Items of Interest to Catholic Readers in the Magazines.

Across the Rio Grande.

(From the Sacred Heart Review.)
The Editor's Study of Harper's Magazine has been across the Rio Grande, visiting the Republic that lies over there, and in the July issue of that monthly he lays before his readers some of the results of his observations of Mexico. He had read a good deal, he says, before starting south-westward, of Mexican ignorance of our great country, but he is now inclined to assert that such ignorance is fully matched by our ignorance of Mexico. "In the matter of ignorance of each other," writes he, "I should say we were stand-off." You can not, he adds, gain any correct idea of another people from their hotels, their railroads or the provisions they make for the accommodation of travelers. You must see their home life to gain any reliable information about their character and their manners; and he intimates that those writers who speak disparagingly of the Mexican people know nothing at all about the lives they lead. Without eulogizing everything he saw down in Mexico, this writer waxed enthusiastic in describing the wealth of his artistic possessions, as these are to be seen in the Catholic churches, chapels and other religious institutions. One of the loveliest chapels which he saw is the one attached to the old nunnery of Santa Rosa, at Queretaro. This sacred edifice he found exuberantly rich in wood-carving that is spirited, free, and executed on a massive scale. The interior of the chapel, he says, is so thickly overlaid with gold-leaf that one might almost say it was plated with gold. In many places the gold-leaf is itself overlaid with transparent tortoise-shell, which adds to its beauty and heightens the effect. The chapel is large and of good proportions. All the panels, which rise from the ceiling to the floor, differ in design; and the pulpits, the confessionals and the niches containing images of saints are very rich in artistic beauty. The great altarpiece of this chapel was burned, the "Editor's Study" says, by the French when they held possession of Queretaro. It was committed to the flames in order that the gold wherever it was inlaid might be secured; and tradition has it that the French vandals secured a million and a half dollars' worth of gold from the ashes, a statement which our observer declares he did not find it hard to believe in view of the thickness of the gold-leaf he saw in the chapel's panels.

A Mexican Michael Angelo.

After describing more at length the interior beauties of this chapel, and dwelling in particular upon a painting, in the sacristy, which is entitled "The Closed Garden," our writer tells us that the chapel is the work of a Mexican Indian, Troguerrus by name. He calls this Indian the Michael Angelo of Mexico; tells us that he was distinguished as painter, sculptor and architect, and died at an advanced age in 1830. Besides this chapel, Troguerrus built a handsome church at his native place, Olayo, and also erected a fine episcopal residence, which has been converted to other uses, however, at Queretaro. The "Editor's Study" expresses fear that the Mexican government may permit the chapel of Santa Rosa to fall into decay or to have its beauties marred by renovations. If the government would only recognize, though, that in this chapel Mexico possesses so vast an amount of artistic wealth and glory, neither of those misfortunes will befall it, he adds. Other splendid pieces of architecture mentioned in this article are the cathedrals of Puebla and Morelia, both of which are said to be conspicuous for their beauty. The church of San Francisco at Puebla is characterized as a very remarkable edifice, with its splendid interior, its marble tiled floor, its double gallery and its recessed facade, covered with tiled panels of exquisite designs and color. In a small way this facade is said to resemble that of Orvieto's famous Franciscan shrine. Puebla, and for that matter, all Catholic Mexico, we are told, is full of beautiful churches, lovely chapels and artistic cloisters, to view which well repay the traveler for the trouble and expense of visiting them.

An Early Susan B. Anthony.

Long before Garrison and Phillips began to agitate the abolition of slavery in this country, Catholic missionaries—Las Casas, Montesinos and others—had denounced that institution and called for its destruction. And, in this same magazine, Caroline Sherman Hansemer, who writes a short sketch, "A Colonial Dame," robs Susan B. Anthony of the distinction often given her, of having been the first American woman to claim the rights of suffrage for her sex. That distinction—if it be regarded as a distinction—according to this writer, belongs to Mistress Margaret Brent, who lived in Maryland in colonial days. Mistress Brent, who came across the ocean in 1638 with her sister Mary and some other women, was a cousin of Leonard Calver, the first governor of Maryland. She was presumably, consequently, a Catholic, and when the governor, her cousin, died, he appointed her his executor and attorney. In this capacity Mistress Brent, so this paper informs us, on June 24, 1648, started the members of the Maryland colonial assembly by appearing before them while they were in session, and by demanding a voice and vote in their deliberations and proceedings as the governor's attorney. The colonial legislators were not prepared to sanction so startling an innovation as woman's suffrage, however; and they declined to accede to the fair petitioner's requests. Nevertheless, our writer declares that by this action of hers Mistress Brent undoubtedly put herself upon record as the first American woman to make a stand for the rights of suffrage for her sex; and she expresses surprise to find how little this fact is known, even among woman suffragists. Mistress Brent, like many of her subsequent sisters, was a strong-minded and busy woman that she never had time to get married; though, in her old age, she barely escaped, by the death of a ministerial water, becoming the wife of an Anglican preacher then located in the Maryland colony.

Pius IX. and Mr. Gladstone.

In the latest issue of the Italian magazine, the Nuova Antologia, is published an account, in the shape of a memorandum that was drawn up at the time by Mr. Gladstone himself, of the interview which the lamented English statesman had with Pius IX., in 1866. Gladstone, as he always was, on that occasion "the grand old man" bowed to a Papal decision and acted accordingly. When he was shown into the Pope's presence, and after he had made the usual obeisance to the head of the Church, Mr. Gladstone was invited by his Holiness to be seated. Having heard from Lord Russell, the British representative at Rome, that such an invitation was usually disregarded out of respect for the Sovereign Pontiff, the distinguished Englishman remained standing and requested leave to sit as he would in the presence of the British queen. Whereupon the Pope remarked that if Victoria bade him be seated, he would doubtless comply. Mr. Gladstone rejoined: "Holy Father, there is nothing left for me but to obey. Roma locuta est" (Rome has spoken). Entering into the spirit of the visitor's remark, the Pope added: "Causa finita est" (the case is ended); and smiled as Mr. Gladstone took a chair. The interview covered a variety of topics, among others the hostility which, even then, the Italian government was exhibiting toward religion and the Holy See. The Pope contended that the people were not in favor of such a policy. The issue of Italian unity was also brought up, and speaking of representative government, Mr. Gladstone said the Sovereign Pontiff exhibited no dislike for that form of rule, though he claimed that the Italian elections of that time were not free nor expressive of the popular will. Even at the time of this interview, thirty-two years ago, Mr. Gladstone evidently had well-defined ideas on the subjects of Ireland's misgovernment. For when the conversation turned upon colonial government, he told the Pope that he foresaw difficulties ahead for Great Britain in Ireland and British North America, adding that those difficulties would be attributable to parliament's own fault as far as Ireland was concerned. The interview was plainly very satisfactory to Mr. Gladstone, who closed the memorandum of his visit to the Vatican as follows: "As his (Pius IX.) came with me to bid me adieu, I could not help expressing my grateful sentiments for his indulgent courtesy to a person so unworthy as I am. The audience lasted for three-quarters of an hour." And yet less than ten years after this interview, and while the Pope who accorded it to him was still reigning, Mr. Gladstone formulated and published his absurd "Vaticanism" charges!

The Reformation and Education.

We have seen it stated somewhere that, earlier in the present century, an Anglican bishop, wishing to test the question whether the penal laws were still in force, or for some similar reason, caused a Catholic ## father's right to his children's education.

to be refused for sending his children to school. Protestants periodically boast that the Reformation was the dawn of popular enlightenment, education and all that sort of thing; but it was anything but that in many places. It put education under the ban, for instance, for Irish Catholics, and made it a penal offence for any schoolmaster to teach Catholic children. The education of Catholic ecclesiastical students was, of course, still more strictly forbidden, and as a consequence Irish students for the priesthood, as a writer in the Catholic Quarterly Review states, had to go to continents! Europe for their theological courses. France opened many of her seminaries to these youths, to whom "Protestant England denied the education then chosen calling demanded; and so did Spain and Portugal, Belgium and Rome. In some places distinctively Irish Colleges for the benefit of the students of the Emerald Isle came into being, at Madrid, for instance, at Seville and Salamanca, at Lisbon and Louvain, at Rome and Paris. Of this last-named one the writer of this article says: "Of all these institutions, the most important was the Irish College in Paris. More than three-fourths of all the priests who were educated on the continent (for Ireland) came from France, but chiefly from this college. Its history was very much chequered during the great revolution, and its life somewhat romantic; but revolutions after revolutions passed away, shaking religion to its foundations, condemning priests and religious to death or exile, yet the Irish college remained uncompleted. Side by side with this institution were an English college and a Scotch college; but the English and Scotch colleges are gone, and the Irish College remains. Of all the great religious institutions that once made the Latin Quarter famous, this place stands alone. May, of all the ecclesiastical corporations in the whole of France, it is the only one that has preserved its corporate existence and rights through the revolution, and it stands today a flourishing institution in the heart of the Latin Quarter, and sends forth every year priests as zealous and as self-sacrificing as in the penal days. From these statements it might almost be inferred that this Parisian college has been providentially preserved, in order that its existence may bear mute, but still eloquent testimony to the manner wherein the Anglican reformers aided the cause of education in Great Britain.

On Sunday, June 29, the fiftieth anniversary of the death of Mgr. Affre, who was shot at the Paris barricades in 1848, was celebrated with special functions at Rome, of which diocese he was a native.

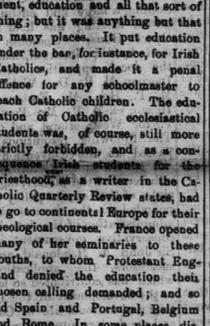

After the religious ceremony a meeting was held near his statue in the square, and a general subscription in aid of the poor of the city was opened. Cardinal Richard issued a pastoral on the subject, recalling the great which took place on June 27, 1848, when Mgr. Affre gave his life with heroic simplicity for the sake of his people, a noble and saintly victim of pastoral charity, and the solemn testimony which Pius IX. bore to the illustrious Archbishop in the consistory of September 11, 1848.

Very Rev. Dean O'Brian, the patriarch of the Catholic Church in Ireland, who died the other day at the decease, Mitchelstown, had been a prominent and influential factor in public affairs for the last seventy years and had taken an active part in all constitutional political movements. He was closely associated with Mr. O'Connell in the repeal movement of the '40's.

One of the smaller bells of St. Peter's the one nearest the Vatican palace, having been damaged, the Holy Father has given orders for a new bell to be cast out of the same metal. The bell destined to undergo this metamorphosis was cast in 1824 under Leo XII. and has consequently without seventy-four years' wear and tear. As it is customary for all the chimera of St. Peter's to ring out a merry peal on the feast of St. Peter and Paul, a temporary bell has been put up by the "Sapietini" in the place of the missing one.

The Sovereign Pontiff has just been discussing with an English visitor the recent troubles in Italy. "The Pope gave it as his belief that one of the principal causes of the riots was the irritation caused by keeping the journals in straight waistcoats for all serious purposes of political criticism. 'I've in Italy,' said Leo XIII., 'liberty of press is understood in a very ## English Catholics celebrated July 4 as the fiftieth anniversary of the opening of St. George's Cathedral at Westminster by Cardinal Wiseman, the first Catholic Cathedral consecrated in England since the Reformation.

A Madrid correspondent writes under date of June 24: "I had yesterday the privilege of being present in the private chapel of the royal palace, when King Alfonso XIII. received his first communion and his confirmation from the Archbishop of Madrid. The ceremonies, although the public were not admitted, were carried out with full pomp, and were most impressive. I could notice that the Queen Regent was deeply affected. The discarded state of the country and the unhappy war with America were plainly present to the mind of all as they watched the young monarch religiously laying his own destiny and that of his country at the foot of the altar. Alfonso, though a real child, is a manly and simple lad, with a bearing and expression of native dignity. One could not help the reflection that much will be prepared to the sincere prayers of so pure-minded a youth. I saw tears in many eyes as the ceremony concluded, and my own reflection was, 'Noble but unhappy Spain!'"

At a meeting of representatives of the Order of the Sisters of the Good Shepherd in France, May 26, there were eighty delegates from all parts of the world and fourteen nationalities were represented. Mother Mary Marine was elected Superior of the order.

The magnificent new church of St. Vincent de' Paul in Belfast, which was solemnly dedicated to divine worship on Sunday, June 12, is another evidence of the growth of Catholicity in that former Protestant stronghold. It is the third in the outskirts of the city which has been dedicated by the Most Rev. Dr. Henry within twelve months, while a fourth is in course of erection. The Most Rev. Dr. Lyster, Bishop of Achonry, who preached the dedication sermon, in the course of an eloquent discourse said: "A hundred years ago your only place for worship was amongst the sand hills by Fria's Bush. The oak tree which served as an altar was long preserved as a relic in your city; I know not if it be preserved here still. Eighty years ago you had one church and two priests. Look around to-day. You have a series of churches annually increasing, as magnificent as any in the land. You have a staff of clergy as busy, as active, as hard worked as any within the circle of our seas."

Acute Rheumatism

Pains in the Foot and Limb—A Complete Cure Accomplished by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"For a number of years I was afflicted with acute rheumatism in my left side and all the way down my limb into my foot. I live five blocks from my work and had to stop and rest several times in going and coming. I could get no relief from my trouble and was on the point of giving up my job when I happened to hear of Hood's Sarsaparilla. I purchased a bottle of this medicine and a visit of Hood's Pills and began taking them. Before I had half finished them I was relieved and it was not long before I was completely cured. I never lost an opportunity to praise Hood's Sarsaparilla, for my cure meant a great deal to me, as I have a family and must always be at my post." Progress of the War.

No fighting between United States and Spanish troops has taken place since our last issue, although preparations for an attack on San Juan, Porto Rico, have been going forward. The expedition, under command of General Miles, set out some time ago and is reported to have arrived on Monday last, at Fajardo, about thirty miles from San Juan. The landing of the American troops at this point is said to be in progress and to be meeting with little resistance from the Spanish forces. Meantime, notwithstanding the surrender of Santiago, General Shafter's whole army is retained in that city. This is found necessary in consequence of the attitude of the rebel Cuban troops. These gentlemen, under command of General Garcia are not at all pleased because they were practically ignored in the ceremonies attending the surrender. General Garcia has addressed a letter to General Shafter complaining that the latter has not extended to him the courtesy of an invitation to be present at the surrender; that he has not addressed a kind word to him; that Spanish officials are left in charge of the Civil offices of the city. This rebel general expresses the idea that the government of the surrendered territory should be handed over to himself and his fellow rebels. This, he says, is what they were fighting for and this, he seems to think, is why the United States came to their assistance. In his presumption this rebel chief makes some show of consistency. To every body conversant with the history of Cuban affairs, except those who willfully blind to the truth, these Cuban rebels were known to be a worthless lazy, lying crew of semi-barbarians, who would steal, murder, and commit all manner of crimes. Who would do anything but earn an honest living. It was for the ostensible purpose of liberating these characters from the rule of a Christian people that the United States declared war against Spain. This was announced far and wide that this was a war in the interests of humanity. The demagogues of the country proclaimed from the house-tops the humane purposes of the Government in letting slip the dogs of war. Was it in pursuance of this humane policy the people of the United States fostered the rebellion in Cuba; that they supplied the rebels with arms, food and ammunition; that the numerous filibustering expeditions for Cuba were fitted out? The covetous eyes of the United States were fixed on Cuba; for its acquisition, they made war upon Spain, under the hypocritical guise of humane motives; the poor deluded rebels, over whom they were shedding blood, and for whose freedom they pretended to be fighting are allowed to have no part in the glory of their conquests. They are driven from Santiago and are kept under strict military surveillance. These rebels will, no doubt, give the United States some trouble; but the latter country will in a little while exercise towards them the humane policy of extermination. With the rebels exterminated Cuba wrested from Spain and in the possession of the United States, the cause of the war will be patent to the whole world.

The following notice has been officially promulgated at Ottawa: From and after the first day of January, 1899, no one shall export or knowingly catch, buy, sell or have in possession for the purpose of exportation, or knowingly aid or assist, directly or indirectly, in exporting, catching, buying, selling or having in possession for purpose of exportation, in or from any part of Canada, any live lobster or lobsters of less than 11 1/2 inches in length, measuring from head to tail, exclusive of claws of feet. The legal size limit on the Bay of Fundy for lobsters is also made 10 1/2 inches.

ADVICES OF THE 26th. From St. Thomas, Danish West Indies say that some United States troops landed the previous day on the Island of Porto Rico, near Ponce, on the south coast. A Madrid despatch of the same date says that private intelligence from San Juan de Porto Rico intimates that a strong American squadron had appeared before Bahia Monday, but that the American attempt to disembark was repulsed with considerable loss. From this it would appear that the elements of uncertainty and contradiction are not by any means eliminated from the war news.

Mr. FOSTER, in the course of a recent interview with the Mail and Empire, declined an invitation to express an opinion as to the probability of a general election next fall. "One cannot tell," he said misgivingly, "what the present Government may do. Their actions are so erratic that one scarcely dares to prophesy at all. The Liberal Conservatives should be prepared, and to that end push a thorough and efficient organization in every province. If an election is held this fall it will be an indication that the present Government is so perfectly on the down grade that it considers its only chance for longer life is to precipitate an election. Such a confession, however, would be a great source of weakness in the eyes of an intelligent electorate such as we here possess. Any way it would be a severe wrench for the various Ministers to tear themselves away from their pleasant junkettings at home and abroad. By the way, he added, "I saw what had been done together in London the other day. A short life and a merry one seems to be their motto."

An official letter to Seattle from Capt. Abercrombie, U.S.A. now at Copper River, Alaska, contains the statement that there are now 200 men destined for the Copper River, and that it means are not devised to relieve the country of those who have fallen to the Yekki and have been these men in spite of the fact that the Copper River and the tributary streams, will be so badly starved this fall. Capt. Abercrombie says in conclusion that the transportation companies refuse to carry the stranded miners without compensation.

VANCOUVER advices of the 23rd say that although the salmon season only opened three weeks ago canners are down-hearted. Among the reasons given are that the season has not yet been more than half a pack this season. Even to get half a pack they will have to have the season extended. This shows the absurdity of commencing to fish on July 1st. The fish never run before the 15th.

Winnipeg doubt the greatest outdoor social event of the season will be the gathering of the clans to be held at Head St. Peter's Bay, on Wednesday, August 17th. The games promise to be the most successful held for many years, and some extraordinary athletic feats may be expected. The gathering is all the talk in the eastern section of the Island, and a tremendous outpouring of the people is anticipated.

A Montreal despatch says "The Queen's house at this port is having an exceptional busy time just now, shipments being rushed in from Europe to get the benefit of the present tariff before August 1st. Consequently this will likely be a record month. Up to the 20th inst., the receipts for the month were $755,000, or $200,000 more than for the whole of July last year. One ship paid $33,000 duty on a cargo of rice last week from Rangoon."

A London despatch of the 26th, says that there has been appointed as Governor General of Canada, His Excellency Lord Minto, who has been in the Scots Fusiliers Guards, he was a volunteer in the Egyptian campaign, and commanded the 2nd of Scots at the battle of Omdurman. He was Secretary and Military Secretary to the Governor General of Canada in 1885-86, and served as chief of staff in the North-west rebellion in Canada in 1885.

A DEARSTOUT fire broke out at Pughwash, N.S., on Monday last, and before it was got under control, eight houses and eleven out-buildings were burned to ruins. The loss is about $10,000, with only about $3,000 insurance. The fire originated in a warehouse, and when discovered was well under way.

The Annual Races at the Charlottetown Driving Park will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, the 28th and 29th September. The races will be as follows—First day, 3 minutes, 2.30 and 3.40 classes. Second day, 2.50, 2.32 and Free-for-all. The 2.40 class will be open to trotters and pacers. $1000.00 in prizes are offered. In addition to the races above mentioned the Directors have, unfortunately, secured the guinea pacer "Tommy," owned by the Doherty Organ Co., Clinton, Ont. Fever at Santiago. Washington, July 25th.—A despatch received last night from Gen. Shafter by Adj.-General Corbin says that there are 1000 cases of fever known to exist in the camp of all classes were reported. At the same despatch only 1000 cases of fever were reported. The number of cases of fever among the hundreds of men who have been sent to the camp—the war authorities are more than ever anxious to have the epidemic cases of yellow fever of a mild type. Previous despatches from Shafter and the medical officers of his corps have indicated the existence in the camp of a very large number of cases of malaria and typhoid fever, and the fact is peculiar to the Cu an climate. Some clear cases of yellow fever are reported, and the officials say they are few as compared with those of other fevers.

Klondike Gold. W. L. Foster the latest arrival at Vancouver from Skagway via White Horse Rapids says: "I had a long conversation with Major Steele, last man out from Dawson, and he informed me that the output of the Klondike was $22,000,000. The Major also stated that one of the boats running from Dawson to Skagway would carry $19,000,000 in gold. I consider the estimate made by Major Steele a decidedly liberal one. He also stated that the Klondike was over-crowded with men who were not accustomed to hard work, and that many of them had practically decided to return to the United States. The output of gold, I was told, will be larger than was ever expected by the most sanguine, and I expect another big rush to Alaska this fall. Major Steele also said that food in Dawson was plentiful and cheap, it now being possible to buy flour for $5 per sack, which is considered a very low figure."

Big British Fleet. The expected statement of the first lord of the admiralty, Geo. J. Goschen, on the supplementary naval programme, was made in the British House of Commons a few days ago. He reviewed the original programme, which was considered sufficient when it was framed, being based upon the two power system, that the navy of Great Britain must be equal to the combined fleets of any two powers. But in consequence of the action of Russia on the same system, the government was compelled to present a supplementary programme, paralleling the Russian increase of six battleships which Russia proposed to begin in 1898. Only two battleships were taken into account in the original British programme, and the first lord of the admiralty now added that the house proposed to grant four more battleships. Continuing, Mr. Goschen remarked: "Russian programme provides for four cruisers. We propose to build four (cruisers) and also twelve destroyers. It is estimated that the cost of the new programme will be $28,000,000, making the entire expense for the new ships $16,000,000. The battleships will be especially adapted for the passage of the Bering Canal."

A storm but sharp and severe lightning storm passed over Yarmouth, N. S., shortly before 7 o'clock last Friday morning. Rain fell in torrents and was accompanied by vivid lightning and heavy thunder. The new dwelling house of Mr. Harry K. Lewis was struck. The lightning entered the main chimney, knocking off about 25 bricks and splitting it to the roof. It appears to have passed in two directions—one following a rafter on the western side and escaping under the eaves, splitting the rafter. The other and more serious, followed along the ridge spreading the two sides of the roof apart about two inches until it reached the other chimney, which it damaged slightly. Fortunately no one in the house was hurt, but all were very much alarmed.—Telegram.

On Monday afternoon the 19th inst., Francis Baldwin, of Baldwin's Road and James McInnis, of Head of Cavendish, were drowned at Groveton, New Hampshire. Baldwin was about 19 years of age and McInnis was about 22. They were both employed in a pulp mill at Groveton. Mr. Patrick Baldwin, an older brother of the deceased is also employed in the same establishment. On the afternoon of Monday the 18th while waiting for stock or something of that kind, they were not at work and as the day was warm, they together with four or five companions, fellow workmen, concluded to go for a swim in the river close by. After they had been in the water some time, Baldwin who was a little distance from his companions was noticed to be apparently agitated. At first it was thought that he was fooling, but McInnis, thinking something was wrong, came to his assistance. He found him to be drowning in a deep hole, hither to unobserved. He tried to save his companion; but in the attempt both were drowned. The bodies were discovered about two hours afterwards. Both young men had just attended a mission given by the Redemptionist Fathers, which closed on the previous Sunday. On the morning of the 19th the bodies were taken to the church at Groveton, where a Requiem Mass was said for the repose of their souls. The pastor made a most affecting address relative to the sad accident, and spoke highly of the young man who had been suddenly taken off. Mr. Patrick Baldwin, above referred to, then started for home with the remains of the deceased. He expected to arrive in this city on the evening of the 20th; but in consequence of delay at Bangor, where several metallic coffins had to be procured at considerable expense, he did not arrive till Thursday evening the 21st. The bodies were taken to St. Theresa's, their last resting place, on Friday morning, where the interment took place in the afternoon. Mr. Baldwin was a brother of Mrs. John Byrne of this city. The widowed mother and other relatives of the deceased have our sympathy in their sad bereavement.

A YOUNG GIRL'S ESCAPE.

Saved from being a Nervous Wreck BY MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS.

For the benefit of Canadian mothers, who have daughters who are weak, pale, run down or nervous, Mrs. Selinger, 128 Ridgeway, Ottawa, Ontario, made the following statement, so that no one need suffer through ignorance of the right remedy to use: "My daughter suffered very much from heart troubles as signs. Often she was so bad that she could not speak, but had to sit and gasp for breath. She was so extremely nervous that her limbs would fairly shake and tremble. Frequently she would have to leave school, and finally she grew so weak that we were much alarmed about her health. I gave her many remedies, but they did not seem to do her any good. Then I heard of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and got a box of them, and they have indeed worked wonders with her. I can recommend them very highly as the best remedy I ever heard of for complaints similar to those from which my daughter suffered."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills never fail to do good. They cure palpitation, faintness, dizziness, smothering sensation, weakness, nervousness, sleeplessness, anemia, female troubles and general debility. Sold by all druggists at 50c. a box or three boxes for $1.25. T. Milburn & Co., Toronto, Ontario.

The Real Preference.

(St. John Sun.) The country has had more than a year of the fielding tariff. The country has been told time and time again that this is a tariff favorable to trade with Great Britain. Yet it will be found when the classified returns of imports is furnished that the imports from the United States have increased five dollars for every dollar of increase in our purchases from Great Britain. Sir Richard Cartwright has over and over again charged that the late government discriminated against Great Britain by imposing higher average duties on British goods than upon goods from the United States. This average is reached by taking account of the large quantity of free raw materials imported from the states. In a few weeks Sir Richard will issue his trade and commerce report for the year. He will in this book admit that the average duty under the new tariff is higher on imports from Great Britain than on imports from the United States. He will go farther and show by the returns that the discrimination of which he complained is worse than it was before. We take the risk of affirming that the excess in the average rate of duty on all imports from Great Britain over that on United States goods will be found to be larger under the fielding tariff of 1897 than under the tariff which was in operation in 1896. We do not forget the 13-1/2 per cent preference to British goods. But as against that there are several instances of duty on British goods, while in favor of the United States. In the case of the binder twine and corn distillate, and the reduction in the duties on heavy iron and steel goods and some other American articles. The present British goods, in probably more than an American tariff than the Foster tariff was. And Sir Richard's blue book will prove it.

Miracles at St Ann de Resoupe.

A Quebec special of the 21st to the Montreal Star says: "Two startling miracles were reported from St. Anne de Resoupe yesterday, by the members of a large Ontario pilgrimage that arrived here in the afternoon on their way home from the shrine. The pilgrimage was in two parts: seven hundred people came from Pembroke under the auspices of Mr. Lorrain, bishop of the diocese, and were accompanied by Rev. Fathers Picotte, Lemoine and La Tulippe. The pilgrims travelled by steamer Three Rivers. Another pilgrimage of 1,600 people from Smith's Falls, Ont., under the care of the Rev. Father Stanton, travelled by rail. Miss Perreault, of Sheenore, who accompanied the pilgrimage, and who is about 20 years of age, has been unable to walk for three years, and has had to use crutches. The doctors from Montreal and Pembroke who attended her, attributed her lameness to rheumatism. Yesterday, immediately after receiving the relic and receiving the Blessed Sacrament, she sprang to her feet, and leaving her crutches behind her, walked quite easily and naturally out of the church, giving thanks to Almighty God and to Bonne Ste. Anne. Since then she walked freely about the town, giving thanks to the Virgin Mary. The other case is that of a young girl named Cunningham, from St. Anne's, Ont., who has been almost completely blind by an affection of the eyes for about a year, and who now claims to see perfectly. The Ottawa Citizen announces that a Mr. Brewster of that city, who for several years was partially paralyzed and unable to walk, accompanied a pilgrimage to the shrine of St. Anne, and was almost completely cured."

MIST AND STORM.

BY FREDERICK GEORGE LEE, D. D.
"I am the Bright and Morning Star."

Thick lies the dew, the mists are grey,
Wear the weight upon my soul;
There are no lights from yonder coast,
Flare the old flag against the pole.
I can not trace the sea-range now,
I do not hear the curlew's cry;
The clouds are low, about, around;
No single star is out on high.

The waves, with deep and awful voice,
Break rudely on the rocky shore;
So comes a storm from out the west,
Sounds hollow grow to deepening roar.
Winds scatter mists to north and south,
Flag lay with the breeze as they play—
Gleams o'er the golden eastern bar
The Morning Star at break of day.

Ave Maria.

There is one little maxim
That now I will name,
Which may bring what is better
Than riches or fame.
All those who will heed it
Good appetite find,
Strong nerves, rosy cheeks,
And vigor of mind,
It will banish dyspepsia,
Rheumatism and gout,
That Throb of the heart,
Drive scrofula out,
And here is the maxim—
It's wisdom is sure—
Take Hood's Sarsaparilla
And keep your blood pure.

The Duke of Norfolk.

(Sacred Heart Review.)

The present Duke of Norfolk is the fifty-ninth Earl Marshal of England, besides being the premier duke, the premier earl and the premier peer of the realm, and as such ranking immediately after the prince of blood royal. In spite of all these dignities, the present Duke of Norfolk is the most modest, quiet and unassuming of men. Slight in stature, and below rather than above middle height, with a rather unkempt beard, bushy black hair, and weighing probably one hundred and forty pounds at the very most, he is just about the last man in the world whom a stranger would set down as being the recognized head of all that is illustrious in the aristocracy, not alone of Great Britain, but likewise of Europe. For there is no name in the English nobility that is more widely known or more respected as foreign courts than that of Howard, which may be found figuring in every page of English history since the days of the Norman conquest, and to bear which is usually regarded as an indication that the bluest of blue blood courses in its owner's veins. It is thoroughly in keeping with the present Duke, who is probably the wealthiest man in Westminster, that he should have contented himself with the postmaster-generalship in the present Salisbury Cabinet. He was reluctant to accept office. But when Lord Salisbury, aware that the presence of the Duke in the Administration would be a source of strength to the latter, owing to his influence, not only one of the greatest landowners in the kingdom, but also as chief of the important Roman Catholic element, appealed to his patriotism and to his sense of the duty of his order to the nation, he yielded, stipulating merely that he should have an office where ignorance of the duties of a Cabinet Minister would be calculated to do least harm. He was accordingly appointed postmaster-general, and by applying ordinary sound business principles to the conduct of his department has proved so great a success as an administrator that he is declared by political friend and foe alike to be the most satisfactory postmaster-general who has ever ruled at St. Martin's-Le-Grand.

The Duke is a most devout Catholic, and one of the pillars of the Church, being held in particularly high regard and esteem at the Vatican. This is all the more strange since the basis of his immense wealth has been the spoliation and plundering of the Church at the time of the Reformation. The latter was one of the most greedy of the courtiers surrounding King Henry VIII, and obtained as his share of the ecclesiastical plunder almost the entire riches of the bishopric of Norwich, in those days enormously wealthy. The priests and monks were driven out homeless over the land, and the poor were deprived of their houses and of their means of relief. The only son and heir of the present Duke of Norfolk, the Earl of Arundel, was born blind, deaf, dumb and weak of intellect. He was universally pronounced as altogether beyond the reach of medical science. During the last two years, however, to the astonishment of everyone and to the delight of the Duke, the lad has been recovering sight, speech, hearing, intelligence and physical strength, and his progress in this respect has been so rapid and so phenomenal that the young Earl, now about eighteen years old, is actually able to take long tricycle rides along the public roads in the neighborhood of Wimbledon Common, where he lives in a beautiful home bought for him by his devoted father. The Duke ascribes the miracles worked in his only son exclusively to Divine Intervention and as a response by Providence to the numerous pilgrimages to Lourdes which he has undertaken with the poor boy every year since the latter's early infancy, as well as to the prayers of Pope Leo and of good Catholics in all parts of the world whose Church has benefited so largely by the splendid manifestation of its gifts. Indeed, there is no man living in the Old World who has built so many churches and endowed so many (ecclesiastical and philanthropic) institutions as the present Duke of Norfolk. The Duke is an exceedingly busy man, as he is extremely conscientious in the performance of his duties, no matter whether they relate to the administration of the general post office, to his various municipal and county offices, to the direction of the numerous charitable and religious institutions in which he is interested or to the control of his vast estates. Yet since the death, eleven years ago, of his deeply mourned Duchess, he has never permitted a single day to pass without driving or riding out to the suburban home of his son in order to spend an hour or two with the lad. In fact, it is difficult to conceive a greater paternal devotion than that which the Duke has shown toward his afflicted son.

Like nearly all his two dozen fellow dukes, his Grace of Norfolk has his queer hobbies and fads. One of these is the collection of blotting-pads. He accumulates them almost as if he were studying the matter scientifically. He is always interested in the subject, and will converse on it by the hour with enjoyment. Another of his peculiarities is that it is only with the utmost difficulty that he can ever be got to open a letter or parcel. There are several large rooms in his London home, Norfolk House, James' Square, that are crammed to the ceiling with things which he has ordered or purchased, which have remained unpacked and untouched. Some day, when those rooms are cleared out, valuable pictures and costly bric-a-brac will be found lying cheek by jowl with curiosities in the way of blotting pads. Among those of his relatives whose names are the most familiar to people in the United States have been the late Lord Lyons, British envoy at Washington throughout the Civil War, and who, on ceremoniously and officially informing President Lincoln of the marriage of the Prince of Wales, received in response a dig in the ribs, coupled with the words, "Go 'em, Lyons, and do thou likewise!" Lord Lyons died under the roof of the Duke of Norfolk after having been converted to the true faith. Another equally well-known kinsman of the Duke was that magnificent prince of the Church, the late Cardinal Howard, archbishop of St. Peter's at Rome, who died insane, spending the last years of his life under restraint at the Duke's celebrated country seat, Arundel Castle, which is one of the grandest and most picturesque of the old feudal abodes of the British nobility. Nor must the name be omitted of the Duke's cousin, Mr. Henry Howard, now English Minister to the Court of Hague, who spent so many years in this country as secretary of the British Legation, and who is married to Miss Riggs of Washington. The Duke's wife was Lady Flora Hastings, daughter of the late Lord Donnington, and in the event of his son dying without issue the dukedom will descend to his brother Lord Edmund Talbot, who was forced to assume the name and arms of Talbot in lieu of that of Howard on succeeding to the large estates of his uncle, the Catholic Earl of Shrewsbury and Talbot. Arundel Castle, which is the favorite residence of the duke, has had more money spent upon it than any other palace or mansion in the United Kingdom, and that too without any expense to the Duke. For one of his ancestors took the precaution to tie up in trust a tract of land extending from the Strand to the Thames in such a manner that its revenues could be used for improvement of the castle. The land is now exceedingly valuable, comprising the thoroughfare known as Arundel street, and it yields an enormous income. Two million dollars of this money was recently spent by the Duke on the construction of an exquisitely beautiful staircase at Arundel Castle.

Expulsion of Senor Du Bose.
(Held over from last week.)
Senor Du Bose, late Secretary to the Spanish Legation at Washington, left Montreal for Spain, on the 19th inst. Their departure was in consequence of the urgent and repeated request of the Dominion Government. The request for their departure was made by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, through W. C. St.

Pierre, Q. C. of Montreal, legal adviser of Senor Du Bose. To the request from Sir Wilfrid Laurier, for his departure, Du Bose made a spirited reply, setting forth the utter unreasonableness of the grounds on which the Premier requested him to leave the Dominion. Considerable correspondence ensued. Finally Du Bose agreed to go; but under protest, reserving to himself the right to bring the matter up at a future time, when the present war troubles are over. The Montreal "Gazette," in its issue of the 17th inst., published the following editorial comment: The departure of Senor Du Bose at the urgent request of the Canadian Government, reported in another column, involves vast issues than appear on the surface, and is likely to arouse a controversy which will assail the Imperial Government with even greater vehemence than that of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. It has always been the proud boast of Great Britain that she afforded a safe asylum to foreigners of all countries, so long as they kept British law. Forty years ago a similar question to that now involved led to the overthrow of an exceptionally strong Government under an exceptionally strong Premier—Lord Palmerston. Among the persons charged along with Orsini in the attempt on the life of Napoleon III. was a Frenchman, Simon Bernard, who had been for some time living in London. The bombs were thrown by Orsini were manufactured in Birmingham, and the plot was said to have been hatched in London. French newspapers and organs were full of reports about the shelter given to the British Government to conspirators of this type, and Lord Palmerston was officially requested to make some change in the law. He did not reply to the despatch from the French Government, but introduced in the House of Commons a law to make conspiracy to commit murder a felony instead of a misdemeanor. Meanwhile Bernard had been arrested, and the circumstances brought very prominently before the public mind the question of the rights of foreigners residing in Great Britain. Sir Robert Peel, Mr. Gladstone, and other men of influence opposed Lord Palmerston's bill as an attempt to trample to the French Government and weaken the protection England afforded to exiles, and the Government was defeated. The law introduced in the House of Commons, the legal question involved with great care and acumen. The opinion of Lord Lyndhurst was accepted by all as laying down the true basis: Foreigners residing in this country, as long as they reside here under the protection of this country, are considered as British subjects, and rather subjects of Her Majesty, and are punishable by the criminal law precisely in the same manner, to the same extent, and under the same conditions, as natural born subjects of Her Majesty.

In the course of the debate, Lord Campbell said: "There is no distinction between natural born subjects and aliens with regard to acts committed within the realm of England. If aliens are in England within the Queen's allegiance, they are her subjects so long as they remain here, and they are liable to the same procedure as natural born subjects."
