

FATED TO LOVE HER

CHAPTER X.

Proceeding down the lane, they presently encountered an old man mounted on a spirited horse and followed by a boy of dogs. He wore a buff coat and waistcoat, light-colored cord gaiters, and huge, horned boots. His face was hard and stolid, the complexion weather-beaten, the blue eyes small and keen, the forehead knotty, bordered on either side by tufts of thick gray hair. The features might have been carved from some rugged rock upon his native moor.

On perceiving James, he drew in his horse and raised his brown straw hat. No smile, no change of any kind, relaxed the rigid countenance. But a certain rough courtesy lurked in his manner as he turned to Gabrielle and acknowledged her presence by a bow.

"You'll try to get over to-morrow, Holt. Does he suffer much?" "He doesn't suffer much, as I can judge; it's weakness an' 't cough. An' he won't lig 't bed. He wur allus an outdoor lad; an' o' days look thissen, 'e can't keep him 't 's time. He gien a deal o' trouble 't 's time, but that's all o'er. O man let bygones be bygones, O reckon."

"You'll not repeat it, Holt, when he's gone." "Mebbe not, as ta 't lad; but if 'e ever gets hoald o' us as has led him astray, O'll serve 'em out, an' nooa mistake, soon 'e will, for they'd a let him be, he'd a lived ta shoot na oies, as he oughter, an' taken 't farm their me, an' O did efter ma feyther. An' nah he's wasting an' a wasting; if 'e could, O'd sap 't loives o' their lads, as they've sapped 't loive o' moine. O'll neer forgit 'em."

James shook his head. "You will feel differently in a few months' time, Holt," said he. "That way of thinking is not right. We'll talk it over to-morrow."

"All 't talkin' an' 't unverse wiern't change me, sir. Nohbut you yer' welcome ta say you yer' a mind ta say. O'm deeply indebted ta yer, Mester Gordon. If 't hadn't a been for you, he'd happen never a sh's whooman again. Soor you'll come to-torrow, an' good-day ta yer, sir. Good-day, miss."

Setting abrupt spurs to his horse, the old man wheeled around and rode rapidly away in the direction from which he had come, pursued by the dogs, all barking and a cloud of dust.

"That's a curious old specimen of humanity!" said James, looking after him; "there is something grand about him, too—something above the average. I can't help rather admiring that unrelenting spirit, though I feel myself in duty bound to preach its enormity, as best I can."

"Poor old man! I pity him so very much," cried Gabrielle. "How I wish I could do something to comfort him!" "My dear Gabrielle," said James, with a smile, "the comfort for which I am thirsting is beyond your comprehension. In his present state, nothing short of serenity would be any comfort to him. And, indeed, I am scarcely wonder, I never knew a finer young fellow than that son of his a year or two ago. But he was weak and flush of money, and he got among bad company, who enticed him into ways of gambling and drinking, and a good deal besides. At last he became entangled in a poaching ring, and was sent to jail. Now old Holt looks upon the game laws as fully equal, if not superior, to the Ten Commandments. I fancy, that made him distrust his son forthwith. He even refused to pay the fine; the poor fellow had to serve out his month on the treadmill. After that he grew reckless, and went from bad to worse. I fear that the life which he has been leading at Rotherbridge would not bear examination."

he passed to the discussion of other topics; and—must it be admitted?—his handsomeness, not the least, united to dissipate the cloud, and he became her Admirable (Orlinton) once more. In the afternoon, Olivia and Gabrielle repaired to the village green; which, he observed, was a model green, fashioned, under James' directions, from the remains of an old common. He had collected every characteristic by which, in fiction, if not always in real life, the village green, time out of mind, has been distinguished. The pool, "gabbled o'er by noisy geese"; the tree, encircled by the wooden seat; the well, with its wooden bucket; the broad expanse of turf, where "the playful children, 'not let loose from school,' might scamper at will," all were here.

And here, on this afternoon, the May pole stood, with a flowery throne for the May queen, while around, about—here, there, and everywhere—were scattered, in holiday attire, the country people. Among them, certain young men, about to compete in athletic sports, strutted, minus coat and waistcoat; or, the admiration of all beholders, practical leaps and races, in parties of two and three. The schoolmaster, also master of all ceremonies, was bustling to and fro, shouting directions to a humble satellite, who was engaged in the measurement of distances, and in the adjustment of various knotty points connected with the games. Hard by was a large white tent, under which the country people, among them, certain young men, about to compete in athletic sports, strutted, minus coat and waistcoat; or, the admiration of all beholders, practical leaps and races, in parties of two and three.

She found herself standing with James and Miss Featherstone, a little apart from the rest. The Bijou's loveliness was by no means lost upon Gabrielle. She gazed entranced, and drank it in—then looked at James; but his face was, as usual, impenetrable.

"We are off to London next week," "Indeed?" said James. "Of course you are going?" "Not en famille, this year."

"Oh!" (with a glance at Gabrielle's mourning) "what will Marian and Cicely say to that?" (To be continued.)

The biggest and best production seen in the Grand this season was the production of Puccini's famous grand opera, "Madam Butterfly," by Henry Savage's English Opera Co.

In every way the performances were a most pronounced success—musically, socially and financially.

When the curtain went up the atmosphere of the scene had a visible effect on the audience.

The flower splendor of the Orient was revealed as it has never been revealed here. In the first act the scene was of a flower garden on a slight overlooking the Bay of Nagasaki.

"Madam Butterfly" is founded on works of John Luther Long and Henry Bateau, while the music is the composition of Giacomo Puccini.

FOR THE HOUSE WIFE.

Coal From Old Skirt.

From the ruffle of an old black silk undershirt I made a pretty "coat." It fastened in the back and extended below the hips. The front was V shape, the back square. Being unable to obtain a narrow braid with open centre, the pieces were joined together by means of a narrow satchel braid sewed on each piece and feather stitched on the wrong side.

Machine Conveniences.

Many little humors and wrought up feelings are created at the machine. A great many steps may be saved by equipping yourself at the start with a few helps. If you are working on fine white goods, have two spools of thread the same size, so if your bobbin should run out it will not necessitate unthreading the needle to refill.

For the Sewing Room.

We make aprons of white pique and also of colored chambray. A full pleated duck skirt when ripped will make two aprons. Full length and with pockets that are useful and a great saving in dresses.

Keep Skirt and Waist Adjusted.

Take a piece of tape long enough to go around the waist, stitch to the waist line for about six inches in the back, leaving the ends to lie in the front. Then sew on three good sized brass eyes, equal distance apart. Sew on the skirt hand corresponding hooks. These can be used to the laundry without fear of rust, or in any way damaging the finest lingerie waist.

Mushroom Hat From Hood Style.

Take your old summer hood hats and turn them out and make the new spring mushroom shape out of them. When turning brim over reverse crown. If crown is new it may be dated in to get the new shape, thus making one of the Parisian models.

Women's Rights in Brazil.

"The curse of Brazil lies in the great illiteracy of its men and women," declared Edward B. Norris, an Englishman who has been many years a resident of Rio Janeiro. "According to the official government figures the illiteracy is eighty per cent. Certainly a country where only one man in five can read and write and only one woman in twenty has cause to blush at the ignorance of its people. A country of enormous size, yet with a population of only 16,000,000, Brazil is sadly handicapped by lack of modern enterprise and an enlightened citizenship. One of the most encouraging features of the country is the low esteem in which woman is held. A great many Brazilian girls marry by the time they are twelve years old and are grandmothers long before they are thirty. Woman is regarded as a chattel, and in many a household of the republic never opens her mouth except at the bidding of her husband." - Baltimore American

Why Paper Decays.

The brownish spots which appear in old books are really due to the ravages of bacteria, says Popular Mechanics. The tiny destroyer is especially fond of starched paper and its propagation is promoted by damp. It has been well understood that damp produced discoloration and decay, but the share of the microbe in the operation has not hitherto been suspected. Tiny fungus or mold is responsible for gray and black marks upon old papers. In spotting the surface the fungus helps break down the fabric and hasten the process of its destruction.

WHAT IS GOING ON NOW

NEITHER MAN GOT A FALL.

Hackenschmidt Gave Up After Two Hour's Wrestling.

Gotch Declared the Winner at the Big Bout in Chicago—McCarthy Rode Four Winners at Bennings Yesterday.

Chicago, Saturday, April 4.—After two hours and one minute of nerve-racking wrestling, Frank Gotch won from George Hackenschmidt, because Hack was so tired he was compelled to quit.

At 10.25 Referee Smith called the two men together and gave them their final instructions. At 10.30, time was called, and the men went to the centre of the ring. They walked around, watching each other carefully and grappling for an opening. Gotch shoved Hack's head around several times, and after a bit of this kind of work, Hack suddenly reached out and they went to a lock with heads together. They broke loose, but immediately returned to the position. In the scuffle Hack smacked Gotch alongside the head, but smiled and apologized. The first real move was made by Hack. He dropped to one knee and tried to get Gotch by the knees, failing, however.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

Chicago, Ill., April 3.—George Hackenschmidt quit in his match with Frank Gotch here last night after the referee had refused his request to call the match a draw, thus forfeiting the title of catch-as-catch-can champion of the world to the American wrestler.

Gotch was almost always on the defensive. Hackenschmidt almost always advanced without a sign of a hold. It annoyed the Russian, as did Gotch's refusal to continue, realizing that he could not win from the butcher boy, and though bleeding from an old cut under the eye, opened by the Iowa farmer's head.

PIGEON RACING.

Hamilton Club Will Likely Race From Eastern Points.

Considerable discussion took place at last night's meeting of the Hamilton Homing Pigeon Club in regard to race points. Many of the members favored racing from Toronto, Peterboro and eastern points, but the matter was finally referred to the Executive Committee to settle.

FIRE FIGHTERS WON.

Policemen Defeated in Benefit Baseball Match.

Despite counter attractions a large crowd watched the game of indoor baseball at the Alexandra pavilion last night between the civic firemen and the police. The police quickly discovered that the diamond was one of the places they are not supreme and the firemen carried off the honors. The score was 17 to 16. In the last play of the ninth the police went to bat with six runs needed to tie the score. With two out they got five runs and their sixth run was on third base when the last man was pounded out the second of the day for John E. Madden, the wizard of Hamburg Place. High Range and Abandon were always odds-on favorites, and they were backed off the boards. Von Laer had many backers, but they were playing in the hope that something would happen to the Madden entry. Nothing did happen, however, the stable winning easily from Elizabeth Sweeney at long odds, with Tim Pippin third.

ELLISON IN THE STAND.

New Orleans, April 4.—The racing at the Fair Grounds was, perhaps, the most unsatisfactory day of the sport reversal of form displayed by Ellison's Temaco, who had Notter in the saddle, that the stewards were forced by public opinion to call both the owner and rider of the horse into the stand. The reversal resulted with Jack Witt as the winner of the handicap, after being heavily played by the paddock set, who are said to have had the race "in."

ORR BROS. WON.

Toronto, April 4.—One of the most unique contests ever arranged in bowling circles was successfully carried out on the Canadian Bowling Club drives last evening, when the much-heralded "Brotherly Love" contest was fought out along friendly lines. Much preliminary arrangement and speculation was attached to the occasion, and the fact that it required no less than three of a kind, to wit, brothers, to qualify, accounted for the large but wistful and cheering supporters who longingly viewed the competition, which finished as follows:

Orr Bros., Toronto—543 583 534 524 512—2,716
Disette Bros., Toronto—491 551 553 514 526—2,637
Thompson Bros., Hamilton—495 441 543 527 506—2,515
O'Connor Bros., Guelph—506 498 510 540 451—2,510
Orr Bros., won the medals.

CLOSE OF THE GRIND.

As the leading team in the six days' grind at the Britannia Rink were so far ahead, the two others following them agreed to the race being closed and the prizes awarded to the men in the order they were in. The result therefore is:
1.—McMaster and McMichael, 93 miles 5 laps.
2.—Smith and Christie, 94 miles 3 laps.
3.—McMaster and Hamburg, 92 miles 3 laps.

TEAMS WILL GO AFTER A ROLLER SKATING RECORD TO-NIGHT.

The three teams have arranged to race to-night at the rink, after the regular session, to make up the six hours. An attempt will be made to lower the record for this time. Fifteen numbers will be put on at the rink during the skating session, which lasts from 8.30 to 10.30. Lomas' band will be in attendance.

MCCARTHY WON FOUR.

Washington, April 4.—Dalton McCarthy, the Walter Miller of Bennings, landed his third winner of the day in the fourth race, when he won on High Range easily. Those on the inside had been tipped off early in the day that McCarthy would ride five winners of the card, and after the fourth race it certainly looked as if the prediction would come true. The victory of High Range was the crowd cheered.

COMMENT AND GOSSIP

The best bet to-day: That Gotch and Hackenschmidt will meet again.

One of the promoters of the big wrestling match in Chicago last night was Charlie Olson, who was well-known here a few years ago as Harry Mays. Olson has not wrestled much of late, his time being occupied largely in promoting sporting events in the South. He is now said to be wealthy.

Manager Paige, of the Hamilton baseball team, says he is much pleased at the encouragement he is receiving here in his efforts to provide a good brand of ball for the fans. A professional ball team is a good advertisement for the city and helps to keep the crowd at home on holidays.

Fast Hamilton will meet the Rangers to-night at the Y.M.C.A. There will also be a meeting of the captains of the different league teams to decide one or two protests, after the game.

Premier McBride, of British Columbia, announces that the Province will grant $1,000 to the fund for the proper representation of Canada at the Olympic games this year. Other Governments are expected to be quite as liberal in proportion to the Pacific Province, and it is altogether probable that the Canadian committee will be provided with sufficient funds to make a most creditable showing at the athletic congress of the nations of the world.

A CUBAN TEAM TO PLAY HERE.

Manager Paige Books the Stars and the Giants.

Intermediate C / League Formed Last Night—Baseballs Up In Price.

Hamilton baseball fans will not have to wait till the International League season opens to see how good the team signed by Manager Paige is. Mr. Paige has arranged for a number of exhibition games before the league season opens. The first game here will be with Niagara Falls, on May 7, 8 and 9. On May 13 and 14 the famous Cuban Giants, the champion colored nine of the world. The Giants last season won 90 games out of 127 games played; they lost 32 and five games were a tie. But for their color many of the Giants would be in the National or American Leagues.

For May 18 and 19 the Cuban Stars have been booked. The Stars do all their coaching in Spanish, and this, coupled with the Dutch of Leibesberger, if he signs, should be well worth hearing, just for the novelty of the thing. In addition to having one of the best shortstops in the business, they have a pitcher who is said to be little short of big league calibre.

METAL WORKERS' STRIKE.

Winnipeg, April 3.—A strike of the Allied Metal Workers' Unions in the shops of both the C.P. and the C.N.R. seems inevitable at this juncture unless the Board of Conciliation can effect a settlement of the questions at issue. Both roads have posted notices and also notified the unions officially that the working agreement drawn up last year will be abrogated on the 30th inst.

HAMILTON III. WINS JUNIOR CHAMPIONSHIP.

Basketball Game at Toronto Last Night With the All Saints.

Toronto, April 4.—Last night the Hamilton Y. M. C. A. III, played the All Saints the return game for the junior basketball championship of Canada. The Hamiltonians came into the game with the good lead of 15 points from the contest on their floor last Friday, and the first half proved the Saints able to hold their opponents down quite handsily, for they won from the visitors by the score of 42-36, while the score stood at half-time 28-20 in favor of the Saints. Then the Hamilton representative took a hand at the refereeing, and the Saints had the slim chance of the proverbial snowball, for with the game slipping from their grasp, something had to be done. A new man went on, and he and the referee won the game for the visitors.

SOME EXTRACTS FROM TOMMY BURN'S BOOK.

Here are a few trite paragraphs from Tommy Burns' new book, published in London:
"Brains are of more importance than, fists to-day."
"The man of good education, accustomed to think for himself, and possessed of a fair capacity for the initiative, is the very man qualified to shine in the boxing arena."
"I am not 27 years old, yet I have fought over 59 battles since the year 1901, an average of, say, about eight a year. What English heavy-weighter anything like these opportunities for practice? Moir, including his fight with me, has only fought four in two years."
"Get rid of the idea that boxing is brutal. It isn't. It is a business in which brains count more than anything else."
"The first essential of a scientific boxer must be quick and clever footwork. I have always considered my success to be primarily due to the fact that lacrosse and hockey taught me to be spry and smart on my feet before I ever thought of donning a pair of boxing gloves."

CAMBRIDGE BEAT OXFORD.

Great Annual Race of University Crews This Afternoon.

Putney, Eng., April 4.—The sixty-fifth boat race between crews of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge took place over the ancient course on the Thames, from Putney to Mortlake. The contest brought out the customary crowds of enthusiasts, and long before the race started the banks of the river were lined by the people, who also massed themselves on the bridges spanning the Thames, and on the roofs of buildings affording a view of the stream. All sorts of river craft, houseboats, launches and rowboats of every description were moored along the banks. The day appeared dark and cold, and there was a threat of rain. A northwest wind ruffled the water and promised to make the course difficult. Although the race was not scheduled to start until 3.30, people began gathering from all directions as soon as it was daylight.

SHORT ENDS.

Vienna, April 4.—In the ninth round of the International chess tournament Marshall, the American, beat Bearden, of Berlin. Teichmann, of London, defeated Johner, the other American player. Schlechter and Duras now lead the tournament.

Rawhide, Nev., April 4.—Riley Grannan, a sporting man, died here yesterday, after a long illness. Grannan was one of the best known race track jockeys in the United States. He was the son of a tailor, and when 17 drifted to New Orleans, where he attracted the attention of a bookmaker named Botzy, who was the first to introduce him to the turf table, which shows the different positions held by horses from start to finish. Grannan was in the employ of Botzy a short time when he met Ed. Appleton, of Kentucky, one of the most prominent bookmakers and horsemen in the south in those days. Appleton gave Grannan enough money to start a book at New Orleans. He was successful from the first, and from New Orleans went to San Francisco. He had not been in California more than three months before he won almost $100,000. Grannan went to the East, and won many thousands, and lost them in endeavors to gain a larger fortune.

San Francisco, April 4.—Joe Gans and Battling Nelson were matched last night for a fight to take place here some time of May. Gans agreed to make 130 lbs. ring side. Nelson will fight at catch weight.

Ottawa, April 3.—Preliminary arrangements have been completed for the climatic contests, to be held in Ottawa on June 1, 2, 3 and 4, in connection with the Olympic tennis trials. The events will undoubtedly be the greatest in the line of tennis ever held in this part of Canada.

Los Angeles, April 4.—Geo. Moeve (Jimmy Burns) and Phil Brock, of Cleveland, fought ten rounds before the Pacific Athletic Club last night. The result was a surprise. Brock making a showing that would at least have entitled him to a draw if a decision had been rendered. In point of cleverness Brock showed to the better advantage.

Cupid the Register. The street car conductor was stealing a kiss from his best girl.

The Famous Basilisk. According to the ancient writers, the basilisk—sometimes called castratrice—was a monster to be greatly dreaded. Its breath filled the air with a deadly poison and buried vegetation and the glance of its eye, they say, was fatal to both man and beast. The only creature that could face it and not die, they said, was the cock, and travellers were advised to take loud-crowding cocks with them as a protection against the creature. So much for superstition. As a matter of fact, says the Boston Transcript, the basilisk is a harmless lizard, living a quiet life in the woods and feeding on insects. Its appearance, however, is formidable, and it is this, perhaps, that gave it a bad name. It grows to a length of from 25 to 30 inches, including its tail, which is much longer than its body. Rising from its head and inclining backward is a broad, winglike expansion, which gives it some resemblance to the flying lizard. The crest of this expansion is formed somewhat like a crown, and that gave the basilisk its name, which is from the Greek word meaning king.

FROCKS OF LINEN WITH A TOUCH OF COLOR

Timely Word of Advice

PARIS, March 26. WHAT could be more fascinating than springtime in Paris...

Of course, madame goes to the great artists for her frocks, afternoon suits, frocks for soirees and ball dresses...

Liberty satin this year is extremely popular. One couturier on the Place Vendôme says that in the last two months she has used more than 2000 meters of this shimmering stuff for gowns...

Silk cashmere has been introduced and has been found popular. Bordure chiffons are extensively used...

And what revelations are the many hat shops that line the Rue St. Honoré! Cerise, magenta, checkerberry, ruby—what an array of brilliant coloring...

New Treatment of Blouses

WHEN all is said and done, nothing can be of more interest to the feminine mind than the ever-present and always-worn blouse.

The jabot is always pretty and in style wherever it may be introduced, and many of the new waists are being made with a single frill down the front...

A Pretty Style

THE veiled waist is not new, but it is still being made by high-class dressmakers for fastidious women who want matching blouses for their tailored suits.

One especially pretty model is of Dresden silk in dull pinks and blues veiled with silk voile in London smoke.

Veiled waists are pretty, soft, becoming and well-wearing, for silk voile and even chiffon cloth are surprisingly durable materials.

For the woman on economy bent, this may serve as a suggestion for a "make-over," in which may be employed for the foundation the discarded gown or dress of striped, checked, polka-dotted or other fancy silk sure to be on hand.

ONLY a year ago linen gowns were almost universally made in white, an attractive fashion that was likely to be becoming to almost every woman.

The first is a gown of "rose hand" kerchief linen, trimmed with tiny roses of cummy lace insertion.

Another lady of taste, which is another way of saying a lady who obeys the royal decree, has chosen linen as the foundation for her summer wardrobe.

A model in white linen, sheer or heavy, as the case may be, is made on the jumper idea, the embroidery being done in very narrow white braid.

The skirt is plain except for a band of embroidery. The hat of white chip, worn with this costume, is adorned with three cerise roses.

A model for heavy linen or white beige is made with the wide panel and two rows of pearl buttons, the skirt being finished at the bottom in broad tucks.

The sleeves are sectional, one of the newest and most popular fashions. The belt worn is of apple green suede.

style and finish they are the "demerol cel." They show no great change from the designs of the "advanced" drawings, except that the pleated skirt will not be as popular as was foretold...

SUGGESTIONS FOR MAKING A SLEEVELESS BOLERO

THE drawing shown today is of a new sleeveless coat, trimmed at neck and waist line with a braided band of material, or else with lace, either curly or Irish.

placed above the added band, and if braiding is not used, flat net might be embroidered and used on the coat.

for when it is to be worn closed the triangular piece must be hooked into place, but when the jacket is to be worn open it is unnecessary.

Thus a new jacket may be made with comparatively little work, or an old jumper may be altered to suit the last dictate of fashion.

although the neck must be higher, and therefore the added piece of the material somewhat broader, while the braiding around the waist may be arranged in whatever way is most becoming to the figure for which it is intended.

Veils of Russian Tulle

VELLS of Russian tulle are very much in favor at present, either without blading of any kind or else edged with a band of tulle to match.

Blouse of Novel Style

A NEW gingham or linen waist is cut straight up to the top of the neck, where it fits in somewhat the same way as a gorset empire skirt fits the waist.

A New and Costly Present

A CASE containing an umbrella, either of the usual black or a more cheerful shade, and a white sunshade makes a most charming, but not inexpensive gift.

Pond Lilies as Trimming

A TOQUE of pleated tulle is trimmed with large pond lilies, which are twice around the brim, the stems cut down to the level of the lily leaves.

Last Word on Sleeves

S PRING has shown no change in point of style. Sleeves will remain short for all dressy gowns, while only the severest of tailored costumes have long sleeves.

Cretonne on Parasols

CRETONNE is very popular this season for evening coats and vests, as an applique, and now cretonne parasols are prescribed for morning wear.

Bennett's Big Bill

There can be no doubt of the sort of reception waiting for next week's show at Bennett's Theatre. Every act has been tried before the most critical of New York audiences...

The German military Hercules, Paul Conchas, whose astounding juggling feats caused a big sensation when exhibited in New York some time ago, will make his appearance here next week.

The act of Terley is something new. The young lady who could keep absolutely still for an indefinite period held the boards last week.

Barr and Evans are makers of laughter of the first order. One is a simple rustic, who does all manner of rube tricks, and the other is a very stout lady with a funny voice and giggle.

Amount and Dupont are instrumentalists, and play about half a dozen different kinds. They are an advance on anything seen here, and are generally given headline honors in New York.

Grand's Offering

Julia Marlowe will make her first appearance in this city on Tuesday night at the Grand, giving one performance only of Rosalind in Shakespeare's merriest comedy, "As You Like It."

There was no question as to what bill of her repertoire should be selected for the single performance here. The local management and Miss Marlowe's managers quickly agreed that "As You Like It" seemed the best choice.

Another big attraction will be H. V. Fitzgerald, the clever protean actor, who will be favorably remembered by patrons of the Savoy.

Fin and Ford, eccentric dancers, are reputed to be one of the best teams of that class in vaudeville. They are clever dancers.

Savoy Stars

A pleasing combination of variety and musical comedy should ensure a thoroughly entertaining one at the Savoy Theatre next week, where Okito, the original Chinese magician, will be the top-bill.

The special attraction will be one of the best laugh producers of the day, "What Happened to O'Hara," a playlet by the Burns-Morris Company.

How Some Actors Fatten Their Rolls.

The desire that many leading actors have to make the parts they play even more important than the dramatist intended that they should be has led to some severe and protracted feuds upon the stage.

Contrary to the notion that generally is accepted, the great majority of leading actors do not get along with too well with their leading actresses, and vice versa.

SIR FREDERICK BRIDGE.

Advices from all points in Canada are to the effect that the approaching visit of Sir Frederick Bridge, the organist of Westminster Abbey, is creating widespread interest amongst the musicians of the Dominion.

Nothing but good reports have reached the city about the intense sensational Hornung-Presbrey drama, "Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman," and now at last Joseph M. Gaites' splendid company, with the talented young romantic actor, S. Miller Kent, as Raffles, will be present at the Grand this evening.

Local players will welcome the visit of the popular comedian, Frank Daniels, who comes to the Grand next Friday for it is always safe to predict a laughter-laden entertainment wherever he plays.

The opera is entitled "The Tattooed Man," and when it is stated that the music is Victor Herbert's, composer of such tuneful masterpieces as "The Mikado" and "The Red Mill," further eulogy is unnecessary.

The opera is in two acts, and the locale in Persia. The scenes, which are said to be of more than usual magnificence, represent the courtyard of the Shah's palace, and a Persian rose garden, with its atmosphere suggestive of palms and perfume.

MISS JULIA MARLOWE, Who will be seen at the Grand next Tuesday evening.

The old songs sung by musical comedy favorites always are popular at the vaudeville houses. In fact, the vaudeville circuit may be said to be a rival of the long run, in that it causes large numbers of people to put off seeing the popular play, depending on the chance to see the prima donnas or sopranos and the most popular songs in vaudeville.

Nobody ever seems to want anything but the old songs. Olive Vail, of "The Time and the Place and the Girl" re-nowned has just made her debut into the circuit week, and does three songs, two of which are the "Honey-moon" and "O Come, My Love," the song which originally was written for Miss Vail as "The Girl of the Golden West." Comparatively little interest is taken in anything but the "Honey-moon."

When Bessie Wynn comes on the stage it is the same thing; the audience is expectant until she sings "Somebody Loves Me." Pauline Hall still sings the "Erminie" lullaby, and although those who have known her in the famous old comedy may be comparatively few in the audience, her connection with the lullaby only seems to grow stronger every time she sings. Jessie Bartlett Davis had the same experience with the "Oh, Promise Me" song as long as she lived—and could have gone on singing it many years longer. Mabel Hite is doing "I'm Married Now, That's Enough For a Girl," as much to the delight of her audience as when she sang it in the play. She went into vaudeville as soon as her engagement ended with the Whitney Opera Company.

Effie Fay always depends upon her stint of doing up her front hair, which was taken from her own play of "Belle of Avenue A." The moment Miss Fay comes on the audience is expectant. Although the singer who goes on for straight work always is a good feature of the programme, she often has to be contented with less than first choice of place. The teams require stake changes and as a "single" she is apt to be sandwiched in between any two of these that would otherwise come too close together on the programme. Then while she is singing before the front drop the stage hands are busy shifting scenes behind it.

THE PIROUETTING PEERESS, ENGLAND'S NEW SENSATION

Ballet Dancing Now
One of Lady Stewart-Richardson's Accomplishments

ENGLAND has a brand-new sensation. And it's all due to a daring young woman who has made that staid land of roast beef and roundity gasp more than once.

To the long list of her other accomplishments Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson has added ballet dancing. The ballet mistress at Covent Garden, who has been instructing her, says she is a real genius for the art.

There are few men—and not a woman—in all the ranks of British nobility more noted in sports and athletics than this lithe-limbed daughter of the house of Mackenzie. Champion swimmer of the London Bath Club, she is also a fine shot and an expert rider. She has ridden through the wilds of Somaliland, has shot big game in the Rocky mountains, alligators in Florida and wild hogs in Texas, and her prowess is no less with the rod, as she holds the English landing record for salmon.

Will she go upon the stage, this handsome daughter of one of Britain's proudest houses? her country people are asking with bated breath. No one knows what the brilliant and versatile Lady Constance will do—that is, no one except Lady Constance, and she is keeping her own counsel.

PERHAPS a desire to master the art of ballet dancing was born in the busy brain of the then Lady Constance Mackenzie one balmy spring evening shortly before her marriage. Being on a tour of Egypt, she created a decided sensation at a mask ball in Cairo.

All the elite of the ancient city had gathered in Gezireh Palace, when an apparition of loveliness drew all eyes as a magnet draws iron filings. It was the dashing young English woman who was already well known upon the streets of the cities and the caravan routes of the deserts. Lady Constance had elected to appear at the ball in the character of an Egyptian syc.

"Her costume," stated a news dispatch at the time, "was more beautiful than voluminous Lady Constance, who is blessed with exquisite feet, had no scruples in exhibiting them, with bare legs from the knees downward. She was attended by Miss Bainbridge, in the costume of a dragoman."

At any rate, the young woman scored a decided success and was the center of attraction throughout the evening.

It is not the ordinary or garden variety of ballet of the comic opera and spectacular stage that she has now taken up. She has gone in for the real art of the thing, the art that made La Fontaine, Florence, Tagioni, Fannie Elssler and others famous long before their latest convert was born.

A widespread revival of the old and ever-graceful art of dancing has been attracting the attention of Europe and America. Aristocratic house parties had not then taken to playing "Raffles" and "burglarizing" for sport the homes of neighbors in the dead of night.

SOCIETY TAKES UP FAD

Even the blasé society circles of New York have taken up the revival with enthusiasm, and not a few of its prominent young people, it is whispered, are mastering the intricacies of the ballet.

"There seems to be no bounds to the length to which Lady Constance Mackenzie will go in her predilection for the unusual," stated an English writer, somewhat plaintively, half a dozen years ago.

Even at that late date the English people had not quite grown accustomed to being startled by the high lites of high society. Aristocratic house parties had not then taken to playing "Raffles" and "burglarizing" for sport the homes of neighbors in the dead of night.

"Whenever she goes," the seemingly astonished writer went on, "Lady Constance now carries with her a pet snake—a tiny creature, to be sure, but still a snake."

"This uncanny familiar she lodges in the bodice of her dress, and upon occasion plays with it, much as the average woman toys with her rings, her fob or a jeweled buckle."

"Twice a week the snake is fed upon fish and insects by Lady Constance, who, it is said, has satisfied herself that the reptile is possessed of more intelligence than the average person credits snakes with displaying."

She did unusual things there was no doubt of that, she had done them since early childhood. And when, four years ago, she placed a crown of orange blossoms upon her many and daring exploits by suddenly contracting a romantic Highland marriage with Sir Edwin Austin Stewart-Richardson, both her courtship and her wedding were considerably removed from the ordinary.

Perhaps it had not been expected that the young woman who had centered astride through Somaliland and in many other astonishing but harmless ways set conventions at defiance would ever consent to the stately, more or less prim wedding usually awaiting a society debutante.

Her courtship was romantic. It was conducted largely on horseback while she and the stalwart young baronet of Pitfour Castle were galloping gaily over Scottish hills. Banns were published in the quaint little town of Tain, in Rosshire, but as there was nobody in Tain to give the news to the world at large, the world at large heard nothing of it until after the marriage, which was just what Lady Constance desired.

The few persons asked to the wedding received their invitations by telegraph at the last moment, and so suddenly was the hour of the ceremony fixed that some difficulty was found in obtaining a clergyman to officiate. After the ceremony Scottish pipers struck up a clan march, to the music of which the couple drove away.

Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson was born in 1882, a daughter of the second earl of Cromartie, who was a son of the late duke of Sutherland. Her father inherited the title from his mother, who was a Mackenzie. The title and estates are now held by the Countess of Cromartie, elder sister of Lady Constance, who enjoys an income of $200,000 a year. Sons were born to the sisters about the same time.

Four years ago, a few months before her marriage, Lady Constance Mackenzie, enjoyed an extensive hunting trip through the United States, her prowess resulting in trophies from the big game of the Rocky mountains, as well as the alligators of Florida and the wild hogs of Texas.

Wherever she went she enjoyed herself immensely, but nowhere, apparently, better than among the cowboys and rough riders of Texas, to whom her horsemanship, no less than her skill with the rifle and revolver, proved a revelation.

From the first day that found her on the plains of southwest Texas to the evening when she boarded a train for her return home she rode and hunted from dawn to dark. Two savage wild hogs were killed by her under circumstances that would have shaken the nerve of most men.

Particularly vicious when at bay are the wild hogs of Texas—called there javelinas and in the dictionary peccaries. Strong and wiry, they possess long and exceedingly sharp tusks that can do fatal execution in a twinkling.

When aroused they fight in a manner calculated to cause terror, ripping and tearing savagely with the dangerous tusks. One of them has been known to kill or maim every one of a large pack of dogs within a few minutes.

It was after a long hunt that Lady Constance came upon her first javeline. She promptly set out in pursuit, urging her wiry pony to a dead run. When near enough she drew her revolver and fired.

The shot struck the fleeing animal, but did not disable it. It was made very angry, however. Snarl-

Does Woman's Vanity Ever Wane?

DOES woman's vanity ever wane? Is it a ruling passion, strong in death as in life? And does it control, as Paola Lombroso, the observant daughter of the great Italian scientist, declares, the action of the human female from the first baby hour when she is able to creep to the looking glass to the moment when, perforce, she lays her mirror down and breathes her last, expiring sigh?

WHILE residing temporarily in Europe, the wife of an American millionaire—beautiful, ambitious, extravagant on occasion, as the wives of American millionaires are so prone to be—expected a visit from royalty. At a cost of $10,000 she ordered two dinner gowns, sublime creations. Until the festive day she could deliberate making a choice between the two. The gowns came. One, rose colored, transformed her into Eve, the temptress; the other, white, made her an incarnation of the angelic.

Both fascinated her; she could not lay aside either. Her resolve was worthy of the discomfitment of Solomon—or of the vanity of the queen of Sheba.

In the middle of the dinner, while the royal eyes were still ravished with the entrancing vision of rose, an obedient butler, acting upon orders secretly given, spilled gravy in the lady's lap. There was an involuntary groan about the table, but the hostess smiled the bright, unconcerned smile of millionaires' wives, made her excuses to sympathetic royalty, left the room and changed her gown. So she was able to exhibit both charming creations the same evening.

In a recent article on coquetry, Signorina Lombroso finds the extravagant vanity of the American woman—and she is of the type that frequently arrives in jail—as a negligent, untidy and unkempt in her cell as she was in her home.

But the experience of all officials demonstrates that it does hold good in America to precisely the extent to which regard for appearances is displayed by women outside of jail. The completely negligent woman—and she is of the type that frequently arrives in jail—is as negligent, untidy and unkempt in her cell as she was in her home.

But the female prisoner who has been accustomed to preserve her appearance at its best speedily finds ways and means to convert even the prosaic prison garb into an attire the neatness and freshness of which are in themselves an adornment. And, it may be remarked, the worst offenders are often the most presentable prisoners.

Final as the prison's verdict may seem, there are two ultimate depths to which a woman may come that represent the extreme tests of her vanity. One is when she commits suicide; the other, when she goes mad.

The testimony of coroners is that women, as a rule, present the characteristic of premeditation in their suicides. A man, despondent, caught in the crotch of some nipping adversity, is liable to walk upstairs and hurriedly blow out his brains, hang himself or cut his throat.

A woman is prone to think it all out studiously, to arrange everything as carefully as she can for the certainty of her death and the settlement of her affairs and to choose the method of suicide which is least painful and the least disturbing.

That is why so many suicides of women come to be classed by coroners under the head of "asphyxiation." When they take carbolic acid, it is usually because they are in ignorance of the anguish and the unsightly scars they incur; the woman who poisons herself with carbolic acid is commonly the one who snatches up the bottle on impulse.

But the woman who selects illuminating gas, ordinarily, knows perfectly well that she is going to pass away dreamlessly, and that she will be found in the morning with a tinge of strangely life-like color in cheeks to which the tints of youth have long been strangers.

She will oftentimes dress herself in her best, put under her pillow a memorandum of her accounts and dispose her very body so that the daylight will find her, at least, a presentable corpse.

It is only when women become insane—when they lose the mind that is the seat of all intelligent motives and emotions—that their vanity drops away from them, like some garment that clothed them in such loveliness as they could make adjunct to their sex.

Universal as is the regard for their appearance among women so long as they are sane, certain as are jailers to find always some small trace of womanly preening among the most hopeless of prisoners, expectant as are coroners' deputies of encountering a "best case" when they are called to investigate a woman's suicide, the physicians attendant in a lunatic asylum have their greatest difficulty in keeping the female lunatics from the most complete disregard of dress and of the ordinary conventions of life.

Up to the border line of insanity, even when, emerging from the blank abyss of sheer lunacy, the patient recurs to an intelligent consciousness, all her normal pride or vanity asserts itself. But the hour when her sane self is forfeited, her self-esteem vanishes, so far as any trace is discerned in her physical condition.

With the least exception—an important one: That many of the women insane develop a mania for adornment and a pitiful imagination that they are, in truth, female personages famous in history for the beauty of their persons or the magnificence of their raiment.

In the intellectual death, as in self-chosen physical death, the ruling passion stays strong.
