TEMPERANCE.

A NEW PLAN OF CAMPAIGN.

The Publication Bureau-No Salaried omelals-Influence of the Press-A Grand Work.

Anew department of temperance work was organized at the Indianapolis Convention. It is of an exceedingly important nature, and has in it the promise of great deal of good for the advancement of the work of temperance reform. It is the establishment of the Temperance Publication Bureau. Rev. A. P. Doyle, of the Paulist Fathers, has been appointof, by the Executive Council of the National Union, the Manager of this Bureau. The office is located at 415 West Fiftyminth Street, New York. The Bureau is primarily the work of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America. Its manager is responsible to the Executive Council. The object of the Bureau is the dissemination of Catholic temperance literature. Every one feels that there is an urgent need of an abundant literature in the Temperance movement. There has never been a movement towards re-form that has succeeded in accomplish-ing its end, which has not made use of the printed page in some way or

Nowadays, particularly with our universal reading public, perchance the most potent force to arrest attention, to produce conviction and induce to action, is the printed page. So much is this the case that most people take and form their opinions from what they read rather than from what they hear. It is full time that the energies that are in the Temperance movement should be directed into this channel.

The possibilities of united good that there are in the new plan of campaign are unmeasured. The National Union numbers its professed adherents at fifty-two thousand. These men have written themselves down as missionaries in the sacred cause, and their hands are cager and willing to take the literature as it is the land. It is within the possibilities of ature into almost every hamlet and meetings, etc.

It is expected that the various societies et the National Union which number nearly eight hundred will subscribe libgrally from their treasuries in order to procure quantities of these tracts to disribute in their localities. There is no way in which a society can invest its nearly to better advantage, no means that will yield unto it a greater income in increase of membership, in moulding rablic opinion in its favor, than by distributing temperance literature. Every dollar spent this way, like the seed put in the fertile soil, will yield a hundred

In this Publication Bureau, there are no salaried officials. It is our glory that we are working for the love of God, and the advancement of the holy cause of Total Abstinence to which we have consecuted our energies. When we think of the unlimited possibilities of good there are in this work, it makes one's heart thrill with joy. It sends the blood a-tingling through our veins at the prospect of new, easy and great conquests over the demon of drink.

With an abundant supply of good temperance literature our sacred cause will bound forward with unusual vigor, and from every side new followers will come jubilee of Monsignor Bernard O'Reilly, to enroll themselves under the white canner of Total Abstinence.

i'very society ought therefore to anpropriate every year from its treasury onic funds in order to procure and distribute temperance literature. It is the members of the Society who are on the battle-field in the dust of the gymen, and to greater numbers of people, conflit. They have a clear conception of the monstrous evil they are lighting. It is a part of their duty, therefore, to day. The monsignor was priested the use every conscientions means at their day after Cardinal Tachereau's ordinacommand, to suppress it. Demonstrais passing. The real solid work is of a per-onal nature. The means which are bration of the other week, available for this work are the very same. The cholera outbreak in as those employed in every legitimate

The influence of the printed page is not confined to the hundred or two hundren members of the society, but reaches out into the desert places where the will be discountenanced as long as there principles of Total Abstinence are derided. It educates the public sentiment; it creates public opinion; it popularizes the principles of Temperance. A society bilee is to be deplored, the wisdom of working in a parish without its literature, is a band of soldiers without ammunition. I under existing circumstances will not be

A locomotive without its tender carrying the coal which is necessary for making steam, will not run far; so a society without its missionary work in the dissemination of literature will never make much progress.

Public-spirited men, too, who wish to do something to uplift humanity, to save the homes of the people from the ra-vages of the saloon, will also assist in this great work.

They will readily give of their means to procure this literature and put it where it will do the most good. Money spent in helping on the cause of Temperance brings its increased return in better gov-ernment, in reduced taxes, for without a doubt a large item in the expenditure for conducting city and town governmental affairs is the arresting and trying and housing and providing for the products of drunkard factories, that line the Priests who wish to cultivate the Total Abstinence sentiment in their various congregations will find an easy and practical way of doing so by distributing temperance literature at frequent intervals or at special seasons when the people come together at public gatherings.

So this great work thus started has a future of immense usefulness before it in cultivating the virtue of temperance, in strengthening the practice of total abstinence, and is suppressing as far as may be the terrible vice of drankeness with all its consequent evils.

The announcement that the next Papal consistory will be held toward the end of November has already set the gossips to predicting what prelates will blag, then receive red hats. According to Lucek these individuals, whose predictions are not very reliable, however, the Holy Father intends creating five or six Italian cardinals, three or four French ones, and will bestow cardinalital honors on two prelates of other nationalities. There are vacancies enough in the Sacred College to permit all these predicted cardinalital creations, but it is by no means certain that the intentions of the Sovereign Pontiff are correctly stated in the above announcement, and not until the consistory is held will it be accurately known for whom red hats are in store.

The celebration, at St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York, this week, of the golden whom the Pope recently created a pro-thonotary apostolic, drewtogether a notablegathering of ecclesiastics eager to honor the distinguished prelate and writer. The cholera outbreak in Europe is apt to interfere with the proposed celebration of the Papal jubilee, the beginning of the commemoration of which was to take place next month; and it is stated, furthermore, that all pilgrimages to Rome is any danger of epidemic to be approhended. If the cholera does not interfere with the celebration of this jubilee, Rome will witness many memorable ceremonies the coming year in connection with the completion of His Holiness' fifty years in the nurole.

Cardinal Gibbons issued his Columbian pastoral the other day, and the Baltimore prelate urgently and eloquently requests his priests and people to interest themselves in the celebration of October 12. He lays stress, as is becoming, on the fact that Columbus was himself a Catolic and started from a Franciscan covent on his voyage of discovery, and he says that for that and other reasons the Cathohes of this country should take pride in honoring his memory in this quadro centennial year; and they will unquestionably do this all over the country, now that the entire American hierarbhy has urged them, or will urge them to do so. A resolution was passed expressing the sorrow of the board at the death of the late Vicar-General Marcchal. The School Management committee recommended the appointment of Professor J. M. IRELAND'S CAUSE.

OUTLOOK FOR HOME RULE.

Gludstone and Morley Unalterably Pledged to Home Rule for Ireland.

Speaking in Dublin the other day, Mr Cition declared that the Irish leaders were in possession of understandings and agreements which, in their judgment if carried out, and he believed they would be honorably carried out, would satisfy the people of Ireland." It is understood that some of these agreements are in writing, and will be made public, should occasion require such use to be made of them. As a matter of fact, a good many Irish members believe that the only genuine Home Rulers in the new Cabimet are Mr. Gladstone, Earl Spencer, and Mr. John Morley; and they hold that it is their bounden duty, bearing in mind the lessons taught by history, to be constantly on guard against treachery. Such an attitude may appear ungracious at this juncture, but is eminently wise.

Speaking at a public meeting in Newcastle on Wednesday evening, Mr. Fow-ler, a very influential member of the libraries in different parts of Rome. The Sovereign Pontiff has already received a power at Westminster which they could not despise. It would make itself felt. He did not like it any more than the meeting did. He did not like the power of Irish members, nor did he like to give up the time of Parliament to Irish ques-

If that is the spirit in which one member of the Cabinet avowedly regards home rule it is pretty certain that there are many other unwilling horses inside and outside the Ministry who will have to be spurred to their work. Many things tend to show, in fact, that the Irish leaders will have to be suspicious and vigilant to the very end if the pledges publicly made by public men are of any value.

Mr. Gladstone's Government in the coming session of Parliament will make a serious attempt to deal with the difficult question of how to restore their holdings to Irish tenants evicted during the agrarian war of the last few years. Mr. Shaw Lefevre, a member of the Cabinet, speaking at Galway, in Decem-ber, 1889, said the first work of the new Parliament would be to remedy the state of things that had resulted from disputes on these several estates in the country. He would not be a member of any Government, he was going to say he would not remain in Parliament, if some help were not ex-

Drogheda that he held, and firmly believed, that the Massereene tenants were perfectly justified in refusing to accept any terms until the evicted tenants were reinstated; and when Home Rule was granted an equitable measure would be passed to put these tenants again in possession of their farms, as well as all other evicted tenants in Ireland.

Mr. Shaw Lefevre was almost the last man appointed to a Cabinet position, although his claims were undeniable and generally recognized; and in the light of his public utterances it may be presumed that the delay was due to his refusal to accept office without some understanding with Mr. Gladstone in regard to the ev icted tenants.

The Tories are again attempting to force Gladstone's hand by published bogus details respecting his Home Rule Bill, but they do not appear to have imposed upon anybody, and they have signally failed to draw out the Grand Old Man, who has spent the week, as far as outsiders can see, in saying kind plati-tudes to Liberal excursionists, visiting bazaars, and making speeches about the cultivation of flowers, for all the world as though he were a simple country squire, instead of a states man with the cares of an empire upon his mind. The Tories have no heart for anything to day.

Ever since the general election, when 'Old Charlie' won a Liberal seat at Newcastle, and headed John Morley, the second man elected, by two thousand votes, the Tories have been gleefully declaring their intention of throwing Morley out, on his seeking re-election on acceptance of the office of Chief Secretary for Ireland. The Liberals themselves did not like the prospect of having to overcome a hostile majority of three thousand, but they went to work manfully, and have just been rewarded by a most signal triumph, the great Tory ma jority having been turned into a Liberal majority of over seventeen hundred.

Morley refused all requests to modify his views on the eight hours questions, although the Tory candidate had truckled to the workingmen irreconcilables on being fought upon the question of contidence in the Government's Irish policy. Now in their sore distress and wild rage they are howling threats of petitioning against Morley's return on the absurd ground that it was secured by intimida-tion, and are vainly endeavoring to wriggle out of statements which they themselves ostentatiously placed clearly upon record. Mr. Morley has gone to the highlands of Scotland for a short rest from the labors of one of the most ar-duous political fights of recent years. About the middle of next week he will proceed on a tour of inspection in Ireland, and among other things he will inquire closely into the position and prospects of the evicted tenants .- Special to

THE MANITOBA SCHOOLS.

A Reply to Le Canadien. The Witness of Monday gives the following despatches; the first from Ottawa, the second from Winnipeg.

Referring to the Manitoba school intrigue published in the Canadian, this provinces of the second which morning's Citizen, in an editorial, which is supposed to be Sir John Thompson's reply, says:—"The story thus told so circumstantially by the Canadien is a pure invention, as stupid as it is malignant. But, with characteristic boldness, that paper proceeds to denounce the mythical intrigue' as a base attempt to induce the Archbishop to abandon an important principle to serve the ends of selfish poliicians. The object of this pretended wrath is, of course, obvious.

The aged Bishop of St. Boniface, suffering from cruel maladies, is being given to understand that the eyes of the people of Quebec are centred upon him, and that he is the champion whom the friends of the separate schools of Manitoba look to in their hour of need. In short, it is to good the Archbishop into an aggressive campaign that the Grit press are circulating lying reports and making their own lying reports the ground of a simulated indignation."

An Apostolio Delegate.

We give the following New York des patch for what it is worth. There is little reliance to be placed in these rumors from Rome. But sometimes they do hit the nail on the head.

The Catholic News learns by cable from its correspondent at Rome that the Pope has appointed Archbishop Satolli apostolic delegate to the United States. He will leave for this country soon, accompanied by Mgr. O'Connell, rector of the American college at Rome, as secretary. They will visit all the dioceses in the country.

led to the workingmen irreconcilables on that subject in a disgraceful manner. He preferred to rest his claims to the people's support upon his last services in the cause of labor, and he deliberately endervored to raise the contest to a higher plane by making Home Rule the chief point at issue. In doing this he quite unconsciously dangled a bait to the greatest gusto. They were absolutely confident of success, and were only too glad to proclaim that the election was subjected. Irish National League Manifecto.

ELOQUENT WORDS.

SIR CHARLES RUSSELL ON HOME;

The London Parliament's Powers to Dominate and Legislate Necessary.

That leading Gladstonian Minister, the coming Chief Justice of England, Sir Charles Russell, in a speech on Aug. 17, t London said—

He believed it to be true that Mr.

Hadstone has formed a Government that was worthy of the confidence of the country (hear, hear), and they had right-Iv been told that the first duty of the Government was to endeavor to deal upon a sound basis with the Irish question. The Liberal party would indeed be untrue to its professions, Mr. Gladstone would indeed be faithless to his pledged word and undertaking, if they and he did not endeavor to deal with the Irish question as one of the first objects of his administration. What was this question after all? It was the assertion in this year of grace of the Irish people of that natural right in their own land to deal with affairs which were their own, by a legislative body and an executive of their own (hear, hear). It meant the creation of a legisative body and an executive responsible to the body which should have the power to deal with purely Irish affairs, leaving untouched the supremacy of Parliament and all those external signs and symbols, and realities of power which go to constitute Imperial supremacy (cheers). Mr. Chamberlain (laughter) the other night cited a passage from a speech of his in cited a passage from a speech of his in which he stated what were the safeguards not only of Imperial supremacy, but against an injury or injustice under a scheme of Home Rule. He (Sir Charles) repeated what he said in that speech, that there was the veto of the Crown to be exercised by the Lord Lieutenant and representative of the Queen, that there was the inherent right in the Imperial Parliament that had created the legislative body to deal with Irish affairs, to repeal the enactment or to modify it, and lastly there was the inherent right in the Imperial Parliament, if circumstances warranted it, to legislate directly in reation to Ireland itself.

THE RIGHTS OF SELF-GOVERNMENT of the Irish people to be real, thorough, and effective, but when the opponents of the measure distorted and misreprensted its character, when they spoke of its dis-integrating the empire and ending the supremacy of the Imperial Parliament, then they were justified in referring to the three checks which he had named as showing the reserve power that resided in the Imperial authority, providing unhappily the necessity arose, for resorting to that reserve power (cheers). They were told before the elections that Mr. Balfour had settled the Irish question, and that when the elections came a grateful and eman-cipated people in Ireland would show their graciousness in a constitutional way at the polls. What had been the result? Why, that out of Ulster and excluding the universities the Unionists had not returned a single member for one of the three provinces of Munster, Leinster and Connaught, and where they had put forward a representative of their own party they had polled less than in 1885 and 1886. The Irish question therefore stood as it stood before Mr. Balfour was Irish Secretary.

He was but one to be added to the long list of failures, so far as Ireland was concerned (hear, hear). Surely, if each party in the State had sent its ablest men to try to do the work of Government in Ireland they had failed, and it was time that all parties in the State should recognise that it was in the highest interest of the State that the question should be settled upon a just basis (cheers).

They were told that if the Government overcame the opposition of the Tories and the dissentient Liberals, there was another very ugly fence to leap over be-fore they could accomplish the legisla-tive goal. He need not tell them what the ugly ditch was (laughter). It was the House of Lords. He was not going to talk much about the House of Lords. He did not deny that there were in the House of Lords many men who in any other place might lead useful lives (laughter).

They need not discuss the question of a second Chamber. The experience of the world had pointed to the advisability of a second Chamber, but they were not going in for

A REFORMATION OF THE HOUSE OF LORDS, which could only have the effect of strengthening that House so long as the hereditary principle continued in force (cheers). They were told must the defeated Government and their allies were reckoning on the co-operation of the House of Lords. They would see. All he could say was that the Liberals would go on sending up their Home Rule Bill and utilizing the time at their disposal in pushing forward the questions of registration, payment of members, and an improvement in rural county govern-ment. They wanted Home Rule in the counties, in the parishes, and in London. If the House of Lords passed the Home Rule Bill well and good, but if it rejected it or mangled and maimed it it would not be well and good for the Lords (hear, hear).

Study Your Child-

Your child is a book more pazzling and interesting than any novel you ever read. Study it faithful page by page when a steam engine, maybe page as at turns the blaves of development. If a child imitates quickly and is very lively, it is most likely inclined to be Parall passionate. It is your duty in such a case to be gentle and firm, and when it may is volent to calm it by drawing its attention from the cause of excitement. Scolding, frowning or strong opposition will only increase its violence; for it will immediately imitate all these actions. Neither must you laugh or seem amused by its childish rage; but on the contrary, look grave and sorrowful. If the child loves you (and it will love you if you have treated it rightly), the ex-pression of your countenance will have a great effect upon it. The faults of passionate children are often confirmed and strengthened by the anger of their parents. I have heard it recommended by the recommended by the strengthened by the anger of their parents. I have heard it recommended by the strengthene in the dark for it, knocking the parents. parents. I have heard it recommended to allow a child to scream till it is tited and that thus it will cure itself; but I am sure such a plan only confirms the cvil.

If, on the contrary, the character of a child is silent, and it is slow in noticing or imitating, it will very likely whine and fret. With such a disposition, keep and fret. A CHAT WITH A PROFESSOR.

The Anti-National Spirit Critised-Instructive information Regarding Dubbai's Mausoleum of Literate re-The National School Statem.

Despite memographs and specials I diless a workhoss for a Patrick Henry. There is a cilm and soothing influence in arking at the dusky beauties. How attractive they look gayly attired in yelen and lying under that massive head noble brow and flexible month of one whose voice could menace a nation. Should my patriotism cool I have only helift the lid of the valued box that I had received from a friend, carried over three thousand nules of ocean and safely smaggled into Erm by the help of a custom house officer and a shining half crown indiciously placed in the palm of his hand. Then what a vision, Stars and Stripes twine around the hero's picture green garlands enease it, and the great American eagle, with its ontstretcized wings and ugly talons, says E. Parribus Unum. It was while lighting the end of one of those dusky beauties and handing another to my triend, that a fail elegantly dressed young man entered the coffee-room. My friend gave signs of recognition and soon there was a grosping of hands and "glad to meet

A book of choice extracts, easy to make, showing your college's sympathy with everything Irish, would, to use our cabman's vernacular, 'make mighty interestin' readin'. Under the chapter, intellectual nourishment supplied to the Irish nation by professors of Trinity, might be recorded thus:—The most famous lyric produded by the young Irelanders was written by a Prof. Ingraham, of Trinity; but so great was the crime that he was ostracized, and so cowardly was the patriot-writer that he denied the very Calley and the rotten system, and bound to support it, or seek for bread and butter waters they finally settled down to a discussion of the Irish School system. I merely sat among them, a "chief takin" notes." What I then rearried, and dwint Lafterwards with system with abound to dream of Micky, Betsy and the Lafterwards with system with abound to dream of Micky, Betsy and the coming moreow. I afterwards with seed, will better be told in my own way. Of all the trave-ties on education, I deem the system first proposed by Whately as a sure means to preselytize with, the most at surd. Its pretensions are vast, its means puny. It proposes to give a good common education to the youth of Ireland; but, instead of doing so, it teachs a mass of trivialities that are of no earthly use. After five or six, or even eight, years spent in one of these mills, the best lumber comes out destroyed. It you compare them to a grist-mill, one might say that they turn out chaif with little particles of meal now and then adhering to it, rather than the genuine flour free from the chaff. This system has had few defenders, from the fact that it were easy to drive a coach-and-four through any defence made.

As an illustration of this system, let us take a school visited by the writer in a little village of Donegal. The teacher was of the "first of first," to use the technical term, that is, in the first grade of teachers, he held a first place. Irish school-masters are divided into three grades: 1st, 2nd and 3rd. His school was called "flourishing" and he was considered a most excellent specimen of the pedagogue type. On a brick house, much resembling an ordinary dwelling-house, glared the sign "National Schools." The milding was divided,-the upper part for boys, the under part for girls. Stone steps led to the upper part. In company with a well known clergyman and writer on education, I entered this strange-looking building. It was a room, 20 by 20. The books of registration told that the average attendance was sixty-nine. On that day there were seventy-three pupils. sardine-like, packed in the room, and the air far from wholesome. Bubbling full of information on all kinds of isms save the barbarism of the system he represented, it was as easy to extract an oyster from its shell with the fingers as to extract information from him. After many questions and cross ques-tions, I was at length able to understand the joutine:

School opens at 9.50 and closes at 3. The first lesson is writing in a copy-book from headlines. In this art the child is left severely alone; he may make potpiece of chalk, the others on their slates. "Time's up," says the pedagogue, "all done, turn their slates to their breasts; all that says the board's right hold up their nands." Woe to the luckless dunce; he is made to feel that the coercion act is plies, putting a piece of hair and a spittle on the palm of his hand, to make, as he will tell you, the "slap go asier." Then, with a two-foot flat substantial rule the urchin receives a few blows. It is little wouldy that he looks on the Valentia is part of the college estate.—
and again: "Speaking of the condition of things generally, a more squalid tenanty than that of this rich corporation it is hardly possible to conceive. As a rule their dwellings are miserable: their chaines all too scant for comfort, sometimes even for dwency."

Then, with a two-foot flat substantial rule the urchin receives a few blows. It is little wonder that he looks on the master with a disgnst that grows with years. If it is geography, a class of boys in the form of a half-circle, are formed years. If it is geography, a class of boys in the form of a half-circle, are formed benches sits the master asking such questions as "Where are the straits of Babel-mandeb," or "point me out Timscenario of the condition of the estate, uses this emphatic language:—

It would be impossible to describe the filth or misery of the dwellings I could not find out, that the agent had ever taken any trouble about them. I was told prographors that about them. I was told everywhere that he had never been inside the houses."

The Question of the Day.

Often Asked.—Where can I find a home? Where can I make a living? Where can I, with ordinary diligence, prudence and economy, provide my family with the necessaries of life, and feel assured that at the end of it I can leave to my children a decent inheritance? To what place can I go and find good land on terms so reasonable that I may get a portion of it without burdening myself with debt, which I can never hope to pay off? Where can I find such a place on these terms and safe from crop failures, and allow me to devote myself to any special branch of agriculture for which I may feel myself fitted.

Answered in a few words. Get a home in the great Flour State of Minnesota. It never yet had a crop failure—where land values are yet had a crop failure—where land values are the international Land Company, Guaranty Loan Building, Minneapolis, Minn., for all information. There is a twilight feeling about it; half sadness, half hopefulness,-for it shows us the shadow of a deep-felt sorrow illumined by the rays of a pure and divine Faith. We read it with sentiments of corresponding mournfulness and with feelings of buoyant hope. We know how the good faithful clergy, must be touched to grief; yet we know how sublimely they can rise, reposing their trust in the 'Comforter of the afflicted" and above all in the Saviour Himself, high over the clouds that obscure, into the atmosphere of the Church's innate perfection. While we refer to this touching article we do of a justly indignant kind, consequently we beg of our readers to pay particular attention to our editorials on the Canada-Revue and the Priest and Journalist. In them we have that to say which

THE "CANADA-REVUE,"

Last week we spoke somewhat strongly of the anti-clericalism that is daily gaining a feothold in Canada, and of the press that is striving to propagate it. Today we intend to speak of that soil-Jisa Catholic publication that is known gs the Counda-Recue. We have no fault | tax. to find with the Daily Witness for reproducing in part some of the articles that have appeared of late upon the pages of that publication. It is the business of listified in seizing upon any such weapolicy especially when placed in its hands wien we ask them to come out in their It is useless to thus parade in sheep's Cotting take off the woodly hide, et tes loups? We have not space to review the series of hypocritical absorbations that have found light on the pages of the Counta-Revue and that have found circulation in the Commission the anti-Catholic press. We will be content with a few of their most pointed temarks, and these shall serve ks an index to the Catholicity (?) of that matisciplical off-shoot of "the spirit of the Revolution."

The article we read: "The diocese C. Montreal is in the hands of a venerable in late, but that he has not got the necessary energy to hold a tight rein on the early under his orders, events have past proven." So it is thus the Conada-Reas compliments the Archbishop of Mentreal. That organ may well thank its stars that the head of the hierarchy is higher Christian and priestly sentiments, that he is gifted with caution as well as energy, and that he knows when exactly to make use of the one or the other. Were it otherwise the episcopal hand would long since have been stretched that priest-hating publication.

The Archbishop of Montreal needs no detence at our hands when assailed by the bitter enemies of the sacerdotal order, ever, when they carry the mask of Catho-Bury. Beneath the folds of the mantle green easy to distinguish the symbol of · · r purpose. But if His Grace cannot, and would not if he could, step down the arena to shield himself from the and exceed the moral cowards who, knowand the position, take advantage of it to weak him, we need not hesitate to pick spottage grount set and to fling it back deantly in the teeth of these anti-clericals. Sense His Grace requires a certificate of specity and qualification, for the highstor occupies in the hierarchy of the area, he will not seek it from the v-Recor. And when the Canadais able to govern itself and to reits passions, to practise straighta ardress and to give evidence of a) in curbing its vicious and half on auticlericalism, it will be time s begin to lecture a man who is as: above it, as is the eagle hovering in -ay beyond the reach of the serpent crawls along the carth. When the one of the Country Revue shall have a conservationee of his fitness for his posito acces the Archbishop has, and an adethe energy with talents in accordance, 2 will be time for him to criticise. Meanwhile the Archdiocese will be governed without the powerful aid of the Canada Revier, and it is to be hoped it will not perish.

disten to that paragon of excellence, the Canada-Revue, "We are told that the Church is the only judge of its members and that we should not meddle in this. This is a bad excuse. The affairs of the Church are truly ours, since we give it everything, and what we do not goe it, the Church takes." Who are " we'r Who are you that the affairs of the Church are yours? You give it everything? Yes, you give it abuse, slander, calumny; you strive to give it a had name; you attempt to give it a hard road to travel; you give it a slap on the face every time you raise your hand. Is is you that gives everything to the law-Yers? Do you support all the doctors? If so, does it give you right to mix and to modelle in their affairs, to regulate the council of the bar or the college of physicians? Individually, pray, what did on ever give the Church? Does the Canada-Revue represent the whole Catholic population? If not, it only speaks for a section, or for itself. As well interhere in the affairs of the Grand Trunk or C. P. R. It is the public that give them all they have. Perhaps it is the Canada-The arthur gives it to them. Hypocrisy! always hypocrisy! But the Archbishop and the clergy that surround him are not targets enough for the poisoned shafts of the Canada-Recor: it must prove its chivalry by attacking the Sisters of Providence. Cowardly when it spits its venom at a man whose position forbids that he should defend himself; mean and unmanly when it strikes with its lash the cureur general of his congregation, has self-sacrificing and holy women whose left for Rome, where he is to reside.

pure lives are given up to God, and consequently devoted to charity and to humanity. Thus speaks that organ:

"And the question of the Sisters of Providence who have established a banquet-catering system and who tender, like regular cookshop keepers, for banquets given outside of Montreal, and that without paying any patent, license or

This is almost too much, but when we know the source whence it comes we are reconciled. One or two other extracts and our readers can judge for themthe William to do so, and it is perfectly selves where the Canada-Revue learned its lessons.

"They command everywhere; they by the traitors from the opposite camp, dispose of everything as they please, But in addressing the Canada-Rerue we both in town and country, in our large hear that we are about to seek too much as well as in our small schools, among the ronges and among the blens: we are at their mercy; they make and repeal true cossis, to fling aside the mask of our laws; we can neither be born, live Catholicity and be honest enough to nor die without their permission, and it wear the based range of their master, any one recriminates, he is at once pointed out as a slanderer, a brazenfaced liar, an intidel and an atheist."

Exactly! The final definition suits. The Canada-Revue is just what it states in the last part of the sentence; a slanderer-and it knows it; a liar, as proven in the very same sentence, and a sheet such that its articles are more intidel and atheistic in their tendencies and results, than if it were to come out squarely against the Church.

"We can neither be born, live, nor die without their permission." That is not true; the writer of that came into the world without the permission of the Church, he lives now without the Church. and-unless he changes-he is likely to die without her assistance. Listen to tbis Communist !

"It appears that this state of things has lasted too long in our province. We are descendants of the French and, were it not for the English who live in the end wed with a paternal and forgiving land and help to cool down the violence nature, that he is animated with the of our nature, a 1792 or '93 might some good morning waken up those petty tyrants who peacefully sleep by the side of our wives and daughters whom they steal from us by the aid of religion, and more especially of the confessional."

There it is! shades of Couthon and St Just! of Marat and Hebert! spirits of ferth to hard the thunders of the Church's | Camile and Jean Jacques! of Condorcet malediction at the writer or writers of and Barras! Were it not for the English who help to cool the ardor of the writer in the Canada-Revue, we would have a French Revolution upon a small scale in Canada! Where did you learn your political creed, friend of the Canada-Rerust It is out at last; you could not keep it in; you cannot hold "a tight rein" over your natural desires; you must let the world know of what stuff you are made. Men like you, men of the Canada-Rerne, have played the same role in the very period that you invoke; men like you poisoned the public mind against the clergy, and consequently against ali social stability; men like you opened the dykes and the Zuyder Zee of devastation rolled over the land; men laid on her shrine. Then in saying adica like you invented the guillotine and glutted her with victims; men like you, under the mask of moralists and philthropists, stirred up the passions in the Faubourg St. Antoine and knocked down the innocent on the Place de la Con- emotion, we hang it over his own humble corde; men like you carried the antielericalism to such a point that the king, nobility, and clergy having suffered, and go more victims being at hand, the mob executioner of to-day became the mobvictim of temorrow; men like you were ready in 1792 and 98 to fan the embers of hatred into a flame and then were prepared to run away from the conflagration when it grew too hot; men like you had brains enough to concoct anit-clerical attacks, but had not heart enough to feel for the sad results of their own work.

We can tell the Canada-Revue that there will be no such thing as another 1792 in this country: that the Catholic Church has survived the attacks of more dangerous enemies than the members of that little junto-whose creed is a social chaos and whose God is Victor Hugo. But since that organ is upon the confessional we would advise it to give Mr. Chiniquy credit for the ideas it has taken from his famous work on "The Priest, the Woman and the Confessional." "Give to Casar what belongs to Casar," and don't forget to "give even the Devil his due." It is time to handle these people without gloves." They quote Zola and draw comparisons from the literature they love, while, in the same breath, they pour forth their revolutionary and communistic attacks upon the bulwarks of their own nation ality. The library of the old Institute is not destroyed and the ghost of continental liberalism haunts its readers.

It is only under such circumstances as these that we feel the want of something more than a mere weekly organ. It would seem as if we had not only the Protestant papers to contend with, but that soon we shall have to hold our for 80 old people, who have been conguard against the anti-Catholic section tinuously supported by this noble Order, of the so-called Catholic press. If so we are ready, and with the Laird of Abbottsford we can say:

" Come one! come all! this rock shall fly From its firm base as soon as I."

JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER

Green be the turf above thee, Friend of my better days; None knew thee but to love thee. None named thee but to praise."

The Quaker poet is dead: on the sixth of September he peacefully passed away: his years were eighty-five. Where are all the friends of his boyhood, the companions of his manhood, and the contemporaries who might heartily repeat those four sweet lines that he penned in the years long gone? Towards the noon of this century there was a galaxy of promising American poets; he was one of them. Some of them have passed into comparative oblivion, others into literary immortality; only one remains-in the person of Oliver Wendel Holmes.

Whittier's life is an interesting and instructive one, and we dare not attempt even a sketch of it. Some day he will have a biographer, and that writer's task will be a noble one. From the days of his early journalistic education, under Lloyd Garrison, till the close of his long career, from his father's potatoc-field to his own editorial sanctum, he was truly a friend of humanity. In the anti-slavery days Whittier was as conspicuous an advocate of abolition as Wendel Phillips, Lucretia Mott, or even Garrison himself.

As a poet he ranks high, not only in the literature of America, but even in the universal literature of the English language. He was of that school and day when William Cullen Bryant flourished and Longfellow was in the ascendant, real, irrespective of race or creed, to Amongst his confreres, in the temple of come to their help, and surely their ap-the muses, were Fitzgreen Halleck, N.P. peal will not be made in vain. This is Willis, Dr. Holmes, Charles Sprague, Grenville Mellen, J. O. Rockwell, Richard Coe, Park Benjamin, J. G. Percival, for such a purpose, and therefore let us I velia H. Sigourney, W. B. O. Peabody, all respond to it generously according to Lydia H. Sigourney, W. B. O. Peabody, R. H. Dana, Hannah F. Flood, J. G. C. Brainard, John Howard Payne, Crosby, Hunt, Thatcher, Tucker, and a host of others. Only one of all these remains to lament over the Quaker Poet's grave. Edgar Allen Poe was of recent date beside Whittier, while the Poet Priest, Boyle C Reilly, and James Russell Lowell, taking to a successful issue. are but of yesterday compared to the one just departed.

To pass judgment upon his literary merit would be both untimely and inappropriate. "It is not Death alone-but Presentation and Address to Mr. P. J. Fime and Death" that canonize the poet. America has lost a true and worthy son, humanity a sincere friend, and literature one of its brightest lights. The immediate friends of the dead bard will feel his absence most keenly, but America has his name upon her imperishable page of national glory, and his portrait hangs in the picture-hall of her sacred associations; humanity has his worksand his written works are the least part of the legacy he has left, for his example and deeds of charity surpass them: and literature can never feel his loss, since it has long since enjoyed the gifts that he to John Greenleaf Whittier we will borrow his own words. On the death of the poet Brainard, fifty years ago, Whittier placed this garland of verses upon his tomb; we take it up and, with silent --but glorious-grave:

"Gone to the land of silence—to the shadows of the deal— With the green turk on thy bosom, and the gray stone at thy head!" Reply, in which he expressed his sincere gray stone at thy head? Hath thy spirit too departed? Doth it never linear lore. Thinger here,

Dame hospital. After the flames were somewhat subdued, Captain Prevost, of No. 4 station, and his men dashed into the building. In a front room with his bead wrapped up in a coat, they found the first of the fire's victims. This was Turcotte, a sewing machine agent. He had evidently made a hard fight to get to the door, but had fallen on reaching it and was then overcome. He was dead when brought out. The second to be brought out was one Cidalo, a medical Redmittorist Fathers of St. Ann's student, according to what Baptiste Charbonneau, a fellow boarder, said. He was breathing but died soon after in the hospital. The last body found was that of an unknown stableman, who was found lying under his bed on the top floor, the body being charred almost out of recognition.

DEAD AND DYING.

The scene in the wards of Notre Dame iospital was horrible. In one corner of the room on a stretcher covered over with a salvage cover of rubber, lay an unknown hostler of the hotel, his face and body intact but terribly charred and blackened. Seen at a distance be resembled a sleeping negro, but on nearer approach it was seen that in places the raw, roasted flesh showed through the coating of charcoal. His name was said to be Desautel, a stableman, but subsequent enquiry revealed the fact that Desantel had not slept in the hotel that night, and that this man's name was unknown. Next to him, on a cot, lay Cidalo, a young medical student, of rough and powerful frame. His face was burned in blotches and the hair was signed from his massive head, while a line weather, pleasant times, abundance red band across the abdomen denoted of graces and all that they seek. It is a that the flames had not spared his body. In a cot next the dead Cidalo sat a boy apparently not over 14 years of age. Further down the ward lay Jules Camirand, an employe of Mr. Corristine's, on McGill street. He had both ankles broken, but was conscious and appeared to suffer much pain. He heard some rushed to his door the tlames rushed into his face. He immediately jumped from the third storey window. If he hadn't jumped he would have been dead, he said. He lost over $200 in clothes and money, and was afraid of losing his job.—Gazette.

Monday evening a meeting of the committee of the St. Patrick's Society was held in their hall for the purpose of arranging for their annual picnic in aid of the funds of the Charitable committee. A request had been made to the Montreal and Shamrock Lacrosse clubs to play a friendly match on the Shamrock Lacrosse grounds on the 24th of the present month, for the benefit of the society. The Shamrocks wrote accepting the invitation, but a letter was received from the Montreal club regretting very much that they could not play on that day, as the annual games of the M.A.A.A. were held on the 24th inst. The president, Mr. J. J. Curran, M. P., said that it would not do to hold rival gatherings on the same day, and he was requested to interview the two clubs and try and induce them to play a friendly match on the 8th of October. The president stated that he thought a meeting of the clubs for a charitable purpose at the close of the season would have an excellent effect and that he would do all in his power to induce them to assent to the wishes of the society. A case of great hardship was brought before the notice of the committee by Mr. Hoolahan, of the Immigration office. A poor woman with three children, the eldest eight years of age, had been sent by her husband from the state of Illinois, where they had lived for two years since they left Ireland, to Quebec, under pre-tence that he would follow her immediately. She had reached Quebec last week, but her husband did not join her. The Quebec authorities had shipped her back to Montreal, and she was now thrown upon public charity, without the price of a meal, for herself or her helpless children. The committee gave instructions, as none of the institutions would consent to receive her, that a room be rented for her and that she and her children be provided for until the chief of police at the point she left in Illinois should be com-municated with to find out the particulars about her husband.

Pilgrimage to Ste. Anne de Beaupre.

Arrangements have, we understand, been completed for a pilgrimage to Ste. Anne de Beaupre from Smith's Falls, including points on the C.P.R. as far west as Tweed, north as far as Almonte, and cast as far as Green Valley. The pilgrimage will start on Monday, 26th September instant. The rates are re-markably low, $4.25 from Smith's Falls, with a sliding scale from the other points based upon their respective distances from Ste. Anne's, $4.70 being the figure from Tweed. The tickets will be good for five days, thus giving an opportunity to visit Quebec and Montreal on the re-turn trip. The pilgrimage, which is under the auspices of the Church of St. Francis de Sales, Smith's Falls, has the approbation of His Grace Archbishop Cleary, and will be attended by several priests of the Archdiocese. As this will, no doubt, be the last of the season, and as the rates granted for it are, all things considered, most favorable, the number taking advantage of it is sure to be large. The last week of September and first week of October are, by those who know Quebec, said to be the most pleasant part of the whole year there. The glowing autumn weather has not yet departed and the story of its tints is seen on leaf and water. Apart from the main object of such a journey the veneration of the "Good Ste. Anne" at one of her most famous shrines, and the mainfold blessings which so often flow therefrom, a visit to that quiet little village nestling against the hills on the banks of the noble St. Lawrence and to the Ancient Capital itself—the cradle of Catholicity in our land-will well repay the pilgrims.

Mr. Drew recognized Morgan and was evidently pleased to meet him.

Who would ever think of meeting you in Broadway? I do warm to an old friend always. Why, come and take a bit of dinner at our house. They will all be glad to see you. So Rome has bust has it, and you were all given your walking-ticket? By Jeminny, but you fought well though in '67. Read all about it in the Herald! As it is pretty near as often right as wrong, we believe it always; saves reflection you see. But won't you come?"

Thus Mr. Drew in the first effusion of his joy.

Morgan smiled at his naive reason for always believing the Herald, and thought how much truth there was in the observation. Accepting Mr. Drew's proffered hospitality, they mounted an omnibus and chatted about Mr. Drew's adventures in Europe. Washy's contribution was the remark that it " was a rum start to have gone at all."

Mrs. Drew received her husband and Morgan in a gaudily-upholstered apartment. She did not recognized Morgan at first. On being told who he was, she Polite ways."

Here Miss Drew sighed as she recalled Peppe's manly form, and the help he had afforded her in mounting the ruins of the Flavian Amphitheatre.

The poor "Countess" said never a word.

Her young romance was over; her hero was only clay, and base at that. Her sprightly airs were subdued and quiet; her face care-worn and sad. She gave a mute appealing look to Mr. Drew, who seemed to understand her, for he changed the conversation by asking Morgan when he would leave New York.
"I leave to-night for Montreal," he re-

"I am anxious to arrive home as plied. soon as possible."

After partaking of Mr. Drew's hospitality Morgan drove to the railway station. As he went along he wondered much at the blindness of many girls. A quiet, unassuming man is slighted and a brainless coxcomb adored. The sacred pleasures of a cheerful fireside have no charms for them; all their aspirations are for the whirl and excitement of a fashionable life. They hunger for love, and yet they sell themselves for money or position. They dream of domestic joys, still they never strive to fit themselves for conferring them. Blind to the dictates of common-sense, and deaf to the advice of friends, they romantically imagine that the object of their ill-regulated affections is perfect.

And a sister is not made wiser by the unhappiness of a sister. Miss Drew knows the fraud of which her sister has been the victim, still she would be as easily deceived to-morrow as if the "Italian Count" had been genuine. She feels that hero would be true. Sensational literature has bred a mental unrest, and destroyed the womanly instincts of many besides Miss Drew.

And still, God be thanked, woman's best qualities often remain untouched in the root. Morgan felt sure that if the lazy Italian impostor were stricken with a dire disease his poor duped wife, forgetful of her wrongs, would be his devoted nurse. Such reflections as these occupied Morgan's mind for a length of time. That young girls would strive to overcome the romantic tendency of their nature, and "Oh! it is only at first that they

CHAPTER XXVIII.

THE STOLEN DOCUMENT. Once again the month of October has returned; the rich grapes are being gathered on the banks of Lake Albano, and the chestnuts fall thickly in the woods below the crazily perched town of Rocca di Papa. Little children with large, wondering dark eyes, and a wealth of black hair, pick up the nuts in osierbaskets, or sport like youthful dryads in the checkered light. From the chestnut a coarse nutritious meal is procured, which the peasantry either use alone or mix with wheaten flour. On the squares of every town and city roasted chesnuts hold the place of the American pea-nut. It is not then for amusement that the children are at work.

A month has passed since the Pontifi-cal army was disbanded; a menth has passed since Pius IX, became a prisoner in the Vatican. The infidel world has had its shout of joy; the bigots have uttered their frenzied cry that "Popery has

They have yet to learn, what history might have taught them, that the Chnrch never dies. Pius IX. may die, but Peter will live on; he has lived for eighteen hundred years, and he will Live until time shall be no more.

The ascent through the grove of chest-inut and ilex-trees to Rocca di Papi is steep and winding. This little town is built on a spur of Monte Cavo, and is a gem of inaccessibility, inconvenience, and primeval irregularity. Once, however, that you have mastered the difficulties of the situation and scaled its dizzy heights, you can enjoy a glorious prospect. Monte Cavo looms grimly above you, perhaps sulkiny veiling its head with a cloud; Lake Albano glints peacefully below, apparently so near that you meditate a leap into its inviting waters. The green fring e of low underwood around the base of Moute Cavo sparkles in the setting sun, and is redected in the finy wavelets of the lake. The town of Albano is seen on its gentle slope, scemingly desirous of going forth to meet the waters of the Mediterranean. Patches of sun-lit hill are interspersed with the shade of small valleys, mingled like the grave and gay of life; they extend to the west and end with the walls of Rome.

tend to the west and end with the wails of Rome.

Up the steep ascent two men were ascending on this quiet October evening. They were Lorenzo and Peppe. Like their fellow-countrymen who had belonged to the Pope's army, they had refused to take service under the invader. They were now comparatively free in their movements. The reason of their present excursion may be learned from their conversation.

"Are you sure, Peppe, that we are on the right track?"

"I wish I were as sure of a chance of fighting for the Pope. I saw the old rascal this morning."

"I wish I were as sure of a chance of fighting for the Pope. I saw the old rascal this morning."

"There is no doubt in your mind about its being the one we want?"

"Why. Signor Lorenzo." said Peppe, evidently astonished, "can you ask such a question? Could I be deceived in old Ezra? Surely now there is no other such face and figure in all Italy. I could pick him out in the valley of Jehosaphat. unless, indeed, the impenitent thief or Judas mirth be mistaken for him."

MR JAMES SANDS' WONDEREUL RE-STORATION TO HEALTH.

Atter Three Years of Paralysis, Insensibility, and Uselessuess, He Tells the Taleofilis Recovery and Renewed Work in the World-His Story as Told a Free Press Reporter.

Ottawa Free Press-The town of Alexandria, some 55 miles south of the city of Ottawa, on the Canada Atlantic Railway, has been completely astonished, recently, at the marvellous experience of a young man, who, after having been bed-ridden for nearly twelve months, and his case pronounced incurable by Montreal and Alexandria doctors, is now restored to complete health and strength.

Mr. James Sands is a young teamster, well known and extremely popular throughout the country side, and his illness and wonderful recovery have been -indeed still are-the chief topics in the town and neighborhood. The story of his miraculous cure having reached of his miraculous cure having reached Williams' Medicine Company, from Ottawa, a member of the Free Press staff either address. The price at which these journeyed to Alexandria and sought out pills are sold make a course of treatment Mr. Sands for the purpose of ascertaining the truth of the statements made regarding his recovery. Mr. Sands is a slimly built, but wiry-looking young man of about 32 years of age, and when met by the newspaper man the bloom of health was on his cheek, and his whole frame showed signs of unimpared vigor and vitality.

The newspaper man told Mr. Sands

the object of his visit, and the latter expressed his perfect willingness to give all the facts connected with his case. "I was," said Mr. Sands, "a complete wreck, given up by the doctors, but now I am well and strong again, and gaining strength every day. I was born in Lan-caster in 1860, and up to three years ago I was always healthy and strong, living in the open air and being well known throughout the whole county of Glengarry. It was in the winter of 1888-89 that I first felt signs of incipient paralysis. I was then a teamster for the sash and door factory here, and had been exposed to all kinds of weather. I then experienced violent twisting cramps in my right hand. I was in Cornwall that winter when the first stroke fell, and remained there for three days before I knew anybody at all. A medical man was called in but could do nothing for me. After that I came home and appeared to get all right for a time, but after a few days the old trouble began again, my hand continuing the twitching and cramping that had preceded the stroke. Up to twelve months ago these twitching fits were the only symptoms I suffered from. Then in August, 1891, when I was in Huntingdon village I sustained a second stroke, and remained unconscious for about seven hours. A doctor attended me and I recovered sufficiently to be brought home. After my return home the paralysis stead-ily gained on me, and I lost the use of my right arm and leg entirely; my right eye was distorted and my tongue partially paralyzed. I was prescribed for by an Alexandria physician, whose treatment I carefully followed, but it had no effect. I still got steadily worse, and about a month before Christmas last, I went to the English hospital at Montreal. Prof. Stuart and all the doctors came around me, as mine was a curious case, and the professor treated me. All the doctors came around not appear to understand my case. I questioned some of them, but they told me it was a hopeless case. I remained me it was a hopeless case. I remained in the hospital a month, without the least improvement, and was then brought home, and remained in my bed till May day. I had constant medical advice, but continued to grow worse and worse. My right arm withered and I grew so weak and useless that I could not turn myself in bed. Meantime I had tried all sorts of patent medicines without the least effect. In May I saw an advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the papers, and said I would try them as a last resort. I had heard of the wonderful cures worked by Pink Pills and told my folks to get me some. I had not taken them long when I found mye'f improving, and this determined me to continue their use. My strength gradually returned, the muscles of my arm and leg became invigorated and stronger, and I was able to sit up. I still continued taking the Pills and gaining strength, until at last I was able to go about, and finally to return to my old place at the sash and door featers. door factory. I gave up the Pills for a while, but did not feel so well, so I again began their use. I now feel as well as ever, though perhaps not quite so strong as formerly. You can see my right arm, which was withered, is now all right," mend, and they have made a new man of me. The newspaper man then called on Messrs. Ostrom Bros. & Co., widely known druggists, and interviewed their representative, Mr. Smith as to his knowledge of the case. Mr. Smith was fully conversant with the facts, and vouched for the story told by Mr. Sands, and further said, that his hopeless case and remarkable recovery are known through out Glengarry County. In reply to the query if many of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold, Mr. Smith replied that the sale was remarkable and his experience he had never handled a remedy that sold so well, or gave such general satisfaction to those using them, as everywhere glowing reports are heard of the excellent results following their 5-tf

A PLEASANT TRIP.

TO CRANE ISLAND ON THE BROTHERS.

The Pleturesque Panorama that the Passengers Enjoyed, Slightly Tempered by Troubled Sea-A View of Grosse Isle.

Owing to the present excitement over the cholera danger, the following should prove very interesting to our readers. Yesterday a pleasant trip to Crane Iland was organized by Capt. Fortier, on board of the steamer Brothers, wellday before, prevented a great many from taking a second picnic on the following day. Besides this, although it was Captain Fortier's intention to pass close enough to Grosse Island to allow a view of the hallowed spot which has so many and such saddening memories for the children of the Green Isle, he could not promise them that he could let them stay long enough there to visit it. Leaving the Lower Town about 830 the Brothers steamed down the North Channel. The head of the Island, the Montmorency Falls were passed and the steamer landed at Ste. Famille, and then touched at Ste. Anne, when some passengers were landed, then crossed to St. Francois on the Island, where the Reverend Mr. Leclerc, Cure of that parish disembarked. The weather was delightful. Old Sol shone out in all his brilliancy, and a lovely breeze tempered the warmth of his rays, and completed of quiet retirement, with all of which memory peoplse the scene hidden by the mass of trees crowning its summit, the excursionists soon left the Island of Or leans behind them and entered the scene of leans behind them and entered the proper channel of the river. There a new feature entered into the programme. The wind was now pretty brisk, to check the sun who was putting up (or sending down) more heat, and the heaving of the steamer, as she entered into the swell of the waters, was a novelty in its way. some of the lady passengers looked doubtful, for a few moments, and some heartless joker whispered, in bated breath, the magic name of sea-sickness, and some veteran travellers added somewhat to the suspense by telling about their abventures in the neighborhood of or pay or piscay. This was too much or a joke to endure and had the effect of deciding the doubtful patients to adjourn the sca-sickness to another date. Whether this was the sole or principal cause, or whether the good Ste. Anne did not wish any such patients in sight of the Bay of Biscay. This was too much not wish any such patients in sight of her chapel, they recovered without even usual on these occasions.

Meanwhile a band of musicians on board gave out their liveliest strains, but though they appreciated the music well enough, as it deserved, the company did not induge in the pastime of dancing. The young people had other occupation to their attention, and the older and wiser were seemingly afraid to rush where the others feared to tread.

With the crowning summit of Cap fourmente on their left and Isle the whistle sounded the alarm about ten minutes after, and those who had lunded 1847. A small white marble monument. surrounded by an old low wooden fence, bears the following inscriptions. On the face opposite the entrance, is graven in lines running downwards from the top :-

In this secluded spot lie the mortal remains of 5424 persons, who, flying from pestilence and famine in Ireland in the year 1847, found in America but a grave.

On the reverse side, facing the end of the island are the words:

Erected by Dr. Geo. W. Douglas. Medical superintendent, and eighteen assistant officers, on duty, in 1847. On the side looking toward the north, is the following:

In memory of Dr. Alfred Panet,

Medical officer of this establishment, Who died of cholera, July, 1834, Dr. Robert Christie, Medical assistant, Who died of typhus in the hospital, July 2nd, 1837.

And on the side facing it one reads: To the memory of Dr. Benson, of Dublin, who died in the hospital,

May 27th, 1847.
Dr. Alexandre Pinet, of Varennes, died 24th July, 1834.
Dr. Alfred Mailhiot, of Vercheres, died

July 22nd, 1847. Dr. John Jameson, of Montreal, died Aug. 2nd, aged 33 years, in 1847.

These gentlemen were assistant medical officers of this hospital, and all died of typhus fever, contracted in the faithful discharge of their duty upon the sick.

Close to the shore of this memorable spot is a Bay called Cholera Bay, a and reminder of the terrible scourge whose victims' burial ground is washed by its splashing waters. Those who remember this awful year of 1847, will recall to mind the names of the devoted priests who faced the terrible scourge, few of whom now survive. They were Frs. B. One little volume of poetry, "On the Sunrise Slope," she has already issued; and her friends and admirers look forward eagerly for another, which is said to be in preparation. She assisted Mrs. Clare Erskine Clement in editing a beautiful art book "Christian Symbols and Stores of the Saints," and has won every-body's applause and regard by that ideal excution of a beautiful conception known as "Watchwords from John Boyle O'Reilly." But besides this occasional indulgence in attempts at the higher and more enduring literary forms, she finds time somewhere for the preparation of de-lightful essays and lectures, and for the reading of the same to charmed audiences on numberless occasions. In these few hints we have but touched upon the character and life-work of a woman, whose crowning grace, as exhibited in all she says and all she does, is unaffected modesty and plain sincerity. Young woman, you who read these lines, and think you have within you that which would justify your entrance upon a literary life, can you, like Miss Conway, look upon work, hard work, ceaseless work, without flinching? Can you bear up under disappointments, discoveragements, and wait nationally for

Dr. Brownson was born in Stock-bridge, Vt., of gool old Yankee family, whose tradition never knew aught of good in the Church of Rome. At the very early age of twenty years, he is found already before the public as a writer and searcher after truth. He soon came to the issue board of the steamer Brothers, well-known to the votaries of Ste. Anne's sirine. A pretty large number of excursionists availed themselves of the rare offer, and enjoyed themselves heartily. There were fewer of our Irish Catholics on board, than we expected to find there, but the St. Patrick's Total Abstinence Society's picnic to St. Catherine's on the Society's picnic to St. Catherine's picnic to St. Catherine's on the Society's picnic to St. Catherine's picnic to St. Cather preaching the dectrines of both but finally satisfied with neither. Again, like others groping for truth, it came to him at first in shreds and then dawned upon him in its fulness and gave him that satisfaction which his mind could find nowhere else. At this moment, he met the learned and good Bishop Fitzpatrick of Boston, who was admirably fitted by nature and education to guide the great mind into the fields of truth, and in 1844 ont be made just now at Grosse Isle. Dr. Brownson became one of the greatest apologists of the Church in America, His Review, which he published almost continuously until his death was a mighty engine for good in combatting error and defending truth. Revised by his son, Henry L. Brownson, the Twenty Volumes of the Review are as an arsenal in which are stores of ammunition against any and all enemies of our Holy Faith.

Dr. Browns in was an intense American but he believed the Catholic Church to be a necessity to our American form of government. He was an ardent defender of the Pope's claims to supremacy and infalibility as demanded by human reason, out of the necessity of authority. Hotel Dien, Hopilal General, Laval University, the Archbishopric of Quebec, and Redemptorist Fathers of Ste. Anne de Beaupre, have all contributed largely. Mr. Macdonald has the original oil portrait of the Venerable Mother. Many del'Incarnation, wh crounded the Ursulines in 1639, as well as portratis of Madame in 1988, as well as pottratts of Madame de la Peltrie and Sister St. Joseph, who were also connected with the foundation of the order here. The portrait of Mane, de l'Incarnation was taken after her death, the body being exhumed three days after burial, for the purpose. Lody Prevost, wife of Sir George Prevost, gave regestated berealf to the University a portrait of herself to the Ursulines in 1815, and this portrait will also be on view. There is an oil portrait of the celebrated Jesuit, Pere Le Jeune, over two hundred years old, and still, like the others, in an admirable state of preserva-tion. Mr. Macaonald has also succeeded in borrowing from the Ursuline Convent a portrait of Lord and Lady Elgin, dated 1835. From the Hopital General he has got youthful monarch is represented as wearing all the insignia of royalty. This pic-ture was a present to Mile, de St. Ours by Colonel de Salaberry. Two remarkable paintings of St. Antoine and St. Philmene were sent out from France by Bishop Dosquet in 1735 to the Hospital, and are now in Mr. Maedonald's charge. It appears that the good bishop was afraid to come out to Canada himself on account of the sea voyage; so he sent the pictures by one of the ships carrying colonists to La Newelle France. There are a number of oil paintings representing daughters of the old French nobility. who had joined religious orders in Can-ada. Included are portraits of the first Superioress of the Hopital General, Sister Soumande de St. Augustin (1709) and of Sister Marie de la Corne, Mlle. Duchesnay de l'Enfant Jesu, Mlle. Duchesnay de St. Augustin, Sister Charlotte de Râmezay, daughter of Governor de Ramezay, who was brought up at the Chateau de Ramezay bere. It was this lady, who, when Murray was in possession Quebec in 1769, kept the French general. Levis, informed of what was going on. When discovered that she was doing so, it is said that he sent his aide de camp to see her and inform her, with his compliments, that if she really took such an interest in military affairs he had a vacancy in his Grenadiers, to which he would be happy to appoint her. From the Hopital General also come a missual holder, an inkstand of china, made in the slape of a heart, and the wooden crozier of Mgr. the Bishop de St. Valibers who first the crozier of Mgr. the Bishop de St. Val-lieres, who died in 1735. It appears that this occlesiastic had had his silver crezier melted and made into crosses which he distributed as souvenirs among the inmates of the Hopital General, and of the Unuline Convent at Three Rivers about the year 1710. His Lordship had to use a wooden crozier after that. One of these silver crosses so distributed, will also be on exhibition. Another interesting relic will be the silver crucifix presented to the Church of Ste. Anne de Beaupre by d'Iberville, the great naval commander, in thanksgiving for his victory over three English vessels in Hudson Bay. There is a box of plate, which came from the king's household. It is studded with L's and crowns in brass.

The historical student will find much to interest him in the collection of documents which will be exhibited. First and foremost there is a document all in Maisonnerve's handwriting. It is a certificate of the death of Governor Dailleboust.

THE ORIGINAL DEED OF CONCRSSION of the Island of Anticosti is also in Mr. Macdonald's possession. Another document is dated 1639, and bears the signatures of Montmagny, Father Vimoet (who was the first to celebrate mass in Montreal upon the landing of de Maisonneuve). Father Paul le Jeune, and Sisters St. Ignace, St. Bernard and St. Bonaventure, who were the first nuns in Montreal Other documents bear the signatures of Dailleboust, de Lauzon, Guy Carteton, Monteulm, Couillard and others. Guillaume Couillard was the first nabitant proper, and his mark is affixed to a document dated 1654, which records the lay-

Among the documents should also be mentioned Gen. Murray's original ordinance, dated December 26, 1750, impesing a tax on wheat, a paper of the Com-ngnic de la Norvede France, dated 1618 and a latter of Montealm's referring to the taking of Chonegan and asking the nun to pray for his success at

The Semaior Religiouse takes up the point recently raised by a local organ, which complained that the Church could not take up the teaching of all branches of education which it wanted to control. The Archbishop's organ establishes a difference between the teaching and control, and it holds that, while the Church does not pretend to actually give the lessons or lectures on technical sciences. it must assert its right to control such teaching in its principles, on account of the intimate connection of all the sciences with the fundamental principles of religion, of which the Church is the sole

A Suitable Hall.

DEAR SIE .- I have noticed for quite a while how far behind other denominations, are the Catholic Societies in the matter of suitable hold accommodation. A little hall there and a little hall there. are not much of a monument to the zea and credit of the Irish Catholic Society of Montreal. Look at the fine hall of the Dominion Square Association that's a buoy for a time. Now then I should say it is not necessary altogether to have a building-imiliar, but something a long way alread of the present structures is wanted. However I, Catholic young men are

These are a few of the numerous objects of interest which Mr. de Lery Macdonald and the members of the Anti-philanthropists to build them hails, there are no Donald Smiths amongst Montreal are no Donald Smiths amongst Montreal Catholics anyhow, but let the young men be up and doing they should shoulder the work, not hoist it on others to house them.

The C.M.B.A. and other like associations have spoken frequently through their organs as to the dishculty of getting a full quota of members to meetings. It is not to be wondered at; the lack of attractiveness about the society halls is striking in contrast to what it might be. One or two large buildings would suffice to take some of the small societies in out of the rain, and let Catholic societies of mer't have something substantial to look
