent just previous to the Dominion and Provincial elections, and now it is found that the channel is worthless and its completion has been postponed. The tools used and paid for from the Dominion treasury were allowed to rot by the wayside. After the elections were over, the work was abandoned with unbecoming haste. That accounts for the waste of $10,000 of the $65,000,000 spent last year, with no object served other than the purchase of votes for the Liberal party.

HOW THE MONEY GOES.

The close student of Dominion politics is quickly convinced of the fact, that there is a decided lack of system prevailing at Ottawa in all of the great money spending departments. Take for instance the public works that are being carried out from one end of Canada to the other, and it is impossible to find any two connecting links. A thousand dollars here and a half a million there will be found among the items at the end of each year, but in many cases the money is simply thrown away. The question of transportation has been touched on the very outside edge, and money is being spent at different places, only to prove that the works in course of construction are of little more than local value. At St. John and Halifax grain elevators were erected at the expense of the government, to be used by the Intercolonial Railway. As everybody knows Hon. Mr. Blair made a mess of the grain carrying business, losing thousands of dollars in discovering that he could not compete with other lines. The St. John and Halifax elevators in consequence are lying idle, and the country has $500,000 tied up in a useless way. Many similar instances can be cited, and the aggregate waste of money is enormous. What the country wants is a policy in which system shall play at least a minor part. The government is spending over $65,000,000 per annum at present, yet it is impossible to discover one great work that is being carried on.

WHAT THE FARMER LOSES.

We are told by the Liberal government that it is an impossibility to protect the farmer but no greater fallacy has ever been propounded by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and his followers, despite the fact that the past quarter of a century is strewn by the remains of iniquitous policies, the conceptions of a weary army of powerseekers. The farmer can be protected in Canada quite as effectively as in the United States. There, they enjoy their home market to the fullest extent. The Conservatives have advocated the encouragement of Canadian agriculturalists and the exclusion of the $15,000,000 worth of the products of the farm, that annually find their way into the home markets from the United States. Last year we brought from American farmers:
Animals.....$ 751,623
Breadstuffs..... 7,432,530
Fruits..... 2,433,974
Provisions..... 2,257,183
Seeds and Roots..... 1,205,435
Vegetables..... 370,419
Total..... $14,451,164

WHAT LIBERALS ADVOCATE.

There are a large number of Liberals in Parliament, who advocate Free Trade as the policy best suited to the needs of Canada. And their arguments are so ridiculous, that they are laughable. Hon. Clifford Sifton, Sir Richard Cartwright and others tell us to buy in the cheapest market. A shoemaker going to one of those gentlemen would say, "I understand, Mr. Sifton, you are in favor of buying your shoes where you buy cheapest?" And the reply would be: "Oh yes! I want to help your poor Canadian shoemakers." And so on ad infinitum. Liberals advocate the upbuilding of Canada's industries by purchasing from her rivals. Happy thought! Buy poor textiles, hardware, furniture, clothing and other necessities from slaughter markets. Transfers from Toronto, Montreal and other large centres into the villages of 100 years ago, and you will have reached the ideal of the Free Trader. Send our people abroad to toil in a foreign land; ruin the men who have placed their trust in the future of their birthplace; but buy in the cheapest market. What a magnificent prospect has been opened up to us by those commercial giants, the Ministers of the Interior and Trade and Commerce. Every reduction in the tariff will be a blow struck for foreign competition. What the Conservative party asks for, is "Canada for Canadians," and that can only come with a tariff formed for the benefit of our own Canadian people.

New Commander-in-Chief Arrives in Canada.

The S.S. Lake Champlain arrived at Quebec on Friday, having on board Lord Dundonald, the new Commander-in-Chief of the Canadian forces. Asked for his views upon Canadian subjects in general and the country's militia in particular, he expressed his great pleasure at the prospect of assuming command of the Canadian forces, and at having had under him in South Africa some of its representatives in the shape of Strathcona's Horse. If that fine body of men he could not speak in sufficiently high terms. It had rendered the most signal services on the field, and he was quite confident that his relations with the militia as a whole would be most cordial. One thing which had particularly impressed him was Canada's vastness, and this had been particularly brought home to him by his former journey across the continent and by his sail up its great waterway, the St. Lawrence. This country seemed to him to be the Mother country's great natural outlet and granary, and he could not but wish that his resources and opportunities were more generally brought home to Great Britain's crowded population. While acknowledging the good work that had already been done in the way of spreading information concerning the country, he could not but feel that the best way of making it known was to give free passes and homesteads to representative British farmers. From the coming visit of the twelve British soldiers he expected much good to result. Lord Dundonald is an affable man of fine presence and much apparent activity, and was met here by Lieut.-Col. J. S. Dunbar, Deputy Staff Adjutant.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.
A number of communications have been lying unopened in my desk for some time. I always like to try to enlighten people so far as it lies in my power to do so, especially when good sensible questions like these are asked.

"Oh! I don't don't you murder me for if you do I'll understand."
The writer is unknown to me. Alfred Austin is an Englishman. I believe he eats a hearty diet of cucumbers before starting out to write a poem. It is whispered in London among people who ought to know that one of Alfred's poems was the real cause of the sudden illness of the King.

"Admiral" wants to know if I can furnish the full words and music of that beautiful thing connecting with the lines:
" My name is Peter Emery
As you may remember
I was born on Prince Edward Island,
Down by the Ocean strand."

I am sorry to have to tell Admiral that I cannot supply the full words. So far as I can learn the ballad is a very long one, in fact I don't think it was ever finished, so there are no full words to it, unless you are hinting that the writer of the lines was not perfectly sober when writing said lines. There may be something in this. When he had written about two feet and a half or perhaps a yard of the piece he may possibly have been "stuffed" with writer's cramp, and then he tried to get a stamp, but getting the wrong medicine by mistake, his mind would of course wander from his original intention of finishing the poem.

School Boy: Yes, you are right. It was Vasco di Gama that doubled the Cape of Good Hope. He was very enthusiastic about it. It is said that if he had his own way in the matter he would have tripled and quadrupled it, but the Brit Government was then in power in Italy and Vasco did not get a proper show.

"George" is anxious to know if a boy of 23 is not entitled to more than two dollars a week learning his trade at the parcel-carrying business. He says that when he pays his board out of this amount and puts part of it in the Bank he has very little left for pocket money. Don't be dependent George; pocket money is nice to have, no doubt, but there are instances of great men in history who seem to have got along without it when they were boys. Take your namesake, George Washington, for instance; did you ever hear of any time when he worried about not having the necessary to stand the cigars, soda water or ice-cream for his companions? No, indeed! George just plodded along in his quiet way, chopping cherry trees, chasing Indians, etc., and studying the habits of shot-guns and revolvers, and gave no thought for such trifles. No, you should not stop in the middle of your work to spend an hour with the other little boys playing marbles or cricket. If you do this you are not worth such high wages. If you want to waste time, waste your own time and not that of other people. If you do not get a raise in four years, leave. If you see your way clear to get a job as teller in the bank, I would certainly advise you to take it.

X. Y. Z.: You'd better see a dentist about your bad-chewers. Don't tell your troubles of that kind to me, I know all about it. Dentists are nearly all kind men and like to receive small kindnesses just like other people. Take some kindness with you in your purse; $2.00 would be sufficient if you are going to have four yanked. The reason you have heard so much talk about dentists is because they are in everybody's mouth.

"Percy Yers" says that he has been trying for the past six months to master the difficult art of playing the harmonica or mouth organ and is no further ahead than when he started. Perhaps Percy, you have no ear for music. You should see a professional and get him to examine your ear right away. The fault may be with the instrument as you say some of the notes have a strange blating sound. If the fault is in the instrument it is no wonder you cannot learn. Get some one who understands the delicate mechanism of the humstrum to test it for you. If it's out of tune it's hardly worth while going to the expense of having it repaired—save up and buy a new one. Any music store in Charlottetown will supply you with one for 15 cents. Keep practicing for a year longer and if you cannot learn in that time you'd better give up. A good Jew harp may be procured for ten cents, I think. Whatever you do, don't be reckless.

"Young Sport" wants to know if I can inform him as to what side James Jeffries takes in religion. I don't think he takes any side. He belongs to the Boxers. The Boxers are a thriving community with headquarters in China. They became famous in 1900 and wouldn't do things to the Christians if they had a chance.

"No," "Enquirer," I do not know how much per line the correspondence daily papers get for their contributions. Do doubt they are paid well, or they would not write such high-class articles. You may be gifted that way yourself, so be careful. Think of the sorrow it would cause your friends if they were to suddenly discover that you were gifted that way. No, don't monkey with the printing press, if you have a presentment that the hay press is your proper sphere.

A Red Hot Season.
During the hot season the blood gets over heated, the drain on the system is severe and the appetite is often lost. Burdock Blood Bitters purifies and invigorates the blood, tones up the system and restores the lost appetite.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.
RAILWAY DISASTER.
Indianapolis, July 25.—The most appalling accident in the history of the Pennsylvania Road happened last night when the limited from St. Louis to New York ran into a coal car on the track while going seventy miles an hour. Three bodies were taken out. The Engineer was burned to ashes. Four are missing, sixteen injured, two postal clerks dead. The crash came in the darkness. The whole train was burned up.

BOER FARMERS COMING.
A despatch from Johannesburg says that the Government have decided to select a number of prominent Boer farmers and send them to Canada, New Zealand and Australia in order that they may study modern scientific methods of agriculture.

COULD NOT CAPTURE OUTLAW.
Advices from Tacoma, Wash., state that the prisoner after Harry Tracy, the notorious Oregon outlaw and escaped convict, which had been kept up continuously for forty days with men and bloodhounds, has been abandoned. The pursuit has cost the State of Oregon $10,000. The man has a terrible record as a death dealer.

TWO C. P. R. MEN GONE.
Winnipeg, July 23.—Private Espe and trumpeter Davy of the Canadian Mounted Rifles were drowned in the Assiniboine River by the upsetting of a boat. Davy was 26 years of age and had just returned from London, being one of the coronation contingent. Espe was 29 and returned from South Africa a few days ago.

DIED.

At Blooming Point, on the 17th, inst, after five days illness of pneumonia, Johanna, beloved wife of John McDougall, aged 44 years, leaving a disconsolate husband and ten children, seven boys and three girls, besides two brothers and two sisters to mourn. Deceased was a daughter of the late Joseph McDonald, Apple Valley, and his wife Mary McDonald of Johnston's River. One brother joined the Christian Brothers in San Francisco, some years ago and is known in religion as Brother Victor. He is President of a college of his order in California. Deceased was an affectionate wife and a kind and devoted mother. She was an exemplary Christian woman, kind and charitable, and was much esteemed by all her acquaintances. In her last illness she devoutly received the Sacraments from the dying and departed this life consoled and strengthened by all the rites of holy church. The funeral took place on the 19th, and was very largely attended, not only the parish of Tracadie, but St. Andrews and Orran Ban being largely represented. People of all classes and creeds came to pay their last tributes of respect to the departed. A High Mass of Requiem was sung by the pastor, Rev. P. D. McLaughlin, after which the interment took place in the adjoining cemetery. To the afflicted family we tender our sympathy in their sore bereavement. May her soul rest in peace.

At Mount Stewart, on the 19th inst., Alexander McKenzie, aged 80 years.

At Charlottetown, July 24th, Duncan Chisholm, aged 50 years. R. I. P. In this city, on July 23rd, Catherine Delaney, aged 29 years. R. I. P.

A Sustaining Diet.

These are the enervating days, when, as somebody has said, men drop by the sunstroke as if the Day of Fire had dawned. They are fraught with danger to people whose systems are poorly sustained; and this leads us to say, in the interest of the less robust of our readers, that the full effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla is such as to suggest the propriety of calling this medicine something besides a blood purifier and tonic,—say, a sustaining diet. It makes it much easier to bear the heat, assures refreshing sleep, and will without any doubt avert much sickness at this time of year.

Among the numerous articles which the Hillsborough Bridge/Dredge has taken up at the Railway Wharf were eighteen sticks of hard pine timber, an axe, a cross-cut saw, and a fire-box of a locomotive, about four feet square.

The Trappist monastery at Oka, Quebec, was destroyed by fire on Wednesday. The loss is $800,000.

GEORGE W. Cook, who killed his wife in Halifax on Monday of last week, has been committed to stand his trial for murder at the October sitting of the Supreme Criminal Court.

A HORRIBLE accident occurred in St. John on Monday morning. Frank Barnes, aged 22, a step-son of Mrs. Carrie Freese, Moncton, had his head completely cut off in the I. C. R. while shunting cars.

THREE Island members of the C. M. B. did not come home with the others. Harry Hyde, of Charlottetown, is in hospital in South Africa. Sylvia McCabe of Alexandria and W. R. Barrows of Highfield took their discharge out there and have secured good positions.

A TACOMA, Wash., despatch says that the pursuit after Harry Tracy the notorious Oregon outlaw and escaped convict which had been kept up continually by men and blood-hounds for forty days has been abandoned.

The tea party held at Bear River Station, in aid of St. Margaret's church, on Tuesday the 22nd inst., was most successful. The gross receipts amounted to $1,240 and the net proceeds are in the vicinity of $945. This is surely a most excellent showing.

THOMAS Greyson, of the second Mounted Rifles, who belonged to Brandon, Manitoba, died on the Intercolonial train on Friday afternoon going to Montreal from Halifax. The trooper was thought to be sleeping and was discovered to be dead, when the conductor attempted to get his ticket. Heart disease is supposed to be the cause of death. He leaves a widowed mother in Brandon.

A GLACE BAY, C. B., despatch of the 24th says: Henry Vandertine, of Charlottetown was found dead this morning in bed. He had only arrived yesterday to work with Messrs. Brehaut & Gormond, contractors. Vandertine was a brother-in-law of City Marshal Cameron, of Charlottetown. The cause of death was probably heart failure. The man appeared in good health at the time of retiring last night. The remains were brought home Thursday night by the Princess and the funeral took place on Saturday afternoon.

The high Mass in St. Dunstan's Cathedral on Sunday last was sung by Rev. Father LaFortune, C. S. V., of Jollette, P. Q., and the sermon was preached by Rev. N. N. McKinnon, S. J., of New York, who is now preaching the retreat for the priests of the diocese at St. Dunstan's College. His text was the Gospel of the day and his theme was prayer. In logical plain language he explained the nature and attributes of prayer and the necessity that existed on the part of man to pray to God. Prayer is an acknowledgment of the dependence of man on his Creator, and hence was a duty man owed to God. Prayer is obligatory on the part of man, because God demands it.

C. B. Foster, the District Passenger Agent of the C. P. A New hardware store has been opened in Charlottetown, on the London House Corner. The proprietor is Mr. E. Cameron, a man who thoroughly understands the hardware business, having served for about fifteen years with some of the largest firms in Charlottetown; He is the son of the late Capt. R. Cameron of the S. S. Northumberland, who was also interested in the S. S. Navigation Co. During the past three years Mr. Cameron has been travelling in connection with the business and from this has acquired a knowledge and insight into matters pertaining thereto, that can hardly be estimated. At present he is offering great inducements for cash. He makes a specialty of American hardware. Everything that farmers require may be found at the new store and farmers giving Mr. Cameron a trial may be sure of courteous treatment and satisfaction in their dealings with him. As Mr. Cameron is well known amongst the people here, there is no doubt but that he will receive a liberal share of the people's patronage. Watch for his adv. shortly in this paper.

The big steamer Manchester Commerce, Capt. Baxter, arrived at this port on Sunday afternoon. She is the largest merchant ship that ever called at Charlottetown. On Monday she beached at the head of the Plant Line and Peakes wharves. After all the live stock had been taken on board, with the exception of 200 cattle, she anchored out in the stream, for fear of grounding, and the remainder of the cargo was taken out in lighters. The Manchester is a splendid steamer, being only four or five years old, and is admirably fitted for the carrying of live stock. She had on board when she arrived here from Montreal 400 head of cattle of superior quality and a large quantity of other freight. Following are the shipments from this port for Manchester with the names of shippers: Carvell Bros., 300 sheep; John Wheatley, 350 sheep; Henry Ferrel, 200 sheep; G. H. Toombs, 150 sheep; E. Wheatley, 300 sheep; 40 head of cattle; Geo. Wheatley, 900 sheep; 12 head cattle; B. & M. Rattenbury, 200 sheep; Dillon & Spiller, 2000 boxes cheese; 300 boxes butter; N. Rattenbury, 200 boxes cheese, 200 boxes butter; Prowse & sons, Murray Harbour; 200 boxes cheese; 2 casks fish. The Manchester Commerce is 430 feet long, 48 feet beam, and has a depth of hold of 30 feet. Her net tonnage is 3444, and her carrying capacity 7500 tons exclusive of cattle. She left here for England on Tuesday afternoon. The next steamer will be the Manchester Trader and is suited to our trade as she can come to the wharf without difficulty. The steamer sails for Charlottetown on the 14th of August.

This morning the steamer Olivette was seized by the Customs Department here for violation of the customs laws. One of the passengers had taken ashore a box containing from 8,000 to 10,000 cigarettes without paying duty. The steamer was released on the agent depositing a cheque for $100. It seems strange that a steamer should be responsible for the smuggling acts of one of its passengers but such we understand is the law.—Patriot 29th.

DR. E. H. Horsey, M. P. for North Grey, was accidentally killed Wednesday night by the bursting of a fly wheel at the Sun Portland Cement Co.'s works at Owen Sound, Ont., of which he was the promoter. He had just finished showing a party of visitors through the works and went to give some instructions to the chief engineer when the wheel burst into a hundred pieces and wrecked the building. No others were seriously injured. Dr. Horsey was a Liberal and was first elected to the House of Commons at the last general election.

A VERY sad accident took place near Kinkora on Monday, by which Leonard McBride, youngest son of Mr. Patrick McBride was instantly killed. It appears that the boy that morning went to the Dank River with a muzzle loading gun to shoot a mink, and fell in, wetting the powder so that it would not discharge. He then went home and sitting down outside began to unload it from the muzzle, when it went off, the charge entering above his nose and passing through the brain. His brother and others hearing the report went to the door and were horrified to find the boy lying dead on the ground. Great sympathy is felt for the bereaved parents in their sudden and sad bereavement. The funeral took place yesterday.

THE WONDERFUL FLOWER OF WOXINDON.

An Historical Romance of the Times of Queen Elizabeth.

BY REV. JOSEPH SPILLMAN, S. J.

PUBLISHED BY PERMISSION OF B. HERDER, ST. LOUIS, MO.

(Reproduced from the Montreal True Witness.)

She laughed and said I had learnt in the school of Catherine de Medici to make pretty speeches, and I must not think she believed a word of my flatteries, neatly turned though they were.

I answered (God forgive me) in the words of Holy Scripture: "Suppones sicut angelus Dei!" Nothing escapes your Majesty's penetration! True it is that my uncle spoke in similar terms of your Majesty's almost superhuman beauty, but now my own eyes tell me that far from saying too much, his expression fell short of the truth.

A murmur of approval and assent ran through the assembled bystanders. The Queen gave me a gracious pat with one of the gold tassels hanging from her girdle, saying, "Rise up Master St. Barbe, and follow us in the hall of audience. We must have some conversation with you."

It was plain that the Queen's vanity was tickled, and it has always been a puzzle to me how a rational being, perfectly aware of the falsity of these flatteries, should still take pleasure in them. Many an envious glance was directed towards me, as I followed in the Queen's train. Amongst the maids of honor I saw Miss Cecil. Our eyes met; I fancied I read in her glance something of annoyance, if not scorn on account of the flatteries I had been uttering. The contemptibility of such hollow sycophancy was borne in upon me forcibly, and I felt heartily ashamed of myself.

While this was passing in my mind the Queen had entered the audience chamber with her suite, and taken her seat on a gilt arm chair, beneath a canopy of blue damask, the back of which was decorated with the royal arms and surmounted by a crown. On her right stood Lord Burgleigh; on her left the Lord Chamberlain. Besides myself a few of the nobles and ladies of the Court had the honor to be present at this audience, when various petitioners made their requests to the Queen. I do not remember what the petition consisted in: they were of the nature usually asked of crowned heads. Elizabeth refused some with bitter irony, others are granted; almost invariably, she listened favorably to the application of Catholic nobles who having apostasized, asked for a share in the property of other members of the family, confiscated on account of the owner's adhesion to his faith. But these favors—the reward of apostasy—were often accorded grudgingly and scornfully, as one might throw a dog a bone and give him a kick at the same time.

Presently, it was my lot to witness a scene which will ever remain impressed on my memory. Lady Tregian was announced, and the Groom of the Chambers ushered in a gentle Yeoman of distinguished appearance, dressed in black, still young, but pale and worn with grief. She led by the hand two little boys and a girl, wearing a white frock, held on to the skirt of her gown. On hearing the name of Tregian, an angry frown contracted Elizabeth's brow; this the lady appeared not to notice, at any rate she did not heed it, so bent was she on making her plaint for her petition heard. Throwing herself at the Queen's feet, with her children, she addressed her, at first with a trembling voice, but afterwards with the courage of despair, somewhat in this wise:

"Since your Majesty wields supreme power in this land, and is the earthly representative of the Divine Majesty, your subjects may claim your protection and help in this distress. I venture therefore to approach in my hour of trouble, and to implore for God's sake a gracious hearing on behalf of my unfortunate husband, who has languished in prison for many years, and on behalf of these innocent children."

Elizabeth interrupted her impatiently. "If we were to listen to the gossip of all the women in the kingdom, she said, 'little time would be left for the weighty affairs of the State that engross our attention. Make your story short, good woman. Who are you? What do you want?'"

A flush overspread the countenance of the suppliant, betraying the vexation aroused by this unkindly rebuff. Quickly mastering her emotion, she continued, with the utmost composure of manner: "I am the unhappy wife of Lord Francis Tregian, who is distantly related to the Royal House of Tudor. We lived in peace and comfort at our Castle near Lannocston in Cornwall, until on the testimony of a perjured villain, a wandering musician, bribed by our enemies to work our ruin, my husband was accused of harboring a Seminary Priest, Oathbert

Maine, and under the Statute Praemunitre condemned to loss of goods and chattels and imprisonment for life. I was then expecting the birth of my fourth child, and doubting not that so urgent a sentence—no less than forty witnesses having alleged the accusation to be false—would be reversed, I confidently awaited my husband's return. But instead of this, late one night some efflores of the law presented themselves at our door and took possession, in virtue of the sentence, of all our property. Penetrating into the bed chamber, whither I had retired with the children, they turned us out in the dark and cold to take shelter in a barn until daybreak. I then resolved to seek justice at the hands of your Majesty, as the divinely appointed protector of the oppressed. We, the wife and children of Lord Tregian, begged our bread from village to village, from town to town, across England, all the long weary way from Cornwall to London. Our journey was not half over when the baby was born; but no sooner could I drag my limbs onward than we started anew to throw ourselves on your compassion. Behold us now at your Majesty's feet! speak, my children, and say what I have taught you!"

Francis, the eldest boy, was about to speak; he looked up at the Queen and the words died on his lips, so forbidding was the aspect of that royal lady. "She is angry, mother," he whispered. His little brother began to whimper; the little girl alone had the courage to repeat the formula she had been told to utter: "Please set father free. Let us go back to our home. I will pray to the holy Mother of God for Your Majesty every day."

For a moment I thought that the Queen's heart would be melted, and her better nature prevail. I was mistaken. With a bitter, cynical laugh she turned to the Lord Chamberlain, whose office it was to prepare the list of petitioners to be given her, and said: "I thank you so much, my lord, for this charming little performance. The lady's gesticulation is excellent, she might with advantage play the part of Hecuba at the Globe theatre. She articulates well, also, only at times her manner is rather labored. The children want practice, except the girl, she acted her part quite prettily. 'We will make as if we had not cake.' Then completely changing her tone, she addressed Lady Tregian, who had risen to her feet, indignant at the scorn with which she was treated. 'My lady,' she said, 'we will make as if we had not heard the heavy charges which you have dared to bring against our Law Courts and administration of Justice; there would otherwise be ample ground for committing you to the Tower. Have the goodness to answer one question: Is it not true that you and your husband are stubborn Papists? That you have refused to attend divine worship as by law established? That you will not acknowledge us as the legitimate and supreme Head of the Church of England? Yes, or no?'"

Lady Tregian answered calmly: "Certainly, Your Majesty, we are true children of the ancient Faith. In all civil matters we have every claim on our obedience; but we can never, we will never recognize in you the successor of St. Peter to whom Christ said: 'Thou art the rock, upon which I will build my Church!'" The Queen could no longer control her rage. "That is quite enough!" she exclaimed. "Begone insolent woman, and beware how you venture again to intrude your hateful person into our royal presence. By the soul of King Henry, we are tempted to forget our characteristic gentleness and make such an example of you and your children that not only all England, but all Europe shall talk of it. The sentence of the Court will remain valid; your lord will not be set at liberty until he acknowledges us to be Supreme Head of the English Church, and attends divine service as we have ordained. As for you, you and your brats can beg in the streets, you certainly are not wanting in the requisite effrontery. Lieutenant of the Guard, conduct this woman and her children to the park gates, and send them away from thence. Under no circumstances are they ever to be admitted again."

There is no escaping the germs of consumption; kill them with health. Health is your only means of killing them.

Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil will give you that health, if anything will.

Lady Tregian drew the weeping children to her side, made a deep curtsy to the Queen, and withdrew from the audience chamber, saying as she went, "May Your Majesty find more mercy before the throne of God than you have shown to us!"

CHAPTER XVI.

It is useless to commit to writing the abusive language in which Elizabeth continued to give vent to her anger after the persons who had provoked it had withdrawn. The whole scene affected me most disagreeably, the more so because Mary Stuart's charity towards the poor was yet fresh in my memory.

Presently the Queen rose, and was conducted by Lord Burgleigh into her private cabinet, whither I was shortly summoned. I found her seated at a writing table, on which was a pile of papers, occupied in tracing the large letters with flourishes forming her well known signature. For a long time I remained standing unnoticed at the door, so that I had the opportunity of observing the subject of the Gobelins tapestry on the walls, and the sumptuous furniture of the apartment. The tapestry represented the finding of the infant Moses by Pharaoh's daughter; an inscription upon a scroll explaining that as Pharaoh's daughter saved Moses from death, so Elizabeth the daughter of the heavenly King, had rescued the pure Gospel from the destruction wherewith the Pope, the Pharaoh of heathen Egypt, had threatened it.

At length the Queen looked up, laid aside the swan quill in her hand, and beckoned to me not unkindly to approach. At three paces distant from her feet I knelt down; but she graciously bade me rise, and even took my seat upon a low stool. She addressed a great many questions to me about Paris, about the King and the Queen Mother, and I told her as many Court scandals as I could remember out of the number that are always rife in the French Court. She listened with a malicious pleasure; then she asked about the Duke of Guise, and what prospect there was for Henry of Navarre. I replied that he was almost certain of the crown, the only doubt being whether he would give up the reformed religion for the sake of it.

"No," she replied, "everybody has not our courage. We might have had peaceful times, had we cast ourselves at the Pope's feet, and retained the fable of the mass. As it is, not only are the Papists incessantly plotting against us, but the Puritans also make our life a burden to us." She then began to speak of the situation of affairs in the Low Countries, and inquired what was thought of Leicester at Paris. As I knew that he no longer stood as high as he formerly did in his royal mistress's favor, I did not scruple to say that his achievements had disappointed the expectations formed of him; but the fortunes of war did not always correspond to the qualities and talents of great generals. "Qualities and talents!" she broke out. Dudley is an idle boaster, a miles gloriosus, and nothing more! To hear him talk you might fancy him a great conqueror, but he is a fool compared with Parma. And now contrary to our express command, he has arrogated to himself the title of Governor-General of the States. I have a good mind to recall him, and let him make a triumphal entry into the Tower! The support of the evangelical cause in the Netherlands has already cost us a mint of money; and it has struck me that the best way would be simply to surrender to the King of Spain the four seaports which were conceded to me by the treaty to hold as a security, on condition that he should refund us our war expenses, and do with the insurgent as seems right to his conscience and his honor as a king. That would be the surest means of concluding a permanent peace with Philip II., and once for all delivering our subjects from the apprehension of a Spanish invasion, which every year appears more alarming. What is your opinion?"

I was quite aghast at such a proposition, for it was nothing short of a shameful desertion of our allies. Yet I was enough of a courtier to mask the indignation it aroused within me, and reply that I was but an inexperienced youth, and could not venture to put forward my opinion in the presence of so wise and enlightened a monarch. The boldness of the scheme took away my breath; my only fear was that the abandonment of our Protestant brethren would bring us into ill odor with the partisans of the Reformation. Beside, it seemed rather hazardous to have the Spaniards for such near neighbors. But doubtless this and all other considerations had been duly weighed long since by Her Majesty. Feeling myself on dangerous ground, for the sake of changing the conversation, I remarked that in accordance with uncle's commands, I had visited Oathbert a few days ago, to see whether the orders of the Privy Council in regard to their distinguished prisoner were fully carried out.

MON ESPERANCE.

(From the French of Sister Therese)

TRANSLATED BY SUSAN L. EMBRY.

Though in a foreign land I dwell afar, I taste in dreams the endless joys of heaven.

Fain would I fly beyond the farthest star, And see the wonders to the ransomed given!

No more the sense of exile weighs on me, When once I dream of that immortal day.

To my true fatherland, dear God I see, For the first time I soon shall fly away.

Ah! give me, Jesus! wings as white as snow, So that towards Thee I soon may take my flight.

I long to be where flowers unfading blow; I long to see Thee, O my heart's Delight!

I long to fly to Mary's mother-arms,— To rest upon that spotless throne of bliss; And sheltered there from troubles and alarms

For the first time to feel her gentle kiss.

Thy first sweet smile of welcoming delight Soon show, O Jesus! to Thy lowly bride.

O'ercome with rapture at that wondrous sight, Within Thy Sacred Heart, ah! let me hide.

O happy moment! and O heavenly grace! When I shall hear Thee, Jesus! speak to me; And the full vision of Thy glorious face

For the first time my longing eyes shall see.

Thou knowest well, my only martyrdom

Is love, O Heart of Jesus Christ! for Thee; And if my soul craves for its heavenly home,

'Tis but to love Thee more, eternally.

Above, when Thy sweet Face unveiled I see, Measure our bounds shall to my love be given.

Forever my delight shall seem as new As the first time my spirit entered heaven.
