Pub in the SUB opens Thursday

Facet of Bar Services' new financial structure

by Karen Burgess

Thursday, September 10 will mark the opening of UNB Bar Services newest venture, a pub on the bottom floor of the Student Union Building.

The name of the pub, which is currently referred to as "the Pub in the Sub" by those involved, will be chosen as part of a contest to be held within the next few months.

Rick Cuthbertson, manager of Bar Services, explains that students will be given the chance to suggest names for the establishment by filling out ballots which will be found in copies of the Beaverbook and at the Pub itself.

The Pub will have food service available and will serve standard Pub stock such as draft, bottled beer and coolers. Residence food vouchers will be accepted on menu items, which will include popular pub dishes such as nachos and chicken wings.

A section of the establishment will be available for booking for university groups and functions, but regular pub operations will not be completely interrupted.

One special feature of the Pub in the Sub which sets it apart from other establishments of its kind is its smoking policy. It will come as a pleasant surprise to those bothered by second hand cigarette smoke that the new Pub will be totally smoke free.

When asked if he foresees difficulties in competing with the SUB's other establishment, the College Hill Social Club, Cuthbertson says that he sees the relationship as being one of "peaceful coexistence" instead of competition. He explains that part of the concept of an on campus pub was to catch the overflow of weekend customers from the Social Club.

"We'll help them and they'll help us. Instead of someone going down to the Dock to party before going to the Social Club, they can save themselves the taxi fare downtown and just come to our place" he says.

The pub is just one facet of a restructuring of Campus Bar Services, which has been loosing money in past years.

Cuthbertson says that the Bar Services "Roadshow", the section of the organization which sets up at different locations around campus to provide bar services at concerts and other functions, has also undergone changes which, if successful, will make the venture more commercially viable.

In the past, if Bar Services hosted an event they required a guarantee from event sponsors that unforeseen expenses would be covered if bar sales were lower than expected. Now, those putting on the event will arrange for known expenses, such as hiring campus police, and will keep all receipts from ticket sales, while Bar Services will keep all receipts from bar sales.

In addition, Bar Services have restructured their price system and, at the new pub, it will be possible for university groups to arrange for their members to pay reduced beer prices.

Cuthbertson says that the idea for the pub has been around for several years but has only been in the forefront for serious consideration for about a year.

Community based policing begun in UNB area

by Karen Burgess

The Fredericton City Police have begun an innovative new community based policing program which, for the next few months, will be centered in the area surrounding UNB.

The Mobile Community Police section has, as its mobile office, a city-owned RV painted by local artist Ron Sajak.

The four officers serving in this section, Constables Errol Phillips, Katherine Alchorn, Tim Durling and Barry MacKnight, also patrolled Fredericton city streets this summer on mountain bikes.

Constable MacKnight explains that the whole idea of the community based office and the bike patrols is to increase the public's access to their police force.

Part of the new program includes holding public meetings with members of the targeted community to find out what problems should have priority.

MacKnight comments that the University community is a prime example of an area where dialogue is important between the inhabitants and police. He says that as students are often only temporary inhabitants of a city they often do not feel they are a part of their surrounding community.

To rectify some of the problems caused by this lack of identification with the community, such as loud parties and vandalism, the Mobile Community Police section will be visible at various university functions, including Frosh Week activities at the Aitken Centre. MacKnight feels that this involvement will be a positive way to welcome new students to the Fredericton area.

However, MacKnight points out that the section was not established primarily for public relation functions but to be involved in "problem solving policing". He explains: "We have community meetings to see what problems residents see as pertinent. We can do whatever the people want us to do (to solve those problems.)"

MacKnight says much of the time the problems facing community members can be worked out with some association with the police, but are not actually police matters.

He sees the dialogue between police and residents as empowering the community to solve its own problems. MacKnight cites the establishment of the College Hill Neighborhood Association, and its campaign to reduce the number of unsightly or unsafe premises in its area, as an example of successful community organization.

The Fredericton Police Force's community based program is different than any other in North America.

The four-member section is made up of officers of the same rank who work together as equals. MacKnight explains that

Geologist discusses effects of explosion

(UNBPRI) A geologist visiting the University of New Brunswick in Fredericton will give a public talk on the massive scar structure, which is located just outside Johannesburg, South Africa, and was created on the earth's surface 2,000 million years ago by an explosion of unknown origin.

Uwe Reimold of the Economic Geology Research Unit at the University of the Witwatersrand in Johannesburg will speak on Thursday, Sept. 10, at 3:30 pm in Room F-24 of the Forestry and Geology Building. His talk is entitled Geology of the Vredefort Crypto-explosion Structure, South Africa.

The Vredefort structure, named after the small farming community near it, measures over 100 kilometers in diameter. Dr. Reimold will discuss the viability of theories accounting for its creation. One widely held theory attributes its origin to a massive volcanic eruption. Another theory attributes its origin to an impact with a very large meteorite. Meteorites can travel from 20 to 30 kilometers per second after entering the earth's atmosphere and can measure up to 10 kilometers or more in diameter. On impact with the earth's surface, such a meteorite can pressurize rock, melt and vaporize it, and make it rain down in glass shards. The effects on the rock are not well understood and are of particular interest to geologists.

Dr. Reynold's talk is sponsored by UNB's department of geology. John Spray, a professor in the department, and some of his graduate students are conducting research on a Canadian structure very similar to the one at Vredefort. Located in Sudbury, Ont., it contains one of the world's largest nickel deposits.

A Truly Strange Place To Be

UNB dean appointed new Vice President

(UNBPRI) The University of New Brunswick has appointed an experienced dean and respected educator to a new vice-presidency.

Frank Wilson became the first to serve as UNB's vice-president (research and international co-operation) when he began a six-year term on May 1.

The new vice-presidency was created in response to rapid growth in UNB's research activity over the past decade and an increasing awareness of the value of international linkages in teaching, research and community development. It will embrace a wide range of responsibilities, including expanded relations with government and industrial organizations concerning research initiatives and funding, as well as the management, co-ordination and stimulation of international programs and initiatives. The office will also have responsibility for the allocation of internal research funds ant UNB.

Known for his energy and dedication, Dr. Wilson has already begun tackling the challenges of his new office. "It's extremely important for universities to attract more external funding for research and development that meet the needs of business, industry and the community at large as well as academic needs," Dr. Wilson asserted. "UNB has an excellent track record in research, so I'm confident we can increase that external support." The university now attracts more than $14 million in research grants and contracts annually.

The new vice-president has some areas in mind for special attention. "Funding support for research in the humanities and social sciences in critical and will require a concerted effort by the research office and faculty members," Dr. Wilson stated. "We will also be giving specific attention to the establishment of research centers and externally funded research and teaching chairs."

On the international scene, Dr. Wilson says UNB has been involved for decades with international student education and collaborative projects in countries around the world, and he would like to expand that activity to the mutual benefit of both UNB and its international partners.

Dr. Wilson became UNB's first dean of students in 1971 and was appointed dean of engineering in 1981. His 1989 appointment as dean of graduate studies and research made him the first faculty member of UNB to be appointed to three different decanal offices. He has been active on UNB's Board of Governors, Fredericton Senate and Associated Alumni, and has served on numerous university committees.

Community policing

this is innovative because traditionally, policing organizations are very hierarchical. The Fredericton Mobile Community Police section, because it works without a constant, on site supervisor, can operate "unhindered by what is perceived as a 'management point of view'" MacKnight says.

The Constable believes that many aspects of the section's structure contributed to its success in its last base, Marysville, but says that he and the other members of his section are constantly adapting new ideas to better serve the communities in which they are centered.

The Mobile Community Police section will hold meetings with university-area residents in the near future so that the section can get its mandate from concerned inhabitants.

The section's mobile office is presently located across from the Goody Shop on Albert Street. All are invited to visit the office to discuss their concerns about the community or to learn more about the Mobile Community Police section and its operations.

EDITORIAL

by Allan Carter

Orientation week always seems to be a nuisance to those of us who figure it is just an unnecessary foolish expenditure by the Student Union. When I came to UNB four years ago the last thing I wanted to do was spend a week pretending I was enjoying orientation activities. And to make matters worse, I also had to contend with the orientation activities which my residence house had so thoughtfully created for my pleasure.

But for the most part I enjoyed myself. During orientation week I realized that many of the people I met were people I never would have become acquainted with since we were not enrolled in the same studies. In fact, the only thing which I had in common with many of them was that we were all frosh. And only through zany and enjoyable orientation activities can one find and share that common bond with other first year students. So if you can swallow a bit of your pride and partake in orientation week, I urge you to do so. For some of us, it is impossible to attend every event, I know I didn't. But attend as many as you can because, like it or not, orientation is for a whole week and it usually only occurs once in a person's lifetime, so you may as well enjoy it.

During orientation week, many students will be scrambling to get enrolled in courses and to pay the hefty tuition fee. As usual tuition rates have gone up once more and the university conveniently did not formally announce the fee hike until classes were finished last year. Besides fees, all of us have matters which we will have to contend with this year. Some students have to worry about trying to find a reputable day care centre or a dependable baby-sitter to take care of their children while they attend classes. Other students will spend their spare time trying to find a part time job so they will have enough money to continue their education after Christmas. International students will experience the joys and horrors of Canadian living (including the weather). And through all of this many of us, including the frosh, will be wondering just what exactly we are doing at university. People are currently stating that an education, a degree, will not guarantee a person a job anymore. I like that word "anymore" because I don't think a degree ever guaranteed anybody a job. In fact, nothing comes with guarantees, aside from some of the merchandise we purchase and even those guarantees usually come with attached strings.

If a student is attending university for the sole purpose of beefing up his/her resume that student will have a pretty uneventful, unfulfilling academic career. Of course finding a job someday is part of most students' agendas, but let us hope that we are at university for other reasons. These other reasons will vary greatly since we all come from different families, different cultures and different countries. However, some reasons will most definitely be common for all students: a hunger for knowledge and a need to find out what one's capabilities are and developing them.

The first thing I discovered when I came to UNB was that I spent most of my first year trying to figure out what I wanted to do. In fact, it took me three years before I even decided what my major was going to be. Many have told me that my time and money has been wasted, but I disagree. Watching fellow students I have concluded that discovering the studies which you truly enjoy is all part of a process which every student must go through. As a first year student, it may dawn on you half way through the term that the courses you have enrolled in are just not what appeals to you. The important thing to remember if this does occur is that your time has not been wasted. Time is only wasted if we stubbornly hold onto studies when we know they don't appeal to us. Of course, to meet degree requirements, we all have to take certain courses which we never would have picked on our own in a million years. But in comparison to high school, university offers us much more freedom. So if you discover your area of interest on your first try, great. However, if you don't, remember nothing is etched in stone and while the ultimate decision is yours there are deans and faculty advisors ready to give advice, if necessary.

Keep in mind that knowledge is attained almost anywhere if one is open to it and it is the duty of every university student to get involved, one way or another. Fortunately, UNB has many different clubs and societies to pick from. In addition, there are many different sport teams which one can join. I just recently read an article (which I believe is to be printed in our sports section this week) where it is stated that nobody is ever "cut" from Rugby. I am not sure what the attitude is like with other sport teams here at UNB, but I do know that in most of the clubs and organizations at UNB, like the Rugby team, people are not "cut". So take a good look around and make use of your Beaverbook which has much information on the clubs and societies and usually provides contact numbers. Also keep in mind that next week UNB's Orientation crew is hosting Activity Day where students have an opportunity to meet people who are involved with clubs and societies on campus. This is a great opportunity for students, whether they be in their first year or their fifth, to find out more about any organization which they may be interested in.

I am confident that you will find your niche somewhere on campus and that you will discover that the knowledge which you will attain through campus involvement is invaluable. Many students claim that they don't have time to get involved, but the beauty of most of the clubs and societies at UNB is that you only devote as much time as you can afford. Like the Bruns, most of these clubs and societies are volunteer organizations so any commitment, small or large, is welcomed and appreciated. If you are interested in what we do here at the Bruns or know you would like to be a member, drop in soon and say hello.

But in the meantime enjoy orientation week.

The Brunswickan Needs Typesetters!

What is a typesetter?

A typesetter is one of those extraordinary people who types the stories and columns which appear in The Brunswickan each and every week.

Who can be a typesetter?

If you can type at least 40 words per minute, you can be a typesetter. We will teach you how to use one of our truly user friendly Macintosh computers.

Why be a typesetter?

Because:

1. You get to work for the Bruns.
2. You get to work for the Bruns and be paid for it. Unlike the editors and staffers who are overworked and NOT PAID!
3. We have flexible hours. The Bruns tends to work on a 24 hour schedule, we're always open.
4. It's a great way to get involved at UNB plus have a part-time job.
5. There are fringe benefits, but those are a secret, until you become a Brunsie.

If this sounds like a job for you, contact Jayde at the Brunswickan, 453-4983, or drop by The Brunswickan, Rm 35 in the SUB.

DEAR FROSHPERSONS,

Wooie!! U.N.B. Orientation 1992 just cannot wait to meet you. This year, U.N.B. Orientation is celebrating its 85th year.

The Orientation committee is made up of 165 dedicated volunteers. These students give up their last week of summer vacation to help all the new students get settled and adjusted. Frosh week promises to be a super experience this year.

There are several 'must do' events. The Much Music Video Toga Dance on Tuesday night is destined to be a blast. This event requires only one thing, a sense of adventure. So put on your favorite sheet, curtain, or tablecloth and TOGA, TOGA, TOGA.

Adventure Day on Wednesday offers free BBQ on the Sub patio, as well as other, well, interesting events for those that didn't get enough at the Aitken Centre.

Wednesday night you can have an "out of body" experience with the Amazing Santini, where he will be hosting a show on the powers of suggestion. A dance will be held later that night.

If you have the urge to gamble your student loan away (just kidding), and dress up, then don't miss the Black and White Casino/Live Band on Thursday night.

Friday, there is a Mystery Hunt and Ice Cream Social. This is a great opportunity for you to become familiar with the campus. (Continued at end of schedule)

As the school year approaches so does the second annual Jazz and Blues Festival. With a veritable cornucopia of local and nationally renowned acts, this year's festival "promises" to be even better than last years.

Don't miss the Festival and the upcoming Brunswickan review of what went on...

BOMBERS WIN!

by Eric Drummie
The Brunswickan Sports Department has covered many great events at UNB, like the one pictured here. We have also covered many events abroad including the '84 Grey Cup, '85 CIAU Hockey Finals, Atlantic Bowls, Lady's Final 8 in Basketball, the Heart Curling championships and many more.

The Sports Department allows you the opportunity to learn how the UNB Athletics program works as well as travel to other schools to watch UNB teams in action. We are always looking for new writers and photographers to cover the numerous sports we have here at UNB: Soccer, Field Hockey, Men's & Ladies Basketball, Men's & Ladies Volleyball, X-Country Running, Ice Hockey, Wrestling and Men's & Ladies' Swimming.

This year is starting early with the first Soccer game taking place this weekend, so why not drop by and join the Sports Department and have some fun!

BROPHY RECEIVES TROPHY

BEAT TOMMIES 21-0 TAKE NBCRFU TITLE

After going down ten points in the first game at Gatham, the U.N.B. Red Bombers came storming back as they played hosts at College Field on Saturday. This game was a complete reversal in nearly every respect as the Bombers rammed across a 21-0 score to take the total point series by an eleven point margin. A tremendously spirited crowd took in the game and spoke of the game afterwards as the best they ever witnessed in Fredericton.

A quietly aggressive Red Bombers team took the field in a determined drive to bring the silverware home. After an exchange of downs, the Red and Black squad were threatening the St. Thomas end zone. Rod Harris, hard driving halfback, smashed across on a cross buck for the opening touchdown and Benson's convert was good.

St. Thomas received the ball but were soon deep in their own territory at U.N.B. drove in. Suddenly, as the Tommies passed, a fumble occurred only to be picked up by the Bombers' Ian Watson. Ian scampered into the pay zone after a thirty yard run to post U.N.B.'s second major before the game was ten minutes old. Again Benson's toe found the mark as the score read 12-0 for U.N.B. to put the Bombers two points up in the standings for the series. Play passed from team to team as each struggled to better their positions, but the Bombers continued to hold down the play. Lin Smith's long boots for U.N.B. allowed the Red and Black men to ease the pressure on many occasions as the first half ended 12-0 for U.N.B.

Still grim and quiet the Bombers came into the third quarter playing heads up ball. Several times St. Thomas threatened to break through but each time were caught short by an alert U.N.B. defence. Near the end of the third quarter Brophy manoeuvred his squad in front of the Tommies' goal posts and Mike O'Connor kicked for a field goal. He sliced the uprights for three points making it 15-0.

Both teams had passed periodically and now, in the fourth quarter Brophy's arm found the spot. Passing beautifully to Harris, the latter went all the way for the Red Bombers' third touchdown. O'Connor's kick was good to end the scoring at 21-0.

With their backs very definitely to the wall the Tommies tried desperately to push over a major, but on a smashing goal line stand the Bombers held them off. With his backfield operating in their own end zone, Brophy drove out on two quarter back sneaks; and full-back Phil Bird took the ball up to the Bombers own 25 on an off tackle smash. Out in the clear, Lin Smith delivered with a beautiful kick to end the game.

UNB Rugby starts the Fall

- two games on Saturday mark the beginning of the season

The UNB Rugby Football Club opens the 1952 season on College Field on September 12 with the 2nd team playing Oromocto RFC at 1 pm and the 1st team taking on the Saint John Trojans at 3 pm. UNB won the Eastern Canada Universities Championship last fall by defeating Bishop's 31-0. The Club, which was founded in 1967, has fielded two teams every year since 1970 and is renowned as much for its esprit de corps as for its athletic prowess and numerous championships. New players, whether experienced or not, are keenly sought. No-one who wants to play rugby for UNB is ever "cut." New-comers are introduced to the demands and skills of this greatest of world game and are valued by the Club as much as are its veterans. Practices are held on Buchanan Field, next to the Gym, from 5 to 7 Monday through Friday during the first two weeks of term; thereafter, practices take place on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

A long-standing tradition with UNB RFC is to go on tour immediately after final examinations in the spring. This past spring, UNB - "the Ironmen" - played six matches in ten days, from New England to Maryland, winning five and drawing one.

The University of New Hampshire, Holy Cross, Monmouth RFC, Salisbury State University, and Eastern Shore RFC were beaten; the tied game was against the Jersey Shore Sharks. UNB scored 158 points while surrendering a mere 26.

Coming up:

Saturday, September 12,
College Field, 1 pm

UNB B vs Oromocto RFC and at 3 pm

UNB A vs Saint John Trojans.
