CHAPTER LXVIII.
 RETRIBUTION.

"Where is the secretary?" he asked of the discreet footman, who stood behind the hall porter, ready to receive the coat and hat of his lord and master.

"The secretary, sir?" replied the footman, staring. "Did he not go with you, sir?"

"No," curtly answered his master. "Where has he gone?"

The man does not know; he explains with evident fear and trembling that Mr. Stanfield had the Captain's cob saddled and brought round and started within half an hour or so of the captain himself.

The master stared for a moment with astonished anger, then paced the grand mosaic-tiled hall and ascended the wide and Turkey-carpeted stairs.

"Tell Mr. Stanfield to wait my bell within his room," he said, and passed on to the room that at infinite expense had been made sound-tight and secretive as the tomb.

At the door he turned again, and in a voice which sounded unnaturally indifferent gave orders that any lady wishing to see him should be admitted at once, without question.

This done he touched the secret spring and entered the room.

It smelled close and stifling; and with a long breath of weariness and suppressed excitement the defeated schemer, by the aid of a small taper, proceeded to light the small opal-studded lamp.

Then he sank into a chair, disregarding his hat, that fell on the floor and rolled beneath the table.

He sat staring at the wall, quiet at last, to think.

But he can not; all he can do is to sit quiet and motionless, tracing the pattern of the wall-paper, and murmuring:

"The will found! Hugh Darrell returned! The Dale lost!"

Gradually the stupor disappeared, cleared off before the exercise of his stern will, and he raised himself a little in his chair and resumed the tracing of the paper.

But another and more fearful feeling superseded the stupor.

He can think; but of what did he think?

Not of the future, which alone he desired to ponder and consider, but of the past—the black, hideous, crime-stained past!

Across the splendid Turkey carpet, moving with the slow, monotonous regularity of a shadowy, phantom, desert caravan his past deeds parade.

He sees himself on the wall, a vicious, heartless, yet ambitious man, a club lounge and gambler.

He sees a weak, beautiful woman—girl, rather—clinging to him with all the trusting helplessness of a wrongful love.

On glides the panorama and shows him himself, changed not, but developed into the schemer for the squire's wealth.

Darker grows the picture, and he recoils in the chair as he sees the weak, girlish form of the ballet girl hanging upon him and withering beneath his cruel, heartless, unmanly words of desertion. He sees what he has not seen in reality, but pictured often, that graceful form, that girlish, trusting face lying dead—dead—upon the floor; dead by her hand, which his cruelty has nerve to—suicide!

Ah! He shrinks, cowers beneath that picture there upon the gaudy carpet till the cold drops of perspiration stand like icicles upon his white brow.

But the panorama goes on and grows darker.

Now comes another girlish form, shrinking from his unhalloved mockery of love—shrinking, flying—and leaves a white-haired old man, who, raising himself on his bed, shrieks for mercy, while the murderous hands choke the life-breath from his old, parched lips.

Still on, and more swiftly, the phantom glides past, and the pictures change and glow with gold. The shrinking, fascinated plotter beholds himself enshrined in success.

Wealth flows about him in rivers of gold. Luxury waits upon his footsteps, and another woman crosses his path—this time a stately, queenly form, with a coronet upon her brow and a dreamy look of undying purpose within her eyes.

The silent, solitary watcher sees that this is the woman, Lucille Vitarelli, his last dupe, who is to meet him to-night—for whom he now waits.

And as he looks, half waking from his sleepless dream, with a mocking smile at the phantoms his overwrought brain has conjured up, the figure of the woman is obscured by a dark shadow and is already, somehow or other—how, he knows not—the likeness of treason and death.

This is the last strain upon his calmness.

With a suffocating cry he rises from the chair and staggers upright.

The visions were dispelled, but the reality was approaching; for, even as he pressed his hot hand across his fevered forehead, he mutters, hoarsely:

"I have been asleep and dreaming. I am tired, worn out, and not myself. Let me be calm—Lucille will be here soon!"

The door opened noiselessly and the queenly form of Lucille, Countess Vitarelli, stood before him.

He almost believed himself still mocked by a dream; but a long look at the figure, which he noted almost unconsciously was garbed in black, and at the face, which was white as death and strangely stern, he knew that it was her in the flesh.

"Lucille!" he cried, springing forward, "you have come, my queen? I am ready and waiting. I am tired, and have just returned—"

He stopped, struck silent by the expression of her white face.

It had become stone-like and rigid with majestic hate and scorn.

"Lucille!" he breathed, stepping back and staring at her. "What—for the love of Heaven—what is the matter? Are you ill? Has aught happened? Speak!"

She spoke.

"Reginald Dartmouth, look upon that!"

And she extended her white arm, in the hand of which was a small miniature.

He approached, frozen with astonishment, and, bending, looked.

Astonishment gave place to fear, and as he recognized the small, girlish face, he thrust his hand within his bosom, as if to feel for something.

His hand fell to his side and, with a look of fear, he muttered:

"Gone!"

"Know you that face?" came from the stern lips of the countess.

He could not deny it; something intangible yet all-powerful compelled him to speak the truth.

"Yes," he breathed, fearfully, "it is—"

"The woman—nay, the child—you ruined, deserted—murdered!" broke in the stern, stone-like voice of his confounder. "The face of the poor, helpless ballet girl whom you left to die—the face of Ida Vitarelli, the sister I have sworn to avenge!"

Hard, metallic, awful in its unchanging monotone, the voice spoke these words.

Their effect was still more awful.

The listener shrank, cowered, and at last fell speechless, breathless, huddled up, like a man stricken with palsy, in the large, luxurious chair.

Pitiless as the stone she resembled, the Italian approached and held out a long slip of paper.

His eyes stared at it unmeaningly, senselessly.

"Look at this, murderer," she said, "and know thyself a still-baser, vile reptile—a traitor! Whatever crimes those cowardly, fiendish hands have wrought Heaven alone may know; but this, their last, waits for punishment!"

At the last word he resumed something of his old tigerish courage, and, with a growl of fiendish rage, he sprang from his chair to clutch the convincing paper.

But before his trembling, claw-like fingers could grasp it the accuser stepped back, the door opened as noiselessly as before, and two dark, shadowy forms stood between him and her.

He turned and looked, his hair stood on end as his starting eyes confronted the hideous masks of crape and the flashing, murderous eyes that pierced them.

"Mercy!" he shrieked. "Mercy! Help!"

But the walls gave back the sound that could not pierce them.

He might shriek with the agony of the lost, outpoured in one long yell, and the dreadful room would keep his despairing rage confined and unheard.

Oh, it was fearful! Never was death more hideous! Outside the footsteps of the passers-by echo with irregular fitfulness. Outside, separated from him by a few bricks, are living men and women, who could save him if they could but hear.

But no, no, there was no help; and, maddened by the thought, he sprang upon the first masked face, and as he sprang received the glittering steel in his heart.

Once, twice, thrice the weapons pierced his quivering form; and then as he lay, a mere lump of lifeless, blood-stained clay, curled by the last agony upon the gaudy carpet, the unseen, unknown avengers of treason

CHAPTER LXIX.

"WE ARE TOO LATE!"

Short is the date in which ill acts prevail. But honesty's rock can never fail.—STEELE.

Within a few hours Hugh Darrell and the constables had come up with their game and were knocking at the door of his retreat.

The hall porter, thinking the summons that of the secretary returned, hastened to unfasten the huge door, and started back with consternation on seeing three police officers and a gentleman, who, without further parley, quietly stepped into the hall and demanded to see Captain Dartmouth.

"Captain Dartmouth?" repeated the funky, losing the little presence of mind he ever possessed.

"Yes—your master," sternly replied Hugh. "Come, sir; no hesitation. We have a warrant for his apprehension."

The inspector, as an addendum, produced the formidable document.

"Warrant? Bless me!" echoed the man. "Well, gentlemen, the captain is in his room—first door to your right. Here, James; show these gentlemen to the captain's room," and as Hugh, followed by the officers, bounded up the stairs, he retreated to his sentry-box, muttering:

"Warrant, eh? Well, I always thought the captain was no good by his looks. Where's my quarter's salary to come from if he's taken, I wonder?"

Hugh, following the no less startled footman, entered the unoccupied ante-chamber to the captain's private room and cast his stern eyes round the splendid apartment with one anxious glance.

With many sobs and repetitions, the good woman had told her tale of woe to the vicar.

It was full of "E ses" and "I ses to 'im," but the clergyman listened patiently till she had finished.

"I'm sorry, my dear lady," he said sympathetically. "Certainly your husband does seem to treat you rather unkindly; but remember that you took him for better or for worse."

"Well, it's allus bin for wuss, s'tar as I kin see," replied the visitor, dabbing her eyes with what only politeness could call a pocket-handkerchief.

"Have you tried to cure him with kindness?" pleaded the vicar. "Have you tried heaping coals of fire on his head?"

"No, I ain't, sir," replied the woman, grateful for the new idea. "So far, I've only tried 'ot water."

HOSILITY TO HUN SHIPPING.
RAMSGATE, Aug. 17. A serious clash occurred to-day between the police and a mob, which was bent on preventing the loading of two German ships. Steamers arrived several days ago for cargoes of coke but, owing to the hostility of ex soldiers, and others, because of the nationality of the vessels, no attempt was made to load the craft until to-day.

ANOTHER RACE RIOT.
NEW YORK, Aug. 17. Two men were shot and four others hurt by missiles thrown during a fight between striking longshoremen and negro non-union workers at Ninth Avenue and Fourteenth Street last night. The trouble started when a crowd of non-union men, on their way from the piers, encountered a number of strikers who, according to the police started throwing rocks and bottles.

In Pilate's Seat.
The office of Governor of Jerusalem, once occupied by Pontius Pilate, is now held by Colonel Ronald Storrs, a graduate of Cambridge University and son of the Dean of Rochester College, England.

His task is one to test the administrative ability of any man. Jerusalem is a city of division, where, whatever may come of the future, for the moment Zionists and Arabs are passionately divided, and to steer a just path between them and induce them to join him on that path is thankless work.

It is to that task, however, that he chiefly devotes himself. Twice a week he has meetings of his favorite pro-Jerusalem society, where French, Italians, British, Americans, Rabbin, Zionist leaders, commercial men of standing and all others who are in any way prominent in the life of the city are brought together and in the course of debate led to see that they have in common a single citizenship. His motto as Governor is "unity and friends."

Colonel Storrs was one of the prime movers in the establishment of an independent Arab kingdom. He is thirty-eight years old.

Cerise, with an overtone of rose, and jade with an overtone of blue, will be the favorite colors for trimming.

Nfld. Patriotic Association.

A meeting of the Patriotic Association of Newfoundland was held in the Board of Trade Rooms last night. His Excellency the Governor presiding. The minutes were dispensed with, a digest of the same being orally given by the Hon. Secretary, Dr. V. P. Burke, after which the report of the War Memorial Committee was presented by Mr. W. G. Gosling. This with the original instructions to the committee, will appear in a subsequent issue. The report created a lengthy discussion.

His Excellency pointed out that the Government, he gathered, had committed themselves to the erection of a Normal School and advised prompt action as to the erection of the monument as Rev. Fr. Naugle may have made arrangements for the Caribou design by Mr. Basil Gotto, which was the choice of the G.W.V.A. and strongly favored at the last meeting.

Hon. W. B. Grieve moved the report be received for discussion and referred to the committee for consideration of the cost of the Memorial Hall and monument.

Dr. Burke thought the Caribou unsuitable for the depositing on of wreaths at the annual religious service, and would like a figure symbolizing the victory of Right over Wrong. He also suggested the committee be given a free hand to consult with others beside Mr. Gotto in the matter. Dr. Robinson expressed disappointment at the delay in erecting the memorial proper, pointing out that it was no further advanced than in January, 1918. The committee had been appointed for three specific purposes. None of these had been carried into effect, and nothing of a definite character had been done. He was not interested in a utilitarian monument, but protested against the long delay in erecting a memorial to our honored dead. The plans had been approved by the Association and the G.W.V.A. Why were they now, after months of silence, repudiated? Surely it is not necessary to wait till the Normal School is built, to raise the real memorial. The Caribou is generally accepted as the Newfoundland emblem. The Caribou issue of stamps had the approval of the naval authorities. The country expected prompt and definite action, and has met with delay after delay. The main memorial on the plans outlined and approved last January should be erected and erected forthwith.

Mr. Justice Johnson endorsed the suggestion of prompt action. The utilitarian memorial can be dealt with afterwards. He failed to see why the monument was not promptly erected to those who so promptly earned it.

Mr. Gosling said the question of having the two together or separately was the cause of the split. It had been decided by the committee to have them together, if possible, or the statutory in front of the school when that is erected. Waiting for the Government's action caused the whole. The erection of a site was another point, as only the cenotaph or Caribou could be erected in the park. Space would be needed for the annual services. The committee further considered the $100,000 allocated by the Government for a Normal School not nearly sufficient to erect a building suitable as a memorial. Another $100,000 or $150,000 would have to be raised by the Association for the hall and nothing could be expected from the outports as they are erecting their own memorials.

His Excellency pointed out the first thing the resolutions called for was the monument. Mr. H. R. Brookes regretted the delay. The continued blocking of progress had killed his enthusiasm though on the committees, and the general public he also feared had greatly lost interest in the matter. The committee had definite instructions to do certain things and they should have been done.

Mr. J. W. Withers thought the delay might be all for good, as a statue alone is not to be erected, but something that will be a lesson to future generations. Rev. Dr. Curtis felt the only question to be decided was whether the monument and school should be together and that it would be well to consult different architects.

Mr. Justice Johnson suggested Custom House Hill as the site of the monument. His Excellency emphasized the point that the resolution prompted by the G.W.V.A. was the first thing to be dealt with and that it should not be rescinded.

Mr. F. W. Bradshaw suggested that particulars of the design, materials, etc., of the monument, be obtained so as to give an idea of what funds would be needed. The longer the delay the greater the difficulty in raising money. Mr. McKay asked that if he made clear if the memorials are to be in conjunction or separate, to which His Excellency said his recollection was that the resolution dealing with the monument was distinct from the others.

Sir Joseph Outerbridge felt they should be separate. Mr. J. A. Cliff said his idea of a memorial was that embodied in the first resolution, a Caribou, and not one of utilitarian value. The school is a matter for the Government. The public should be asked to confirm the

McKay St. Man Eats Anything He Wants to Now

Tanlac Did All That Is Claimed For It In My Case, Declares Collins.

Still another Newfoundlanders whose deep sense of gratitude and desire to help others, will not permit him to remain silent regarding the great good he has derived from Tanlac, is John Collins, of McKay St., St. John's. In a recent statement telling of his experience with the medicine, he says:

"I want to let all who suffer as I did know what a great medicine Tanlac is. For four years before I started taking it I had indigestion so bad I couldn't touch a bit of pork and cabbage without being in misery for hours afterwards, and even very light food like bruis and gravy would sour on my stomach and cause gas to form and bloat me up till I could hardly breathe. I had such pains across the small of my back at times, I could scarcely stand it, and sometimes became so dizzy I had to sit down to save myself from falling. I just felt tired and worn-out all the time and it was all I could do to drag around."

"A friend of mine certainly did me a good turn when he advised me to try Tanlac, for it only took two bottles of that medicine to put me into good shape again. The first few doses gave me such an appetite I was hungry all the time, and I can now eat anything I want and never suffer in the least from sourness or gas. I am no longer bothered with dizzy spells and the pains have entirely disappeared from my back. I have lost that tired, worn-out feeling and in fact am so much stronger and more energetic that I can do double the work I could before. You can take it from me, Tanlac does all that is claimed for it, and I'm glad of this chance to recommend it."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors; by Reg. Sullivan, Pouch Cove; Sound Island Store, Sound Island; Dennis Flynn, Arundale; J. J. O'Brien, Cape Broyle; J. W. Smith, Baine Harbor; W. A. Burdock, Bellefleur; John Morey, Fermeuse; Mrs. Jos. Quinn, Renewa—adv.

decision for the G.W.V.A. idea and then let the funds be collected.

Mr. J. R. Bennett endorsed the previous speaker's remarks, the citizens to subscribe to the monument as it being done in the outports, who have already honoured the memory of the fallen. The first resolution should be adhered to.

Rev. Dr. Curtis felt the memorial would not be one for the city alone and this meeting had power to rescind the resolutions of the other. Sir Wm. Lloyd thought it improper to turn down the G.W.V.A. resolution without their having a chance to discuss it. The Caribou is a fitting symbol. The Government's $100,000 is voted only for a school, which will take more than that sum if it is to be anything worth while. To erect the two, together, suited to each other, would probably cost $250,000.

Mr. R. G. Rendell said the resolutions had been passed at a larger and more representative meeting than the present and nothing had been introduced to alter that decision. There was too much delay already, and the longer it continued the harder would be the collection of funds. The work should be carried forward at once.

Mr. Grieve agreed a monument to record what our boys did should be erected and that the money will have to be raised in the city. Dr. Blackall thought the committee right in seeking the opinion of architects in the matter.

On motion of Mr. Gosling, seconded by Dr. Blackall, and agreed to by Sir Wm. Lloyd the following resolution was passed:—"That on receiving the report of the War Memorial Committee, the Association realizes the expediency of obtaining some further light on a question of such moment as that dealt with in the report and therefore authorizes the committee to consult with Mr. George Gilbert Scott in reference to the submission of plans for the memorial." The meeting closed at 11.50.

Straits Fishery.

A message from Humbermouth received last evening says: "Grant, Blanc Sablon, reports: 14,000 quintals fish, and Whiteley, Bonne Esperance, a similar amount. Trap fishing is over on the Labrador side. Fair catches were taken the past week with hook and line."

Only Canadians to Subscribe.

Montreal, Aug. 16.—A. C. Ross, of Montreal, who has challenged for the America's Cup, stated to-day that the rumor that Americans were being allowed to contribute towards the construction of a Canadian yacht to compete in the next races was not correct. No subscriptions from others than Canadians will be accepted. This decision is not due to any ill-feeling, but to the fact that all the necessary money will be readily subscribed by Canadians, said Mr. Ross. There will be one exception, Mr. Ross said, C. D. Russell, of New York, early sent a donation which was accepted and will be retained.

LEAGUE FOOTBALL.—The Britons and Fedilians will be the contestants in this evening's football game, and on Friday night the C.E.L. and Saints will try conclusions.

Miss Marlon Simmons, stenographer at E. Simmons', left by Monday afternoon's train on a holiday to the city.

The schooner "Kinsman" is in dock undergoing repairs.

Mr. Frank Goff, of Messrs. Ayre & Sons, Ltd., St. John's, left by Monday morning's train for the city to resume work again, having enjoyed his holiday very much. His brother, Thomas who has been spending his holidays here also, will shortly leave to take up work again in Canada.

Messrs. Malcolm Yetman and Harry Kennedy, of the Cable Staff, Hear's Content, are spending their holidays here with parents and friends.

On Saturday last, near the Marine Railway Dock, an accident occurred, which might have ended fatally, but for the assistance of a young man who had been near at the time. A boat, in which was a young fellow named Champlion of the schooner "Maple" (which is here to go on dock), through some mishap was overturned, throwing the occupant into the water. Both boat and man sank to the bottom immediately, and although there were quite a few onlookers, yet there were scarcely anyone in a position to render help; but a member of the crew of the schooner "Cape Pine," which was but a short distance away, saw what was going on, and hurried to where the drowning man was, reaching the spot just in time to rescue him. Young Champlion's father, who is Capt. of the schooner "Maple," feels very grateful to this young man who rescued his son from a very untimely death.

The schooner "Bernard E. Conrad," having been docked, left port again on Monday morning last.

Freeman's English Foods

A complete supply for your larder.

Custard Like Cream.

Freeman's Custard, made according to directions, provides a creamy dish that softens the tartness of fruits. It is ideal for trifles, and as a hot sauce with puddings it is delicious.

A Popular Blanc Mange

Freeman's Blanc Mange Powder is distinctly flavoured with fruit essence, and is agreeably smooth to the palate. A packet in the house ensures a delightful "emergency" dish, easily made.

Making Better Cakes.

There is nothing better for making cakes than Freeman's Egg Powder. It is an improvement upon eggs rather than a substitute for them; making cakes lighter and more digestible, and never "dry".

A Clear, Light Jelly.

The delightful clearness and colour of Freeman's Jellies is the next best thing to their taste. There is absolutely no heavy sediment in a jelly made with Freeman's Jelly Crystals, and the flavours are true to the fruit.

A Comforting Drink.

There is no more comforting drink on a cold day than Freeman's Glass Lemon and hot water—as hot as you can drink it. Freeman's Glass Lemon is sweetened sufficiently for the average taste; it is made with real lemons by an entirely new process—a great advance on the old lemon crystal.

If a cold drink is required it is only necessary to add Freeman's Glass Lemon to cold water, it dissolves immediately—no need to wait while the drink cools.

Who Runs May Read.

If the people of Newfoundland are inclined to believe that the Fish Export Regulations form the best legislation ever produced for the benefit of this dominion, they have only to read the report of Monday's Board of Trade meeting proceedings, as published in the press, to convince them that even the very people who assisted in the making are now repudiating their connection with the celebrated series of rules governing the export and sale of our staple article of commerce. Or at least if their disavowals do not go so far as the term used, they are showing haste in denying responsibility, for the condition of things brought about by the enforcement of the Regulations themselves. That is only what was expected. The few who assisted in forcing the Regulations on the fishing industry without due consideration of the difficulties in which they were sure to involve shippers, have now discovered for themselves that they are unworkable and injurious as framed at present. Their very enforcement restricts trade. On the South West Coast both shippers and catchers are up against financial trouble. The former cannot get their cargoes to market, the latter being consequently obliged to hold their fish. Thus there is no activity in trade and as noted in our Burgeo message yesterday, "business is at a standstill." From farther West the same story comes. The Regulations are detrimental to business. Connections with Halifax have been severed, practically, because of the prohibition on exports of codfish for which dealers in the Nova Scotian capital cannot afford to pay the price set by the Marine and Fisheries Department through and by the Minister. This dislocation of business is fraught with results which cannot end in bringing material prosperity to the people engaged in the fishery. On the contrary it depreciates their earning power, and God help any country whose people are prevented by Act of Parliament from engaging fully and freely in their lawful avocations.

Such a muddle has been made by price fixing, that it is but egregious folly on the part of the authorities to continue in the way they are going. It is a perilous way, and if it does not bring them to the edge of the precipice the intervention of Providence alone can prevent it. West Coast firms have wired the Board of Trade that they are in thorough agreement with the standardization and inspection of fish, if properly and capably carried out, and the latter impartially performed, but to quote the message read at Monday's meeting, "We believe that price fixing by the Government, both local and foreign, and also restraints as to sailings of vessels are radically wrong and harmful, and we will join in any protest against them." The above may be taken to be an expression of universal sentiment on the South and West Coasts. It is another corroboration of our repeated declaration that the Regulations make for restraint of trade, and are upsetting all the established methods of doing business with the outside world. To continue these Regulations relating to price fixing and placing embargoes on West Coast shipments at this time of year when new fish is ready for market, is but to precipitate the day of disaster. Prosperity cannot make headway with such obstacles placed in its path. Progress is being retarded, its machinery reversed, and much depression, if not actual suffering is bound to ensue. Everyone wants to see Newfoundland flourish and advance. We won through the four years of war and made a high place for the dominion in the commercial life of the world, but all the success that our industry and enterprise gained during the period of struggle will be nullified unless reason returns to our present ruler, and dictates to him the wisest course to pursue.

Motor Association Meeting.

At a meeting of the Newfoundland Motor Association held in the Board of Trade Rooms last night, Mr. W. White occupied the chair. The meeting decided to ask the Civic Commission to reimburse the Association for repairing Cornwall Avenue east of Albany, they undertaking to do the work at the commission's cost at present unable to attend to the matter. The matter of headlights on motor cars will be dealt with by the executive. The Road's Commission will refund the money spent by the Association on road work. A collector will be appointed to gather in dues and new members for the Association will be solicited. Mr. T. Soper reported on the work done near Kelligrews and Fox Trap where many boulders had been removed and excellent work performed. Drains will be made, to prevent damage during rainy weather. The work had stood well in the rain storms of a few days ago with the exception of one or two sections where the work had been spread over too great a distance to ensure the best results, the top dressing was damaged but this is being thoroughly repaired. The foremen are giving good service and excellent value is being received for the money expended. The large boulder near Manuels Station will be blasted away and the road rebuilt. The new machinery for road work is expected here about September 1st.

City Ball Players Dined Sydney Visitors.

After the game in the inter-dominion series last night, the League officers, visitors and guests, to the number of one hundred, assembled at Wood's West End Restaurant, where a reception dinner to the Steel City men had been prepared, and after places were taken an excellent menu served in the style for which Wood's is so well known, was discussed.

Official Baseball Score, 7 to 5.

In response to many requests from sweep-holders we interviewed Manager Chesman regarding the official score in last night's game. Mr. Chesman declares the baseball rules distinctly state that in a called game, when the last inning is incomplete, the score stands as at the end of the previous full inning. The score of last night's game was therefore 7 to 5 in favor of the Sydney Millionaires. Total 12 runs, not 13.

Meigle's Report.

The following report was received yesterday from Capt. Norman, of the s.s. Meigle, from Humbermouth: "Called at all regular ports to Battle Hr.; met with fairly good weather almost all the whole trip. Trap fishing practically over; good sign with hook and line on Labrador side; almost a blank from Flower's Cove to Port aux Choix."

Lord Fisher.

THE MOST PICTURESQUE FIGURE IN MODERN BRITISH NAVY.

Anyone who desires to prove that Admiral John Arbuthnot Fisher was the Great War will find considerable data to assist him; and we think that any dispassionate investigator who examined all the evidence would conclude that had Lord Fisher not lived, the British navy could not have played the decisive part it did play. It is agreed that without the navy the war would soon have been lost, and undoubtedly the British navy was more the creation of "Jacky" Fisher than of any other man. One requires upon more debatable ground when expressing the opinion that the war would have been shortened had Lord Fisher been permitted to remain First Sea Lord, and that his counsel was worth the counsel of a half dozen Winston Churchills. But the two men, both of powerful, dominating personality, fought, one as First Sea Lord and the other as Lord of the Admiralty. Fisher dropped out. So did Churchill, to be replaced by Balfour, but Fisher was not recalled. He was instead given a post as chairman of the Board of Naval Inventions, although there was a great popular demand that he should be reinstated, and given the authority in the navy that Kitchener had in the army.

Lord Fisher was one of the most picturesque characters the British navy has had since Nelson. He began without friends or influence, and by sheer force of intellect and will advanced to the highest position of all, the position which is the inspiration of every officer in the service. He grew up in a rough school, and learned to take and give knocks. One gathers that he was not an easy man to work with; but he had sufficient brain power to have little need of collaboration, and some of the most important reforms that he brought about were the result of struggles into which he entered single handed. The dreadnought was Fisher's idea; so was the battle cruiser. He did not invent the turbine engine, but it was due to his persistent advocacy that it was generally adopted in the navy. It was also his idea to use the watertube boiler; that is to say, to have the fire where the water was, an improvement that made it possible to get up steam in a ship in twenty minutes, instead of seven hours. To use oil as fuel was also Fisher's idea.

Did any other naval expert ever invent or adapt so many important improvements? Yet they are by no means all that stand to the credit of Lord Fisher. He devised the system of nucleus crews for warships, whereby a ship would always have its complement of brains aboard and could send its extra man power wherever it was needed, or take the crude, raw article and fit it into position instantly. But perhaps the greatest stroke of all, whereby the strength of the British fleet was kept in the North Sea, was in carrying out Nelson's old maxim that your battleground should be your drill ground. Of course, the Entente with France was necessary before this revolutionary change in naval strategy could be achieved, but the Entente might have been in existence and the British fleet scattered all over the seven seas had the navy been without a man like Fisher. One does not like to imagine the Great War breaking out, the German navy at Kiel and the British ships stationed all over the Mediterranean, the China Sea, and the Pacific, as had been the immemorial practice before Fisher became First Sea Lord.

We shall not weary our easily wearied readers with a recital of the various posts held by Lord Fisher, but shall merely mention that he was British delegate to the Peace Conference at the Hague in 1899, on which occasion he made a speech that shocked most of his hearers. He said: "There is no such thing as humane war. War should be made as hellish and as direct in effect as possible. There is no excuse for it otherwise. When you have to wring a chicken's neck, all you think about is wringing it quickly. You don't give the chicken intervals for rest and refreshment." This, however, does not imply any approval of a policy of "frightfulness." What Fisher thought of the submarine, years before it was supposed to have any great possibilities of destructiveness.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE TRUE HEROISM.

RUTH CAMERON

"She is the most devoted daughter," a neighbor said to me some weeks ago about a mutual friend of ours whose mother was sick.

"She simply never thinks of herself. She is just wearing herself to the bone waiting on her mother. She runs up and down stairs a hundred times a day. She gets up half a dozen times a night to see if her mother wants anything, and half the time I think she forgets to eat her own meals she is so anxious to have everything for her mother just so."

"Then, of course, I have to save myself in waiting on him. I would have liked to anticipate his every wish and rush up and down stairs to do any little errand, but I know that wouldn't be kindness to him in the end."

Not Just Food But Strength.

"I think the hardest thing though was to teach myself to be absolutely regular about my meals and eat properly. I just turned against food at first when I was so worried, but I taught myself to eat it by saying to myself, 'It isn't just food I'm eating—it's strength to do things for him.'"

I call that woman the finest kind of a heroine—for she showed her endurance and courage not just once in a crisis, but day in and day out for years.

I speak of her experience in the past not because she is dead but because, as you may like to know, her husband ultimately recovered, he has a fine position, and she is enjoying the rest and comfort she so nobly earned.

A Word of Warning.

A smartly-dressed lady, who visited a big West End shop recently to make several purchases, noticed that as one assistant passed her on to another, the remark was passed, in a stage whisper:

"Two-ten!"

She was struck by the oft-repeated remark, and finally said:

"What does two-ten mean?"

"It's nothing," replied the man, "just a password."

But she was not satisfied. So when the messenger brought her purchases home she said to him:

"Boy, would you like to earn half a crown?"

"You bet, miss," was the reply.

"Tell me what does two-ten mean, and I'll give you the money."

"That's easy," replied the youngster. "It means keep your two eyes on her ten fingers."

She had been taken for a shoplifter.

A Republican Blast.

(From the Boston Herald.)

Governor Cox has spoken. The Democratic nominee for the presidency puts forth an acceptance speech marked by precisely the characteristics that any student of his career would expect it to contain. He is wordy; his style is gaudy and garish. He is deft in appeal to popular prejudices. He implies many purposes but is wary of specific pledges. He is slick; his abilities, his cleverness and shrewdness, blend in just the proportions to make him an adroit and smooth manipulator, and as such he appears in Dayton deliverance.

For example, how does Mr. Cox stand on the soldiers' bonus proposition? He pays a deserved tribute to the men who fought overseas. He refers to the nation's debt to the wounded and disabled and the families left dependent by the thousands who died in France. And he says: "We must realize that considerable compensation is due those who lost much by the break in their material hopes and aspirations. The genius of the nation's mind and the sympathy of its heart must inspire intensive, thoughtful effort to assist those who served our all." Now, is he for a bonus or against it? Evidently his intention is to be both. You may read into those sentences whatever meaning you choose. Yet he talks about the "artful phrasing of the Republican platform making almost any deduction possible."

One thing that the speech does make clear is that, if he abides through the next three months by the position he assumed at Dayton yesterday, there will be no repudiation of Woodrow Wilson in the matter of the peace treaty. Since the nomination, more or less authorized statements as to the relations between the President and the Governor have been numerous, some to the effect that their "harmony" is complete—which always means, of course, that the other man's mind "runs along with" Mr. Wilson's—and others indicating that Mr. Cox intends "to be his own master." The large section of the speech devoted to the treaty and the league of nations makes clear the nominee's unqualified adherence to the Wilson idea. The Governor goes the limit in his castigation of "the senatorial oligarchy," "the senatorial cabal, led by Senators Lodge, Penrose, and Smoot," that "as conspirators planned and plotted with bigoted zeal" to prevent the ratification of the document signed at Versailles.

It is amazing, however, to find the Governor making use of the same ridiculous and dishonest attempt to use Senator Lodge as a witness for the Democratic side that was tried at San Francisco. The platform dated a quotation from the Senator six months ahead of the time of its utterance. The candidate cites the same language, but says that it was written "before the heat of recent controversy." Yet Governor Cox knows very well, what the Democratic platform makers ought to have known, that when Senator Lodge declared that to make a separate peace "would brand us everlasting with dishonor and bring ruin to us," he was talking about quitting the allies before the war was won, not about making peace after Germany should have been beaten. The Senator used that language five months before the armistice was signed. When "Jimmy" Cox inserted that little paragraph in his long address he descended to a level that even his most devoted admirers cannot defend.

The Governor goes on to say that he is opposed to making any separate peace with Germany, that the first duty of the new administration will be the ratification of the treaty, that he favors going into the league of nations with some kind of reservation or statement as to the American interpretation of the covenant—so far he marches with Senator Lodge—but he is cautious upon that last point, the idea obviously being to satisfy Mr. Wilson, without absolutely saying that there shall be no qualifications of any sort.

The speech reads well. It is a good campaign document. There is something in it for everybody, especially for the man with a grievance, the discontented who offer susceptible minds for a candidate's appeals. It is the outgiving of a smooth politician and as such it will be regarded when once it is carefully studied.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

Beets stuffed with chopped cabbage with cream dressing and served on lettuce make an attractive border for vegetable.

Soak close-leaved vegetables, such as cabbage and cauliflower, in salted water for twenty minutes before cooking.

Do not wash eggs until ready to use, as washing makes the shells porous, so that they absorb the odor of strong foods.

Pineapple tea is made of 2 quarts tea, juice 6 lemons, 3 quarts ginger ale, 1 can grated pineapple and 3 cups sugar. Mix and chill.

In making cold drinks, it is very convenient to have on hand a bottle of sugar syrup, as it does not have to be dissolved like dry sugar.

Mongoose vs. Snake. As snake-killers, hedgehogs and armadillos are not to be placed in the same category as mongooses. Most of the tales of encounters between mongooses and snakes have come from India; but recently Mr. Fitz-Simons, Director of the Port Elizabeth Museum, has added much to our knowledge of this subject in connection with South Africa, where mongooses have many different kinds around.

He has found that all members of the family, irrespective of size, fearlessly attack and kill poisonous snakes, the following account of the killing of a large Cape cobra by a mongoose may be quoted.

With head reared in the air, the snake intently watched every movement of its antagonist, giving it no chance to come to close quarters. Suddenly altering its feinting tactics, the mongoose began circling round the snake, compelling it to turn as on a pivot in the same direction to keep its eyes on the enemy. But eventually, overcome by giddiness and fatigue combined, the snake toppled over; the mongoose was upon it in a moment, crushing its head with one fierce snap.

Much of the same manoeuvres were practised by a water mongoose pitted against a puff-adder. Taking care to keep well out of striking distance, it sprang over the snake, ran three or four times round it, intently watching for a chance to close. Seeing at length an opportunity, it leapt in, gave one quick snap, and immediately sprang clear, to be out of reach should the bites have proved ineffective. The snake, however, was too damaged to put up a further fight, and the mongoose, after watching it for several minutes, ran in and bit its head off.—From an article by Mr. R. I. Pocock, F.R.S., in "Conquest."

When Folks Quit Coffee because of cost to health or purse, they naturally drink INSTANT POSTUM. There's a Reason.

No Risk of Starving. Only one-third of the world's potential food-producing area is under cultivation, and the crops raised on that third, thanks to agricultural science, increase yearly.

The United States has only some 400 million acres of its 925 million acres of arable land under cultivation, yet it raises, among other things, one-sixth of the world's corn supply. The farms of America raise less than half as much wheat to the acre as those of England, yet even with her present standard she could raise enough corn to meet the needs of Europe on the land that is now lying unused.

Russia produces only ten bushels to the acre of corn, but when science has access to her untold millions of acres, and brings their capacity up to the standard of our own farms, then she alone will be able to supply the world's cereal needs, with the exception of maize and rice.

Less than a third of the world's population gets what we should call three good meals a day, yet the working capabilities of the, from our point of view, underfed continents of Asia and Africa will compare very well with either Europe or America. The average meat consumption of the world is 39 pounds a head, yet both the Australian and the American eat nearly 100 pounds per head, and the Englishman is not far behind with about 100 pounds.

It is evident, then, that we can tighten our belts a hole or two yet without running any undue risk of starvation.

Comical Contests. At a recent sports meeting the City man's scramble for the morning train was reproduced, and caused great hilarity.

Wearing hats either too small or too large, and holding umbrellas, competitors had to take a "standing" breakfast of scalding hot tea, with bread and butter. Next came the packing of bags, dozing off overcoats, and opening of umbrellas, followed by a rush first to the paper-stall and then to the booking-office. Everything had to be brought intact to the tape, which represented the train.

Thinking People. Some people can't think; some don't think; some could, but won't. The minds of the latter class are quite good, and might indeed be quite excellent, but they are just like a marble set rolling on a slope. It may go straight, or it may go anywhere! The remedy for those with this kind of mind—easily diverted and hard to keep in its desired thinking channel—is to think aloud! And, if that is not a complete cure for mind-wandering, although in a majority of cases it would be, then all that is required is a close the eyes.

One of the most brilliant scholars at Cambridge, who had but to read a stiffy-written page to master it, at once and fix it in his mind and memory for all time, always adopted the shut-eyes-and-slope plan.

Closed eyes mean that things which distract, divert, or disturb, are shut out. The wisdom of that is obvious. With many it is a necessity. It is based on the same principle that if a class in a school is to do good work the scholars must not be so placed that they have a view of the street through the windows, which only distracts them.

The "thinking aloud" is crowded with merit. It helps composition, for one thing. It reveals the gaps, the hiatus, in one's thoughts.

We may think a man—a professor, perhaps—eccentric when he paces up and down, muttering. But he is only thinking aloud. He knows it is the best method. Try it! You will find that after a time you have increased your "think power" by 50 or 100 per cent. And, after practice, you will be able to "think aloud" without sound. Your lips will move, and that is all.

That meets the objection that thinking aloud might attract the attention of he curious.

Mr. G. Gilbert Scott left Halifax by the Rosalind and will arrive here tomorrow morning.

Oh, how sweet and clean is the hair—what a delicate fragrance lingers—how invigorated is the scalp, all the dullness and fatigue gone—and what a sense of comfort and restfulness throughout—for there is no soap so satisfying for a shampoo as the pure, hygienic...

KIRK'S JAP ROSE SOAP Golden Transparent

It is well known that most women dislike to shampoo their own hair. With ordinary soaps it is such a task to work up a lather, while it is even harder to rinse the sticky, greasy, unperfumed soap from the hair. And the free caustics in many cheap soaps and shampoo powders, bite into the scalp and injure the hair.

the water. Then just a very little rubbing, and almost instantly, thousands of pure, pearly bubbles cleanse hygienically every strand of the hair—every pore of the skin. The oil and dust and dirt are cut out and removed as by magic, without the slightest injury to the hair or scalp. After that, a dash or two of water, and the hair is left perfectly clean, and healthy and fluffy.

But a shampoo with JAP ROSE—the golden transparent soap—is easy and luxury itself. Just moisten the hair and scalp and slip the pure, golden transparent cake in.

For, even in cold, hard water JAP ROSE is quickly and absolutely soluble. There being no sediment, the bubbles are easily and completely washed away.

Made of pure oils of the finest grade and chemically pure glycerine, scientifically blended by experts, JAP ROSE soap is not only pleasant and easy to use, but is also soothing and beneficial to the hair and skin.

Try a shampoo with JAP ROSE soap today! Roses in the cheeks, brightness in the hair, fragrant cleanliness everywhere—that's JAP ROSE. You'll Like It!

Mozart, the "Devout Lover."

(John O'London's Weekly.)
 When the Emperor Joseph II. once asked Mozart why he did not marry a rich wife, the great composer proudly answered, "Sire, I trust that my genius will always enable me to support the woman I love." But, in spite of his genius, the most brilliant in Europe, his wedded life was pitifully clouded by poverty and struggle before he was laid to rest in his pauper's grave.
 Probably no musician has ever been more richly dowered than Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, who was cradled at Salzburg one January day in 1756. "Divine Mozart," Rossini dubbed him; "Mozart was a music made man," declared David; "Mozart is Mozart, as Allah is Allah," said Viardot. As a child of four this future "Master of Masters" composed music which his father vowed was "so difficult that no one would be able to play it"; and at six he was electrifying the capital of Europe with the marvels of his playing, petted by Princesses and almost idolized by the great ones of the earth.
 She Saw "Only a Little Man."
 In the Imperial Palace of Schonbrunn, we are told, this wonder-child once sprang into the Empress Maria Theresa's lap, threw his arms round her neck, and kissed her as a preliminary to telling her daughter Marie Antoinette, "You are nice; I will marry you." And when, a little later, Mme. de Pompadour haughtily refused the child's proffered kiss, he exclaimed, indignantly, "Who is this that will not kiss me? Why, the Empress kisses me!" Such was the boy whose marvellous skill on the clavier, organ, and violin, and his no less wonderful compositions, made Europe ring with his fame before he had reached his teens.
 Laughed at His Love-Making.
 Mozart had reached manhood before Love first came to him in the attractive guise of Aloysia von Weber, a beautiful girl of fifteen, with the promise of a glorious voice, to whom he completely lost his heart when first he set eyes on her at Mannheim. But his first passion was as ill-fated as it was ardent; for Aloysia only laughed at his love-making, while his father poured cold water on his ardour. "Oh with you to Paris, and that soon!" he wrote to his son from Salzburg. "This is not the time for such follies, unless you want to ruin your career." And, thus, doubly discouraged, Mozart carried his heavy heart to the French capital to seek oblivion of his sorrow in hard work and the adulation that always awaited him. "I knew nothing of the greatness of his genius," Aloysia explained in later and wiser years. "I saw in him only a little man."

 But if Aloysia was thus blind, her younger sister, Constance, had eyes to see the greatness in the "little man," and also the excellent qualities that were allied to it; and it was not long before Mozart found the oblivion he sought in her sweet companionship. She had none of her sister's brilliance; but she had a sweetness of nature, a sympathy and devotion, that appealed to him still more strongly.

 But between them and their full happiness stood a stern guardian who, before giving his consent, insisted on the young musician signing a undertaking to marry Constance within three years, or "in the event of such an impossibility as that he should change his mind" to pay her a yearly sum of 300 florins. But Love laughs at guardians as at locksmiths; and the moment the guardian's back was turned Constance tore the document into shreds, and fell on Mozart's neck exclaiming, "Dear Wolfgang, I need no written promise from you. I believe your word."
 An Unwelcome Guest.
 Thus, in spite of the guardian and of the opposition of Mozart's father, Wolfgang and Constance stood together at the altar one August day in 1782. And when the ceremony was over, Mozart says, "my wife and I, too, began to weep; upon which everyone, even the priest, was moved, and all who witnessed our emotion wept."
 To Mozart and his bride they were doubtless tears of joy, and of a great relief that they had reached their haven at last. But both were fated to shed tears later in which there was little joy; for they quickly found an uninvited and unwelcome guest in their home—and its name was Poverty. In spite of Mozart's fame and his transcendent genius, he was fated always to receive much adulation, but little gold. So poor, in fact, were they, within a few months of their wedding-day that, it is said, a friend who called on them one cold winter day found them waiting to keep themselves warm, in the absence of fuel for the smallest fire.
 The Reward of Genius.
 We read that one day, as he was composing, while she slept by his side, a noisy messenger suddenly entered. Fearful lest she should be disturbed, he rose so hurriedly that a penknife he had in his hand fell and buried itself in his foot. Although in great pain he stole quietly from the room to have the wound attended to; and, although he was lame for many days, his wife never heard of the accident. When, too, he left her asleep in the morning, he would leave some such tender note as this to greet her on waking: "I wish you good morning, dear little wife. I hope you have slept well and that nothing has disturbed your rest. Be very careful while I am away, and keep all domestic troubles till I return, which will be soon."
 And this devotion never wavered. On the fourth day of December, 1791, as he lay dying from fever, he gasped out, "Must I go, just as I am able to live in peace? Must I leave my wife and my poor children just when I should have been able to provide better for them?"

Infant Feeding Carnation Milk is admirably suited for this purpose. Our booklet gives complete directions by a noted Baby Specialist. Consult your family Physician.

Contrast Carnation methods of delivering milk with any others you know.

Carnation Milk is the only milk supply your home needs.

It is really more, for it serves as both cream and milk.

Fresh from the can, it has a creamy consistency (due to the evaporation process). It is used as cream for coffee and tea, for cereals, for fruit, etc.

By adding an equal part of water to Carnation Milk you restore its natural consistency. You get "whole" milk—not separated or skimmed milk—but rich, wholesome milk, like they use on the farm.

Not a particle of preservative, sugar or other substance is added to Carnation Milk.

It is simply milk, for table use, for children to drink, for cooking, for Baby's bottle.

Phone your grocer for a supply. He is the Carnation Milkman.

THE FRIENDS WHO BACK YOU UP.
 It's the friends who are behind you you depend on all the while. Not the friends you'll meet to-morrow or the friends of pomp and style; When you're up against a battle for a goal or silver cup, It's the old friends who are with you, for they always back you up.

You don't have to turn to see them, you just know that they are there. They follow where you're going and they're with you everywhere; You can center your attention on the work you have to do, For you know should danger threaten that your friends are back of you.

Afraid? Go forward bravely, you don't have to fight alone, There are good friends glad to follow and they'll make their presence known; Though the throng grows thick about you and your faith is sorely tried, Friends are coming up behind you and they'll battle at your side.

The new friend may desert you but the old friends never do, They'll share in every danger and they'll gladly see you through; You can face the world undaunted, you can fight when foes attack, And bank on the assurance that your friends are at your back.

Household Notes.
 Avoid putting wet leaves of lettuce in a salad, as the dressing will not cling to them.
 When cookies or cakes are sweetened with honey they are less likely to dry out.
 Home-bottled fruit syrups are excellent to use in refreshing hot-weather beverages.
 Chilled coffee is excellent sweetened with honey or maple syrup and served with cream.
 When canning apples, the sweeter the syrup the quicker the apples become transparent.
 A pinch of baking powder to every pint of beer is the rule when using sour milk and soda.
 A good filling for brown bread sandwiches is eggs and dates chopped and mixed with cream dressing.
 Use a small white-tin to clean

THE CHANGEFUL SEA.
 One day the sea's a brilliant blue, and gayly it goes skimming; the next it has a sombre row, it's motion slow, for-bidding. One day I camp upon the shore and watch it as it surges, and there's such pathos in its roar that I feel like crooning dirges. Next day its message is so glad, it asks no mortal's pity, and I produce a pen and pad, and spring a buoyant ditty. One day the waters run like wine, in froth and foam they're boiling; the next they have a dismal whine, as though they needed oiling. One day they're green, and everywhere the note of mirth's prevailing; the next they're darker than despair, and every wave is waiting. Old Neptune has a wondrous eye, that touches all emotions, and on it, like a house afire, he plays, among his oceans. Now sweeter than the lullabies of mothers, in the gloaming; and now the notes like thunder rise, along the octaves roaring. Old Neptune, in his moods, his mighty harp is thrashing; he has a song for all our moods, a note for every passion.

In making the temperance cocktail, everything should be thoroughly chilled and combined in advance so that the flavors will be thoroughly blended.

THAT CHANGE IN WOMAN'S LIFE

Mrs. Godden Tells How It May be Passed in Safety and Comfort.

Froment, O.—"I was passing through the critical period of life, being forty-six years of age and had all the symptoms incident to that change—heat flashes, nervousness, and was in a general run down condition, so it was hard for me to do my work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me as the best remedy for my troubles, which I feel better and stronger in every way since taking it, and the annoying symptoms have disappeared."—Mrs. M. Godden, 225 Nelson St., Fremont, Ohio.

Most Remarkable Conquest in All History.

THE WONDERFUL STORY OF THE MONGOLIAN EMPIRE.

Most people know that the Chinese empire was at one time ruled by a different race—the Mongols—but it is not until you read the story of the Mongol Empire under the great Khan Genghis Khan that you realize the vastness of the empire which he created. He was born in the year 1162 in the province of Mongolia, and at an early age he was engaged in the wars of his tribe. He was a great warrior and a great strategist, and he was the first to unite the various tribes of Mongolia into a single empire. He was the first to conquer the vast continent of Asia, and he was the first to reach the shores of the Pacific Ocean. His empire was the largest that the world has ever known, and it was the most powerful that the world has ever known. He was a great conqueror, a great warrior, and a great strategist. He was the first to unite the various tribes of Mongolia into a single empire. He was the first to conquer the vast continent of Asia, and he was the first to reach the shores of the Pacific Ocean. His empire was the largest that the world has ever known, and it was the most powerful that the world has ever known.

What a Horde of Horsemen did.

The Mongols were, in the twelfth century, a tribe subject to those Kin who had conquered North-east China. They were a horde of nomadic horsemen living in tents, and subsisting mainly upon mare's milk products and meat. Their occupations were pasturing and hunting, varied by war. They drifted northward as the snows melted for summer pasture, and southward to winter pasture, after the custom of the steppes. Their military education began with a successful insurrection against the Kin. The empire of Kin had the resources of half China behind it, and in the struggle the Mongols learnt very much of the military science of the Chinese. By the end of the twelfth century they were already a fighting tribe of exceptional quality. Mr. Wells goes on to describe how the Mongols, under Genghis Khan, swept over the Pamirs in 1218, probably equipped with guns and gun-powder. A Great Statesman.

They swept westward to the Caspian and southward as far as Lahore. To the north of the Caspian a Mongol army encountered a Russian force from Kiev. There was a series of battles, in which the Russian armies were finally defeated, and the Grand Duke of Kiev taken prisoner. So it was the Mongols appeared on the northern shores of the Black Sea. A panic swept Constantinople, which set itself to reconstruct its fortifications. Meanwhile other armies were engaged in the conquest of the empire of the Hsia in China. This was annexed, and only the southern part of the Kin empire remained unsubdued. In 1227 Genghis Khan died in the midst of a career of triumph. His empire reached already from the Pacific to the Dnieper. And it was an empire still vigorously expanding.

Like all the empires founded by nomads, it was, to be begun with, purely a military and administrative empire, a framework rather than a rule. It centred on the personality of the monarch, and its relations with the masses of the populations over which it ruled was simply one of taxation for the maintenance of the horde. But Genghis Khan had called to his aid a very able and experienced administrator of the Kin empire, who was learned in all the traditions and science of the Chinese. This statesman, Yelü Chutsai, was able to carry on the affairs of the Mongols long after the death of Genghis Khan, and there can be little doubt that he is one of the great political heroes of history. He tempered the barbaric ferocity of his masters, and saved innumerable cities and works of art from destruction. He collected archives and inscriptions, and when he was accused of corruption, his sole wealth was found to consist of documents and a few musical instruments. To him perhaps quite as much as to Genghis is the efficiency of the Mongol military machine to be ascribed. Under Genghis, we may note further, we find the completest religious toleration established across the entire breadth of Asia.

An Amazing March.
At the death of Genghis, the capital of the new empire was still in the great barbaric town of Karakorum in Mongolia. There an assembly of Mongol leaders elected Ögödei Khan, the son of Genghis, as his successor. The war against the vestiges of the Kin empire was prosecuted until Kin was altogether subdued (1234). The Chinese empire to the south under the Sung dynasty helped the Mongols in this task, so destroying their own bulwark against the universal conquerors. The Mongol hosts then swept right across Asia to Russia (1235), an amazing march. Kiev was destroyed in 1240, and nearly all Russia became tributary to the Mongols. Poland was ravaged, and a mixed army of Poles and Germans was annihilated at the battle of Liegnitz in Lower Silesia in 1241. The Emperor Frederick II. does not seem to have made any great efforts to stay the advancing tide.

Strategy and a Spy-System.
"It is only recently," says Bury, in his notes to Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," "that European history has begun to understand that the successes of the Mongol army which overran Poland and occupied Hungary in the spring of A. D. 1241 were not due to a mere overwhelming superiority of numbers. . . . It was wonderful how punctiliously and effectually the arrangements of the commander from the Lower Vistula to Transylvania. Such a campaign was quite beyond the power of any European army of the time, and it was beyond the vision of any European commander. There was no general in Europe, from Frederick II. downward, who was not a tyro in strategy compared to Subutai. It should also be noticed that the Mongols embarked upon the enterprise with full knowledge of the political situation of Hungary and the condition of Poland—they had taken care to inform themselves by a well-organized system of spies; on the other hand, the Hungarians and Christian powers, like child-like barbarians, knew hardly anything

Unusual Investments!

The recent severe decline in the securities market furnishes another golden opportunity to wideawake investors, because at present prices some of America's most seasoned investments show an income yield of 10 per cent and over.

Many stocks are on the bargain counter regardless of their great asset value and future earnings outlook, but this can only be transitory as the intrinsic worth of these stocks must be reflected in higher prices soon.

We are fully equipped to take care of any orders you wish to place on any of the leading stock exchanges and can assure you prompt and attentive handling of same.
