Mr. Jim Jepson (London East): Mr. Speaker, the Court Challenges Program is a federal program that funds human rights cases, and is comprised of a government appointed committee that operates at arm's length from government.

The committee, in its wisdom, has stated that it has money to offer to two homosexual lovers who wish to prove that homosexuals are discriminated against and deserve special protection under the Charter. The committee also awarded $25,000 to an Ottawa-based homosexual rights group, EGAL, to research five areas in the Immigration Act that would lead to other court challenges on gay rights.

The Court Challenges Program recently gave LEAF, a feminist action group, $35,000 to defray its expenses as interventionists in the Borowski trial on fetal rights, yet denied REAL Women the same amount to defray their expenses as interventionists in the same trial. This is not democracy in action, but a clear case of discrimination. I urge the Minister of State to cancel these committee appointments and appoint a new board that will operate in a fair and equitable fashion.

HOUSING

POSSIBLE INCREASE IN FEDERAL TAX—IMPACT

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, a document published yesterday by the Association des constructeurs d'habitations du Québec and the Canadian Home Builders' Association explains that because of the hidden agenda of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), and especially to his federal sales tax, the average cost of a house in Canada would increase by $8,000.

Mr. Speaker, this measure is a direct contradiction of the right to adequate housing, and if we analyse the Minister's proposal in greater detail, we find as well that monthly rents will increase by an estimated $65.

Mr. Speaker, tax reform would have the effect of denying thousands of Canadians the right to accommodation, and it would also deny thousands of young couples the right to own property.

Mr. Speaker, I hope the Minister of Finance will have the courage to do what he did in the case of the tax on food and give us the assurance that this tax which puts an extra $8,000 on houses and $65 per month more on rental accommodation will not be implemented and that there will be a special exemption for the housing sector.

WINE INDUSTRY

TRIBUTE TO CANADIAN WINES

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Mr. Speaker, some people still do not believe that Canadian wines are first-class. They suffer from a wine inferiority complex. If you do not believe me, Mr. Speaker, read the September issue of En Route, a first-class corporate magazine put out by a first-class airline, which contains an article written by a first-class author. He states in that article that Canada does produce world-class wines, and when they are served in downtown Paris that wine inferiority complex might just relax a bit.

If you are still not convinced, Mr. Speaker, I invite you to the Niagara Grape and Wine Festival in St. Catharines, September 23 to October 2, where and when you will have the opportunity to learn first-hand that there is no taste better than the Niagara taste.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

CLOSURE OF SANDY LAKE SCHOOL

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, the people of Sandy Lake are today despondent over the closure of their school because of a suspected leak of oil possibly contaminated with PCBs. It is not the first time that that school has had to be closed. Problems with the sewage system and the roof have led to it being closed before. In many communities it would have been closed in any case because of its condition.

• (1410)

The students of Sandy Lake face overcrowding, with 500 plus students in a school designed for 300, 32 classrooms in a space designed for 24, no resource rooms, no shop room, no home economics, a library that is crammed into half a classroom, and a gym that is drastically undersized for the size of the student population.

These substandard facilities are a disgrace, particularly when the Minister has recently published national standards for school space and facilities.

Meanwhile, 25 and 35 miles away, two communities of the Kee-way-win Band suffer even worse problems. They have no school, they have no program, and some of their students are now in their third school year without education.

The Government is failing in its responsibilities and, ironically, if it addressed the problem of no school in Kee-way-win, it could solve some of the pressure on Sandy Lake.

There are generations growing up under-educated, and they deserve the best.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

REDUCED TELEVISION COVERAGE

Mr. William G. Lesick (Edmonton East): Mr. Speaker, it has been more than 10 years since Canadians first saw parliamentary proceedings on television. Unfortunately, since some cable companies across the country have added new specialty services, the House of Commons proceedings have been bumped from basic channels to converter channels.

It has become more difficult for Canadians to watch the House of Commons proceedings without obtaining costly new converter equipment. This directly affects senior citizens who make up a large part of the television audience.

This week the CRTC hears applicants for the Commons broadcast licence. It should require cable companies to put the service on channels that all Canadians can watch without extra cost.

Parliament belongs to Canadians. Let them have access to it.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

SITUATION IN HAITI

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Mr. Speaker, the reign of terror of the macoutes has come back to Haiti with the help of the military. On Sunday, Saint-Jean Bosco in Port-au-Prince was burnt down. Yesterday, another church in the capital met the same fate. The CNTU is actively looking at the situation. Mr. Jean-Claude Icart, of the Bureau de la Communuaté chrétienne des Haïtiens de Montréal is looking at the situation. Mr. Pierre Bain of l'Écho politique des régions d'Haïti au Canada and Mr. Serge Bouchereau of the Canadian Comité de coordination de la solidarité avec le peuple haïtien are also analysing the situation.

Mr. Speaker, I think the time has come for Canada to call a meeting of the Club des amis d'Haïti, which includes France and West Germany, and to raise the matter most vigourously at the next session of the United Nations. This evening, together with my colleague from Papineau—Saint-Michel, we will be in my native parish of Saint-Édouard, where the Haitian community of Montreal will be gathered to discuss, pray and meditate on these terrible events.

FREE TRADE

QUÉBEC'S PERSPECTIVE

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, in a few days, Liberals and Socialists will be dithering away against free trade during the election campaign. They will be dithering away against the Province of Quebec, and I would like to remind them of the official position taken by Quebec. The Canada-U.S. Free Trade Agreement has been analysed from the Quebec perspective, and here is the conclusion. The analysis looks at the main points of the agreement from a Quebec perspective. This is not a macroeconomic analysis or a sectorial study of the impact of the agreement on each industry. Some people feel it is too technical. Others think it is not detailed enough. To me, the important thing is that we can conclude from an analysis of the text of the agreement that the document signed on January 2, 1988 by the Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Mulroney) and the President of the United States, Mr. Ronald Reagan, is definitely a step forward for Quebec, according to the Minister of External Trade and Technological Development, Mr. Pierre MacDonald.

SITUATION OF CERTAIN OLDER WORKERS—REQUEST THAT MINISTER OF STATE INTERVENE

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, this morning at eleven o'clock, members of the Association des retraités sans assurance-chômage occupied the office of the Minister of State (Employment and Immigration) (Mrs. Vézina), and they are still there. Mr. Speaker, the Secretary of State and Member for Lac-Saint-Jean (Mr. Bouchard) promised during his campaign that he would deal with the problems of 2, 000 older workers across the country who are being penalized on unemployment insurance. The Minister of State (Employment and Immigration) had led them to believe that she, as the Minister, could solve their problems. Recently she did an about-face when she said it could not be done.

Mr. Speaker, as we draw nearer to an election, Canadians and especially older Canadians remember how the Prime Minister lied to them. Older workers will remember that the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mrs. McDougall) deceived them. Canadians who are ill will remember the tax on drugs . . . I would urge the Minister of State (Employment and Immigration) to correct the injustice being done to older workers.

TRADE

CANADIAN THERMOS PRODUCTS—EXPORTS TO UNITED STATES

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, Canadian Thermos Products is one of the oldest industries in Scarborough, but in August of this year Canadian Thermos entered a new era. It is now producing for the United States market all its thermos glass vacuum bottles, coffee carafes and workers' lunch kits. This has meant an increase in the workforce of about 60 per cent.

One of the factors is the anticipation of free trade. It is argued that when free trade comes and the 9 per cent tariff is eliminated, this company will have an even greater share of market possibilities around the world.

Something that leads to the closing of a U.S. plant and the expansion of a Canadian plant cannot be all bad.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

PROPOSED ACQUISITION OF NUCLEAR POWERED SUBMARINES—ENVIRONMENTAL CONSIDERATIONS

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, Canadians oppose the Government's planned purchase of nuclear submarines for many reasons such as the cost to our social programs, but not the least of the reasons is the effect on the environment, yet the Government never had any environmental impact studies done before making the decision and the Government has recently reaffirmed that.

When I raised the question in the House previously, the Associate Minister of National Defence (Mr. Dick) came up with the astonishing reply that because nuclear wastes can be put in a swimming pool for storage, and there is no bigger swimming pool than the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans, obviously it would be just fine to spew out the radio-active wastes into our oceans as a means of disposal.

This is a contemptible approach to the environment. I hope that Canadians will see through this. I hope when they look at this Government's record on the environment and think particularly about the effect of the nuclear submarine decision on the environment, they will see that this Government does not deserve to be supported. They will see through the Government's attempt to use the environment for public relations purposes.

Oral Questions

POLITICAL PARTIES

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT—POSITION OF LIBERAL PARTY

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, the question persists as to whether or not the Liberal Party can be trusted in its opposition to the Canada-U.S. Free Trade Agreement. It took the Leader of the Liberal Party (Mr. Turner) a couple of years to make up his mind on the agreement. He was then going to tear it up. Now he is going to renegotiate it. He is now playing to high-powered Liberals in Québec. We have Gerald Regan taking Donald Macdonald's place in heading up the lobby group which is promoting the free trade agreement. We have other Liberal Senators who are in favour of the agreement.

When the Leader of the Opposition said he did not want the Senate to deal with it, what he did not want to be exposed was that he could not muster a majority in the Senate to oppose this agreement. Now we see the shameful act of the Senate actually approving this agreement in principle.

Any Canadian who is against this agreement has only one Party to vote for, and that is the NDP.

SENIOR CITIZENS

TRIBUTE TO ACTIVE RETIREES

Mr. Claude Lanthier (LaSalle): Mr. Speaker, our senior citizens find active retirement increasingly attractive. Dynamic Canadian retirees represent a major social group which exerts considerable influence in Canada generally and in LaSalle—Émard in particular.

The innate and confirmed wisdom of these robust workers of yesteryears who have chosen either to start new careers or devote their time to more humanitarian than profit-making activities remains a national wealth which the Government will have to take into account from now one when developing its policies.

I want to say how impressed and greatful we all are to these fine people who have already done so much for our society and who have now chosen to dedicate their time and efforts to improving the lot of their less fortunate fellow citizens and this, in the interest of the many generations which will follow us in this great country Canada!

THE ENVIRONMENT

TREATMENT OF SEWAGE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. On May 4, 1987, his Environment Minister said that eight million Canadians live in cities that do not treat their sewage. He added, and I quote, "They now expect the federal Government to help them out. The federal Government has no intention to revive purification projects that will cost hundreds of billions of dollars. The answer is no."

Nevertheless, Mr. Speaker, during the recent provincial election in Nova Scotia and the by-election in Lac-Saint-Jean, the Government announced such projects. Can the Prime Minister tell us why his Government is dealing with this issue on an ad hoc policy basis? Why are all Canadian cities not treated the same way, regardless of how they vote or of whether provincial elections or federal by-elections are being held?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think that I have just heard, albeit by implication, a new position taken by the Liberal Leader. Is he telling us today that he is against the measures taken to clean up Halifax harbour?

[English]

If the new position of the Liberal Party is that it is opposed to the Halifax Harbour clean-up—that is what he said—then this is going to be bad news for the Liberal Party, I think, in Nova Scotia.

[Translation]

We did everything we had to with respect to cleaning up Halifax harbour in a timely way and according to appropriate objective criteria. We also applied the same criteria for cleaning up the St. Lawrence. We have taken other initiatives in the area of environmental protection, Mr. Speaker, and we will do more to protect the environment. We have acted quickly in a host of areas to protect Canada's environment, be it in South Moresby, British Columbia, or in cleaning up the St. Lawrence or Halifax harbour. And if the Liberal Leader is against these projects, let him say so today!

[English]

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I think the cynicism of the Prime Minister is absolutely disgusting.

MUNICIPAL INFRASTRUCTURES

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, this Party has been on record, in responding to the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, for a one-third, one-third, one-third split of all infrastructure costs, including anti-pollution costs for our cities and towns. We are on record firmly for that, and my question really addresses why Halifax when there was a provincial election, why Lac-Saint-Jean when there was a by-election? Why not Vancouver, why not Windsor, why not Winnipeg, why not Victoria, why not Laval?

Does it take a provincial election? Does it take a political event to sponsor this kind of intervention? Why is every city in this country not entitled to help in cleaning up pollution?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, clearly it takes a pending federal election to instil in the bosom of the Leader of the Opposition an interest in environmental matters.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McMillan: I have been Minister of the Environment for three years. This is the first question I have ever had from the Leader of the Opposition on pollution.

Ms. Copps: Nonsense.

Mr. Axworthy: That's because you're never here.

Mr. McMillan: He was not asking about the Halifax Harbour or the St. Lawrence River two or three years ago.

In his first question he referred to the St. Lawrence River clean-up, wrongly, I might add, as a sewage treatment program. It has nothing to do with sewage treatment. It has everything to do with stemming the flow of industrial wastes from point sources in an international waterway for which we have international jurisdiction under the Constitution.

RADON GAS—NON-INCLUSION IN ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION ACT

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, we have been on record since 1986 at a convention in Hamilton of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities supporting this program to clean up our cities across the country.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): The blow-dried Minister is not demonstrating much response in dealing with this particular issue.

Since we are not getting serious answers on pollution, let me turn to another subject.

• (1425)

Yesterday the United States announced that most homes in that country should be tested for radon gas, the second leading cause of lung cancer. Will the Prime Minister explain why he refused to allow radon and other radioactive substances to be covered under the Environmental Protection Act despite requests from government experts to do just that? As well, does the Government now intend to reassess that policy on radon in light of the very disturbing announcement by environmental authorities in the U.S. yesterday?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I would much prefer to be blow-dried than a blow-hard.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McMillan: Mr. Speaker, I caused to have appointed a very distinguished environmentalist, an academic and scientist, who was asked to head a blue-ribbon panel to advise the Government of Canada on all substances that, in the panel's judgment, should be scheduled and regulated under the Environmental Protection Act. The Minister does not unilaterally pick this chemical or that substance for that purpose. I rely on the advice of scientists, in this case a very important panel that was established for the purpose. If in their judgment the relevant substance should be scheduled and regulated under the Act, I will view their advice very seriously and with favour.

HEALTH

PRESENCE OF RADON GAS IN WINNIPEG HOMES

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a supplementary question on the same subject to the Minister of National Health and Welfare.

In releasing a report yesterday, the U.S. Surgeon General indicated that the highest levels of radon were found in the States of Minnesota and North Dakota. He went on to say the same conditions would prevail in those parts of Canada just north of those states, particularly in Manitoba, in the Red River Valley and the city of Winnipeg. He went on to suggest that it might be wise for us to undertake comprehensive testing of all homes in that area.

I ask the Minister why it is that since 1986 we have known that 40 per cent of the homes in Winnipeg have been way above even the highest levels reported in the U.S. study, yet we have undertaken no public education, no comprehensive testing, and no establishing of national standards to deal with a serious health problem, not just for the residents of Winnipeg but for the entire country?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member is referring to the report from the Environmental Protection Agency respecting radon gas, and the report released in the U.S. yesterday. I take those reports seriously and I would indicate to him that I have further checked with departmental officials today to further establish the regulations that would be needed respecting radon. I should point out as well that work has been done. When he says that possibly the highest levels of radon exist in homes in Winnipeg and the Red River Valley, that is correct, and that is the reason why this scientific survey has been going on, both as to the extent of the gas and the recommendations that should come from that type of study.

Additionally, on October 12 a federal-provincial meeting on occupational health and safety is taking place. This has been put on the agenda and I have indicated to my officials that I want recommendations as to what position should be taken.

I would also say to the Hon. Member that when the EPA comes forward with the study it did yesterday, it has to have State support for radon work. Additionally, I should point out that there are in fact four standards relating to picocuries which the U.S. uses.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER ISSUE HEALTH ADVISORY WARNING

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to note that the Minister of National Health and Welfare takes the matter seriously. However, I point out to him that the study into a correlation between lung cancer and radon in the city of Winnipeg will not be completed for another two years. In the meantime the conditions described in the U.S. Surgeon General's report will prevail and there may be a serious health risk right across the country.

In light of the findings by the U.S. Surgeon General would it not be proper for the Minister's Department to issue a health advisory, similar to that which U.S. officials issued yesterday, warning all provincial and municipal officials about the dangers and indicating that comprehensive testing should be a requirement in all areas across the country which might have a potential for the kind of serious high level radon pollution which is affecting the city of Winnipeg? We share the same province, and I think it would be advisable to issue that advisory particularly for the city of Winnipeg.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I am obviously going to take that recommendation seriously. It is for that reason that I said that after the October 12 meeting I want a very clear recommendation from scientists and officials as to what the approach should be.

I am not trying to deprecate the work of either the EPA or the report. The Government has previously done studies through CMHC. While there is a question about the linkage between radon gas and lung cancer, that is not the point of contention for this Minister of Health. I am interested in the best position to take with regard to whether testing should take place and a health advisory should be issued. That must be based on scientific fact.

The Member says that there should be information provided to the public. I have further instructed the Department, under what we refer to as issues papers, that information regarding radon and its control is to be published and released to the public by the Department in very short order.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

REQUEST THAT DEPARTMENTS CARRY OUT ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT STUDIES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is for either the Prime Minister or the Minister of the Environment. The Prime Minister recently expressed concern about a national vision on the environment. At present no federal Department is legislatively required to have an environmental impact study done in terms of the consequences of major decisions.

The Federal Environment Review Office, an agency of the federal Government, earlier this year recommended to the Government that it act to change the Canadian law and make it mandatory that environmental impact studies be done automatically according to law.

Given this expressed concern about the environment, why was this legislative requirement not included in the Environmental Protection Act when it was drafted and put into place in June?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the NDP is obviously not speaking to the environment critic for the NDP. When I appeared before the legislative committee on the Canadian Environmental Protection Act, although I do acknowledge that she was rarely there, I made the point that I thought it vital that we have two different but parallel consultation processes; one leading up to the Canadian Environmental Protection Act itself, focusing on a major reform of chemicals legislation in the country, and a separate one on FEARO, the process having to do with federal environmental assessments and reviews.

The public consultation on FEARO has now been completed. I have in my office the report of the broadly-based group. The group recommended that the federal environmental assessment review process be legislated. I am on record as favouring that principle. The issue is now before the Cabinet and is being discussed and resolved. I think that, in very short order, there will an announcement one way or the other. It would be premature for me to say what the decision of Cabinet will be on the substantive question, but I am personally on record as favouring a legislative approach.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, I am sure the people of Canada will find it very reassuring that the Minister is on record. They want to see law passed by the Parliament of Canada, not another promise.

GOVERNMENT RECORD

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, maybe the Prime Minister will actually answer the question. He made the commitment to a new environmental vision being needed for Canada, with which most Canadians would agree. His Government has cut more than 400 people from the Department since he was elected. It has cut back on research on PCBs and ignored the recommendation of the Law Reform Commission to put environmental matters into the Criminal Code. It ignored another commission which the Minister has just acknowledged today.

Considering all of that, why should the people of Canada believe the Government is serious and is not just indulging in pre-election posturing?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as the Leader of the NDP used some rhetoric to justify the conclusion at which he arrived, perhaps he would also be interested in some matters of which he has personal knowledge as a Member of this House.

In less than four years the Government and the House have created the Canadian Environmental Protection Act, the strongest piece of environmental protection legislation passed by the federal Parliament. The International Protocol on Ozone, the Montreal Protocol, was ratified. We have advanced by two years the regulations for phasing out lead in gasoline.

We updated the National Parks Act for the first time in a decade. We have created parks on Ellesmere Island, the Bruce Peninsula, the Pacific Rim, and South Moresby. We are going to create a marine park on the Saguenay River. We have moved to begin implementing the Canada-U.S. Agreement on the North American Water-Fowl Management Plan. We have taken action with the provincial Governments, to which the Leader of the Opposition is apparently opposed, to clean up areas such as the St. Lawrence River and Halifax Harbour.

The Leader of the New Democratic Party asks why we plan to do more on the environment. Because we already have a record of very substantial accomplishment to protect the environment in Canada.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, there is not a serious environmental group in the country who will believe what the Prime Minister says.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

DESTRUCTION OF PCBS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask the Prime Minister or the Minister a question.

The provincial and federal Ministers discussed the problem of PCBs last week, but they did not decide on a date for the elimination of PCBs in Canada. At the same time, although they mentioned costs of $500 million to solve this problem, the federal Government did not offer any money.

The question is very simple: Why not set a date for the destruction of all PCBs in Canada and why not offer federal money to solve this problem?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think that the Minister answered this question quite specifically yesterday, and today we have provided some answers to serious environmental protection questions.

But right at the beginning, the Leader of the New Democratic Party told us, perhaps in jest, but he said in passing:

[English]

—that there is not an environmental group that would take the Government seriously on that. I point out to my hon. friend that the Minister of the Environment was honoured by the Sierra Club as the most outstanding public official on the protection of the environment.

Ms. Copps: Did they pay him $10,000?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

TRANSPORT

CLOSURE OF TRUCKING COMPANY—APPLICATION OF CANADA LABOUR CODE

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Labour. Yesterday the Minister stated that he is having his officials look into the closure of Transportation Route Canada to assure that there are no abuses of the Canada Labour Code. Yet on December 16, last year, I wrote to the Minister and stated that I believed he was in violation of the Canada Labour Code with respect to lay-offs by Route Canada the month before, last November, and that the workers across Canada, including those my constituency, were unemployed because of the arbitrary acts of the Government and Canadian National. The Minister did nothing then. How can we believe now that he will do something to help these laid-off workers?

Hon. Pierre H. Cadieux (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, obviously I will look at that letter again because I do not have it with me today. I will be able, I am sure, to let my hon. colleague know that my officials most probably looked it up and there were probably no difficulties at that time.

Ms. Copps: Right. Several thousand people out of work.

Mr. Cadieux: With respect to the situation today, if the Hon. Member for Hamilton East is at all interested in this serious problem, as I indicated yesterday Labour Canada officials are looking into the books of the company and will make an audit and make sure that all provisions of the Canada Labour Code have been respected.

Mr. MacLellan: I have a copy of the letter that I can give to the Minister today, as well as a copy of the 10-page memo I sent him to back up the allegations I made.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT ASSIST LAID-OFF WORKERS

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, the Minister is obviously stalling until after the election. That will not wash. The workers are unemployed. What will the Government do to help these laid-off workers? After all, it has given millions of dollars to its friends in big business. It is time now to help these laid-off workers.

Hon. Pierre H. Cadieux (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, as I said, I think we are dealing with a very serious situation. It is not because my colleague sends me a 10-page memo or 20-page memo that makes the facts contained in it true or accurate. I will respond on that particular situation to my hon. colleague.

With respect to the situation today, we have not yet received any group termination notices, but our officials are doing an audit in order to make sure that the Canada Labour Code provisions are respected.

ROLE OF GOVERNMENT

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, my question which deals with the same topic is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Does the Government not feel it has a moral obligation to the laid-off workers and the private contractors who are losing their jobs as a result of the privatization move of the Government? It has allowed all that asset stripping of CN Route to take place. The company that is doing it is making a profit and there is no protection for those workers or those private contractors. What is the role of the Government?

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, when Canadian National sold CN Route in 1986, there were two possible options. Canadian National was losing $70 million. One option was to close down the business; the other was to sell it, which CN did. What my colleague seems to be suggesting is that CN should then have shut down the business and laid off 2,700 workers.

[English]

REQUESTS FOR MEETINGS WITH MINISTRY

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, the Government has known for months that there was asset stripping. The Minister of Labour received letters in August asking for an immediate meeting about this situation. The Prime Minister has received letters asking for meetings about this. Why did the Government not meet with the people concerned and try to protect their interests? Why has there been a complete failure to represent the many as it protects the few?

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I must remind my colleague that Routes Canada is a private company that was sold in a proper, legal way by Canadian National and for this reason, the present operations of the company . . .

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Bouchard: Mr. Speaker, everyone knows the sympathy New Democrats have for workers and we understand why!

So I would simply say this: The company was sold properly. Routes Canada is a private company and until further notice, to my knowledge, based on the published documents, no liquidation or bankruptcy notice was issued. I would ask my colleague to wait and see what happens before making assumptions, probably for purely electoral purposes again!

TAX REFORM

ACCESS TO PROPERTY OWNERSHIP—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance or, in his absence, to the Prime Minister or another Minister. This morning we heard that the Association provinciale des constructeurs d'habitations du Québec had prepared a study of the impact of Phase II of the Government's tax reform and that it had reached the conclusion that after Phase II, a new home would cost the prospective home owner $8,000 more.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister of Finance or his substitute a question: Is this the kind of surprise the Minister has for us in Phase II of his tax reform, and why isn't the Government honest enough to stop this exercise in hypocrisy that will cost every couple that wants to buy a new home $8,000 more, once the tax reform has been implemented?

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, the impact of sales tax reform is impossible to calculate at the present time because we have yet to determine the base and the rate. This means the concerns expressed by the Association provinciale des construteurs d'habitations du Québec are premature to say the least.

TAX ON HOUSES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Finance said the same thing when we started to talk about the tax on food, and he finally had to reverse his decision. We know that this particular tax will also have an impact on tenants, because according to the Canadian association and also according to Clayton Research, once Phase II of the tax reform is implemented, it will cost tenants $65 more per month per unit. What I want to ask the Minister of Finance is this: could he give the House the assurance that there are no plans for a tax that would have the effect of restricting the right to housing or the right to own property? And will the Government ensure that there will be no tax on homes for couples and families?

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I would like to repeat what the Minister of Finance said in Regina on September 6. When the details of the new system are worked out, and there are still many details to be dealt with, we will see whether there is any danger that the system will stand in the way of affordable housing. If that is the case, we will do what is necessary to deal with the problem, either by providing direct assistance to private citizens and to families, or by changing the way the tax is implemented in this important sector. These measures will be taken in the spirit of consultation I just described.

TRADE

ALLEGED VIOLATION OF FREE TRADE AGREEMENT BY AMERICANS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for International Trade. The Secretary knows perfectly well that the House of Representatives and the U.S. Senate have just passed a bill that violates the trade agreement. The bill restricts imports of textiles, clothing and shoes, without the promised exemptions for Canada. Has the Government sent a protest note to the U.S. Government, since this measure calls into question U.S. support for the trade agreement with the United States? If so, what answer did it get? If not, why has the Government failed to do anything?

[English]

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the short answer is yes. The Canadian Government made very strong representations on the proposed legislation.

Suggestions that they are on the point of enacting this Bill are a little misleading and alarmist. Let me inform the Hon. Member that the Senate and the House of Representatives have not settled their differences on the Bill. In any event, if he looks at the votes that were taken there they cannot override a veto and the President has made the commitment that he would veto that particular Bill.

CANADIAN TEXTILE FIRMS

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, does the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary not consider that the fact that the majority of the American Congress voting in plain defiance of the so-called free trade agreement adds to the pressure on Canadian textile firms to shut down in Canada and relocate in the American south?

• (1450)

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, just the opposite. Canadian textile firms and Canadian garment workers are going to expand and grow because of the free trade agreement. We feel the textile Bill in the United States is in opposition to the free trade agreement. That is why the administration has made a commitment. Mr. Yeutter has made it clear, and the President has stated that he will veto this Bill. The Senate and the Congress will not have the votes to defeat that veto.

HOUSING

METROPOLITAN TORONTO—FEDERAL RESPONSIBILITY

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister responsible for housing I address my question to the Prime Minister.

The Prime Minister surely knows that Metro Toronto is in the middle of an unprecedented housing crisis in part because his Government has betrayed the traditional federal role in a national housing policy. During the last four years we have had to endure a reduction in federal non-profit housing; CMHC subsidies have fallen dramatically; federal capital funding has been cut by 61 per cent; federal grants for rehabilitation of residences has been cut by 51 per cent; and the home ownership program for first-time home buyers has been completely eliminated.

Why has the federal Government completely abdicated its responsibilities in the area of housing? Will it now, without waiting for an election call, re-establish an active federal presence in housing so that this dangerous trend in Metro Toronto, where the average home price is approaching $230,000, can be quickly reversed?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am surprised to hear my hon. friend with a litany of complaints like that when he has forgotten that the key impulsion to new housing starts in Canada is precisely what this Government has delivered, namely, lower interest rates. Lower interest rates have resulted in a record number of housing starts in the last year. The exact number is somewhere in the neighbourhood of some 200,000, which is the highest it has been in about a decade.

I think that while there is clearly overheating in the housing market because of the powerful prosperity in southern Ontario, in particular in Toronto—something about which we are concerned and very conscious of—the Government will be working with the Government of Ontario to alleviate that concern to the extent humanly possible. I think my hon. friend would agree that in terms of housing in Canada there has been enormous progress under this Government in the last four years.

FEDERAL LAND HOLDINGS

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, if the Prime Minister ever visits Toronto—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Marchi: —he will understand that there is not a crisis in housing starts, there is a crisis in affordable units. Toronto is becoming a playground for the well-to-do.

I ask the Prime Minister again, given that the federal Government can also ease this crisis of affordability by utilizing its surplus land holdings in Metro, which are extensive, for the purpose of affordable housing construction, why has the Government refused to commit surplus federal real estate for constructing affordable housing rather than fuelling land speculation by selling these lands that are already owned by the taxpayers to the highest bidder?

Will the Prime Minister make the undertaking now that such federal lands will be made available immediately for some badly needed housing for working and middle-income Canadians on a first priority basis, rather than simply building luxury homes?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I give this information to my hon. friend for his consideration. Housing starts in July, 1988, were at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 209,000, up 48 per cent since the election of 1984.

Ms. Copps: He said affordable housing.

Mr. Mulroney: Housing starts last year were at their highest level in Canada since 1977.

Mr. Marchi: So are the prices.

Mr. Mulroney: I have already discussed the concern of the Government in regard to affordable housing and our intention to co-operate very fully with the Government of Ontario, the City of Toronto, and the authorities of Metropolitan Toronto in regard to that. This has been the object of strong discussions between us. Hopefully, some important progress will be made.

My hon. friend asks me to take note of this when I visit Toronto. I was in Toronto only a few days ago. However, I was also in Toronto a few years ago when interest rates were at 24 per cent and no houses were being built. We can now see the prosperity in Toronto.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

SASKATCHEWAN DAM PROJECT—WATER QUALITY STANDARDS

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Minister of the Environment. I have in my possession a document entitled: "Final Draft Agreement Between the United States of America and Canada for Water-Supply and Flood Control in the Souris River Basin". This agreement is for 100 years whereas the Minister of the Environment has signed an agreement and a licence with the Province of Saskatchewan for only 50 years. More disturbing, the agreement talks about water quality objectives as being unbinding.

My question to the Minister is this. Who is responsible for setting the standards of water quality? Who will enforce those standards?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, it would take an entire Question Period to deal with the falsehoods surrounding the premises of the question.

Let me tell you, Mr. Speaker, and the House that I have in hand the 13 conditions, the stringent environmental conditions, that were associated with the permit under the International River Improvements Act in connection with the Rafferty Dam. The Director General for Inland Waters told me at noon hour—and he is the foremost hydrologist in the Government of Canada—that the stringency of these environmental conditions connected with the permit is the toughest in the history of Canada.

SCHEDULED AMOUNT OF DAMAGE PAYMENT

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a supplementary question. The fact remains that in this draft agreement which the Minister has not repudiated or disowned all that is talked about is non-binding standards.

Is the Minister also aware that in Article 8 of this draft agreement with respect to compensation for the Province of Manitoba it states that the Department of the Army shall pay the Province of Manitoba the sum of $204,000 as full and complete compensation for any and all damages that might occur in Manitoba? I ask you, Mr. Speaker, and I ask the Minister, is he willing to say here and now that he will not have anything to do with that agreement that stipulates a paltry sum of $204,000 for any and all damages for a dam that is supposed to last for 100 years, and a 50-year permit that he signed?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member refers to the unbinding—is that the word he used?

Some Hon. Members: Non-binding.

Mr. McMillan: Let me tell you, Mr. Speaker, the licence with the 13 conditions states that the licencee shall not divert water from outside the Souris River drainage basin if such diverted waters would increase the annual flow of the Souris River at the international boundary above that which would have occurred in a state of nature.

That is one of the 13 very stringent conditions attached to the permit. The Minister of the Environment, under the International River Improvements Act, has the full authority to revoke the permit if any one of those conditions is not met, and to bring the project itself to a sudden end in that eventuality.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

ALLEGED CLOSING OF POST OFFICES IN LÉVIS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): My question is directed to the Minister responsible for the Canada Post Corporation. For a few days now some people in my riding have been claiming that Canada Post officials have decided to close certain post offices, including one on Commerciale Street in Lévis and one on Bélair Street. I want to know if Canada Post did decide to close post offices in my riding.

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I can assure the Hon. Member that no change nor any closing is planned which would lead to reduced services or fewer post offices in his community.

AGRICULTURE

ONTARIO FARMERS AFFECTED BY DROUGHT—GOVERNMENT ASSISTANCE

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Agriculture. In early July, after a meeting of the federal-provincial Agriculture Ministers, the Minister of Agriculture promised that he would be providing assistance to Ontario agriculture producers who suffered from the drought in the early spring months and during the summer, on an equitable and fair basis similar to what had been provided in western Canada, which amounted to some $150 million from the two levels of government.

Can the Minister say when that promise will be kept? The Ontario producers estimate their losses at over $750 million. When will that promise to give immediate and urgent aid to those producers be kept?

Hon. Pierre Blais (Minister of State (Agriculture)): Mr. Speaker, I can tell the Hon. Member that, as we said this summer, we are following the situation very closely, not only in the West but in Ontario and in Québec. We will not know the result of the situation until after the harvest but we are following it very closely. My colleague, the Minister of Agriculture, and I will be able to announce our position in a few weeks.

CROP INSURANCE PROGRAM

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out to the Minister that those producers have bank commitments to meet. In some cases their crops are 60 per cent lost. I think it is urgent that the Minister act.

Two weeks ago representatives of 12 farm organizations, representing 60,000 producers, called on the Minister to bring in amendments to the Crop Insurance Program so that when disasters such as this occur in the future there will be adequate coverage from the Crop Insurance Program.

Can the Minister advise when those changes and amendments will be made to the Crop Insurance Program in order that there can be adequate coverage in the future?

Hon. Pierre Blais (Minister of State (Agriculture)): Mr. Speaker, my hon. colleague knows that we have been working on the crop insurance situation for a while. We are negotiating with all the provinces, and that is very important. We do not always receive collaboration from all our counterparts at the provincial level.

I wish to assure the Hon. Member that we are taking the situation under consideration. For those farmers, particularly in Ontario, who have some problems with their crops this year, we will follow what we said at the end of July. We will stand up for the farmers, as we have done for the last four years. That was never done before for the farmers.

SOCIAL WELFARE

TREATMENT OF STUDENT LOANS AS REVENUE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Does the Minister know that, since August 11, the New Brunswick Government considers that student loans are an income? This is why the New Brunswick Government has reduced social welfare payments to men and women attending university because this is required under regulations concerning the Canada Assistance Plan. Does the Minister agree with that?

[English]

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member should be aware that under the Canada Assistance Plan the federal Government pays 50 per cent on an expended cost basis for costs eligible under the Canada Assistance Plan. The rates are subject to provincial determination.

I wish to remind the Hon. Member that when changes were made here to the Canada Pension Plan, and particularly the disability provisions of that plan, this Government put it on the record very clearly that it wanted to see a pass-through for those types of increases that came through here in a legislative form and that the disabled, for example, would have those benefits.

I would suggest to the Hon. Member that the principle, just as we applied it to Bill C-116 from a federal point of view, is that if a province increases those rates the federal Government will pay its share of the 50 per cent under the CAP.

FEDERAL POLICY

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I think there has been a misapprehension on the part of the Minister. The question has to do with the fact that mothers and single parents wishing to go to university and who have Canada Student Loans are having those student loans counted as income for the purpose of eligibility for welfare assistance, and welfare assistance payments are being cut.

Does the Government approve of a situation where the very people we would like to see get off welfare are being denied, by the action of the provincial Government, an opportunity to do so by attending university through the help of Canada Student Loans?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): No, Mr. Speaker, I was not labouring under any misconception. The point I wanted to make to the Member was exactly the position that we held with respect to pass-through. I am saying to the Hon. Member that it is for the province to determine what is used for the purposes of calculation of social benefits.

I also suggest to the Hon. Member that what he should keep in mind is that it was this Government and this Minister, after 13 years of discussion prior to the Government coming into office, that wanted to have a change in the Canada Assistance Plan relating both to payments that were made to people who were eligible for upgrading, for example, under UIC, and under CIC, as well as social benefits that they were receiving, and that if they got partial or part-time work as they improved themselves they would not immediately lose dollar for dollar assistance through welfare.

That principle has been one that has guided us for four years. If the provinces want to make changes as to the rates, obviously we will pay our 50 per cent.

Mr. Speaker: This will be the last question in Question Period.

PROVINCIAL AFFAIRS

ONTARIO—TEMAGAMI LAND CLAIM

Mr. John A. MacDougall (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. As the Minister is no doubt aware, recently there has been a lot of concern in northern Ontario over the progress of the settlement of the Temagami land claim, especially among the local residents whose jobs, future, and livelihood are wrapped up in the Temagami wilderness controversy.

Could the Minister inform the House whether the federal Government has played any part in the settlement process? Could the Minister also indicate whether the federal Government has been informed by provincial counterparts as to progress on settlement of this claim?

Hon. Bill McKnight (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development and Minister of Western Diversification): Mr. Speaker, as I am sure the Hon. Member is aware, for over 100 years the Temagami Band has been attempting to make a treaty with the Government of Ontario.

The Government of Canada is not directly involved in the band's claim. We have been supportive of the band's appeal to the Supreme Court of Ontario by providing $400,000 in costs for the band to make the appeal, but the Government of Canada is not directly involved.

As to whether we have had any discussions with my provincial counterparts, Mr. Speaker, not in recent months have I had any contact whatsoever with any of my colleagues in the Government of Ontario.

POINT OF ORDER

NEW HOUSE OF COMMONS SEATING PLAN

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Recently there have been rumours that there has been some confusion within the ranks of the Liberal Party. I have in front of me the new seating plan for the House of Commons. It indicates by the line between the Liberal and the Conservative Party Members that the Members for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East (Mr. Allmand), Davenport (Mr. Caccia), Bourassa (Mr. Rossi), and Saint-Léonard—Anjou (Mr. Gagliano), have joined the Conservative Party. I wonder if there has been any communication to the Speaker that would justify this new seating plan.

Mr. Speaker: I want to assure the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy), and other Hon. Members, that I see no distinction at all.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

• (1510)

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, the New Democrats have their own copies of everything. I have a copy of the seating plan of this House, which indicates very clearly that the Members that they just referred to, Mr. Allmand, Mr. Rossi, and all these other people, are indeed members of this caucus and are seated in their appropriate places.

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I would just like to confirm what we have heard from our colleague from the Official Opposition. The seating plan on the Conservative side does have the distinction between the Conservatives and the Liberals. What bothers us on this side of the House is that there is a line between the NDP and the Liberals. That probably does not belong.

EXTERNAL AID

DAMAGE CAUSED BY HURRICANE GILBERT IN THE CARIBBEANS—CANADA'S RESPONSE

Hon. Monique Landry (Minister for External Relations): Mr. Speaker, speaking on behalf of the Government of Canada and on my own behalf and also on behalf of the Canadian people, I would like to express our heartfelt sympathy with the suffering caused by Hurricane Gilbert in the Caribbean, and especially in Jamaica.

I want to apologize to my colleagues and opposition critics for not having distributed the text of my statement earlier, but until the very last minute I expected to receive additional information for my statement and that is what caused the delay.

Hon. Members and Canadians have been able to ascertain from initial reports the devastation caused by this hurricane in Jamaica as well as in several other countries and territories in the Caribbean. The Government, through the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), and the people of Canada have already indicated they are prepared to play an active and effective role in helping to meet the basic needs of the people of Jamaica, and responding to the future priorities of the Government of that country for recovery and reconstruction.

[English]

However, Mr. Speaker, there is a serious lack of detailed information about the status of Canadians in Jamaica; the extent and nature of damage and Jamaica's needs; and about the friends and relatives of Canadians living on the island. In these circumstances we have decided on a phased approach to enable the people and Government of Canada to make an appropriate, prompt, and effective response to this tragedy.

Canada and Jamaica have shared a special relationship for many years. The Canadian response to the present tragedy takes this multi-faceted relationship into account.

Phase one consists of the following humanitarian, consular and administrative elements. The first task is to reactivate the Canadian High Commission in Kingston, Jamaica, to enable it to serve as our eyes and ears in Jamaica. As Members may have heard, the High Commission was seriously damaged by the hurricane, and we still have no direct communication links with it. This will involve dispatch of a satellite telecommunication unit and communications personnel. This will be done in co-operation with the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Beatty), who has agreed to send a DND aircraft, which will also include additional consular personnel to be able to provide consular services to Canadians in Jamaica and to help respond to queries of concerned friends and relatives in Canada.

[Translation]

Our second task will be to provide emergency humanitarian aid in order to meet the most pressing needs of the people of Jamaica. Our country will raise the Canada fund to one million dollars, an increase of $600,000. This fund, which is supposed to help meet the socio-economic needs of the people of Jamaica, is administered by the Office of the High Commissioner in Kingston.

I am also pleased to announce that Canada will give international humanitarian aid organizations a cash contribution of one million dollars that will be used immediately to meet the needs of the Jamaican people. An additional one million dollars will be allocated to the relief fund set up by the Office of the High Commissioner of Jamaica in Canada, subject to matching. In fact, Canada will match contributions made by Jamaican and Canadian communities in Canada and credited to the High Commissioner's relief fund.

[English]

The third element in Canada's humanitarian response will be our readiness to send a team of Canadians to Jamaica to work closely with the Jamaican Government and to assist in meeting emergency needs and to help assess additional short term needs and Canada's capacity to respond.

[Translation]

Phase II of Canada's response will also consist in close co-operation with the government of Jamaica in order to assess long-term requirements for reconstruction and recovery. During the current financial year, Canada is prepared to reallocate $4 million in the form of government-to-government assistance, as soon as it has further information on Jamaica's priority development needs. Canada will of course see to it that its contribution will, to every possible extent, be coordinated with that of other industrialized and developing countries.

[English]

As an initial step in this longer term phase I have asked the Vice President of CIDA's America's Branch to visit Jamaica as soon as possible for discussions with senior Jamaican officials. His visit will be followed up by other planning missions as appropriate.

[Translation]

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I would again like to express my heartfelt sympathy to the people and the government of Jamaica after the disastrous impact of Hurricane Gilbert. Canadians from all walks of life have responded consistently and with understanding to the serious problems caused by this disaster. Together, with our Commonwealth partners and other nations, we will help Jamaica recover from this tragedy.

[English]

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton—Lawrence): Mr. Speaker, I wish to express my appreciation to the Minister for having sent to me a copy of her statement. I was happy both to read and to see her commitment to bringing additional financial aid to the people of Jamaica.

The most recent information that I have is that the population of Jamaica, which numbers, I understand, some 2.8 million, has suffered a tremendous amount of damage in terms of the fact that some .5 million people are homeless. This means that one out of six or even one out of five people in Jamaica is without a home. This means that there was tremendous destruction of some 100,000 homes, which we understand are badly damaged. These are the most recent reports that have come to my attention.

I have also learned that Mr. Edward Seaga, the Prime Minister of Jamaica, has indicated that the situation is very grave, that there are no telephones, in effect, operating, that 95 per cent of the people are living without electricity, that the sugar cane, banana and citrus crops have been totally devastated, and that they have declared in the United States—and we have, too, I trust—that that area is a disaster area.

I also understand that there are some 500 Canadians who are living and working there, some at the Bauxite Mining Plant and some at the Alcan Aluminum Plant, and I trust efforts are being made by the Government to assess their situation urgently.

We must address this issue of emergency as our first priority. But it is too human and too common for us to forget the ongoing needs of the people, after the disastrous storm moves on and media coverage stops, and other problems and other disasters in other parts of the world occur.

We must make sure that we keep this issue of Jamaica alive while showing concern for others in the Cayman Islands and in other islands in the Caribbean area, including Mexico, which is about to suffer devastation as well. What other human tragedies occur, of course, must receive our attention, but a special command post, I suggest, should be set up by our Government for aid to Jamaica in order to deal on an ongoing basis with the long-range economic and human disaster. Some of the steps announced by the Minister indicate a desire to be helpful. I hope that a special command post will be established to deal with this specific crisis and this ongoing tragedy.

On a personal note, there are hundreds of people from Jamaica in my congregation of St. Hilda's Church in Toronto, thousands of people in my riding and hundreds of thousands in Toronto, who are of Jamaican origin. They are no doubt pleased to know that Canada and Canadians join them in wishing to help in this urgent and tragic situation. The Government and the people of Jamaica have already declared their own intention to face and meet this challenge alone, if necessary, but they are calling on their friends to join them.

We call upon our Government to carry on, after the attention moves away, extra long-range assistance and to provide regular reports from the Department of External Affairs on the problems in Jamaica and the efforts Canada is making on its behalf. It should not be just a passing matter. What is happening there should be reported from time to time in a regular way.

I am sure I reflect not only the sentiments of the Liberal caucus but the feeling of all Canadians when I express our anguish and sympathy and concern for the people of Jamaica, wherever they are, and to the anxious relatives and friends of Jamaican extraction, especially to our Canadian population of Jamaican origin.

What I have said about Jamaica, I feel should also apply to the Cayman Islands and to other areas which have been devastated and which have received less publicity. I trust our Department of External Affairs will commit itself to monitoring those problems and needs with the same dedication.

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the New Democratic Party, and Canadians generally, I want to join the Minister in expressing our sympathy and concern for the peoples of the Caribbean, particularly those people of Jamaica who have been devastated by Hurricane Gilbert. As has been pointed out, Hurricane Gilbert is the most devastating storm we have seen in this century. The losses are incalculable. We do not yet know the extent of loss in terms of life or in terms of goods and property. As the Minister noted, that problem extends even to our own High Commission in Jamaica.

We need to reflect on what this means for ordinary people in Jamaica who have seen the loss of everything for which they have worked.

We need to remember that Jamaica has not only been buffeted by Hurricane Gilbert but it has been at the centre of the storm on world's debt. It has been buffeted in recent years by the International Monetary Fund and by its policies. We are talking about a Government and a people who have very little latitude to deal with their own problems. They have very little in the way of resources because in effect that country has been bled dry by the policies of the IMF. We need to keep that in mind as we think of this generous response of the Canadian people. This response of the Canadian people to a crisis such as a hurricane is generous, but we also have to remember that Canadians, as part of the IMF, have been part of the problem for a country like Jamaica.

I am sure that all Canadians will welcome the initiative of the Canadian Government to help the people who are most affected in sending money and in attempts to trace the relatives of Canadian immigrants who still live in Jamaica and, indeed, visitors, because there are many Canadians who visit Jamaica on a regular basis.

I think the Government's decision to send a task force to assess the damage is very important because, as the Minister pointed out, this is an emergency that has come upon us suddenly. We have not had time to prepare. The Minister pointed out that she did not even have time to give the kind of notice to opposition Members she would have liked to have given with respect to her statement, and we can understand that. There was a need for emergency action in response to something no one could have foreseen.

I am very pleased the Government is taking the initiative to match the contributions individual Canadians and Canadian organizations will be making. I hope it will also play some kind of co-ordinating role to help encourage Canadians to give. I was pleased to see there is no ceiling placed on this matching limit. I hope the Government is not going to impose a ceiling later on as it did with the matching contributions to relief in Ethiopia three years ago.

The Minister and my colleague in the Liberal Party have pointed out that there is a long and historic tie between our two nations. This has been deepened by extensive immigration from Jamaica to Canada in the last few decades. I think that indicates that this Government must continue to give the Jamaican situation very high priority. Jamaica is this week's news. Hurricane Gilbert is this week's news. But all of us know that this week's news has a way of passing into yesterday's rather dry history. What we need to emphasize in this House today is the need for the Canadian Government, CIDA and the Department of External Affairs, to continue to watch over this situation and ensure our response in terms of personnel and money is commensurate with the situation. We do not yet know what the total situation is, but as the facts become more available, Canadians want to be sure that the Government will be responding in a way that is appropriate to the real needs of the Jamaican people, and to ensure also that the money goes where it is most needed, to the poorest of the poor.

Again, I want to express our sympathy and support for the people of Jamaica and our support for every effort the Canadian Government will be making to help.

CANADA-ALASKA INTERNATIONAL BOUNDARY ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-320, an Act respecting the international boundary between Canada and the United States of Alaska.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the Member have leave to introduce the Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to put a few brief remarks on the record with respect to the introduction of the Act respecting the international boundary between Canada and the State of Alaska. What this Bill does is to settle once, finally, and for all, the boundary between Canada and the United States, what is known as Dixon entrance, the A-B line or 54-40. This, of course, is entrenched in the 1825 treaty. The 1867 treaty of purchase of the State of Alaska by the United States from Imperial Russia was finally settled in 1903 by an international tribunal in a unanimous vote of the British delegation, the Canadian delegation and the American delegation, and it is perhaps timely that it is being introduced today in that our own Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) is meeting with George Shultz in Washington at this very moment.

• (1530)

This is one of the agenda items being discussed between the Secretary of State for External Affairs and Mr. Shultz. I think perhaps Hon. Members might want to send good wishes in the hopes that the Secretary of State for External Affairs keeps a strong spine and does not allow any consideration of negotiations on the boundary to be undertaken, as Mr. Shultz is requesting the appointment of Mr. Derwinski from the United States—

Mr. Prud'homme: A great friend of mine.

Mr. Fulton: —and a Canadian to negotiate the reduction of the size of Canada in relation to the A-B line.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

CRIMINAL CODE

MEASURE TO AMEND

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-321, an Act to amend the Criminal Code (Social Insurance Number).

Mr. Speaker: Shall the Hon. Member have leave to introduce the Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Kaplan: Mr. Speaker, when the social insurance number was first introduced, there was a fear that it was the thin edge of the wedge and that eventually every Canadian would be identified by a number for all purposes. I discovered some time ago that when one applies for a library card in one of the municipalities around Toronto, one has to give the library one's social insurance number. This is going much too far, and I have introduced an amendment to the Criminal Code that prohibits the requirement of a person to give his or her social insurance number except for the original purpose for which social insurance numbers were introduced. I commend this measure to the House.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC SERVICE EMPLOYMENT ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-322, an Act to amend the Public Service Employment Act (staff of Members of the House of Commons).

Mr. Speaker: Shall the Hon. Member have leave to introduce the Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Young: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this Bill is to provide equitable treatment to the staff of Members of the House of Commons, including the staff of the Speaker of the House of Commons, when employment is lost as a result of Members ceasing to be Members, by according them the same priority to be appointed to the Public Service that employees in the following offices now enjoy: the office of a Minister, the office of the Leader of the Opposition, the office of the Leader of the Government in the Senate, and the office of the Leader of the Opposition in the Senate.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

FOOD AND DRUGS ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

Mr. Robert Toupin (Terrebonne) asked for leave to introduce Bill C-323, "An Act to amend the Food and Drugs Act (food irradiation)".

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to grant the Hon. Member leave to present the Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Toupin: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this Bill to amend the Food and Drugs Act which I am tabling in this House is to forbid the sale of irradiated food unless it bears a label stating that the food was irradiated.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

Mr. Speaker: When shall this Bill be read the second time? At the next sitting of the House?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

FRUIT, VEGETABLES AND HONEY ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-324, an Act to amend the Fruit, Vegetables and Honey Act (Country of Origin).

Mr. Speaker: Shall the Hon. Member have leave to introduce the Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Manly: Mr. Speaker, Canadians who are concerned about apartheid in South Africa would not want unwittingly to support the economy of South Africa by buying oranges from that country. Canadians who are concerned about human rights would not want to buy fruit or vegetables from Chile. Canadians who are concerned about the environment or about labour conditions would not want to purchase California grapes. Therefore, the purpose of this Bill is to require that fruit and vegetables sold in Canada shall be clearly marked or have close to them a sign indicating the country of origin of those fruits and vegetables.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

CANADA SHIPPING ACT

Ms. Marion Dewar (Hamilton Mountain) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-325, an Act to amend the Canada Shipping Act (attachment and assignment of wages).

Mr. Speaker: Shall the Hon. Member have leave to introduce the Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Ms. Dewar: Mr. Speaker, it is a privilege to be able to introduce this Private Members' Bill to repeal Section 205 of the Canada Shipping Act, a section that exempts seamen's wages from court attachments. A constituent brought to my attention this section of the Act in connection with a single mother who was unable to collect custody and child support payments from her ex-husband because his employment was as a cook on a merchant ship. Section 205 of the Canada Shipping Act conveniently sheltered the ex-husband from court-enforced alimony and child support payments.

I find it intolerable that this section of the Act has been in place since 1873 when the Act was known as the Seamen's Act. It was overlooked when statutes were revised in 1906, 1927 and 1934. It is clearly time that we stopped exempting seamen from their legal family obligations and brought the Canada Shipping Act into line with other Acts.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

PETITIONS

PROTECTION OF ROUGE RIVER VALLEY WILDERNESS AREA

Mrs. Pauline Browes (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to present to the House of Commons a petition entitled "Help Save the Rouge". There are two petitions here signed by residents of Scarborough, Metro Toronto and surrounding regions. The petitioners state that the Rouge River Valley in Scarborough, a part of Metro Toronto, is a unique and precious natural area and that protecting the endangered wildlife and wilderness areas is in the national interest. They join with the Scarborough City Council, the federal Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan), the Save the Rouge Valley System, which consists of thousands of volunteers, and the Coalition of Scarborough Community Associations in support of saving the Rouge Valley as a park. This petition calls on Parliament to work with the Government of Ontario to establish the Rouge River Valley as a Canadian heritage land or a provincial park.

REQUEST FOR LEGISLATION ON USE OF NOXIOUS GASES

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Saint-Maurice (Mr. Grondin), I am pleased to present in this House a petition signed by several thousand people from the St. Maurice Valley who, in cooperation with the Mouvement Vert Inc., ask Parliament to pass legislation on the use and recycling of harmful gases.

The petitioners intend to boycott such products as halon fire extinguishers, meat packaging and fast food containers, styrofoam plates and cups, styrofoam egg boxes, air conditioners and blue and pink S.M. styrofoam panels for home insulation.

Mr. Speaker, I have thousands of signatures from petitioners who want the House and the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) to understand that this question is most important and that the environment must be protected.

REQUEST FOR DOOR-TO-DOOR MAIL DELIVERY

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Mr. Speaker, in 1983-84, I succeeded in having the supermailboxes removed from the Marcelin-Wilson district in Bois-de-Boulogne, thanks to citizen support. But now, Mr. Speaker, it has started again and today I have several petitions, including two that I shall present right away to help you from one of the best construction districts in Montreal, from Vittorio Musto of the Alice-Nolin district and Emilio di Fiori from the Villas di Fiori.

Mr. Speaker, it is absolutely incredible that we are still talking about supermailboxes now. These community letter boxes are really horrible in every way and they prevent our seniors and handicapped people from enjoying the same service as their neighbours. That is why I have the honour to table today two well prepared petitions that were collected very quickly and several others will follow in the days and weeks to come from the Marcelin-Wilson district and Arthur Lismer Street in Bois-de-Boulogne, in the riding of Saint-Denis.

These people, Mr. Speaker, according to the hallowed usage, call for home delivery for all residents of Bois-de-Boulogne. They want everyone without discrimination to have the same service as their neighbours and they want an end as soon as possible to this aberration whereby some people have home delivery, while their next-door neighbours on the same street have to go and get their own mail. So I have the honour to present these two petitions to Parliament, if someone wants to come and get them.

CANADA-U.S. FREE TRADE AGREEMENT

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to present from residents of Windsor, Ontario, represented by my colleague. The petition concerns the Mulroney-Reagan trade deal.

Mr. Hawkes: Order!

Mr. Waddell: There is nothing the matter with saying that. It is called the Mulroney-Reagan trade deal.

Mr. Hawkes: Order!

Mr. Waddell: Whereas the trade agreement threatens the very fabric of Canadian political and economic sovereignty by removing the power of the Canadian Government effectively to control foreign ownership, to develop Canadian energy resources in the best interests of Canadians and not Americans, and to equalize opportunities between the regions, for example, in British Columbia, southwestern Ontario and other regions of the country, the petitioners call upon Parliament to dissolve to allow the people of Canada an opportunity to accept or reject the proposed trade deal through a national general election. I am pleased to table this petition on behalf of those citizens.

BROCKVILLE CABLE COMPANY'S ADDITION OF CHANNELS

Mrs. Jennifer Cossitt (Leeds—Grenville): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and duty to present a petition signed by residents of Brockville, Ontario, in the riding of Leeds—Grenville. The petition of some 107 signators is certified correct pursuant to Standing Order 106. However, there are some 321 signatures that were certified incorrect under Standing Order 106(2)(d) and Standing Order 106(2)(f).

The petitioners object to the fact that a company known as Brockville Cable of Brockville, Ontario, is imposing extra channels and additional costs without the consent of its subscribers. Wherefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to investigate whether this company was or was not given permission by the CRTC to do this.

CANADA-U.S. FREE TRADE AGREEMENT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to present a petition pursuant to Standing Order 106 from a number of constituents who believe that the trade deal with the U.S. threatens the very fabric of Canadian political and economic sovereignty. They believe that the trade deal denies Canada the policy freedom to determine its own economic future and undermines our ability as Canadians to build a society distinct from that of the U.S. Therefore, they ask the Government of Canada to dissolve Parliament to allow the people of Canada an opportunity to accept or reject the proposed trade deal during a national general election.

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure of submitting a petition, again from Windsor, thus adding to the thousands of names of those who have signed petitions of this sort. It has been approved by the Clerk of Petitions pursuant to Standing Order 106 and is consistent with the almost universal opposition to the deal in Windsor.

The petitioners observe that whereas the trade deal negotiated by the Mulroney Government threatens the very fabric of Canadian political and economic sovereignty by removing the power of the Canadian Government effectively to control foreign ownership, to develop Canadian energy resources in the best interest of Canadians, or to equalize opportunities between the regions, and would deny Canada the policy freedom to determine its own economic future, the undersigned petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to dissolve and allow the people of Canada the opportunity to accept or reject the proposed free trade agreement during a national general election. They suggest that this be on Friday.

Ms. Marion Dewar (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I have the privilege and responsibility of presenting this petition from citizens in that very active community of Windsor. The petition says that whereas the trade agreement negotiated by the Government threatens the very fabric of Canadian political and economic sovereignty by removing the power of the Canadian Government to control foreign ownership effectively, to develop Canadian energy resources in the best interests of Canadians, and to equalize opportunities between the regions, therefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to dissolve and allow the people of Canada the opportunity to accept or reject the proposed free trade agreement during a national general election.

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I also have the pleasure to table in the House a petition certified correct pursuant to Standing Order 106 by a large number of petitioners who are concerned that the Conservative Government had no mandate from the Canadian people to conclude a Free Trade Agreement with the U.S. and they humbly pray that a general election be called prior to any such agreement coming into force.

BROADCASTING ACT

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-136, an Act respecting broadcasting and to amend certain Acts in relation thereto and in relation to radiocommunication, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee.

Mr. Speaker: It may be that more than one Hon. Member might want to address the Chair briefly with respect to Bill C-136, but I would ask Hon. Members to wait until I make my preliminary ruling on the amendments. I do not think any Hon. Member will be in any difficulty because what I will be announcing here is what I feel I can deal with at this time. I have some other matters which I am considering and I want to say that I received two letters from two Hon. Members, one from the Official Opposition and one from the NDP, on this issue.

I want to thank both Hon. Members for the very kind expressions of appreciation contained in those letters with respect to the negotiation and consultation process which we have had working, very well I think, for many months now. I just want to say to Hon. Members that when the Chair receives letters in which there is a clear recognition of the attitude and co-operation between Members and the Table Officers, it makes this place a lot easier to function. I just wanted to say to both Hon. Members that I appreciate it.

I will now call Motions Nos. 1, 1A, 2, 3, 4, 5, 9 and 12 . . .

[English]

I will hear the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone).

Mrs. Finestone: Mr. Speaker, I would like to personally thank the Table Officers, the Office of the Law Clerk and Parliamentary Counsel and the Journals and Distribution branches. They have been very vital to the process, as you mentioned before. My office and I, in particular, are very appreciative of the role they have played. The spirit of Parliament has been well served.

I wrote following the consultations precisely because you were going to be ruling with respect to how the amendments were to be grouped. My major concern was that we had received so many, shall I say, complaints or shall I say disappointments, from very many interested parties which will be affected by a new broadcasting policy.

The Government commissioned an excellent study by Caplan-Sauvageau which took 1985 and 1986 to complete. In 1987 and 1988 the standing committee addressed itself to those issues and held good, sound hearings which were well received. The Minister took a great number of these issues into consideration and brought forward a Bill, which was not easy for her to do. I commend her for that.

The Bill is very complex and there have been very many changes over the 20-year period. Since the Bill was brought in during the summer months when many people, particularly in the big associations and institutions that will be affected, were on holidays. They wrote to say that they were most uncomfortable with it and that they had not been able to address the draft language in the two months available.

My concern, Mr. Speaker, was that you would regroup, particularly under Clause 3, that section which deals most specifically with the broadcast policy. Are you dealing strictly with the definition section in your decision? If so, I will be most pleased to accept the rulings. However, the amendments that relate to Clause 3 deal with the Canadian broadcasting system and the programming mandate for that system, particularly for the CBC and for the educational broadcasters, introduce a new alternative programming service, and look at special requirements for private sector networks for programming undertakings and for the provision of special requirements for distribution undertakings. It is a very serious part, Mr. Speaker, and I hope they will be split in a way which will allow us more than 10 minutes per clause. I thank you very much for your kindness.

Mr. Speaker: I have perhaps been somewhat more generous than I might be at other times. I have listened to the Hon. Member. I think I understand the point that she is making. The Chair will, of course, always try to do what is appropriate. If some of the Member's concerns can be accommodated the Chair will, of course, try to do so.

I want to say to the Minister, who has been very patient, that my decision must, nonetheless, be based on sound procedural grounds.

I know that the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) has some concern. I will hear him, but very briefly.

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, my remarks will be very brief. I wrote you a letter on this aspect and I concur with what my colleague from the Liberal Party has said.

Clause 3 of the Bill is entitled "Broadcasting policy for Canada". It contains about a dozen major policy thrusts. If we debate all of the 27 amendments on it in 10 minutes we will not come close to doing justice to such a serious and important debate. In my letter I suggested somewhat of a compromise, that we break it down into four debate areas.

The first would be general programming provisions, policy which applies to all broadcasters. The second would be provisions which deal with this new alternative television network and educational broadcasters. The third would be provisions that deal with the CBC, which is defined in here. The mandate of the CBC is in this clause and you can see how large that is. The last would be provisions dealing with distribution undertakings, that is, undertakings which private networks would make and private broadcasters and so on.

I think that that is reasonable. I suppose that you have difficulty, Mr. Speaker, with the technical rules in doing this. I hope that you can find a way of giving a little more room for debate on these amendments.

Mr. Speaker: I thank the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway. Being an experienced Member here, I think he realizes that I am bound by certain rules. However, I will say to both Hon. Members that the Chair is considering with considerable care the very courteous and helpful letters which I received. Again, I thank both Hon. Members for their generosity in referring to the co-operation of the Table Officers. I will return as soon as I can and give what guidance is appropriate with respect to the matters which have been raised.

Again, I want to say to the Hon. Minister that I appreciate the fact that she has been generous in not raising any objection to the comments which have been made.

I want to say one other thing as well, that is, that the system of consultation under which we have been operating has been working extremely well. I know that neither Hon. Member, on rising on this particular matter, would wish the general approach which we are taking not to continue. I know all Hon. Members would want to support that.

I will now put to the House all of the motions which were the subject of my ruling to the House.

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 2 by striking out line 12 at page 2 and substituting the following therefor:

""distribution undertaking" means any commercial under-".

Mr. Alan Redway (York East) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 2 by striking out line 13 at page 2 and substituting the following therefor:

"taking, other than a boarding house, for the reception of broadcasting".

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 2 by striking out line 13 at page 2 and substituting the following therefor:

"taking, other than a senior citizens' home, for the reception of broadcasting".

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 2 by striking out line 13 at page 2 and substituting the following therefor:

"taking operated on a profit basis for the reception of broadcasting".

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 2 by striking out line 13 at page 2 and substituting the following therefor:

"taking, other than an undertaking operated by students or youth organizations on a non-profit basis, for the reception of broadcasting".

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 2 by striking out lines 17 and 18 at page 2 and substituting the following therefor:

"porary residence or to more than the total residences in a multiple housing complex;"

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 2 by adding immediately after line 8 at page 3 the following:

"(3) For the purpose of this Act, a multiple dwelling unit grouped as a condominium complex is deemed to be one permanent residence, on such terms and conditions as the Commission deems appropriate."

• (1600)

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 2 by adding immediately after line 13 at page 3 the following:

"(4) For the purposes of this Act, persons who occupy apartments, hotel rooms or dwelling units situated in the same building are part of the public and a transmission intended to be received exclusively by such persons is a transmission for reception by the public."

She said: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Since the first motion is the motion of the Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young), would it not be normal that he speak to his motion?

Mr. Speaker: The motions are grouped together. I am in the hands of the House.

Mrs. Finestone: Mr. Speaker, I would be pleased to defer to the Member for Beaches (Mr. Young) if he would like to start the debate. It would be my pleasure to do so.

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, I want to express my appreciation to the critic for the Liberal Party and to my colleague, the Member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell), for allowing me to say a few words first on this portion of the debate.

The reason I moved this amendment to the Bill was due to the great concern of condominium owners that this Bill changes their status from what it was previously.

Mr. Ernie Loader from York Condominium Corporation No. 76 appeared before the committee on behalf of the Canadian Condominium Institute to express those concerns to the committee. He did an excellent job in doing so.

Prior to Mr. Loader's appearance before the committee I was informed that the Minister told the committee that the concerns of condominium owners were not real concerns and that the status of condominium owners would not change under this Bill.

I read the minutes of the meeting where the Minister said this, and she was clear in what she said. However, I became concerned when I looked at what some of the officials began to say after the Minister had given these assurances to condominium owners. When one reads what the Minister's officials said in response to questioning at that committee, one can understand why Mr. Loader and his colleagues remained concerned.

Their concern is that while the Minister's assurances are accepted by me and by others, they do not mean too much when one considers that at some subsequent point the CRTC may very well make a ruling that condominium owners do indeed have their status changed under the new legislation. I share that concern.

I can understand the argument made in the legislation about signals being used for commercial and profit purposes, but not as it relates to condominium owners who have a satellite dish on the roof and are sending a signal to the people who share that condominium and do not make a profit from the operation.

The Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway) asked in the committee how Conrad Black would be treated under this legislation if he had a 50-room mansion with a satellite dish on top which sent a signal to each one of those 50 bedrooms. Apparently that situation would not be considered any differently from how a condominium was considered previously. However, the second question asked what would happen if one of these signals ran into a chauffeur's room in the same mansion. The answer was that it could very well be considered a commercial operation. That did not make sense to me and it is a concern to condominium owners.

The Minister has given them the assurance that they will not be treated any differently today than they were last year. They are asking why this cannot simply be put in the legislation. Why not just put what the Minister means in the legislation?

We all know that governments come and go, and that Ministers come and go. In the future, somebody that may not have been a part of this process, or may come under a different administration, will look at this situation in isolation. One can only assume it will only look at what the Government meant by a certain policy because it will not have any clear legislation to guide it.

I ask the Minister, when she says that things will not be any different, whether that cannot be written into the legislation to address the concerns of those individuals? As I pointed out, the concern I do not have now is the word of the Minister. I accept her word, as I said at committee. I told Mr. Loader and other representatives that if the Minister says they will not be affected in the future any differently from how they were in the past, they can accept that. However, that concern still exists on the part of condominium owners, which is understandable when one reads the transcript of the committee hearings on August 30, specifically if one reads pages 10:49; 10:50, and 10:15 of the transcripts of that committee hearing.

I will not spend too much time on this because I know other Members want to say a few words about it as well, particularly the Member for York East who also had discussions with the condominium owners in this particular location.

I only want to stress to the Minister that if she says they have nothing to fear and wants to give them real assurances that they have nothing to fear in the future, let her write that in the legislation. Her officials do not seem to agree with the assurances that the Minister has given to these condominium owners. The Minister is saying one thing and her officials seem to be saying that as another body may interpret this Act, it could have an effect on these condominium owners. At the very least, they are entitled to have the Government say what it means in the legislation rather than simply give words of comfort to these people, which is of no comfort to them at all.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to speak to the amendment that I introduced dealing with the rights of condominium owners. The Minister and most Members will recognize that being in a condominium is a preferred choice for perhaps hundreds of thousands of Canadians. It is a relatively new form of accommodation in terms of the kind of property holding or tenure that exists.

Unfortunately, in the last few years various initiatives by different levels of Government have tended to put condominium owners in the status of second-class citizens. In my City of Winnipeg, an assessment decision was made that gave a higher mill rate to condominium owners than to those who were single family property owners. Yet there is no difference. The form of tenure is the same. There is a clear form of ownership. It just happens that the units are either stacked or attached in some way. They do not even have to be that. What they do is to share certain services in common. In terms of rights of accommodation and tenure there is no difference. However, there is clearly a real apprehension that this Bill, by its redefinition of undertaking and distribution, will create that kind of position or potential by which future discrimination may take place.

If I might, Mr. Speaker, I would just give an example of some correspondence I have received. I wish to mention to the House that as late as last week I attended a meeting of several hundred people in my constituency who are condominium owners. They were not there for any other purpose than, they felt, to defend their basic rights as citizens to be treated equally and fairly. The following letter is a reflection of one of the owners from 55 Nassau, which is a condominium in the downtown part of Winnipeg. It states:

> This Bill, if passed will be a flagrant act of discrimination against everyone who chooses to live in a condominium. In its present form the authors of this act do not consider that condominiums are homes. In fact, Bill C-136 would only licence, regulate or penalize those Canadians who do not live in single residences.

I will not read the whole letter. I think that the tone is there. I do not believe that any Government would want to create the feeling or sense of discrimination in the minds of so many Canadians that they are being singled out for special treatment.

I have read from the proceedings of the committee meeting at which the Minister gave assurances. I think that that is a legitimate exercise. We appreciate that. But an assurance is very different from any law. Something being written into legislation is very different from a guarantee. Conditions can change. Ministers can change. Governments can change. Regulatory agencies can change. Courts can interpret matters differently. While I accept the good intentions of the Minister, I think that the means of securing that intention should be to agree to the amendment that would clarify very clearly in the legislation what the Minister herself has said, recognizing as she does, since she is a veteran of this House and of political wars—

Miss MacDonald: Come on!

Mr. Axworthy: I am sorry, Mr. Speaker. I use that phrase in the generic sense. The Minister is someone who has experience, wisdom and judgment in these matters. I think that her statement recognizes that there is a concern being expressed. Her attempt in committee to meet that concern has not succeeded because of other representations, other testimony and other witnesses who leave open the possibility or potential that this may not be a guarantee and assurance that will exist in perpetuity, or at least for the life of this Act.

I say to the Minister that the purpose of my amendment, and I think she will understand, is not for political or other advantage but simply to respond to a very strongly felt need on the part of a large number of Canadians. I think that it would be very easy to satisfy that concern by accepting the amendment, either my amendment or another, which would clarify in the law what it is that we all agree on, that is, that we do not want condominium owners to feel that they are being treated in a second-class way.

I took some pains in my amendment not only to ensure that condominiums would be seen as a permanent residence but that they would still be subject to the general terms and conditions of CRTC actions as they relate to broadcasting policy, whether it relates to content or otherwise. I know that from the people I met with they have no interest in using this as a way of skirting the intention to deal with these problems. They are saying that if the Government wants them to pay royalties because of free transmission to other areas, then that is a condition to which they are subject. Under my amendment they would still be required to do so if that is a CRTC ruling.

What the CRTC could not take away from them is the opportunity in a condominium complex to use a satellite as a means of receiving a signal and distributing it throughout the building. The conditions under which it is received is something that can be set as part of the policy. But the right to do so would not be compromised by accepting this amendment.

I would ask Hon. Members, and in particular the Minister, to recognize that there is a real need in the legislation for clarification. It should be a matter of law and not a matter of discretion, hope, expectation or assurance. Those are far too general and subject to the vagaries of time and circumstance. I think that the Minister could quickly solve the problem, either by agreeing to the amendment or substituting another for it.

I do not say that my amendment has to be accepted word for word. But there have been sufficient representations from both sides of the House about this problem that the Government, I think, would be wise either to accept the amendment or another one that would be responsive to a felt need of thousands of Canadians. It is one which I think would substantially strengthen the Bill that the Government has introduced in this respect.

I am sure we will have many other things to say about other parts of the Bill. But in terms of this particular question, it should be resolved. Because it is a new Bill, the situation created by the Lount decision and other court decisions in the past should be clarified to ensure that it is now recognized as part of broadcasting law and not subject to regulatory or policy change.

I conclude by saying that I was given a copy of the letter the Minister sent to members of a condominium corporation which indicated that she herself had no reason for not doing such a thing. She said that this was a matter of government policy. I would like to quote the letter written to Mr. Wheeler, Secretary Treasurer of the Satellite Communications Association, in March of 1988, which states: "I might point out that this Government has not discouraged the direct subscription to U.S. services by individual dish owners. Nor is it government policy to discourage subscription to U.S. services by enacting punitive legislation".

It goes on to state: "I would like to assure you that there is no government or regulatory impediment to Canadian dish owners obtaining access to satellite or other services lawfully marketed in Canada provided they do not redistribute the signals to others".

In this case the Minister herself is giving those assurances but has not followed through with the obvious requirement that it be put into the Bill or the law. I ask the Minister to take into account not only the words quoted to her in these assurances but to recognize that where she has spoken to a need to look at questions of content, availability and so on, obviously those judgments would be made by the CRTC under the terms of the amendment I have proposed. They would not impair in any way the fundamental right of condominium owners to have the same rights as those who occupy single family dwellings.

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, I too would like to speak to this series of amendments dealing basically with an amendment to the definition of distribution undertaking in the Act. I have put forward some four separate amendments in this group of amendments. The main thrust is to exclude condominium corporations from the tentacles of this particular Act. This is a matter of long-standing concern for condominium owners. It is part of a wider problem, a wider concern of condominium owners, which is a matter of very high principle of condominium owners, that they are home owners. They feel that they should be treated exactly the same as home owners, whether they live in semi-detached homes or whatever. A condominium home owner is a home owner just like anybody else.

Back in my time in municipal Government I dealt with many other aspects of this same problem, particularly the garbage collection aspect and, as the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) indicated, problems relating to assessments and municipal taxation. Each time the issue was raised with me it was raised as a matter of principle.

It is not that condominium owners are looking for any special treatment. It is not that they are looking to be treated in a different way from anybody else. They say that what they want is exactly the same treatment as other home owners receive. If other homeowners are to have their garbage picked up, there is no reason why a condominium homeowner should not have his garbage picked up. If other homeowners are assessed on a certain basis, there is no reason why a condominium homeowner should not be assessed on the same basis. If all other homeowners are going to be excluded from regulation, licensing, and control under the Broadcasting Act, then there is no reason why a condominium homeowner should not also be excluded. To me that makes an awful lot of sense.

In this particular case, if what is being suggested here is examined, it is being suggested by the definition now in the Bill that a single family homeowner with a satellite television receiver in his backyard or on top of his home would not be subject to licensing, regulation, payment of fees, or anything else, but a condominium homeowner would be subject to all of those things.

I am one who has a good many condominium corporations in my constituency. In the present boundaries of my constituency I have the largest condominium corporation in the country, York Condominium Corporation No. 76 in the Crescent Town area. In the next election the Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young) will be running in the riding of the Crescent Town area, and York Condominium Corporation No. 76 will be transferred into the boundaries of his new riding. The Hon. Member pointed out quite clearly that Mr. Ernie Loader of York Condominium Corporation No. 76, and many others, have put to him, have put to me, and have put to the committee their position. In fact Mr. Ernie Loader appeared before the legislative committee on this Bill and put the position of York Condominium Corporation No. 76, and the position of all condominium owners across the country, very forcibly and very clearly that it was a matter of principle, and that is all it is. However, it is a very important principle and a principle that obviously, if we pass the Bill in its present form, we will be violating and discriminating against the condominium owner as a homeowner.

As I indicated, I do have a great many condominium corporations in my present constituency and also in the boundaries of my new constituency. I have been contacted by a great many of those people. When this Bill became public knowledge in July of this year I received more telephone calls in my office in one week than I received last summer with respect to the landing of the Sikh refugee claimants in Nova Scotia, and more telephone calls than I received with respect to the landing of the Tamil refugee claimants on the East Coast the summer before. It was a very, very hot issue as far as condominium owners were concerned. I was deluged with phone calls.

I was subsequently deluged with letters, not only from the Crescent Town, York Condominium Corporation No. 76, but also from the Flemingdon Park condominiums, including the Vicora Linkway condominiums, the Windy Golfway condominiums, and further to the north near Highway 401 and Don Mills Road, the Graydon Hall condominiums. They have all been in touch with me on this matter of principle. They have been in the process of contacting condominium corporations across the country. As they point out, 5 per cent of Canadians live in condominiums. When one calculates how many people we are talking about here, it is over 1 million Canadians who live in condominiums and who will be affected by the terms of this particular piece of legislation. and that is why they are upset and concerned, that is why they are looking for the Government not to discriminate but to deal with this on a fair and equitable basis.

This is an issue with which I have been concerned and involved as a result of representations made by condominium owners from the very first moment that I indicated that I was going to stand for federal office back in 1982. Some of the first people who came to me at that time were representatives of York Condominium Corporation No. 76. Mr. Loader came to me at that time and pointed out the great concerns that he had with the legislation of the former Government, and the great concerns that all condominium corporations had with the legislation of the former Government in this respect.

He asked me, and he implored me to ensure that, if the Progressive Conservative Party formed the next Government, it would certainly not make the same mistake and would ensure that in broadcasting legislation condominium owners were dealt with in the same manner as other single family dwelling owners.

He asked me to bring that to the attention of the Leader of our Party (Mr. Mulroney). I did. I have written to the Prime Minister on numerous occasions since that time, and have raised representations, both privately and publicly, on numerous occasions since that time. I have met with various Ministers of Communications on numerous occasions since that time. I have met with their staff on numerous occasions since that time. I have found that a great many people on all sides of the House shared the concerns with respect to condominium corporations.

Back in 1985 a government Bill was put forward which was then known as Bill C-20. It contained similar provisions which caused great concern with condominium owners. Quite frankly, it led to the establishment of something that the Hon. Member for Ottawa Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) has subsequently come to refer to as the dinosaurs. It led to the establishment of the back-bench committee of the Progressive Conservative Party. It was Bill C-20 that created it. As a result of that, a great many people who were concerned banded together to try to deal with it in some logical, civilized and reasonable way, and to persuade the Government to make some changes in that Bill. The result of it was that the Bill was not proceeded with when the first session of this Parliament came to an end. In fact, the Bill died on the Order Paper, never having been passed into law.

At that time condominium owners across the country applauded and said that it was wonderful that the Government had finally seen the light. They were sure, when any other legislation came forward, that it would not contain this type of provision. Much to their shock, and much to my shock, Bill C-136 came forth with the same provision.

The Minister has assured me, and the Minister has assured condominium owners, that they will be exempted under these regulations. However, as has been so eloquently put by other Members so far, there is no assurance whatsoever that the Minister will be in her job 50 years from now, and the next Minister may very well do something differently.

In fairness to all of us, to 5 per cent of Canadians, over 1 million Canadian condominium owners, I implore the Minister and the Government to put forth an amendment acceptable to treat condominium owners exactly the same as all other homeowners.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, in the last week, I have received over 100 letters and telephone calls. Since the beginning of this week, my assistant in Winnipeg tells me that they are coming in at the rate of 25 a day or more. This is a difficult problem. Those of us who believe in a Canadian radio and television system which gives the people of Canada the ability to watch and listen to Canadian programming have been concerned and have to be concerned about the problems which have been created and are being intensified by the development of new technologies. Cable and satellite give people the opportunity to watch a vast number of programs, most of which are not Canadian.

I and all members of the NDP are sympathetic with the efforts of the Government to foster and promote the ability of the Canadian people to watch Canadian programming on television or to listen to Canadian programming on radio. It is for that reason that we have laws and agencies such as the CRTC. It has always been accepted by Governments—the former Liberal Government and the present Conservative Government, that individual homeowners in Canada have the right to have a television dish which they can use to pick up programs from any part of the world, as long as those are not passed on and sold to others and so on.

I think that the people who live in condominiums have the right to say: "We are just as much individual homeowners as are people who live in single dwelling homes or in attached dwelling homes. Because we are homeowners, we should have the same rights as the people who live in their own homes". They have said that in the letters I received. I will quote part of one such letter which reads:

> This Bill, if passed, will be a flagrant act of discrimination against everyone who chooses to live in a condominium. In its present form, the authors of this Act (the CRTC) do not consider that condominiums are homes. In fact, Bill C-136 would only licence, regulate or penalize those Canadians who do not live in single residences.

And it goes on.

I listened with interest to the comments of a number of Members. I found it interesting that the last three speakers each represented different political Parties. In other words, the speeches were made by Members from each of the political Parties represented in this Parliament.

We respect the present Minister. We accept her assurances, that in her view the Bill as drafted does not infringe on the rights of condominium owners. As it has been pointed out, this Minister will not always be the Minister of Communications. There will be other Ministers. The CRTC board may not rule against the right of condominium residents to participate in the programs which come from the satellite on their building. The CRTC may not rule that way, and a future CRTC board may rule to the contrary.

I am not a lawyer, but I remember that when the parliamentary committee was dealing with the proposed Constitution and the Charter, my colleague, the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson), proposed an amendment which he said would spell out the rights of labour unions to operate as they have up until now. The then Minister of Justice rejected that proposed amendment, saying that it was not necessary, because no court would rule in a way which would be contrary to the spirit of the proposal that my colleague was making.

What happened? In reality, a case was taken to a court in Ontario, sponsored by that great organization, the National Citizens' Coalition. The judge hearing the case ruled in precisely the way the then Minister of Justice said that no court would rule. What the judge was really saying was that it did not matter what the Minister who introduced the Bill said it would mean; what matters was what the Bill actually said.

Despite the assurances given by the present Minister of Communications (Miss MacDonald), for whom I have a great deal of respect, I do not think that that is enough. I think that the Bill, if we are going to be fair to condominium residents, has to make it very clear, without any doubts, that they have the rights that individual homeowners have, to benefit from the use of a satellite dish.

I have not spent a sufficient amount of time in order to say that I prefer the amendment moved by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young), or the amendment moved by my friend, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy). However, I would urge the Minister to accept an amendment to the Bill which would spell out quite clearly the rights of condominium residents to continue to be able to benefit from the programs which can be picked up by the satellite dish.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Mount Royal and then I will recognize the Hon. Member for Etobicoke—Lakeshore.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I was interested in seeing the number of Members of the House who were interested in standing and talking to this particular grouping of amendments. The amendments came from a number of people and covered not one but two particular areas of concern. The first related to condominiums and apartment buildings, and the second related to a definition of the term "public" under the Bill, as neither public nor private are clearly defined under the Bill, and there is a change from the old Act.

In legal parlance, one knows that if there is a change in terminology in a Bill there is a reason to make that change. You just do not lightly change words which have a legal history under the law. If you look at Motion No. 12 first, I would like to point out that there was a change in the original Act. The definition of "broadcasting" under the 1968 Act indicated that broadcasting meant any radio communication in which the transmissions were intended for direct reception by the general public. The general public has had, over the course of history in the last 20 years, its mechanism of identification of that terminology. The Minister has changed the terminology in this new Bill, which states:

> —any transmission of programs, whether or not encrypted, by radio waves or other means of telecommunications for reception by the public—

Not the general public. It continues:

> —by means of broadcasting receiving apparatus, but does not include any such transmission of programs—

The Bill goes on to state the concern that has been expressed, both my concern and that brought to our attention by the Canadian Bar Association, indicating that we need some refinement on the term "public". I therefore have proposed an amendment that Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 2 by adding immediately after line 13 at page 3 a definition of "public". It would say:

> "(4) For the purposes of this Act, persons who occupy apartments, hotel rooms or dwelling units situated in the same building are part of the public and a transmission intended to be received exclusively by such persons is a transmission for reception by the public."

If we do not do that, there is a number of questions which go unanswered. If programming is sent only to tenants of a particular apartment building, would they qualify as reception by the public? If programming is directed only to persons in an institution, such as schools, universities, hospitals and the like, would that be considered reception by the public? If a service is directed only toward a particular group of users, the brokerage industry or people who signed up for an educational class, would that be considered reception by the public? What would be the size of that group? In a single household where there is a series of sets, would that also become the public?

Because it is not defined, I would strongly recommend positive consideration on the part of the Minister to clarify that. I would sincerely hope that that clarification is the same wording that is found in the copyright Bill, under Bill C-130, the free trade legislation of this House. We would at least have wording that means the same thing in more than on place so we do not have legal interpretation and a jumping around. I would like to recommend that the motion I placed on the table with respect to the definition of "public" be given favourable consideration and be accepted by the Minister.

With respect to condominiums, I must say that it was an interesting experience to have members on the government side of the House calling me on a constant basis asking if I would bring this amendment forward in their interest.

Outside one or two members of the government Party, there did not seem to be comfort in arguing with the Minister. The Minister was forthright and in a sense spoke to the issue quite clearly in the legislative committee. She told us not to worry, that we did not have to be concerned. She says that the rules of the game are that we have always been exempted and we are in no changed position, that our circumstances before the new Bill and our circumstances now will allow for exemption. She pointed out that nothing in Bill C-136 would change the situation of U.S. condominiums which install a roof-top antenna. There are no provisions that would cause the CRTC to make its exemption criteria more rigid. Indeed, the Bill expands the commission's ability to use its exemption power. Condominiums which are presently exempted from licensing should expect that they will continue to be exempted.

That caused me to have additional concern. That is why I was pleased that my colleague, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) and other Members of this House have suggested the Minister put into law the things she has said in public, in the legislative committee, that there need not be a worry on the part of these people.

Clause 9(2) of this Bill would allow the CRTC at some point in the future, perhaps, to change its mind with respect to condominiums and apartment buildings. We know about the Lount decision. We know the federal courts have already looked at this and I think there should be clarity in the law. I believe a Bill at all times should state clearly the Government's intent. The Minister said this was her intent. She should be very comforted that this is what she would install and put in place in the law.

I would like to ask the Minister to accept the amendment which reads:

> For the purpose of this Act, a multiple dwelling unit grouped as a condominium complex is deemed to be one permanent residence, such terms and conditions as the commission deems appropriate.

Those last lines are key because the commission can essentially order the priority, ensure there is compliance with the will being expressed through broadcast policy in this Act, that there is no allowance for going outside the principles of this Bill and allowing the kinds of supposed misdemeanours that are occurring in many of these condominiums. That would give the kind of latitude that is required. I sometimes wonder if we are going to have enough police force in place actually to apply this clause, but I believe the principles should be there so that if there is infringement we have the ability to act.

Mr. Patrick Boyer (Etobicoke—Lakeshore): Mr. Speaker, it is perhaps a sign of how wedded people in our country have become to their televisions in this stage of our cultural evolution that an issue like this should generate the concern it does. The prospect of some interference with the amount of programming or the conditions under which programming can be received is something which now seems to register very high on the level of concern of a great many citizens.

Before I make my specific comments on this Bill, I would like to say to the Minister of Communications (Miss MacDonald) that I think the legislation itself, Bill C-136, is a major legislative initiative which deals in a very constructive and positive way with the shape of this country, a country which from its inception has depended upon communications. I think the direction that is being set down by this Bill is of fundamental importance for the country and reflects very sound principles.

The issue we now have before us is, in that broad context, a very narrow and specific one. Yet to those individuals who are concerned by it, it is no less important by virtue of its narrowness. For them, it is fundamental. I think it can be stated that there are two principles here. The first principle is different legal treatment of that which is the same, a result which some would describe as discriminatory, where homeowners who live in single dwellings are being treated one way and homeowners who live in condominiums are being treated in a different way.

The second principle, I believe, is one which pertains to the rule of law, the concept of open government, which is certainly something I believe our Progressive Conservative Party stands for. It is on record as favouring government by statute rather than government by regulation. A principle ought to apply here. It is one I am committed to, at least. It is that that which can be done by statute ought to be and only that which requires to be done by regulation made pursuant to the statute ought to be done in that fashion.

What is the issue? What is it that caused the Minister of Communications to send a clarifying letter to all who are concerned and who are in a state of agitation about this issue? What is it that has caused representatives from three different Parties to bring motions on the floor of the House seeking amendments? The issue is that condominium owners are being told that the new Broadcasting Act will result in condominiums being regulated as to the television stations they receive. The result would be that they would lose U.S. pay-TV signals they now pick up for free. Individuals who own satellite dishes would not be regulated by the new Bill. Thus, the Government is discriminating between condominium owners and individual homeowners. I think that is a fair statement of the issue that has brought these eight different motions before the House.

I have looked carefully at Bill C-136 and I see that the Government is seeking to ensure that the distribution of TV signals to condominiums and groups of homes will continue to be subject to regulation in the new Bill just as they are subject to the existing Broadcasting Act of 1968. There is no change in this respect. Second, I see that private cable systems in condominiums and apartment buildings will continue to be exempt from licensing under certain conditions, just as they are now. At present, multi-unit dwellings must carry only those channels which are offered by the cable company that serves the same area.

A third feature of this Bill is that condominiums which descramble HBO, ESPN, and other U.S. pay-television signals without permission may, under certain conditions, become subject to legal proceedings for theft of signals brought by people who own the distribution rights of those signals.

That is fundamental and important to protect the intellectual property of those who create those signals, and that is the way the situation is at the moment. The indication I have been able to receive, both from the Minister's office and from CRTC officials, is that the Government does not intend to become involved in any such prosecutions in that area, leaving it in essence to a matter of private law between the creators of the intellectual property and those who are infringing it to be remedied in the courts.

The owners of rights and scrambled signals must make them readily available to all kinds of subscribers before they can sue for any form of damages. We come then to the fact that individual homes with satellite dishes will not be subject to the new Act but that group homes linked by a cable system, whether houses or multiple unit dwellings, will be subject to the new Act. Again, I think that brings us to the point at issue.

First, I would return to the principle that I mentioned at the outset regarding what is being called discrimination, but what I would refer to as different legal treatment, different treatment in the statute, of that which is essentially the same, homeowners who live in single dwellings compared to homeowners living in condominiums. I think all of us recognize that the development of condominiums over the past decade or so represents a major point of departure in concepts of property ownership.

It is not easy, in many instances, and the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway) referred to his municipal experience, to provide for everything from garbage collection to the receipt of broadcasting signals in this unusual form of private property ownership that has developed in our system with its more traditional concepts of home ownership. However, the reality is that the condominiums are there and those who dwell in them are individual homeowners.

Now, the ironic result, and the one that I think we should look at to test the way this legislation, if amended, would work, is that if a condominium building association with its, say, 350 owners, decided to put 350 satellite dishes on the ground and link each to each home or unit in that building, then the dishes would be legal under this Act. In other words, we could see a situation in which, on a technical level, people would use unusual methods to do that which they feel is their right as homeowners to do. It would be much like some provisions in the Income Tax Act in which the tail ends up wagging the dog and we get anomalous results simply because people are trying to live within the law.

The fact is that the SMATV exemption rules which the CRTC has already promulgated set out quite clearly the circumstances under which exemptions will be permitted for condominium owners. It is a matter of record what those conditions and criteria are. The point that I make, and I join with Members of all other Parties who have spoken in the House on this, is that if it can be done in regulation as it now is, then let us include that in the Bill. That is why any of these eight motions or a blending of them would achieve that purpose.

I sincerely urge the Minister to consider this possibility. I know the amount of effort that she has put into bringing this Bill to its present state. Yet Parliament exists for the purpose not of making laws but of making good laws. If we who represent the people here are to have any role in this process, then it is to come forward with suggestions to improve some detail of a statute.

I earnestly exhort the Minister to consider taking the concerns that she has herself recognized in the letter she sent to condominium owners and the motions suggested by Members of the House in seeing that this one small corner of a very large Bill be improved to that further extent. I think a sense of fairness to all Canadians requires it.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I will be very brief. I would like to speak in support of this group of motions, and especially the motion presented by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy), which aims to restore a measure of equity and justice for owners of condominiums.

Mr. Speaker, as you know, appearances are often very important in politics, and how people perceive things is something we politicians have to consider and deal with as well as we can.

However, condominium owners are concerned about Bill C-136. We would like to see the Bill clarified so it does not discriminate against them.

The motion presented by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry reads as follows:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 2 by adding immediately after line 8 at page 3 the following:

"(3) For the purpose of this Act, a multiple dwelling unit grouped as a condominium complex is deemed to be one permanent residence, on such terms and conditions as the Commission deems appropriate."

I think that makes eminently good sense. I think it is clear and that it is a step in the right direction. It does not mean that the owners of these buildings or condominium units can get special privileges or purchase illegal instruments or decoders. It simply means that condominiums will be treated no differently than single-family units or other types of property where Canadians have access to a community antenna or to a more advanced system, the so-called dish.

[English]

I think the eloquence of the debate this afternoon and the fact that it has been a non-partisan approach to attempting to get this Bill amended to clarify the situation appears to me to suggest that the will of parliamentarians is to make sure that there is fairness toward condominium owners in the Bill. We have argued that they have a right to know where they stand regarding this issue, and we believe that this amendment clearly provides that assurance, while allowing the CRTC to impose terms and conditions to ensure fairness to local licensed cable television systems.

Evidently some people in my riding have said that these cable systems which have a type of monopoly over distribution systems would not like to see any amendment to Bill C-136 which would give condominium owners the right to have satellite dishes on their buildings. I find that a little negative, and I do not think it would be in favour of the cable companies to support that kind of argument.

The modification for which we are asking seems to be quite reasonable. I would certainly want to support that amendment put by my colleague from Winnipeg—Fort Garry. I do not think I can add anything further to what was said this afternoon.

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words in response to the comments that have been made this afternoon. Very briefly, all these motions, if adopted, would remove from the purview of the legislation certain kinds of distribution undertakings. That is what has been talked about this afternoon, whether it is condominiums or other suggestions which have been put forward in the various amendments before the House.

I would like to make it very clear that the Broadcasting Act of 1968 provides that condominiums which install a roof-top antenna or satellite dish are regarded as cable systems and as such are subject to CRTC regulation. The CRTC could exempt them under certain conditions. It in fact has exempted them provided they meet certain criteria, and that is what this is all about.

The CRTC was able to do that in 1968 under the legislation the way it was written. It will continue to be able to do exactly the same thing. However, to begin writing into legislation that you accept this kind of distribution undertaking or that kind of distribution undertaking so that it does not have to meet the requirements of the regulations is to begin to say, all right, these people do not have to meet the major requirements, i.e., inclusion of Canadian channels. That is really what we are talking about.

At the present time every distribution undertaking must by regulation meet certain minimum requirements, and those are that there is a certain amount of Canadian content carried on those distribution undertakings. If it is seen by the CRTC that they will indeed meet those requirements, then they can be exempted and they will continue to be exempted in future provided they meet those regulatory requirements. However, under the legislation, if they do not carry that minimum Canadian content, then there are remedies which can be applied against them.

I heard this afternoon the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) present the case that he was arguing, along with Members of the NDP. They have stood in this place day after day and railed against me or whomever about the lack of Canadian content. For them to come here this afternoon and turn the argument completely around is absolutely hypocritical. I want to assure you that the basis of this provision in the Bill is to ensure that, yes, condominium systems, as with any other broadcasting undertaking, are subject to regulation. They will be regulated by the CRTC. The CRTC will have the same power it has had in the past to exempt them, provided they meet certain criteria. Those criteria are the bottom line for us, and those criteria are Canadian content.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): May I just comment, pursuant to the Speaker's ruling this afternoon, that Motions Nos. 1, 1A, 2, 3, 4, 5, 9, and 12 are acceptable and will be debated together, with a vote on Motion No. 1 being applied to the other motions.

Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The question is on Motion No. 1, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Beaches. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the motion stands deferred.

Motions Nos. 7 and 8 are acceptable and will be debated separately and voted on separately.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 2 by striking out lines 35 to 38 at page 2 and substituting the following therefor:

She said: Mr. Speaker, I would like to address the methodology used in writing this clause with respect to programs. I agree that the definition of the word "program" as sounds or visual images or combinations of sounds or visual images intended to inform, enlighten, or entertain is what a program is all about. However, this definition goes on to say that it does not include visual images whether or not combined with sounds that consist predominantly of alphanumeric text.

If you look further on in the Bill you will see that Clause 82, the old Clause 83, is an amendment to the Railway Act requiring telecommunication type regulation of non-programming. It then becomes clear that the intent of this legislation is to split undertakings into both programming and non-programming undertakings. If you follow this logically, you have a serious conundrum, I would suggest.

The CRTC, in its brief to the legislative committee, stated that it had been advised by engineering experts concerning intellectual matter contained in the vertical blanking interval of the television signal. It all sounds very detailed and technical, but it means that a television signal can be considered separate and apart from the main transmission. It is this vertical blanking interval which is used by broadcasters to supply closed captioning. That is, alphanumeric material for use by the hearing impaired. This definition will mean that the commission may lose jurisdiction over this most important aspect of broadcasting. The Minister has put a very specific emphasis on help to the handicapped, and we have serious concerns that closed captioning will be jeopardized given the way this definition is written.

As well, with all due respect, our own Standing Committee on Communications and Culture, in its all-Party sixth report, addressed the term "program" and was quite firm in what it had to say. The report said that in its view his term should be defined broadly in the Act to cover all forms of audio-video content, including entertainment, information, and advertising disseminated to the public over broadcasting undertakings. While the terms "program" and "programming" are not defined in the 1968 Act, the CRTC defined the term "programming" in its 1986 regulations so as to exclude alphanumeric services with music and still images. In the committee's view, the distinction between these kinds of services and full video services has and will become increasingly blurred. It is essential that the Act clearly categorize all such services as programming so that the providers of such services will be properly licensed as networks and made subject to the appropriate regulatory scrutiny. Under this approach the commission will be able to exercise jurisdiction over such services. In the committee's view, they may not be excluded from scrutiny by an artificial definition of the term "program".

I suggest to the Minister that the proposed amendment would strike out all references to non-programming by removing the references to alphanumeric text. This would ensure that both programming and non-programming carried on under a broadcast undertaking would fall under the Broadcasting Act rather than telecommunications, and that the jurisdiction would be that of the CRTC. I think that would be quite consistent with what we have had to say and I suggest that this is a very important amendment.

We could have a situation where the commission would be in a position of trying to define or to direct what would be a program under a programming undertaking. In their particular brief they state that the court could decide that the commission only had jurisdiction over the operation of a distribution program, that it could find that the physical apparatus constituted two undertakings, one a program undertaking and one a non-program undertaking. There would then be confusion as to who has the right under the law to make certain decisions or to try to indicate the kind of programming that should be carried on in this undertaking.

The courts could decide that it would be unwise to create two undertakings and look to the predominant characteristic, programming versus non-programming of the operation, to determine exactly what they are dealing with. That test could be applied in any way the court saw fit and we would be in a very serious jurisdictional dispute because non-programming services could fall under provincial jurisdiction. We are then into a battle between the federal and provincial jurisdictions.

As well, it would be seriously unfair to the regulated broadcasters who would have to meet the objectives set out in Clause 3 with all the attendant costs. The commission would not be able to ensure that it is a level playing field and that similar operations are regulated in a similar way.

I suggest to the Minister as well that when a broadcaster has the right to use the services of the public airwaves and is using that service partly for alphanumeric advertising and partly for programming it becomes a blurred situation. If you are running an 18 or 20-hour service, what percentage of that service will be alphanumeric, what percentage would be a pay service or speciality service, and who would determine at what point that percentage falls under the CRTC's right to dictate? What percentage would fall under alphanumeric and non-regulated and would, therefore, not be a contributing factor to the broadcasting policies of the country?

The Minister wants Canadian content. There is also the potential that if it is more than 50 or 60 per cent it could be owned by other than Canadians. By reinforcing the meaning of what a program is in the Broadcasting Act, that is, that it is intended to inform, enlighten, or entertain, one would be in a position to ensure that everyone who uses our airwaves for gain and to entertain is using a public facility and would, therefore, fall under the regulations of the CRTC.

The CRTC was very firm in its concerns in this matter. It believes there is a potential for a jurisdictional battle between the federal and provincial interests. I suggest that the Minister reconsider her definition of program. She should leave no question marks with respect to what a program is in the eyes of this very important industry. She should recognize that the standing committee gave this issue very serious concern and found that excluding alphanumerics would not be in the best interests of the broadcasting policies of Canada. I recommend that the Minister reconsider her definition of "program" as found in Clause 2 of the Bill.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to speak on this particular motion. I will speak on the motion first and then broaden it out to some general comments on the Bill itself. As I understand Motion No. 7 of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), it simplifies the definition of programming. It responds to the concern expressed by the Canadian Radio and Television Telecommunications Commission and others with the splitting of the undertaking between programming and non-programming parts. This could have highly negative effects for the CRTC's jurisdiction over closed captioning, for example, as the Hon. Member for Mount Royal mentioned.

The commission told us that engineering experts have advised that intellectual matter contained in the vertical blanking interval of a television signal can be considered to be separate and apart from the main transmission. It is this vertical blanking interval which is used by broadcasters to supply closed captions, that is, alphanumeric material for use by the hearing impaired. The current definition of "program" may mean that we lose control over this important area of broadcasting, and that is why we in the NDP would support the amendment of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal.

While I am up I would like to tie this amendment in to the general position on the Bill. When the broadcasting Bill first came forward no one thought that it would ever get this far. We thought that we were going to have a general election before then. We have not yet had the election. We may have it and we may not have it. Everyone on the Hill is expecting it, but today less than yesterday. So here we are debating the Bill.

I think it is important that we give the Bill the utmost consideration. There has not been a Broadcasting Act in 20 years, not since 1968. This is an important Bill in a vitally important area about which Canadians are concerned.

I just paid my cable fee last week. It went up quite dramatically. We are all concerned about this subject, whether it is paying cable fees, the kind of programming we get, the CBC, or whatever. Everybody has an opinion on it and they are important opinions.

Mr. Mayer: When do you have time to watch TV?

Mr. Waddell: The Hon. Member asks when I have time to watch TV. That is a good question. I watch it diligently when I can.

When this Bill first came forward it was widely criticized by almost every group except the cable industry which benefits from this Bill. It was especially criticized by the CRTC and the CBC.

The Minister has made some changes in the Bill and I congratulate her for that. The Minister and I have had our differences. We debate hard in this House but, as I have said many times, I have always had a great deal of respect for her and sometimes she has respect for me.

However, with respect to this Bill I feel that instead of getting hit with a two-by-four we are now getting hit by a little stick. In my view the Minister still has some way to go in order to make this a Bill that we, at least on this side of the House, could support. We have moved a number of amendments to this Bill and we will see what happens as the amendments are introduced. It is not our intention to delay this Bill abnormally or to prolong it, but to give it the proper debate and to work through the amendments.

I have concerns in a number of areas. I do not have time to mention them now, but I will return to them when we get the ruling on Clause 3 of the Bill. Some of the concerns that we will be approaching in the debate are the North Americanization, as I see it, of our broadcasting system and what, if anything, this Bill does to stop that. Another is the increased role of cable operators, which I have called the big winners under this Bill, and whether or not they should have the ability to broadcast as well as to transmit, and whether that is too much of a conflict and too much of a monopoly.

The other matters are, of course, the regulations with respect to private television to legislate, so far as that is possible, some quality programming from Canadian private broadcasters who are making progress in that area but in the past have been lax, I think, in producing good quality Canadian programming.

We also have concerns about educational broadcasters and other definitions in the Bill, as well as the role of the CBC. While that is not specifically in the Bill, it refers to the matters of cut-backs in Canadian broadcasting.

Finally, we have a concern about how the Bill fits into the free trade deal. I have told the Minister in the House before that there has been a retreat in terms of film policy and publishing policy because that is what the Americans wanted. That was part of the trade-off for the Free Trade Agreement.

In conclusion, let me indicate to the Minister that we are making real progress with the Bill and hope that we can make further progress in achieving a stronger Bill which will protect Canadian content and ensure that our air waves are for Canadians.

I think all Members will agree that our objective in the condominium debate and other debates about this Bill is to give Canadians a choice. However, part of that choice is to see high quality Canadian programming. That is essential for the survival of this country. We will be going through the clauses of the Bill with that in mind.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS—MOTIONS

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Before I call for the question on Motion No. 7, I have received written notice from the Hon. Member for Don Valley East (Mr. Attewell) that he is unable to move his motion during the hour of Private Members' Business on Thursday, September 15, 1988.

This is a motion designated "votable" by the Standing Committee on Private Members' Business, so requires consent of the House for it to be moved to the bottom of the order of precedence for debate. Is there consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Accordingly, I am directing the table Officers to drop that item of business to the bottom of the order of precedence.

Since notice will be removed, and it has not been possible to arrange for other Private Members' Business to take place tomorrow, the hour for Private Members' Business will be cancelled and, pursuant to Standing Order 39, the House will continue with the business before it prior to that hour.

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-136, an Act respecting broadcasting and to amend certain Acts in relation thereto and in relation to radiocommunication, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee; and the amendment of Mrs. Finestone (p. 19253).

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I want to make a few comments on this motion. The alphanumeric concept as it is applied to closed captioning for the hearing impaired is something very important for that community in this country. I think it is very important that we make sure that the ability of the CRTC to have jurisdiction over alphanumeric programming is not weakened or diluted by this Bill.

There are those who have argued that the definition of programming in this Bill will weaken or dilute the ability of the CRTC to deal with both alphanumeric programming and programming involving pictures. The definition of programming in the Bill could well mean that the commission may lose jurisdiction over this important aspect of broadcasting represented by the alphanumeric technology.

Furthermore, the CRTC said in its brief: "If the Commission's jurisdiction becomes the subject of litigation, the courts will be faced with the problem of when the commission has jurisdiction over an undertaking".

Let me illustrate this point by taking the following example: a television station, at certain periods of the day, broadcasts only alphanumeric texts. This may be from midnight to 6 a.m., as now frequently happens, or it may be for substantially longer portions of time. The question then arises: Does the commission have jurisdiction over this undertaking? If so, when?

We were told at the committee that a court would have at least two options open to it. The court could decide that the commission only has jurisdiction over the operation while it is distributing programming, that is to say, it could find that the physical apparatus constitutes two undertakings, one a program undertaking and one a non-programming undertaking. Thus, at times the operation would be answerable to the commission, for programming, and at other times it would not be, for non-programming.

Questions then arise. Could the commission force the operator to increase its programming activity? If it did, it would be increasing the undertaking.

Would the commission have the power to force one undertaking, programming, to encroach on another undertaking, non-programming, when it had no jurisdiction over the other? What happens when, during programming periods, non-programming occurs? For example, could a broadcaster circumvent the commercial content limits during programming periods by airing so-called non-programming commercials?

Profits made from non-programming enterprises could not be channelled to the production of Canadian programs unless the commission had jurisdiction over the entire undertaking. That is why the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture in an all-Party report, its sixth report, addressed the term "programming" and in effect recommended against splitting programming and non-programming on the basis of whether it would be alphanumeric or pictures.

The House should adopt the recommendation of the Standing Committee which said that in its view the term "programming" should be defined broadly in the Act to cover all forms of audio and video content, including entertainment, information, and advertising, disseminated to the public over broadcasting undertakings.

The recommendation goes on to say:

> While the terms "program" and "programming" are not defined in the 1968 Act, the CRTC defined the term "programming" in the Cable Television Regulations, 1986, so as to exclude alphanumeric services with music and still images. In the Committee's view the distinction between these kinds of services and full video services has and will become increasingly blurred.

The committee goes on to say:

> It is essential that the Act clearly categorize all such services as "programming"—

I hope the House will accept the point of view I have expressed. It is based on a careful study of the matter as recommended by our very distinguished critic, the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone).

I want to commend the Member for the outstanding work she has done in the study of this Bill and for the development of very constructive amendments. In her work she has taken a broad constructive view of broadcasting in this country, a view that now appears to have the support of all those concerned with broadcasting in Canada.

These groups have now come to the point where they unanimously support the point of view expressed by the Hon. Member for Mount Royal, speaking in her capacity as critic for the Liberal Party. I believe the Minister and the Government should pay serious attention to the views expressed by the Hon. Member for Mount Royal, reflecting now, as they do, the almost unanimous viewpoint of all those connected with broadcasting in Canada.

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I want to say with respect to this particular amendment that obviously there is a difference between what the opposition critic considers as programming and what the Government considers as programming. We have a different definition.

Let me make it clear that the comments made in applying this to closed captioning are totally wrong. It does not apply to closed captioning. I also want to underline the fact that in our broadcast policy we have stated very clearly our commitment to closed captioning and to the needs of other disabled groups in our society.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The question is on Motion No. 7, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

• (1730)

The next motion to be considered is Motion No. 8.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 2 by adding immediately after line 8 at page 3 the following:

"(3) For greater certainty, subsection 2(2) of this Act applies to closed-circuit transmissions carried on a distribution undertaking."

She said: Mr. Speaker, I want to say that just having arrived from our Jewish New Year celebrations and finding that a new Bill has been printed, it is taking me a few minutes to find the numbers that go together.

Mr. Edwards: Happy New Year.

Mrs. Finestone: I thank the Hon. Member, Mr. Speaker.

This amendment deals with closed-circuit transmissions. The concern here is with respect to the definition of closed caption, the closed caption system under the Broadcast Act. One matter with which we have been concerned, which also relates to the amendment to Clause 7 which was just defeated, something which I hope the Government will reconsider, is that the CRTC brings its concerns to our attention from long periods of experience. It is as a result of this experience that it is able to highlight the concerns that it has as a regulatory body. This quasi-judicial body is made up of very knowledgeable people who bring to our attention some errors that have occurred in its view and from its experience. This is another one of those concerns which it has brought to our attention as have TV Ontario and McCarthy and McCarthy, legal counsel to the Agency for Tele Education in Canada.

One matter I have tried to bring to the attention of the Minister with this motion is that one element of Bill C-136 is the new definition of "broadcasting" which includes distribution not only by radio waves—and we have evolved technologically speaking since, and the Minister has talked about being technologically neutral in these Bills—but by other means of telecommunication. The implication upon federal-provincial jurisdiction is uncertain. I have mentioned to the Minister many times the concern for this lack of clarity between federal and provincial jurisdiction.

Here again, other means of telecommunications defined further in Clause 2 brings closed-circuit operations and systems under the Act. I do not think that that was the Minister's intention. It is quite likely that closed-circuit transmission on hybrid systems would be constitutionally under federal jurisdiction. Such systems involve the distribution of closed-circuit services through systems which would also distribute broadcast signals, that is, a cable television system or a MATV system. I do not believe that that is what the Minister wanted to do.

While the constitutional authority of the federal Government over closed-circuit services of hybrid systems has not been specifically addressed by the courts, most of the precedents point to federal jurisdiction. The legislative committee was advised that the situation deals with purely closed-circuit systems, for example, systems used to monitor the safety and security of one's apartment building. It is a system which might monitor a play-yard outside of one's place of residence where one's child might be playing. It is a system which monitors a swimming pool in which one takes one's daily constitutional. All these are on closed-circuit television systems that are not in the true and traditional sense of the word "television" programming. It is a different form that offers a service that is outside what I believe were the concepts of broadcasting which the Minister has considered. These are systems which are not used for retransmission of conventional off-air broadcast signals. They are under provincial jurisdiction.

McCarthy and McCarthy stated that under Bill C-136 while purporting to apply to such operations, it would probably be held to be inoperative by the courts on the basis of the federal-provincial division of powers in the Constitution. The law firm went on to state that so long as a purely closed-circuit system did not cross provincial boundaries it would not appear to be subject to federal jurisdiction. As well, the CRTC has expressed concern regarding closed-circuit systems being subject to CRTC jurisdiction. In order to prevent the reopening of old legal issues I have made this amendment to bring clarity to the place of the closed-circuit system within our television broadcasting system, that which can legally fall under the federal jurisdiction and that which is purely provincial in matter and should not in any way, shape, or form be trapped in the over-all broad definition of broadcasting as we presently see it under the Bill. This motion is in the interests of clarity only. It is to ensure that we do not fall into an unnecessary legal harangue. I bring this amendment to the attention of the Minister for serious consideration and approval.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The question is on Motion No. 8, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the motion stands deferred.

The next grouping of motions is Motions Nos. 31, 42, 72, and 77. They will be debated together but voted on separately.

Since the Hon. Member for York East is not in the House, do I have unanimous consent to allow another Hon. Member to move his motion?

Mr. Lesick: I will, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. William G. Lesick (for Mr. Redway) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by adding immediately after line 37 at page 5 the following:

"(m) programming that reflects the multicultural and multilingual nature of Canada should be provided within the broadcasting system as resources become available for the purpose;".

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by striking out line 8 at page 7 and substituting the following therefor:

"subsection, and in particular provide access for underserved linguistic and cultural minority communities."

Miss MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I would just like to interrupt to say that I am prepared to accept Motion No. 42.

• (1740)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The next motion is Motion No. 72.

Mr. William G. Lesick (for Mr. Redway) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 34 by adding immediately after line 29 at page 24 the following:

"(3) At least one director shall be representative of the interests of the ethnic and visible minorities and the appointment of that director subject to the consultation by the Minister of the groups and organizations that he deems representative of such minorities."

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 74 by adding immediately after line 26 at page 45, the following:

"(3) At least one member of the Commission shall be representative of the interests of the ethnic and visible minorities and the appointment of that member is subject to the consultation by the Minister of the groups and organizations that he deems representative of such minorities."

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): On debate, the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to speak on the amendment put forward by the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway). My Motion No. 31A was quite similar. I do not believe that mine was in order, but the amendment of the Hon. Member for York East was accepted. Basically they are both attempting to do the same thing. The amendment of the Hon. Member for York East is to change page 5, line 37, of Clause 3 which is the broadcasting policy for Canada. The Bill sets out some general policies: "It is hereby declared as the broadcasting policy for Canada that" and a series of things follows. At page 5, line 37, it states that "programming that reflects the aboriginal cultures of Canada should be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system as resources become available".

The Hon. Member for York East seeks to put in "programming that reflects the multicultural and multilingual nature of Canada should be provided". My motion stated: "programming that reflects the multicultural and multilingual nature of Canada should be provided within the system". The motion of the Hon. Member states: "as resources become available". I am a little more in a hurry. I say let's do it. The phrase "as resources become available" is a good excuse for some bureaucrat to state that it cannot be done because resources could never be available.

The main thrust of this amendment and of the other amendments, Motions Nos. 42, 72, and 77, is to deal with the multicultural nature of Canada. This came out during the hearings where multicultural groups appeared before the legislative committee and stated: "Look, you have not put us in there. We want to be put in and recognized as a separate group in Canada, as an interest or a group that demands some attention, some consideration, and has to take a place within the other groups of Canada". There is legitimacy to this view.

The best thing to do is go back to the time when Canada repatriated the Constitution in 1981. In that, what I could call the "Trudeau repatriation", there was a recognition in that Constitution, simply put, that Canada was like a cake. In that cake was the aboriginal peoples at the base, and they are recognized in this Bill. Beside the aboriginal peoples were the French and the English, the two founding language peoples of the country from the European civilization. On top was the multicultural nature of Canada.

After much debate, many changes, and many constitutional fights, we did get a Constitution that reflected what I would call the modern nature of Canada. We have much to do with respect to the aboriginal peoples; we are incomplete. Aboriginal self-government is one area. Better aboriginal broadcasting is another area. Much has been done in terms of French and English educational rights. Of course, our multicultural people are on top of that as a recognition of the new part of the country. For example, in my present riding of Vancouver—Kingsway a majority of people do not speak English as their first language. As a matter of fact, 35 per cent to 40 per cent of the people are Asian Canadians. They have particular needs in the broadcasting system.

This amendment seeks to give a recognition in broadcasting policy, and put very simply, that we have to pay attention to the multicultural nature of Canada. Shortly, my colleague, the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon (Mr. Epp) will speak as the multicultural critic in much greater depth and with better knowledge than I have.

In committee we made real progress on the human rights section, Clause 3(1)(c)(iii). The Minister put forward a good amendment, and then made it even better by accepting my subamendment dealing with equal rights. I appreciate that. It has been greeted with satisfaction by many multicultural and women's groups, and others.

In addition, we greatly improved the alternative section to alleviate the fears of many that the alternative service would relieve other broadcasters from multicultural responsibilities. Sometimes the language of this broadcasting policy is so complicated that people do not understand what you are talking about. There is provision in this Bill for an alternate television service. Concern was expressed that that would be where things are stuck and ghettoized. Multiculturalism is stuck in there, some science shows, and the intellectual shows. We did not want to do that. We were very open to the notion, and I believe everyone was, of an alternate service. We did want to ensure that that was not a ghettoized service. For example, we wanted to ensure that the CBC would not forget its mandate to produce Canadian programs and programs to which Canadian women have equality and access to that reflect their interest. That is in the Bill. The same with multiculturalism.

We would like amendments to recognize the multicultural nature of Canada as a new Canadian reality to be reflected in the broadcast system, but we do not want to hive it off to one little ghettoized part of the system. That is why we wanted it included in the general part of the system. Far be it from me to speak for the Hon. Member for York East who is older and much more experienced than I am. He has a lot more experience in municipal politics, and he is from the huge City of Toronto which believes it has a monopoly on all knowledge. Far be it from me, a little lawyer from Vancouver, to take away from what the Hon. Member for York East would say. However, had he proposed the amendment, I think he would probably have said: "Let's recognize the multicultural and multilingual aspect of Canada".

I would like to end my speech in Chinese. During the last election campaign I would go around door to door and say: Chi chi wy do, that is, vote for me in Chinese. Mr. Speaker, I am sure you understood that. Now that I am running in another riding I am speaking English and French more often.

We should recognize that there is a multilingual nature to this country and that there is a multicultural nature to this country. This is not to take away from the fact that the two founding language groups of this country are French and English. I do not want it to be confused that by recognizing the multilingual heritage we take away from the basic languages. French and English have a different status in this country than the other languages or cultures. However, that does not mean that they cannot be recognized and made part of the Canadian mosaic. That is what I think the Hon. Member would have said. If he does not like what I have said, he could come back to the House and say something different.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): I am sorry that the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway) has not been able to stay with us and to carry on the support for his particular amendments. The amendments of the Member for York East are of interest. They reflect the ongoing concern that we have had. In both Motions Nos. 72 and 77 he is directing his concerns to the multi-ethnic character of Canada. He is talking about the need for the visible minorities and the ethnic groups to be represented on the board of directors of the CBC in the one case and in the CRTC and its establishment in the other case.

I would like to suggest that Mr. Redway reflects an ongoing concern that I and members of our committee have had—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): It is the Hon. Member for York East. Now that I have told you what riding he is in, I would appreciate it if you would address him as the Hon. Member for York East. Thank you.

Mrs. Finestone: I would be happy to address him as the Hon. Member for York East and also as Mr. Redway and, I am sure, as a good Member of the House of Commons.

What I was trying to get to, with respect to the principle and the philosophy behind the thought being expressed by this Hon. Member, was the fact that we wanted the multicultural aspect of Canada to be represented in every aspect of our society. It is not, I think, in the placing of amendments of this nature on the Order Paper or in a Bill. It is in the fullness of one's heart and in the logic of one's undertaking that the recognition of one-third of Canada is made up of people from a variety of ethnic groups and from many multicultural backgrounds. Only through including both the visible and the invisible minorities will we truly reflect the thinking of who and what we are as Canadians.

I do not think that we want to see any Canadian sidelined or isolated. We would like to see them mainstreamed in everything we do. They should be mainstreamed in terms of representation, on boards, on agencies, in commissions, as judges, in the courts, at the decision-making level as we are talking about broadcasting, as to the news that goes on our news broadcasts, as to the literature that we use to turn into a television program, and in any and every aspect of those matters which affect us as Canadians, because they are Canadians. I cannot see the importance of isolating in law that aspect of the responsibility of the CBC board or the commission. Those are the responsibility of nominations by Order in Council, by a Minister, and through the Government, and the sensitivity lies at that level.

I would presume that the Minister has made good appointments. She will continue to do so. I hope that subsequent Ministers will do the same thing. The boards of directors and the tribunal members of the commission will certainly and hopefully reflect the kinds of persons who make up the fabric of Canada.

It is a fundamental characteristic of Canada both in terms of our aboriginal peoples and of the multicultural peoples from over 100 nations across this world who have come to enrich the tapestry that forms the background and therefore reflect the personality that is Canada.

I would suggest that if the Minister feels that we need this kind of directive to sensitize the Minister and the Government of the day to the realities of Canada, so be it. I am of the view that that should be part and parcel of the mentality that one brings to the office and certainly to the position of a Minister, and certainly anyone with much sensitivity to Canada would do so.

Although the principle and the philosophy is an excellent one, I do not think that that should be implied in law.

Mr. William G. Lesick (Edmonton East): Mr. Speaker, I wish to speak in favour of the amendments as originally proposed by the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway) because the multicultural—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Red Deer on a point of order.

Mr. Towers: Mr. Speaker, my point of order is that the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway) is away out of necessity. He wanted to be here. He asked me if I would take his place in the House of Commons.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): That is a point of clarification. The Hon. Member for Edmonton East has the floor.

Mr. Lesick: Mr. Speaker, the recommendations and motions that we are discussing at this time are very necessary because of the 38 per cent multicultural nature of Canada. Thirty-eight per cent of the people are neither French-speaking nor of French origin or of English origin. They should be reflected in policies and in governing bodies in Canada. This has also been a feature of the multicultural thrust our Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney).

The Prime Minister has spoken about the fact that multiculturalism is a fact of life in Canada and that more boards should reflect that fact. In speaking on Motion No. 31, this is a direct recommendation of the Canadian Ethnocultural Council. This is its recommendation, and it has been given much thought. The Canadian Ethnocultural Council is composed of all ethnic origins within Canada. In its brief to the legislative committee on broadcasting for Bill C-136, it made a very strong plea that this recommendation be included.

Programming that reflects the multicultural-multilingual nature of Canada should be provided within the broadcasting system as resources become available for the purpose. Of course that makes good, common sense. Our Government is committed to it. It is a very normal and natural way to proceed rather than dogmatically proceeding with it in another manner.

Motion No. 72 indicates: "At least one director shall be representative of the interests of the ethnic and visible minorities and the appointment of that director subject to the consultation by the Minister of the groups and organizations that he deems representative of such minorities".

This is directly from the Canadian Ethnocultural Council recommendation. It is one that again reflects the Government's commitment toward multiculturalism and, in broadcasting, it is an area which has not been covered before. We must proceed with these recommendations. Motion No. 77, of course, goes on to talk about a commission. In speaking in favour of these several motions, I would suggest that it is essential that they be accepted.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I am going to recognize the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon. We are sitting until 6.16 p.m., so I hope the rest of the time could be split up between the Parliamentary Secretary and the Hon. Member.

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for confirming the length of time available. I will be governed accordingly. I appreciate the opportunity to say a little about these several motions proposed originally by the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway), who is unavoidably away at the moment as others have been noting. The motions endeavour to strengthen the broadcasting Bill in its recognition of the multicultural nature of our society.

Perhaps I may take a few moments, Mr. Speaker, to remind all of us that the Canadian Parliament adopted almost 17 years ago a statement of multicultural policy for the Government of Canada. It was a statement put forward at the time by the former Liberal Prime Minister, Mr. Trudeau, and was responded warmly to by Leaders of all three opposition Parties in the House of Commons. It was, then, with the approbation of all Parties that the Government of Canada launched this country on a broader policy than had prevailed before. The Official Languages Act had recognized the officially bilingual character but it was obviously inadequate to say the country was bicultural, so the statement of 1971 expanded on that.

As I have said before in another context, I think we would all have to concede, if we faced up to the matter, that the Government has honoured those principles more commonly in the breach of them than in the practice. I think the breach of them was never more obvious than in the area of broadcasting. It is one thing to assert that the Government of Canada should recognize no single official culture as prevalent but should endeavour to enhance all.

However, if at the same time broadcasting is given an enlarged lease on life with Canadian content being particularly important in broadcasting, whether it is in English or French, and the Department of Communications taking on larger functions—it was established as a Department with peculiar responsibilities to press these policies—I think we would have to recognize fairly quickly that the Government did very little to ensure that the 1971 policy of multiculturalism was a reality in broadcasting. Our concern now with these amendments, and in consideration of various parts of Clause 3, is to ensure that the Broadcasting Act of 1988-1989, whatever its date may prove to be, is actually more responsive to a policy which is now legislated in a Bill which has been given Royal Assent and is in fact an Act of the current Parliament.

I am not convinced that that is yet the case. There have been some improvements but it does not appear this afternoon, in the first response from the Minister to these several resolutions from her own caucus colleague, that acceptance of one of them will give us enough recognition in broadcasting, enough response in broadcasting, to the multicultural nature of the country. In looking over Clause 3 again in preparation for my speech and I noted, of course, that it suggests under subsection (c) that programming shall be responsive to the multicultural nature of Canadian society. However, the sections dealing with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, to which these amendments do not apply, I recognize, have not been changed. There is only that general responsibility laid on the entire system to be responsive that binds the CBC in any way if this Bill becomes law.

There are inadequacies and those are the ones responded to by the Hon. Member for York East, as well as by the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell), whose motion was not found in order because it attempted to put some pressure behind all of this. But the Member for York East is permissive, in the way these Bills all too often are, in allowing Government not to follow through, to lack the will to refuse to provide the resources so that statements of principle remain only that. Those questions, then, are being left academic for the moment, actually because the Minister does not appear prepared to accept Motion No. 31 which would add a new paragraph, following on very shortly after the sections relating to the CBC, that would add that the programming should reflect the multicultural and multilingual nature of Canada.

This particular motion, even in the weaker form proposed by the Hon. Member for York East, would do a good deal to add to the obligation which is not specifically in the Bill on the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and would be a useful addition. It is disappointing to have the Minister only accept Motion No. 42 in which some obligation is laid on distribution undertakings that brings us, of course, down to the community cable service. What is the community cable service going to be asked to do now? In particular, it will provide access for underserved linguistic and cultural minority communities. We know perfectly well from our experience in many communities what will happen. Certainly, I know from my experience in Thunder Bay with Maclean-Hunter Cable Television. I expect similar things have happened in Vancouver and Edmonton. I do not know whether they happen in Kingston, but I am sure they happen in Toronto. The fact is that the services are poorly financed. It is a matter of community broadcasting sometimes achieving a reasonably high level, but very often carried on on a shoestring with volunteers doing their best but not producing broadcasting that will attract many viewers.

With all the concern that others have expressed far more than I have about ghettoizing in this area, that seems to me to be a perfect example in a broadcasting Bill of ghettoizing this, leaving it to the desperate volunteers, those who will do it in any community, those who want to produce something but have so little in the way of resources, receiving only as much support as the cable service will provide. That is going to be the provision for the underserved multicultural, multilingual communities of the country, and that from a Government that says fine words about the multicultural Act is really quite shameful. I call on the Minister who recognizes the needs of the country to be responsive to Motion No. 31 as well as to Motion No. 42.

Mr. Jim Edwards (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, I will intervene very briefly in this debate to deal with Motion Nos. 31 and 72 in particular. I listened with care to my colleague from Edmonton East and to my colleague from Thunder Bay, and I admire the contribution they have made in the field of multiculturalism. I would, however, wish to point out that what we have here in Motion No. 31 is a motion which would declare Canada to be a country which is multilingual by nature. It may well be desirable to enhance multilingual programming, but to change the nature of Canada by implication through such an amendment is not appropriate. We are a multicultural and bilingual nation.

I would further point out that there is ample avenue provided for multicultural service, not ghettoed, ample avenue provided for multicultural programming in the new alternative programming service which, indeed, will become a stimulus to other broadcasters to recognize further the multicultural nature of our country.

Motion No. 72 would call upon the legislation to insist that one director of the corporation be designated as the advocate for multicultural and ethnic organizations. I would submit that that is inappropriate since, as my colleague from Thunder Bay pointed out, Bill C-93 is now the law of the land. Every Minister of the Crown, every officer of an agency of the Crown, now has a duty to see that that advocacy role is carried out. To single out one individual to do it is inappropriate and demeaning.

I would further suggest, Sir, that a member of such a board who might fit that designation would be offended to think that he or she had his or her role limited to such a function. We do not subscribe to tokenism in this country.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question?

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I wish some guidance from the Chair. We have Motion No. 31, and I proposed Motion No. 31A which is on page ix of the Order Paper and Notices. I am a little concerned about this. If the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway) were to withdraw his motion before there was a vote on it, I gather that would mean that my motion would not be considered at all.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): If the Hon. Member would just give the Chair a minute to review the Speaker's notes, I will inform him of that.

The Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway did submit his motion, but it came in late. There was unanimous consent to accept the motion of the Hon. Member for York East which was very similar to the Hon. Member's motion, and that is the reason Motion No. 31A is not being dealt with now.

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, suppose we now put this on for a vote and the Hon. Member for York East comes into the House next week or whenever this vote is taken and says that he wants to withdraw it. Then we could not vote on it. Is that what would happen?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway knows, because he has been around here for a long time, that he would have to have unanimous consent of the House to withdraw the motion.

Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The question is on Motion No. 31, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for York East.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 114 (11), the recorded division on the motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 42, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for York East. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I declare the motion carried.

Motion No. 42 (Mr. Redway) agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The next question is on Motion No. 72 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for York East. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the nays have it.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I declare the motion negatived.

Motion No. 72 (Mr. Redway) negatived.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The next question is on Motion No. 77, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for York East. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the nays have it.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I declare the motion negatived.

Motion No. 77 (Mr. Redway) negatived.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS—BILLS

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I rise to ask unanimous consent of the House to withdraw Bill C-247 standing in my name. I have consulted with the other Parties on this matter.

Mr. Speaker: Is that agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Order discharged and Bill withdrawn.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS—MOTIONS

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, I rise to ask unanimous consent of the House to withdraw a motion standing in my name, namely, M-162.

Mr. Speaker: Is that agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion (Mr. Caccia) withdrawn.

PETITIONS

GOVERNMENT RESPONSE

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 106(8), I have the honour to table, in both official languages, the Government's response to Petitions Nos. 332-5290 to 332-5293 inclusive, 332-5300 and 332-5301.

[Editor's Note: See today's Votes and Proceedings.]

ENVIRONMENT AND FORESTRY

PRESENTATION OF SECOND REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present, in both official languages, the second report of the Standing Committee on Environment and Forestry entitled The Argument for Integrated Forest and Wildlife Management in Canada. Pursuant to Standing Order 99(2), the committee requests a comprehensive response.

The committee convened a day of stimulating public hearings, bringing together representatives of the wildlife conservation movement, the forestry sector, native groups, the federal Government, and academia, to address the urgent issues of harmonizing the objectives of forestry management and wildlife conservation.

It is the opinion of the committee that the time to take action has come. Goals consistent with sustainable development must be developed in order to achieve a rational use ethic for forest resources that would preserve both forests and wildlife.

The committee also recommends that federal-provincial forest resource development agreements include integrated wildlife and forestry objectives which would ensure achievement of those goals.

Hon. Pierre H. Cadieux (for the Minister of Employment and Immigration) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-158, an Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House that the Hon. Minister shall have leave to introduce the Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

CANADA ASSISTANCE PLAN

MEASURE TO AMEND

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-326, an Act to amend the Canada Assistance Plan, (provincial costs).

Mr. Speaker: Shall the Hon. Member have leave to introduce the said Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Ms. Mitchell: Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to be able to speak to this proposed Private Member's Bill. It is on a subject related to the Canada Assistance Plan which has been a concern of groups across the country for some time, and it concerns access to information. The purpose of this Bill is to require the provinces to provide the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) with a statement of the amounts that they contributed in providing assistance and welfare services. These amounts would then be published in the annual report laid before Parliament pursuant to the Canada Assistance Plan.

It is almost impossible to find out from provinces how much they are spending in total on welfare services which are cost shared with the federal Government. Many advocacy groups, consumer groups, social policy groups, and others have tried to do this. We know that there has been dramatic underspending of the amount that has been allocated. Certainly, the Standing Committee on Health and Welfare and the child care committee have talked about this matter. It means that with the high incidence of poverty low income families, particularly those with children, are not getting the kind of services to which they are entitled under the Canada Assistance Plan.

We would like the provinces to be required to publish what they are spending so that groups can in turn ask for the kinds of services and expenditures to which they are entitled under this Act. Of course those are cost shared by the federal Government.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

BANK ACT

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-327, an Act to amend the Bank Act (fair banking practices).

Mr. Speaker: Shall the Hon. Member have leave to introduce the said Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, the reason I have introduced this Bill—and the Bill is entitled an Act to ensure consumer protection and financial services—is that the Canadian chartered banks have proven themselves incapable of voluntarily complying with the recommendations of the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs. The fact that the Government accepted the banks' breast beating that they will voluntarily comply is a sham. My Bill will in fact force the banks, by legislation, to provide basic accounts with no charges for those accounts and no charges for deposits and withdrawals.

More important, this Bill will extend to small businesses across Canada all the protections which the McCrossan Bill had provided to consumers. Moreover, my Bill will also immediately impose a one-year freeze on all service charges and fines from $25,000 to $250,000 for any infractions.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

PETITIONS

PROPOSED CANADA CHILD CARE ACT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure today to present two petitions, one on behalf of a number of constituents who believe that the Child Care Act proposed by the Government contains neither national objectives nor necessary funding arrangements to ensure that families have access to high quality child care. They believe that the Act is not in the best interest of young children, women, or families in Canada.

Therefore, they are asking the Government of Canada to withdraw the Child Care Act forthwith.

CANADA-U.S. FREE TRADE AGREEMENT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): The second petition is on a different topic. A number of constituents are very concerned that the proposed trade deal between Canada and the United States threatens our country's sovereignty. They actually believe, and I support it, that the Government does not have a mandate even to negotiate this deal with the United States. They also believe that the result will be that it will reduce our country's ability to plan our economic, social and cultural future.

Therefore, they are asking that Parliament now ensure that a national debate takes place on this issue and that this debate results in a national general election.

PROPOSED CANADA CHILD CARE ACT

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition on child care. It is basically signed by people from Manitoba. I am sure the Minister responsible for the Child Care Act will be interested in what the people from his province say.

They claim that the Canada Child Care Act as proposed by the Government contains neither national objectives nor necessary funding arrangements and will not ensure that families have access to high quality child care. They believe that it is in the best interest of young children, women, and families in Canada for Parliament to withdraw the Canada Child Care Act forthwith.

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and responsibility to table a petition signed by Canadians in Ottawa, Peterborough, Oshawa, Brantford, Waubaushene, Cookstown, Whitby, and Thunder Bay, Ontario.

These Canadians point out that families throughout Canada need high quality, available, affordable child care services. They further point out that the Child Care Act proposed by the Government of Canada contains neither national objectives nor necessary funding arrangements and will not ensure that families have access to high quality child care.

They further conclude that the proposed Child Care Act is not in the best interest of young children, women, or families in Canada. They call upon Parliament to withdraw the Child Care Act immediately.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I also have a petition on the same subject from citizens who live in Ottawa, Etobicoke, Windsor, and Toronto. They are joining with many other people across Canada to stress that Canada needs high quality, available, affordable child care services, that this has been repeatedly recommended by groups across Canada, and that there should be national objectives and funding mechanisms to develop a comprehensive non-profit child care system which is accessible to all families across Canada.

The petitioners feel that the Child Care Act proposed by the Government contains neither objectives nor necessary funding arrangements to achieve this goal. Therefore they propose and humbly pray and call upon Parliament to withdraw the Child Care Act forthwith.

PROTECTION OF RIGHTS OF THE UNBORN

Mr. Thomas Suluk (Nunatsiaq): Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege and honour to present a petition signed by some 298 residents in the communities of Eskimo Point and Baker Lake in the Northwest Territories, who are extremely concerned with the abortion issue.

The petition of the undersigned residents of Canada, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide remedy, whereas recognizing the infinite value and dignity of the unborn human person regardless of its stage of development or maturity.

The petitioners hope that in your examination of this petition you will find the petition in order and that you will exercise the discretionary powers vested in the office of the Speaker of the House of Commons to allow discussion and referral to a committee at the earliest possible time, in order that the use of abortion be eliminated except in circumstances where the life of the mother is endangered.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANADA CHILD CARE ACT

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-144, an Act to authorize payments by Canada toward the provision of child care services, and to amend the Canada Assistance Plan in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee.

Mr. Speaker: There are 40 motions and amendments set down on the Notice Paper in relation to Bill C-144, an Act to authorize payments by Canada toward the provision of child care services, and to amend the Canada Assistance Plan in consequence thereof.

[Translation]

At this point I am prepared to hand down a preliminary ruling in order to let the debate proceed.

I will try to address the House as soon as possible to hand down a more exhaustive ruling.

[English]

Motion No. 3 standing in the name of the Minister of National Health and Welfare is in order. It will be debated and voted upon separately.

Motion No. 15, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) is in order. It will be debated and voted on separately.

[English]

Motion No. 18 standing in the name of the Minister of National Health and Welfare, and Motions Nos. 21 and 22 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Outremont are in order. They will be grouped for debate but voted upon separately.

[Translation]

Motions Nos. 27, 33, 34 and 40, standing in the name of the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) and Motion No. 38, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) are in order. They will be debated and voted on separately.

[English]

Consequently, I shall put Motion No. 3 to the House.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare) moved:

Motion No. 3

That Bill C-144 be amended in Clause 2 be amended in the French version

(a) by striking out line 5 at page 3 and substituting the following therefor:

"services de garde Les services dispensés aux"

(b) by striking out lines 19 and 20 at page 3 and substituting the following therefor:

"services de garde fournis en milieu familial sous l'autorité directe".

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), on a point of order.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, if I am not mistaken, your ruling deals with amendments that have been presented and ruled in order for debate in the House at this time. Are we to assume that all motions not mentioned in your ruling this morning have been ruled out of order? Furtheremore, in your note, you say: I will try to address the House as soon as possible to hand down a more exhaustive ruling. I wonder what that is actually supposed to mean? Do you intend to bring in further rulings on other amendments that were proposed or are we to assume that the amendments ruled in order this morning are those that will be called for debate, while the remaining amendments are not in order?

[English]

Mr. Speaker: I thank the Hon. Member for his intervention. In the interests of clarity I would want to make it very clear to the Hon. Member, and to all Members of the House, that I will be returning soon with further comment. That does not mean that motions that have not been mentioned at the moment are necessarily out of order.

What we have been trying to do recently, and Hon. Members will have noticed this, is I have tried to come in and get the debate going on the motions which are easiest, from my point of view, which means that we are doing some serious thinking about the other ones now. I will come in front of the House as soon as I can.

On debate, the Hon. Minister.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, I am going to withhold any remarks regarding the work of the committee at this stage and just directly refer to Motion No. 3.

Members of the committee who are present in the House will recall that there were a number of areas where the French and the English needed clarification in terms of usage of words. Members will find, if I am in order, Mr. Speaker, that the new amendments that we have come forward with, in addition to the amendments that were proposed at the legislative committee, are what I guess we will call euphemistically around here "clean-up motions", that is, to clean up the language between the two official languages.

Motion No. 3 standing in my name is for the purposes of clarification of the French word "soin" to be replaced by "services" in keeping with common usage, and it is the common usage of terms that Motion No. 3 takes care of.

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I agree wholeheartedly with the amendment proposed by the Minister, because it is true that the French text refers to "soins" instead of "services", and since in Quebec, the Office des services de garde uses the word "services", it will make it easier all round. I fully support this amendment.

[English]

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I also concur of course with this motion and rely on the judgment of my friend, the Hon. Member for Outremont (Mrs. Pépin).

I would like to say, however, that because of the extreme pressure that was put on the legislative committee with only two days to consider these amendments—really only one day to consider the amendments and only two days to hear from witnesses—that it made the work of the committee almost impossible. Certainly, the translations at that time for many of the amendments were not available. That is very unfortunate.

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I think the Minister has pointed out exactly what the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) is now alluding to. The fact is that we have never seen a committee of this House forced into such quick study of such a major item. The Government is promoting its child care legislation. The Opposition and many groups across the country have found fault with that legislation, but those groups were only entitled to two days of hearings in front of a House of Commons committee. That is almost unheard of.

The Government has said that this Bill will cost billions of dollars. This is an election promise that was made in 1984. It took the Government four years—almost four years to the day—to introduce this legislation into the House of Commons. Yet there are people from my riding, people from western Canada, who were not given the opportunity to come before the committee.

I am not surprised that the Government at this stage is still cleaning up its technical amendments because it never gave people a chance to come in front of that committee. It never gave that committee a chance to travel. It never allowed people from the North, from the West, from the East, to come in front of that committee. I think that was completely unfair and is indicative of the way this Government has run roughshod over the people who are concerned about child care—mothers, families, and grandparents. It is indicative of the arrogance of this Government and it is one of the reasons it will not be re-elected.

Motion No. 3 (Mr. Epp, Provencher) agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Motion No. 15 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver East is in order and will be debated and voted on separately.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East) moved:

That Bill C-144 be amended in Clause 3 by adding immediately after line 2 at page 4 the following:

"(3) Upon execution of agreements, amendment to that agreement or renewal of an agreement, a notice shall be published, in relation thereof, in the Canada Gazette. These agreements will be available upon request from the Department of National Health and Welfare."

She said: Mr. Speaker, in a way, this motion is very similar to the Private Member's Bill to which I referred earlier. It contains the same principle, the principle of access to information.

It is quite often difficult for organizations, the public at large, and clients of the welfare system to get general information about matters that affect their lives and their tax dollars. In our experience, it has been difficult to obtain regulations of the Canada Health Act and information about the Act. Similarly, it is difficult to obtain information about what the provinces are spending or not spending under the Canada Assistance Plan. We wanted to ensure that there be a way of publishing information relating to child care and that this be compulsory so that the public will have access to this information.

We are proposing therefore that when agreements are made between the federal Government and individual provinces, agreements that will likely be different in each case, or when there are amendments to or renewals of the agreements, something which we would like to see every five years, incidentally, this must be made public. We are suggesting that that information be published in The Canada Gazette.

Furthermore, since The Canada Gazette would contain only very general references, and many Canadians do not know about The Canada Gazette, we feel that these agreements should be public information available upon request from the Department of National Health and Welfare. We believe that this is quite important.

In committee, the Minister did agree to publication of the notice of these agreements and renewal or amendment of the agreements being published in The Canada Gazette and that they would be available from the Department of National Health and Welfare. Therefore, we expect that there will be unanimous consent for this amendment.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): No, Mr. Speaker, there is not unanimous consent for the amendment. The argument put forward by the Hon. Member in her last comments has already covered this area, and I will tell Hon. Members why in a moment.

I fully agree that the public should have full access to notification of any agreements or any amendments to agreements or any curtailment of agreements. There is no problem with that, and in fact the amendment in legislative committee which was accepted unanimously by all Members does just that.

Second, through gazetting any changes to agreements or any new agreements entered into by the Government or any provinces, as is the case under the Canada Assistance Plan, people are given the opportunity to study the agreements. Quite frankly, there is a logistical problem in terms of publication of all the agreements. There is obviously a cost factor involved as well.

Additionally, there is a problem with the technical form of the amendment. The Department of National Health and Welfare need not be responsible for the distribution of these government documents. As well, the changes in the Standing Orders of the House of Commons must be taken into consideration when dealing with this amendment.

Hon. Members should be reminded of the new Standing Orders of the House, although we are working under interim Standing Orders, but they could of course become permanent. As you well know from your vast experience, Mr. Speaker, things around here that are temporary temporarily become permanent.

Under the Standing Orders, all these reports are immediately the subject and the property of the respective parliamentary committee. Therefore, the debate in the legislative committee covered all these bases, and it is for those reasons that I would reject this amendment.

[Translation]

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I agree with this resolution. The reasons are quite simple. Most people who appeared before us are very concerned about service quality and about standards. It seems that this law will set a precedent whereby the provinces are given the right to determine their own quality standards. In the Bill, the federal Government still has a say in the number of places and the quality of staff. But nevertheless, given that these services are as important as health care services in Canada, I think the changes should be published. Obviously, the Minister brings in the cost argument. But I do not think that it would cost a fortune and that that argument alone justifies not publishing changes to the new Act. So I support this amendment because I feel it is important and in the public interest for everyone to know what is happening in child care services in Canada.

[English]

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the amendment standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell). After hearing the Minister's remarks, I think it is important for us to look at what the amendment actually says. It says that upon execution of these agreements, amendments to the agreements or renewal of the agreements, notices shall be published in relation thereto in The Canada Gazette and that these agreements will be available upon request from the Department of National Health and Welfare.

I do not understand why the Government is so afraid of letting people know what agreements it has signed with the provinces. We are talking about child care here, a program which exists for the public. Since the agreements will be gazetted in any event, as the Minister has said, why then is he reluctant to have in legislation a clause indicating that the agreements will be available to the public upon request?

We are not dealing with a massive mail-out. We are saying that those interested Canadians who would like information about the agreements affecting child care in their provinces or territories would be able to phone or write the Department of National Health and Welfare to ask for copies of the agreements. We are talking about the rights of concerned citizens to have access to information.

As I said in my earlier intervention, the Government seems to want to do a big public relations job on child care, but when it came down to letting the people speak before the parliamentary committee, they were denied that opportunity, even though there were requests from people from the Minister's own province in western Canada. Now, after the Government will negotiate agreements with the various provinces, it will not be willing to make copies of the agreements available to the public.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Not true.

Mr. Murphy: If it is not true, why did the Minister say that he would not put this amendment into legislation? Why would he not say that the public has a right to obtain those agreements from the Department?

• (1140)

Mr. Epp (Provencher): That is not true.

Mr. Murphy: The Minister says it is not true. Perhaps he or someone on his behalf could explain why he opposes this amendment. All it does is guarantee the right of access. However, in his intervention he seemed to indicate that there is a massive problem with it when obviously there is not.

[Translation]

Mrs. Monique Tardif (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I too wish to express my disagreement with the motion now before us. I believe that this amendment should be defeated, and I will tell you why. Information on the signed agreements on the amendments will already be in the official Gazette—it will be on record. However, it is uncertain whether responsibility for distributing these documents will belong to the Department of National Health and Welfare. So it is already possible to do so. Who will distribute them? It is not certain that it will be the Department of National Health and Welfare. So I think that since the Bill is now before us and notice for obtaining copies has already been in the Gazette, there is no need for further changes.

[English]

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have a chance to say a few words in response to both the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) and his Parliamentary Secretary. We have heard on a number of occasions that the Government is concerned about the distribution of these documents.

Mrs. Tardif (Charlesbourg): No.

Mr. Riis: If that is the concern, we ought to submit an amendment to this motion. All we are saying is that since the taxpayers of Canada at either the provincial or federal level are providing the funds for this service, they ought to have access to the documents. I become very suspicious of a Government which says that it does not want to tell the people what it is doing. It does not want to let the people in on the agreement it is signing with the provinces.

What we are saying is that upon execution of agreements between the federal and provincial Governments, or the amendment or renewal of an existing agreement, a notice shall be published in The Canada Gazette. Surely there is no problem with that. I cannot imagine that people would be concerned about that, so let us assume we all agree that is either being done or will be done and therefore there should be no hesitation to include it.

Then the motion goes on to say that these agreements will be available upon request to the Department of National Health and Welfare. We are not suggesting that the Department ought to go to a major expense to distribute copies of these technical agreements to people. I suppose you could make a case for that, but it would enable all sorts of groups to become more informed about just what the agreement is between the federal Government and their particular province. However, set that aside and say that it is not necessary. Then all we are saying is that if an agency, organization, advocacy group, individual, or whatever decided to find out more about the nature of the agreement signed between the federal and provincial Governments, those agreements would be available if a request were made of the Minister of National Health and Welfare or his Department. Surely to goodness there ought to be no hesitation over that. Therefore, based on that, I would like to move a subamendment, seconded by the Hon. Member for Windsor—Walkerville (Mr. McCurdy):

That the motion be amended by removing the period after the word "welfare" and adding the words:

"Or some other federal government Department or agency".

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I will accept the amendment.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, the Minister of National Health and Welfare and his Parliamentary Secretary have indicated a concern that their Department may not be the appropriate government Department to provide that information. I think we have to respect that point of view. The Minister's officials have obviously made it clear that that would be the case. Perhaps this amendment, which is essentially a friendly amendment, would indicate that we are not concerned that it be the Department of National Health and Welfare. It could be any appropriate government Department, whatever it might be. Presumably the Minister would be in a position to determine just what that Department would be.

I emphasize again that we are talking about agreements between the federal and provincial Governments involving substantial amounts of taxpayers' money. Surely to goodness the people who are footing the Bill for these agreements and the services they provide ought to have the right to find out the details of the agreements. It is not impossible to get those agreements now. All we are saying is: let us facilitate and encourage this openness. Let us not hide or cover up. Quite frankly, let us facilitate getting this information into the hands of interested individuals or organizations.

I think the amendment provides flexibility and a variety of options from which the Minister may choose. Therefore, I think it not only meets our concern as reflected in the motion, but in a sense it also meets the concerns that the Minister brought to our attention with respect to his Department.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, I think we are making some progress. I would like to ask the indulgence of the House because I could see the latter part of the amendment moved by the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) as acceptable. My problem is, and possibly the House can come to some agreement, if Members look at subclause (3) at the top of page 4 of the amended Bill, the Government moved an amendment which was unanimously accepted. By my reading of that amended version of the Bill, it calls for the same thing as the first sentence of the motion of the Hon. Member. I will come to the second sentence in a minute.

It appears to me that the first sentence of the amendment moved by the Hon. Member is virtually the same as the amended version of the Bill, namely, that notice of the agreements in various forms must be gazetted, to which the committee and the Government agreed.

The second sentence of the amendment to the amendment by the NDP House Leader, namely that it could be done by the Department of Health or some other Department, takes care of the problem I have in terms of deliverability of the agreements if requested. I fully appreciate the need for publication. That is why we had the amendment in the first place.

Possibly I could get a ruling from the Table. I can accept the second part. If we accept the first part are we in fact not accepting again what we have already amended? That is my problem. Perhaps we can handle that. We must have some solution.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I think we should just vote on each one. I think that would resolve the problem.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): With respect, I do not think that solves the problem. Maybe I was not clear. The amended version of the Bill and the first sentence of the amendment of the Member is, I believe, the same thing, word for word virtually. It is the second sentence which I think is at issue. I am willing to accept the second sentence as amended by the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis). I just do not know, in a technical sense, how I can accept an amendment that has already been accepted and written in the Bill. If somebody at the table can help me with that, I think we can have a solution.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): We can dispose of the amendment, continue to debate, and then look at it from then on with further amendment if possible.

Ms. Mitchell: Mr. Speaker, we certainly would have no objection to the procedure the Minister is suggesting which would be to amend his amendment which I originally presented in committee and to which he agreed, as I recall, to have this information on child care agreements between the federal Government and the provinces published in The Canada Gazette. Our concern was that it should be made available. It is not enough just to have notification in The Canada Gazette. We would be agreeable to his suggestion to amend Clause 3 by adding "or some other federal department or agency".

I would just like to say, though, that I do not quite understand the Minister's logic. I recall that in committee he said the agreements would be available upon request from Health and Welfare, and there seemed to be no problem with that at the time. I do not understand why he suddenly found a problem. It seems to me that this is a function of that Department.

However, since he raised the issue we are willing to make it broader. If there is another information service which is more appropriate in another Department, we would agree. However, we do think it is very important that this information be available to groups that want to find out what is happening to their tax dollars.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker I am following this very interesting debate. Indeed it becomes academic because the Minister is completely right that in the amended version of the Bill distributed by the House dated September 10, 1988, page 4, subparagraph 3 of Clause 3 is indeed word for word what is in the amendment before us today, except that the second sentence does say, and supposedly admits, that the Canada Gazette is not the best read publication in this country. Why they would say that, I do not know, but it may be a fact of life that The Canada Gazette is not read by very many people.

Therefore, a notice will be put in The Canada Gazette telling those Canadians who are interested in what is going on that indeed there has been an agreement reached between the federal Government and the provinces, and that if they want a copy of the agreement they can call upon National Health and Welfare for such a copy. I take it that is what the Minister is telling us.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I might be able to find a solution to this. I think the best thing for us to do at this stage is to stand Motion No. 15, draw up the proper amendment and bring it back to the House so that we can have a proper debate on it. I think that would resolve this problem and we can carry on with debate in the House.

Mr. Murphy: Mr. Speaker, I think your advice is sound but I do not know if it is necessary. I think there is an agreement already that we would just take out the first sentence, because it is already in the amended Bill, and attach the second sentence as amended by the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis). I think that is agreed to by all three Parties.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, from the Government's point of view, I am asking for the first sentence to be withdrawn because it is already in the Bill. I want to make the point that the Government was going to make the information available because I cannot leave that on the record. If the second sentence as amended is accepted by unanimous consent the Government is willing to accept it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I know you have all agreed to it. I would like to get a properly worded copy of it. As soon as I get that copy I will put the motion.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Therefore, in order to carry on properly, I will go to Motion No. 18 standing in the name of the Minister of National Health and Welfare.

Motions Nos. 21 and 22 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Outremont are in order and will be grouped for debate but voted on separately.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare) moved:

That Bill C-144 be amended in Clause 4 by striking out lines 11 to 15 at page 4 and substituting the following therefor:

"(b) stipulate that in respect of contributions under this Act, the province commits itself to according special priority to meeting the needs of children from low and modest income families;".

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outrement) moved:

That Bill C-144 be amended in Clause 4 by adding immediately after line 38 at page 4 the following:

"(h) indicate the means by which the province will encourage the development of childcare spaces in the workplace;".

That Bill C-144 be amended in Clause 4 by adding immediately after line 38 at page 4 the following:

"(h) indicate the means by which the province will encourage the development of childcare spaces in after school setting to meet the needs of children between the ages of 6 and 13;".

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, referring to Clause 4(1)(b), Members of the House will note that an amendment was moved and adopted in the committee respecting targeting of the program. I simply read from the Bill as follows: "with special priority to meet the needs of children from low and modest-income families". Motion No. 18, moved by the Government, is one of the clean-up motions in order to correct the grammar in both official languages. That is the reason we are moving it.

You are asking me, as well, to comment on motions relating to subclauses 4(1)(c) and 4(1)(d). I take it that this will be dealt with later according to your grouping. Therefore I will keep my remarks restricted to Motion No. 18.

[Translation]

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, of course I support the recommendation or rather the amendment moved by the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), since it concerns the amendment we or rather I presented in the legislative committee, to the effect that children from low and middle-income families be targeted by the provinces when spaces are allocated, because the Bill as drafted did not set any priorities or do anything special for these children.

We know that many children in Canada come from low and middle-income families, and we also know that many if not most of these children are from low-income families with little education, and so if the children have access to day-care, they will be motivated, they won't grow up to be school dropouts and they will become outstanding citizens.

We also know there is a very high proportion of single-parent families headed by women and that most of these families are living under the poverty line and that it was important to have a special place for these children.

We also know that many people, many women look for part-time work because they need that second salary, so they also need subsidies if they are to be able to afford day-care.

I think it is also very important to oblige the provinces to make these families a priority. We also had a number of groups testifying before the Committee that expressed their concern about the fact that the CAP program which focused on children from low-income families had been withdrawn. Since the program will no longer exist, the legislation must indicate that we are to provide spaces for these children.

Mr. Speaker, the trouble with a bill as important as this one is that we run the risk of creating two classes of citizens, which is what happened, quite by accident to senior citizens.

For instance, senior citizens who have an income can afford senior citizens' homes that are quite comfortable, unlike senior citizens on meager incomes who often find themselves in situations that are intolerable for someone of their age and in their condition.

I support this recommendation which was initially proposed by Liberal Members.

[English]

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, we will not oppose this amendment. However, let me state very clearly that it is not nearly strong enough. We heard from witnesses in the committee over and over again that there was not enough funding in this Bill to meet all the needs for child care in Canada. There is not nearly enough now or in the future.

When this program is grandfathered in seven years there will not be any flexibility to continue to increase the number of spaces. The provision of 200,000 spaces over seven years is fewer than would have been created if we retained the Canada Assistance Plan.

The Canada Assistance Plan deals primarily with children with special needs, low income children, and those families likely to be in need. It is much more comprehensive than this legislation as far as low income families are concerned. Furthermore, it is not capped at the end of seven years. The amount of money that can be spent is not capped.

Let me point out to the House and particularly to the Minister that when this program goes to the provinces it is quite possible that there will not be enough money to meet all the demands. For example, one province has been giving grants for commercial child care centres. It will want a refund of 50 per cent of the money it has been putting into those kinds of subsidies. It will be difficult for the province to target low income groups, and it has not been doing enough for low income groups now because it has mostly commercial child care. The number of poor children that would be eligible for a child care program in this particular province would be very limited.

A number of groups almost pleaded with us to retain the Canada Assistance Plan until such time as the fees in regular day care are reduced. According to the Government's program it will be a long time before enough money is injected into child care to reduce the fees and make it affordable.

Ideally, we would like to see comprehensive child care that is available regardless of income. It is very important that we remove the welfare stigma from child care and that it be made available to any family that needs and wants to use it. We hope it will be good quality, non-profit child care because studies show that that is the best kind of child care.

If the Canada Assistance Plan which now protects low income families is removed, regardless of whether the provincial Governments have good intentions, there will simply not be enough money in this program to guarantee that low income families will be protected.

We believe the Canada Assistance Plan should be retained and the new program phased in. It should cost more because there should be more money to meet greater needs, but it could be budgeted under the same amount of money.

We wanted to propose amendments that would have allowed greater flexibility in meeting the needs of low income families. We will not object to this motion, but we do not believe it is strong enough or that it protects low income families, families in need, as well as disabled children.

[Translation]

Mrs. Monique Tardif (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I would like to express my disagreement with Motions 21 and 22 now under consideration.

Motion 21 seeks to add a qualification:

> "(h) indicate the means by which the province will encourage the development of childcare spaces in the workplace;".

Motion 22 would also add a qualification:

> "(h) indicate the means by which the province will encourage the development of childcare spaces in after school setting to meet the needs of children between the ages of 6 and 13;".

Mr. Speaker, both of these motions are contrary to the principle that the provinces set their own priorities. We all know that child care is under provincial jurisdiction. We also know that it is extremely important to respect their jurisdiction.

As for setting the priorities for child care development, I think that is up to each province, depending on its state of development.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to remind my colleague who just completed her presentation that the FTQ (Quebec Federation of Labour) submitted a brief to the Legislative Committee recommending that standards not be important (in the Bill), since they come under provincial jurisdiction. This is an extremely sensitive and important subject, Mr. Speaker, and that is why I oppose Motions 21 and 22.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak to motions numbered 21 and 22, and I wish to inform the Parliamentary Secretary that I think her negative comments on these proposals are unfortunate.

In fact, I will have trouble saying everything I want to say within the ten minutes I am allowed. However, I will assume that people understand we are talking about two quite different things here. First, we have day-care in the work place, which I think is an interesting proposal and should be part of a general policy encouraging employers to provide day-care for children in the work place.

The other amendment, No. 22, deals with the child between the ages of 6 and 13 who goes to elementary school, whose parents work and who should have access to day-care after school so his parents can be sure their child is in a safe environment, busy with his studies.

The Parliamentary Secretary said earlier that it was up to the provinces to set their priorities for day-care, and I agree that constitutionally, and both education and day-care are involved, this is strictly provincial jurisdiction. However, the Bill seems to make the problem more complex by saying that if a province provides day-care, it is excluded. At least that is what it says in the interpretation we have of Bill C-144.

[English]

I would like to get back to that because it is the definition section which excludes child care services related wholly or partially to education. If the Minister tells me that this interpretation of Bill C-144 does not exclude child care services related wholly or partially to education, then of course my argument is going to be quite different. But my understanding up to now is that, indeed, Bill C-144 excludes wholly or partially related day care associated with education.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): The last part, yes.

Mr. Gauthier: The Minister is indicating the last part in education, which I guess is the point I am trying to make.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): It's the sticker.

Mr. Gauthier: It is the sticker, as he said. I spent 11 years on school boards in my previous incarnation as a public servant. I know for a fact that we established lighthouse programs in New Edinburgh, for example, and that at other schools programs were offered to parents to look after their children after the normal day school session was over, so we made sure that the kids were looked after and their educational process was pursued. If the Minister is telling me that a province is not able to draw from Bill C-144 the proper support to fund these programs on school sites in the educational system at the time, with the people, then I am right, there is an exclusion here in this Bill which does not allow for that.

I find that regrettable but the Minister will address that point and perhaps he can convince me that I am wrong.

My first point was day-care in the work place. Mr. Speaker, I have a number of statistics and a survey made in my riding that I would like to share with Hon. Members.

As you know, Ottawa—Vanier is a National Capital riding which depends a lot on the federal Government because it happens to be the major employer. Now then, if the employer—the federal Government—wants to set an example, as we do here in the House of Commons, for instance, where we have excellent and first class day care facilities for our staff, the federal Government being the employer has to provide day care centres for its employees.

In a poll I conducted recently most respondents—59 per cent—agreed that the employer should set up day care facilities at the workplace. That seems quite reasonable to me.

[English]

The facts are that the first experiment with child care in the workplace in Ontario was in 1970. The experiment failed mainly because it was full of red tape and it was very hard to operate and difficult to maintain. I think that a good program can be established, the costs to be shared by the employee and employer. I think we should have some consideration for those workers who are on night shift, for example, and it does happen in the Ottawa—Vanier area that people do have night shift employment and they would require some child care during the day or after school. I think there is a good point being made by my constituents when they bring that to my attention. I would like to say that in the riding of Ottawa-Vanier, the most recent statistics I have based on the 1986 census . . .

. . . indicate that there are 19,265 families in my riding, including 8,180 with children at home. There are 3,635 single-parent families, mostly women who have children and work to earn a living. The total number of children at home is 18,500, including 4,325 aged 6 or under. Mr. Speaker, they are the ones who need day care, and perhaps I should conclude my remarks on that note.

It is imperative that we come up with a new approach in connection with day care services. Let us think in terms of a comprehensive overall plan and programs related to the issue of employment equity. The parliamentary task force which reviewed parental leave did emphasize the importance of the issue. The Government claims it is offering a variety of options to parents, but in fact there are only two: a tax deduction which can best be described as regressive, and a very small tax credit of $200. As far as we are concerned, Mr. Speaker, several alternatives should be offered by day care services, including guaranteed day care facilities at the workplace. I will not belabour the point because I have no time, but I sincerely believe we need a good day care program, at least an option with respect to day care facilities at work.

Mr. Speaker, this is particularly important if, as I said earlier, a comprehensive program is put into place. The Liberal Party would allow a 100 per cent tax write-off on employer-sponsored programs as an incentive to set up child care facilities on the job. Mr. Speaker, we said so and we will do so because I am convinced that Canadians fully appreciate that it is fair, equitable and urgent to have reliable child care services at work.

[English]

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, I have spoken on this grouping before, therefore I do not believe I am entitled to speak on it again. I can answer the question of the Hon. Member.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Does the Minister have unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I thank Members. With regard to child care based in schools, the Hon. Member puts forward a long-standing position or discussion point that has been going on in various provinces and school authorities. I do not have any school board experience. The Hon. Member has 11 years experience on a school board, and I have 11 years experience in teaching, so perhaps there is some comparison.

Mr. Gauthier: Good employee-employer relations.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): We always had good employee-employer relations. Until I left there was neither conciliation nor arbitration, so I have some pride in that type of relationship.

The Hon. Member put forward two caveats with respect to the Bill, and I wish to address them. One is acceptable, and the other is not. That is why there needs to be some explanation. In respect to the location of the provision of service, school based, there is not a problem, particularly if one goes to the Province of Quebec.

Mr. Gauthier: Thirty thousand spaces.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Exactly, and we want to preserve those spaces. In our negotiations with Québec we believe that the Bill covers that authority. Also from my discussions with the Québec Minister, I believe that that is understood. There is a difficulty, and I am going to get technical, just as the Hon. Member had to. He is well aware of Section 93 of the Constitution.

Education was not only considered as a very specific provincial right in constitutional form, it received a special constitutional clause. Canada has a long history, and we do not have to regale ourselves with our knowledge of that clause. If it is a service provided by a school authority, to wit, a school board as the Hon. Member was a member of, then the Bill is exclusionary. Therefore, it depends on which is the social service provider of the child care service. That becomes the critical point in the ability of the federal Government to flow money. I believe we have worked out an arrangement, not only with Quebec, but also with other provinces. I have no authority to extend the Bill into the service provider beyond the social services. That is where our disagreement would in fact come.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) clarified that last point. It is something that we have been encouraging for some time, that different organizations have the ability to provide services, particularly those that are non-profit services. I want to comment on all three motions that are grouped for debate, Motion Nos. 18, 21, and 22.

In terms of targeting funds to provide an effort to meet the needs of children from low and modest income families, what has been so painfully clear by listening to the witnesses is that this will not accomplish that. The needs in our society are so great when it comes to meeting the needs of child care across the country that this approach will fall short.

I will not read it into the record, but I have a long list of all the organizations whose representatives appeared as witnesses at the committee. Every single one opposed the Bill. In the history of Parliament it is rather unique that every witness who appeared before the committee stated that the Government was wrong, that it should stop and not proceed. We are proceeding. I do not know why we go through this charade, if we are not going to listen to those who are expert in the field. That is why we welcome them in as witnesses to the committee hearings, in order that they can provide expert advice. When every expert in the country states that this is wrong, we should keep that in mind. However, I realize that this is not the time to do so, so I will set it aside for the moment and return to it later.

The Minister indicates that we want to provide child care for low and modest income families. Of course we do, Mr. Speaker, but this Bill will not accomplish it. It might make a dent into it, but it will not accomplish that.

I wish to move to the motion before us which indicates that we want to "encourage the development of childcare spaces in the workplace". I get a little frustrated with the word "encourage". I think it is time that we become a little tougher, and say that we are beyond the encourage, urging, and talking into type of approach. As a federal Parliament of Canada we should be saying that it is time that we start providing child care spaces in the workplace. The place to start is right here in the jurisdiction of the federal Government. When facilities are built across the country, the first thing that the architect should be encouraged to do is build in the appropriate child care facility in the new building.

A case in point would be the federal building in Edmonton. As you well know, Mr. Speaker, since it is your home town, this huge federal building in downtown Edmonton has hundreds of rooms, seminar rooms, office rooms, and bureaucrats by the dozens, but they forgot to build a child care space.

I feel quite honoured and proud to be speaking on behalf of the New Democratic Party. Our spokesperson on this issue, the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell), stood up in the House in 1979, days after she was elected, and stated that we should be leading the way on Parliament Hill for all employees. There should be a first-class day care facility. Led by the initiative of the Hon. Member for Vancouver East and others, there is now a first-class child care facility on Parliament Hill. I congratulate not only the Hon. Member for Vancouver East but others who encouraged it and saw it through to fruition.

Much more should be done than this symbolic gesture. There should be child care facilities in all federal public buildings, as an example, and then we can go to the private sector and say: "When you build a new plant or a huge office complex, for goodness' sake have appropriate child care facilities constructed as part of the building plan". This will encourage the provinces to develop child care spaces in the workplace.

I suppose we have to say that this is a minute step in the right direction to encourage the provincial Governments. As a Member of Parliament from British Columbia, thinking that we have to talk Premier Vander Zalm into creating child care spaces, I do not hold out much hope, I am afraid. I hate to say it, but it is almost a hopeless case. Hopefully in other provinces where there are more progressive premiers and more progressive provincial Governments—although there are not many—we will be able to move in the right direction.

I wish to focus my comments on Motion No. 22. The Hon. Member for Outremont (Mrs. Pépin) is indicating that we again want to "encourage the development of childcare spaces in after school setting to meet the needs of children between the ages of 6 and 13". Again, the word "encourage" I believe is a little light, but at least we are encouraging. My concern here focuses on two or three items. We recognize the very acute need for providing child care services for latchkey children. Some children leave school at 2.30 p.m. to 3.30 p.m. and unfortunately, because their parents are working and do not come home until 5.30 p.m. or 6 p.m., there is a period of time when they must go home and be on their own. We want to take immediate steps to ensure that proper facilities are available for those children who have to go to empty homes with no parents during those critical hours. What is left out of this is infant care for young people under the age of three, the toddlers. In many instances there is a very acute need in terms of appropriate child care, to say nothing of summer child care.

We will support those three amendments, because they do move us in areas that we want to move. However, they do fall short and there is still an awful lot more to do. We are pleased with the gains that we see here, but again it is time that we got beyond encouraging the development of child care spaces, or encouraging the development of child care spaces in the workplace, and got on with actually doing it, providing the funds, and creating those spaces. The first place to start, and I urge the Minister of National Health and Welfare, would be in federal buildings across the country so that every major federal building would have child care facilities put in place to show the leadership that this legislation ought to have shown.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I would like to comment on the Hon. Member's speech. I appreciate him commenting on the fact that we do have a very nice federal building in our area, but I wish that he would not get the Chair into an argument about whether I would want to have child care spaces in that particular area. He knows my feeling about something like that. I do not want to get into an argument.

The Chair cannot get into an argument or debate with regard to whether we should or should not have child care spaces in that wonderful building in Edmonton. The Hon. Member knows that I would want it if I had an opportunity to debate. The Hon. Member for Outremont.

[Translation]

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I rise to support motions Nos. 21 and 22. The first one deals with the development of child care spaces in the workplace. We know that a much more comprehensive plan should have been presented along with Bill C-144 which we have before us, that the bill should have been linked to an employment equity program, to parental leave and child care services in the workplace. The Minister has been saying ever since he introduced the bill that it would give parents a choice. Parents cannot opt for child care in the workplace, because no such option exists in the legislation.

Forty five per cent of couples with children would be under the poverty level if both parents did not work. Therefore they need child care. If there were child care services in the workplace, I think, first of all, that—as several studies have shown—absenteeism would be considerably reduced and also that both parents would have equal opportunity in terms of taking the children to a centre.

We know that in some provinces,—and without naming any, I am thinking for instance of the Atlantic region—is highly seasonal, particularly in fishing. Both parents work so many months, mostly in summer, at which time the children are left to themselves. We were even told in committee that children ten or twelve years old take care of their brothers and sisters because there are no child care services and a sitter at home is to expensive. I think child care services in the workplace would solve this problem.

As my colleague the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) indicated earlier, our party suggests that businessmen should be encouraged to set up daycare facilities in the workplace through tax rebates. One of my NPD friends was right when he said that the federal Government should definitely set the tone. Actually, an employee who had a baby last May called me to say: Listen, I cannot afford to pay $7,000 a year for daycare services and I cannot get a space as an employee in the daycare facilities we have here. I suggest therefore that the federal Governement should set up daycare facilities first in all the buildings on Parliament Hill, and then in all the federal buildings throughout Canada. I think this is a good suggestion that the government should consider implementing.

I should like to deal also with Motion 22 which I feel is one of the most important ones because it seeks to develop childcare spaces in after school setting to meet the needs of children between the ages of 6 and 14. Two weeks ago, the Prime Minister rose in the House to deal with daycare services. He insisted on the need to create programs to fight drug abuse and to protect our teenagers. One of the most effective preventive measures would be to develop after school settings to meet the needs of children between the ages of 6 and 14.

Mr. Speaker, we know that 57 per cent of all children throughout Canada are left by themselves. As recently as last week, some witnesses stated that they had received 12,000 phone calls for the city of Toronto alone. They call them "warn calls" for they have open lines which children who are by themselves can call to be reassured. There were even teachers who came to say: We teach our children how to lie. We teach them how to answer the phone when they are by themselves at home, because we know that there are grown-ups who get their kicks out of abusing these children, especially when they know that they are alone at home. They complained that they had to teach children to lie as a mean to protect them.

On the other hand, we know that we have to pay $44,000 a year to take care of each and everyone of our young offenders. By developing childcare spaces in after school settings, we might save a lot of money and make solid and long term investments in the future. I heard the Minister refer earlier to such services as social services.

Child care is not just a social service. Child care should be considered part of education. And that is why we are very concerned when we see the clause that services in any way connected with education will not be covered, because services provided to children of 6 to 14 cannot be considered social services. I think it is as important as education.

We know what percentage of teenagers commit suicide. I think that very often, if we dig a little deeper, if we do some research, we see that at some point, these children felt that there was no one to look after them—nobody cares!

And I think that it would be a good foundation for them and it would definitely show vision for Canada if the Government took care of our children and provided them with what they need so that later, they can do what is asked of them. We know that we have problems with our adolescents and youth. Many are homeless. But if we do some research into this, we find that these young people tell us that nobody cares. No one wanted to look after them! But if we did this as a society and not as a social service, I think that we would have a goal and later on, good citizens.

[English]

I would like to say that it might also help to remedy the perception of every child care group and parent in this country that the Government is just giving away the candy store with this Bill.

It is very important that something be done for children and in Quebec, let me emphasize this for the Minister, they are very concerned with this amendment whereby amounts intended mainly for educational services will be withdrawn, because we have 30,000 spaces for these children, and although we are told the Bill meets this demand, the Government of Quebec is very worried now that it will not have the money available.

So I urge the Minister to accept this amendment and also the amendment concerning childcare in the workplace. I think that if we want to have children and want to help the family, this is a most import piece of legislation and we must provide support services such as the two that we just mentioned.

[English]

Ms. Mitchell: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I could ask the indulgence of Members of the House to allow me to speak briefly.

When I spoke earlier, it was my understanding that you were calling for debate on Motion No. 18. At that time I did not realize that you were including Motion Nos. 21 and 22. If Members are agreeable, I would appreciate saying a few words on those two motions.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is it agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Vancouver East.

Ms. Mitchell: Thank you very much. I do appreciate it. Regarding Motion No. 21 which calls for amendments to the Act to ask the province to indicate the means by which it will encourage the development of child care spaces in the workplace, as my hon. colleague from Kamloops—Shuswap said earlier, we believe that because of the nature of this Act, with the very limited funding, it is necessary to be more specific about the kinds of child care that are available.

Later, Mr. Speaker, you will hopefully hear our amendment about objectives, where we talk about a child care program that must be comprehensive. To be comprehensive, that means that working parents who have children under three years old, infants and toddlers, should have good quality, licenced care available. Similarly, if the children are over five, in kindergarten and in elementary school, they also should have child care available. As it is now there is not really enough child care for three-year olds to five-year olds, although it seems to be a little more available with limited hours. We feel that to work for a comprehensive child care program we must have a wider range of ages included. I am referring here specifically to Motion No. 22.

I have asked my colleague to consider an amendment to the motion which would include infant care and toddler care as well. I agree with the Hon. Member for Outremont that there is great concern not so much with the wording but with the method of funding, which is very limited, as is the number of new subsidized spaces to be created. We think that many provinces will use the available funds only to subsidize what they already have in place. If that is done then there would be little flexibility to create the new types of services which are very much needed. It is a good idea to make this specific in the Bill.

Returning to Motion No. 21, I would like to say again that we in this Party have always supported workplace child care. We feel that any child care program should adapt to the sites where it is necessary for parents to have care as part of being accessible to their workplace. I recall that when the special committee on child care held hearings there were workers from Nova Scotia, I believe, who appeared before the committee. They were workers in fish plants. During the very brief season when husbands often went out in the fish boats, the mother and all other adult members of the family were working in the fish plants. They were working night and day and there really was not very much in the way of space at all. We need flexibility in hours, but we also need accessibility to the work site. I am not sure that a fish plant is an ideal place for a child care centre anyway. However, there are many other places where this would be very suited, particularly in federal buildings.

We also support Motion No. 21. As you will see later, Mr. Speaker, we have referred to these matters in our over-all objectives when we considered comprehensive child care. The Minister should have written objectives in. Even if provinces cannot afford to do everything all at once, at least we should have the goal of comprehensive child care.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the suggestions proposed by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell). Any of us who live in and represent urban constituencies have some idea of the tremendous increase in the number of married women, with very young children, who are working. To a larger extent they are working because in this day and age, particularly in cities such as Toronto, Ottawa, Vancouver, and to a lesser extent in my City of Winnipeg, it is necessary for both husband and wife to work if they are to be able to meet their monthly mortgage payments. Thus mothers with quite young children of a year old and sometimes even less than a year old are finding it necessary to work. They need a system of child care which will assure them that their very young children are able to be placed in a child care facility which will give them the kind of care they need.

Therefore I move the following amendment:

That Bill C-144 be amended in Clause 4 by adding immediately after line 38 at page 4:

"indicate the means by which the provinces will encourage the development of child care spaces to meet the needs of infants and toddlers under three years of age".

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): We have just looked at the motion. It is not in the proper form. I would appreciate having more time in order for the Table to consult with the Hon. Member so that it can be put in the proper form.

Mr. Murphy: Mr. Speaker, that is agreeable to us. I wonder if, while Your Honour is considering that, the House could move back to Motion No. 15 at this time in order to clarify it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): It is agreed that this grouping will stand and we will go back to Motion No. 15.

Motions Nos. 18, 21 and 22 stood.

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, as you know, earlier we tried to present Motion No. 15 and a subamendment to it. I would now ask the permission of the House to withdraw Motion No. 15 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) and the subamendment standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) and replacing it with a new motion, seconded by the Hon. Member for Vancouver East:

That Bill C-144 be amended in Clause 3 by adding immediately after line 6 at page 4 the following:

"The agreements will be available upon request from the Department of National Health and Welfare or some other federal government department or agency."

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Motion No. 15 has been withdrawn, by unanimous consent.

Motion No. 15 (Ms. Mitchell) withdrawn.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Shall the motion moved in its place carry?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): It is acceptable to the Government.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I am glad that we could find a reasonable solution to the problem. Indeed, we will support this amendment.

Mr. Murphy: I think you would find, Mr. Speaker, that the New Democratic Party will support its own amendment.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Then, the motion is agreed to.

Motion No. 15 (Mr. Murphy) agreed to.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, in the few moments left to me I wish to deal with another aspect of the problem which I do not think—

• (1250)

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, I thought that the ruling of the Chair was that this grouping would stand and we would move to another grouping.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): That is fine. Then shall we call it one o'clock?

Mr. Epp (Provencher): No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): We will move to the next grouping. The next grouping will be Motions Nos. 27, 33, 34, and 40 standing in the name of the Minister of National Health and Welfare, and Motion No. 38 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver East. These are all in order. They will be debated and voted upon separately.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. For clarification purposes, I have a copy of your ruling, and I take it that contrary to what is usually done, Motion Nos. 27, 33, 34, 40, and 38 will not be grouped for debate but will be debated individually and separately and put to the House separately also. You are calling Motion No. 27 right now, are you?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): That is exactly right. I agree with the Hon. Member. They will be debated and voted upon separately.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare) moved:

"coût des services de garde comprend l'indemnité de dépréciation des immobilisations prévue par règlement et établie en"

(b) by striking out lines 44 and 45 at page 7 and substituting the following therefor:

"et (2), le ministre procède, de la manière réglementaire, à l'estimation des dépenses".

He said: Mr. Speaker, again, the explanation for Motion No. 27 is to clean up the language in both official languages.

[Translation]

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Of course I support this amendment, Mr. Speaker, because we did find a number of translation problems, and since it went on so fast . . . French-speaking witnesses were particularly concerned as they wondered to what extent they had missed some of the subtleties of the legislation.

So I endorse all amendments designed to correct the French version or make it more precise.

[English]

Motion No. 27 (Mr. Epp, Provencher) agreed to.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare) moved:

Motion No. 33

(a) by striking out line 10 at page 10 and substituting the following therefor:

"la façon de déterminer, d'une part, dans quelle mesure"

(b) by striking out lines 13 and 14 at page 10 and substituting the following therefor:

"et, d'autre part, l'annéé où le coût est réputé avoir été entraîné;"

(c) by striking out lines 32 and 33 at page 10 and substituting the following therefor:

"préciser ses conditions d'attribution;"

He said: Mr. Speaker, the explanation for the previous motion applies to this one as well.

[Translation]

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I support the motion for the same reasons. The Government proceeded with undue haste and the French was faulty.

Therefore I agree that the legislation be amended so the the French will be correct and precise.

[English]

Hon. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Can I just seek some information from the Minister. I just wanted to know, there seem to be several amendments that make some amendments to the French text. Can the Minister tell me if the drafting of this Bill was done in parallel or if it was a translation problem that occurred when Bill C-144 was drafted?

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, I apologize to the Hon. Member. I cannot answer that, but I know what he is referring to, and it is my understanding that in the drafting of legislation, both languages have equal status and that they are to be done separately. I believe that was done by the Department of Justice, but I cannot confirm that.

Motion No. 33 (Mr. Epp, Provencher) agreed to.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare) moved:

That Bill C-144 be amended in Clause 8 by striking out lines 14 to 17 at page 11 and substituting the following therefor:

"(3) Where an agreement is entered into before regulations have been made under subsection (1), subsection (2) does not apply in respect of the agreement until after the first such regulations have been made."

He said: The same explanation applies again.

[Translation]

Mrs. Pépin: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I agree.

[English]

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Yes, we agree.

Motion No. 34 (Mr. Epp (Provencher)) agreed to.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East) moved:

That Bill C-144 be amended by deleting Clause 11.

She said: Mr. Speaker, I have some difficulty with the inclusion of this amendment without reference. This was a consequential amendment dependent on one of the previous amendments which was asking that services for disabled children or children with special needs be covered.

I wonder if I could ask permission to call it one o'clock so that we could consult with the Table about this motion because it was really presented as a consequential amendment and was very much related to the previous amendment that we wanted to make which is not included at this time.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I appreciate the Hon. Member bringing this to our attention now. I am sure that during the lunch hour we would be able to have some explanation as far as her request is concerned. Therefore, I—

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, I am sorry to be difficult; I am not trying to be. I accept the explanation of the Hon. Member that a little more time is needed, but I think, if the House would be so disposed, that we could move to Motion No. 40 so that we could do the technical language amendments and then return to the uncompleted work. I would suggest we do that.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Fine. We will stand this motion, by unanimous consent, and go to Motion No. 40.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare) moved:

That Bill C-144 be amended in the Preamble by striking out lines 11 and 12 at page 1 and substituting the following therefor:

"AND WHEREAS the Parliament of Canada, having regard to the cultural and linguistic diversity of the Canadian population, wishes to encourage the development".

He said: The explanation for this motion is the same as the explanation for the previous motions.

Mrs. Pépin: Mr. Speaker, I agree.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Agreed.

Motion No. 40 (Mr. Epp, Provencher) agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this day.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

EMPLOYMENT

UNEMPLOYED OLDER WORKERS

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, according to statistics, older workers tend to become more discouraged than younger people in the search for employment and simply drop out of the labour force.

In 1986 the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) announced the Government was letting the Liberal government program expire in favour of a new system that would be expanded to include almost all workers who face trouble finding a new job after being laid off. Costs were to be shared by provincial Governments. So far, the Government has failed to get the provinces to agree to the new program which was supposed to expand the number of people receiving benefits and save Ottawa money at the same time.

Why blame the provinces for refusing to do the federal Government's job? Has the Meech Lake virus already infected the federal Government's will so much as to paralyze its ability to implement a national program of such social significance and urgency? What a sham!

SPORTS

1994 COMMONWEALTH GAMES—CHOICE OF VICTORIA AS SITE

Hon. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Mr. Speaker, I am sure all Members of the House were pleased to hear this morning that Canada, Victoria in particular, has been chosen as the site for the Commonwealth Games in 1994. This success has been achieved because of two factors: an incredible amount of work and effort put forward by volunteers, and, second, the co-operation of every level of government.

A volunteer committee self-started in Victoria, chaired by Mr. David Black and assisted by Rodger Banister and many others. They masterminded a brisk competition to be Canada's nominee for the Games site, and when Victoria was chosen the effort was doubled to win the second contest which finished this morning.

The Victoria committee sent representatives to all the voting countries of the Commonwealth and they were pleasantly surprised at the high regard in which Canada is held in those countries.

On behalf of Victoria I would like to thank all levels of government for their support, beginning with the municipalities neighbouring Victoria; the City Council and Mayor of Victoria; the Capital Region District; the Government of British Columbia; and the federal Government, in particular, the Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport (Mr. Charest) and the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark). I am sure they had the support of all sides of the House in their actions, for a project such as this to be successful requires the support and co-operation of everyone.

Thanks again, and welcome to Victoria in 1994!

Mr. Speaker: I know all Hon. Members will agree with me that, given the substantive nature of the intervention by the Hon. Member for Victoria (Mr. McKinnon), it was appropriate to let him go on, and on, and on.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

TRANSPORT

TRANSPORT ROUTE CANADA—SITUATION OF FORMER EMPLOYEES

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, there is something desperately wrong with a government policy that permits what happened recently to the employees of Transport Route Canada, formerly CN Route. There is something desperately wrong with a privatization policy that could put the employees of this company, which was privatized by permission of the Government, in a position where they have not only lost their jobs but their pensions are at risk, and there is a great deal of uncertainty with respect to their supplementary care benefits, unemployment insurance benefits, and union dues.

The independent trucking operators risk losing their rigs, some 75 of them in Winnipeg, I am told, because the company has no intention of paying them what it owes them. They will not be able to make their payments and they will go out of business for no other reason than the fact the Government decided to privatize something and to do it in such a way that sufficient guarantees were not built into the sale so that working men and women and their families were adequately protected.

I think this is shameful. We have been raising this in the House and we will be doing it again because this is a form of legalized theft. There is no other adequate description. More attention should be paid to it. It shows the moral bankruptcy of the Government because it has not even bothered to do anything about it.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT—EFFECT ON WESTERN CANADA

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, the Canada-U.S. Trade Agreement, when passed, will give western Canada an opportunity to be a full partner in Confederation.

Excessive rail freight rates to central Canada, which reach their apex in Alberta, have prevented our growth. The vast market to the nearby south will enable us to compete in new manufacturing industries that will bring employment and investment opportunities, and the competition may well reduce the excessive freight rates, something we have never been able to achieve to date.

In addition, our farmers, who have the capacity to produce vast quantities of foods, will find brand new markets that may well stabilize this important segment of our economy. And very important, our poor and aged will get the foods we buy from the U.S. cheaper and then they, too, will be able to enjoy the early vegetables and fruits which today they cannot afford.

We will lose no sovereignty and the buoyancy will bring even better social programs.

Let us pass the trade agreement and make Canada a greater country.

RIGHT TO LIFE

SCHEDULED NATIONAL RALLY ON PARLIAMENT HILL

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, this Saturday, September 17, from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., the National Rally For Life 1988 will be held here on Parliament Hill. Some 50,000 Canadians are expected to attend this ceremony at which they will demonstrate to all our fellow citizens that we want the protection of human life and we want legislation to protect human life.

As you know, Mother Teresa of Calcutta will be here to speak to Canadians that day. It is my hope that many Canadians will join me and other Members of Parliament, and the 50,000 Canadians who will be there, to listen to Mother Teresa and others who will speak to us of the importance of protecting human life from conception.

HUMAN RIGHTS

INTERNATIONAL CENTRE FOR HUMAN RIGHTS AND DEMOCRATIC DEVELOPMENT

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, Canadians will welcome the Government's initiative in establishing the International Centre for Human Rights and Democratic Development. In view of the countless and recurring incidents of human rights violations, the Government of Canada has, after extensive consultations, introduced Bill C-147 proposing such a centre.

This initiative will help ensure that recipients of Canadian aid are held accountable for their observance of human rights. I would direct the attention of the House to an article entitled "Foreign Aid And Human Rights" appearing in the latest edition of International Perspectives which contains sensible suggestions as to how this might be accomplished.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I want to place before the House just a few of the problems and questions which are frightening the former workers of Transport Route Canada. Since the bankruptcy of this privatized firm, we heard about the disastrous effects on the pension rights of up to 2,500 workers. Here are the other questions that are worrying them. Will they get unpaid wages? Will they get the vacation pay owed them? Will they get the severance pay they are entitled to under the provisions of the Canada Labour Code? Will the independent truck owner-operators be paid for work they have done for Transport Route Canada? Some of them are owed up to $20,000.

The Government says CN would have folded the company anyway, blithely ignoring the fact it was the Government which introduced transport deregulation and which sets the terms under which CN operates.

The Government and CN management are not without responsibility to these employees. Their unions want to meet the Government and CN to ensure that their benefits are not lost and that the assets of this company are not simply plundered by buccaneers who took advantage of woolly and wasteful privatization policies.

If the Government believes these policies are defensible, then it should have no objection to a full inquiry into a situation which has permitted the assets of this company to be stripped by management and left the workforce on the street with no benefits and no work.

HIGHWAYS

STATE OF NEW BRUNSWICK HIGHWAYS

Mr. Albert Girard (Restigouche): Mr. Speaker, I have read with great care the New Brunswick Government's discussion paper on adequate highways for the province. The document states that a total of almost $2 billion is required to upgrade our highways over the next 15 years. It is interesting to note that over 87 per cent of the total amount is being earmarked for the TransCanada Highway. They want to add extra lanes when highways in northern New Brunswick are still in desperate need of repair and even completion.

Highway 11 and Highway 17 are essential to the economic future of northern New Brunswick, and by the province's own estimation some $34 million, or 1.7 per cent of the total projected expenditure, is all that is required to complete these routes.

Before the federal Government commits another penny to New Brunswick highway development the provincial Government should make a priority commitment to the completion of Routes 17 and 11. This is a provincial responsibility.

Come on, let's talk about completing highways before adding lanes to the ones that are already there!

HUMAN RIGHTS

SAN SALVADOR—YESTERDAY'S INCIDENTS—REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT INTERVENE

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, yesterday morning in San Salvador, the army once again ignored the rights and freedoms of the citizens of that country. The army surrounded the building where the farmers' association, the UNTE was meeting, and prevented anyone from getting in or out. Subsequently, students staged protest demonstrations in the towns of San Miguel, Santa Ana and San Salvador. One hundred students were injured and more than 300 were arrested and taken away by the army. Where are they being detained? When will they be released? And why did the army take this action?

Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Canadian Government to act quickly to find out what is happening in this country and especially to get specific information on what happened yesterday. We must help these people in distress, Mr. Speaker.

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

WESTERN CANADA—GOVERNMENT INITIATIVES

Mr. Geoff Wilson (Swift Current—Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, in July, 1984, at Prince Albert the P.C. Party promised that western Canadian economic policies and strategies would be developed by and for western Canadians in the belief that regional strengths and prosperity ultimately benefit all Canadians.

Since then the Government has abolished the oppressive National Energy Policy, established a lifetime capital gains exemption for farmers and small business, stood solidly behind prairie farmers against unfair foreign export subsidies, developed a western procurement initiative to increase federal government purchasing in the West, established the $1.2 billion Western Diversification Program to assist in western Canadian economic growth, participated in oil upgraders at Regina and Lloydminster to enable further processing on the Prairies, and established the National Agricultural Biotechnology Initiative in Saskatoon to support the commercialization of ag-biotech products.

All of this, Mr. Speaker, by a Government that listens to western Canadians, that consults with western Canadians, and co-operates with western Canadians in order to respond to the needs, aspirations, and wishes of westerners.

STATUS OF WOMEN

RECIPIENTS OF PERSONS AWARDS

Ms. Marion Dewar (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, the Minister responsible for the Status of Women yesterday announced the 1988 recipients of the Persons Awards. Five outstanding Canadian women will be honoured for their contributions toward improving the status of women in Canada.

The Person Case was won on October 18, 1929, by a group of suffragettes known as "The Famous Five". This group of women from Alberta, headed by Judge Emily Murphy, the first female magistrate in the British Empire, included Louise McKinney, Nellie McClung, Irene Parlby and Henrietta Muir Edwards. Together they fought to have women legally defined as persons, and they succeeded.

[English]

This year's recipients are Nellie Carlson, Jean Carson, Jacqueline Collette, Margaret Hyndman and Marion Powell. They have all been long-time advocates of women's rights, working on native, health, economic, and legal issues which affect women. I hope all Canadians share the pride of our Party in the contributions these women have made to our society.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

RELATIONS BETWEEN CANADA AND PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, as you know, today marks another historic step in the growing, warm relationship between Canada and the People's Republic of China, a relationship which began in the days of the Progressive Conservative Government of John Diefenbaker.

An official delegation of senior leaders of the China YMCA is with us in the House today and will soon be visiting Canadian YMCAs in Toronto, Montreal, and Vancouver, as well as here in Ottawa. During their visit to Canada they will announce the establishment of the China-Canada YMCA Bethune Scholarship Program.

This visit is an historic occasion for the YMCA in Canada and for all Canadians. On our behalf I wish to welcome the delegation and to thank you, Mr. Speaker, for hosting a luncheon today for the China YMCA delegation.

Oral Questions

AIRPORTS

PEARSON INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT—AIRCRAFT NOISE

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, my constituency of York Centre is one of those which surround Pearson International Airport. The noise of aircraft taking off and landing is becoming an increasing problem. It reaches an unbearable level. Beginning on May 7 a new system was introduced which makes it worse because take-offs and landings now occur simultaneously.

There is a measure which could make a difference, that is, the vigilant enforcement of noise envelopes which require pilots to take off and land within certain areas. This is very loosely enforced by authorities at the airport.

The purpose of my intervention is to urge that the Government get serious about these envelopes and enforce them on the pilots taking off and landing. Although the change of May 7 has made it worse, there could at least be some balancing and some improvement of the lot of people who live close to the airport.

GOVERNMENT ACHIEVEMENTS

Mr. Felix Holtmann (Selkirk—Interlake): Mr. Speaker, here are the clean facts: Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement, Niagara River Toxics Management Plan, Transboundary Emergencies (Hazardous Wastes and Toxic Chemicals in the Great Lakes), ratification of the Vienna Convention to protect the ozone layer, the Montreal Protocol on substances that deplete the ozone layer, new co-operation on meteorological programs, Fraser River Estuary Management Program, clean-up of Hamilton Harbour's Windermere Basin, clean-up of the Sydney Tar Ponds, accord on environmental co-operation with the provinces, initiation and passage of C-74, the Canadian Environmental Protection Act, with input from opposition Parties, an Act for the preservation of Canadian water resources, stricter standards for the permitted levels of PCBs, and the elimination of lead from gas by 1992.

There is more. Why is the Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Turner) trying to grandstand at this point on the environment? Will it improve his polluted quagmire of popularity which now stands at 11 per cent?

CHILD CARE

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED LEGISLATION

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, when the Government sent its child care proposal to committee for study and brought expert witnesses before the committee, something unprecedented happened. Every single witness opposed this government initiative.

These witnesses included the following: The Canadian Daycare Association, The Early Childhood Educators of British Columbia, the B.C. Daycare Action Coalition, the National Advisory Council's Childcare Committee, the Canadian Federation of Students, the Canadian Ethnocultural Council, the Canadian Jewish Council, the Sunflower Co-op Preschool, the Childcare Resource and Research Unit, the Canadian Association of Social Workers, the Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women, the Canadian Teachers Federation, the Ottawa-Carleton Daycare Association, the Metro Toronto Child Services, the National Federation of Nurses Unions, the Metro Daycare Coalition, the Ontario Coalition for Better Daycare, the Inuit Women's Association of Canada, the Kids First Organization, the Assembly of First Nations, the Public Service Alliance of Canada, the Canada Anti-Poverty Group, the Canadian Labour Congress, the Canadian Union of Public Employees, the Alberta Federation of Labour, the Manitoba Federation of Labour, the B.C. Federation of Labour, the Ontario Federation of Labour, the Letter Carriers Union of Canada, the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, and the National Union of Public Employees. The list goes on and on. Every single witness opposed this government initiative.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

FISHERIES

NORTHWEST ATLANTIC FISHERIES ORGANIZATION—OVERFISHING OUTSIDE CANADIAN 200-MILE ZONE

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, yesterday representatives of 21 countries met here in Ottawa and accepted a report of international scientists that a 50 per cent cut must take place in fishing off the East Coast of Canada just outside the 200-mile zone. Today and tomorrow they will be deciding which stocks and which quotas will be reduced.

Japan, Bulgaria, Cuba, Denmark, Greenland, Iceland, Germany, Norway, Poland, the Soviet Union, Romania, Canada, and the EEC unanimously agreed yesterday that the fishery was being destroyed by overfishing off the East Coast of Canada and that a 50 per cent reduction in catching effort must take place immediately.

My question is directed to the Minister for International Trade. Does the Government not feel a sense of guilt now that it was so weak as to allow this drastic overfishing in the past four years by these foreign countries? The EEC, with a quota of 17,000 metric tonnes, took 109,000 metric tonnes just outside our 200-mile zone.

Does the Government not realize that by its weak-kneed, love-love-me-do attitude, Canada is now faced with having to reduce its catching effort by 50 per cent off the East Coast of Canada, costing thousands of jobs, 4,000 in Newfoundland alone?

We know the Minister got tough with them in an after dinner speech the other day in Ottawa, but when will the Government get tough with them where it counts, on the Grand Banks of Newfoundland?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, there is a serious problem with respect to deterioration of the NAFO managed stocks in the seas off eastern Canada beyond the 200-mile economic zone. Of course, NAFO was set up following the 1977 Law of the Sea decision when countries such as Canada were given an economic zone of 200 miles within which to operate.

NAFO is supposed to manage the fishing effort in areas outside the 200-mile economic zone, which includes the nose and tail of the banks.

One of the problems with respect to NAFO is that its members, according to Article 12 of the NAFO Convention, can refuse to be bound by decisions taken by majority votes. Certain members of NAFO, such as the European Community, have refused to be bound by majority votes, have ignored their NAFO quotas and taken considerably in excess of the NAFO quotas. That is a problem that hopefully they are now considering.

With respect to the suggestion that the quotas are to be reduced, the meetings do not end until Friday. At that time we will know exactly what are the recommendations of NAFO with respect to these straddling stocks and Canada will be able to decide its position then. I believe that the alarm the hon. gentleman is trying to raise with respect to the effect on the Canadian interest is greatly exaggerated.

CANADA-FRANCE DISPUTE—REQUEST FOR REFERRAL TO INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, one notable NAFO country does not accept even the scientific report. That country is France. France has overfished its quota inside the Canadian zone by some six times. Furthermore, it has broken off talks with Canada on the so-called disputed zone.

Will the Government of Canada now get up on its hind legs and take the initiative, invite France to the International Court to settle this question once and for all? In the meantime, will the Government do what it should have done a long time ago and give St. Pierre and Miquelon the fish they need, but arrest the first French vessel from metropolitan France that sets foot over our 200-mile zone?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman becomes more and more bellicose as he is further and further from power. The situation is that we have a long negotiation with France under way. It is a difficult one because of the circumstances from the past when other parties that were in power in Canada made certain decisions that do not help us now.

The position is that the Government of France does not wish to continue negotiations. As a matter of fact, fishery negotiations in the broad sense have not taken place since last October. France has now said that it does not wish to continue with the negotiations. It wants us to go back to the suggestion of several months ago that a mediator be appointed to see if the two parties can reach agreement. The Government of Canada is now considering this suggestion in view of the French actions and their statements, and will make a decision in due course. In the meantime, we have been pursuing France, asking it to refer the matter of the territorial boundary between St. Pierre and Miquelon and Canada to an international court for several years. The problem is that they refuse to do so until the question of quotas in the interim period is settled. That is the difficulty.

GRAND BANKS—FISHING BY UNITED STATES VESSELS

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, as you know, the nose and the tail of the Grand Banks of Newfoundland are the spawning ground for all fish in eastern Canada. Canada and the 21 countries meeting in Ottawa today respect that it is the spawning ground.

However, there is one country in the world that does not respect that fact. Does the Government not realize that that one country in the world not only will not respect the fact that it is a spawning ground—a Canadian vessel would be arrested by Canadian boats if it went on the nose of the Grand Banks—that one country refuses to belong to NAFO and refuses to respect any quotas? That one country is none other than that great friend of the Government, the United States of America.

When will the Government do more than just send diplomatic notes of protest to Washington? Does free trade mean a free rein on our resources?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, we can only all be very pleased that we soon will not have to listen to Question Period every day for at least a period of 50 days.

Some Hon. Members: When?

Mr. Crosbie: The Prime Minister will not confide in me.

The United States is entitled to fish outside the 200-mile economic limit of Canada, just as other countries of NAFO are entitled to fish there. We do not approve of the kind of fishing practices they have adopted out there, as shown by the fact that the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans this year took certain steps to indicate our displeasure there. We do regard the United States just as the Leader of the Official Opposition does, as a good friend of this country. But we will continue to protest to them and remonstrate when we do not agree with their fishing methods, their catches, or where they attempt to catch fish.

ATLANTIC CANADA OPPORTUNITIES AGENCY

ENTERPRISE CAPE BRETON—GRANT MADE TO CALIFORNIA-OWNED COMPANY

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister who is responding on behalf of the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency. WCN, a California-owned company, received a grant from Enterprise Cape Breton for $379,000 to do a feasibility study. Thereafter, it was awarded a $4.1 million loan and $2.3 million in tax credits to employ 160 people.

This American-owned company now confirms that it cannot do what it said it could. Today, six months after the loan, it only employs four people but the grant and loan remain intact. Oddly, the information indicating the amount of loan and tax credit does not appear in the annual report of Enterprise Cape Breton. Why does it not appear in the annual report?

Second, will he explain to the House whether or not investigations have been made of the former and present management team of WCN players because they have been involved in bankruptcies associated in the United States, as well as some real scams that have taken place in Saskatchewan, particularly the former president, with a company called Technigen in Saskatchewan, costing millions of dollars? Will the Minister explain that?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman is asking a specific question about a particular loan to a particular company, without giving any notice that he was going to ask the question. In my view it is hardly a suitable question for Question Period.

All I can say is that Enterprise Cape Breton in the period it has been operating since May, 1985, has processed 1,077 applications, made and accepted 359 offers for projects having a total value of $298 million, to which the federal contribution was $159 million, creating 2,556 jobs while helping maintain existing jobs totalling 1,278.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: All the hon. gentleman does to help the process is bring up individual cases and attack the odd individual case that might be a success. I would be ashamed to be him if I were representing that area.

UNIVERSAL METAL COMPANY GRANT

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the same Minister. The numbers that he quotes are a scam, like the company I have reported here concerning the 160 jobs. The Minister knows that.

I will leave that scam for a moment and ask the Minister about another great company that has received money from Enterprise Cape Breton. It is Universal Metals. It received a grant of $669,000, tax incentives, tax credits and wage subsidies to employ upwards from 50 to 100 people. Today it employs eight people. I ask this Minister with his bogus figures with respect to job creation in Cape Breton to explain to those workers where that money has gone. What guarantees does he have for the protection of workers in that particular community?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I gather the hon. gentleman is against tax credits in Cape Breton and grants in Cape Breton.

Mr. Dingwall: I'm against scams and Tory hacks.

Mr. Crosbie: Apparently he is against the effort launched by this Government to resuscitate Cape Breton economically.

Ms. Copps: Oh, sit down!

Mr. Crosbie: With respect to the $669,000 support to the Universal Sheet Metal Company, that went towards the capital cost of a crane. The hon. gentleman himself said that at the moment there are eight people employed, that is eight who would not have been employed were it not for this Government's help. Apparently he is against those eight people being employed. The company has had a peak workforce of 55 persons. At the moment we are hoping and expecting it will be rehiring towards the end of September when a ship arrives to take away $1 million worth of scrap from the Universal yard. So don't give up. Don't be gloating in this House too soon!

BANK OF CANADA

INCREASE IN BANK RATE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. The Bank of Canada has just announced an increase of 0.25 per cent in the bank rate. This is the sixth consecutive increase. The bank's policy is an extremely negative one for farm producers, small business people and families who have to renew their mortgages. My question to the Prime Minister or the Minister is simply this: Why is the Canadian Government pursuing a policy that is disastrous for Canada?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, if I might respond to that question, I think the Hon. Member is aware of the vast growth we have had in the Canadian economy over the past year and a half. It has been reflected in very good performance and job creation. We have seen during the course of this period an increasing pressure on inflation in the country. It is because of this increasing pressure on inflation that the Bank of Canada has moved to put on some offsetting pressure to avoid the problems we ran into in the 1970s and early 1980s when Governments of the day swept the problem under the rug.

If the Hon. Member wants to reflect back to 1981 when people were saying at that time: "We're probably going to see double-digit inflation for the rest of the 1980s", this is the sort of despair, the sort of frustration we want to avoid by dealing with the problem now. What I would say to the Hon. Member is that if you wait to act on inflation until you know you have a serious inflation problem, you have lost the battle. Inflationary expectations are embedded at that time and that is what we want to avoid.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Finance will know that the recent inflation figures show inflation going down in virtually every city from St. John's in the east to Vancouver in the west. There is still some pressure in the city of Toronto that everyone understands, even if, from the last figures, inflation dropped in the city of Toronto.

Instead of dealing directly with the major source of inflation in the city of Toronto, which is housing, instead of increasing radically the supply of housing in Toronto, why is the Government of Canada imposing a high interest rate policy on Canada as a whole? Why is it not dealing directly with the inflationary problem of housing in the city of Toronto?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is showing a very narrow understanding of the inflationary problems of this country if he says the sole source of inflation is housing in Toronto.

Mr. de Jong: You are the inflationary problem with your sales tax.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Housing does represent an important part of the economy and we have seen over a two-year period now some very important increases in the housing industry which have represented tremendous growth, tremendous opportunities, and a demonstration of economic success, not just in Toronto but right across the country.

I want to observe to the Hon. Member that in a recent report of the IMF, its 1988 annual report, it made some very positive observations about Canada. It went on to say:

> The authorities recognize that the best way for monetary policy to contribute to sustained economic growth is to continue to aim at price stability. Their actions in 1987 to curb monetary expansion in response to a rapid rise in the degree of resource use and certain signs that inflation might begin to accelerate were appropriate and contributed to a further strengthening of market confidence in the Canadian dollar.

That is the International Monetary Fund annual report of this year.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I tell the Minister of Finance that if he tries to talk that way to most workers in most parts of Canada outside of the centre of Toronto, he will not be well regarded. I want to put my question this way. Considering the Prime Minister himself, a man to whom the Minister of Finance listens with considerable care, I suspect, said:

> Every percentage of interest costs the farmers, say $100 million out of their pockets.

They are the words of the Prime Minister of Canada. And considering on the Prairies alone in the past year we have had 24,000 jobs in the farming sector disappear, and one-tenth of farmers in Canada as a whole are on the verge of bankruptcy, why does the Minister of Finance not have an interest rate policy that is good for all of Canada, for the farmers, and not just for one region?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, there is one thing I want to tell the Hon. Member, and it is the way I spoke to farmers in Saskatchewan last week, not to pull punches, to say this is the reason for the policy we are following as a Government. It is a policy when, taken in the broadest sense of what we have done over the last four years, shows we have created 1,000 jobs a day, day in and day out, for that whole period, 1,275,000 jobs!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The other thing I said to the farmers I met with on two occasions in Saskatchewan was that it is important to recall the problems they ran into in 1981 and 1982 when they saw interest rates going up very, very quickly and a lot of them had their farms devastated and their livelihoods devastated as a result of it.

Mr. de Jong: You were calling for lower interest rates then.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I told them that we were acting in a responsible, prudent manner to avoid that problem that they knew so well in 1981 and 1982.

Mr. de Jong: You are quoting Marc Lalonde now.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): There is a good understanding among them, and among other Canadians, that there is a very close link between inflation and interest rates. If you let inflation get out of control, then interest rates go right through the roof, and that—

Mr. Broadbent: Inflation has been going down, Michael. Not up, down.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The Hon. Member does not want to listen to the answer.

Mr. de Jong: We heard it in 1982 and we heard it in 1983.

ETHICS

ALLEGATIONS MADE BY FORMER POLITICAL ORGANIZER—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister and concerns the Government's code of public ethics.

Yesterday, a prominent Conservative, Mr. Glen Kealey, a former Conservative organizer in the riding of Hull-Aylmer, again stated on TVA television that he had been asked to pay a bribe in return for a Government contract. He also made allegations about the presence of organized crime within the Government.

Considering the fact that such allegations are very serious, is the Prime Minister prepared to indicate what measures he intends to take?

[English]

Mr. Murray Cardiff (Parliamentary Secretary to Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I would like to tell the Hon. Member that there is certainly no basis for an inquiry. I would encourage the Member, if he has any proof of these allegations, to bring it forward to the appropriate people.

• (1440)

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Stand up and say that's true.

Ms. Copps: A Tory said it. He didn't say it. One of yours said it, Wilson.

Mr. McDermid: You guys are going to end up in third place.

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell.

GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS—REQUEST FOR COMMISSION OF INQUIRY

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, presently there is an RCMP investigation into the allegations made by Mr. Glen Kealey, the Conservative organizer. So it is not a question of having an RCMP inquiry, it is already in progress. He has been subjected to a polygraph test which he has passed, by the way.

Given that Mr. Kealey has now joined the Hon. Member for Rosemont in calling for a public inquiry into the contracting practices of the Government, and he has done that in letter form to the Prime Minister, is the Prime Minister now prepared to call for a public commission of inquiry into the contracting practices of the Government, as a Conservative organizer, Mr. Kealey, has asked for, as the Member for Rosemont has asked for, and as I have been requesting for the last two years? Will he do that now, and if not, why not?

Mr. Murray Cardiff (Parliamentary Secretary to Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has stated there has been an RCMP investigation. We on this side of the House have all kinds of confidence in the RCMP. The investigation has not found that there should be an inquiry of this nature.

If the Hon. Member has anything to bring forward, he should do it now.

Mr. Boudria: Why don't you ask Glen Kealey?

Mr. Gauthier: Table the interview.

Mr. Boudria: Can I table the interview?

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Boudria: It's a television interview transcript. I can table it.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT—ADVERTISEMENTS OPPOSING DEAL

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, today a coalition of farmers and food processing firms from across the country challenged the Government with advertisements that state the trade deal "is a disaster for the agri-food industry in Canada", and "will make the Canadian farmer pay an unacceptable penalty".

I want to ask the Minister for International Trade why did the Government, as this advertisement makes clear, not listen to Canadian farmers and food companies? Why was the Government so unfair to 750,000 Canadians?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, we listened, not only to the Canadian agricultural community, but to every sector of the business, industrial, and farming economy of Canada through an elaborate system of SAGITs and the International Trade Advisory Council. They have been listened to and their advice often carried out, where it was possible to be carried out.

The advertisement to which the Hon. Member refers is by a certain number of personages. We notice food processors such as McCain's that have been expressing opposition to the free trade agreement because they are opposed to the supply management system that we have in our agriculture here in Canada, and which we protected in the U.S.-Canada Free Trade Agreement. It is fully protected.

Of course the food processing companies like McCain's are annoyed that this might keep up the costs of the farm inputs that they buy and make them less able to compete. That is their basic complaint. Their complaint is not with the U.S.-Canada Free Trade Agreement; their complaint is that we are protecting the farmers of this country too well.

PROTECTION OF FARMERS—MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, that is a totally misleading statement. The Ontario Federation of Agriculture and the UPA in Quebec both signed and paid for this advertising as well.

[Translation]

I want to ask the Minister what he is going to do now to protect those Canadian farmers against that which according to the UPA will have a negative impact in this sector with free trade. What does the Minister intend to do?

[English]

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I can only tell the hon. gentleman again that there is a long list of agricultural organizations that are supporting the free trade agreement, for example, the Alberta Pork Producers Marketing Board, the Alberta Sheep and Wool Commission, the Canadian Cattlemen's Association, the Canadian Council of Grocery Distributors, the Canadian Meat Council, the Canadian Pork Producers, the Manitoba Hog Producers Marketing Board, the Ontario Pork Producers Marketing Board, and the United Grain Growers. I could go on and on, Mr. Speaker.

In addition, studies conducted by impartial bodies such as the Economic Council of Canada have found both primary agriculture and the food and beverage industry will be better off as a result of the FTA. Better off—b-e-t-t-e-r!

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

NORTH SYDNEY-TRURO RAIL LINE

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. the Prime Minister. Mr. Gillies, the Intermodal Vice-President of Canadian National, has indicated that, because of renewed coal production in Pictou County, CN will soon be closing the rail line between North Sydney and Truro. This would be devastating for eastern Nova Scotia, an area that already is badly in need of regional development and suffers one of the highest unemployment rates in the country.

Why is the Government working with CN to close this very important rail link in eastern Nova Scotia?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am unaware of the comments of the Vice-President of CNR. I am very much aware of the efforts of the Government of Canada to work with the Government of Nova Scotia to bring about new economic opportunities in the mining area, and in other areas, in Pictou County, Central Nova, and in other constituencies throughout Nova Scotia.

I will be happy to look at my hon. friend's observation. I am sure that he would have no objection whatsoever to the initiatives of the Government to bring about a rebirth of mining in Central Nova.

REQUEST FOR COMMITMENT TO RETENTION OF LINE

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, the concern is the closure of the rail line, as I am sure the Prime Minister knows. CN has already met with the Cape Breton Development Corporation and asked it if it would take over the portion of the rail line on Cape Breton Island.

Will the Prime Minister right now give his commitment to the people of eastern Nova Scotia that, in the indefinite future, the rail line between North Sydney and Truro will remain open in eastern Nova Scotia, and that it will not be closed?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have already indicated, in the absence of the Minister of Transport, that I will be happy, on behalf of the Government, to take a serious look at my hon. friend's comments.

I know that he is not drawing any tie-in whatsoever between initiatives designed to revitalize the economy of Pictou County and other areas of Nova Scotia with the alleged statement of the Vice-President of the CNR.

We have been making a very special effort to help Cape Breton, as has been indicated in other responses, by tax changes. We have been making special efforts to help Pictou Country and other areas of Atlantic Canada, and we will continue to do so, because these initiatives can be sustained without any damage being inflicted upon any other areas of Canada, and I know that my hon. friend supports that view.

THE ECONOMY

INTEREST RATE LEVELS—EFFECT ON FARMERS

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance and it concerns his high interest rate policy which is hurting farmers across Canada.

In light of the fact that one year ago the Prime Minister stated that every time the interest rate in this country moves 1 per cent the farmers lose $100 million out of their pockets, in light of the fact that in the last year we have lost some 24,000 farm-related jobs on the Prairies, I want to know from the Minister of Finance, since farmers have suffered already from the drought, and from low international grain prices, does he not realize that farmers have suffered enough? Why does this Minister have a high interest rate policy for farmers which is killing the farm economy? Why that high interest rate policy?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I would ask the Hon. Member to think back to the period 1972-74. That was a period when there was a minority Liberal Government supported by the NDP.

During that period of time the Government of the day, supported by the NDP, ignored the inflationary pressures that were very clear at that time. It kept interest rates down at that time—

Mr. Broadbent: What about 1876?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The Leader of the NDP said what has it to do with 1974.

Mr. Broadbent: That is not what I said.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I will tell the Hon. Member what it has to do with it. That is when the problems got started. That is when the problems that led to the interest—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The Leader of the New Democratic Party is demonstrating complete ignorance of the pressures that arose in the 1970s which led so clearly to the 20 per cent to 25 per cent interest rates which devastated the farmers that the person sitting next to him is so concerned about today.

We in this Government take our responsibilities seriously. We are going to conduct an economic policy to avoid the problem that we ran into as a country when that problem was ignored and led to 20 per cent to 25 per cent interest rates in 1982.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, why does this Minister not care about 24,000 jobs lost on the Prairies?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nystrom: In light of the fact that the Prime Minister of Canada said in March of 1984—and I have the quotes right here—that we can have a made-in-Canada interest rate policy, and that interest rates at that time with a 10 per cent prime were too high—and they are higher now—why can we not have a made-in-Canada interest rate policy at this time? The Premiers of Canada want the interest rates down. The farmers want them down. Home owners want them down. Why do we have a high interest rate policy that is killing the farmers of Canada?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am not going to accept what the Hon. Member has just read into the record. I tell him that if he feels so strongly about it to table the policy so we can see the whole statement which he attributes to the Prime Minister at that time.

I would also say to the Hon. Member that we cannot have a regional monetary policy. We cannot have a regional interest rate policy. If we did, and if we had interest rates higher in Ontario than in Saskatchewan, his province, then money would flow from Saskatchewan to Toronto and the farmers of Saskatchewan would be starved for money.

What we in this Government have done is we have responded clearly to the needs of the farmers in Saskatchewan, as well as in other parts of the country. We have brought out policies that address drought and the problems of international grain subsidy wars—two policies which have resulted in billions of dollars of additional money going into the economy of Saskatchewan. This is how the Government demonstrated clearly its sensitivity to the plight of the farmers in his province of Saskatchewan.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

APPROVAL OF RAFFERTY DAM

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Only a few days ago we heard the Prime Minister at his unctuous best promising that the number one concern of Canadians in this election would be the environment. How could the Prime Minister have made that promise with a straight face when he must have known that three months before his own Deputy Prime Minister, in cahoots with the Minister of the Environment and the political Minister for Manitoba, cooked up a deal which put the environment of the whole Province of Manitoba at risk by approving the Rafferty Dam project simply to satisfy the Prime Minister's wish list and Saskatchewan's demands?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the allegations of the Hon. Member are just as erroneous today on this question as they have been demonstrated over the last four years while she has been in the House.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, as the Minister of the Environment said very clearly yesterday, as well as the day before, there were very stringent conditions. He mentioned 13 areas whereby if the conditions were not met he was authorized as the Minister of the Environment to withdraw the permit for the project.

Obviously, and I think we have to be straight on this matter, the provinces and the federal Government want to protect the environment. For the Hon. Member to come forward with the type of questions that she does come forward with is simply in keeping with how she has always handled herself in this House. She simply wants to make political points. She could not care less about the environment or even her own integrity at this stage.

WATER QUALITY

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I will tell you one thing, I would not sell out the people of my province for a political deal in the same way as the political Minister for Manitoba has done on this dam.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member will put her question.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I would like to put it on the record. Yesterday the Minister of the Environment stated an absolute mistruth in the House of Commons.

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Ms. Copps: His top hydrologist has contradicted him. His chief environmental policy analyst has contradicted him.

Why does the Government continue to claim that this deal will protect the water quality of Manitoba when in fact the top hydrologist involved in looking at this deal says that it will not? The Minister's own assistant, his chief environmental assistant, quit her job because she said that this was a political sell-out and had nothing to do with the environment. How can the Minister stand for Manitoba and say he is protecting Manitobans, and allow this deal to go through?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member says that she would not sell out. She has nothing to sell, something which has been evident for four years.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Epp (Provencher): I repeat what the Minister of the Environment has said. The conditions have been very clearly laid out. They have been agreed to by both levels of government. That stands on the record.

Ms. Copps: A Tory deal.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Yes, Mr. Speaker, the Conservatives are making arrangements for Canada not only for progress on water quality in Saskatchewan, not only for farmers in western Canada, not only for industrialization in Canada, and not only for social policy. What the Hon. Member does not like is the record because she knows she has to run against it and she cannot win.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

FISHERIES

NEWFOUNDLAND—OVERFISHING BY FOREIGN VESSELS

Mr. Jack Harris (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister for International Trade. Every fisherman in Canada, and certainly every fisherman in Newfoundland, knows the effects of foreign overfishing on the incomes of fishing families in Canada. Although the Minister for International Trade refuses to recognize it, many Newfoundland fishermen, inshore fishermen in particular, have had poor catches this year, some making as little as $10 per week.

Why is the Government so ineffective on this issue? No progress has been made with France on 3PS where overfishing is devastating fishing incomes on the south coast. No progress has been made to control overfishing on the nose and tail of the Grand Banks, or the Flemish Cap. Why does the Government not take action to protect Canada's interests?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I am glad to have a question from the hon. gentleman. There was a story in the St. John's The Evening

Telegram recently with the headline: "Councillors Wonder if MP Harris is Still Alive".

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: Your Tory buddies.

Mr. Crosbie: I am glad to be able to report to the Evening Telegram that the Hon. Member appears to be alive.

With respect to the question, the Government has done more in four years to enforce its surveillance in the 200-mile economic limit off the East Coast of Newfoundland. For example, we have armed the crewmen on patrol vessels. We have hired additional resources for surveillance, using not only defence aircraft but other chartered aircraft with the most modern radar capability, which has been very effective in apprehending people who violate our rules and regulations with respect to fishing. There has been more done to see that quotas and TACs are observed in the East Coast 200-mile zone in the last four years than in the previous 10.

With respect to the nose and tail of the Banks, those areas, unfortunately, are outside the jurisdiction of this country. Therefore they come under the arrangements of NAFO. We have put it strongly to NAFO this week that certain of the NAFO members who are refusing to observe their own quotas and who have refused to observe the majority rules of NAFO are seriously endangering fish stocks that straddle the 200-mile limit. We feel that NAFO must take steps to become more effective.

Mr. Harris: Mr. Speaker, I wonder how much the Minister for International Trade and his Government are prepared to spend this time to try to beat me. He will find out how alive I am.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

REQUEST FOR EXTENSION OF CANADIAN JURISDICTION

Mr. Jack Harris (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Minister says that action is being taken to talk to NAFO members about how concerned they are about the nose and tail of the Grand Banks. We are all aware of the effect of this over-fishing on Canada's national interest. When will the Government start moving to extend the jurisdiction of Canada so that we can protect those fish stocks that are not being protected by these countries to the detriment of Canada?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I want to point out that it was not I who wondered if the Hon. Member was alive, it was the Conception Bay South Council that was concerned about his health. The council agreed to write him a letter to find out how he is and "if he is still alive". I hope the Hon. Member is not offended by my bringing that up.

With reference to the question of the 200-mile limit, neither Canada nor any other country can unilaterally extend its jurisdiction over the fishery beyond the 200 miles that were agreed to in the Law of the Sea Treaty of 1977. The United States has not done it but there may be one or two South American countries that have said that they will do it.

I do not think that Canada can unilaterally take the law into its own hands and extend our limits that way. Certainly we would be willing to see, if the other countries of the world would agree, the boundaries extended out to cover the whole continental shelf, something which I think we should do, but if they refuse to recognize our wishes in that regard I am afraid we cannot force the world to do what Canada thinks is the right thing to do.

NATIONAL REVENUE

TAXES OWED BY AMWAY CORPORATION

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Revenue. In 1983, Amway Corporation pleaded guilty before the Supreme Court of Ontario to a complicated scheme which involved defrauding Canadian taxpayers of millions of dollars in taxes and duties. Today, nearly five years later, those amounts have not been paid. Can the Minister confirm that the total involved is over $100 million?

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate my colleague's interest in this high-profile case. It is true that it has been, as they say, dragging on for a long time. It is presently before the Supreme Court of Canada, and I think the Hon. Member will understand that I cannot divulge much information publicly about it other than what is available in court records. I would be pleased to explore what information I could properly give her, but I think she will understand that at the present time it is still before the courts.

AMOUNT OWED

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate that it is still before the courts, but the Minister should be prepared to divulge the amount involved because that must have been arrived at long before the court case started. I think ordinary Canadians who are being harassed for arrears of $100 may find it bothersome that people who owe $100 million are apparently able to escape.

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, I would remind my hon. colleague that, while it is true that there appears to be a substantial amount of money owed, the judicial process must be observed. We are not in a position to do anything arbitrary until the Supreme Court of Canada authorizes the proper verdict.

1994 COMMONWEALTH GAMES—GOVERNMENT SUPPORT FOR VICTORIA FACILITIES

Mr. Patrick Crofton (Esquimalt—Saanich): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. In view of the fact that the City of Victoria and Canada have been successful in their bid to host the 1994 Commonwealth Games, can the Government confirm its commitment to financial support toward the facilities?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the Government of Canada is proud to have supported the City of Victoria and the committee in their efforts to win the hosting privileges for the 1994 Commonwealth Games. I am sure all Hon. Members of the House would celebrate with Victoria this great success today in Seoul.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Epp (Provencher): I should also mention that our colleague, the Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport, was in Seoul to add additional support to the application.

I also want to indicate to the Hon. Member and to his constituents and the good burghers of Victoria that, not only did the Canadian Government commit money for the bid itself, but as well, the commitment that if Canada were awarded the Commonwealth Games, up to $50 million would be in place, is repeated as being firm today.

Mr. Speaker: One single question from the Hon. Member for Churchill and that will close Question Period.

TRANSPORT ROUTE CANADA—LAID-OFF WORKERS

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I am sorry that it is a single question because it is a very serious matter. My question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Does he not find it obscene that the people who bought Route Canada after the Government decided to privatize it are keeping their Jaguars and their Lear jets, while at the same time the workers have lost their dental plan and their health plans, their pensions are in jeopardy, they have lost their jobs, and independent contractors are in danger of losing their trucks? Is that not obscene?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member can draw conclusions as he wishes. He perhaps has all the facts associated with this issue. However, the Minister of Transport, the Minister of State for Transport, the Minister of Labour and the Minister of State for Finance have all responded to questions like that.

I can assure the Hon. Member by simply reinforcing the fact that as a Government we are very, very concerned about the welfare of the employees. We are attempting to—

Mr. Benjamin: Look what privatization got you.

Mr. Mazankowski: We are attempting to ascertain all the facts surrounding this particular issue, and the assurance of the Government is that all efforts will be taken to ensure that the welfare of the employees will be considered—

Mr. Benjamin: It's a rip-off.

Mr. Mazankowski: The Hon. Member says that it is a rip-off. There were bankruptcies long before privatization initiatives or deregulation came into effect—

Mr. Murphy: It was your policy. You didn't protect them, you didn't try to protect them.

Mr. Mazankowski: The Government—if he does not want to listen to the answer, then there is not much point in proceeding.

TABLING OF DOCUMENTS

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. During Question Period members of the Government requested that I table or make public some documents in relation to the allegations made by Mr. Glen Kealey. I have in hand a copy of a TVA transcript of September 14 which I would like to table, and with the unanimous consent of the House, I would be willing to append it to Hansard.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: The document can be tabled but it would require unanimous consent of the House. I do not think there is such unanimous consent.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Deputy Government House Leader. I would like to ask him if he would give us a statement of the business the Government intends to call over the next several days.

Message from the Senate

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Speaker, this afternoon we will continue with report stage of Bill C-144, the child care Bill, which I understand may be completed by six o'clock this evening. If there are recorded divisions requested, they would be deferred until 6 p.m. Monday.

Tomorrow, Friday, September 16, we will continue with report stage of Bill C-136, the broadcasting Bill. I understand that it may be possible for this stage of debate to be completed by two o'clock tomorrow afternoon. If there are any recorded divisions requested, they would be deferred until 6 p.m. on Monday.

On Monday, September 19, we would call the Bill introduced this morning respecting variable entrants' requirements for unemployment insurance. If that is completed, we would then propose to call Bill C-128, the Bill to establish the Department of Industry, Science and Technology. If there is any time, we might perhaps proceed with Bill C-157, the Bill dealing with public servants' political rights.

Pending what happens to report stages of Bill C-144 and Bill C-136, on Tuesday, September 20, we would commence third reading of Bill C-144, the child care Bill, followed by third reading of Bill C-136.

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, since Allan Gregg is not allowing the Conservatives to call an election this weekend, can the Minister indicate if he is willing to move forward on our proposals regarding a definition of election expenses? The Deputy Prime Minister received our letter before the break indicating that we were willing to move quickly. We have been told by Elections Canada that they believe the amendments we have proposed can be put in place quickly and they look at them with a certain amount of favour. We are still waiting for a response to that letter we sent to the Deputy Prime Minister over two weeks ago.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, my hon. friend will know that due to the filibuster by the NDP we were unable to proceed with Bill C-79 which involved a great deal of amendments to the Elections Act. I know my friend wants to proceed with the election expenses business. Members on our side want to pin down exactly what happens to campaign contributions so they are no longer used by the NDP to fund municipal elections.

Mr. Murphy: Mr. Speaker, we are not arguing with the Government's right to introduce whatever type of legislation it wants. The point is that it has not made any attempt whatsoever to introduce legislation. Again, we have made a specific proposal with respect to a unanimous report of a committee of the House of Commons which said that election expenses must be clearly defined before the next election. That was the report of a majority Conservative committee which investigated the affairs of the Hon. Member for Frontenac (Mr. Masse).

Do you not think that after that report and the passage of six months the Government could move and provide a decent definition of election expenses before we go into the next election?

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, this new-found effort toward co-operation on the question of election expenses is a complete surprise to me and my Party. We outlined the work for next week. If we have complete co-operation on Bill C-79, we can look at it.

I reiterate that members of my Party are very disturbed about federal contributions being used for municipal elections, as they are by the NDP. Any change in the Act would have to take that into account.

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that a message has been received from the Senate informing this House that the Senate has passed Bill S-21, an Act to revive Grenville Aggregate Specialties Limited and to provide for its continuance under the Canada Business Corporations Act, to which the concurrence of this House is desired.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANADA CHILD CARE ACT

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-144, an Act to authorize payments by Canada toward the provision of child care services, and to amend the Canada Assistance Plan in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee.

Mr. Speaker: I have a ruling which I am prepared to give in just a minute. I want to say to the Hon. Member for Vancouver East, who spoke to me about one particular motion, that I am not going to deal with Motion No. 16 at this moment. I am prepared to give it some further thought, and I thought out of courtesy I should advise the Hon. Member. In the meantime, I am prepared to go ahead with all of the other motions.

There are 40 motions in amendment set down on the Notice Paper concerning Bill C-144, an Act to authorize payments by Canada toward the provision of child care services, and to amend the Canada Assistance Plan in consequence thereof.

[Translation]

Members will recall that earlier I promised to return and give a final ruling in connection with this Bill. I am now ready to do so.

[English]

This morning the House disposed of Motions Nos. 3, 15, 27, 33, 34, and 40. There may be some Hon. Members who want to have a copy of this in front of them. Does the Hon. Member for Vancouver East have a copy?

Ms. Mitchell: No, Mr. Speaker, and it would be very helpful to have a copy.

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps I could ask the table officers to assist Hon. Members.

This morning the House disposed of Motions Nos. 3, 15, 27, 33, 34, and 40. The grouping of Motions Nos. 18, 21 and 22 were allowed to stand by unanimous consent, as was Motion No. 38.

I will now deal with the remaining motions.

[English]

Motions Nos. 1, 2, 14, 17, 19, 20, 23, 24, 25, 26, 31, 32, 35, 37, and 39 are all similar to amendments moved and debated in the legislative committee. Thus, it is with regret that I cannot select any of these motions under paragraph (10) of Standing Order 114.

[Translation]

Motion No. 4 is similar to an amendment presented to Clause 2 in the Legislative Commitee and not proceeded with for procedural reasons. This Motion seeks to insert a declaration of policy which at first blush is not consistent with the principle of the Bill as adopted by the House at second reading. However, I have carefully examined the matter and I am prepared to give the benefit of the doubt to the Honourable Member. Motion numbered 4 will therefore be debated and voted upon separately.

[English]

Motion No. 5 will not be selected as it is similar to and seeks to do much the same as Motion No. 4.

[Translation]

Motions Nos. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12 and 13 are attempting to insert new clauses in the Bill. These Motions stand in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver East. In effect, the Hon. Member is attempting by these Motions to amend the principle of the Bill by providing and defining national objects not found in the Bill as read a second time by this House. This is out of order and in this connection I would refer the Hon. Member to paragraph (1) of citation 773 of Beauchesne's, 5th edition.

[English]

I was going to deal with Motion No. 16, and I draw to the attention of the Hon. Member for Vancouver East that I am omitting any reference to that at this time. I will report back to the House a little later.

[Translation]

Motion No. 28 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver East is consequential to Motion No. 26 which was moved, debated and negatived in Committee and which was not selected earlier in this ruling. For this reason, it will not be selected either.

[English]

Motions Nos. 29 and 30 cause the Chair procedural difficulty because they seek to continue the application of the Canada Assistance Program and this is clearly not envisaged in the Bill as adopted at second reading. Thus, it is contrary to paragraphs (1) and (8) of Citation 773 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition.

[Translation]

Motion No. 36 is in order and will be debated and voted upon separately.

[English]

Motion No. 38, allowed to stand this morning, will be debated and voted on separately.

[Translation]

The House will now resume consideration of Motions Nos. 18, 21 and 22 which have been grouped for debate but will be voted on separately. It is my understanding that the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow), wished to move an amendment to Motion No. 22.

[English]

Debate.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, the motion which I propose to move now is very similar in intent and content to the motion I attempted to move earlier today. I understand this motion as drafted is correct procedurally. I move:

> "(i) indicate the means by which the province will encourage the development of child care spaces to meet the needs of infants and toddlers under three years of age".

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Winnipeg North has just moved an amendment to Motion No. 22. I am prepared to accept it but I point out that it is very close to the line. I would not want it to be used as a precedent. However, this is an important matter. I see that the Minister does not seem to have any particular objection, but I do not want people rushing to use my generosity at this moment as necessarily a very binding precedent. I will accept the amendment. The Hon. Minister on a point of order.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. This amendment to the amendment gets into the area with which we were dealing in the legislative committee. In my mind it gets into that grey area of constitutional competence.

We can debate this and the argument obviously is going to be in the field of the flexibility of provinces as well as the jurisdictional position of provinces.

The problem created by accepting these motions which get close to the line is that while we can obviously use a majority to defeat the motion there is the constitutional consideration, because if it is accepted here it could also be accepted in other areas.

Mr. Speaker: I will hear the Hon. Member for Vancouver East on a point of order.

Ms. Mitchell: Mr. Speaker, this amendment is really related to Motion No. 22 which was allowed to be debated today. Motion No. 22 refers to asking the provinces to indicate the means by which they would encourage the development of child care for school children aged six to twelve.

We are not telling the provinces that they must do it. It says "indicate the means by which the provinces will encourage the development" of this. We are just adding the younger age group since there is a great need in that area. We are trying to make the provinces' indication of what is needed for under three-year-old children a little more specific. It is exactly the same principle as in Motion No. 22.

Mr. Speaker: I have indicated to Hon. Members that I am prepared to accept the amendment. I am conscious of the point that the Hon. Minister raises, but it is a substantive matter and I have to make these decisions on a procedural basis. No doubt there will be some debate on both sides of the House and perhaps the point that the Hon. Minister has made will be considered.

However, I am prepared to allow this motion to come forward. I again repeat it is very close to the line but I will, in the general interests of the debate, allow it.

Mr. Gauthier: Can we have the motion put?

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North) moved:

That Motion No. 22 be amended by adding the following at the end thereof:

"(i) indicate the means by which the province will encourage the development of child care spaces to meet the needs of infants and toddlers under three years of age".

He said: Mr. Speaker, any Member of Parliament who represents an urban constituency and moves around not only his or her own constituency but any part of the city in which he or she lives will see at four o'clock, four-thirty, five o'clock, and in the late evening, very young children aged six, seven, eight, and ten, wandering the streets and hanging around convenience stores. They are doing that because very often both their fathers and mothers are working. They have come to be known as latchkey children and we have to face up to that problem.

Some school divisions are trying to do that but they have very limited resources. I happen to have some personal knowledge of this because my grandson, who is seven years old, is attending a public school in Winnipeg which draws students from a pretty wide area. Arrangements have been made at that school for the school to be open at eight o'clock in the morning so that mothers or fathers who are working can leave their children at the school at that time. They have made arrangements that the children can have lunch in the school and can stay there till five o'clock.

That is a tremendous change. For many years, and probably still today in many schools, at noon hour the school is closed to students. As I say, those are the kinds of arrangements which we are increasingly going to have to make if we are going to protect and improve the living style of the children of today and of the next generation.

They made a good beginning in my City of Winnipeg in this regard and I am sure in other cities, but the local school boards do not have the financial ability to extend that kind of arrangement across the whole system, although it is needed in almost every area in my city and in other cities.

I say to the Minister of Health and to the Members of Parliament that we have to begin facing up to the problems of the 1980s and the 1990s. We cannot deal with the problems as they existed 20, 30, and 40 years ago. We are living in a new way. I would urge the Government to give consideration not only to approving this amendment but to helping the provinces and the local municipalities to deal with this problem by helping to pay for the costs which will undoubtedly be involved in extending that kind of program to those who need it.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak to the amendment regarding young children under the age of three.

It is very important that there be some additional movement to provide services for parents who have young children. In most ridings, such as in my riding of Vancouver East, there is only one licensed day care space for infants. There are many mothers, particularly single parent mothers who have no choice but to go on welfare if they cannot get good child care in order to take training or get into the workforce. The same is true for parents of toddlers.

We believe it is particularly important to emphasize this, perhaps more than on any age group, because it is more expensive to provide care for children under three. It is very important that they are given the right kind of care and that there be a high adult-child ratio in a separate facility that is operated in a more home-like atmosphere than in the group care that is provided for three to five-year-olds. The provision of such care is more expensive and that is why there are not as many spaces for this age group. Day care centres simply cannot afford to provide it.

The Government, the Minister, and other Ministers have refused to do anything about parental leave. If we do not have parental leave to help mothers and fathers be at home with young infants, they have absolutely no choice. The Government talks about choice but refuses to provide it. This amendment is particularly important in stressing that this is one of the services of a comprehensive child care program. It means that there should be child care services for every age group.

My colleague mentioned school aged children. It is also extremely important to highlight the need for services for children under three. It is also important for the three to five-year old age group, but there are more centres for the three to five-year old age group and the provinces are likely to continue just maintaining what they have now, if they can afford to do so with the limited funding provided by this program. They are very unlikely to move into the care for children under three, which is more expensive but much needed. It must be good quality care for these young children in their formative years. It is the most important time of their lives, when they must have good care with a loving caregiver who is a substitute during the day for the parents. That is why we believe it is important to include this specifically as an amendment.

[Translation]

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I support this motion because I want the Minister to persuade the provinces to set aside spaces for infants. We know that today, day-care for infants is far more expensive than for older children, and we also know there is a serious shortage of spaces in this area. Most young mothers are unable to find day-care space or a sitter for children of that age. To be perfectly frank, it might be better for mothers to stay home and take care of their very young children, at least until they are a year old, but as I said this morning, there are many couples with children who both have to work, and in that case, we must help them find spaces. As I said earlier, the Minister can be very persuasive when he wants to be, and I support this motion because I want him to negotiate with the provinces to find spaces, especially for infants.

I represent a riding that is particularly fortunate, because we have several day-care centres. Outremont was one of the first ridings that started day-care centres more than ten years ago. I think people in the cities may be more fortunate in this respect. Although there is a serious shortage, people always manage to find spaces. However, in the regions and in small towns and communities, th shortage of spaces is far more dramatic. So I support this amendment, and again, I want to ask the Minister of National Health and Welfare to do everything he can to have spaces set aside for infants.

[English]

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) has expressed concern about the inadequacy in providing funding or direction for children under the age of three.

I want to add my concern, which is the apparent absence in this legislation of consideration for the particular problems of parents who have disabled children. The cost of providing child care services for those children is substantially more than for able-bodied children under the age of three.

The Obstacles report was a document tabled in the House of Commons by an all-Party committee that made unanimous recommendations. It recognized that the additional cost associated with a disability was something for which the federal Government had a responsibility in providing leadership.

Let me give a perfect example. It is estimated that the cost of child care for a disabled child is some $8 a day, $5 per day for an infant or special needs child, $4 per day for full day care for pre-schoolers or school aged children, and $2 per day for a child needing after school or half-day care.

I want to emphasize that there are additional costs in day-to-day living associated with disabilities. If child care imposes an even greater cost on parents who are already having a hard time making ends meet, I believe that the Minister has a responsibility to re-examine that aspect of this legislation, in giving incentives to provincial and municipal Governments that also have a role to play in providing child care spaces. There is an additional responsibility on the Minister to persuade his cabinet colleagues to provide that additional financial assistance to those families who have disabled children not only under the age of three, but for those who require child care services on a long or short term basis.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The question is on Motion No. 18, standing in the name of the Hon. Minister of National Health and Welfare. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 18 (Mr. Epp (Provencher)) agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The next question is on Motion No. 21, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Outremont. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion, the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

• (1540)

The next question is on the amendment to Motion No. 22 which was moved by Mr. Orlikow and seconded by Ms. Mitchell.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the amendment to the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the amendment will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the amendment to the motion, with the motion, stands deferred.

The next motion for debate is Motion No. 4.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East) moved:

That Bill C-144 be amended by adding immediately after line 24 at page 3 the following:

"3. It is hereby declared that the primary objective of the Canadian child care policy is to establish a national child care program which provides non-parental care for children who require it and which is consistently affordable, accessible, available and of assured quality across Canada, and which is provided by not-for-profit child care agencies."

She said: Mr. Speaker, this is a very important motion. Almost every group which appeared before the legislative committee considering Bill C-144 said that one of the great weaknesses in this Act was that it had no national objectives. We have heard that over and over again. We know that the Canada Health Act, which is the last major piece of social legislation passed by Parliament many years ago now, spelled out principles. This is a social program where the federal Government provides funding in addition, even though the program itself is in provincial jurisdiction, but it does so on the basis of really carrying out our national principles, the five national principles of medicare.

This has been extremely important, as any student of history can tell you, because it is the only way a national social program can be available with not exactly quality day care but at least some practical provisions that are similar in the different provinces. It is important that health care be universal in Nova Scotia, just as it is important that it be available to anyone in Ontario. Constitutionally, and this is a constitutional issue, it is quite important that national social programs, even if money is being put into programs under provincial jurisdiction, do have some guidelines and goals. National dollars should not just be spent for anything. In British Columbia over the years, for example, money that was supposed to be spent for post-secondary education was put into roads and other kinds of things instead, with no responsibility at all to be accountable.

We felt very strongly about this very major and very important new social program, a program which has been needed for 20 years. For 20 years women have been advocating a national program for child care. We must do it right, and to do it right we must have national objectives. I hope the Hon. Member for New Westminster—Coquitlam (Ms. Jewett) will speak to this matter because she is a constitutional expert. As she knows, under the Meech Lake Accord there was agreement among the provinces, including the Province of Quebec. I would point out, that there would be national objectives and that federal spending for social programs would be based on provinces agreeing to the national objectives. This program is the forerunner of the Meech Lake Accord, and surely the Government would agree that this should be developed as a model in the spirit of Meech Lake.

I am sorry to say that it is anything but a model. In fact, it is a very negative kind of cop-out. It is actually just a pretence on the part of the Conservative Party, I am quite convinced, some token gesture to get the women's vote across the country. The Conservatives are concerned about the gender gap and well they should be because the women of Canada will be expressing their anger and have already expressed their anger about the extremely inadequate Canada Child Care Act.

We would like to see national objectives that would spell out a real program, and we have an amendment that would do this in greater detail. We talk about quality. A national child care program should be a program with objectives of quality, affordability, accessibility, comprehensiveness, flexibility, not for profit administration, and accountability.

In subsequent amendments we spelled out what we meant by each of those objectives. We were following the model of the Canada Health Act. We had it right in front of us and that is what we were using. We thought it was very important to spell out the objectives we would like to see. These objectives are much broader than the Minister will even consider. When I questioned the Minister in the House a number of times, as well as in committee, he affirmed that he had national objectives. In his preamble to the Act he does mention that there is a need for child care programs which are affordable, accessible, available, and of assured quality. I have not quoted it specifically but I believe those are the four points in the preamble to the Bill. He has even referred to those principles as objectives in the preamble. The preamble leads off by stating:

> Whereas the Parliament of Canada, recognizing that there is a need—

Not that there will be objectives but that there is a need. It continues:

> —to improve the availability, affordability, quality and accessibility of child care services, is desirous of increasing the number of child care spaces throughout Canada—

Sure, there is a need. Every study we have had for the last 15 years has indicated that there is a need. In fact, there is a need for much more. There is a need for non-profit child care as well. Putting this into a preamble of an Act, saying in an innocuous way that there is a need, is not the same as putting objectives into the body of the Act.

With respect to the guidelines of the Canada Health Act, there is one statement which is the general object of the Act. It goes on subsequently to spell out the national objectives with definitions. That is what we were trying to do when we presented this motion in committee and as we are presenting it now. I say again that it is really very important. Many of the provinces are in desperate straits. They have told the Minister over and over again that they do not have enough money for child care. They certainly are very concerned that he is not going to give them enough money to make any real impact or even to do very much more than they are doing now. Many provinces, I suspect, will use the available money to help cover the costs of existing programs. As we said earlier, we are concerned that low income children, for example, may not necessarily have priority.

We are also concerned that any new national child care program has to be consistently affordable. It means that parents have to be able to afford the fees. That means there has to be money to reduce the fees. It is not enough to have a tax rebate of some type because many parents will be using that for nannies or for unlicensed care. What we are saying is that it must be covered in national objectives so that the provinces have to begin to reduce the fees, or at least say how they will reduce the fees in the future in order that they will be affordable.

We are not talking about poor families. We are talking about average families, the ones in the middle that are left out. The Government likes to give tax breaks to the wealthier parents where often two professional parents are working and their income is pretty good. Of course they like a tax break. The Government tends to forget about the families in between, the ones that are struggling and do not have a high income. Such a family would be in the poverty group if the second parent was unable to work to help pay the mortgage.

There are many, many single parents, I regret to say increasing numbers, and the Government has no programs designed to help single parents. They are in an incredible situation when it comes to care. They simply cannot afford the fees. Many students now have children. They cannot afford the fees. In fact, we heard about child care centres in universities that will be closing because the fees are so high that parents who are students simply cannot afford them.

This motion also refers to the question of accessibility. It is grossly unfair, and I would suspect even unconstitutional, that child care is available in urban centres in a limited way, usually for three to five-year-olds, but it is not available in rural communities, northern communities, and in many of the poorer regions of Canada.

We want to ensure that this Act has national objectives which state that day care must be accessible, and that parents, no matter where they live, have the right to good, licensed, affordable child care. The Minister has stated that it must be available. I suppose he means that seriously. If he does mean it seriously, why will he not put it in objectives? He also referred to the whole question of quality. If the Minister means what he says about quality in the preamble, then why in the first national child care program that we have ever had why is he afraid to include it in a national objective in the Act? I am compromising with the Minister. I am not insisting on our objectives which are by far superior. Why will the Minister not even accept his own objectives?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret that the Hon. Member's time has expired. On debate the Hon. Member for Outremont.

[Translation]

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I simply wanted to say that I support this motion because many groups and witnesses told us they were concerned that non-profit day-care centres would get less support from the various governments. I think it is important for us to have subsidized, non-profit and affordable day-care centres.

As was said earlier by the Hon. Member for the New Democratic Party, we have many teen-age mothers who cannot get their children into day-care, mainly because they can't afford it. I think it is important for us to give non-profit day-care a special place in our child-care system.

[English]

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I am very happy to have this opportunity to join the debate because all through July and August of last year I was privileged to be a member of the committee on the Meech Lake Accord. One of the most important subjects that the committee addressed, you will recall, Mr. Speaker, was the matter of shared cost programs and the conditions under which a province could opt out of such a program.

Early on in the hearings all members of the committee spent a good deal of time with the witnesses before us, the Ministers, deputies, constitutional experts, and members of the public, assuring ourselves that a program such as a national child care program would and could adhere to certain national objectives that would be spelled out. We had that assurance time and time again, indeed, so much so, that the whole issue of shared cost programs in the constitutional accord, and the national objectives that could be pursued in developing such programs, became no longer an issue. For the remainder of the hearings we devoted ourselves to other parts of the accord that we felt needed greater clarification. It was made clear, and it was a very exciting moment for many of us because our shared cost programs in the past had not contained national objectives in the Constitution. I for one regarded this as a tremendous accomplishment for Canadians, and one of the very strongest reasons for supporting the new constitutional accord. I also believe that was true for my fellow committee members.

Now we find that the Government which introduced the constitutional accord, which pursued placing national objectives in the Constitution of Canada for the first time—we never had the words "national objectives" in our Constitution before—is welching. It is welching on its own proposal. Indeed, it leads one to think that the Government is rushing this legislation through because it knows that it is welching on the Meech Lake Accord. It wants to get the legislation through before the Meech Lake Accord kicks in. That, I am afraid, is exactly what it is doing.

I spent an enormous amount of time studying the accord, thinking about the accord, and having it explained and argued over. I certainly recommended as strongly as I could to my fellow caucus members, who were also worried that under Meech Lake we might never again have a national social program, that the possibility of having national objectives in a national social program was stronger than it had ever been before, and that under Meech Lake there would no longer be an opportunity for any Government of Canada to do what it has done, for example, in post-secondary education, which is not to have any objectives at all, and the provinces can spend the money on roads and bridges.

I do not see many present at the moment, Mr. Speaker, but I can assure you that I had the assurance of members of the committee from the government side that was their understanding of the insertion of the phrase "national objectives". The problem may be that the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) has not read all of the minutes of the Meech Lake discussions last summer. He is smiling, so I guess he hasn't, but I wish that he had read it.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): You are absolutely right.

Ms. Jewett: All right. He has not read it. Of course. I was on the committee. The Minister for International Trade (Mr. Crosbie) has not read the trade deal, and the Minister of National Health and Welfare has not read the minutes, or even the final report of the constitutional committee. Had he done so, he would have realized that it did not say that they could just be tucked into a preamble to an Act. It said that the national objectives could be fully developed, along the lines of this amendment. If they wanted different national objectives, they could have put those in, but in the body of the Act. You do not need Meech Lake to put something in the preamble of a Bill. Preambles are not binding, as we all know. You do not need this great constitutional accord to put in a preamble providing for accessibility, affordability and availability of child care.

The whole benefit of the constitutional accord, what we commonly call the Meech Lake Accord, is being lost by the very Government that proposed Meech Lake in the first place. I know, as I stand here, that if Meech Lake had already kicked in; i.e., if the remaining two provinces, including the Minister's province, had signed on, as I am sure they will do—although this is probably going to make them wonder—

Mr. Epp (Provencher): This explanation will.

Ms. Jewett: I would like to hear the Minister give a better one.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): I will. It is not hard.

Ms. Jewett: Had they signed on, and had Meech Lake already kicked in, there is no way that this Government could have introduced a Bill like this, simply putting the national objectives in the preamble of the Bill rather than in the body of the Bill, knowing, as even the Minister must know, that preambles have no legal effect. If the Minister cannot understand that, then he does not understand what Meech Lake was all about.

The Minister said that he is willing to speak. I would like the Minister to explain why the Government did not place in the Child Care Act—

Ms. Mitchell: He refuses to even consider it.

Ms. Jewett: —or even consider putting in the body of the Act the objectives of this Government. I am not saying that they have to adopt all of our objectives, but there should be some objectives for a national child care program in the Act. I would like to know why they have not been put in when the Government, in the Meech Lake Accord, made it not only possible but obligatory to have national objectives stated. Why did they not do it? Why have they taken this action and welshed on the Meech Lake Constitutional Accord?

Ms. Mitchell: Well put.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question? The Hon. Member for Regina East.

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I was slow in rising because I was expecting the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) to rise and give the promised explanation.

It is of concern to us that there are no national objectives, that it is being left up to each province to interpret what this will mean. It is of concern to us that we will end up with a patchwork of child care facilities across Canada that will not have national objectives. It is of concern to us that there will be in some progressive provinces, probably those with New Democratic Party Governments, good quality day care, and that in other provinces, probably Tory provinces and Social Credit provinces, that in essence do not believe in day care, philosophically, there will be very low standards. Public moneys will be used to support scams that will go under the guise of day care but, in essence, are not day care.

My colleague from New Westminster discussed the implications in terms of the Meech Lake Accord, and I wish to add a few comments about this. When we were discussing the Meech Lake Accord in our caucus—and I do not think I am giving away caucus secrets—they were many long and heated debates about the implication of the Meech Lake Accord. One of the major concerns that we, the New Democrats, have is the ability of the federal Government, in certain areas, to be able to set national objetives when it comes to federal moneys.

We were given the assurance, both in caucus and on the floor of the House of Commons, that indeed national objectives will be allowed under the Meech Lake Accord. The Government had a real opportunity with this legislation to demonstrate that we can have national objectives under the Meech Lake Accord.

I understand that the Province of Quebec was not opposed to implementing within the Bill national objectives and the definition of national standards.

Ms. Mitchell: National objectives.

Mr. de Jong: National objectives. The Government failed to demonstrate in the House and to the Canadian public that we could have a new national social program with national objectives and still have the Meech Lake Accord.

I am becoming worried. I am worried that—

Mr. Crosbie: You have never been anything but. I have never seen you when you were not worried.

Mr. de Jong: —with Meech Lake we will not be able to have national objectives. A fair number of people in this country who have supported Meech Lake must now think twice. The national broad consensus and the all-Party support was delivered on Meech Lake in an attempt to heal and bring the nation together. This Government with its inaction, its inability to act in this area, is destroying the national coalition. When you stand back and look at what this Government has done and continues to do, is it in any way a surprise?

Since the 1984 election, we have entered into the Orwellian world of 1984 where what is said is not really what is meant. We see it in the child care legislation. I am really concerned that this is also applicable to the Meech Lake Accord.

What we are asking for, in essence, is a recognition by this Government that national objectives should be defined and included in the Bill, not just in the preamble. The preamble does not hold any water. The Minister and the Government know this.

We are asking for a definition within the Act that will carry some legal weight. We would like to see the Government adopt what we propose and the definition of those national objectives. At the very least, we are asking in this amendment that what the Minister has often spoken about, what is found in the preamble, be moved into the Bill to give it some flesh around those bones.

I think the indication of the Government is that, it will not accept this amendment. The Minister promises some explanation. I hope that he does eventually find whatever it takes for him to stand up in the House and to give that explanation. I was hoping that he would do it after my colleague had finished speaking in order for me not to have to give this speech and to express these concerns. It seems that the Minister is not quite prepared to explain to us how we could have national objectives as part of an Act and still have the Meech Lake Accord.

Let me just say a few words about the need for having some national objectives. Part of what we asked for in terms of national objectives was accessibility.

I represent a seat, Regina East, which has a rural component, an urban component, as well as bedroom communities and the downtown of Regina. It has various Indian reserves. There are Indian people, native people and Métis people living off the reserves. They all have very specific needs.

Rural people have a special need in terms of day care, particularly considering the cycles of agriculture. During harvesting and seeding there is a special need for a rural type of day care facility. Children in the Province of Saskatchewan die every year as a result of farm accidents. Children are taken up on the combine or on a tractor and they have some very nasty accidents. Several of them die every year because the farm family, both the husband and the wife, are needed to put the crop in or take it off. There just are not the proper facilities or the opportunities to leave their children in care.

I know of Métis and native families in Fort Qu'Appelle who have to postpone their education. There are young families with children and they want to upgrade and better themselves. They have been accepted into technical courses but they cannot go because there are not enough facilities in the native day care centre in Fort Qu'Appelle.

I have heard the same stories about young working couples going back to university. There is a great need for day care facilities, a variety of different types of facilities. They all need a certain standard, a basic standard that should be available whether one lives in Newfoundland, Québec, Fort Qu'Appelle, Saskatchewan or Richmond, British Columbia. That is why we feel so strongly that national objectives are needed and that this should indeed be part of the legislation.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words on Motion 4 under consideration, which seeks to amend the Bill by adding immediately after line 24 at page 3 the following:

> "3. It is hereby declared that the primary objective of the Canadian child care policy is to establish a national child care program which provides non-parental care for children who require it and which is consistently affordable, accessible, available and of assured quality across Canada, and which is provided by not-for-profit child care agencies."

Mr. Speaker, I took part in the debate on second reading, when I commented on my personal conviction that such an important Bill as this, dealing with a national problem, should contain national objectives.

Unless I completely missed the debate—but it is unlikely that I missed the point—I remember that the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) admitted to us that it was necessary to set national criteria for a national shared-cost program.

I then thought that the Minister agreed that it was important to ensure that Bill C-144 set clear and explicit criteria so that people throughout Canada could understand the national objectives set by the Parliament of Canada.

This addition to the interpretation section would, in my view, be almost essential to a better understanding and implementation of the legislation.

Mr. Speaker, after being in power for four years, the Government admits it must provide Canadians, wherever they happen to live, with a measure of equity as to the fundamental aspects of national shared-cost programs.

I hear the New Democrats are talking about Meech Lake. If I understand the finer points of this debate, a number of NDP Members would have some hesitation if they had to vote on the Meech Lake Accord today.

I don't intend to play that kind of game. I voted for Meech Lake. I maintain that Meech Lake is still basically a good thing for Canada, and if my understanding of the Accord is correct, provinces that opt out of shared-cost programs must meet national objectives if they are to obtain reasonable compensation from the Canadian Government, from the Parliament of Canada. I think that is an essential point. I think the Minister will reply, and I hope he does, because he is sincere, that he is agreeable to certain changes aimed at establishing minimum national standards as part of the agreement with the provincial governments. I believe these standards should not in any way restrict provinces that already have a head start in the area of child care and whose standards are already above the minimum. This should not prevent those provinces from opting out and receiving reasonable compensation.

Raising the issue of Meech Lake at this point in the debate seems rather academic and more a political gesture on the part of the New Democrats because unless I am mistaken, Mr. Speaker, we have established that a province that meets minimum standards and that participates in the shared-cost program must meet national objectives if it is to obtain reasonable compensation.

This means that Parliament and Canadian families would have the assurance that day-care services financed by the federal Government would not fall below minimum standards acceptable across the country. We would have to be sure of that. I understand that there is a desire to establish clearly what our minimum acceptable standards are. That would seem to be elementary. That is the kind of guarantee any prime minister, any self-respecting Minister of Health would want to give Canadian families. That is why I find it difficult to understand why this Government is reluctant to include in the legislation . . . I realize it is there in the preamble. We have it in the preamble. I think it is in the first part.

> WHEREAS the Parliament of Canada, recognizing that there is a need to improve the availability, affordability, quality and accessibility of child care services, is desirous of increasing the number of child care spaces throughout Canada by at least > two hundred thousand over the seven-year period ending March 31, 1995, and of contributing to the maintenance of the expanded child care system thereafter;

. . . thanks to an amendment in committee, at least . . .

It's in the preamble which, as far as I know, is supposed to help interpret the Act. I am not a legal expert. I am a Member of Parliament, a legislator, but I have always been told that the purpose of a preamble is to interpret the legislation in question. tion in question.

When we read the preamble, we realize that it contains set criteria, minimum standards for the shared-cost program. Look at the Canada Health Act and the amendments adopted in 1983 and 1984. I am referring more specifically to Canada's cash contributions to health services insured and administered by provincial health care insurance plans, and to Canada's health care policy which is based on the five criteria we all know: accessibility, portability . . . I could read them all, they are all here.

[English]

I had noted on the back of this sheet here accessibility, portability, non-profit administration and universality. These are criteria to which we have agreed in our health care system. They are clearly used every day as minimum standards and objectives. Therefore, I fail to see how the Minister cannot agree that this should be made clear in the body of the legislation, not simply in the preamble.

If the Minister is telling me that as a legislator he is satisfied that the preamble is clear for him and therefore for all those who read the Bill, that is fine, but let him rise and say that. I would appreciate hearing from the Minister on this point, and I would also appreciate hearing his comments on how Meech Lake has been brought into the debate by the NDP.

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, first I would like to congratulate my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell), for the hard and creative work she has done in providing leadership on the issue of establishing a national day care program and for her work in identifying the failure of this legislation to meet that need. I would also like to congratulate my colleague, the Hon. Member for New Westminster—Coquitlam (Ms. Jewett), for her edifying intervention. However, I must state that my two colleagues, in criticizing the Minister for failing to state a national objective, are perhaps off the mark.

It is clear from the events that have occurred in this Chamber that the Hon. Minister has no intention whatsoever of indicating in the House what the Government's national objectives are. He sits there smugly, knowing that those objectives cannot be revealed, but he hopes that his national objectives will be met. In fact, this piece of legislation is a part of a blizzard of promises, certain to be broken, that the Government has sprayed upon the people of Canada in preparation for an election.

The national objectives of this legislation are clear. As a matter of fact, the objection is singular. It is to fool the women and families of Canada into believing that they have a national child care program. Therefore, it is clear why that national objective cannot be included in this legislation.

That, of course, is an incomplete approach. I do not want to suggest that the Hon. Minister is not himself indeed interested in achieving a national child care program. However, it is obvious that the Government is not interested in achieving a national child care program which would meet the minimum national objectives that such a program should meet. However, the Minister is aware of what most Canadian families expect national objectives to be.

Most people do not realize that a preamble has no legal effect. However, just before an election, copies of the legislation will be sent out to all those groups which expect something to be done and they will read the legislation and find that it is to achieve availability, affordability, quality and accessibility. I am sure that even sounds good to you, Mr. Speaker, as well. It sounds good to the women of Canada who want decent legislation. Only after the election is all over will anyone come to realize that this was a fool's game being played.

The women of Canada must be becoming completely disillusioned with this Government. My Party supported the Meech Lake Accord in the face of the concerns expressed by many women's organizations that never again would a national program such as the Canada Health Act be enacted. They were reassured that that was not so, particularly by my colleague, the Hon. Member for New Westminster—Coquitlam. They were assured that indeed we could have legislation that would go as far to establish a certain degree of uniformity with respect to application of new programs as was obtained in the Canada Health Act.

What has the Government done? Did it use the opportunity this legislation presents to demonstrate the fallacy of the criticisms of those organizations and show that we could state national objectives in this first piece of significant social legislation to come before us since Meech Lake was considered? No, it circumvented that opportunity. It tried to fool the people again instead of using the opportunity to demonstrate that Meech Lake could in fact contribute significantly to the effort to find some degree of co-operation between the federal Government and the provincial Governments in the enactment of social programs to the benefit of Canadians.

As a consequence, we have a Bill that states what could be objectives in an unenforceable preamble. The amendment we are advocating would provide that those objectives be included in the Bill. I am very interested in whether the Minister will continue to sit there looking like the cat that swallowed the canary because he has fooled the people of Canada or whether he will rise in his place to defend his failure to include objectives in this legislation.

As my colleagues have said, we do not think that the objectives that are in the preamble are adequate. We think that the objectives should be included in the body of the Bill and should, as suggested by the amendment proposed by my colleague, include that day care establishments be not for profit.

This is another area in which the Government has done damage to the interests of women. Of course, most of those involved in the delivery of day care are women. They understand that profit oriented day care, apart from delivering poor care as compared to not for profit day care, also provides very low wages for the women working in those establishments, and the Government wishes to continue that. This is a piece of legislation that the Government would parade as a contribution to the improvement of the status of women in Canada, but it is a bad joke.

I would ask the Minister to rise to his feet, stop looking so smug since he is not fooling anyone, and explain why there are no national objectives in this legislation.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I have just had the opportunity to have a chat with the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp). His goodwill shows, but I would plead with him to give some very serious consideration to the amendment we are now debating. I am not in full accord with the complete principle of the amendment. Parts of it create some problem for me with respect to the not for profit child care agencies. I am not so sure it adds to the fundamental issue we are discussing, therefore I would like to address what I consider to be one of the fundamental problems one is faced with when dealing with legislation from the Government.

Unfortunately, in my view, we deal with pretty packages containing the right words but never in the right place where they can be effectively and efficiently applied. That is what we are looking at here. The preamble to this Bill indicates a worth-while intent, but unless it is translated into concrete action, unless it is a directive in the law, it is of no avail. All the lovely—

. . . phrases in the world would be useless if they are not reflected in the Act itself.

[English]

With that thought in mind, I would like to point out that the Minister knows full well that Rosie Abella, in her employment equity report, stated that child care was a fundamental building block for Canadian women and their families. He knows full well that more and more women must go to work even if they do not want to. He also knows that many women want the opportunity to use their intelligence, their skills, their aptitudes in the workforce while at the same time being parents with the right of choice, a right which I believe every person in Canada, male or female, should have. You cannot have that right if you do not have adequate, affordable, and accessible child care. To have it otherwise is to put our women and children in jeopardy because there is no level playing field, and I think the Minister knows that well.

The Equality For All report was a landmark report. It indicated how vital both maternity leave and child care was to fairness and equity in this country. The Government put an employment equity proposition before this country in the form of Bill C-62, but it has no mandatory aspect because there are no penalties unless you fail to file a pretty little program. Yet if you do not put the program in place, nothing happens to you. We are faced with the same thing in child care. The Government says in the preamble to the Bill:

> Whereas the Parliament of Canada, recognizing that there is a need to improve the ability, affordability, quality and accessibility of child care services, is desirous of increasing the number of child care spaces throughout Canada by 200,000 . . .

I hope it does put in place at least 200,000 over the next seven years, but that is still a cap on what would have happened if we did not have this Bill at all.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Not true.

Mrs. Finestone: I will not address that issue right now, but I will come to it another time.

The important matter here is availability, affordability, quality and accessibility. Those are key words and they are found in the National Health Act. They are implied in the fundamental principles of Meech Lake with respect to federal spending power and national objectives. The sad thing is there was no translation from intentions in the preamble to action in the Bill.

I would like to compliment the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) on her good, solid amendment. It is worthy of serious consideration. While I wish she would delete the last little bit, the intent is there. I suggest that where it declares the primary objective of the Canadian child care policy is to establish a national child care program which provides non-parental care for children who require it and which is consistently affordable, accessible, available and of assured quality across Canada, it makes eminent good sense.

I will not talk about rich and poor, which I could, in addressing this Bill. Let me just say this. The well-being of every child assures the future dynamism of this country. If you do not see to the child' intellectual, physical, growth and small motor control development, in adequate space with decent, trained staff and decent meals while the parents are at work, you are jeopardizing the future of this country. That is why we call this program a basic building block.

If we cannot do it properly, why are we taking it out of the capped services? Why not just leave it there and see what we could have negotiated? What are we negotiating this way? Are we going to have decent, normal standards or are we going to sink to the lowest level? Are we going to have maximum considered services? Shall we find a worth-while middle road? In the long run the Minister is responsible for the health and well-being of our children and he knows it, so I hope he is not too uncomfortable in that seat right now.

We could put into the body of the Bill those vital principles. That would be better than being in the position of saying that what you see is not what you get and the reality is an empty package. I do not want to say that to the parents and children of this country. I would like to know that the opportunity for decent, affordable, accessible child care is available to me if I choose. I can send my child or not, if I wish, to either all day care or all night care, drop in care if I need some relief and want some time for my own growth and to express my own self worth, and so on. If I live in the country, I want to be able to drop my child off, if necessary, in a neighbour's home which is properly supervised in some way. The province that I come from, Quebec, has under its child care legislation some excellent principles and policies, and they have been applied. It is a fair program. There is fairness of access for the most part, mostly non-profit, true.

I would like to suggest to the Minister that there is a way at this point in time or in the near future that if he could use that Act as the model for all of Canada, we would all be the beneficiaries of a very far-sighted and carefully planned program which is good for children. The bottom line is whether it is good for my child. Is it good for your child? Does it fit my grandchildren? Will they be good citizens for tomorrow? The question is: What is this going to do?

In closing, I would like to recommend acceptance of this motion.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise and speak for the NDP and myself on this very important Bill and what I consider to be a key amendment.

It was very interesting to hear what the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) said a minute ago about different standards in this country. I am not from Quebec so I do not know, but I am told it has a fairly good plan. That is because of the social democratic thrust of the PQ Government there. You can tell the difference between that and the Province of British Columbia which constantly goes downhill as it veers toward the Conservative agenda. We have a terrible day care system in British Columbia.

My colleague from Vancouver East, the NDP critic on social affairs, has introduced the amendment which reads:

> It is hereby declared that the primary objective of the Canadian child care policy is to establish a national child care program which provides non-parental care for children who require it and which is consistently affordable, accessible, available and of assured quality across Canada, and which is provided by not-for-profit agencies.

The Minister may not like the last part of the motion. That is our particular philosophy. The Hon. Member for Mount Royal said that she did not quite agree with that but she agreed with the other part. The Minister is free to accept this amendment while rejecting the latter part of the clause if he wishes. It seems to me that this amendment, excluding the not for profit aspect, incorporates into the body of the Bill what the Minister set out in the preamble which says:

> WHEREAS the Parliament of Canada, recognizing that there is a need to improve the availability, affordability, quality and accessibility of child care services, is desirous of increasing the number of child care spaces throughout Canada—

—and so on. If the Minister is prepared to put that objective in the preamble, why is he afraid to put it in the body of the Bill? I would ask the Minister to respond to that when he speaks to this motion. Why not put it in the body of the Bill? What is he afraid of? What is stopping him from doing this?

You and I, Mr. Speaker, have been around this place for a little while, you for a little longer than I. You know that putting something in the preamble is a nice gesture, but putting it in the body of the law is the real test of whether you want it to happen. Our amendment is quite simply an attempt to put the objectives which are set out in the preamble of the Bill into the body of the Bill, with the one distinction being the last words, "not for profit child care agencies".

This is based on the objectives in the Canada Health Act. Why do you think we have national objectives and requirements in medicare in this country? Doctors cannot extra bill because that is prohibited right in the Act. I am proud that my Party, the NDP and the CCF before it, with support from other Parties, fought to have it introduced in Saskatchewan and it later came in at the national level. This does not happen by magic. It has to be legislated, and that is what we are attempting to do in this Bill.

The first objective set out is affordability. Child care should be affordable no matter where you are in the country, whether in Newfoundland, eastern Arctic, or downtown Toronto. We want equality in Canada—again a social democratic principle. We think the Government is bringing in a system more and more like the American system in which the emphasis is not on equality but on survival of the fittest.

Child care should be accessible and affordable in rural areas. The Minister used the word "accessible" in the preamble and we use it in this amendment. I know that the Minister, who comes from a rural area, would want to make child care as accessible as possible in rural areas, especially since, as I understand it, the western Canada reform movement is running a number of candidates in the Minister's area, which could be a challenge to the Conservatives in some areas. I would think he would accept our advice in order to be able to go to the rural areas and tell the people that he is including in the body of the Bill accessibility to child care for them.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Are they running against you?

Mr. Waddell: Not yet, but I hope they might because we know whose votes they are going to take.

Quality is important. Services can be so underfunded that people are not paid decent wages. I give my province as an example. It is usually women who work in these low-paid jobs which hurts the equality of the day care. In Alberta the only qualification to work in day care is that you be 18. We need more qualifications. It should be a good job because looking after future generations is one of the most important things we can do.

We have added non-profit. Three research studies show that commercial child care in general has lower standards and lower quality than non-profit care.

I would like to conclude by saying a few general words about this Bill in relation to the amendment. We in the NDP do not believe that this is a national program because it does not have national standards. It is another deal of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to try for women's votes and to try to patch up the gender gap which he is experiencing. He has greater support from men than from women. Therefore, right at the very end of his four-year mandate, right at the very last gasp of a dying Parliament, he has introduced day care. The people in my new riding do not want to be fooled, they want a good, affordable child care program.

Meech Lake was mentioned. I personally think that Meech Lake was a disaster for Canada. The Prime Minister gave away half of Canada's powers to the provinces in Meech Lake and the other half to the Americans with the free trade deal. How Canadians look at this particular Bill is very important. This is the first major social program Bill since Meech Lake. I have been very afraid that Meech Lake would freeze national social programs. I was afraid that after Meech Lake medicare would be over. I am told by my colleagues and other critics that that will not be so. I hope that that is so, I hope that we have not accepted the end of the progression of the welfare state on a national level. I am told that that is not so, but this is our first test and we must look at this very carefully.

As I understand it, federal Government spending powers can come under Meech Lake and national objectives can be set. Therefore, why is the Minister not setting national objectives in this Bill? It is very important that the federal Government exercise its right to do this right away or the provinces will be signalled that we are going to have a checkerboard system of social services.

This is the first time I have spoken on this Bill, Mr. Speaker, and I am speaking on the amendment. I will conclude shortly.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): As the Hon. Member knows, he has had 11 minutes now and there are only 10 minutes allotted for debate by each speaker. The Speaker does have a ruling to make. I will recognize him for the next 30 seconds.

Mr. Waddell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I believe that this is an opportunity lost. We have a chance to set national standards and national objectives in this Bill.

• (1650)

The Minister is on the right track in the preamble. This amendment would put it in the Bill. If the Minister is very serious about this, because I think he is a serious and good person, I conclude by challenging him to adopt this amendment by the Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) for the good of the country and for the good of ordinary Canadians and their families so we can have the best child care system possible. We can afford to do it in this country.

Mr. Speaker: Earlier today, following a conversation with the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell), I undertook to review once again Motion No. 16 in her name. I have looked at it very closely and I regret that I must advise that I am unable to comply with her request.

Procedurally, that motion would introduce a new principle to the Bill, that of national objectives and criteria, binding the provinces under the agreement referred to in Clause 4.

The Speaker trespasses with very great caution in these matters, and I suppose I can be allowed to remark that that may be indeed, for some Members, a very desirable principle. But it seems to me it was not contemplated when the House adopted the principle of the Bill on second reading. The House has already pronounced on the principle of the Bill and I must be bound by procedural law. It cannot be altered at this stage by way of amendment.

I want to say to the Hon. Member that I have given this very careful consideration. I am sorry, under the circumstances I cannot accept it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Resuming debate on Motion No. 4.

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, much has been said in the course of this debate about the need for this Bill to have within it stated national objectives. In my opening remarks I want to read that portion of the preamble that Members in my Party, specifically the Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) has proposed by the motion we are debating at the present time. That statement in the preamble reads:

> It is hereby declared that the primary objective of the Canadian child care policy is to establish a national child care program which provides non-parental care for children who require it and which is consistently affordable, accessible, available and of assured quality across Canada, and which is provided by not-for-profit child care agencies.

It escapes me why the Minister, in negotiating with the provinces, would not insist that that objective be written into the Act itself.

The Hon. Member for Windsor-Walkerville (Mr. McCurdy) mentioned the Canada Health Act. Negotiations took place between the provinces and the federal Government to establish the Canada Pension Plan. Various policies have been negotiated between the federal and provincial governments in terms of cost-sharing of programs, where national objectives have been the main initiative to be pursued by the federal Government, for a very good reason. It should not matter whether a Canadian lives in Newfoundland, in central Ontario or on Vancouver Island, that Canadian should be entitled to receive the same standard of social services as any other Canadian. I am afraid that if those objectives are not contained in the legislation itself that Canadians will be treated differently, depending on where they live in Canada.

According to the proposals in this legislation, the federal Government seems to have abdicated any fiscal responsibility for providing or helping to provide adequate child care spaces across Canada. In fact, it seems to have said that it is no longer interested in being in the area of providing affordable child care spaces across Canada and is transferring that responsibility, after a number of years, totally in the bailiwick of the provinces and municipal governments. After several years, a provincial government, depending on its tax base, will determine whether or not it can provide affordable child care in that particular region of the country.

For example, one must wonder whether Newfoundland, with its high rate of unemployment and bad financial situation, will be able to afford, practically on its own, to continue to provide affordable child care spaces at higher rates than its present level. The same could be true for a small province like Prince Edward Island, which does not have the financial resources as a rich province like Ontario. This legislation, without the national objectives in place, will make an already bad situation even worse.

Let me refer the House to a brief presented to the committee that studied this legislation. It is a brief presented by Paul

Christie, an alderman who happens to represent a municipal ward in my constituency in Toronto. He said that child care is in greater jeopardy than at any time in the 1980s. The bottom line is that in Toronto in 1988, over 55 per cent of families with young children cannot acquire either a licensed space or the child care subsidy they require.

The entire brief goes on to attack this legislation for the very reason that even though child care in a place like Toronto is in a state of crisis, at the end of seven years it will be even worse than it is today, rather than better. I do not need to hear someone from Toronto come to Ottawa to present a brief about the problems there because I have raised it numerous times in Question Period and in previous debates in this Chamber about the inadequate child care spaces in the country.

One need only talk to operators in any constituency in the country and ask how funding is meeting their requirements in providing child care spaces. There is no child care provider in my constituency who does not view the lack of child care space as being very severe.

A young woman in my constituency is a single parent on mother's allowance under the social welfare program in Ontario. She wants to get off mother's allowance and go back to school. When she attempted to do so, she found that there was not only a shortage of child care spaces for her child, there were no child care spaces at all. Therefore, that young woman is denied the opportunity to go back to school to further her education and allow her to get into the workforce and get off mother's allowance. She is caught in the typical trap that many individuals caught in the welfare system find themselves. They cannot get out because the system will not allow them to do so. The lack of affordable child care spaces is one of those traps.

As we gain experience under this legislation as it is presently written, we will find that the situation will become even worse than it is today. I think that is a shame because, on the one hand, this Government and every other Government across the country, especially if they have a Conservative stripe, argues that the cost of social welfare and health care costs and such other things are prohibitive, and they are continually trying to cut back on the social services, yet, on the other hand, they introduce legislation such as this which does not improve matters at all. In fact, it makes the existing situation even more severe.

I would think the Minister has a responsibility, as nearly every witness who appeared before the committee argued, to go back to the provincial Governments and tell them there is absolutely no consensus from the user groups across Canada to support this legislation as it is presently written and, therefore, the Government is not going to proceed with it, unless the provinces agree to national objectives being written into the body of this legislation.

I not only think the Minister has a responsibility as a Minister of the Crown to do that, but I think he has a moral responsibility to do so on behalf of Canadian families in order to ensure that one of Canada's richest resources, our children, are provided with the means to be brought up, if you will, in an atmosphere that every study has shown to be conducive to their own well-being.

I see the Minister is busy talking to one of his colleagues. If I could catch his ear for a moment, I am quite sure he would agree that the desirable thing to do would be to go back to the provincial Governments and tell them we want their agreement to include these national objectives in the body of the legislation. The Minister should use the fiscal clout the Government has in these kinds of negotiations, and which the provinces are always interested in, to come to an agreement.

After this House of Commons authorized approval for an increase in disability benefits for recipients of these disability benefits under the Canada Pension Plan, the provincial Governments come along and grab that money and take it for themselves. So the recipient does not receive any benefit from that increase at all. I would suggest the attitude the Minister showed toward the provincial Governments which did that should be the same attitude he uses when he goes back to the provinces to insist that national objectives be written into this legislation so that that kind of abuse does not happen over the ensuing years as this legislation goes through the process.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the amendment proposed by my colleague. It seems to me that over a long period of time, and not all at the same time, the people of this country and the Governments, federal and provincial, have arrived at a consensus which was accepted by all that certain aspects of life should be viewed as a right of all people in Canada and that the state should pay the bulk of the cost of those services. I suppose the first time we adopted this principle was with respect to education. Some years ago, in every province across Canada, it was accepted that every young person had a right, in fact a duty, to attend school until at least the age of 15 or 16 years. It may vary from province to province. Either the province or the federal Government, or a combination of both, pays the major costs of that program because we believe it is important that the people of this country be well educated.

Similarly, in the late 1940s, following the example of the then CCF Government of Saskatchewan, each province accepted the idea that hospital costs, which can be enormous when there is a major illness in the family, should be met by a universal non-profit hospital insurance plan funded jointly between the federal Government and the provinces. That was a major improvement in the services we provided and a major step in improving the over-all health of the people of Canada.

Somewhat later, 25 or more years ago, a consensus was reached that medical costs should be guaranteed and paid for by the state, jointly funded by federal and provincial Governments. The people of Canada no longer have to worry if there is a major illness which requires a prolonged stay in hospital or very specialized and costly treatment. It will no longer be a burden on the individual or his or her family.

It is time we agree that it is necessary for the people of Canada as a whole, through their Governments, federal and provincial, to have adequate, high quality child care for our young children. The reason I say there ought to be a consensus and agreement on this is because we know that substantially more than 50 per cent of mothers with young children are now working. If we do not have an adequate system of child care, the children will be left with a neighbour or with some stranger, with no assurance, no guarantee, that the care they receive will be what is needed.

My colleague has moved an amendment. What does this amendment call for? It calls for a national child care program. That does not mean, and we have never suggested it should mean, that the system in every province in every city should be the same. There are different needs in different cities and there are tremendous differences in what is needed in cities and towns and in small villages or rural areas. There should be some national standards which would assure Canadians, wherever they live, that there is an adequate child care program.

I have two young grandchildren. Because my daughter works, as do so many other mothers in all parts of Canada, both grandchildren spent several years in a day care centre before they started school. On occasion, when I was in the city, I would pick up one or the other. I could not help but be impressed with the people who worked in that day care centre. That day care centre was not much different, I believe, than most other centres. I could not help but be impressed by the concern, the care, and the efforts made by the people who worked in that day care centre.

I knew, I think the Minister knows, and I think any Member of Parliament who has an interest know that on the whole, and almost without exception, day care workers are paid very low wages. The reason is very simple. The state has not yet accepted the principle that day care is a right of every young person who should be in a day care centre, as we have done for education—teachers are professionals—and as we have done in our hospitals—nurses are professionals. Other people who work in hospitals are increasingly well trained. Our doctors are professionals. The day care workers are underpaid, therefore, there is a great turnover which does not help maintain the quality of the system.

All day care workers are underpaid. As long as day care centres are non-profit we can be sure that the day care workers will get as much as the system will permit them to be paid. If, on the other hand, we help fund day care centres operating for a profit, the first requirement of those who own and operate those day care centres will be that the centre will pay a dividend on the investment that has been made. Given the fact that there is not enough money to adequately fund the day care centres, the people who work in the centres will be underpaid. They will be subsidizing the day care system by accepting very low wages. I think that that is unacceptable. I think that it is morally wrong for the Government of Canada and the people of Canada to put that burden on the people who do a first class job in helping to run the day care system in Canada. I for one do not intend to support that situation. That is why I intend to vote for this amendment.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I have been listening to Members opposite. I believe it is this clause where the fundamental difference is evident between the position of the Government and the Parties opposite.

I find it interesting when members of the Liberal Party talk about "universal choice". I believe the Hon. Member for Outremont (Mrs. Pépin) used those words. Yet when I look at the minority report of the Liberal Party, after the special committee, it indicated that if a Liberal Government were elected, it would increase the spending in those years when the deficit went down.

From the years 1969 to 1988 the deficit only went down each year from 1984 to 1988. That was the first four-year cycle post war that the deficit has gone down for four years consecutively. The deficit did go down for one year between the years 1969 to 1984 when the Liberals were in office, and that was in 1979. The Liberals were in office for three months and the Conservative Party was in office for nine months. Members of the Liberal Party talk about a principle, but there is no money and no funding. I ask them what they mean by that.

Hon. Members know that under the Canada Assistance Plan the number of spaces funded by that plan is considerably less than this program. What members of the Liberal Party like to do for political argument's sake is tie non-profit and profit spaces together for the amount of growth. However, the amendment states that the mover does not want any for-profit space. One cannot argue about three different directions at the same time and remain cogent. The point of the matter is that Members opposite are not cogent and they are not being accurate.

I wish to address the point with respect to Meech Lake. I was interested to listen to the Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong). I take it that the NDP is now reconsidering its position on Meech Lake.

Mr. Waddell: Just me. I am not reconsidering, but I am not the Minister.

Ms. Mitchell: Why are you ignoring Meech Lake?

Mr. Epp (Provencher): It appears that the Member who lost his seat through distribution is getting some company in that Party with respect to Meech Lake.

In respect to Meech Lake I said very clearly that Meech Lake was not being used for the Bill, and I will tell you why.

Ms. Mitchell: No confidence in Meech Lake?

Mr. Epp (Provencher): No, not for a moment. Again, the Opposition only used half the argument. The argument is national objectives, and that is clear in Meech Lake, but if one looks further in Meech Lake it is also based on an opt-out. Members opposite do not want an opt-out on this one, because they will then argue in reverse about chequer-board. They argue both sides of the coin depending on what argument they need. I say to them to argue one way and I will accept your arguments as being cogent and valid, but I am not going to allow you to use arguments both ways.

Let us take a look further at what the amendment states. First, we clearly stated that the federal Government was not going to accept or commit itself to a universal program that likely, if the amendment is interpreted, would be a federally and provincially and publicly fully funded child care system. That is not supported by the people of Canada. It is supported by the NDP. It is supported by one of its two policies on child care. One policy states that it wants a universal program, and it wants to spend $11 billion a year—

Ms. Mitchell: That's Katie Cooke.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Exactly, that is Katie Cooke, and that is what you endorsed. On the other hand the Leader of the NDP goes to Vancouver and states: "No, we will do it better. We do not like the Conservative position of 200,000 new non-profit spaces in seven years. We will do it in four years".

Which way do Members opposite want it, Mr. Speaker? Which policy are we talking about here? What Members opposite are suggesting has been rejected by the Government, in committee, and by their own Leader. When I listened to the amendments and the addendums presented by the Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell), then I am not quite sure.

Additionally, what about the Canadian people? In the last polling it indicated that less than 10 per cent support a universally fully publicly funded day care system.

Ms. Mitchell: That is a long-term goal, and you know it.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): It is a long-term goal, and it is also a long-term expenditure. Let us take a look at the other point, the matter of not for profit. Let us take a look at that hotbed of socialism prior to the great election in Manitoba, when finally the NDP Government was defeated. There was the hotbed of this experimentation. They said no spaces, none whatsoever, unless it was non-profit, which meant, very simply, that if one lived on Ash Street and there was a for-profit centre in the neighbouring block, you could not go to it. You went across the city to find a non-profit space which did not exist.

More important, there was another point. Not only was it the most expensive per child anywhere in Canada but, additionally, it was also the lowest growth for the last five years. On the one hand they say: "We need to have more spaces". That is true. That is why you have the Bill. On the other hand, the very program that they have in place created less growth than other provinces. The point is quite clear. What they say and what the hotbed of experimentation was has not, obviously, been brought together.

Here is another point that has to be brought to mind. Forty per cent of all child care spaces in Canada today are commercial. I take it that what they are saying by this amendment is that 90 per cent of the spaces in Newfoundland should be closed and 40 per cent plus of the spaces in Ontario should be closed.

Ms. Mitchell: You know that that is not what we have said. Have you ever heard of conversion?

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Seventy-three per cent of the spaces in Alberta—your own province, Mr. Speaker—should be closed. Why? Because it does not fit our philosophical position. We are not going to give the provinces that right. We are not going to give the parents that right.

What we are debating here, very simply, is a philosophical position which has not been accepted by—

Mr. McCurdy: I want to hear you discredit Meech Lake again.

Ms. Mitchell: Tell us about national objectives.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Minister for National Health and Welfare.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, I do not mind them nattering away. It is more pleasant than their speeches. Let us go back to exactly this matter of non-profit. The NDP constantly like to think that nobody has either a social conscience or any concept of what is best or what is right. They have the failure of the Manitoba experience, the failure of Canadians accepting the position that they put forward, the non-recognition of at least 40 per cent of spaces now being commercial. I say to them, quite simply, they can have the philosophical argument, but the provinces must have the freedom to decide on the type of child care that they want.

In conclusion, and just to make a point—

Mr. de Jong: Now I have figured out why you wanted to be the last speaker.

An Hon. Member: Show some respect.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): The last point is this. If they want to give me more time, I will be glad to take the time. I have spelled out at least seven areas under the agreement which are going to be included in the agreements between the provinces and the federal Government so that the money will not flow simply unencumbered. I have heard them say: "At the whim of the province". Some of the arguments that they have made are ridiculous. If they could at least say that it was made on a philosophical basis, I would at least accept the philosophical argument though I disagree with it.

This Bill will create 200,000 non-profit spaces, where we now have 125,000, approximately, in Canada. It is going to allow us federal-provincial agreements. It will give parents choices. That is why this amendment should be rejected.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), a recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

We will now deal with Motion No. 36.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East) moved:

She said: Mr. Speaker, we are moving now to the clause of the Bill which really tries to amend the Canada Assistance Plan. For many groups that appeared before the committee, it is a policy that creates very serious concern, because people are not at all convinced—those who are very familiar with child care across the country—that this program, in the first place, is going to be better than the Canada Assistance Plan. For years and years, of course, many of us have felt that child care should not be a welfare program; it should be a program that is available for any child regardless of the family's income, where it is needed and wanted by the family. Of course, the Canada Assistance Plan is primarily to provide funding for a 50 per cent cost-shared funding from the federal Government for services for families in need or are likely to be in need.

This refers to the very low income families—and many of them are on social assistance—and to the working families who are working poor. I think of many women who are working at very low wages and perhaps have part-time jobs or non-union jobs to a very large extent. In many cases they are the sole support of the family. They need to be assured that they are going to get child care subsidies and that they are not going to have to compete for those subsidies with other people who have just as much right to child care for their children but who happen to have a little higher income. That is the whole range of people, of course—as we often say, average Canadians.

This clause which talks about removing the Canada Assistance Plan funding from the Act would really force provinces to make a choice. They have the choice, if they want to remain on the Canada Assistance Plan or they can choose a new Act. There is no phase-in program at all. If they feel, like many of the witnesses do, that it is quite insecure to give up the Canada Assistance Plan all together, then they do not have access to some of the things in this Bill that we think are important, and that is 75 per cent capital funding. It is only for seven years, mind you. I do not know what happens after seven years. I do know what will happen if this Government should, by any horrible act of future history, remain in power.

If they should choose the Canada Child Care Act and give up the Canada Assistance Plan, they would get capital funds. They might get capital funds, depending on how much money the Minister makes available to each province. If they are in the poorer regions of Canada, such as the Atlantic region, they would get variable cost sharing. We fought hard for this over the years in the special committee. It is tremendously important in provinces like Newfoundland, where people are almost 100 per cent low income in some communities, and poverty communities where the province as a whole does not have the money to put in its 50 per cent of the cost sharing, that there should be variable cost sharing. In fact, the Canada Assistance Plan should be adjusted to that.

There are certain things in the new Bill that they would like to have, but they do not want to give up the Canada Assistance Plan all together. What we are trying to do in this amendment is remove this clause from the Bill so that at least during a phase-in period provinces would be able to choose both. It would mean that they would have the protection for low-income families, for children with special needs, for disadvantaged children. They would have a certain open-ended funding under the Canada Assistance Plan. I want to stress that again. The Canada Assistance Plan is open-ended. The new Bill is not. There are only so many spaces left for everybody in Canada. There are 2 million kids and only 200,000 new spaces over seven years.

Under the Canada Assistance Plan there is flexibility. That is one of the things that people want to keep. They want to be sure also that poor families do not have to compete with average-income or well-to-do families who also need child care. All of them should have the right to child care, just as children have the right to education. However, the reality is that with the Minister capping the number of spaces and capping the amount of money that is going into the program and doing nothing after the end of seven years, there simply will not be enough spaces to meet the demand—far from it.

We are trying through this amendment to have a more flexible program. Our proposal would be that this should be what we would call phase one or phase two, a period until such time as the user-fees can be really reduced. In the Province of British Columbia even poor families which should be eligible to child care under Canada Assistance Plan are not able to use the program very much because the province still puts a user-fee on day care. I think that is really quite unrealistic. In fact, it is punitive. Mothers and families who do not have enough to put food on the table by the last week or two of the month will not be able to find even a few dollars for user-fees. It means that mothers on social assistance cannot get into training programs. They will be trapped in welfare for the rest of their lives.

We feel that it is important during this phase-in period that there be funds for operating grants for centres. If there are not operating funds coming into centres, there is no way they can reduce the fees generally since most parents cannot afford $4,000 or so a year per child for child care. It also means that operating grants will be needed in order to pay caregivers a decent wage. We have heard over and over again, and I would like to repeat it, that the type of poverty wages that caregivers who have two years of post-secondary training and doing one of the most important jobs in the country are paid is abominable. That is one of the things for which it is very important to have operating grants. It is also important to improve the quality of child care generally for all children.

For example, there are many family day care homes which are not licensed. They need money to be able to obtain a licence, to have training for the parents who are sometimes foster parents in those day care homes. They need money to put up fences, to meet fire and health regulations. All that costs money. Good equipment is needed even if it is for a family home in which care is given to five children.

This is why we feel very strongly that it is important to keep the Canada Assistance Plan and also have some of the positive parts of Bill C-144. It would give us seven years in which to try to make some changes and to get a decent program in place as well.

I was astounded in committee when the Minister's own officials from the Department of National Health and Welfare, when asked about the definition of subsidy, said that subsidy could be as little as $2 per day. The actual cost of a day care space is estimated to be about $20 per day. If the subsidy is only going to be $2 per day and the cost is $20 per day, then that means fees will have to be $18 per day. How on earth can average or even higher income families afford those kind of fees, much less lower-income people? They cannot. It is absolutely ridiculous for the Minister to say that he is being so generous with this program of his when he is really not being generous at all. We feel very strongly that what we should be aiming at is to reduce the fees to 50 per cent of the costs for parents and then have subsidies, if necessary, during an interim period of time for those who cannot pay a fee that is reduced that amount. That would make good sense.

It is absolutely essential that there be more flexibility in terms of this Bill. It is a very rigid Bill. Both the funding and the spaces are capped and restricted. Also, the provinces are very restricted in having to give up the Canada Assistance Plan if they opt into the new program.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Chair recognizes the Hon. Minister on debate. The Hon. Member for Davenport will be next.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I apologize to the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia). I was really going to wait until he had spoken, but there were a number of matters raised by the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) which I think I better clarify so that they do not become a part of the debate.

First, I would like to deal with subsidies before I get to the exact amendments.

On subsidies, what the Hon. Member is referring to is the amount of subsidy. When my officials were asked how much subsidy there would be they said that, first, it is based on the amount of provincial cost. Obviously, the subsidy will be related to that cost. More important, under the terms of this Bill the federal Government will pay 50 per cent of the cost. That should be clearly understood.

In addition, if one takes a look at the Canada Assistance Plan, which the Hon. Member says is better, one will see that the average amount that the federal taxpayer pays only for the operating costs—and I am not talking about capital yet—is approximately 35 per cent. Thirty-five per cent is less than 50 per cent. To make these specious arguments is just not good debating. She might want to use it in debate form but it is just not correct.

Ms. Mitchell: We are quoting your officials. It is what they said in committee.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): It is a misinterpretation of what the officials said. The amount of subsidy per day obviously varies depending upon what the cost is in terms of the recognized cost of the province. How else can 50 per cent be calculated, or any percentage for that matter?

The other point that has to be made is that at the present time there is no expenditure from the federal Government for capital. There is a capital project for 75 per cent of approved costs on capital for non-profit child care. If this Bill is not passed there will be none. There is no money from the federal Government for capital costs.

The third point which has to be made is with respect to the Hon. Member asking what would happen after seven years. The federal Government, under the terms of the Bill, has clearly committed itself to the fact that ongoing operating costs and cost-sharing will continue beyond the seventh year. In fact, at the present time under the Canada Assistance Plan the federal Government's costs are approximately $160 million. By the way, when we came into office that figure was around $25 million—and I have heard the Liberals talking about us spending more money.

That $160 million has to be compared in year eight, the first year after this program ceases to operate. The annual expenditure is calculated at $800 million. Building some inflation in for seven years certainly does not bring that figure anywhere close to $800 million. That is simple mathematics. To make those arguments is just not factually correct. It is a total misinterpretation of the Bill.

Despite all that, we said to the provinces: "What we will do is we will give you a period of time to phase in. Namely, you can stay under the Canada Assistance Plan and if you sign the federal-provincial agreement by March 31, 1990, the federal Government will reimburse under the authority of this Bill all moneys back to April 1, 1988". If that is not a phase-in, if that is not flexible, if that is not generous, then people must be using a different interpretation.

Let us consider what the amendment does. If one looks at Clause 10 of the Bill, one will see that if it were to be deleted the very point that she makes, namely, that women and parents do not want this to be a welfare program but rather a social service program, would bring us back to a welfare program under CAP. Every time the Hon. Member puts an argument forward, I almost ask why she does, because obviously the opposite point will be made. Why does she keep on repeating these things?

In fact, the deletion of Clause 10, even if we accepted it, would not provide for what she intends to do since Section 5(2)(c) of the Canada Assistance Plan prevents the sharing of any costs under CAP which are intended to be shared through another federal program. If a province signed an agreement under the Canada Child Care Act, then Section 5(2)(c) of the Canada Assistance Plan would apply. If the province does not want to enter into the new program, it already has the option of CAP.

This program puts more money into child care. It provides a greater federal share of the costs of operating the centres. It provides more money at the end of year seven than we now have under CAP and it provides for flexibility. I would suggest to the Hon. Member that she might want to consider withdrawing that amendment, because we will vote against it for sure.

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, the fact remains that despite the intervention of the Minister, the points made by delegations which appeared before the committee, particularly those from Metro Toronto and the City of Toronto, were to the effect that they do not even look forward to the phase-in feature that the Minister just explained. In other words, in a large centre like Metro Toronto, we heard in committee through briefs the fear that sooner or later, CAP will no longer be in place. That is what is of great concern to the people affected.

It is clear, as the Minister said, that by March 31, 1990, there will be a phase-in, but that is not the issue with organizations and municipalities, as in the case with Toronto. At the time we were in committee, we did not have the most excellent amendment by the Hon. Member for Outremont (Mrs. Pépin) who in committee was successful in inserting in Clause 4(b) the provision that the provinces commit themselves to accord special priority to meet the needs of children from low to modest-income families. Nevertheless, the organizations felt, and understandably so, that to help disadvantaged children, the Canada Assistance Plan was the route to go.

Here is where the argument of the Minister comes to a dead end on March 31, 1990. At that point, CAP is no longer flying. As I understood him, at least, CAP is no longer functioning.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): No, just retroactive money.

Mr. Caccia: Well, they do not get their retroactive money. That is also an important aspect.

The fact is that the question of reimbursement by the federal Government becomes central in this debate, particularly because of the deadline of March 31, 1990. That is what is preoccupying the provinces. This is the greatness and genius of the Canada Assistance Plan which, by the way, was a very fine piece of legislation put forward by a Liberal Government over 20 years ago. Over time, it has gained the support and confidence of those who are interested in the improvement of our social security system. It has served us well. No wonder it causes a reaction on the part of Canadians and organizations affected by Bill C-144 if we start tampering with it by modifying its effectiveness and its role. With this motion, we have touched one of the central nerves of this legislation.

If, as the Minister says, Motion No. 36 does not achieve what it intends to achieve, then the Government could put forward a motion to improve on it, keeping in mind the central point which is that if at a certain point retroactive payments are no longer made, be it next year, in 1990 or beyond, but the Minister has specified March 31, 1990, evidently the provinces will feel the pinch and they do not like that. As a consequence, municipal Governments, particularly Metro Toronto which has a very fine history of child care programs and has been over the years among the pioneers, will be unhappy.

This is why we heard not only one brief but two, one from the Mayor of Toronto and one from the Social Services Committee of Metro Toronto. They reinforced each other. Obviously they talked to each other and we all know that this is part of the political process, but they reinforced each other on this very point. They are concerned about the fact that the Canada Assistance Plan, at a certain point—and I am grateful to the Minister for having clarified the date because I did not have it clear in my memory—the over-all effectiveness of the plan will come to an end as far as retroactive payments are concerned.

Obviously the provinces would want to be reimbursed by the feds. This has been the nature of our country. I hope that the Meech Lake virus has not travelled and affected the government body so fast and so deeply as to start eroding this concept that we have under the Canada Assistance Plan, a piece of legislation that keeps open the option of reimbursing the provinces dollar for dollar when they make social assistance expenditures. It is a good scheme and it keeps the country together.

To conclude, if we want to ensure that the disadvantaged children are taken fully into consideration and if we want to ensure that the provinces do play their role fully, then we must maintain the role of the Canada Assistance Plan as a central force in the implementation of the child care policy. Therefore, Bill C-144 must be amended.

We are told that the need over the next seven years will be much greater than the needs forecast by the Government. There is an intensified trend of parents seeking employment and needing in increasing numbers the services of good child care. We will see an acceleration in the process of people entering or requiring the system. The waiting lists are becoming longer and longer. We have waiting lists this year that are longer than last year and waiting lists last year that were longer than the preceding year. Evidently we are facing a social movement, a pattern which has to be dealt with by planning for a much larger number of child care spaces than the ones proposed by the Government.

The calculation is that 200,000 spaces over the next seven years represents only about 15 per cent of the anticipated requirement of roughly 1.8 million spaces. Therefore, do you find it unreasonable for the provinces and municipalities, which in the end depend on the provinces, to express their unhappiness about the fact that the Canada Assistance Plan seems to be gradually being phased out in its effectiveness? Therefore, the notion that the province of Ontario, for example, be given, if it wishes, the choice to continue under CAP and not necessarily under the Bill in order to meet a greater demand or to rearrange its own social priorities is very understandable and makes a lot of sense.

What troubles me about this feature in the Bill we are now trying to amend is that over the next few years CAP is going to be eroded and reduced in scope. I think that is a bad development. The Minister ought to reconsider it. If anything, CAP ought to be strengthened and expanded and brought up to date with the requirements of today's society and in anticipation of the next decade. At a time when the demand for child care spaces is increasing at a much greater rate than anticipated by the Government, I say that the Government has to take that into account and understand the preoccupation of the provinces and the municipalities through the provinces. I hope the Minister, in light of his understanding of the debate on Motion 36, will find a way to improve the motion if he feels it is not adequate.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I just want to expand on some of the remarks made by the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) with respect to this amendment. As I understand it, we are dealing with a part of the Bill which deals with the Canada Assistance Plan. The Hon. Member for Davenport gave a little bit of the history. Groups that appeared before the legislative committee said they are concerned about this part of the Bill because they are not convinced they will be better off under it than under CAP.

As I understand it, CAP primarily deals with 50 per cent cost-shared funding for needy families. We are talking about people on social assistance, the working poor, and so on. They are concerned about whether they will continue to get child care subsidies. The problem, as the Hon. Member said, and the groups concerned probably expressed this as well, is that they will find themselves competing for money with higher income people and therefore they would lose. The Hon. Member said the provinces would have to make a choice, to remain under CAP or go under the new Act. That is why she wanted to look at the phase-in sections of the Act.

What we are trying to do in this clause is put in place an amendment that will cushion the poor and disadvantaged. Child care is particularly important to those families and we would not want to see a plan come into effect under the name of reform which would take spaces away from the poor and disadvantaged. It is a constant struggle for poor families and they could lose out if this amendment were not adopted.

I know the Minister criticized the Manitoba Government. Therefore, I wonder why he did not go back and run against it. It is too bad that life is full of lost opportunities, but perhaps the Minister just did not take that opportunity because that Government was not so bad. He mentioned the NDP program. Who are working families and their children to believe? Are they to believe the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and what he has concocted for a quick election to meet the so-called gender gap? A child care program that is not only putting poor families at risk but which does not really deliver for middle-income families. Or, are they to trust my leader and my critic and the NDP with a program that will create more spaces at less cost?

I challenge the Government to call an election on this and other issues and we will let the people decide.

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I would like just a couple of moments to make some quick observations. It is unquestionably the job of the Minister to defend his position, no matter how indefensible it may be. I have waited patiently to hear him respond to some questions we raised earlier. However, one of the things that really bothers me in this effort to defend the legislation is what I perceive to be a central intellectual dishonesty.

Moments ago we had a little exchange between the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) and the Minister over the funding available through CAP as compared to his program. He said under CAP only 35 per cent is paid and under this program it is 50 per cent. That is absolute nonsense.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): It is accurate.

Mr. McCurdy: It must be obvious that the 35 per cent is a kind of gerrymandered figure which takes into account the variation and the extent to which the program is used across the country.

To give you another example of the kind of intellectual dishonesty that this Minister has been purveying, moments ago he said we try to argue both sides of the issues. We say on the one hand we want national objectives but we ignore the fact that the Meech Lake Accord also provides for opting out. Of course, a province can only opt out if it meets national objectives. That gives you an idea of the extent to which the Minister would mislead the public and this House.

It also should be obvious to him that if you have a program with limited funding, this amendment takes into account that a program that is going to meet the needs of all those in need of day care is inevitably going to be at the expense, at least in part, of those poor people requiring special programs which are served by CAP. It allows all kinds of programs that this Bill will not provide, such as Head Start and the kind of program we had in Windsor where we could subsidize working women to at least a certain extent.

The House resumed from Thursday, September 15, consideration of Bill C-144, an Act to authorize payments by Canada toward the provision of child care services, and to amend the Canada Assistance Plan in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee; and the amendments of Ms. Mitchell:

That Bill C-144 be amended by deleting Clause 11.

Mr. Speaker: Continuing debate with the Hon. Member for Churchill.

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, again it is an honour to get up in the House and speak on child care which we believe is a national priority for all Canadians. In my riding I think one of the things that we have to be concerned about is making sure that we increase the availability of child care for people in remote communities.

One of the concerns that we have with the legislation that is in front of us is that because it lacks national standards, national objectives, that will be followed through, we are not sure if we will have these day care centres and available spaces in the communities that need them. I would like to spend a few minutes in talking about why that is essential.

In native populations we have high unemployment. Among native women we have higher unemployment. It is essential that we increase not only the job opportunities for those women but also the opportunities for those women to get training. One of the ways that that can happen is if we are in a situation in which those women and those families are guaranteed adequate child care. That is not difficult, but it is not that hard either if the Government has the political will to make it happen.

We would like to see within the legislation that we have before us some means of increasing funding for child care to increase the spaces that are available. I noticed yesterday that the Minister tried to ridicule the amendment put forward by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell). That is not surprising, since the Minister has ridiculed everybody who has an opinion different from his own on this issue. He does not have to listen just to my learned colleague, the Hon. Member for Vancouver East. He could have listened to the various groups that have made presentations to the House of Commons committee. They were concerned with the same issue that my colleague was concerned about. It is interesting to note that all 40 groups that came forward at the committee hearings spoke against the Government's project.

There would have been more people speaking against the Government's project if government Members on that committee had not limited the hearings to two days of investigation. It was two days on a child care program that is supposed to be national in scope, an issue which is so controversial, so important. This Government says two days is enough to study it, two days is enough for groups across Canada to make their presentations.

I always considered it a problem with this Government that when something is controversial it does not want it studied. When something is important, whether it is trade, child care, or tax reform, it wants to limit public input.

It reminds me of that leaked government document a couple of years ago where they wanted to low profile the trade issue. They did not want it to become a public issue. We know why. We see with the recent polls that the more Canadians know about this Prime Minister's trade deal with the American President the more they dislike it.

The same situation would exist with child care. The Minister, his officials, his cabinet colleagues, and backbenchers, those who were not promoted to Cabinet yesterday, have all gone out and said what a wonderful program it is, how it provides the money for stay home mothers—80 cents a day, I understand—and how that is really helping our young children across this nation. As those kinds of facts become public more and more people will know that we are getting another flim-flam from this Government.

Four years after the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) promised that we would have child care legislation, they finally come up with this package. They want to rush it through the House of Commons, not because they believe it is a priority but because there might be an election in the next couple of weeks. They want to keep one or two promises in the whole area of social policies even if it is a flim-flam, even if it is done at the last possible moment, and even if it is not meeting the concerns of people across Canada including the people in the remote communities that I mentioned in opening my remarks.

Specifically on the amendment put forward by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vancouver East, we believe that the amendment put forward is the type of thing that we need to improve this legislation.

Yesterday the Government accepted a motion that would finally make it possible for concerned groups to have access to the arrangements made with each of the provinces and what would be in those arrangements. We had an amendment put forward and eventually accepted by this House that would ensure the public access to those agreements and to any amended version of those agreements. That was important.

More important, we must make sure that there is adequate funding. The intent of this amendment by the Hon. Member for Vancouver East and of the other amendments she has put forward in the same area is to increase funding for child care spaces and to make sure that the Government's legislation does not actually limit the number of spaces which will be created over the next number of years.

I indicated earlier that a number of groups have spoken specifically on that point. In their presentations to the House of Commons committee they indicated that they would support that type of amendment. I will just read from three of the briefs that were presented to this committee. I am taking a cross-section because, as the Hon. Member for Vancouver East has indicated, approximately 40 groups spoke against this legislation in committee. Many of them spoke on this specific aspect of the legislation. I will start by taking the presentation of one union group, the National Union of Provincial Government Employees, which said:

> I'm sure all of you here tonight remember what constituted a "subsidized space" in childcare-funding-parlance in the days before the National Childcare Strategy. BNCS we had CAP, and in CAP language a "subsidized" space meant a space which was available for the child of a low-income family at a subsidized fee.
> In fact, when the National Childcare Strategy was unveiled in late 1987, and the Minister and departmental officials talked glowingly of 200,000 new childcare spaces, "most of which would be subsidized", even those of us who have been keenly involved in the childcare policy debate long enough to consider ourselves veterans failed at first to grasp that the federal government had written a new dictionary of childcare language.
> We continued to think that a subsidized space was a subsidized space, and we had great difficulty figuring out how the Government could claim to be funding 200,000 new subsidized spaces on the allocations of direct funding outlined in the National Strategy.
> Now, of course, we've been re-educated on the subject of what the government means when it talks about a "subsidized space". In the era after the National Strategy on Childcare, a subsidized space is merely a space for which a province, having received money from the federal government, provides a "meaningful subsidy". "Meaningful subsidy", in the new federal childcare dictionary is currently defined as $2/space/day. At $2/space/day, the new subsidized space is much cheaper for governments than the old CAP definition of a subsidized space, which might range as high as $27 for a space filled by a toddler from a low-income family.

After looking at the legislation, at what the Government was doing, one group realized that it would indeed limit the contributions of the federal Government in this area. It was not the only group that made presentations, as I mentioned earlier.

We also have the brief of the the National Anti-Poverty Organization which, in part said: "Under existing cost-sharing agreements, child care has been funded as part of the Canada Assistance Plan. One of its components is social services that are eligible for cost-sharing if they serve those in need or those likely to be in need without the service. This objective is indeed clear. While the money has been removed from this program to provide funds for the Canada Child Care Act, its objectives have neither been replicated nor replaced in this Bill". It went on to say: "Removing the funds for cost-sharing child care from the Canada Assistance Plan to the Canada Child Care Act accomplished several federal Government goals", but not necessarily doing what it should do to help low-income Canadians. That is why the National Anti-Poverty Organization has spoken out against this legislation.

Further, the Government's own Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women, people appointed by the Prime Minister and his Cabinet, has also come out in its brief against what the Government is doing. In this specific area of the amendment put forward by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vancouver East, it said that the Government had actually moved backward.

To read part of its brief in the few minutes that I have remaining, it said:

> In 1973, 15 years ago, the Council pointed out the "evident inability of the federal-provincial governments to come to grips with the problem of child care services so urgently needed in Canada." In 1986, we reiterated our belief that "child care . . . is an essential service which should be universally accessible."
> The Canada Assistance Plan (CAP) was one solution; Bill C-144 is another. However, neither of them acknowledge that child care, for low-income and middle-class families alike, will become part of the Canadian landscape; that families cannot bear this burden without considerable help; and that that help must intelligently, in good faith, and with the most intense political will, come from a government that has the foresight to understand that the labour force requires the participation of women and men, and that responsible fiscal planning for the future requires a great commitment for the care of our children.

What I am trying to point out—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I will let the Hon. Member wind up.

Mr. Murphy: Mr. Speaker, I thank you for the extra few seconds, and I certainly will not abuse it. What I am trying to point out from the briefs that I have scanned in terms of what I have said this morning is that it is not only our amendment that we are speaking to in the House of Commons. What we are speaking to is a belief widely held by groups across this country that this child care legislation is not doing what it should be.

Again through the use of flimflammery the Government has actually restricted the ability to provide the child care services that are needed across this country. It is not just our belief, and the Minister may not like our amendments, it is what people across this country have been saying in front of the committee in the two brief days that the Government would allow the public to make presentations.

Ms. Marion Dewar (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on this very important amendment. I am very concerned about the fact that the so-called child care strategy brought to the House is one that eliminates people who normally would be able to have some access to child care.

I must say the people, certainly the children, and the families of Canada, are very fortunate that they have had a Member of Parliament such as the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) who really understands child care. I am very concerned about a Government that will bring forward a Bill that states that this is a child care strategy. What it is really doing is demeaning the ability to deliver child care in our country.

Anyone who has children would start to understand that, first of all, we are looking at children in need and we are looking at children of low-income families who, if the provinces use this Bill, will be cut off in the Canada Assistance Plan. That is really important. We have looked at the statistics and the analysis. We recognize that if the Canada Assistance Plan was left in place at least these people would have access to the kind of quality care that is available to them at the moment.

Second, what we have done with this is said to people who already have spaces, regardless of what kind of spaces they have, that they will be able to get tax exemptions. That is not what we are looking for. We are looking at two million children out there in need of care. Certainly the New Democratic Party has recognized for a long time that to make sure families are secure and have a basis of choice they must have the services that are there. Suggesting that this is something that we cannot afford in Canada is saying that we cannot afford to give stability and caring to families and children. That is not the position of New Democratic Party.

In the Minister's comments yesterday he stated that he was not going to implement the Meech Lake principles. This Government said that it was at last going to be able to establish national standards, but he did not want to do this for children. Again it is this flop-flop that the Government is using. Children are not important to the Government. It is about time that it recognized that the people of Canada do care about their children.

We are looking at a program that will cut off the Canada Assistance Plan that now is at least addressing the needs of low-income people. That plan will be cut off if they kick into this type of Act. That is unacceptable, it is unfair, and it certainly does not serve the children of Canada well.

There are many research institutions in this country and a lot of research has been done on child development. We have the information, and we know what is needed. We know that those first eight years are the most crucial years in any person's developmental stages, yet the Government is again saying that it is not going to worry about it. Every research institute that looked at child care has said "eliminate the welfare system network for child care and put it into a national child care strategy so all children will be seen as equals, at least for those first eight years". No matter what they have to face in life later on, at least they will be given that base.

What the Government has done in putting this Act in place is discriminating against the low-income people and the people who normally would be able to be part of that welfare assistance plan. The research institutes and the New Democratic Party have stated that if we are going to put a national strategy in place, get that national strategy in place. In the meantime there has to be a phasing in so that the low-income people and the children in real need have the ability to use that Canada Assistance Plan.

This Government has turned down two amendments that would have helped to be put that in place. We have an amendment in front of us this morning that is really saying "allow that to happen", Mr. Speaker, to assist the children who are homeless, the children who are of the working poor, and the families that are under pressure in their existence because of poverty.

It is all very well for the Government to brag about the kinds of programs it has put in place that have actually given assistance to those who already have money, who have places for their child care, and who are comfortable when they go to work knowing that their children are well looked after and that they can afford to pay for it. Is that the kind of society this Government wants to be part of, a society that builds two Canadas, a Canada for the children of those who have the ability to be able to pay for their child care, independent of any help from society, except extra tax exemptions? Rather, do we want to a build a society that says a child born in this country is a valuable treasure, a person that we understand has the potential of being a very productive and secure and creative individual in our country?

As a Party we know that investing in children is probably the most serious and important investment we can make in all times. As New Democrats we understand that if we are going to build a base of a secure society we must build that base in the first eight years of a child's life. If we want families to be able to operate with some security, with knowing that they can build their family unity together with a sense of security that their children will be well looked after and safe, then we need a child care program that does not discriminate against the children in need.

Many, many briefs were put forward to the committee. They were briefs from people who were not necessarily seen as supporting the New Democratic Party, but they were briefs from people who had done an analysis of this Child Care Act. Every one of those briefs objected to the Bill that we have in front of us and said that it is bad, withdraw it, leave the status quo rather than put something in that will really threaten the quality of care that our children are presently getting.

We know there has been a crisis in Canada in child care. We know there have been people who have been on long waiting lists for years. We know that there are certain provinces where it is almost impossible to get any kind of quality care. Yet with all of that, these people who have studied the Act have said leave the status quo the way it is, rather than implement this, because it is increasing the discrimination against people of lower income and certainly the working poor. It is also saying that we have no guarantee of any quality care in this country.

They really are not going to put in any national objectives that say that whether one is in Newfoundland, in British Columbia, in the Yukon, or in the Northwest Territories, a child in Canada has a right to specific kinds of quality care. There is nothing in the Bill that addresses that, and the Minister is saying that he chose to ignore the fact that at least in Meech Lake we are allowed to start to put in national objectives. However, he wants to ignore that, and says quite blatantly that he has ignored the fact that national objectives are possible in Meech Lake. He does not intend to implement them. That is a fine way to be responsible about what child care is all about.

Every one of us here, men, women, and parents who understand what that basic need is for children, cannot in any conscience support this Bill and not support these amendments. Surely, we have to look at the implications for the children of the working poor and the low-income families in Canada. What we are doing is relegating them to an adult life of trauma, because this Parliament is not willing to use the resources of this very rich country to say that children are important, and because this Government has a majority it is being crassly ignorant of the needs of children.

Members opposite stand up and talk about this child care strategy. It is not a child care strategy at all. It is just making it easy for people running private child care centres to increase their profit. Obviously the Government thinks that children are there for profit. Instead of looking at non-profit co-operative kinds of service delivery and recognizing that our children are a major resource, the Government refuses to accept an important amendment which would, at least for a time, extend a safety net to low-income families and poor children. It would give some sense of hope to families that are under so much stress from living in a society where they see many people with lots of resources while they are eking out an existence from day to day.

I see you giving me a sign that my time is up, Mr. Speaker. I will respect that, but I certainly hope the Government will review what it is doing to the future of this country and our families and children when it dares to bring in an Act such as this.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Yorkton—Melville (Mr. Nystrom).

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, your French is getting better every day but the accent is still Edmonton!

[English]

I wanted to say a few words about the Child Care Act before the House today. As you know, Mr. Speaker, I come from a rural riding in Saskatchewan with many different communities. It contains about 10,000 or 15,000 farmers. It has about 60 different villages and small towns and hamlets and a couple of very small cities. The Minister himself, coming from a very similar riding in Manitoba, should understand that there are some very particular needs and concerns, some special problems with respect to child care in rural Manitoba. However, I do not think this Bill addresses those needs.

We need more flexibility to provide funding to parents' groups, co-operatives, community associations, in order to provide decent child care in rural Canada. It must be a lot more flexible because we are dealing with small hamlets, villages, and towns. In addition, we have many farms scattered over many miles of rural Canada. There are parts of my riding where you can go for a mile or two from farm to farm, and then you get down to southern Saskatchewan or southern Alberta and you can go for five or ten miles from one farm to a ranch or another farm. The problem of child care is a different problem in rural Canada from what it is in urban Canada. I do not think this Bill takes into account the need for flexibility across rural Canada.

In rural Canada on the farm problems arise because of a given season. I am thinking of the harvest season which is just winding up in my area. That is a special problem. There are many farms that do not need or want child care on a full-time basis, but do need it on a part-time basis for the harvest season or during spring planting. It is then a necessity.

Neither is it just for the male farmer. The woman farmer is a 100 per cent participant in planting and harvesting crops. Therefore, I hope the Minister, being from rural Canada and representing a riding very similar to mine, would be more open to suggestions and amendments to make this legislation even better.

Mr. Speaker, I know I was not on the committee that examined this legislation, but I know that over 40 witnesses appeared before the Committee last week, and our Member for Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) was there.

Everybody present was opposed to the legislation, Mr. Speaker. Everybody was against it. Only two days were allowed to hear witnesses here in Ottawa and give them a chance to express their views and opinions on this Bill. If everybody was against the legislation, I wonder why the Government did not propose any amendments. This is a democracy, Mr. Speaker, and public opinion is very important in Canada. On the other hand, the Government spent $15 million last year on public opinion polls. A lot of money was spent because Allan Gregg and recently, a couple of Senators, wanted to sound out public opinion. I hope the Minister will be in the House very shortly. There were 40 witnesses, and after two days, everybody was opposed to this Bill. So why didn't the Minister propose any amendments to introduce changes in the Bill?

[English]

I really wonder why, after two days of hearings and over 40 witnesses against this legislation, there is not an amendment that will take into account what those witnesses want. Surely that is the democratic system. Surely that is the purpose of public hearings.

In the two or three minutes that remain I want to place on the record an example of what I am speaking about. Perhaps the Minister will respond. Over 40 witnesses appeared before the committee last week and I am told every one of them opposed the legislation. The Minister had a reputation as someone who would listen to the people of Canada. I wonder why he is now proposing amendments that go against the beliefs of those who appeared as witnesses. I have here, for example, a copy of the brief from the Canadian Jewish Congress presented to the legislative committee on September 8.

It says: "The concern with replacing the Canada Assistance Plan lies in the fact that while it was flawed in its child care funding mechanism, it at least afforded protection to low-income users". It goes on to say that this entitlement to subsidies for low-income earners is now negotiable in federal-provincial arrangements and may effectively disappear under the new system, hurting the people least able to afford good care. It also says that it is uncertain whether the provinces will be able to maintain the same level of low-income subsidization in addition to the new competing interests that are there. This may make it extremely difficult for a province to continue providing CAP style low and middle-income family subsidies while providing grants to a variety of meaningfully subsidized child care programs. This may be the case particularly after the seventh year of the program when matching operating cost funding is curtailed and capital cost funding ceases.

That is what the Congress says in its in its brief that goes on for eight or nine pages. It expresses, on behalf of the people it represents, concern about the Minister's legislation.

I also have a copy of the brief submitted by members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees. They, too, are really concerned about the kind of amendment the Minister is turning down. They say: "The Canadian Union of Public Employees sincerely and passionately believes that it was a sad day indeed for parents and children and child care providers when Bill C-144 was introduced into the House. To be blunt, we think the enactment of this legislation would represent a callous and backward act by an insensitive government".

Those are pretty tough words, "callous and insensitive government", but truer words have never been spoken. Over 40 witnesses came before the committee, and the Minister will sit there and not listen. What is democracy all about? What is the parliamentary system all about if the Minister will not respond to the wishes of the people? What are we all about if we do not respond? The Minister will not even bring in amendments to make sure there are national objectives in place despite the fact that this Parliament passed the Meech Lake Accord last year which says we can now have national objectives for programs like day care.

This is one of the first opportunities we have had to enact the spirit of Meech Lake, and the Minister himself was an eloquent critic. He was a good critic in the Opposition on the constitutional proposal back in 1981-82. If there is any Minister who understands that proposition, it is the Minister in charge of health and welfare. Yet he is not responding when he has a golden opportunity.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, in concluding, since my 10 minutes are up, I want to say that it is time to act. It is time to do something for Canada's children and to do something concrete.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I think not. I think the House is not yet ready for the question. We are ready to face the issue head on.

I have been spending the last couple weeks in my riding knocking on doors, talking to people, and I have found that Manitobans, the people in Winnipeg and the people in Winnipeg North Centre, are interested in issues, contrary to the mythology that people are only interested in personalities, in whether or not the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) has a smile on his face. The people are not only interested in style, they are interested in issues.

Two issues are uppermost in the minds of the people. One is the trade deal and the other is day care. These are important and fundamental issues that people across Canada are concerned about. The people tell me that they need day care, that there is not enough day care to give appropriate and proper care to their children. They have to work in order to make ends meet.

Increasing numbers of Canadians have to work at two jobs. It is no longer possible for a person to make a decent income on one salary; there has to be two salaries. When two parents are working out of necessity, the children must be taken care of properly and that creates a new demand for day care. This demand exists at the grass roots level. It must be responded to and it must be responded to in a substantive way.

I want to make a few comments about the Government's day care program. Having examined this program, I find it is more propaganda than substance. It is more sleight of hand than it is day care spaces. It is more flimsy than reality. This program fails in some fundamental ways. It fails to meet the needs of the women and the families in my riding and in all the ridings across Canada. It fails to add sufficiently and significantly to the number of spaces in Canada. What Canadian families need is day care spaces so that our children get appropriate care.

This is a propaganda program. It was a propaganda announcement that the Government made. In fact, it is not only a propaganda gesture, it is an inept one. I would have expected more of the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp).

What do I mean when I say that this is an inept propaganda gesture? The Tories made a big announcement of $6 billion, and they caught the headlines. Of course, when the people read below the headlines, when they read the full story of day care, they find out something which is often true. The headlines differ from the story.

With this new Conservative day care program, a ceiling is put on the amount of money going into day care. Up until now, under the Canada Assistance Plan, day care spaces were expanding at the rate of 15 per cent per year. Under this new program, day care spaces will be expanding at what rate? They will be expanding at the rate of 10 per cent per year. Ten per cent is less than 15 per cent and any person with a little arithmetic understands that.

This program is retarding the growth of day care. It is putting off the day when the needs of the ordinary Canadian family for the proper care of children will be met. That is the first way in which this program is a deception.

Another significant way it is a deception is that this program weakens the commitment to providing day care for the poor. I want to back up what I have said with the statements of some groups that have analysed this matter. The Canadian Day Care Advocacy Association says the following in its brief:

> Bill C-144 is silent on the definition of a "subsidized space". It is the federal Government's responsibility to see that all subsidized spaces—existing spaces as well as the "200,000" new spaces—are adequately funded in terms of individual family's financial needs. By that, we mean that existing spaces should continue to be funded at no less than their current level. It is common knowledge that the new definition, a "subsidized space" could be a space that receives as little as $2.00 a day of public funds. We find that unacceptable, because it would leave such spaces out of the reach of low and middle-income Canadians. The "space count" should not leave room for this kind of exclusion.

The Canadian Day Care Advocacy Association is saying that this new program leaves out the poor. It is heartless and it runs the danger of providing less day care for the poor in Canada. The Canadian Federation of Students said the following:

> The fact that there are no guaranteed subsidies for low-income Canadians is of great concern to us. Student parents in need of child care are low-income Canadians. The subsidies that are in place under the Canada Assistance Plan should, at the very least, be guaranteed under the new Canada Child Care Act. As this is not the case, the Canada Assistance Plan represents a "safer" option for low-income Canadians. We would parenthetically add here that the income tax provisions under the national childcare strategy will not be of much use to students. Most students will not need the deductions and the additional child credits are too little, and too long after the refund would be of use.

Members of the Canadian Federation of Students indicate that the Canada Assistance Plan is a better plan for them than the new Tory plan. In the opinion of the Canadian Federation of Students, this is a step backward rather than a step forward.

The National Council of Women of Canada says the following:

> Our first problem with this new bill is that it does not seem to ensure that the supply of these spaces will increase, indeed there seems even to be the danger that they might decrease, because while under the Canada Assistance Plan support for such spaces for low income families is open-ended to meet needs as identified, under the new Act, there will be a ceiling. A fixed cost-shared federal contribution will be available to provinces on a yearly basis, for a variety of purposes including capital funding, operating and grants etc. but without specific reference to subsidy needs. Our concern is that impoverished families may lose out.

The Government ought to be moving forward with care, with heart, trying to include all Canadians under its umbrella. What in fact the National Council of Women of Canada, the Canadian Federation of Students, and the Canadian Day Care Advocacy Association have said is that this program puts in jeopardy the day care spaces that are available for the poor. That is a major indictment of this program. The program is a step backward rather than a step forward.

There are two points about the substance of this program that are fundamental. The Government's new plan reduces the increase in spaces and therefore is a step backward. It threatens the subsidies for the poor and is therefore a step backward.

I see you indicating that I have two minutes left, Mr. Speaker. I just want to make this point. Over the last decade or two our society has changed significantly. No longer do the vast majority of women stay home and look after children. In today's society women who stay home and look after their children are in the minority. In my family that is the case, but my family is in the minority. The reality for the majority of families these days is that both parents have to work to make ends meet, both parents are in the market-place, and we have to ensure adequate care for the children.

If we are going to have a great nation in the future, if our children are going to be able to meet their responsibilities in the future, they need adequate care today. The Government was challenged to move in and meet that need, and it has failed abysmally. It has the headlines, but when we read the story under the headlines we find a program that is a step backward rather than a step forward. That is why I say this program is more propaganda than substance. What ordinary Canadian families in my riding have been asking me for, as I have gone door to door to talk to them, is more day care spaces. They want a place in their neighbourhood at which their children can receive adequate care while they go to work.

I call upon the Government to rethink what it is doing. I call upon the Government to re-examine the critiques being made by this Party and the critiques of the National Council of Women, the Canadian Federation of Students, the Canadian Day Care Association, the Advocacy Association. The Government should rethink what it is doing, go back to the drawing board, and come up with a plan that will be a real step forward.

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity this morning to speak on Bill C-144, particularly on the amendment put forward by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell), which would retain the participation of CAP, the Canadian Assistance Plan, in child care and day care. I see the Minister is here. I know a little about this field, having been a probation and parole officer and having been involved in the field of child care most of my professional life. I have in fact set up and been the president of a day care society. I did that 13 years ago in a small northern community in British Columbia.

I recognized then the rapidly evolving need for day care because of the increasing number of families where either both parents worked or, in the case of single parent families, where the single parent is very often involved in the workforce. In all cases, at least at some point during each day or each week, the parent is away from the child. I know something of the problems associated with day care and child care. I also know what the outcome is for many children where proper care is not provided. That is why I point out to the Minister that having been a probation and parole officer I recognize the problems that many children get into. Often one can find the root causes in terms of the care provided to them in their earliest years. I do not think there is anyone in this House who would dispute that the early years in the life of a child are key to the development of that child's personality throughout his or her life.

I want to spend a moment on the needs of northern child care and of child care among first nations, among native families, because that is an area of real crisis. I do not think the Government has addressed this problem at all. There are no objectives in Bill C-144 which are directly related to the amendment put forward by my friend the Hon. Member for Vancouver East. She has brought forward not only this amendment for us today, but also amendments over the last few days related to the need for objectives.

I am surprised after all the talk from the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and other Ministers that the Meech Lake Accord did not have any kind of viral implant in terms of the potential for national legislation to have objectives. The Government was always planning to bring forward national programs that would have objectives, yet the very first time it has an opportunity to bring something forward we find there was a back room virus, at least among Tories, in relation to the Meech Lake Accord.

Obviously, every two facilities across the country are not going to be the same no matter what kind of objectives there are, but there are certain things one has to have for a safe protected environment for children. I think particularly of the training for those who will be working in this field. Having worked in the field myself I know what kind of training is required. My children are young, aged four and six years. I have some kind of idea of what kind of situations they feel best in, what kind of people they get along with best, what kind of toys and what kind of environment they need. Why would the Government not put those kinds of objectives clearly into a piece of legislation for those who are the most important in our society and in every society around the world? I can only assume that the Government never really intended to bring forward a plan to reach those hundreds of thousands of children in need of care during the day.

We know there are over two million children in Canada whose parents, either one or both, work and they are involved in some kind of care situation. It might be with a grandmother, a neighbour, or a licensed day care facility. All kinds of situations have evolved because the need is there. What Governments are supposed to do in collecting taxes is to spend the money in the most effective, rational, and cost-effective way.

Bill C-144 does not meet any of those criteria. That is why all groups that appeared before the committee last week oppose the Bill. Not some of them, not half of them, not three-quarters of them; all groups that appeared oppose the Bill. One would assume that the Minister or perhaps some of his back-benchers might have been able to find a group somewhere in Canada they could invite who would say that this was the next best thing to sliced bread, that this was what they always wanted. However, it would not be those who are knowledgeable about the needs of children, what kinds of facilities are required, or what kinds of capital funding are required.

The Minister's Bill provides for an ending to capital funding after seven years. The Minister crows that there are 200,000 licensed subsidized spaces and that it is going to double, that there will be 400,000 spaces seven years from now. As many groups across the country have pointed out that many spaces would be developed without the Bill, without the Minister's proposal.

I think we have to ask ourselves: What is this Bill, really? It appears to be, and it may well be, a sop to those who are not crucially involved in day care. When Tories are out knocking on doors they can say they brought forward this child care Bill.

I doubt there would be very many Tories during this campaign, including the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) and the Prime Minister, going to licensed day care facilities and asking "do you like our Bill", with a reporter in tow. That is unlikely. They will be peddling this to those who will be worried about their nieces and nephews and grandchildren. The Tories will be able to say: "Well, we dealt with that. We have Bill C-144. We are spending billions of dollars". If they are going to spend billions of dollars, they have to identify the area of need and the training costs. They have to figure out how it can be cost shared among various jurisdictions. They have to make sure that the people who are working there are properly qualified, that the space is adequate, and that the needs of our children are being met.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Skeena will have two minutes remaining in his debate after Question Period.

It being 11 o'clock a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 19(4) the House will now proceed to Statements by Members, pursuant to Standing Order 21.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT—FORMER JUDGE'S ANALYSIS

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, after reading the entire trade agreement, which is more than the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Crosbie) seems to have done, former Family Court Judge, Marjorie Bowker, wrote a thoughtful analysis of the agreement.

• (1100)

Her conclusions are worth putting on the record. They are as follows:

> There can be no equality where one partner is the most powerful nation on earth, the other a subordinate on the world stage; one with a population of 260 million, the other with only 26 million. Unlike the European Economic Community, a union of 12 relatively equal nations, this is an unequal union—much like that between a walrus and a frog, an elephant and a mouse. Such an union can have but one result—the smaller being swallowed by the larger . . . What Canadians can ponder in the little time that remains, is not so much what the free trade agreement will do to certain sections of our economy, but rather what it will do to Canada as a whole—

Clearly the vision of Judge Bowker and that of the Government are light years apart. Her vision is the one to which the majority of Canadians would subscribe.

TELESAT CANADA

SCHEDULED LAUNCH OF MOBILE COMMUNICATIONS SATELLITE

Mr. Bill Tupper (Nepean—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, Telesat Canada will launch a mobile communications satellite in 1992. This mobile satellite, MSAT, the first of its kind in the world, will provide mobile telephone communications over North America and 320 kilometres out from our coasts. Costs will be similar to current cellular telephone costs.

In June, 1987, the Standing Committee on Research, Science and Technology, which I had the honour to chair, recommended that the Government make MSAT a priority. The federal Government has now done so with its lease arrangement with Telesat. The federal moneys will be an important source of seed money for the $250 million project.

The Department of Communications did all the basic research on this satellite. It is an all-Canadian project. Telesat will create more than 3,000 jobs directly or indirectly in the high-technology sector. It will also generate more than $2.4 billion in sales. Fishermen, truckers, resource industries, law enforcement officers, and others will benefit from the mobile communications system.

Finally, those of us in the national capital are indeed proud of that because the antennae and satellite navigation system will be built here in the nation's capital.

FORESTRY

APPOINTMENT OF FORESTRY MINISTER

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker yesterday, on September 15, 1988, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) appointed a minister of forestry for Canada. Unfortunately, there is no national forest Act. In 1984 the Prime Minister promised that "a Progressive Conservative Government will recognize the vital importance of the industry by appointing a Minister of Forestry".

Recognition has meant a four-year wait. Vital importance has meant a 35 per cent export tax on shakes and shingles and 15 per cent export tax on softwood lumber. Vital importance means that nine out of 10 federal-provincial forest renewal agreements are about to run out, and the Cabinet has refused to give a mandate even to negotiate extensions. The forest sector employs over one million Canadians, the largest industry in Canada and our largest source of a positive balance of trade.

The Tories, prior to 1984, roundly condemned the Trudeau Liberals for returning less than 10 cents out of every dollar taxed from the forest sector to that sector for reforestation, research, and marketing. It is still less than 10 cents out of every dollar. No other industry is so regularly milked and given so little in return.

In a 40-member Cabinet it took an election call to get a Minister. Canadians see the announcement for what it is, a Salmon Arm salute from the north end of a horse running south.

AEROSPACE INDUSTRY

REQUEST THAT PROPOSED SPACE AGENCY BE LOCATED IN MONTREAL

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, for the umpteenth time, I rise in the House to demand the space agency for Montreal. For at least two years, we have been asking the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) for this agency and telling him that it must go to Quebec, and more particularly to Montreal. I was the first person to demand the space agency for Montreal, Mr. Speaker. And we do not want just a shell, that is an agency located in Montreal that awards contracts elsewhere. Montreal has everything required, the space, qualified personnel and technology.

Furthermore, at the beginning of the year, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. de Cotret) promised to make an announcement about the agency and in June, the Secretary of State of Canada (Mr. Bouchard) said that he was for this agency going to Montreal.

So let the Prime Minister make up his mind and give us this agency that we have been demanding for Montreal for so long!

TRADE

INCREASED MERCHANDISE TRADE SURPLUS

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, Canada is a trading nation, and according to Statistics Canada we are getting better at it every day. Our merchandise trade surplus soared to a record $1.5 billion in July, and that despite a temporary decline in the automotive trade due to retooling. Higher commodity prices and a stable Canadian dollar have helped to improve our position.

The Government's policies have been successful in revitalizing trading opportunities. With the coming free trade agreement with the United States we can look forward to an even greater trade-based prosperity.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

FATE OF FORESTRY SEEDLING PROJECT

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I want to bring to the attention of the House a serious problem faced by the Dakota Tipi Reservation in the Portage Interlake area of Manitoba.

In 1985 they were approached by Special ARDA to establish an economic project dealing with the growth of seedlings that would be supplying reforestation projects in Manitoba. Private consultants were hired by Special ARDA to manage the program and over the past two or three years, because of what is clearly a case of mismanagement, the program failed. At the same time the Dakota Tipi Reservation was required to put in $80,000 of its own band money which it has not been able to recover.

The reason I raise it in the House today is that the band is yet unable to get Special ARDA to come to the table to talk about the problem. They have not been able to find anybody to negotiate or deal with the issues to find some kind of solution that would not put this reserve in jeopardy of bankruptcy at the risk of all the other social and economic programs supplied by the reserve.

I rise to my feet on behalf of the reserve hoping that the Ministers and officials of Special ARDA will take account of this very serious problem, respond to the band request, and see if they can find a resolution to the very serious difficulties in which the band members now find themselves.

FUNDING OF CHILD WELFARE AGENCIES

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I rise at this moment also to complain about a lack of adequate funding from the federal Government for the native people in Manitoba. I refer particularly to child welfare agencies that the bands, through their tribal councils and other agencies, have taken over in the last couple of years.

Under the previous Liberal Government these bands tried to negotiate the power to run their own child welfare agencies. They were promised they would receive the same level of funding as comparable provincial agencies operating in the same field. Under the previous Government that did not happen and those agencies did not receive enough money to provide adequate training for their people.

The same problem exists today. The Awassis agency in northern Manitoba has been criticized by a government investigative group for not having an adequate training program. That is a result of the Government's own failure to provide the necessary funding. Mr. Speaker, the actions of the previous Government and this Government have resulted in a situation which hurts native people.

ENTREPRENEURSHIP

TECRAD INC. CONGRATULATED

Mr. Marcel R. Tremblay (Québec-Est): Mr. Speaker, September 14 was a memorable day for a company in my riding. Tecrad Inc. of Ancienne-Lorette received the silver trophy for invention at the fifth Canada awards ceremony for excellence in business. Bertrand Allard, President of Tecrad, is an outstanding example of success. His success is due to his tenacity, dynamism and love for a job well done.

Since Ancienne-Lorette is a new part of my riding, as a result of redistribution, I am proud that this municipality, made up of people with very great potential like Mr. Allard, has joined the wonderful constituency of Québec-Est and will make a most worth-while contribution to it. Mr. Speaker, we have here another company that is doing well thanks to the economic policies put in place by the Progressive Conservative Party and its Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney).

MULTICULTURALISM

APPOINTMENT OF MULTICULTURALISM MINISTER

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, after refusing for four years to establish a separate multiculturalism ministry the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), on the eve of a national election campaign, has seen fit to do just that.

While the principle of a full ministry is welcome and one that I, as critic on behalf of our Party, have advocated for the last four years, the process by which it was developed is most offensive to all Canadians.

During the last four years any and every initiative of the Mulroney administration on the multiculturalism front have only come on the eve of a federal election campaign. Only in the last weeks have we seen a multiculturalism Bill. Only in the last weeks have we seen greater funding for third language advertising. Only in the last weeks have we seen the creation of a Heritage Language Institute. And now . . .

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for York East.

WELFARE

ONTARIO COMMITTEE'S REVIEW

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, since fifty cents out of every dollar paid to welfare recipients comes from federal taxes, the recent report of the Ontario Social Assistance Review Committee should be of great interest to all Canadians.

According to the report, fewer than 14 per cent of all those receiving social assistance are employable but unemployed working-age adults. The largest group of recipients are those with disabilities and sole support families. Thirty-seven per cent are children under 18.

The average employable recipient remains on welfare for only seven months. Forty per cent leave the system after just three months, and only 18 per cent of all recipients live in rent-geared-to-income accommodation. Clearly there is a lot of misunderstanding about people on welfare.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

NORTHERN HEALTH CARE SERVICES

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, an inquiry is taking place in northwestern Ontario that is examining the delivery of health care services to northern native residents.

Unlike in most parts of Canada, health care in this region is the responsibility of the federal Government, where nearly 15,000 status Indian people of the Nishnawbe-Aski Nation alone rely on the services provided by Health and Welfare Canada.

There is no question that providing quality care in the north is made difficult due to isolation. The staff, whether nurses, doctors, community health representatives, face these problems bravely, while native leaders are to be commended on the restraint that they show in the face of these difficulties.

However, there remains a critical need for more training of native nurses and doctors to provide care in their own communities.

Currently Health and Welfare Canada funds only two nursing entry programs in Canada and provides only $100,000 in bursary assistance to those who wish to become involved in the health care field. The native nursing entry program at Lakehead University is only guaranteed funding until March next year. Yet it boasts a 98 per cent retention rate for returning students and therefore deserves a stable funding base.

DISASTER

JAMAICA—DAMAGE CAUSED BY HURRICANE GILBERT

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, one must rise to praise the strong will and fighting spirit of the Jamaican people and the people of the Caribbean Diaspora, devastated by Hurricane Gilbert, one of nature's worst disasters.

What misfortune! In Jamaica alone we hear that 80 per cent of homes are damaged, roads flooded, electricity and water cut off, communications limited, 500,000 homeless, 150,000 in rescue shelters. Across the Caribbean these numbers unfortunately are multiplying.

Hope and help are needed. Canadians should take comfort knowing that every bit of help we send, however big or small, makes a difference.

Canadians are showing their humanitarian ways. In Montreal, the Jamaican Association is receiving truckloads of canned goods. The Red Cross is accepting cheques through most banks. In the name of all Canadians the Government is sending relief in the form of medical supplies, water, blankets, and electronic equipment.

The world is coming together to provide relief from Hurricane Gilbert. I encourage Canadians, moved by the pictures and chilled by the reports, to join the effort in support of our Caribbean friends and neighbours in this, their hour of need.

TREFOILS

FIVE-LEAFED DISCOVERY

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, recent media reports have talked about the need for good luck in getting re-elected. That is partly true, but we, the Conservatives, have more than good luck. We have St. Patrick himself pouring down on us.

I am sure you have heard of a four-leaf clover bringing good luck to people. Three days ago our son Jason was in the field behind our house and, lo and behold, what did he find but a clover with five leaves, a five-leaf clover which I will table for public viewing.

This clover was blessed yesterday by my Leader (Mr. Mulroney), by my caucus, by my Party, and pretty soon it will be blessed by the people of my constituency.

Talk about bad luck and the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner). Nobody seems to want him. Let me say to my people in Ottawa South that I am the Tory Turner and I am not related to John.

OLYMPIC GAMES

PARTICIPATION BY CANADIAN ATHLETES

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, we were wondering why the Conservatives were delaying the election. Now we know why. They are relying on five-leaf clovers. They are pretty desperate.

The Olympic motto is Citius, Altius, Fortius, higher and stronger.

During the next two weeks in Seoul, Korea, the world's greatest athletes will pit themselves against one another in a bid to win Olympic gold. This year the Canadian team is led by individuals like Ben Johnson, Carolyn Waldo, Ian Millar, Allison Higson, Victor Davis, Lennox Lewis and Curtis Hibbert, to name just a few.

These men and women have demonstrated hard work, discipline, and dedication in the pursuit of Olympic excellence. We wish them and their Olympic team mates well.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Waddell: The Olympics themselves have become a major security problem, with politics involved in every aspect of the games. I think we should look back to the spirit of the Olympics 2,000 years ago when the emphasis was on athletics and excellence. We wish our athletes in Seoul all the best for excellence.

COLUMBIA RIVER TREATY

RETURN OF DOWNSTREAM BENEFITS

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, the British Columbia Government is now in the process of developing and negotiating a plan with the United States, particularly with the Bonneville Power administration, to deal with the return of the downstream benefits under the Columbia River Treaty. Those benefits are estimated to be in the billions of dollars.

I urge that the Standing Committee on Fisheries and Oceans consider the mitigation required to restore the fishery on the Canadian side of the Columbia River Basin and then to ensure that British Columbia Hydro recognizes its financial responsibilities to Kootenay West and Kootenay East by establishing the same kind of fund as has been established by the Northwest Power Planning Commission of the United States, $750 million.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT CONFERENCE BOARD ANALYSIS

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. The Conference Board of Canada, a group that the Minister has often cited as being a reputable, independent minded forum for economic analysis, has put forward a study showing that Canadian taxpayers will be expected to carry an additional $4.6 billion debt, which will cause a substantial rise in the new sales tax being put forward by the federal Government. Mr. Gilles Rheaume, Director of Forecasting, said: "To cover the revenue shortfall due to the free trade agreement the rate of the sales tax will likely be higher than would otherwise have been the case".

I want to draw to the attention of the Minister and the House that the Minister of Finance has never been honest or forthcoming with the Canadian taxpayers about what the cost of the trade agreement would be. The Conference Board is saying that it would be an additional $4.6 billion per year and that that will cause a substantial rise in the sales tax.

When will the Minister be honest in the House and tell Canadians exactly what the real cost to them will be in additional raises in the sales tax to cover the cost of this misbegotten trade agreement?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think what I have said in the House on this issue and on other issues has been very direct, very forthcoming and, to use the Hon. Member's words, very honest in presenting the facts to the Canadian people about economic policy and the effects of economic policy.

I have read Mr. Rheaume's analysis. I have only seen it in the newspapers this morning. However, one thing that the Conference Board analysis has not covered, at least according to the newspaper article I have read, is the impact of the trade agreement on economic growth. Every credible economic study on the free trade agreement has said that there will be increased economic growth. That is the way we are going to pay for any loss of tariff revenues. People will be getting lower prices. Their purchasing power will be increasing. Investment activities will increase.

Let me draw the Hon. Member's attention to what is happening today as we see all around us investment activity, investment intentions at very high levels, in the order of 15 per cent to 20 per cent this year. It looks like it will continue into next year as well.

BENEFITS OF AGREEMENT—POSITION OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS DEPARTMENT

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, the Minister says to look around us and see what is happening today. I would simply point out to him that the increase in the interest rates that occurred yesterday of a half a point has already wiped out whatever projection or forecast his Government or the Economic Council provided as a result of the trade agreement. You have already lost whatever growth you had in one day's rise in interest rates.

I want to return not only to the statement made by the Conference Board but to the document that was put forward by the Department of External Affairs which clearly said that all officials, in preparing studies and forecasts and analyses on behalf of the Government, should accentuate the positive and downgrade the negative. In other words, all the studies, all the forecasts and all the projections have been false and misleading. They have not told the Canadian people the truth.

When will the Government finally live up to its responsibilities to be honest with Canadians, disregard these instructions, and tell us what will be the real impact of the trade agreement on increased taxes, job losses, and the loss of Canadian sovereignty that we face?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have done this before but I think I will have to do it again. I ask the Hon. Member to think back to November of 1984 and May of 1985 when we had that same sort of rhetoric. It was: "What is the impact of this Budget going to be? What will the impact of these measures and the Economic Statement be?" The Hon. Member and all his colleagues were saying that this was going to cost Canada 200,000 jobs. We have seen time and time again how the performance of the economy does far, far better than the doomsday scenarios set out by the opposition Parties.

If the Hon. Member wants to check back he will see that in each Budget I have set out what the economic results were going to be and studies of each show the actual outcome as being better than the estimates that I put out at the time.

Also, if the Hon. Member wants to check back to the Conference Board he will see that the Conference Board will be further off track, further off base in its estimates of economic activity than the federal Government's approaches. It is usually on the pessimistic side.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, the Minister is asking us to look at what is stated in the Budgets. I would remind him that in the last Budget he increased the tax by one cent on a litre of gasoline to make up a $500 million shortfall on the first four or five months of operation of the trade agreement. We now have the Conference Board saying that it is $4.6 billion when all the accounts are due. The Minister has already provided Canadians with the initial evidence that it is going to cost an awful lot of money in increased sales taxes in order to make up the deficit and the loss of revenues caused by the trade agreement.

When will the Minister provide Canadians with an honest, factual rendering of what they will be expected to pay in increased taxes because of this trade agreement?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member and the Conference Board have focused on one element of economic policy. I have said that one of the key elements of economic policy that they are ignoring is the fact that the free trade agreement is going to lead to economic growth in the country over and above what is the case today—

Mr. Axworthy: One-quarter of one per cent per year—big deal!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): This is a major step forward. We now have the Hon. Member for Fort Garry telling us that the free trade agreement is going to give us increased economic activity. I am glad to see that he has finally come on stream with the Canadian people.

Mr. Axworthy: I did not say that. I said one-quarter of one per cent per year.

FISHERIES

NORTHWEST ATLANTIC FISHERIES ORGANIZATION—NON-OBSERVANCE OF QUOTAS

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, this evening Canadians will be watching the happy spectacle of practically all countries of the world celebrating in harmony the opening of the Summer Olympics. No such harmony exists today between Canada and the 10 nations represented by the EEC. Yesterday and this morning the EEC rejected the best advice of top world scientists, has voted against and said that it will not respect every single recommendation of the NAFO meeting on quota cuts off the East Coast of Canada—cuts that Canada says it will make.

Is the Government aware that Fishery Products International has said: "—such a drastic reduction could force the closure of five . . . plants at Grand Bank, Fortune, Harbour Breton, Ramea and Catalina, putting 4,000 fish plant workers and about 125 trawlermen out of work." The provincial Government of Newfoundland has said that in consultation with FPI and the fishermen's union it favours a phasing in of these reductions.

Why are we making such a sacrifice while we continue to allow the United States of America and the 10 countries belonging to the EEC to plunder our resources?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, as usual the Hon. Member is a little late. Our colleague in this House, his colleague from Newfoundland, the Minister for International Trade, took the opportunity earlier this week to speak to representatives of NAFO, directing his remarks particularly to the practices of the European Community. Our position on their practices and on their view is very well known.

LAW OF THE SEA

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Yes, Mr. Speaker, it is very well known because this Government, this Minister, and the Minister for International Trade continue to say that we cannot do anything about what happens outside the 200-mile zone. Not only has that position contributed to the disastrous situation we are now facing off the East Coast of Canada but it is wrong.

Is the Government aware of what any reputable lawyer of international law would say, that is, these countries are violating Article 63 of the Law of the Sea which states:

> Where the same stock or stocks of associated species occur . . . in an area beyond and adjacent to the zone, the coastal State and the States fishing for such stocks in the adjacent area shall . . . agree upon the measures necessary for the conservation of these stocks in the adjacent area.

The EEC and the United States are violating the very law that they signed five years ago. They should be treated just as Canadian fishermen are treated when they break the law—arrest them.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the issue is very serious. It is too bad that it is treated in a jocular, trivializing way by the Hon. Member opposite. He was part of a Government which for years conducted fishery policies in ways that, among others, through an agreement with France created some of the problems that we are trying to resolve today. We are pursuing the resolution of those problems with France, and other problems with members of the Community, in a systematic and effective way.

The Hon. Member knows very well that there is no provision in international law for a coastal state to extend unilaterally fisheries jurisdiction beyond 200 miles. He knows that. He knows the facts. He is not interested in resolving the problem. He is trying to scare up another headline.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT—EFFECT ON AGRICULTURE

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, I cannot let the day go by without asking a question of our new Minister of Agriculture.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate him on that post. Even though we all know that it is a temporary posting, we wish that it was not a part-time Ministry.

I want to give the new Minister an opportunity to do something substantial for the farmers. He is aware that yesterday in all the newspapers of the country there was a very big ad run by agri-business, processing companies, and many farm organizations and marketing boards stating that the trade deal would be a disaster for Canada and a disaster for our farmers. They are also saying that we will lose 150,000 jobs in the agri-business through this trade deal.

I want to know now from the new Minister whether or not he can confirm these figures from these very reputable business groups and farm organizations. Are we going to lose 150,000 jobs? Will he have the candor now as the new Minister to admit that that is the fact?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister, President of the Privy Council and Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker,—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mazankowski: First, I am pleased to have the opportunity to answer the question since it also gives me the opportunity to say how sad I am that the former Minister of Agriculture has indicated his decision to step down. I think that all Members of this House—indeed all Canadians—would agree—

Ms. Copps: Anybody with any integrity would leave that Cabinet.

Mr. Mazankowski: —that no one single individual in Canada has done more for Canadian agriculture than the Hon. Member for Elgin.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mazankowski: With the exception of the Hon. Member for Hamilton East, of course.

Ms. Copps: He left because he had integrity.

Mr. Mazankowski: I could go further and say this. I am sure that the Hon. Member for Elgin will go down in history as the best Minister of Agriculture that Canada has ever had.

Ms. Copps: He couldn't stand the lies, that is why he had to leave.

Mr. Mazankowski: To top off 28 years of dedicated public service to Canada at the municipal and federal level is indeed an acknowledgement and an achievement that I think all of us in this House can look on with pride.

I note that the Hon. Member as reported in the press said that my appointment was an insult to the Canadian farm community.

Mr. Gauthier: It is part-time.

Mr. Mazankowski: The Hon. Member for Windsor West, the House Leader of the Liberal Party, suggested the same thing. We will just have to wait and see.

What I intend to do is try to continue along the same record that was established by the former Minister of Agriculture, which gives me the opportunity to remind the Hon. Member that direct income support for the Canadian farm industry had risen by 629 per cent in 1987 over 1983-84. That is in response to the devastation and the resulting aid that the agricultural community has required. As always, we will continue to provide that support in the future.

• (1130)

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, we can now see why the farmers need a full-time Minister of Agriculture, and not an apologist for the Government.

FREE TRADE AGREEMENT WITH UNITED STATES—REQUEST FOR RENEGOTIATION BY GOVERNMENT

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, I want an answer to my question. According to Agro Business and many farmers' organizations in Canada, 150,000 jobs would be lost in Canada's agricultural sector and the free trade agreement would be a disaster for Canada's farmers. Can the Minister confirm the figures indicating that workers in Canada's agricultural industry will lose 150,000 jobs, and is he now ready to renegotiate agriculture in the free trade agreement?

[English]

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister, President of the Privy Council and Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is acting like a cowboy who, for all his life, has never stepped in cow manure.

Quite frankly, those types of questions are clearly an insult to the farming community. Farmers know that the McCain food organization is not the best representative of the farming industry.

The Economic Council of Canada conducted a study and predicted that there would be a net increase of 2,100 to 6,400 jobs in the food processing sector as a result of the free trade agreement.

Yesterday the Minister for International Trade went through the list of agricultural organizations from coast to coast that support the trade initiative. Some of them are right in the Hon. Member's backyard.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISEMENT

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): The Minister certainly seems to know a lot about cow dung, Mr. Speaker. I want an answer from this Minister on behalf of the farmers of Canada. This advertisement is sponsored not only by McCain Foods but by the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, the Nova Scotia Chicken Marketing Board, the Union des Producteurs Agricoles du Québec, and they are all reputable farm organizations.

Will the Deputy Prime Minister admit today that those people are accurate when they say that 150,000 jobs will be lost in the agri-business and farming industry because of the trade deal between Canada and the United States? Will the Deputy Prime Minister answer yes or no?

Hon. Charles Mayer (Minister of State (Grains and Oilseeds)): Mr. Speaker, let me answer the question as a farmer. I talk to farmers, I live on a farm, and I farm. My neighbours are farmers. They realize that Canada produces some of the best quality agricultural products in the world. This deal will produce opportunities for us to sell.

The reason we will be able to sell, be successful, and produce additional jobs, is because we in Canada are good at what we do. We will be able to show, in the United States, that we are good at what we do when we are able to sell there under better rules.

The Canadian Canola Council has stated that it can see the possibility of an additional two million acres of Canola in western Canada which will be needed to supply the demand in the United States. The Canadian Cattlemen's Association accounts for 20 per cent of all the agricultural products produced in this country. They support this deal. The hog association supports it. We have a $2 billion hog industry that is in favour of free trade.

I would suggest to the Hon. Member that he talk to some farmers and find out what is really going on.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

MUNICIPAL SEWERS—CONSTRUCTION AND REPAIR COSTS

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Prime Minister and the Minister of the Environment, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Canadians would like to know whether the statement made by the Prime Minister last week on the environment is an electoral move, or a deeply felt conviction. For instance, mayors from across Canada have asked the Government to help municipalities with a federal share in meeting the cost of construction and repair of sewers, so far without success.

Is the Deputy Prime Minister in a position to commit the Government, in light of the general statement made by the Prime Minister on the environment, to pay the one-third share of the cost of rebuilding and reconstructing sewers on which depend the quality of our water, our health, and our beaches?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister, President of the Privy Council and Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I am interested to note that the Liberal Party has released a policy paper on the environmental issues of the day. I wonder where it was 10 years ago, particularly the Hon. Member who was the Minister of the Environment just over four years ago. He seems to be an expert on it today, but he certainly did not know much about it then. The fact of the matter is that what we have here is the Liberal Party making policy on the run. Let us look at the record.

We have provided $150 million to assist in the clean-up of large emission sources; $42 million loan to Noranda; provided $25 million to assist companies with the development of new technologies; $90 million to a world-class acid rain research institution; reduction of allowable emissions; and the clean-up of the St. Lawrence. There have been a number of initiatives.

When we came into office there were no specific emission control plans. There was no financial assistance to develop needed pollution control technologies.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT ALLOCATE FUNDS FOR SEWERS

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, I am sure that the Deputy Prime Minister, who has been around here for several decades, will recall that in the 1960s and 1970s previous Liberal Governments spent over $2 billion on sewer reconstruction jointly with the provinces and the municipalities.

In addition, in 1986 the Leader of our Party committed himself to a federal share in building and repairing sewers across the nation.

My supplementary question is the following. To demonstrate the commitment of the Prime Minister to Canadians and to the environment, and more important, in order to be credible in the eyes of Canadians, will the Government, instead of allocating funds for submarines, allocate funds for sewers?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister, President of the Privy Council and Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, we are demonstrating in a very clear manner that, where it is within our jurisdiction to take action with respect to environmental issues, we are.

I mentioned the Halifax Harbour clean-up, the St. Lawrence Seaway clean-up, the Great Lakes agreement, and the establishment of four new parks. There has also been the introduction of whildlife protection legislation. I could go on and on, but I see that Hon. Members opposite do not want to hear the record of achievement of this Government. They get bored by it. I invite them to read the record, check it, and then see what we have been doing with respect to the environment.

Oral Questions

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Yesterday the Prime Minister made what is clearly a deathbed repentance in appointing a Minister of State for Forestry. This comes despite the savaging of the shakes and shingles industry with a 35 per cent export tax, and the softwood lumber dispute which was bungled by the Trade Minister who had other fish to fry.

If the Prime Minister was really serious—and I ask the Deputy Prime Minister the following question in all seriousness—why during the four years of this Parliament, if the protection and the enhancement of Canada's largest industry were so important, has a National Forest Act never been produced, tabled, or debated in the House and brought forward as law in order that the Minister of Forests had a mandate under which to operate?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister, President of the Privy Council and Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, we said that we would establish a full-fledged Department of Forestry. One of the first things that we did when we came into office was designate a Minister of State responsible for forestry. That is something that was never in place before.

We have continued working with the provinces in developing programs whether they be under ERDAs or under other specific programs. We have worked in co-operation with the provinces, because, as the Hon. Member knows, a large part of the jurisdiction remains in the hands of the provinces. It is a joint responsibility. However, the federal Government has taken leadership and is reaffirming that leadership by the designation of a full-fledged Department of Forestry.

NEGOTIATION OF FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL AGREEMENTS

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, first, there is no National Forest Act and the Government has made no attempt to bring one forward. There has not been, and there still is not a Deputy Minister of Forests who can sit around the table and talk about cash. Canada's largest industry has received $609.9 million in forest renewal agreements during the tenure of the Government, which is the same amount received by the Reichmanns in the Little Egypt Bump from the Minister of Finance.

Why has the Government still not even given a mandate to negotiate, which I have confirmed in a letter from the junior Minister of Forestry, new forest development agreements with nine of the 10 provinces? It is a lot of bumf and you should know it, Mr. Deputy Prime Minister.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister, President of the Privy Council and Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I think it is fair to say we would have liked to have done more, and we will do more after the next mandate. There is no question about that.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mazankowski: What we have had here, especially from the NDP, is filibustering and blockading to the extent we had to sit all summer to get our legislative program through. Now they are asking for more legislation.

HOUSING

SITUATION IN TORONTO

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the newly appointed Minister of Housing I will address my question to the Deputy Prime Minister.

After four years of federal neglect of housing, after slashing and eliminating a variety of federal programs, and after ignoring the pleas to confront the crisis in affordable housing in Metropolitan Toronto and other urban centres, taxpayers expect the Government to do more than just engage in electoral cosmetics.

Rather than simply establishing another ministerial position on the eve of a national campaign, one which will not lessen the price of a home in Toronto by one nickel, why did the Government not respond by implementing real housing initiatives and programs for first-time home buyers in Toronto that would offer real solutions to the spiralling cost of homes which is rapidly making the dream of owning a home an impossible nightmare? When will the home buyers get the bacon rather than simply the sizzle?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister, President of the Privy Council and Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, as was indicated in the House by the Minister of Finance and the Prime Minister, housing starts are at record levels, up over 40 per cent. There have been in excess of 200,000 housing starts per year. Payments by individual mortgage owners have come down as a result of the decline in interest rates.

Today the newly appointed Minister of State for Housing is announcing in Toronto that 50 hectares of land at Canadian Forces Base Downsview in the Metropolitan Toronto area are being released, and this will provide up to 5,000 new homes and living accommodation for 10,000 to 12,000 people.

SURPLUS FEDERAL LANDS

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, the issue is not, as the Prime Minister said yesterday and the Deputy Prime Minister repeated today, housing starts. The crisis is in affordable housing. Toronto is becoming a playground for the rich and well-to-do. However, I welcome the fact that at the eleventh hour of the Government's life it has seen fit to release a number of hectares of land on the Downsview Air Force Base for affordable housing.

My question, though, is why has it taken four years, after repeated demands from Ontario and the Official Opposition, to release surplus lands for the construction of homes? Is this project simply an isolated case, or is the federal Government prepared to make a commitment that surplus federal lands in Metropolitan Toronto will be offered for housing projects on a priority basis to municipal and provincial Governments?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister, President of the Privy Council and Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, it is unfortunate that the Hon. Member prepared his question before listening to my answer. That is exactly what I said. Some 50 hectares of land have been released for 5,000 homes which will provide accommodation for 10,000 or 12,000 people.

The Hon. Member asked about a long-term commitment. The mere fact that we have appointed a Minister of State for Housing is a recognition of the difficulties in housing across the country, particularly in the Toronto region. That should be a clear signal of a clear commitment by the federal Government to take this issue seriously.

Of course, I remind the Hon. Member that there may be more announcements in the future, and he will be disappointed because the Official Opposition would rather we did not do anything so they would have something to criticize us about rather than giving us credit for what we are doing.

AFFORDABLE HOUSING QUERY

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. He talks about housing starts being up. That is fine for those making $80,000 a year or more. It does not help people at the low and middle-income level at all.

Over the last several years the Government has said no to every concrete proposal put forward to alleviate the housing crisis. Do the Minister and the Government think that simply appointing a Minister of Housing at this late date is going to convince Canadians anywhere that the Government is serious about providing affordable housing?

Hon. Otto Jelinek (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, I do not know where the Hon. Member has been because the record of this Government speaks for itself.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Ms. Copps: That is the problem.

Mr. Jelinek: This Government has spent on average $1.5 billion a year on social housing, $250 million in the Metropolitan Toronto area alone. The fact is that the effort and commitment of this Government are now confirmed and solidified by the appointment of a Minister of State for Housing. We are moving in the direction of providing additional social housing for senior citizens, the disabled, and affordable housing for young couples starting out.

The record of this Government speaks for itself and the solidification of that record will provide even greater opportunities for the needy in the housing area.

GOVERNMENT RESPONSIBILITY

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, I have been in the House and I have watched the Government slash funding for co-op housing, slash funding for social housing, and fail to follow through on commitments it made to all kinds of organizations for native housing, co-op housing, and social housing.

I ask whether or not this new Minister is going to carry through with the responsibility that any Government has to make housing a right rather than something that comes along on the eve of an election?

Hon. Otto Jelinek (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member basically repeated his question and I could repeat my answer.

Mr. Mazankowski: Repeat it.

Mr. Jelinek: There has been an increase in social housing by this Government to the tune of $1.5 billion a year. That has provided some 50,000 additional social housing units per year across the country. I am surprised that the Hon. Member is not applauding the efforts of this Government which is committed to making cheaper housing available to all Canadians.

OLDER WORKERS—HAMILTON HELP CENTRE

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Employment and Immigration I will direct my question to the Acting Minister.

As Canadians go to the polls, I think the single biggest blight on the Government's record has to be its treatment of those who cannot help themselves, such as older workers. The first thing the Government tried to do was cut back on seniors' pensions. The second thing it did was cut out any federal program for older workers. Older workers have been waiting two and a half years for the federal Government to reinstate some kind of program and plan to help them. I think it is a national disgrace that even though the recession ended years ago, older workers still have a higher rate of unemployment than they did before the recession ended.

In the face of this absolute disdain for older workers, when there is one program which has been working, operating out of the Hamilton Help Centre, funded by an Innovations grant, why is the Government planning to cancel that program which has an 88 per cent success rate in returning older workers to work?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, one can notice that as the Opposition gets more desperate, the rhetoric from the Hon. Member, who we thought had reached the highest level of rhetoric, goes even beyond that. I want to tell her and other Members of the House that in the last four years the unemployment rate has gone down. About half a million people are out of poverty, and 1.2 million jobs have been created in four years. More than 700,000 of those jobs are for women. For example, the spouse's allowance was increased, the widow's allowance was increased, and veterans' allowances were increased.

Ms. Mitchell: The lousy child care program.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Child care is coming. I thank the Hon. Member for that tip. One could go on and on.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, the Minister may not be aware of this, but child care will not help those thousands of older workers who have been cut adrift by this Government.

I would like to ask the Minister a very specific question. He talks about rhetoric. I have an independent analysis here done by a company which showed that the Hamilton Help Centre had established a program which cost $3,511 for each client and had an 88 per cent success rate. It put the Firestone workers back on the job. The savings to the Canadian taxpayers, according to an independent assessment, amounted to $18,342.45 per client.

Why is the Government throwing away a program that at a cost of $3,500 is sending older workers back to work, throwing them a lifeline? People do not want to be on welfare. I have letters from people who want to work and who have been given absolutely no hope by the Government. Will the Government reinstitute the program at the Hamilton Help Centre and make it a model for the whole country?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that the Hon. Member has given such good credit to an innovative program that this Government introduced, and I am pleased that that has happened because that was the kind of innovation we wanted to see. I am reminded by her comments that the former Minister of Employment and Immigration and I were able to sign the SAR agreements. That was opposed, but that helped low-income groups, especially women. In respect to the specific program, that I will take back to the responsible Minister.

Second, in respect to older workers, the Hon. Member should know as well that our colleague, the Minister of Labour, has been negotiating in this area and if there is to be an announcement—

Ms. Copps: That is a farce.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): That is not false, and I wish the Hon. Member—

Ms. Copps: I said farce.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): She might be a farce herself if she understands these words. It is about time she—

Ms. Copps: Order.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Vancouver East.

SHIPBUILDING

CONSTRUCTION OF POLAR 8 ICE-BREAKER

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. In 1985 the Secretary of State for External Affairs announced that a Polar 8 ice-breaker would be constructed to protect our Arctic sovereignty. Since then, British Columbia Members of Parliament and a number of cabinet Ministers repeatedly have promised that this ice-breaker would be built equally in Vancouver and Victoria, a measure which is desperately needed to save our shipbuilding industry. Since the Deputy Prime Minister has been actively interested in this, can he tell us when construction of the Polar 8 ice-breaker will begin as promised repeatedly over the last three years?

Hon. Otto Jelinek (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member should know that the Polar 8 is in its definition phase. There have been—and this is no news—some ownership problems with the company. The program and the plan is to continue to look forward to the Polar 8 ice-breaker being built both in Vancouver and Victoria shipyards, and I believe that everything is going according to plan at this point in time.

GOVERNMENT FUNDING

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I must say that that is not the understanding we have on the West Coast. First, I understand there are financial problems because the Government underfunded this.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Start telling the truth, then, stop telling lies.

Ms. Mitchell: Second, we demand that this be built equally in Vancouver and Victoria. If there is a financial problem, why does the Government not increase the the subsidy? It really was underfunded, as I understand it.

Does the Minister not agree that a world-class ice-breaker which will do many practical things in our Arctic waters as well as deal with the sovereignty issue is far more important than wasting money on expensive nuclear subs? Let us have an election goody for Vancouver and Victoria.

Hon. Otto Jelinek (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, we do not need this Hon. Member to tell us that an ice-breaker is very important for our sovereignty. It is this Government which initiated that program.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Jelinek: I want to point out to the Hon. Member that I just returned from a tour of Vancouver as well, and I know what the situation is and what the facts are, and I just stated those facts in answer to her previous question.

CANADIAN COAST GUARD

LOCATION OF NORTHERN OFFICE

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of State for Transport. The Northern Division of the Canadian Coast Guard does excellent work under the Director General, Carol Stephenson. For a long time the long-term plan has been to move the head office of Coast Guard Northern from Ottawa into northern Canada where it rightfully belongs. What progress has been made toward this end?

Hon. Shirley Martin (Minister of State (Transport)): Mr. Speaker—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mrs. Martin: Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to receive my first question in this new portfolio from the Hon. Member for Western Arctic, a Member who works very hard for the growth and development of his area. I can tell the Hon. Member that one of the first things that I will do on Monday morning will be to discuss the movement of this office with the Department and be brought up to date, and I will make sure that he is kept informed of all the progress on the item.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

QUALIFYING PERIOD FOR RECEIPT OF BENEFITS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland—Kent): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. For at least another month, the qualifying period for unemployment insurance in Southern New Brunswick will be 16 weeks. Of course people in New Brunswick prefer to work all year round but they often have trouble finding even 10 weeks of employment. The Minister of Employment and Immigration has already indicated that she was looking into the problem, although it has already been given thorough consideration and she has all the information she needs to make a decision. My question to the Minister is this: How much longer will New Brunswick's workers have to wait for the Minister to make a decision to restore the 10-week qualifying period?

[English]

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for the question and I assure him that the Minister has been working on this issue. It is an important issue and it is my understanding that legislation is ready to be introduced.

ENACTMENT OF LEGISLATION—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland—Kent): Mr. Speaker, I find it somewhat reassuring that the Minister said that legislation is ready to be introduced. However, how can he explain to the people of New Brunswick that they have to wait before they get the same treatment other Canadians have been receiving for some time? If this goes on, if it takes too long, there are some families in New Brunswick that will be facing a long hard winter. Will the Minister give me some reassurance on this point and tell me when the legislation will be passed and when the people of New Brunswick will enjoy the same benefits as other Canadians?

[English]

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, again I want to reassure the Hon. Member that the legislation can, I think, be passed through the House very quickly if there is co-operation on both sides. I am sure co-operation could be found, and it is possible that how best to handle this could be be taken up after Question Period.

Oral Questions

APARTHEID

SOUTH AFRICA—REQUEST FOR IMPOSITION OF TOTAL ECONOMIC SANCTIONS

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. The Government has been engaged in a flurry of activity in its last few days trying to convince the people of Canada that it keeps its promises. Among those who are supposed to be pleased by the appointment of a Minister of Multiculturalism are a great many looking to another promise the Prime Minister made before the United Nations on October 23, 1985, with respect to the imposition of complete economic sanctions on South Africa.

My question to the Secretary of State is simply this: Will the Prime Minister, when he goes to the United Nations on September 29, fulfil the promise made three years ago that Canada will now impose complete economic sanctions upon South Africa?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member who has followed these questions carefully and seriously knows the position of the Government of Canada on that question. If other measures will not allow Canada to help us bring an end to an apartheid regime, then we are prepared to consider the absolute disruption of economic and diplomatic relations. We believe there is some—

Ms. Copps: You said that before!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Yes, we said that two years ago, if I may speak to the Member for Hamilton East who cannot contain herself. The policy change that was announced by this Government marked a dramatic change not only in policy but in commitment and in relevance from the position that had been followed by Liberal Governments for years. We intend to adhere to the position I have indicated in the House. We intend to adhere to the position of the Prime Minister as stated in the United Nations. We intend to look for ways in which we can contribute to the bringing to an end of the apartheid system.

I don't know if the Hon. Member is making a distinction in his question between an end to diplomatic relations and an end to economic relations. I thought the New Democratic Party had made a movement in that direction and I would not want to have the impression left that it was changing its position.

Mr. McCurdy: For Heaven's sake, Mr. Speaker, that ridiculous answer requires a supplementary question.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

PRIME MINISTER'S SPEECH AT UNITED NATIONS

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, the Minister has the impertinence to suggest that the New Democratic Party has changed its position when in fact not only on October 23, 1985, but in Nassau in 1986, in London in August, 1986, and in Zambia, Senegal, Zimbabwe in 1987 and in October, 1987, the Prime Minister made the same promise.

Is the Prime Minister going to discredit this country and cause disillusionment among those who gave him a standing applause in the United Nations, and those people in Toronto and Montreal who represent a large portion of the population who are concerned about this? Is he going to disappoint them at the United Nations on September 29? Is he going to keep his promise now? Or are we going to hear more bs on the subject?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I didn't mean to excite quite that reaction.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): The position of the New Democratic Party, as I understand it, is to want to bring an end to economic relations but to maintain, at least for the time being, some form of diplomatic relations. If that is not the case, I would like to have it.

Mr. McCurdy: That is the case. Now, answer the question.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): That is the case. All right. I was not sure and I am pleased to have the assurance of the Hon. Member.

Mr. McCurdy: We want your assurance.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Will the Prime Minister of Canada discredit Canada or disappoint those who fight apartheid when he goes to the United Nations? No, of course, he will not. Indeed, what this Prime Minister of Canada has done consistently on the question of South Africa does not only bring credit to Canadians, does not only excite pride among Canadians, but allows us to play a constructive role in trying to bring an end to a system that we all in this House regard as repugnant. He intends, and we intend, to continue on that course.

PUBLIC SERVICE

REQUEST THAT MINISTER MEET WITH UNIONS

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister.

Five months ago when she was appointed President of the Treasury Board, the Minister was approached by the unions to discuss the complaints and problems of federal public servants. The Minister has systematically refused to meet the leaders of the Public Service unions.

I wanted to ask the Minister, following letters sent by the Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada, and I am referring to what Mrs. Craig said, and I quote: " . . . the President of the Treasury Board be available so that we can at least discuss our concerns and so that she can consider our representations . . . "

Since the Minister did not meet a single union leader and since today, 60 bargaining sessions are going on and 180,000 public servants are very concerned, could the Minister give me the assurance that the Minister will be here in the House next week so that we can ask some questions? She has been away since May! Will we see her in the House and be able to ask her some questions?

[English]

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister, President of the Privy Council and Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is categorically wrong. I personally met with Iris Craig when I was President of the Treasury Board.

AVAILABILITY OF MINISTER

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Yes, that is true, Mr. Speaker, but since he left, the Minister responsible has not, and that is the point I am trying to make. There are 180,000 public servants at this time represented by the Alliance, by PIPS and other associations which would love to meet the Minister and discuss the problems with her. Why has she not been available to these unions? Why is she not in the House? And why is it the Prime Minister lets two good Ministers go without a peep and won't let go of that one who has done nothing for us?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister, President of the Privy Council and Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, there is a clear collective bargaining process in place. There is a clear process established and I know the Hon. Member understands that. I will certainly take his question as a representation but my understanding is that there has been progress and movement.

What the Hon. Member has to be reminded of is that there was an agreement in principle that was negotiated by the previous President of the Treasury Board, the Minister now in charge of Science and Technology and Industry. What is really happening here is the unions wanting to renegotiate an agreement which was put together in good faith. Quite frankly, that is part of the problem. I will certainly, as I said, take the Hon. Member's question as a representation and get back to him.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

PRESERVATION OF ROUGE VALLEY AS NATURAL HERITAGE PARK

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to whomever may be answering for the Minister of the Environment. It involves the announcement of the Minister of the Environment yesterday in Toronto that the Government would provide some $10 million for a natural heritage park in the Rouge River Valley in Toronto.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Redway: Can the Minister advise the House if it is the Government's intention that that money be used to establish a national park, a provincial park, or a municipal park? And are there any conditions attached to that offer which would ensure that no part of the Rouge River Valley would be used as a garbage dump?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Minister of the Environment I am pleased to respond. I am pleased this Government, under the leadership of the Prime Minister and the sensitivity of the Minister of the Environment, was able to make a $10 million offer yesterday to protect the Rouge Valley in Toronto. It is one of the few wilderness areas in a major urban centre. I know the Hon. Member, not only in his present role as a Member of Parliament, but also as a mayor from that area, has been very concerned about this.

In terms of the $10 million, it is not to be used for a national park but rather as an offer by the federal Government in order that the area can be protected and can be used as a public space, the details of which will then be worked out between the various Governments involved.

CLARIFICATION OF ANSWER

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, during Question Period, I was asked by the Hon. Member a question with respect to changes to the Unemployment Insurance Act.

I do not want to mislead him or the House in any way. The legislation that has been tabled is legislation respecting the variable entrance rate. The variable entrance rate, obviously, is affected in terms of eligibility respecting economic regions—I am getting technical now—relating to the Unemployment Insurance Act. I believe the Hon. Member—and I have had a private discussion with him—thought I was responding to changes in economic regions rather than to the variable entrance requirement. I was responding to the variable entrance requirement and not the changes in economic regions in which there has not been any cabinet authority.

I did not want to mislead the Member or the House and I thank you, Mr. Speaker, for being able to make that correction. I know it will not be a satisfactory answer to the Member but at least it is the right answer.

[Translation]

Mr. Robichaud: Mr. Speaker, on the same point of order, I thank the Minister for correcting what he told me, because I was quite happy for the workers in my area. I hope that the Minister and the Government will look favourably on the problem that affects all working people in southern New Brunswick.

[English]

ALLEGED REMARKS DURING QUESTION PERIOD

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, during my question this afternoon in the House, I thought I heard the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) accuse me of lying. I believe that is a very unparliamentary word and I would ask him to withdraw. If he does not, I will check the "blues" and raise this as a question of privilege later.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, as you know, the rule in this House relates to descriptions that might be made of conduct in this House. I believe what I said accurately describes what the Hon. Member and members of her Party are doing outside this House with respect to the Polar 8 contract. However, as is my custom, if what I said has contributed to any disorder in the House, I will certainly withdraw.

REQUEST FOR UNIVERSALITY OF DAY CARE PROGRAMS

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I have petitions from London, Ont., Toronto and Ottawa.

[English]

They state humbly that families throughout Canada need high quality available and affordable child care services. They say that it has been repeatedly recommended that to make these services available for families the Government of Canada must introduce legislation containing national objectives and appropriate mechanisms for the development of a comprehensive, non-profit child care system accessible to all families throughout Canada.

The petitioners say that the child care Act proposed by the Government of Canada contains neither national objectives nor necessary funding arrangements and will not ensure that families have access to high quality child care, and that the proposed child care Act is not in the best interests of young children, women, and families in Canada. They therefore call upon Parliament to withdraw the child care Act.

PROPOSED CANADA CHILD CARE ACT

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition to the House from a number of petitioners from Vancouver, British Columbia. They are very concerned in British Columbia about the child care Act. They believe that services are very much needed across Canada with national objectives and appropriate methods of financing to develop a comprehensive, non-profit child care system which is accessible to all families throughout Canada.

The Government has not done this in its child care Act and will not ensure either national objectives or the necessary funding. The petitioners therefore call upon the Government to withdraw the child care Act forthwith.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by a number of Canadians who indicate that families throughout Canada need high quality, available, affordable child care services. They say that it has been repeatedly recommended that in order to make these services available for families the Government of Canada must introduce legislation containing national objectives and appropriate mechanisms for the development of a comprehensive, non-profit child care system accessible to all families throughout Canada.

They say that the child care Act proposed by the Government of Canada contains neither national objectives nor necessary funding arrangements and will not ensure that families have access to high quality day care. They say, therefore, that the proposed child care Act is not in the best interests of young children, women, or families in Canada.

ALASKA HIGHWAY

Ms. Audrey McLaughlin (Yukon): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and duty to present petitions from over 200 petitioners who call upon the Government to recognize the important transportation link for the territory, that is, the Alaska Highway which has been undermined seriously by floods and general poor condition owing to a lack of funds and a cut in funds by over 42 per cent in the last five years.

These petitioners call upon the Parliament of Canada to improve the condition of this international highway immediately and to take all measures necessary to ensure that this vital link to the territory of the Yukon remains usable and is recognized as the important link that it is in Canada.

BELCARRA BAY HARBOUR

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition from the residents of Belcarra, British Columbia. The area of Belcarra Bay has been used for water-skiing for 20 years. Due to changes, which we think are linked to Expo '86, the harbour police have started to enforce the five-knot speed restriction so that residents and their kids cannot water-ski.

This is to the surprise of local residents. The people of Belcarra have been fighting since 1986 to have the by-law rescinded. They have the support of the Greater Vancouver Regional District Parks Department and the Belcarra City Council.

They pray that the Vancouver Port Corporation and the Department of Transport rescind this ridiculous by-law which is really just an example of bureaucratic ineptitude. It should be rescinded and there should be no speed limit in that particular part of the harbour.

PROPOSED CANADA CHILD CARE ACT

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, I have the privilege and duty today to present three petitions to this honourable House, all certified in accordance with Standing Order 106.

The first petition is signed by residents of the Province of Ontario. These residents protest the Government's child care Act, Bill C-144. They believe that it is not in the best interests of the children, women, and young families of Canada. They call for the withdrawal of that child care Act and for its replacement with a Bill which would truly meet those needs.

NORTHERN TAX ALLOWANCE

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, the second petition I have is signed by residents of the communities of Keewatin, Kenora, and Dryden in my riding. These residents call upon the Government to extend the benefits of the northern residents tax allowance to all communities which lie within the vast expanses of those ridings designated under the House of Commons system as being tier 3.

PROPOSED CANADA CHILD CARE ACT

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, the third petition I have concerns the Government's proposed child care Act and calls upon the Government to withdraw it forthwith.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I was in the process of trying to count the number of names on this petition but they are innumerable.

I rise to speak on behalf of several hundred petitioners who bring to the attention of the House of Commons that the proposed child care Act is not in the interests of young children, women, or families in Canada, that it limits spending on child care, funds the commercial sector, includes no national objectives, sets no criteria for spending or service delivery, restricts the development of services, encourages the development of poor quality commercial care; and that it does nothing to make child care more affordable for parents.

Therefore, the undersigned petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to withdraw the child care Act forthwith. This petition is signed by citizens from across the country.

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: 394 and 406.

[Text]

PRINCIPAL SAVINGS AND TRUST

Question No. 394—Mr. Riis:

1. In 1987, was Principal Savings and Trust in serious financial difficulties and, if so, did the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation (CDIC) become aware of this and, if so, on what date?

2. Did Principal Savings and Trust sell real estate and mortgages worth $23,000,000 to First Investors Corporation (FIC) and Associated Investors of Canada (AIC) and, if so, were these assets substantially overvalued and, if so, was the CDIC aware of this?

3. Were all of the mortgages involved either in default or foreclosed on and, if so, was the CDIC aware of this?

4. Did Alberta's Superintendant of Insurance register a strong objection to the transaction and, if so, what was the approximate loss?

5. Did the sale of these assets to FIC and AIC result in a net loss to either of these two corporations and, if so, what was the approximate loss?

6. Was the sale of the assets to FIC and AIC carried out as a result of the influence of the CDIC on Principal Savings and Trust?

7. Did the CDIC insist on establishing a contingent liability fund of $6,300,000 as part of the asset sale and, if so, for what reasons?

Speaker's Ruling

8. Did Principal Savings and Trust improve its financial situation by removing any other assets from either FIC or AIC and, if so, what were the circumstances surrounding these transactions?

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)): 1. This matter is currently before the courts. In addition, release of such information is constrained by Section 40.2 of the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation Act.

2. For the reasons outlined above information regarding this question is not available.

3. to 8. See No. 2 above.

DIAND—CENTRALIZED DISTRICT OFFICES

Question No. 406—Mr. Parry:

Did the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development examine the additional travel and salary costs that Indian Bands must now bear as a result of centralizing district offices in centres farther away from Indian communities and, if so, are funds provided to Bands for such purposes?

Hon. Bill McKnight (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development and Minister of Western Economic Diversification): The distance between bands and departmental offices is not a criterion in current funding formulae, however compensation is made on the basis of the relative isolation of each band from regional business centres.

As bands develop increased capacity to manage their own affairs it is expected that their need to consult with departmental officials on a regular basis will decrease.

GOVERNMENT SUPPLY PROGRAMS

Question No. 396—Mrs. Sparrow:

For each fiscal year from 1980-81 to 1983-84, was there any business done in the constituency of Calgary South that arose out of government supply programs and, if so, what was the volume of this business?

Return tabled.

GRANTS WITHIN METROPOLITAN TORONTO AREA

Question No. 398—Mr. Redway:

Since September 4, 1984, did the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation make grants and/or loans to persons or corporations, non-governmental organizations and governments within Metropolitan Toronto and, if so, to which ones and, in each case, in what amount and for what purpose?

Return tabled.

SPEAKER'S RULING—REPORT STAGE MOTIONS

Mr. Speaker: Before proceeding to Government Orders I thought it might be helpful to Hon. Members if I gave the ruling on the motions relating to Bill C-136. There are 91 Notices of Motions in amendment on the Order Paper for the report stage of Bill C-136, an Act respecting broadcasting and to amend certain Acts in relation thereto and in relation to radiocommunication. I am now ready to complete my ruling.

[Translation]

Motion Nos. 1, 1A, 2, 3, 4, 5, 9 and 12 have been debated together with a division deferred on Motion numbered 1. The result of that division will be applied to the other motions in this group.

[English]

Motion Nos. 6, 10, 11, 11A, and 11B, standing in the names of the Hon. Members for York East, Mount Royal, Beaches, and Winnipeg North, attempt to insert substantive amendments by way of modifications to the interpretation clause. In this regard I will not select these motions as they are contrary to our practices as enunciated by Beauchesne's at paragraph 10 of Citation 773.

[Translation]

Motion Nos. 7 and 8 have been debated separately and separate divisions have been deferred.

• (1220)

This next grouping has caused the Chair and certainly some Members considerable concern. After much deliberation and helpful assistance from the Hon. Members for Mount Royal and Vancouver—Kingsway, I have decided to group these many motions on Clause 3 as follows:

(1) Motions Nos. 14, 15, 17 to 23, 48, 55, and 74 which concern general broadcast policy will be grouped for debate.

Motions Nos. 14, 15, 17, 18, 19, 21, 22, 23, 48, 55, and 74 will be voted on separately. An affirmative vote on Motion No. 19 obviates the need for a vote on Motion No. 22. However, a negative vote on Motion No. 19 necessitates a vote on Motion No. 20;

(2) Motions Nos. 25, 27, 29, and 30 concerning the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation will be grouped for debate and will be voted on separately;

(3) Motions Nos. 32 to 41 and 43 concerning alternative and other programming will be grouped for debate. There will be separate votes on Motions Nos. 32, 33, 35 to 39, 41, and 43. An affirmative vote on Motion No. 35 will obviate the need for a vote on Motion No. 34. However, a negative vote on Motion No. 35 necessitates a vote on Motion No. 34.

An affirmative vote on Motion No. 41 obviates the need for a vote on Motion No. 40. However, a negative vote on Motion No. 41 necessitates a vote on Motion No. 40.

Motions numbered 13, 24, 26, 62 and 78 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) were considered in the Legislative Committee. As a consequence they will not be selected, pursuant to paragraph 10 of Standing Order 114.

Motion numbered 15A standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) is similar to motion numbered 15 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) and therefore Motion numbered 15A will not be selected.

[English]

Motions Nos. 16, 51, and 65 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway are similar to Motions Nos. 14, 50, and 64 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal. Thus, the motions of the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway will not be selected.

Motion No. 28 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for York East is similar to Motion No. 27 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway and therefore Motion No. 28 will not be selected.

Motions numbered 31, 42, 72 and 77 were debated together. A division on Motion numbered 31 has been deferred. Motion numbered 42 carried and Motions numbered 72 and 77 were negatived on division.

[English]

Motion No. 31A standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway is identical to Motion No. 31 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for York East and therefore Motion No. 31A will not be selected.

Motions numbered 44, 45, 46, 47 and 50 are acceptable and will be grouped for debate but voted upon separately.

[English]

Motions Nos. 49, 56, 67, and 68 are in order and will be debated together but voted upon separately.

Motions numbered 49A and 57A will be debated together but voted upon separately.

[English]

Motion No. 52 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for York East causes the Chair some procedural difficulty. The Hon. Member is attempting to change the scope of the clause substantially and possibly the Royal Recommendation when he proposes to alter the methods of procedure to be used by the Governor in Council set out in this clause. Therefore, in accordance with paragraph 1 of Citation 773 of Beauchesne, I must rule Motion No. 52 out of order.

Motions numbered 53, 54, 58, 59, 60 and 69 are in order and will be debated together but voted upon separately.

[English]

Motions Nos. 57 and 61 are admissible and will be debated together but voted upon separately.

Motions numbered 54A, 63, 64 and 66 are in order and will be debated together and voted upon separately.

Motion numbered 70 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) is similar to an amendment moved and debated in the Legislative Committee and therefore, the motion will not the selected.

[English]

Motions Nos. 71, 73, and 76 are acceptable and will be debated together but there will be a separate vote on Motion No. 71. The vote on Motion No. 73 will apply to Motion No. 76.

[Translation]

Motions numbered 72A and 73A standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) cause some procedural difficulty in that they are attempting to change the roles of the Chairman and President of the CBC in a manner that is not consistent with the principle of the Bill as agreed to by the House at second reading. Thus, in accordance with Beauchesne's paragraph (1) of citation 773, I must rule these motions out of order.

Motion No. 75 is in order and will be debated and voted upon separately.

Motion No. 79 is admissible and will be debated and voted upon separately.

I should comment that Hon. Members and the public watching will know that, again, there is great interest in the legislation that is in front of the Chamber and it has resulted, as one can expect, in a great many amendments.

I want to thank Hon. Members and members of the table staff for having worked long and diligently in order to assist me to make the rulings I have just read.

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-144, an Act to authorize payments by Canada toward the provision of child care services, and to amend the Canada Assistance Plan in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee; and the amendments of Ms. Mitchell (p. 19310).

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): When I left the chair the Hon. Member for Skeena had two minutes remaining. Since he is not in the House, I will recognize the Hon. Member for Yukon.

Ms. Audrey McLaughlin (Yukon): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to speak to this amendment because I believe it is one of the most useful amendments to this legislation. I want to use some examples to illustrate why I support the amendment very heartily since there must be a transition stage for the implementation of any new child care legislation.

Many of us believe that this particular legislation is so flawed that there is not much that can redeem it. However, I am pleased to speak to the proposed amendment that at least the Canada Assistance Plan be kept in effect during a transition period as we go into a new and hopefully improved child care Bill other than what is being proposed here.

The example that I think best illustrates why this is so necessary is the state today of child care services in the North, particularly for aboriginal people. Northern Canada is largely rural and therefore the child care services have been greatly underdeveloped. The problems in urban areas often relate to a lack of space, an extremely serious issue which this Bill does not address adequately. In rural areas there is simply no child care services available at all and virtually no resources in order to institute any child care.

What is needed in most of the rural areas is not just the funding that would be available under the Canada Assistance Plan or even under the proposed child care plan, but assistance to develop and institute child care services that are both culturally appropriate and appropriate to the general lifestyles of the community.

The Inuit Women's Association, Pauktuutit, has given a very good submission to the committee. I think it underscores the problems that one sees in the North and in particular with aboriginal communities. The Inuit Women's Association points out quite well the need for culturally appropriate child care services. As you know, Mr. Speaker, the concern with child welfare services generally by aboriginal first nations has been one of very major paramountcy in discussions between the provinces and the territories and the federal Government, as well as within the communities themselves.

The history of child care services and child welfare services throughout Canada with first nations has proven to be an abysmally sad and abysmally ineffective one. Therefore we do not want to see that in instituting a national child care program those lessons from the past are not taken into account.

The Inuit Women's Association points out the need for culturally appropriate child care services. It is quite unclear whether in this proposed Bill there is enough flexibility to accommodate the kind of comprehensive community-based child care that would probably deviate from many of the southern models in order to meet the needs of those particular communities. This particular issue underscores the need for both a transition period through CAP and for rethinking of a number of the clauses of this Bill.

A second issue which very much underscores concerns with this Bill has been raised in particular by the Yukon Child Care Association. At the moment it is made up of a number of commercial operators. They have been adamant as an association that child care must not be a commercial venture, that it must be non-profit. As an association it supports this principle.

When looking at northern services or aboriginal services, the Inuit association again underscores the point that the profit-making commercial centres to which much of the child care Bill is directed to support meet the needs in the North but will not meet the needs of aboriginal communities. Child care standards, trained staff, and so on are extremely difficult in the Yukon, the Northwest Territories, and I am sure in many of the northern parts of the provinces. If this is a problem in the South we certainly see that it is exemplified 10 times in the North.

This child care Bill which puts such a strong focus on commercial operations will not in our view in any way meet the needs of the North. Obviously, if commercial operations would have been viable they would be operating now in many of the remote and isolated communities. Clearly, that is not cost effective for them. However, the children in those spaces are no less important. They will run the communities in the future. They are just as important.

Another issue I would like to address in relation to this amendment concerns the question of training. This is a particular problem for us in the North. It is a particular problem in developing the kind of training programs which, as I said earlier, are culturally relevant and which meet some of the special needs of northern communities. I give as an example the fact that many aboriginal people whom I know in small communities throughout the territories are eager to seek retraining and upgrading of their skills. Very often the problem is that there is simply no child care available for them. There is no way for them to take the courses which may be available in order to provide a better standard of living for their families. Therefore they are forced to remain in the condition they are in even though they are being told by other Departments of the Government that these programs are available, that they want to see people upgrade their skills, that there are opportunities and jobs out there. At the same time they are being limited because there is simply no child care available and no provision for them to receive it.

Introducing a Bill such as this will have particularly serious repercussions for many of the rural communities across the country, in particular northern and more remote communities. This is why national standards are so important to those of us in the North. We know that with the small population base we are not often in a position to provide the numbers which count for commercial viability. Therefore non-profit centres and national standards which include provisions for well trained staff, both in terms of cultural relevancy as well as in terms of child care methods more appropriate to the dominant population, are things that we look to in a child care Bill to ensure that all the children in our North receive the care that we expect in southern Canada which will enable them to be the citizens of the North that we feel that they can and will be.

The Inuit Women's Association petition in many ways simply reflected many areas of concern that other groups have. It exemplifies the very basic rationale for the amendment which is before us now.

Therefore I strongly urge that this amendment be supported by all Members of the House. If we are to have a national child care Act which truly meets the objectives of caring for the children of the country, then it is important to ensure that nothing is lost in the interim through having the Canada Assistance Plan terminate before a full-fledged national program is in operation.

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that it is important for the House and for our country that we correct some of the comments that have been placed on the record today and yesterday by members of the Opposition concerning this Bill. The Bill before us is a national child care Bill. It is aimed at doubling the number of subsidized day care spaces in the country over the next seven years. It has been implied and statements have been made many times that in some way, shape, or form this Bill will actually reduce the number of potential day care spaces that will be provided in the country.

It is important that we bear in mind the distinction and the definitions of what we are talking about here. There is something in the day care industry called licensed day care spaces. As well, there is something called subsidized day care spaces. They are not exactly the same thing. There may be all sorts of children in day care and there may be all sorts of spaces for them as long as their families can afford to pay for the complete cost of that care. However, those spaces will be provided and there will be no subsidy provided for them, whether it be by the federal Government under the Canada Assistance Program or whether it be by the provincial Governments.

The spaces that we are really talking about here are the subsidized spaces. If we look to the situation in 1987, for instance, I am told that across the country there were some 243,545 licensed day care spaces. Of those about 180,000 were subsidized. Under the present provisions of the Canada Assistance Program there is no definition of what a subsidy is supposed to be, and therefore the subsidies could vary. Technically they could vary, I suppose, from a cent a day up to an enormous amount.

I am also advised that the subsidies vary substantially from province to province. Because there is no standard definition when we talk about 180,000 subsidized day care spaces in Canada at the present time, we are including in that figure spaces which are subsidized by provincial Governments in amounts as low as 38 cents a day, some as low as 50 cents a day, and some as low as $1 a day.

This Bill provides a standard definition for subsidized spaces that will require a subsidized space to provide at least a bear minimum subsidy of $2 a day. We are making a very significant change in the whole definition, in the whole concept of subsidized day care. I hear the Opposition talk about this business of not providing for those who are needy, for those who need assistance and help. In fact this legislation is doing just that; it is providing a much higher level of subsidization and guaranteeing a much higher level of subsidization for those people than is available now under the Canada Assistance Plan where this no minimum subsidization definition. That in itself is a very substantial step forward.

The other criticism I hear is of private day care centres or so-called commercial day care centres. There seems to be an impression that there is something sinister, vicious, and wrong with a private or a commercial day care centre. In fact, they have existed in Canada for a long, long time. Not only have they existed in Canada for a long, long time, they provide subsidized spaces. Many of the spaces in those commercial centres, in those private day care centres, are subsidized.

An Hon. Member: Oh, oh!

Mr. Redway: If the Hon. Member will listen to me for a minute, I will tell her that within my own block where I personally live in the City of Toronto there is a privately owned day care centre. There are subsidized spaces in it and it has been there for years. There are many, many more in my own neighbourhood.

Ms. Mitchell: Read the studies.

Mr. Redway: Of the 243,545 licensed day care spaces in Canada in 1987, some 90,386 were in so-called commercial centres or private centres. Of those 90,386, 54,000 of them or 60 per cent were subsidized spaces. This is not something new that is suddenly coming on the scene. The Government is not creating some sort of sinister plot to destroy day care and to destroy the whole system or to change things in a cruel and vicious manner. This is just carrying on the system that has been there for years and years.

If we listen to the comments of the Opposition and what they are suggesting and take them to their logical conclusion that somehow or other we have to wipe out those 90,386 private spaces, wipe out the 54,000 subsidized spaces in those private centres, and start from scratch with non-profit ones, it does not make any sense at all. If what we are interested in is providing day care for families that need it, then there is no point in wiping out what is there and having to replace it with something else. We should all bear these points in mind when we are dealing with this Bill.

Finally, I think that we should bear in mind that there is no provision for capital funding whatsoever under the Canada Assistance Plan. There is in this Bill—and it is one of the big improvements provided by this Bill and by this national child care legislative package—capital funding to allow more day care centres to be built, to allow them to provide extra spaces than there are now, and to provide extra subsidized spaces than there are now. That is what we are talking about, in fact doubling those numbers of subsidized spaces. That is the important and significant. That is why this Bill is so important to our country, as far as I am concerned. It is important to Canadians.

Thousands and thousands of people need day care. They cannot afford to pay for the whole thing themselves. They need some assistance and help if they are going to be working. Many, many single mothers, single parents, if they are going to be working and off the welfare and social assistance rolls, need some sort of subsidized day care space to allow them to do that. I think it is in the national interest to make sure that everybody who wants to work and does not want to be on social assistance has that opportunity. This legislation is geared to that very thing.

Most definitely, the impression that the Opposition has been leaving is that it will not meet that need. In fact, in the next seven years this legislation will double the number of subsidized day care spaces in Canada, and that is something for which the Government and the Minister should be commended.

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, in addressing this amendment which seeks to prolong the assistance from the Canada Assistance Plan to Canada's day care consumers, I believe that I should start by paying tribute to the efforts of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell), who has been our Party's chief spokesperson on the matter of day care.

I am glad to see that there is a minimal level of consensus in the House on the need for a national day care program for Canada. I, of course, must support my Party's program, which I see as being far better in addressing the real needs inherent in day care situations than the program that the Government has put before us.

The Government first became involved in day care through the operations of the Canada Assistance Plan, and I believe that it is inappropriate at this time for that involvement to be discontinued. That, of course, is by way of subsidies for the children of parents who were receiving social assistance to enable them to attend day care while their parents were seeking work or simply taking care of other major family responsibilities. That help for low-income parents enabled many children to have their start in day care in all parts of Canada, and I believe that it is significant that we now have an amendment to continue that participation.

If there is not a transition period for the continuation of Canada Assistance Plan funding, a risk exists that some children might not receive the day care services that they require and otherwise would receive.

We believe that day care has to be universally accessible without regard to the income levels of the parents, and this is one way in which that assurance could be given to those people who are receiving social assistance.

The present program as laid down by the Government in fact implicitly acknowledges that the demand for day care in Canada will continue to outstrip the supply and that indeed the gap between the demand for day care services and the availability of day care spaces will even widen, in terms of absolute numbers, if this amendment is not adopted and the Canada Assistance Plan funding continued.

For this country to fall behind the growth in demand for day care services, in spite of a child care Act and a supposed national program, would be an insult and a disservice to those parents who are seeking day care for their children in this day and age.

We in our Party believe that day care should be provided on a not for profit basis, notwithstanding the remarks of the previous speaker. Indeed, I would hearken back to the remarks of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Yukon (Ms. McLaughlin), in instancing the wide support is even among commercial day care operators for a not for profit situation.

I was not personally at the hearing concerned, but I was struck by the submission that was made by the Assembly of First Nations to the committee on Bill C-144. The Assembly of First Nations has correctly identified a problem that is not simply a problem of jurisdiction but one that has very far-reaching implications for the first nations and for their Governments at the band level in Canada.

It would be a sad day for this country if in, instituting a national day care program, purportedly anyway, this Government did not make the appropriate adjustments to ensure that first nations have full control within the federal guidelines, and hopefully the national standards which we would like to see instituted, over the delivery of day care programs to their first nations' citizens in their first nations' communities.

To place apparently unthinkingly, or without adequate consideration, the first nations of this country under provincial jurisdiction in the matter of day care programs would run completely counter to the self-government trend, and the development of self-government which has been occurring in aboriginal communities across the country and which has been, ostensibly at least, supported by all three Parties represented in the House. Therefore, I would charge the Government to ensure that no such derogation from the rights of first nations' communities to determine the framework under which these services are delivered should be accomplished by this legislation.

Aboriginal communities are of course among those which would be most severely affected by the withdrawal of Canada Assistance Plan funding because of the slender income base of many of those communities. I think of the communities, for example, of Whitefish Bay and Shoal Lake in my own riding with successful day care programs in operation that are facing certain needs. Certain resources have to be provided if those programs are to continue to succeed. Where will they be if this withdrawal of Canada Assistance Plan funding goes through.

Another question brought before the committee, which I think is certainly worthy of consideration and requires careful attention in the addressing, is the matter of training for those who serve in day care centres. Child care has become a feminized profession, and unfortunately it has joined other feminized professions in exhibiting the characteristics of underpayment of the workers, the caregivers within the profession. That is something that I would have liked to have seen addressed in the legislation because it is a fundamental equity issue between persons of the female gender and persons of the male gender that has not been adequately addressed by the Government. We certainly would hope to see it addressed much more forcefully by the next Government.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, last night I had the privilege of taking part in a program on CHOT to discuss the issue of day care and its potential impact on the election campaign. Mr. Speaker, I assume that during the coming election campaign, all Parties will put before the Canadian public their respective programs for setting up day care centres and providing for child care services. Mr. Speaker, I suggest we let the election campaign be the forum for the debate on major issues, including child care services.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski) Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), a recorded division on the motion stands deferred.

Motion No. 38 has been moved and seconded. On Debate, the Hon. Member for Vancouver East.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, this is our last amendment that has been accepted for debate, although there are many others that we presented in a sincere attempt to find some way to improve this Bill since the Minister is determined to go ahead with it. Unfortunately, this Minister has refused almost all amendments except very minor ones.

This particular amendment relates to the Canada Assistance Plan. I would like to say that we have tried through three different amendments to deal with this problem. Through amendments we tried to get the Canada Assistance Plan retained for families in need, or those likely to be in need, for head start programs, and many of the services that are for low-income families now funded or those under the Canada Assistance Plan. We knew the Minister was balking at that, as is his want. We presented another amendment which would at least have kept children with special needs and disabled children under Canada Assistance Plan to ensure that those children have the type of spaces necessary, and that there is opportunity for them to have the subsidies needed to get into child care services.

It costs a lot for children who are disabled because there has to be special facilities. There should have been a top up per space that the Minister had in his funding formula to allow day care centres to have a certain number of spaces for disabled children in order that all centres would be accessible. This is a requirement under our Charter of Rights. The Minister has made no provision in this Bill to focus on and target the needs of disabled children. There should also have been money to pay so much extra per space for the extra costs for staff. Children with special needs need more attention, often one-on-one care. They should be integrated with other children in a day care centre.

When we had our special committee on child care we heard from witnesses that they did not want handicapped children to be isolated. It is very important that those children have a chance to develop normally. It is important for the other children to see there are members of our society who are disabled in one way or another. Many of us are disabled in other respects. We wanted to ensure that there was going to be a place for them in good quality child care services that their parents could afford in order that they could grow and develop in their pre-school years and have the socialization and stimulating intellectual experiences that would help to prepare them for school and to go on to make a success of their lives.

I am very sorry to say that this Minister refused to consider any mechanism within his funding policies and procedures to protect spaces for disabled children and for children with special needs. Many of the witnesses, in fact most, who appeared before the legislative committee said they wanted the Canada Assistance Plan operating here to be sure of protection for lower-income families and the programs and services parents and children need.

We talk about a child care Act. When the committee met we, including government Members, talked about families. We wanted child care programs to meet the needs of mothers and fathers as well as children. This Bill does not allow funding for programs like the Mom and Tot program which the YWCA sponsors. That is classified as a recreation program and this Bill excludes it. Yet those kinds of programs are very important for mothers at home so they can get out for some relief, some fun, to talk to other adults, and of course so their children can have a pre-school experience. A similar kind of service is needed for immigrant women and their children to orientate themselves to Canada, to practise the language and get out in the community as well as to provide good child care.

This motion, then, is very similar to the last one. It would amend the Act to allow CAP to be used by provinces and protect primarily low income families while the new Act is established. The new Act would then provide capital funding and should certainly provide operating costs directly to day care centres and other child care services. They could then pay decent wages to their staff and reduce their fees to make the service affordable. The Minister talks about affordability in his preamble even though he would not agree to state that as an objective in the Act. Yet there is no way this Bill really will guarantee affordable child care. It just entrenches the present system of unaffordable child care and poor quality child care across the country.

By keeping CAP in place there will be protection for low income families because the funding is continuous. It is not capped at the end of seven years. It would allow the other spaces to be used for average families and any child that needs it, and there would not have to be a competition for spaces. We are afraid that in our provinces most of the available spaces—there are few of them and they are of poor quality—could be used just for kids with special needs if the funding was such as to allow it. Yet there are other children, of course, that should be covered under general funding to day care centres. The Minister is here today and we ask him to accept this amendment so that CAP funding will be available while there is a phase-in of the new Act.

I would also like to point out that there are certain programs that can be covered under CAP which are very important. We should have them in every community. I am talking about Head Start, for example. That program was initiated in the U.S. and research has shown that as a result of very intensive enrichment programs for children who are quite seriously disadvantaged, most of them poor, it is possible to help them prepare for school and give them the kind of language skills they need to obtain more cultural enrichment programs. They can get the kind of individual attention and growth they need in order to be prepared for kindergarten and so on. This is vital. If they do not get it, they will be the drop-outs, they will grow into illiterate adults, and we know what a serious concern that is today.

We heard from researchers who looked at Head Start programs. They found that children who had been through those programs had a much lower incidence of delinquency when they became adolescents. There were fewer teen-age pregnancies and a higher participation in school because of fewer drop-outs. The Minister is depriving communities of that by this plan and by not protecting funding for special programs for disadvantaged children.

Again, we have to really look at this Bill in the context of the needs of children across this country. We heard over and over again about children in every part of Canada who are in risky situations. The mother has to go to work and she does not have day care available in her community, or the fees are so high that she cannot afford it. All she can do is hope to heck she can find a baby-sitter, often someone she does not know, whom she can afford so she can go to work. Then she goes to work and worries about it all day long. This is not an unusual situation. It is particularly common for parents who have an infant child because there is no licensed, good quality care for under three-year-olds in almost every community, certainly not in my riding of Vancouver East. This is a constant complaint. It costs more for infant and toddler care, and it has to be good care.

We are also concerned about parents who have special needs. They want to be sure their children are cared for in a good centre. We are concerned also about the fathers who so often want to exercise their responsibility. Younger fathers are taking a greater share of the parenting and they want parental leave to do this. They will of course be just as worried as the mothers that their children are not in good care during the day simply because it is not available and not affordable.

I repeat, this Bill will not ensure accessible, affordable, quality child care in any one of our ridings across this country. It will not do that even though the Minister keeps trying to tell us that it will. This is not a national program. It has no objectives. It entrenches the present patchwork of low quality child care and commercial child care. There are too few spaces, only 200,000 for two million kids whose parents are working. Not all of them will need care, of course, but many of them will.

The program is very restrictive. It limits the expansion of child care to meet real needs. Capital funding will be finished after seven years. It will be grandfathered after seven years. I think the Minister should be grandfathered. He should be ashamed to be the Minister of National Health and Welfare with this kind of program. The women of Canada are not going to forget. They are aware of what is going on and we will make sure they are aware. The Minister has this last chance to improve the Bill by agreeing to this amendment, and I appeal to him again to do so.

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the motion presented by the Hon. Member for the New Democratic Party. We have said repeatedly during the last few days that more than one million children do not have access to day care. We know that one child out of five is poor in this country, that 45 per cent of couples with children both have to work because they would otherwise live under the poverty line, and we know that the majority of single-parent families headed by women live below that line. When we look at this picture, we realize that we are faced with a major social problem. When the Minister says that families have a choice, it is clear he is not looking at the situation in 1988 and 1990, because families do not have a choice. Most families live below the poverty line. In this Bill we see that children from low and middle-income families have very little protection except for one amendment we managed to get through. However, the Bill does not address this particular group, and it is clear that today, a Bill as important as this one on child care must provide spaces for the groups that need them most, the children from low and middle-income families.

Of course the CAP program used to protect these children. In fact, one of the reasons why we support the recommendation that this program should be continued under the new legislation as well, is that we now have a ceiling. The number of spaces is set. If we add the CAP program, it would focus specifically on these children and it would be a way of getting more spaces in the program.

Of course when we take a closer look at Bill C-144, we see it falls short in many respects. And speaking of lower and middle-income families and poor children, there was a week-long series of articles in La Presse on a study of the declining birth rate in Quebec. It appears that one of the causes is of course the cost of living but also the fact that women work. In fact, our recommendations included family support programs, one of which would provide for parental leave, not just maternity leave but parental leave. The Government ignored every single recommendation. It did not even propose an amendment to extend maternity leave from 16 to 26 weeks. Sixteen weeks is just not enough. That recommendation was made by all Royal commissions and all parliamentary committees, starting with the Royal Commission on the Status of Women in the seventies. The Bill contains nothing in this respect.

This Government always says we must do everything to help families, and that during the past four years it has passed legislation that might boost the birthrate, but if we look at paternity and maternity leave, they are not mentioned in the Bill. We discussed day care centres, including day care in the work place. Here again, not a trace in the Bill. If parents are to have a choice, they should have day-care available in the work place as well. Consider the problem of absenteeism. And it would be so much easier to get fathers involved, because we all know that bringing up children, although there have been some changes in recent years, is mainly the mother's responsibility. Here, fathers could at least be involved by bringing the children and picking them up. Companies could be given incentives such as tax rebates to provide this service. However, nothing of the kind was suggested by the Government.

We talked about special leave. We recommended special leave for parents. I think it is important to have a certain number of days a year, for when the children are sick and someone has to stay home to look after them. There is no mention of that either. It is clear that in addition to helping families, if these recommendations had been followed up in the legislation, they would also have helped to boost the birth rate in this country. It is all very well to tell couples to have more children, but there is more involved than that.

Mr. Speaker, parents are not involved in day care, but they still have a role to play. We know that even private schools and colleges have a board made up of parents who participate, who want to know the kind of services offered, the kind of education their children are receiving. But now, in day care centres, the children do not have a say, they are too young and the parents will not be involved in the quality of services, the selection of those who look after their children. Parents are completely excluded. I think that we could have had private day care, but insisted that parents be involved in running it.

As for the number of spaces, there are 200,000! This only meets 15 per cent of the present demand in Canada and we know that we are leaving more than 70 per cent of the population without day care service.

So many improvements could have been made, but I still support this motion because, coming back to CAP, we know that children with little education and whose parents are not very wealthy have almost no place in our society and now, from the beginning, at birth, there will be a cleavage. We might easily find ourselves with two societies, one rich and one poor. We will then have two classes of children as we have two classes of citizens. It is unacceptable in a country like ours, Mr. Speaker!

Every child in Canada is entitled to a space in a day care facility, to quality child care. Now, I must admit that the Bill before us does not give them many possibilities.

Someone just said that the workers in day care centres were mostly women. The pay is so low that they do it out of a sense of vocation, because we know that in some places they earn between $10,000 and $13,000 a year. So if you have to look after a family—only women can continue to take care of a family on such a low salary, whereas for men, it is twice as difficult—

So let us say that I support this amendment because I think that it is important to give our children—especially since one in five of them is poor in Canada—another chance to have the same day care services, just as the same education services, to get them out of the bad situation in which they have lived. A society like ours, Canada with all its wealth, must give, and has a duty to give, every child what it needs to get ahead in life. Later, it would be easier to say that we want programs to deal with delinquency and drugs, but at least, when they are young, we will give them what they need.

Unfortunately, I find that this Bill does not help families much and does not meet the real needs.

[English]

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I will be very brief. I have some difficulty with this from a procedural point of view, even though I know that the Chair has accepted Motion No. 38 for debate. I thought that this motion was consequential on a number of motions, some of which had been ruled out of order. As well, Motion No. 36 was defeated on a voice vote just a few moments ago. I am somewhat surprised at the manner in which we are proceeding on Motion No. 38.

Additionally, in the committee proceedings, this motion was ruled out of order by the chairman of the committee.

Ms. Mitchell: Are you questioning the Chair?

Mr. Epp (Provencher): I thought under the rules that we now operate under—

Mr. Keeper: Point of order.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): I thought that would get your attention.

Mr. Keeper: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I just wanted some clarification here and maybe some assistance from the Chair. I am wondering if the Minister is speaking to the motion and the legislation or if he is raising a point of order.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): The answer is yes, Mr. Speaker. The point that I am trying to make is that voting against Clause 11 has the same effect as Motion No. 38.

Ms. Mitchell: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I will of course rely on your judgment, but I am surprised that such an experienced Member as the Hon. Minister is really questioning the judgment of the Chair in this matter. I think if he has complaints about whether or not this amendment was eligible to stand, they should have been discussed earlier with the Table or with the Speaker. To raise it now in the House seems to be really questioning the Chair and we, of course, would not agree to the Minister doing that.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I appreciate what the Hon. Member is saying, and I know the Minister is coming back to Motion No. 38.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That is why I said yes to both questions. The reason I am putting it on the record is that later on when people take a look at the ruling of the committee and the ruling here, they will find they are in fact different rulings. I think it is important for the record that it be clarified.

With respect to Motion No. 38—

Ms. Mitchell: Mr. Speaker—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I appreciate what the Hon. Member for Vancouver East is going to say now. The Chair does not care what happens in committee.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Nor do they.

Ms. Mitchell: Can I make my point?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I was just going to clarify what the Hon. Minister just said, but I will now recognize the Hon. Member for Vancouver East on a point of order.

Ms. Mitchell: I thought I heard the Member saying he was questioning, really, the ruling that was made. I would say this is quite inappropriate, in fact, quite insulting to the Chair, and I would ask him to withdraw those remarks.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I know the Minister, who has been around here for quite awhile, will probably do the proper thing and I would hope that debate can carry on.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The reason I want to make that clarification is quite straightforward. We have debated this before. We debated it under Motion No. 36. My comments on Motion No. 36 and my rejection of Motion No. 36 also applies to Motion No. 38. That is why the introduction. It was so I could make the point on Motion No. 38.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Debate.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, in addressing Bill C-144 again today, as I did yesterday, I must say that the more one looks at this Bill, the more one notes the deficiencies in the Bill and the lack of clarity and direction. This Bill is supposed to address children 14 years old and under, which is a very diversified group. At the same time, the Bill does not clarify how we handle these children, what kind of programs we have for these children. It does not address the issue of special need children.

Think about the number of children out in society. There are an additional 1.8 million places needed. We are serving two million children. Of those two million children who are supposedly in need of care, what numbers are over pre-school care? Within that over pre-school care, from age 6 to age 13 or 14 years, how many need latchkey service and what is the nature of the latchkey service we wish to provide for these children? Is it in the school? Is it out of the school? Is it an enrichment program? Is it to help reintegrate children who have problems? Is it to address single-parent families? What is the program targeting with respect to the kinds of services we want to give children who are 6 to 13 years of age?

With respect to under age five pre-school children, we have infants and young children two to four years who have different kinds of needs. I can recall many years ago, in another life in another place, I was president of a very wonderful agency, the Neighbourhood House Services of Canada. It was a reception and integration service for pre-school children, among other services it offered.

The reason I bring this to your attention, Mr. Speaker, is because we started within that service some incredible programs, head start programs, which looked after aphasic children, Down's syndrome children and cerebral palsy children and we were able, through a demonstration program, to show that these children could be integrated into the normal pre-school programs. That enabled two things to happen. First, it sensitized children and parents to the reality that these children exist in our society and have the right to be helped to be part of society to the best of their potential. They are not total handicaps. As I have said many times, if we could see them for the things they could bring to society instead of the handicaps they supposedly have, we would be far ahead.

As we prepared those children and sensitized their families, we also prepared society to adjust to the kinds of programs for the disabled which have become a very critical part of our society. Again, we must look at the abilities of those disabled instead of their disabilities only.

What are we doing in this Bill to address those children? What are we doing to enable their parents to have a sense of being supported in the school or pre-school system? Are we going to have great differences across Canada? I travelled with the Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) through British Columbia and up through the Yukon for a week, as well as with other members of the child care committee. We heard of the importance to the interior of British Columbia of the kinds of services about which I am speaking. We heard about the need to have teachers who were trained, not just 18 year olds with good hearts and strong muscles.

There is a need for educational programs which teach how to handle these children, how to help them talk and walk. I met one of the youngsters in the aphasic program who had been tagged aphasic. He is a graduate of McGill University and a brilliant young architect today. If he had not had that special program, and if his parents had not had the support and help within the family structure of that agency, where would he be today?

The Down's syndrome children can perform. The cerebral palsy children may have what is a perceived difficulty, but that does not mean their intellectual capacity has been damaged. If we do not have in place the kinds of programs that are going to help these children and their families, it is a crying shame. This Bill is far short of its mark.

I would like to speak about the mathematics of the situation for a moment. Supposedly under CAP we have 200,000 spaces, 15 per cent of the need. Under this Bill, we will have 200,000 new spaces over seven years, another 15 per cent of the need. That leaves 1.4 million or 70 per cent of Canadian children with no option or choice. That is the point. Many parents choose to stay at home, but there are many who do not choose to stay at home for a variety of reasons which I enunciated yesterday.

What caught my eye—and I addressed the Minister yesterday on the difference between the preamble and content in a Bill—is that the amendment the Minister has brought to the preamble is kind of laughable. It is political chicanery, in my view. In the first paragraph he says there will be at least 200,000 new spaces over seven years. In the third paragraph it will not exceed $4 billion for the said program, some of which is recaptured from the CAP payments the Minister is not going to make. And there will be differences.

Because there are no national standards, there will be good programs and bad programs. There will be good programs for rich kids and bad programs for poor kids, which will divide our society even more. That is very unhealthy for the future of Canada. The Minister has set at least 200,000 spaces, but not exceeding $4 billion, so he has already installed that incredible difference that can mark our society in the future. If we have good programs, it will take more dollars for those 200,000 spaces than if we have poor programs.

All in all, it seems to me that there will not be sufficient money if the 200,000 spaces are put in and we cannot spend more than $4 billion under this Bill, and we have to respect the way the Bill was drawn up. There is no reason then why we cannot keep the CAP process in place and supplement the kinds of things that fall, perhaps, under recreation or education, the kind of special programs that are fundamental to the well-being of this country such as head start programs.

I suggest that this amendment is a good directive to the Minister on how to put a decent program into place. We cannot go back to 20 years ago when I was a mother who chose to stay at home. That is not the reality of today's society. In many instances a family needs two working parents. In many instances in today's society families have one single parent, divorce being as prevalent as it is. The mother and the father or the divorced partners must get out and earn a living.

If the future is in the hands of our children, for goodness' sake take money away from the submarines or somewhere else and put it into good and proper child care, divided properly among pre-school, school, and after school.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to put a few facts on the record in this debate because child care is one of the crucial areas of debate today and is an emergency need which must be met rapidly.

Before I comment specifically on the substance of the Government's program, I want to reflect a bit on what the Minister responsible for day care had to say about our home Province of Manitoba. I understood him to have left the impression that Manitoba was a laggard in day care, that the New Democratic Party in Manitoba had done less than one might expect from a New Democratic Party on day care. He did this in a couple of ways. He indicated that Manitoba has the lowest rate of growth of spaces. He also referred to the cost of spaces being higher.

This brings to mind the fact that when making a case, people often choose statistics on a selective basis. They do not throw light on the situation as much as presenting their point of view. I want to deal with the contention of the Minister that Manitoba has the lowest rate of growth in spaces.

The Minister did not tell us, for example, that Manitoba has a far greater number of spaces when compared to the neighbouring Province of Saskatchewan, which is being governed by a Conservative Party. If my memory serves me correctly, there are something like 3,000 spaces in Saskatchewan and 7,000 in Manitoba. Therefore, it depends upon which statistics you quote.

The Minister referred to the cost of spaces being higher in Manitoba. If you are to have quality care, you have to pay for it. When it comes to children Canadians are willing to pay for quality care. They do not want to go on the cheap when it comes to day care. They want the job to be done properly.

I want to place a few statistics on the record of the New Democratic Party in Manitoba with respect to day care. From 1981-82 to the end of the New Democratic Party term, there was a 225 per cent growth rate in Manitoba in the number of child care spaces. The dollars rose from $8.5 million to $27.5 million in grants for spaces and subsidies to parents. Therefore, from 1981-82 until the last provincial election in Manitoba, there was an increase of 225 per cent in spaces and subsidies to parents. That record stands by itself.

When we last debated this issue, I pointed out a few facts about Manitoba. One was that the Manitoba Government increased funding for day care spaces to $11,200 from $6,500, a 72 per cent increase from the fiscal year 1981-82 to the fiscal year 1986-87. That is a very substantial increase.

To finish off with statistics, Manitoba, which has had an NDP Government over most of the last few years, has the highest per capita spending on day care. On a per capita basis we have the most child care spaces. On a per capita basis Manitoba spends the most and has the highest standards.

I hope that this puts to rest the notion that Manitoba, under the New Democratic Party in the last few years, was a laggard with regard to day care because the reality is that Manitoba was a leader in day care. That is not to say that more does not need to be done because more does need to be done. This brings me to the Government's program now before us.

I guess it is not surprising that I am not critical of the Government's program. I am a member of the Opposition and we do have the responsibility to critique that which the Government does. However, I want to point out on the basis of facts why a critical view of the Government's programs stands up to reason and not only to passion and Opposition posturing.

The first reason has to do with quality. When it comes to child care, we all want quality. In order to assure that quality, we need national objectives. We know that more and more children and more and more families are dependent upon day care. We know that children achieve their basic learning in the very early stages of their life. They learn how to relate to the world, how to value themselves, and what to expect from people. They learn the very basic strategies of how to deal with the world as young children. It is, therefore, very crucial what they learn in that period because that largely determines what happens to them throughout their life.

Therefore, quality is fundamental, yet this program has no national objectives. It does not set out a set of principles which the provinces will have to live up to in order to get federal money. It does not set out objectives which point out that we want our children well cared for, that we want to ensure that the quality of care they get is excellent, that we want to ensure that they are not shortchanged in any way. There is a vacuum in the area of national objectives.

Somehow the Government has forgotten that it is the Government for the nation and is responsible for providing leadership to the people of Canada. It has forgotten that it is not simply enough to hand out money to the provinces and tell them to set the objectives, design the program, and do what they want with Canadian children.

Ordinary Canadian families expect more of their federal politicians than for them simply to be a funnel for dollars to provincial Governments. They want them to provide leadership in the sense of providing for valid social needs, which day care is, and in identifying how those social needs will be met. The Government's program falls flat on its face with regard to the quality criteria because it has failed to set out any national objectives ensuring that we will have quality child care spaces.

Another aspect of the program is that the legislation before this House removes the reference to day care from the Canada Assistance Plan. The Canada Assistance Plan is a piece of legislation passed by the House of Commons, the objective of which it is to ameliorate the impacts of poverty, to give people a way out of poverty, and to help people who are living below the poverty line in this country.

If the Government is seeking to meet one social need, why does it take away from the other? Why, in its attempt to do something about day care, does it forget about poverty. That is the implication of this legislation. That is the implication of this.

Bill C-144 removes from the Canada Assistance Plan the reference to child care. It is stated in Clause 10 and reinforced in Clause 11. It states that the Canada Assistance Plan will no longer include the objective of alleviating poverty. By no longer making any reference to child care the Government is saying to heck with the poor.

In order to reduce poverty in this country and get people off welfare so they can make a contribution to society, they must have training. One of the social supports people need in order to get training is day care. That objective ought to remain in the Canada Assistance Plan. Day care for the poor ought to continue to be a priority because only then will they have the tools to climb out of the deep pit of poverty. This Government program fails when one considers it against the criteria of what it does for the poor.

Let us examine the Government's program from the perspective of day care spaces. People in my riding and people across Canada want day care spaces so their children will be well cared for. The Government's plan reduces the number of day care spaces that otherwise would be available to Canadian families. The growth rate for day care under the Canada Assistance Plan was 15 per cent per year. According to our calculations, it will be 10 per cent per year under the Tory plan. That is a step back in terms of provision of day care spaces. The Government is turning a deaf ear to Canadian families who say they want day care.

Ms. Marion Dewar (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, this amendment addresses the inability of the Government to listen to people who went to a lot of work to make sure they presented responsible briefs. The Government is unwilling to listen and allow amendments that these groups have recommended. We in the New Democratic Party believe these amendments would make the Bill much more palatable.

There are many misconceptions about what we mean when we talk about child care. It is an issue with which I have been involved for some 20 years. Child care programs are often delivered by three levels of government. They become very complex and people often do not understand them.

I thought there was a hidden agenda, especially when I saw the multitude of males in the House and provincial legislatures. I thought that they kept these programs as convoluted as possible so people would not be able to understand them. Fortunately, in the last 20 years in Canada many groups and communities have conducted research into the seriousness of the situation and how to address it.

When New Democrats talk about affordable and accessible child care, we are not talking about putting every child into institutional care. It is important that people understand this. We are talking about the models that are used in western Europe where in some cases fathers or mothers feel that a productive part of their life is looking after pre-schoolers before going back into the workforce. I think we should applaud those people for recognizing that they play an important role.

The kind of allocation the Government has given to those parents is unacceptable. It is an insult to think that a few hundred dollars a year is what child care is worth to a parent who is staying at home. One gets the impression that the Government believes it is dealing with a parent who wants to stay home because there is no work and that $500 or $600 will be adequate in order to stay at home and look after a child. We are talking about people who are very productive in society and have decided that their priority will be child care. It is something they can do well and be creative about.

New Democrats have believed for some time that this is a valuable and good role. They also recognize that there are some parents, no matter how much they love their children, who cannot deliver the quality care they would like to deliver. Let us dispel the myth that the best person at home with the child is the parent. That is not true. Parents themselves will recognize that sometimes it is better when the time they spend with their child is quality time. That is very important.

We are attempting to establish a program in which every child will feel the love and security that is so important in the early years. When we talk about accessible and affordable child care, we mean a choice for families because spaces are available for families who require care for their children for various reasons. It may be their own emotional stability or it may be economic conditions.

Ms. Mitchell: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I notice that there are very few Conservatives in the House. They do not care about this Bill. Therefore, I call for a quorum.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): There is a quorum. Debate.

Mr. Brisco: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I want to point out for the record that in calling for the quorum, the Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) failed to state that there were two Members of the New Democratic Party in the House.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Debate. The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Ms. Dewar).

Ms. Dewar: Mr. Speaker, I hope we will not take any more time trying to play bingo with numbers.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Tell her that.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Tell your friend from Vancouver.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain has the floor.

Ms. Dewar: Mr. Speaker, when we talk about child care, it is important that people try to understand how complex an issue this is. Obviously there is a lack of interest, but the lack of interest among those Members is the same as it is with society. They do not understand that the delivery of this service is serious.

The Minister made an announcement about one month ago that he was putting more money into this program so that child care workers will be better paid. That is a complete sham. There is absolutely nothing in the Bill which guarantees any kind of increase in wages for child care workers. Furthermore, there is nothing in the national objectives that indicates a certain quality of care should be delivered to our children.

It is true that there has never been a child care strategy in this country. Lord only knows that it is something for which the people of Canada have been crying for a long time. Since we have never had any child care strategy, we thought the Government would act responsibly. The Hon. Member who spoke before me recognized that child care is one of the best delivered services in the Province of Manitoba under a New Democratic Party Government. I challenge anyone to deny that.

I have two wonderful grandchildren who have been the recipients of that service. I was very impressed with the quality of service that has been delivered in that province. That is the type of service that should be delivered right across the board. We are not talking about the ability to have every child come under a government program or anything of the sort. What we are talking about is giving security and reinforcement to Canadian families so that children can be looked after in the best way possible.

To say that we do not have the money to do that is blasphemy. We do not have the right to be a government and to have the resources in the country that we have if we are not going to invest in our children. We only have to look at what is happening right now across the country in some of our food kitchens. Some 40 per cent of the clients in the City of Toronto are receiving their nourishment from food kitchens. That is a disgrace. The latchkey children in Hamilton Mountain who are members of families in which both parents are working to pay mortgages and to keep body and soul together find that at the same time there are no services for child care for them.

Do not, Mr. Speaker, get the impression that parents do not care about their children and that they do not love them. Many times these parents are under very extreme pressure because they know that they have to keep the economic factors together. At the same time they cannot meet those bills, buy that food and pay that mortgage if they have not got two incomes coming in. Many of the jobs that the Government bragged about creating have been jobs which pay $18,000 and less per year. I challenge anybody to try to keep a family going with that kind of income. It takes two incomes of that sort. We know what the average income is of single parent families. We know that if we take away the lowest salary from the family with two incomes, 64 per cent will have to live below the poverty line. The reality is that the two incomes must be there.

At the same time we recognize that we do not have the spaces in which children can be looked after. We have in front of us a Bill which says to us that the Government does not care about the quality of care. It is certainly not interested in what we are going to pay to the people who are to deliver child care. If we take a good look at what child care workers are getting, we see that we pay people who work in the zoo more than we do people who look after our children. That is a disgrace. It tells us that there is a double standard. Obviously, the Minister recognized that when he said that more money would be available to pay child care workers. But the Minister was not responsible enough to put into the Bill some objectives which stated that the children of Canada are precious and that the Government is not putting federal dollars into a program unless certain criteria are met. He did not have the backbone to stand up and say: "Children are important to this Government and we are going to put in the kind of Act that really makes that count". If he was not willing to do that, he should not be the Minister bringing forward a Bill such as this.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I gave the Hon. Member an extra 30 seconds because of the quorum call. She has been well looked after. I say that just in case she was worried about her time.

The Hon. Member for Yorkton—Melville has the floor.

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, you are a very generous man. We all appreciate that. It is the big western heart.

I want to say a few words on this Bill before the House today. I am glad that the Minister is now back in the House. Perhaps he can respond to some of our concerns.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Being very conscious of the clock, and it looks like the Hon. Member who now has the floor might be the last Member on the opposition side to speak, there would be no difficulty on this side of the House not to see the clock at two o'clock. If the Hon. Member wanted to speak for his full 10 minutes, we could delay Private Members' hour slightly.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I would need unanimous consent for such a proposal. Is it agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Yorkton—Melville has the floor.

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Epp (Provencher): And you called quorum.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): We have had some great speeches today, great debate. We still have a few minutes left before we get into Private Members' hour. I would ask Hon. Members to listen to the Hon. Member for Yorkton—Melville.

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, I would love to make a long speech, but the Minister of Health, who is in very serious trouble in his riding, has to get back to Winnipeg to do some campaigning. Out of courtesy I think that we had better let him go. He is generally a pretty good guy, a pretty compassionate man. I cannot understand why he would not listen to all the witnesses who came before the committee. Perhaps he could even use some of my time, if he wants, in order to respond.

Over 40 witnesses appeared before the committee. The Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) said that all of them—every single one of them—are opposed to the Bill.

[Translation]

Everyone is opposing the legislation. Despite that fact, the Minister has not come up with any positive amendment to make the Bill more palatable to Canadians. And I am convinced the Hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Hamelin) is amazed at this, because he is a democratic, a very democratic Member.

[English]

If democracy means anything, the Government should call witnesses to appear before the committee, listen to them and seek guidance from them. Then it should try to amend the Bill to reflect what the people of Canada want. That is what the old Conservative Party used to say when it was in Opposition.

I remember the Hon. Member for Provencher (Mr. Epp) saying, when he was the constitutional critic, that the people of Canada should be listened to, that the Government should respond to the people and introduce amendments. He said that if he were ever Minister he would do that. He said that he would listen to the people. That was his main point of criticism of the old Liberal Government of Pierre Trudeau. He did not listen to the witnesses who appeared before the committee. He introduced amendments, but they are his own amendments from government bureaucrats—

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I know that the Hon. Member wants to get back to Yorkton to build up his fortunes. However, I want to tell him that there were five amendments accepted. If there had been better ones from his Party, we could have accepted even more.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Does the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Veterans Affairs (Mr. Hamelin) have a question or a point of order?

Mr. Hamelin: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Since the Hon. Member referred to my amazement I was indeed very much amazed, because the Minister indeed just indicated we accepted five amendments. Therefore your whole description is totally inaccurate and inconsistent with the facts. That is the source of my amazement, not the comments you made, which were totally stupid and that beat by far—

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): There are no questions or comments this afternoon. The Hon. Member for Yorkton—Melville has 30 seconds.

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, I knew that the Hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Hamelin) was astonished because even at this distance I could hear his head shaking, he was so surprised and so shocked.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): We never hear your head shaking because there is nothing in it to make a noise.

[Translation]

And after the next election the poor Member for Charlevoix will have no constituency for himself because the Prime Minister will be a candidate in his constituency. The poor Member for Charlevoix! However, Mr. Speaker, I want to indicate—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member. Order, please. It being two o'clock, the House will now proceed to the consideration of Private Members' Business as listed on today's Order Paper.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): A point of order, the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway.

Mr. Waddell: Before my friend begins his Private Member's Bill, I missed the House Business for Monday. I wonder if the Government is in a position to indicate what we are doing on Monday.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary may be able to answer that question.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, subject to the usual possibilities, that the Government retains its options, I think that Members of the House can expect that the Order Paper will indeed list the child care Bill. If we could have stayed 10 minutes longer this afternoon, I think we could have finished report stage. We will then move on to the Broadcasting Act, the Bill to establish the new Department of Science and Technology, and then political rights, if we still have time left on that day. At this point that is the Government's intention.

I understand that at least one of the two Parties opposite has asked us to delay the variable entrance requirements Bill on UIC until Tuesday for the convenience of critics. We are pleased to be able to go along with that, and that is our intention.

Finishing child care, then broadcasting, science and technology, and political rights will be the line-up for Monday, as I understand it.

STANDING ORDERS

REQUIREMENT THAT ALL DOCUMENTS TABLED OR DISTRIBUTED BE IN BOTH OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier) moved:

That the Standing Orders of the House be amended by inserting therein the requirement that all official documents tabled or distributed in the House be in both official languages; and

That the Clerk of the House be authorized and instructed to print a revised edition of Standing Orders of the House incorporating the said amendment, renumbering as may be deemed necessary and making such technical and consequential changes as may be required.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to say a few words on the motion, because it is topical and because it follows the decision taken by this House some time ago, when adopting a new Official Languages Act, in which Section 8 provides that any document tabled in this House by a federal institution, whether the Canadian Government or an agency, shall be tabled in both official languages at the same time.

That section of Bill C-72 reads as follows: Any document made by or under the authority of a federal institution that is tabled in the Senate or the House of Commons by the Government of Canada shall be tabled in both official languages.

As I see it, Mr. Speaker, the point is that the House of Commons is responsible for its own Standing Orders and they must be amended by the House. It does not matter how many Bills we pass, the House has to make a decision and a provision such as the one suggested today must be added to the Standing Orders. This is why the second paragraph states that the Clerk of the House be authorized to print a revised edition of the Standing Orders incorporating the said amendment.

Mr. Speaker, the purpose of my motion is quite simple. Hon. Members will recall that the 1969 legislation had a provision which was the source of some difficulties. Here is the text of section 2 of the Bill adopted in 1969, Chapter O-2 of the Revised Statutes of Canada: "The English and French languages are the official languages of Canada for all purposes of the Parliament and Government of Canada, and possess and enjoy equality of status and equal rights and privileges as to their use in all the institutions of the Parliament and Government of Canada." That is clear enough: English and French are the official languages of Canada for all purposes of the Parliament and Government of Canada.

Up until 1987-88 my personal experience has been that the Government always tabled official documents in both official languages. As a rule, parliamentary institutions and government agencies did follow this instruction and documents were tabled in both official languages.

Occasionally the Government is too fast off the mark and is obliged—let's be nice—to table documents in one official language only. I am thinking more specifically of the free trade Bill which was tabled in English only, to my mind a major breach of a policy that is supposed to respect both official languages. What I want to do is have the House make a joint decision to amend its Standing Orders and bring them into line with the new Act and the spirit of the new Act, so that from now on, the Government and federal institutions are obliged to table all documents in both official languages, so that neither language group is put at a disadvantage in its work here in the House of Commons. Now is that so hard? I may remind the House that this suggestion has been discussed at length and interpreted quite generously, I believe, but sometimes the spirit of the Act has been ignored, and that is why I want to ensure that the House officially assumes these statutory or quasi-statutory obligations.

Mr. Speaker, Hon. Members will recall that although the 1969 legislation contains in Section 2, which I read earlier, a provision that says Parliament should respect both official languages, the courts, on many occasions, and I could quote a number, starting with the Les gens de l'air and up to quite recently in New Brunswick—The court ruled that the Official Languages Act, 1969, was declaratory rather than executory, and Hon. Members will recall Judge Deschênes' judgment, and since it was declaratory, it was merely a statement of intent which means it had no "teeth". That is why the Official Languages Committee and the Legislative committee considering Bill C-72, in its wisdom, accepted and why the Government endorsed—In the final instance, the amendment I presented in committee was taken up by the Government and adopted here in the House only a few months ago as part of Bill C-72, so that now, any document tabled in the House must be tabled in both official languages.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to stress another important point, which I hope will convince Hon. Members of the importance of adopting this motion today. Bill C-72 was passed by the House of Commons and by the Senate or the other place, as I should say, and everything is in place.

Royal Assent has been given, and the Bill only has to be proclaimed to become law. This proclamation has yet to take place, and I understand the problems that may be involved. However, I may recall Section 111 of Bill C-72, passed on July 7 here in the House, and I believe, at the end of July here in the Senate, and Section 111 says, and I quote:

Coming into force

111. Subject to subsection 94(2), . . .

which deals with the administration of justice in the provinces

. . . this Act or any provision thereof shall come into force on a day or days to be fixed by proclamation.

So there may be one or more proclamation dates.

The Bill contains fourteen parts, so the Government could proclaim certain parts of the Bill now and proclaim other parts tomorrow or a month later or a year later or God knows when! It is to avoid too much hesitation and keeping the House waiting for further directives from the Government that I am proposing today that the House should adopt this motion which, as was said earlier, is quite clear and to the point, namely that from now on, all documents tabled by federal institutions will be in both official languages.

Mr. Speaker, this is not a very complex issue. I hope Hon. Members will be able to pass this motion quickly, and I want to thank them for their co-operation.

Mr. Charles Hamelin (Charlevoix): Mr. Speaker, my colleague tabled a motion that I think, at first glance anyway, is somewhat redundant. Indeed, section 8 of Bill C-72, which has now been passed, clearly says, "Any document made by or under the authority of a federal institution that is tabled in the Senate or the House of Commons by the Government of Canada shall be tabled in both official languages."

Perhaps it is because of his experience with this language issue, which has always been difficult in Canada, that my colleague has fears that, in some cases, have been justified. And maybe he neglected to do so, but he could have quoted Talleyrand, who said, "If it goes without saying, it would be better to say it!"

And the very purpose of his motion is to state once again that indeed "any document tabled in the House of Commons be in both official languages."

Nevertheless, I would like to remind my colleague, even though on this side of the House, I think, we will enthusiastically endorse this proposal, which is perhaps somewhat redundant, but which no doubt, in view of past experience, is useful and appropriate. So, for myself, Mr. Speaker, I will endorse this motion presented by my colleague from Ottawa—Vanier.

However, I would like to remind him that he should not use his prerogative as he did before when he was quite hard on the Speaker of the House after his own Party and the Opposition Parties had tabled nearly 130 amendments in only one of the two languages very late in the evening. They demanded the next morning that everything be ready, translated and tabled in both official languages . . .

You were quite hard on the Speaker of the House and, given the situation now at the end of the session when our clerks, translators and Hansard officials have an awful workload, it is impossible for them to deliver the goods on time. And I hope that my colleague will no doubt in future show a little more consideration for these servants of the State who do outstanding work.

Mr. Speaker, I take this opportunity to pay tribute to our clerks, our translators and all those who work on producing the official record of our debates and do a tremendous job. The next morning, we see the amazing quality of what they do. How many times have I seen these workers, men and women who are professionals, come to see some Hon. Member and ask him to clarify what he meant, to make the necessary changes, to do a good job on our speeches, our debates and to do a good job too for the Canadian people who, from time to time, read what we say and listen to us!

I would also like the Speaker of the House, who is responsible for this service, to look a little more closely into the working conditions of these professionals. Theirs is a painstaking job, like the work of the Benedictine monks. But I often feel that these latter-day Benedictines are less well treated that their predecessors in the middle ages were, because they have so much work to do, it is so demanding, so time-consuming, and especially at the end of a session. I do not know if any of my colleagues have had the opportunity to see where these people work. I feel that we could set up much more spacious and modern premises and give them better working conditions. Of course, someone will now mention the new technology that will help them, but technology does not replace professionalism and intelligence nor does it take the place of those who use the new equipment. And these people do an outstanding job! I do not know anybody else who would be able to produce work of such quality.

So the motion introduced by my colleague will mean additional work for those people who are at our service and at the service of all Canadians. Of course I would expect all Parties to co-operate. Perhaps it might be advisable and appropriate if they were to produce documents in both official languages before presenting them to the Speaker of the House. They ought to make every effort to assist the Speaker of the House and especially all those who are responsible for drafting legislation and amendments so as to speed up the debates and show respect for the spirit and letter of Bill C-72, and show respect as well for this country's linguistic duality which certainly ought to be most apparent in this House.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support the motion of the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) because it will indeed make it even more mandatory to implement the basic provisions of section 8 of Bill C-72. And again, Mr. Speaker, I would ask you to give serious consideration to improving the working conditions of the outstanding team which serves Parliamentarians, Parliament and Canada so well.

[English]

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to be able to rise today. During the House time spent on Bill C-72 the opportunity to make a few comments did not arise. I appreciate the Private Member's Motion giving me the opportunity to make a few comments. I would like to pay tribute to the two Members who have spoken in the Chamber today.

The Whip of the Liberal Party, the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), who proposed the motion, was a hard working member of the committee. I hope that he feels very positive today, because government Members unanimously are prepared to support his motion. It brings into effect in our Standing Orders what Bill C-72 as a piece of legislation directs us to do. I would like to advise the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier that I am pleased that he finally found a Government that agreed with him.

Mr. Gauthier: Score.

Mr. Hawkes: He would be welcome to negotiate with us, if he is so inclined. We do see the world similarly on many occasions, certainly when it comes to the importance of language policy.

My region is heavily dominated by people of non-francophone background. It is dominantly English, but there are Eastern Europeans, Asians, and people from all around the world. Lately, we are receiving more and more people from South America. Sometimes it is difficult for people raised in such a region to comprehend the reality that this has always been a bilingual nation. It has always been a nation with two languages spoken in the home that young children learn, and right from the beginning those two languages have been French and English.

Geographically that is spread around the country. In Newfoundland, the dominant language is English, and I believe that is clear. For most parts of Québec, and some parts of northern New Brunswick, the dominant language is French. For the most part in western Canada the dominant language is English. If one is born into a dominant language region, sometimes it is difficult to understand why the country needs two languages. Sometimes I say to people in my riding that it does not; it is possible to separate it. It is possible to have two or more countries, one with an official language French, and one with an official language English. We could have that. There are people in political life who argue for that persuasion.

There is a political Party in the Province of Québec that has formed a Government whose origin, in large part, was owed to the reality that it was difficult to be a Canadian. It felt difficult to be a Canadian if that person came from a region where the dominant language was French. It was not a comfortable feeling. I say to the people of my riding that if someone in the City of Calgary came along and said that all of our courts, all of our policemen, all of our businesses, all of our schools will force you to be French, the people would rebel. It would be easy to create a political Party that said we should separate and become a country with this official language we call English. That is a realistic political option, but for members of my Party it is a very undesirable option and, I suggest, it is so for the vast majority of Canadians.

We love this country called Canada. We do not want to see separation. If we are to prosper and stay united we have to recognize in legislative form and in our practices the reality of the duality of language in this country.

To come to the Member's motion, people in my riding will say why should any official document coming to the House of Commons have to be in both official languages? The answer is that if it comes to the table of the House of Commons and is distributed to me in this Chamber as your representative and it is in French, because I worked hard at the language I will understand it generally but I will not be able to understand it precisely. If it comes to me in English I can understand it precisely. If it comes to me in English but does not go to my colleague from Charlevois in French, then he will have trouble understanding it precisely. It is imprecision in understanding that lies at the heart of a lot of human quarrels. That is true of our own families in fights with our children or our spouses. They come about many times because we do not precisely understand each other.

When we come to the affairs of a nation, we have to work as hard as we can to make sure that we understand each other precisely. To do that we must have all of our official documents presented to us in the two languages. Those of us who learned French in our homes can understand the document in French, and those of us who learned English in our homes can understand the document in English. That is the importance and significance of that provision.

Bill C-72 provides us with that kind of fairness in our courts, in government services generally, in our workplace, and in our democratic processes. It is a magnificent advance on what we have had for the last 20 years. It is very consistent with statements made in this chamber on behalf of my Party by the Hon. Robert Stanfield on May 16, 1969, a 20-year commitment. It was a real pleasure in 1984 to finally get a majority that gave us the opportunity to implement the commitments made by Mr. Stanfield on behalf of all of us in the Conservative Party some 20 years ago.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

GOVERNMENT RESPONSE

Mr. Richard Grisé (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 106(8), I have the honour of tabling, in both official languages, the Government's response to seven petitions numbered as follows: 332-5295, 332-5309, 332-5312 and 332-5319 to 332-5322, inclusive.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

Mr. Richard Grisé (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I ask that all questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it agreed?

• (1110)

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): I want to bring to your attention that, under Standing Order 64 of the House of Commons, it is compulsory, when a Member has asked a question that it be replied to within 45 days. There is no exception, no means by which the Government can evade that particular responsibility. You will know, Mr. Speaker, that that is sometimes not done. By and large the House is co-operative with the government Members. Whenever there is a delay of a few days, Members usually extend their co-operation to the Government. However, we reach a point when our patience does come to an end.

Question 289 in my name has been standing on the Order Paper since March 15, 1988. To refresh your memory, Mr. Speaker, it relates to the number of contracts, awards, and funds that were given to one Jean Sirois of Quebec City by the Government. That question has been on the Order Paper since March 15. The 45 day deadline has gone from 45 to 90 days and now beyond.

The Member across may think that the rules of the House are irrelevant. Perhaps that is the opinion of the Government, and perhaps that is why the question remains unanswered. As the custodian of the rules of this House, Mr. Speaker, I want to ask you if there is any means by which the Government could be compelled to reply to a legitimate question, one which is within the rules, and has not been challenged in terms of its legality, yet remains unanswered.

I have met privately with the Minister and suggested that, even if the list were not completed, I would be willing to offer my support at least to the tabling of the part of the answer that was available from the Government. Yet no reply even comes from that suggestion. The fact that the Government refuses to respond to this question obviously leads one to believe that the answer could potentially be one that would cause certain embarassment to the Government, therefore, it is withholding the information. If that is the case it is not right.

If there is another reason, I am willing to listen to what the reason is, and why the rules of this House are being breached in a cavalier fashion the way that they are in relation to Standing Order 64 as it applies to question No. 289 standing on the Order Paper of the House of Commons since March 15, 1988.

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I would like to contribute to this exchange of comments and remind the House that not so long ago, several weeks or maybe a month, I asked the Chair to look into the whole issue of the forty-five day limit. As the Hon. Member pointed out, the Government is supposed to answer a question within forty-five days, when so requested. When the Government fails to reply within forty-five days, as happens occasionally, no penalty is applied. No corrective action is taken, and we have no way of raising the issue in the House for debate.

I asked the Chair to look into the matter. Perhaps it has had time to consider the question and could give us an answer today or at least take the matter under advisement and refer it to the appropriate committee and ask the committee to see whether it would be possible to include corrective measures in Standing Order 64(3) and (6). It may be an academic question, but as far as the Standing Orders are concerned, it is frustrating for Members who put important questions to the Government when they do not receive a satisfactory reply within the prescribed forty-five-day period. The Government says it can do nothing. True, except that we depend on the good faith and the good will of the Government to provide the requested replies, and if the Government does not want to do that, there are a number of solutions we can suggest to the Chair for obtaining satisfaction when a question has been asked.

The Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell (Mr. Boudria) is quite right to feel insulted and to think that perhaps his privileges have been breached. He asked a question. I don't know whether it was embarrassing to the Government, and it is not for me to judge, but all I know is that we have a provision in our Standing Orders that says that the Government is supposed to answer within forty-five days of the question being tabled. It usually does that. It would seem that the Government does not want to answer this particular question. If that is the case, the Government should say so. At least we would know where we are!

Mr. Grisé: Mr. Speaker, I listened very carefully to the comments made by the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell (Mr. Boudria) and by the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier). I believe that in this situation, there is no question of the Government's being reluctant to answer a question. Mr. Speaker, I am inclined to believe that the issue here is the complexity of the question and the information to be provided the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell. In fact, since this Government was sworn in four years ago, the Government has always acted to provide the House and Hon. Members with the maximum amount of information, as quickly as possible, so that the House can get on with its business and Members can get the information they asked for.

Mr. Speaker, in concluding I would like to make it clear to the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell and also to the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier that the Government does not intend to evade the Standing Orders, including Standing Order 64(6). The Government's intention is to give each question put by Hon. Members the attention it deserves, but again. Mr. Speaker, I would like to say that occasionally, a question is so complex that it takes more time to obtain the information.

[English]

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, the Parliamentary Secretary who has just risen in his seat has said absolutely nothing, with due respect. He told us that sometimes questions are complicated; that may be so.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): It is the answers that are complicated.

Mr. Boudria: The Minister of Health is probably correct when he says the Government would be in a rather complicated situation if it tried to answer the question at hand. However, Mr. Speaker, I am still looking for a commitment from the Parliamentary secretary. Will he or will he not answer the question pursuant to the rules of this House?

To refresh the memory of Members and of the Speaker, however, I am sure the Speaker is quite familiar with the rules. Standing Order 64(3)(b) states:

> A Member may request that the Ministry respond to a specific question within forty-five days by so indicating when filing his or her question.

Question No. 289 is marked with a number 2 beside it at the bottom of the page, which indicates that an answer is requested within 45 days. As far as I am concerned it is not a matter of choice that the Government has to have one of its Members stand in the House and state that he wants the House to know that this may be complicated. That is not good enough.

In order that Members of the House and all Canadians know what in fact I have asked of the Government, I have asked how many taxpayers' dollars—what is the amount of loot—that was given to Jean Sirois, a friend of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). That is all I want to know.

[Translation]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I thank the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell (Mr. Boudria), the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), and the Parliamentary Secretary for raising this matter.

As the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier so ably put it, under the existing Standing Orders there is absolutely nothing the Chair can do concerning this problem.

However I believe this is an important question which ought to be deferred to the Standing Committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure. Perhaps I might urge the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier to make the appropriate request to the Hon. Member for Timiskaming to have the matter considered or possibly to improve the Standing Orders for the next Parliament.

Shall all questions stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

CANADA CHILD CARE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed from Friday, September 16, consideration of Bill C-144, an Act to authorize payments by Canada toward the provision of child care services, and to amend the Canada Assistance Plan in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee; and the amendment of Ms. Mitchell:

That Bill C-144 be amended by deleting Clause 11.

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, it is I think unfortunate that the House has not taken as close a look as it should have at some of the serious problems with this day care plan of the Conservative Party. As was stressed by some of our members in the debate, the number of witnesses was very severely constrained. The possibility of hearing witnesses from a variety of different parts of the country was prevented by the committee itself. As a result, we have a Bill reported back to the House containing some serious difficulties.

With these amendments we are attempting to do two things. First, to try to solve some of those problems. Second, to try to put in front of Canadians an alternative approach to day care. We think this approach would not only be much more efficient, would not only meet the needs of Canadian women and children much more effectively, but would do so in a manner which embodies strong national directions and objectives for day care of which we can be proud.

This particular amendment is complicated in that it attempts to remove a consequential amendment to the Bill dealing with the Canada Assistance Plan. CAP, as Members are aware, is the mechanism by which the federal Government provides support to people who cannot afford to meet expenditures which most of us are able to pay for, expenditures not only with respect to child care but in a large number of other areas with respect to their welfare. This Bill is a shift from the past approach of directing all federal Government support to child care through CAP. Consequently, the Conservative Government has to amend CAP itself in order to reduce the circumstances under which such child care assistance is distributed.

I want to take just a couple of minutes if I can to back up this amendment in the much broader approach which the NDP wants to take with respect to child care. I do it on the basis of two important pieces of evidence. The first comes from my own constituency of Essex—Windsor and the large number of people who are in need of day care there. The many different homes I visited over the past four and five years take care of children under ad hoc arrangements which do not have the kind of creativity, careful planning and attention to facilities which have to be there in official day care facilities. It is not that love for the children is not there on the part of the people running these ad hoc arrangements. Very often it is a case of the cost being low and parents choosing this arrangement because that is all they can afford. They cannot afford the official day care authorized by the provinces. Yet the need exists and it is desperate. I can think of thousands of people in my own constituency who share this need, and I suspect that close to two million children across Canada will not receive the kind of day care they should receive as a result of the Government's Bill.

Finally, on a personal note, I would like to tell Hon. Members that both my children went to day care facilities, which were excellent, official, inspected facilities, at a time when these facilities were less expensive and access was easier. Even at that time, however, there were waiting lists. My children found that experience to be tremendously stimulating and beneficial for them as individuals. They found it to be tremendously valuable in terms of their ability to work through the school system effectively and well in the future.

We are not talking only about solving a problem which exists for working parents, though that is important. We are also talking about creating a situation for children which will be much better than the situations in which many of them find themselves at the present time.

In a previous debate, I called for a child-centered policy for Canada. We do not have such a policy. When I hear people talking about eliminating abortion as being the heart of dealing with the problems of children, I say to them that the real answer is a child-centered policy that puts a decent day care strategy into effect. That is not what we will get with this Bill. That is why we have moved this amendment, and I hope it carries.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 38 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Mrs. Mitchell).

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

I declare the motion lost.

Motion No. 38 (Ms. Mitchell) negatived.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House will now proceed to the taking of the deferred divisions on report stage of the Bill now before the House.

Call in the Members.

During the ringing of the bells:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair has been asked by the Acting Government Whip to defer the vote until 6 p.m. today.

BROADCASTING ACT

The House resumed from Friday, September 16, consideration of Bill C-136, an Act respecting broadcasting and to amend certain Acts in relation thereto and in relation to radiocommunication, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Motions Nos. 14, 15, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 48, 55 and 74 are grouped for debate. Motions Nos. 14, 15, 17, 18, 19, 21, 22, 23, 48, 55 and 74 will be voted on separately. An affirmative vote on Motion No. 19 obviates the need for a vote on Motion No. 20, and a negative vote on Motion No. 19 necessitates a vote on Motion No. 20.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by adding immediately after line 33 at page 3 the following:

"(ii) encourage the development of Canadian expression, providing a wide range of programming that reflects Canadian attitudes, opinions, ideas, values and artistic creativity, displaying Canadian talent in entertainment programming, and offering information and analysis concerning Canada and other countries from a Canadian point of view."

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by striking out line 40 at page 3 and substituting the following therefor:

"rations, of Canadian men, women and children,"

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by striking out lines 8 and 9 at page 4 and substituting the following therefor:

"provide programming that is predominantly Canadian, using predominantly Canadian crea-".

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by striking out lines 11 to 18 at page 4 and substituting the following therefor:

"and presentation of programming;".

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by striking out lines 19 to 24 at page 4 and substituting the following therefor:

"(f) all persons licensed to carry on broadcasting undertakings have a responsibility for the programs they originate, and such programming should be of high standard;".

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway) moved:

Motion No. 20

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by striking out line 21 at page 4 and substituting the following therefor:

"high standard and should provide a reasonable opportunity for the public to be exposed to the expression of differing views on matters of public concern;"

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by striking out lines 29 and 30 at page 4 and substituting the following therefor:

"enment and entertainment for men and women of all ages, interests, and tastes,"

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

Motion No. 22

That Bill C-136 be amended in clause 3

(a) by striking out lines 33 and 34 at page 4 and substituting the following therefor:

"(iii) include community programs,"

(b) by adding immediately after line 41 at page 4 the following:

"(i) facilities should be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system for educational broadcasting".

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by adding immediately after line 45 at page 4 the following:

"(j) that broadcasting services reflecting the aboriginal cultures of Canada shall be provided where numbers warrant and as resources become available for the purpose;"

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 5 by adding immediately after line 27 at page 8 the following:

"(b) ensures that predominantly Canadian creative and other resources are used in the programming of the Canadian broadcasting system;"

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 10 by striking out line 10 at page 12 and substituting the following therefor:

"3(1);".

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 44 by striking out line 14 at page 28 and substituting the following therefor:

"contemplated by subclause 3(1) and in particular paragraphs 3(1)(j) and 3(1)(k),".

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Just so that we all understand the process, did I hear you say that every one of those motions will be debated together but voted on separately?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member is correct, with the exception that an affirmative vote on Motion No. 19 obviates the need for a vote on Motion No. 20 and a negative vote on Motion No. 19 necessitates a vote on Motion No. 20.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, Hon. Members should be aware of the fact that eight of the motions we are dealing with refer to Clause 3, the broadcasting policy. One motion refers to Clause 5, which deals with the objects and powers of the commission, and Clause 10, which falls under the regulations and general powers of the commission. One motion deals with Clause 44, which refers to the objects and powers of the CBC.

These motions are important and fundamental, yet they are very difficult to deal with all in one shot. I will, however, try to suggest to the Minister that these clauses need to be very seriously reviewed by the Minister. I hope the motions will find favour with her.

I do believe it was the intention of the Minister to see that this aspect of the broadcasting system would reflect the concerns I will try to outline in my argument. Clause 14 relates to Part C of the broadcast policy for Canada. In outlining the broadcasting policy, we have neglected to express our desire for Canadian content and Canadian expression in a very direct way so that there is no misunderstanding on the part of the CRTC. The Minister's response—

Miss MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I am sorry that I was tied up elsewhere when debate on Bill C-136 began.

Mr. Gauthier: Did you issue the writ? That's the question.

Miss MacDonald: You would really like me to tell you what is going on.

Mr. Gauthier: Was your meeting successful? Tell us all about it.

Miss MacDonald: I would like to indicate, for the purposes of debate on this grouping of amendments, that I am prepared to accept Motion No. 14, Motion No. 15 and Motion No. 21.

• (1140)

Mrs. Finestone: I thank the Minister very much for that information. Is that the motion which will recognize children and youth?

Miss MacDonald: Yes.

Mrs. Finestone: I am very pleased with that amendment.

Miss MacDonald: It is just that the motion of the Member for Vancouver Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) comes ahead of yours.

Mrs. Finestone: That does not matter. The Member's motion is along the same vein as mine. I am sure that that was a mere oversight. I am quite pleased that the programming goals will be clearly defined.

My next concern relates to Motion No. 17. The Minister has been good enough to accept Motion No. 14, and Motion No. 17 is directly related to it. It indicates the mechanism of how to make the system work in order that broadcasting undertakings, which include the programming undertakings, distribution undertakings, and network undertakings, operate within the Canadian system. It defines how we can ensure that it is recognizably and predominantly Canadian. I recommend to the Minister a review of that particular amendment. Perhaps we can hear about that when we vote on that amendment.

I point out to the Minister that since the Aird report of 1929 until the present there has been a continuing concern about the relatively limited amount of Canadian programming available on our Canadian channels. I need not remind the Minister of that, she has spoken about it at great length. We have been trying to ensure that we will have increased Canadian programming on our sets. As she well knows, since the spread of cable over 70 per cent of the English language television programs available to Canadians are foreign, for the most part American, and only 2 per cent of all the drama programming in English is Canadian while 10 per cent is French. We want not only made-in-Canada programs but programs which are reflective of Canada. Clause 3(1)(e) has weakened the possibilities of that and I strongly recommend a change in that regard.

With reference to the next series of amendments, our committee recommended very strongly that the developers, conceivers, and makers of the program should be responsible for them. The Minister has essentially made the cable companies, the carriers, responsible for the content of the programs which come through their systems. I suggest that that is unfair. The responsibility for programs which are broadcast should stop with the licensee.

The Canadian Bar Association presented a brief after our hearings. They brought to the Minister's attention the following:

> In the new Act, by contrast, the term "broadcast", used as a verb, would probably be seen by a court as referring back to the definition of the word "broadcasting" in Section 2. Thus, paragraph 3(1)(f) of the new Act would also impose a responsibility on distribution undertakings for programs they retransmit by wire, since such a retransmission would constitute "broadcasting" for the purposes of the Act, even though it only be "other means of telecommunications" not by radio waves.

So cable is included unfairly since, as you and I know, its primary function is to be a carrier. That is inconsistent with the Caplan-Sauvageau report, our broadcasting report, and the concern which the CCTA expressed. I ask the Minister to review what I perceive to be a very serious problem in this particular area.

The next area with which I would like to deal is that of educational broadcasters. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), in the last few days, addressed the importance of the problem of illiteracy which faces this country. He talked about allocating $110 million over the next seven years. That is not very much money but at least it goes in the direction of the concerns which I have raised consistently in our standing committee, particularly in relation to the creative use of captioning for the serious illiteracy problem which we have in our country. I am sure the Minister would agree with me that it is a bondage on one-quarter of the Canadian population.

Some adult Canadians who are able to read and write cannot understand what they are reading. They do not comprehend it. Illiteracy has been called the secret shame of Canada. One-quarter of the Canadian population cannot read the instructions on a soup label or the instructions on how to fill out their income tax return.

A creative approach to addressing this problem through the Broadcasting Act would be to run open captioning along with programs in many areas. Adults who are too ashamed to admit that they cannot read could learn by referring the writing under the pictures to the words they hear. This would be a most effective way to be good educational broadcasters.

The key problem is that there is no reference in this Bill to educational broadcasting as such. Instead, a reference is made to educational programs. That is embedded in Clause 3(1)(r) which reads, "including educational and community programs".

The goal of my amendment is to focus on the role of the community and programmers, which are the responsibility of the cable system, and to separate that out from the role of the educational broadcasters. It is fundamental that the Broadcasting Act make provisions to license, by the CRTC, educational broadcasting services which are established by provincial Governments and that such services be regarded as an integral part of the Canadian broadcasting system.

The Minister herself told us, in her response on June 23, 1988, that there is no agreement among provincial Governments and broadcasters regarding a more specific reference in the new Act and that the existing arrangements, which define what constitutes educational broadcasting through an Order in Council, remain workable. However, it is not clear enough. The CRTC needs direction. The existing language in the 1968 Bill is satisfactory, and I recommend that we go back to Section 3(1) of the old Bill.

There is one last area which I would like to bring to the attention of the Minister, through you, Mr. Speaker, and that relates to Motion No. 55 which is with regard to the standards of programs and the allocation of broadcasting time for the purpose of giving effect to the programming objectives set out in Clause 3(1)(f) and (h). The amendment which I have proposed would remove subclauses (f) and (h) and make the application to all of the broadcasting policy in Clause 3(1). It would set the standards for the entire broadcasting system. I would like to point out to the Minister that Clause 10(1)(c) presently contains all of the sections found in the Bill under Clause 3(1). I suggest that we move it into Clause 3(1).

I gather that I cannot speak to Motion No. 74 which I consider to be a very important motion. I hope—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Would Hon. Members agree to give two more minutes to the Hon. Member in order to complete her remarks?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mrs. Finestone: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to point out to the Minister that with respect to Motion No. 74, and this might have been an oversight, the motion relates to the fact that we have given a specific mandate for programming purposes to the CBC, as found in Clause 44. However, it creates a problem because it leaves out aboriginals and the disabled. I believe that is a drafting error. I would ask the Minister if she would be good enough to check this motion. I have already asked my colleague from Edmonton to check the motion since it was of concern. I think that it is strictly a drafting error. I hope that the Minister will entertain an inclusion of all of the concerns found under Clause 3(1), but in particular paragraphs (j) and (k), which set out the mandate of the CBC. I believe that the Minister would have wanted aboriginals and the disabled to be covered.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be here in the House after having flown overnight from Vancouver with my friend across the aisle, fresh and ready to debate this Bill today.

I want to thank the Minister for accepting these two amendments which I think are important. Motion No. 14, an amendment in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), is the same as my Motion No. 16. It was put forward by the Canadian production community. Without entering into a big debate about the matter in committee, we called it the "Night Heat" debate, something which is reflected in the statement of Paul Siren of the Canadian Conference on the Arts to the legislative committee when he described rather well the notion of producing Canadian programs that are distinctively Canadian and which reflect our culture. I am not talking about an American cop show which is made in Canada, but a cop show that is Canadian and which reflects our distinctiveness and culture. Some people call this a subtle distinction. It is not that subtle. It is a very important distinction. We have tried to include it in the Bill through this expression of encouraging the development of Canadian expression. I think this is good because in the future I see Canadians producing a wide range of programs for international markets in the global village. I see that we want it to reflect Canadian distinctiveness and culture.

Motion No. 15, which has been accepted by the Minister, would include children, along with men and women, in the Bill. This is very important for obvious reasons. Children spend so much time watching television. Thus the broadcast industry and the television networks, or the television that we are describing here, has to take into consideration the impact on children. This was a suggestion put forward by the Children's Broadcasting Institute and the Canadian Broadcast League, among others. I am grateful that the Minister has accepted it.

Motion No. 18 is a motion which I moved. I will try to explain it this way. The clause of the Bill with which it deals states:

> (e) each broadcasting undertaking shall make maximum use, and in no case less than predominant use, of Canadian creative and other resources in the creation and presentation of programming—

There was a great deal of effort to have the word "predominant" included in the Bill. However, the clause continues:

> —unless the nature of the service provided by the undertaking, such as specialized content or format or use of languages other than French and English, renders that use impracticable, in which case the undertaking shall make the greatest practicable use of those resources;

I think that is a clause through which a truck could be driven. Therefore I proposed the amendment to eliminate all the words after the word "programming".

A good example of what is meant by this is set out in a letter that I received from the Canadian Broadcasting League over the signature of Rose Potvin. She wrote this:

> Dear Mr. Waddell,
> The Canadian Broadcasting League was delighted, when we appeared before you, to learn that the Minister had agreed to amend Bill C-136 to include the "predominantly Canadian" phrase in the policy section of the Bill.
> We have now received a copy of the Minister's amendments. The phrase has been included in Clause 3 but attached to it are so many qualifiers that virtually any broadcaster can claim an exemption.
> As we stated in our presentation to the Legislative Committee there is no reason to water down the policy section of Bill C-136 as the CRTC has the discretion to allow lower levels of Canadian content for certain licensees either by condition of license or by regulation.

If there is any difficulty over "predominant", the CRTC can cover it. Let us not put these extra words in the Bill which I say will emasculate the use of the word "predominant". We will not be able to succeed in doing what we set out to do.

The private sector, according to various reports, including a House of Commons committee have stated:

> Every royal commission and task force has said the same thing, and each of them—like the parliamentary committee—has then expressed the pious hope that private broadcasters would finally deliver what they promised when they were licensed. Year after year, the broadcasters have declined to do so—

In other words, they have promised to do better in terms of predominant Canadian content, something they never seem to deliver on.

Motion No. 20 would strike out line 21 at page 4 and substitute the following:

> "high standard and should provide a reasonable opportunity for the public to be exposed to the expression of differing views on matters of public concern;

The clause which we are dealing with here in the bill tries to deal with balance. It deals with having balanced programming. Here it is deemed as a goal of the whole system to offer the public the right to be exposed to differing points of view on matters of public concern. We think, and this is why the amendment is here, that that should be the obligation of each broadcasting undertaking instead of the system as a whole. If it is made to be subject to the system as a whole then some station which everybody watches, for example in British Columbia, takes a very biased point of view, then another station, which hardly anybody watches, gives some room for the other side. We have met the whole standard for the system but it is not really fair and not really what we are attempting to do in terms of expressing a balanced point of view.

I know that this is a tough area, given free speech and guarantees of free speech and freedom of the press. However, I have had experience in British Columbia with this in election campaigns and other areas. It can be seen that these are public airwaves and these people do not own them. There has to be balance in them. Each broadcaster should be obligated to have that balance. We are not Americans in spite of how much the Government wants to make us Americans.

I believe Motion No. 21 was accepted by the Minister. It again would improve the human rights provision, and I congratulate the Minister on that. Of course during her political career she has always been open to women's issues long before those of us who were converted to that issue understood why it was so important.

Let me continue since I only have 10 minutes to deal with all the amendments. I thought the Government would consider accepting Motion No. 23. Motion No. 23 would amend Clause 3 by adding:

> that broadcasting services reflecting the aboriginal cultures of Canada shall be provided where numbers warrant and as resources become available for the purpose.

This motion reflects the views of a number of aboriginal organizations that appeared before the legislative committee. The Bill as it stands makes reference to the need for alternate broadcasting services in the French and English languages. However, we believe that very little has been done to recognize and respond to the communications difficulties of our aboriginal peoples.

• (1200)

As it stands, the Bill provides little reason to believe that this situation will change.

Clause 3(n) merely suggests that programming that reflects aboriginal culture should be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system as resources become available.

As the Canadian Broadcasting League noted in its appearance before the legislative committee: "This gives provision for broadcasting services for aboriginal communities no priority at all".

We believe that the approach represented in our amendment is much more positive. It says that broadcasting services reflecting the aboriginal cultures of Canada should be provided where numbers warrant. In doing so, it adopts the language found in the standing committee report which was supported by members of all Parties. It would assure that aboriginal people have access, whether it be the South or the North, to broadcasting services that they themselves have a chance to control. A number of other groups that appeared before the committee addressed this issue. Our amendment would make aboriginal broadcasting more identified in the Bill.

While the Government recognizes English and French, the Bill is still behind the times in terms of dealing with multiculturalism and aboriginal people.

Some cultural groups have said that this Bill should go through before this Parliament ends because if there is another extreme right wing Tory Government they may not even get this type of legislation.

These groups should think of the alternative, a New Democratic Party Government, or a government centre of the left in which the NDP has the balance of power. That would result in legislation that would really meet the concerns of the Canadian multicultural community and which would not be so tied into and impeded by the free trade deal.

While we appreciate the Minister's co-operation with respect to amendments dealing with children, women and human rights, we understand that over-all the Minister is hemmed in by the cultural implications of the free trade deal and an unwillingness on the part of the Government to attack the North Americanization of Canadian culture.

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, first let me say to the Hon. Member who just spoke that indeed there are groups who have indicated their willingness now to support this legislation. One of those groups is the La Coalition pour la défense de service français de Radio-Canada. Included under the coalition is the New Democratic Party of Quebec. I wanted him to know that that group is on record as supporting this Bill.

I want to comment on some of the proposals that have been made. I have indicated those amendments that I am willing to accept. I believe they strengthen the Bill.

On the other hand, there are several amendments which I cannot accept. For instance, Motion No. 17 would remove the reference to maximum and return to the status quo of "predominant".

The use of the word "maximum" extends to other groupings that cannot be predominantly Canadian the requirement to provide the maximum amount of Canadian content. That would not happen ordinarily, and it ties in directly with Motion No. 18.

I believe the amendment proposed in Motion No. 18 would indeed weaken the Bill because, in those rare instances where it is not possible to provide predominantly Canadian content, if that usage were eliminated, it is quite possible that the licenses that are given to them could be eliminated as well. For instance, classical music stations that do not carry a predominant by Canadian content would not be able to apply for and get a licence under this restriction. Others, such as Tele-latino or Chinavision would not be able to get a licence in that case. First Choice would not be able to get a licence because the movies that are shown are not predominantly Canadian.

We have insisted that those areas which can indeed be predominantly Canadian will be predominantly Canadian. But we also want to insist that where possible, on classical music stations for instance, the maximum use is made of those compositions that have been written by Canadians and so on.

I do not want to weaken the Bill in any way. I think these amendments would do that.

Motion No. 22 deals with educational broadcasting. We have provided in Clause 3 the inclusion of educational and community programs. Educational programs are there in that fashion because we understand the importance of including educational programs.

However, I want the House to understand that this is different from the 1968 Act because the clause at that time was included for a very different reason. It was meant to include the use of the CBC transmitters because there were no educational systems in place at that time. Since then educational broadcasting systems have come into play in British Columbia, Alberta, Ontario and Quebec. They are operating now. They operate as well under federal-provincial accords, signed by Governor in Council. That has been discussed with provincial Governments across the country and that, indeed, is, it is felt, the best approach to follow with regard to educational broadcasting and the fact that education as such is a provincial responsibility. This has worked very well, and I think it will continue to work well.

The one other item that I want to mention is that I will take a look at the points raised by the Member from Mount Royal with regard to Motion No. 74. It is in effect a certain redundancy, but I will look to see whether or not that can be incorporated.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I want to comment briefly on the amendments under consideration. I express my thanks to the Minister for accepting amendments Nos. 14, 15 and 21, and I would simply remind the House that amendment or Motion No. 14 introduced by the Liberal Party was aimed at encouraging . . . I will read it because I think it is important:

> "(ii) encourage the development of Canadian expression, providing a wide range of programming that reflects Canadian attitudes, opinions, ideas, values and artistic creativity, displaying Canadian talent in entertainment programming, and offering information and analysis concerning Canada and other countries from a Canadian point of view,".

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me this is an excellent amendment and, as I just said a moment ago, I am very pleased that the Minister chose to accept it. To some extent I deplore the fact that she could not bring herself to be generous enough to include other amendments, particularly Motion No. 17 also relating to clause 3 and which reads:

"provide programming that is predominantly Canadian, using predominantly Canadian crea-".

I would stress "Canadian" . . . I beg your pardon?

[English]

Miss MacDonald: That would weaken it, the way that that is phrased.

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: The Minister seemed to think this would weaken the Bill. Well, I would not want to argue with her about the value of her opinion on this.

Still, Mr. Speaker, I know it is important to insist that the Government should take into account the will of Canadians to continue strengthening the whole question of programming, to enable them to express their cultural aspirations through this medium. I simply want to make a few comments on the impact of the amendments before us.

Having given the Minister credit for generously accepting amendments Nos. 14, 15 and 21, I want to say that like many others in this field I am disappointed that the Minister's Bill still needs to be reinforced, a Bill which I think seeks a Canadian solution but falls far short of the ideal solution.

This morning, for example, I read a Toronto Star editorial headlined "Broadcasting Act still badly flawed" which says that the Minister must not rest on her laurels but should continue to work and strengthen the Bill. It gives credit to my colleague from Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), telling her, and I quote:

[English]

"Liberal critic, Sheila Finestone, and her NDP counterpart, deserves credit for constructively criticizing a Bill that would clear our airwaves for further Americanization".

Of course, Mr. Speaker, the situation is not the same in the case of someone who speaks French, for he or she does not feel as seriously threatened by Americanization as does the anglophone majority of Canada.

But still I would simply point to a pervading factor in French television programming both inside and outside Quebec, namely the considerable number of American programs dubbed with French dialogue.

I thought that by creating this TV-5 Network, the Government would have realized the great need for Francophones outside Quebec to receive superior programming prepared by a network and a consortium made up of four or five countries, namely, Quebec, Canada, France, Belgium and Switzerland. But for us, outside Quebec, Mr. Speaker, this is an expensive proposition. As a matter of fact, in Quebec, those who want to suscribe to the cable systems offering the TV-5 signal, beside the other four channels must pay around $11.50 a month to get the basic package including the TV-5 channel, while those living in Ottawa or elsewhere outside Quebec must pay about $19.

Here, in my own riding, Skyline charges about $19 for the basic package—

Mrs. MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands): It is different now!

Mr. Gauthier: Not yet. I spoke a few moments ago with some people in my riding who told me that they still have to pay $19, and the Minister says that such is not the case, that it is going to change!

Mrs. MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands): Patience, patience!

Mr. Gauthier: Patience! Goodness gracious, I have been patient for a great many years and people keep telling me that I should be patient and wait. But the fact is that on September 19, 1988, Francophones outside Quebec living in the Ottawa—Vanier riding must pay to Skyline over $19 a month to get the package which includes TV-5.

So, I see a major difference between the $19 which I must pay to get the TV-5 channel and the $11 which my friends have to pay in Quebec. I feel that is a major difference.

As to the Canadian content—

An Hon. Member: There is no Canadian content!

Mr. Gauthier: There is indeed a Canadian content! This TV-5 channel which I feel is excellent for education and information purposes, is a scheme which was put together during the Sommet de la francophonie in Quebec City to meet the needs of all Francophones who want to be . . . how should I say . . . nourished by a television which is sensitive to their concerns.

To me there is a flaw and something is lacking. Perhaps the Minister has an answer in mind to address my concern telling me that I have nothing to worry about and that I should not be so impatient. But the fact remains that on September 19, 1988, that is today, there are Francophones in Ontario as in New Brunswick who find it impossible to suscribe to a cable network offering the basic package they want, including the TV-5 channel.

One of my constituents to whom I was talking a while ago suggested that perhaps we should insist on cable networks offering a basic package with two French channels, that of Radio-Canada—that one is always there—and some other.

I must admit that I do not have the answer, because cable distribution networks are a monopoly granted by the CRTC to groups of people which are concerned above all with providing their customers with what they want. But I suggest there might be a solution which the Minister could thoroughly examine and which would make it possible for Francophones living outside Quebec to have access to the TV-5 channel. We should not overlook the fact that it is the Federal Government which has assumed the rather high cost of this whole new TV-5 experience. There has been a major Federal Government involvement to help the TV-5 channel succeed.

Since Canadian taxpayers contributed to the setting-up of this network, I suggest the Minister should at least ease my concern by telling me that I will get a reply shortly.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway) moved:

Motion No. 30

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by adding immediately after line 37 at page 5 the following:

"(m) educational broadcasters reflecting Canada's provinces are key elements in the Canadian broadcasting system;".

Mr. Deputy Speaker: On a point of order, the Hon. Minister of Communications.

Miss MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I rise to indicate that I am prepared to accept Motion No. 27 and Motion No. 29.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: On debate the Hon. Member for Mount Royal.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I can see that we are going to do extremely well today. I am delighted, and I thank the Minister for the reconsideration. We are looking at broadcasting policy as it affects the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. I will address the recommendations accepted by the Minister in a moment. First, I would like to address my first motion, Motion No. 25.

The general thrust of Motion No. 25 is the consideration that we would require that programming provided by the CBC should include a significant contribution from the Canadian independent production sector. This would ensure that the CBC would use independent producers in a variety of areas, not only for drama, but also for information and enlightenment programs within the CBC.

I understand that the CBC does have in house personnel. It conducts the finest of training, and those people are then available as the pool grows for the private sector and, potentially under this Bill, for those who will be working to produce programs in the distribution sector. Notwithstanding that, we have included the independent production sector in the general body of the Bill. I believe it is in Clause 3(h). The Minister has included the word "enlightenment" to make the mandate of the CBC more specific and clear. I wonder if the Minister wants to give some consideration to including that which she has done for the private sector, the independent production sector.

I am delighted that the Minister has accepted Motion No. 27 proposed by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell). However, his riding will be changing soon. We will see what happens there.

I certainly support the amendment that has been brought forth. I am pleased that the Minister will support the multicultural nature of Canada. Needless to say, the Ethnocultural Council and the Canadian Race Relations Group will be quite delighted with this particular amendment.

Did the Minister state that she was accepting Motion No. 29?

Miss MacDonald: Yes.

Mrs. Finestone: That is the clarification of the word "element", and I believe that the Minister has accepted it. I believe that we should extend a word of thanks to the Canadian Bar Association for the clarity and depth of its evaluation of the whole system. It has been very helpful in enabling us to improve this Bill all along the way. I wish to give a deep word of thanks to the bar association, to the Minister, and her staff for recognizing that that recommendation was worthwhile.

I certainly support Motion No. 30. I brought forward an amendment. However, it was not received with favour. This is an excellent amendment. It brings back the concepts that were found in the original 1968 Bill and puts the educational broadcasters front and centre, which is where they should be. They have a very important role in Canada. Children watch more television than they spend hours at school, there are adults who have learning problems, and there are various aspects of training and retraining in a global economy which is changing so rapidly. They can be enabled, helped, and guided through the educational broadcasting system. I am very pleased to support this motion of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vancouver Kingsway, which states:

I believe that it is fundamental for Canada and the federal Government to take the leadership and ensure that we not only support, but promote educational broadcasters across the land, and ensure that they fit into what the Minister has described as the public and private elements which make up the Canadian broadcasting system. They are a part of the public element of the broadcasting system.

• (1230)

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I want to speak to a couple of the motions, and my colleague from Hamilton Mountain will speak on the last one dealing with the educational aspect.

First I want to thank the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) for mentioning that I will indeed be running in another riding.

Miss MacDonald: Which one?

Mr. Waddell: It is called Port Moody—Coquitlam. That is one of the reasons I can hardly stand today. I ran in the Terry Fox Run at Port Coquitlam.

Miss MacDonald: I did it twice.

Mr. Waddell: The Minister ran twice. I ran just once and I have trouble standing up today, but it was sure worth it. I saw Mrs. Fox personally and that was really something.

I certainly support Motion No. 25, the amendment put forward by my friend from Mount Royal. It says the CBC should have a significant contribution from the independent Canadian production sector. That is an important amendment.

I thank the Minister for accepting our Motion No. 27, which is designed to make the system reflective of the multicultural nature of Canada. I learned something in committee that I would like to pass on in commenting on this part. Mr. Fo Niemi of the Centre for Research Action on Race Relations gave an excellent brief, mostly in French. He said that it is precisely because President Juneau himself and Executive Vice-President Bill Armstrong always confuse two things that the mandate to reflect multiculturalism at the CBC should be included in the Act. They always seem to confuse multiculturalism and internationalism. They mentioned the coverage by the media of the events in Haiti and the culture and development of China. What has this to do with multiculturalism, he asked? Multicultural programming for Canadians within the Canadian context is to reflect the diversity right here at home.

So he said to our friend, Mr. Juneau, President of the CBC, who I called the George Bush of Canadian politics because he has been in so many roles but never been elected to any. Mr. Juneau had a rather heated reaction to that one.

I must admit that I would confuse it, too. The point is, do not confuse international programming with multicultural programming. It is not the same.

Miss MacDonald: Absolutely.

Mr. Waddell: However, I want to say this to the Minister and she should remember it. We still feel strongly, in spite of these provisions being put in the Act, that there is something outside the Act that runs with it, that is, it is all very well to give the CBC an updated mandate as defined in this Act, but if you do not give it any money, if you cut back as the Conservative Government has—

Miss MacDonald: Come on now, Ian. Don't say that with a straight face.

Mr. Waddell: It is absolutely true. Some 28 per cent of regional programming has been cut back, to the tune of $29 million. The reason for that is that the CBC has to get more money to produce its drama and so on and it has done it centrally. It should have had more money from the Government rather than cut-backs. In 1984, in real dollars, the CBC budget was $905 million. In 1985 it was $826 million. In 1986 it was $806 million. In 1987 it was $789 million. In 1988 it was $775 million.

Miss MacDonald: That is a lot of nonsense.

Mr. Waddell: The Minister recently gave $20 million to the English service and $50 million to the French service. However, it is a fact that the Conservative Government, especially in the early part of its term with all those back-benchers who hate the CBC, cut it back quite dramatically. The effect has been to downgrade regional programming, and those of us from Vancouver feel that strongly.

As well, and the Minister knows this very well because she presumably has to fight for it in Cabinet, you must have an increase in funding for the CBC in order to deal with the mandate, or, at least level funding. As a matter of fact, in a recent report, the Conservative Chairman of the Standing Committee said 250 million new dollars annually was needed. That is a far cry from what the CBC is getting.

Dale Goldhawk of ACTRA said while the CBC is expected to fill a wide mandate, the money to do so just is not there. "In short, this part of the announcement does not exactly make my socks roll up and down". Rather well put. He was referring to the Minister's recent announcement. I know the Minister does not like to hear this. She sits there a little frustrated by it.

Miss MacDonald: She has added all that money. Now say that.

Mr. Waddell: The Minister has added money recently, but I dare her to dispute my figures on the CBC's budget over those particular years going from $905 million to $775 million.

Miss MacDonald: It is now $1.1 billion.

Mr. Waddell: We are talking real dollars. We know it has been cut back. Ask anyone in the regions and they will tell you.

The final motion is Motion No. 30 which deals with educational broadcasting. I see my time is running out so I will let my colleague, the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Ms. Dewar), speak on that.

Ms. Marion Dewar (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I, too, want to congratulate the Minister on the amendments she has allowed this morning. They will make it a much stronger Act. However, I am very concerned about Motion No. 30. It should be allowed because not only does the Bill not allow for educational broadcasting as a priority, it downgrades the amendment made to the Act in 1968 in this respect. That is the part we are concerned about. The fact that we need an agreement with the provinces to treat educational broadcasting as a priority was in the Act in 1968 and now that it is not there, it is downgraded.

Miss MacDonald: No, it is not.

Ms. Dewar: My understanding is that the 1968 Act says that facilities should be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system for educational broadcasting. We want this to be strengthened so that educational broadcasters reflecting Canada's provinces are key elements in the Canadian broadcasting system. That is not being allowed to stand.

Bernard Ostry has looked at this very conscientiously and critically in response to the federal Government's refusal to respond sympathetically to repeated constructive suggestions from educational broadcasters from across this country, and its inaction on issues central to the future of educational television. He said the effect of the proposed legislation on educational broadcasters and the people we serve cannot be underestimated. This is not just some other piece of legislation. The Broadcast Act is to one of the largest industries in Canada whose product touches the lives of every man, woman and child in this country what the Criminal Code is to the administration of justice.

I think one of the things we are particularly concerned about is the great strength of the Broadcasting Act and how it can serve the people of this country, and the ability of the educational networks to be able to reach out to the people. Certainly of great concern to us these days are the people who are illiterate. We have seen some of the programs put forward by the educational networks and their ability to reach people that otherwise would not be reached.

I think as well we would be giving our aboriginal people some priority in the Act. I have had great concerns about the fact that even though our amendment was not so strong on the aboriginal people and we were allowing it to say "where numbers warrant" the Minister has not accepted that amendment either. When we get into great debates about the illiteracy of our country and the inhuman way we have treated our aboriginal people over the years—I am certainly not saying that in any partisan context but in the context of how we have evolved as a society—that there could be within this Bill the ability to strengthen the educational networks and at the same time share with the rest of Canada the great riches of our aboriginal people through broadcasting. In my view, this is a very valid amendment that could strengthen the Bill. I hope the Minister will look at it again and allow it to stand so that we could have that kind of strength in this Bill that is so important for the educational networks.

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words in support of the two motions now before us, since Motions Nos. 27 and 29 were accepted by the Minister, something I thank her for. I would like to refer in particular to Motion No. 30 that deals with a matter of great importance to me. If I may read the amendment again:

> (n) Educational broadcasters reflecting Canada's provinces are key elements in the Canadian Broadcasting System;".

To me this statement seems quite realistic and accurate. Educational broadcasters did not exist in 1968, at any rate when the Act was passed, at least not in Ontario; TV Ontario did not exist in 1968. Having worked, as I said in this House, for nearly eleven years and some months in education in Ontario and having been instrumental in launching the idea of an educational TV system in Ontario, I find it unfortunate that the Minister cannot respond positively to our proposal not to decrease the importance of educational television, but at least leave the matter as it was in the 1968 Act.

[English]

The 1968 Broadcasting Act at Clause 3(i) stated:

> —facilities should be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system for educational broadcasting

This is what we call a stand-alone clause for broadcasters who wanted to go into educational television. Even though the Minister may disagree completely with those of us who think that she is downgrading the educational broadcaster by removing that stand-alone clause and putting in a clause which in our view groups the educational television with community programs, any broadcaster could say that he is meeting the requirements of the Bill because his programming is in keeping with it and does include educational and community broadcasting.

I know the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Ms. Dewar) just quoted from a release put out by the Chairman of TV Ontario. Mr. Ostry in his plea to the Minister asked that she change the wording of the Bill to allow for this kind of stand-alone clause, but let me quote Mr. Ostry. He expressed:

> —our profound disappointment in both the current hasty, eleventh hour process and its outcome.
> Now is hardly the time to downgrade the standards of educational television originating in the regions. Indeed, it is a paradox that, at a time when the federal Government is, quite properly, committing millions of dollars to battle the problem of adult illiteracy in Canada, when the Prime Minister is endeavouring to encourage the development of a new "science culture", and when educational issues about skills training and multiculturalism command headlines in our news media, this proposed legislation appears to go out of its way to shove educational broadcasters out of "the system"

This comes back to the argument, and the Minister knows it, of how you define education. Maybe we could argue that there is a role for private broadcasters, a constitutional role that they may be able to displace or take over educational domains that are of provincial jurisdiction. I feel strongly that the Chairman of TV Ontario in my province, who is a well-known, serious and reasonable man, would come out so strongly condemning the present legislation and saying it is too weak. I hope the Minister will see the light as she did with the other two amendments in this grouping and accept, reply or assure us that she has absolutely no intention of muddying the waters between the provincial authorities on educational TV, the broadcasters or those who are lucky enough to have licenses given to them. I would not want us to see a few years hence have educational TV downgraded to the extent that it cannot operate or compete or see that its mandate has been weakened.

Before I end my remarks on this question, Mr. Speaker,

[Translation]

. . . Mr. Speaker, let me make a simple clarification. Earlier I referred to TV-5, and I would like to clarify matters. I stated inaccurately that in Quebec the charge was $11 and some pennies, while in fact it is exactly $14.32. I checked earlier. I am told it is some $6 higher in Ontario and that the matter is still current. I must admit this is a matter of great concern to me, and I simply wanted to come up with accurate figures to avoid being told: Jean-Robert, you were off the mark, the charge is $14.32. Therefore, for the record, Mr. Speaker, the charge in Quebec is $14.32 for basic service, including programs from the four channels: The Canal Famille, the Météo-média, Musique Plus and YTV in English, plus of course TV-5, while in Ontario we have no access to that basic programming and we must pay $4 a month in decoder rental plus $2 in service fees, so that in French-speaking Ontario areas, we have to pay some $6 more than in Quebec to get the service that, as I emphasize, is less extensive than that available in Quebec.

[English]

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I rise to add my support to the amendments which we are discussing and to urge the Minister to accept them.

I note, and put on the record as I think others have done, the views of the President of Knowledge Network, Mr. Glenn Farrell, who said in respect of this Bill:

> The amendments to Bill C-136, proposed by federal Communications Minister Flora MacDonald are inadequate because they fail to recognize the important role that educational broadcasters play in Canada. This Bill downgrades the role of educational broadcasters at a time when regional communications are increasingly important.

There is not a Member of Parliament who has young children or young grandchildren, as I do, who cannot help but realize how much more knowledge our young people between the ages of four and eight or four and ten have about matters than children had 10 or 20 years ago. This is so because they have the opportunity to watch educational programs like Sesame Street and many others too numerous for me to report on. Any Bill which does not expand the ability of TV to disseminate more and more educational programming is deficient.

I want to speak about another aspect of the Bill, dealing not just with children. For almost as many years as I have been a Member of Parliament, I have raised questions about the fact that 20 per cent of the people of Canada are functionally illiterate, this at a time when we know that businesses, industries and farmers are facing increasing competition, making it tougher and tougher to be a success. Other countries have moved ahead of us because of their knowledge and ability to use the newest technology. How could the 20 per cent of Canadians who are functionally illiterate possibly find jobs, even if we lived in a period of full employment in that future when they do not have the ability to fill the jobs which are or will be available.

In the 1984 Throne Speech of the Government was a promise that dealing with illiteracy was to be a major objective of this Conservative Government. Silnce then virtually nothing was done by the federal Government, much too little is being done by the provincial Governments, and the voluntary organizations working in the field do not have the financial ability to do the job they want and need to do.

Four years have gone by and suddenly, two weeks ago, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) resurrected this important question, which he ignored for four years, and announced that the Government is proposing to spend over $100 million in the next four years dealing with illiteracy. We know that 20 per cent of the people of Canada are functionally illiterate, but nobody has any real information on the numbers of people who are attending programs organized by the provincial Governments and by volunteer organizations such as Frontier College or one such as that just started less than a year ago with offices in the constituency of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper), called Beat the Street.

Nobody knows how many people are in the programs. As a matter of fact one of the little tasks I have set for my staff is to get in touch with every such organization across Canada to find out how many people are in these programs. I have some idea of the information they will get. We will find that probably fewer than 5 per cent of the five million people who are functionally illiterate are in programs that will help them.

My colleague, the Hon. Member from Hamilton, has talked about the problems of native people. In cities like Winnipeg, Regina or Vancouver, to mention just three, one cannot help, if one drives around these cities, but note the tremendous movement into the cities of native people from the reserves. They come to the cities and their ability to speak English is far from what it should be. Many of them are in fact functionally illiterate.

In these cities, there is a time bomb which is ticking away and which will explode. Dealing with illiteracy is just one of the questions that we have to address if that time bomb is in fact not to explode. One of the ways it can be dealt with is by giving the broadcasting system, radio and television stations, public and private, not only the right to put on educational programs but the resources to do the job. Perhaps, for the private sector, we need legislation which will force the broadcasters to do some of the educational and cultural things they promised to do when they got their licences and which in fact they almost completely ignored once they were successful in getting the licenses. What they have concentrated on is having the right, as I think the Caplan-Sauvageau Commission has pointed out, to virtually to print money and make tremendous profits in return on their investment.

This is the situation we are in. It is a very desperate situation, it is a very serious situation. It is a situation which needs to be dealt with in every possible way. One of the ways is to amend this Bill so that the Broadcasting Act will make it very clear that radio and television stations and the networks have the right, and I would say the responsibility, to increase and improve educational programming. We need this amendment in the Bill.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The first question is on Motion No. 25, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division will be deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 27 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver Kingsway.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 27 (Mr. Waddell) agreed to.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The next question is on Motion No. 29 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 29 (Mrs. Finestone) agreed to.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The next question is on Motion No. 30 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver Kingsway. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division will be deferred.

May I call it one o'clock?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being one o'clock, I do now leave the Chair until two o'clock this day.

At 12.58 the House took recess.

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

MATANE PAPER MILL PROJECT

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, today I should like to refer to a situation in Quebec where the Conservative Government is still dragging its feet. On a number of occasions the Government promised the people of Matane that a paper mill would soon become reality. In 1984 the then Leader of the Conservative Party said that a Conservative Government would give the green light to the paper mill project. The rooster did crow three times but nothing has been done about Matane. Here is a comment reported in the Journal de Montréal September 9 issue: "Quebecor and Donahue management are puzzled about the Mulroney Government reluctance to sign a written commitment concerning Matane's paper mill".

Last year the Department of Regional Industrial Expansion told us it would soon be time to break open the champagne, yet here we are, a year later, and the Conservative Government still has not made any commitment in this case.

Recently the Government dispatched its Minister of State for the sod-turning ceremony at Matane. Quebec Government and private sector spokesmen did make clear and firm commitments, but the Minister of State had come empty handed.

Time is of the essence with respect to this project, for an elections is near and the people of Matane will remember this.

THE LATE JACQUES BEAUCHAMP

Mr. Gilles Bernier (Beauce): Mr. Speaker, the fourth estate in Quebec is in mourning after the death of Jacques Beauchamp. It is somewhat of an institution that has disappeared, Mr. Speaker.

The very prolific sports writer and public relations vice-president of the Journal de Montréal died of a heart attack at the age of 61.

Jacques Beauchamp made a name for himself in Quebec and throughout the rest of Canada. He loved his job and was a tireless and honest worker. Sporting events were his forte, and the men and women who got to know him will tell you that he was a hard and valiant worker respectful of others, a demanding but generous and inspiring man. Jacques Beauchamp was a great humanist, ever looking at the positive side of things.

We offer our condolences to his close relatives and to the large Péladeau family. Professional and amateur athletes lost a friend, a father and an adviser. Sports fans lost a walking encyclopedia.

Jacques Beauchamp, Quebecers loved you! We salute you.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

OPPOSITION TO HYDRO QUÉBEC POWER LINE ROUTE

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, the Algonquins of Barriere Lake are currently blockading the construction of a Hydro Québec power line from the townsite of La Domaine to Rapid Lake, their present reserve. The Algonquins of Barriere Lake oppose the construction of the line through La Verendrye Wildlife Reserve for good reason. A sum of $3.8 million is to be spent by the Department of Indian Affairs on a power line opposed by the very people for whom it is supposedly being built.

Why, you ask? Because the traditional uses and occupancy of the land by the Algonquins are already being severely eroded by hydro developments, road construction, industrial activity, hunting, and so on.

The Algonquins ask, what of the recognition and affirmation of their rights in Section 35 of Canada's Constitution? Must there be a confrontation, must all developments be halted, before the federal and provincial Governments sit down and listen?

I have tried, as have the Algonquins of Barriere Lake, to get the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and Premier Bourassa to listen. The Algonquins call for a fair settlement, for conservation, and for a sustainable approach to their homeland. Canada and Quebec must listen and learn.

These lands were set aside as Indian territory by the Royal Proclamation of 1763. Canada and Quebec must respect the rights, title, and agreements with the First Nations.

OLYMPIC GAMES—PARTICIPATION OF SCARBOROUGH ATHLETES

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, six Canadians from the city of Scarborough are part of Team Canada at the Olympics. One of them, Ben Johnson, is a household name as the world's fastest man.

Let the names of Tessa Gordon, Lisa Ann Lyn, Elizabeth Levi, Asif Dar and Milton Ottey go into the record of this House as men and women doing their part to represent the ideals of youth around the world and to bring honour to Canada.

THE LEADER OF THE NEW DEMOCRATIC PARTY

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, Stephen Lewis sat down and made a deal with the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). Ian Deans sat down and made a deal with the Prime Minister. Dennis McDermott sat down and made a deal with the Prime Minister. And now Ed Broadbent says he is willing to sit down and make a deal with the Prime Minister.

I wonder what the price will be for selling out on the trade deal; a larger limousine, Minister of Finance, invitations to 24 Sussex, or does he want to be Deputy Prime Minister? The slogan for the NDP will now be "Vote for Ed Broadbent and re-elect Brian Mulroney".

If it were not so hypocritical it would be funny. If it were not so dishonest, it would be a joke. Well, for all we care the Leader of the NDP can form his coalition with the Conservatives, because then after the election the Liberal Government will have to face only one true opposition Party.

ROAD SAFETY

HIGHWAY TRAFFIC DEATHS

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, in 1985, 375 people were killed in rail, air, and marine accidents in Canada. Yet 4,365 were killed on our roads and highways.

Highway traffic deaths are still way too high. However, the trend is in the right direction. The rate declined from 4.2 deaths per 100 million vehicle-kilometres in 1973 to 2.2 in 1986. Safer vehicles, the use of seat-belts and child restraint devices, and the crackdown on drunken driving have all helped.

The Road Safety Directorate of the Department of Transport and its provincial counterparts are to be congratulated on their work to date and we wish them even greater success in the future.

TERRY FOX MARATHON OF HOPE

TRIBUTE TO PARTICIPANTS

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, more than 425,000 Canadians ran, jogged, cycled, and strolled through 22 countries yesterday to raise an estimated $5 million for cancer research in the Terry Fox Marathon of Hope. Our embassy and Armed Forces personnel overseas were joined by supporters from many other countries. This is a tribute to Terry Fox and especially to his parents, Betty and Roly Fox. It is a tribute that the run continues, and it is a tribute that the number of people participating is expanding.

The Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody (Mr. St. Germain) and I ran the 10 kilometres in Port Coquitlam yesterday—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Waddell: —I can hardly walk today, Mr. Speaker—in the presence of the Fox family. We took the opportunity, both before and after the race, to express to them the thanks of all MPs for their determined work in the Fox family tradition so that some day cancer can be beaten.

EARNINGS EXEMPTION FOR WELFARE RECIPIENTS

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, according to the recent Ontario Social Assistance Review Committee report the Canada Assistance Plan discourages people on welfare from getting a part-time job that could lead to a full-time job by reducing their welfare benefits if they work too much. If we are serious about getting people off the welfare rolls we should be trying to encourage them to seek employment, not penalize them for working.

It is time for the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) to take another look at the earnings exemption for welfare recipients under the Canada Assistance Plan.

HEALTH

PRESENCE OF TOXIC CHEMICALS IN FOODS

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, last week the Ontario Government released a study showing that a wide variety of foods purchased in the province contain low levels of dioxins, dibenzofurans, and other toxic chemicals. This study confirms the results that Dr. Kate Davies of the Toronto Department of Public Health found in 1986.

Dioxins and furans are two highly toxic families of chemicals that come from the production of pesticides and wood preservatives and pollute the air when garbage is not burned at high enough temperatures. One kind of dioxin, TCDD, is believed to cause cancer in people. Scientists speculate that dioxins, furans, and PCBs create a reaction in the human body that may lead to increased cancer, inhibition of the immune system, and changes in hormones which, among other things, control the ability to reproduce.

The question we must ask ourselves is whether any level of these chemicals in food is a safe level. It seems to me that most Canadians would answer that the only safe level is zero.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

GOVERNMENT RECORD

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Mr. Speaker, this week celebrates the fourth anniversary of a Government with a record of achievement second to none, including its record on the environment. Even so, we need more than four years to correct and remedy the Liberal legacy of environmental abuse, neglect, and apathy.

The Niagara River was the largest toxic garbage pail ever imagined, but last year, for the very first time, a Niagara River Clean-up Agreement was signed.

• (1410)

We have passed an Environmental Protection Act with teeth in it.

The Canadian Water Conservation Act allows us to control our own water.

Canadians are demanding action for a clean Canada. This Government has listened, has acted, is acting, and will deliver on this as it has on other things.

EMPLOYMENT

RECOGNITION OF SEXUAL HARASSMENT AS HEALTH AND SAFETY HAZARD

Ms. Marion Dewar (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, Bonita Clark's long ordeal has ended. I rise today to pay tribute to her courage and perseverance in battling an issue of major importance to women in the workforce. Canadian women owe a debt of gratitude for her seven-year struggle to have sexual harassment on the job recognized as a health and safety hazard.

Ms. Clark began to work as a stationary engineer at the Stelco plant in Hamilton in 1979. From her very first days on the job she was confronted with sexual harassment and gender discrimination. She recently succeeded in securing women their own washroom facilities at the plant, a basic necessity of decent working conditions.

According to the Human Rights Commission, sexual harassment is a reality faced by over 80 per cent of Canadian working women. Bonita Clark, by refusing to accept this reality and by protesting the health hazard posed by sexual harassment, provides inspiration to the women and men who are continuing her struggle to guarantee Canadians a workplace free of sexual harassment.

DELAY IN DELIVERY OF QUESTIONNAIRE

Mr. John Oostrom (Willowdale): Mr. Speaker, the Post Office under our Government has made great strides in improving its service. However, there still remain pockets of inefficiency which must be corrected. Constituents call every week to point out some glaring oversights in postal service, a common one being "the address does not exist", even though the person has resided there for the last 20 years.

Two months ago I conducted a survey to gauge my constituents' views on abortion. I used the postal service to deliver the questionnaire, and I received a quick response of over 7,000 replies. However, two weeks ago I was informed that an area of my riding was only now receiving the survey that I thought had been all delivered. I contacted the postal substation and found that my surveys had just arrived, and that they must have been lost for the past two months. The area left out was approximately a quarter of my riding.

The Post Office could not provide me with an explanation for this major error. There is no excuse for this type of service, and I hope that the Post Office now moves quickly to ensure that mail never gets lost.

THE LEADER OF THE NEW DEMOCRATIC PARTY

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, the NDP's main foreign policy plan is to pull out of NATO, to destroy our alliance with Great Britain, France, West Germany, Italy, Greece, Spain and Portugal. The Leader of the NDP (Mr. Broadbent) now says that he is not sure that we will pull out of NATO.

The NDP's main economic plan is to nationalize the Canadian banks. But the Leader of the NDP says that he is not sure he will want to nationalize the banks.

The NDP says that they have become a mainstream political Party, but Eric Gourdeau, the NDP's star candidate in Québec, says that the NDP is controlled by a tiny group of 50 communists.

Finally, the Leader of the NDP says that he is opposed to the free trade deal. But now he says that he is willing to form a coalition with the Conservative Party. The NDP and the Leader of the NDP have lost their grip on reality. Canadians want a strong, independent, democratic, sovereign Canada and will vote Liberal in the upcoming federal election. Because the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) has sold out his country, the Leader of the NDP has sold out his Party.

How can a man who says he opposes the trade deal say, with all his heart, that he is willing to deal with the Conservative Party?

THE LEADER OF THE NEW DEMOCRATIC PARTY

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, the NDP have become a laughing stock. On the one hand, Eric Gourdeau, the NDP's so-called star candidate in Quebec, has said that the NDP in Quebec is controlled by "a tiny bunch of 50 people, Trotskyite or Leninist philosophers who turn out treatises willy-nilly", confirming what the MP for Terrebonne (Mr. Toupin) told us a long time ago.

On the other hand, the self-proclaimed defender of the little people, the Leader of the NDP (Mr. Broadbent), has said that he is willing to form a coalition with the Tories after the next election.

He said that he was opposed to the trade deal. The Member for Oshawa said that he was standing up for Canada, but now he says that he is willing to sit down with the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) after the next election, to ram the trade deal through. He is willing to sell out his principles for a share of power.

The Leader of the NDP will not have that chance, because Canadians are going to vote for the one Party that cares for one strong and independent and sovereign Canada, the Liberal Party.

The question for the NDP Leader is this. Is he planning to sell out his Party to the right-wing Tories, or is he planning on having his campaign run by a bunch of lefty communists? That is the question for the Leader of the NDP.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

MULTICULTURALISM

CRITICISM OF GOVERNMENT ACTIONS

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, it is very interesting to note that in the four years of administration of the Conservative Government, multiculturalism rated last on the list of priorities. Only in the last dying moments of the administration have we seen a Government, whetted by its appetite, go into an election campaign trying to maintain some degree of integrity in dealing with Canada's multicultural communities. Only in the dying moments do we see a Multiculturalism Bill, a Canadian Heritage Languages Institute, and now a realigned Department of Multiculturalism.

For four years the political climate vis-à-vis multiculturalism was a dry drought. Now, on the eve of a campaign, it is pouring and thundering with gifts.

It is time that this Government treat multiculturalism as other important areas of public policies, and detach the policy of multiculturalism from the roller-coaster election cart. Its assumption that Canadians are gullible and ignorant will not work, and Canadians, not only those in this field, will see through the barrage of Tory promises in the dying moments of a dying administration.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

STAFFING OF DEPARTMENT

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, we see that there are still deliberations going on that forestall my putting a question to the Prime Minister. Here he is.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I would have thought that he would have been going down the road a piece.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): The way that the Government cuts programs reveals its priorities. Obviously the environment has not been one of this Government's priorities. The Prime Minister talks about fighting pollution, but instead he fires those people who protect us from pollution. Once again the facts contradict the boasting of the Prime Minister.

Over 500 environmental protection officers and pollution control experts and scientific researchers have already lost their jobs in the Department of the Environment in the last four years. Now, the Director of Personnel of the Department of the Environment has said that another 361 jobs will be wiped out over the next two years.

Having already slashed program after program in the Department of the Environment, how can the Prime Minister possibly justify cutting another 361 jobs in this Department?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I do not know what the Leader of the Opposition would do without his newspaper in the morning in order to base his questions at Question Period in the afternoon. He is obviously relying totally on a Canadian Press story that is very misleading, if not totally incorrect.

The Leader of the Opposition says that since 1984 the Conservatives have cut 511 jobs in the Department of the Environment. That is not true. The figure could only be arrived at, if at all, if one were to take the 230 architects and engineers whose salaries were previously paid by the Department of the Environment whose salaries are now being paid by the Department of Public Works, and treated those jobs as if they had been eliminated. They have not been.

The people concerned are in their same positions and doing the same things and providing the same services for the Department of the Environment. The only difference is that their salaries are being paid from a different source.

For the Right Hon. Member to get on his feet today and refer to those as cuts, or as jobs eliminated, is to indicate that this man is not competent enough to be Minister of the Environment, let alone Prime Minister of the country.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): The fact remains that there have been over 500 person-year jobs taken out of the Department, eliminated from the National Research Council, eliminated from the research divisions that are fighting PCBs and toxic chemicals in the Niagara, and the elimination of the Guelph-Toronto toxicology project. I note very carefully that the Minister did not deny the statement of his Director of Personnel, and another 361 jobs are now set to be eliminated in the next two years.

PERSONNEL CUTBACKS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, it seems there is enough money for nuclear submarines, for pre-election goodies across the country and for a penitentiary in Port-Cartier in the Prime Minister's riding, but cuts are still being made at the Department of the Environment.

Two weeks ago, the Prime Minister announced that the environment was this country's Number one priority. However, he has already fired 500 environmental experts and there are plans to fire another 361.

Mr. Speaker, the environment seems to be the new sacred trust of the Prime Minister and his Government.

My question is simply this: If the environment is a priority for the Prime Minister and his Government, why does the Government keep cutting the jobs of the people who protect Canada's environment?

• (1420)

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, it is obvious that the Leader of the Opposition prepared his second question and gave it by rote without any reference to my answer to his first question. I told him that he is basing his questions on false information, on newspaper reports that are misleading if not totally inaccurate.

For example, he just said that the projections for the next two fiscal years are that Environment Canada will lose up to 361 person-years, or jobs. That is not correct. The estimate for those two years, to the extent that we can project at all, and it is inadequate, totally ignores, for example, the person-years that have already been approved by Cabinet with respect to South Moresby National Park Reserve, the person-years associated with Cabinet's approval of the clean-up of the St. Lawrence River, the person-years associated with the Canadian Environmental Protection Act.

I am told that five months into the current fiscal year my Department has already received upwards of 100 additional person-years which have not been taken into account in the calculations that the Leader of the Opposition puts on the floor of the House of Commons as though they were ex cathedra. They are not. They are wrong.

STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO DIRECTOR OF PERSONNEL

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, is the Minister categorically contradicting his Director of Personnel who made a clear statement as to what was in store for the employees in his Department over the next two years? Is he not denying that, in addition to the transfers to the other Departments, over 330 direct employment years in his Department have been let go in the last four years?

Just over the weekend the Ontario Government study revealed that there are dioxins in eggs, peaches, chicken, potatoes, hamburger, wheat, all of these foods eaten by Canadians. When the Prime Minister and his Minister eliminate toxic chemical research programs as they have done in this Department, they are eliminating the very experts, the very researchers who have been hired by the people of Canada to protect us against this type of problem. Is the Government not guilty of gross hypocrisy when we compare the Prime Minister's positive boasting against what has been happening in that Department?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, when it comes to gross hypocrisy, the Leader of the Opposition wrote the book. I am not taking issue with anybody in my Department; I am taking issue with the Leader of the Opposition and a press report on which he bases his question. That press report is factually incorrect.

For example, if one were to rely totally on Main Estimates as opposed to Main Estimates and Supplementary Estimates in a given fiscal year, one would come to the same kind of conclusion as the Leader of the Opposition has, that in 1986-87 the Department of the Environment would have lost 103 jobs. It did not. When the Supplementary Estimates were calculated into the equation, we gained 29, on a net basis, one of only three Departments to do so, reflecting the priority that the Prime Minister and the Cabinet attach to the environment.

PROJECTED STAFFING OF DEPARTMENT

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Prime Minister or the Minister of the Environment. No matter how much the Minister of the Environment engages in a shell game, the fact is that his Director of Personnel announced on Friday, as confirmed by the Public Service Alliance, that there will be cuts in the next two years, beginning April 1, 1989, of 180 persons, followed by another cut of 181 persons beginning April 1, 1990.

In the name of consistency and decency, which may be words too hard for them to spell correctly, can they deny and reject these projections made by the personnel manager in the Department and by the Public Service Alliance? Can they dispel these fears that there will be reductions of 361 persons in the next two years in the Department of the Environment? Can they do that on the floor now?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the Public Service Alliance of Canada does not make policy for the Government of Canada. I am saying to him that the Department of the Environment will not be losing 361 person-years. It will not be losing 200, anything of the kind that the Leader of the Opposition and the Member for Davenport have reported.

The statement by the relevant personnel person in my Department has been wildly taken out of context. It has been distorted and misreported by the Canadian Press. I am not taking issue with Canadian Press because I realize this is a complex business, too complex for the Leader of the Opposition to understand. But the Member for Davenport, who was a Minister of the Environment at one time, has no such excuse.

STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO DEPARTMENTAL OFFICIAL

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, do we understand the Minister to say that one of his employees, the Chief of Personnel, Mr. Marks, was wrong in saying last week that there will be a cut of 180 persons beginning April 1, 1989, followed by another cut of 181 persons beginning April 1, 1990? Is the Minister denying the correctness of the statement made by one of his employees? Is he giving Canadians the assurance that these two cuts will not take place? Will he say that in the House now?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I told the Member for Davenport that the so-called cut of 361 person-years in the coming two fiscal years cannot be grounded in fact. It takes into account neither the person-years approved by Cabinet for South Moresby nor the ones approved for the St. Lawrence River clean-up, or the ones associated with the Canadian Environmental Protection Act, not to mention the other initiatives that the Cabinet has already approved and those that the Cabinet is likely to approve in the next two fiscal years.

The story is not correct. The Member for Davenport is wrong. The Leader of the Opposition is even more wrong.

REQUEST FOR ASSURANCE ON FUTURE STAFFING

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I will allow the Minister to add to his list of all the people who are wrong.

As I always do when he cites statistics, I listened to the Minister with a great deal of care. However, I will quote not the Leader of the Opposition, or the environmental critic for the Liberal Party, but what the Minister's Director of Personnel said with reference to cut-backs of 361 jobs. He said: "We cannot do anything else. We are committed to that reduction of 361". He went on to say: "Unless the powers that be give us relief from that, we are committed to proceed with that cut".

Those are Mr. Marks' words, not mine or any other opposition Member's. Are there cuts of that magnitude? Given what he said a few minutes ago about some additions elsewhere in his program, are there really just cuts of 261 as opposed to 361? In either case, if we are to believe what the Government has said about its commitment to the environment, why does it not give the unequivocal assurance that there will not be any cuts in the Department of the Environment this year or next year? Answer that.

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, every time the Leader of the New Democratic Party opens his mouth he adds to the length of the list of people who are wrong. He comes into the House with a prefabricated question, similar to that which was asked by the Leader of the Opposition. I told him, on the floor of the House of Commons, that the figure of 361 is wrong. I told him that the 511 figure for previous fiscal years was wrong. He is left naked in the wind with his questions.

I am quite prepared to send to the Leader of the NDP a complete breakdown of the person-years for Environment Canada for each of the last four fiscal years, and those that are projected in the years ahead with expenditures that have been approved by the Government of Canada in connection with which there are person-years.

Once he has had a chance to peruse that statement from me and my Department and the Government, I think he will find it is much more reliable than the press story on which he is basing his questions. The press story is wrong.

DEPARTMENT'S BUDGET

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the press story is much more reliable, I am sure, than the answers that we are getting in the House. If the Minister was calling into question the newspaper article, his own official's quotes, why did he not come into the House today and forthrightly and directly announce the number of cuts?

Will the Minister give assurances that those people who, according to his own officials, are going to be laid off, a number of whom officially would have to officially receive their notices by the end of this month, according to regulation, will not be given notice?

Second, considering that last week the Prime Minister stated in the House that the Government had increased the budget of the Department of the Environment since 1985 by some 13 per cent, will he now tell the House that the Prime Minister forgot to mention that, in the fall of 1984, there were massive cuts? If he had compared the record of his Government from the time that he was elected, not from 1985 to the present, there were actually—get this, and correct me if it is wrong—a 10 per cent net reduction in real dollars spent on the environment by the Government. Will the Minister admit that?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, how could I admit it when it is wrong? The budget of Environment Canada, and I am dealing with the Main Estimates only, forget about the Supplementary Estimates which will greatly add to those numbers, is now $796 million plus. In the last fiscal year for which the Liberals were responsible, the corresponding figure was $777 million. That is an increase of $20 million, even without the Supplementary Estimates.

If the Supplementary Estimates are added, plus all the expenditures, for example, from the Western Diversification Office for South Moresby, the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency for the Halifax Harbour clean-up, the Department of Regional Industrial Expansion for the St. Lawrence River clean-up, you will find, Sir, that we have not only kept up with inflation, but we have also exceeded it.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, we also want to see those figures. The Minister is now taking on every environmental group in the country, the opposition Parties, and his own officials. The only person who agrees with him is the Prime Minister. That should cause him some concern.

BUDGETARY CUTBACKS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my last question is directed to the Prime Minister. Not long ago, the Prime Minister gave Quebecers and other Canadians the assurance that his Government had made a collective commitment to the environment. My question is simply this: Are these budget cuts of almost 400 per cent an essential part of his collective commitment to the environment?

[English]

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the NDP states that nobody agrees with the Prime Minister and myself about the splendid record of the Government of Canada in the environmental field over the last four years.

May I put on the record a statement made in Toronto by the Prime Minister of Norway, Gro Brundtland, who headed the celebrated Brundtland Commission on Environment and Development. She stated: "I thank the Canadian people and institutions who supported us," the commissioners, through the United Nations. "I thank the Canadian Government, in particular Prime Minister Mulroney and Minister of the Environment McMillan, for their commitment and for the example they have been setting for other industrialized countries".

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

MATANE PAPER MILL PROJECT—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and Minister of State for Science and Technology. The people of Matane have heard it three times now. In 1984, the Prime Minister promised a paper mill. In 1987, the Minister himself said in the House that Matane was a priority for his Government. I think we all realize what the score is. A few days ago, in fact it was September 7, the Minister of State went empty-handed to a sod-turning ceremony. When will the Government keep its promises to the people of Matane and participate with the private sector and the Government of Quebec in the paper mill project? We are very close to an election. Will the people of Matane finally get their share of the Conservative pie?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, under the Liberal Government, Matane was promised any number of things for twenty years. There were promises galore, and nothing was ever done for Matane.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. de Cotret: In recent months we received a number of projects from developers who are interested in Matane. In one case, a formal offer was made. The project was changed, and now a new project is about to be finalized with the developers and the Province of Quebec. I can assure the Hon. Member for Papineau that everything is unfolding as it should, to the satisfaction of the developers I met last week.

REQUEST FOR MINISTERIAL COMMITMENT

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, my question is very straightforward and is directed to the Minister responsible for this dossier. When will he make a clear commitment on behalf of the federal Government? The Prime Minister promised Matane a paper mill. Four years later, nothing has happened. The unemployment rate in this region is 20 per cent. If the Conservatives had been serious about what they said, the paper mill would already be a fact. They had four years to do it, and if they had, the unemployment rate would not be 20 per cent. When is he finally going to act responsibly and give the people of Matane what they have been waiting for all this time?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, the people of Matane have been waiting for 20 years. I can inform the House that there has been a major improvement in the Gaspé—Lower St. Lawrence since 1984, as far as unemployment is concerned. We have created 27,000 new jobs, which brought the unemployment rate down by 2 per cent. We are going to pursue our projects for Matane. We are going ahead. As I said earlier to the Hon. Member for Papineau, the project was changed several times. We now have the final version. We are working out the final details, and the people of Matane will be delighted to see that for the very first time a Government has kept its promises instead of making promises without end for 20 years without ever acting on them.

PROJECTED DEPARTMENTAL STAFFING

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I would like to pursue the question of mathematics with the Minister of the Environment. He has been very careful in making his statements with respect to this news story. One thing the Minister has not yet denied is whether there will be cuts in the Ministry of the Environment. I want to ask the Minister specifically, will there in fact over the next two years be reductions in the person power which is there to administer the crucial new environmental concerns which people across the country are starting to feel? Will there be cuts, or will there not be?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the question. In effect, the Hon. Member asks: "Over the next two years, when I am Minister of the Environment, will there be cuts in my Department?" It implies that he expects the Conservatives to be in power over the next two years.

Of course I am not creating cuts. I am in the business of getting through Cabinet measures to protect the environment and to establish national parks. Almost in every case there are person-years associated with those initiatives.

I have told the Leader of the Hon. Member that, if one relied totally on the Main Estimates that are projected into the future, one will miss a very large part of the equation. On top of Estimates are Supplementary Estimates, and sometimes there are two or three sets. When all those Estimates are in, one will find that the budget for Environment Canada, supplemented by other Departments, has not only kept up with inflation but has exceeded it.

MINISTER'S POSITION ON STAFFING PROJECTIONS

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, once again the Minister has risen and done his little dance in the House and tried to avoid the question. I want to put the question directly to him once more. He has not been prepared to say to the House that the projections which presently exist do in fact protect people in his Department.

Therefore, do I take it that he is in fact admitting that there will be cuts taking place by the projections which the Government in fact has put into place? Are there cuts projected, or are there not? Answer the question.

• (1440)

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the answer to the three questions, which are essentially the same, is no. However, even if one could equate numbers with efficiency and productivity, which I think is a false assumption, let me draw to the Hon. Member's attention and that of the House the fact that my Department, under this Government, has received the highest award from the Society of Canadian Office Automation and Professionals for productivity. That reflects the fact that, through administrative efficiencies and economies, we have been able to do an awful lot more than any previous Government in the environmental field.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

HOUSING

METROPOLITAN TORONTO—DOWNSVIEW HOUSING PROJECT

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Housing. In his mad dash to make a pre-election housing announcement he failed to account for, or commit the federal Government to providing, an adequate sewer system to serve the new housing project on the Downsview airport lands. That prompted the Mayor of North York, where the lands are located, to conclude that "this housing project is fantasyland, an obvious election ploy that will never get off the ground".

CMHC officials knew very well that the site lacked any sewer capacity whatsoever. They also knew that storing the sewage waste in holding tanks was simply not a viable alternative. Given that, is the Minister prepared to commit the necessary funds to provide an adequate sewer infrastructure for this project so that it can proceed? Or, was the announcement on Friday simply a made-for-television fairy-tale production?

Hon. John McDermid (Minister of State (International Trade) and Minister of State (Housing): Mr. Speaker—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McDermid: —I find it passing strange that the Hon. Member, who has been calling for the transfer of these lands to CMHC for housing development, is now standing up and criticizing it. To me that does not make sense.

On Thursday evening I spoke with Mayor Lastman about the development, informing him of the announcement. There will be meetings this week between him, his council and my officials to discuss the development. The lands are to provide affordable housing to people in Toronto who require it. I think it is a very worth-while project and the Hon. Member should be applauding it.

Mr. Marchi: Mr. Speaker, I spoke with the mayor as well and he informs me there is no commitment by the federal Government thus far to provide the necessary funding for the sewers which will make the project viable. Therefore, it is simply irresponsible for the Minister and the Government to pass on a cost which could be as high as $500 million to a municipality whose property taxes are at a sky-high level anyway.

FUNDING OF SEWER INFRASTRUCTURE—AFFORDABLE HOUSING UNITS

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, no one is arguing about the viability of the project. However, is the Minister prepared today to commit the federal Government to providing the necessary funding for the sewer infrastructure?

As well, how can he call this an affordable housing scheme when 75 per cent of the homes will be built by private developers at the high Toronto market prices? Will he at least match provincial housing standards where 35 per cent of public housing projects and 25 per cent of private projects are set aside for affordable housing?

Hon. John McDermid (Minister of State (International Trade) and Minister of State (Housing)): Mr. Speaker, I think there were two questions there and I will handle the second one first. We said a minimum of 25 per cent will be affordable housing. I noticed the other day that the Hon. Members's friend, the Premier of the Province of Ontario, came out in support of this land transfer and congratulated the federal Government in that regard. The same is true of the Ontario Minister of Housing.

As to the cost of sewage disposal and so on in this development, the only figure I have seen is the one that the Hon. Member has bandied about and the one that the mayor is reported to have given. We will be sitting down and discussing the development with Mayor Lastman this week. We will have a better idea of what his concerns are, and announcements will be made at the proper time.

DISPOSAL OF FEDERAL LANDS

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct my question to the same Minister. First, I want to offer my congratulations to him on his new appointment and to say also that I welcome his announcement about the release of those lands at the Downsview airport.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Young: The announcement raised a number of questions. Number one, how are those lands going to be disposed of? Will they be put on the auction block to the highest bidder? How will the 25 per cent for affordable housing that the Minister spoke about be disposed of? Will it suit the demand in Toronto for affordable housing for a whole bunch of people who are denied access to that market now?

The problem in Toronto, as the Minister knows, is not one of increased housing starts. The question is affordability and whether or not this scheme will help.

Hon. John McDermid (Minister of State (International Trade) and Minister of State (Housing)): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his kind words. I appreciate them.

I mentioned on Friday when I made the announcement that the marketing of the housing development will be through public proposal calls to developers and non-profit groups who will be financing, designing, and constructing the housing. It is our feeling that a minimum, and I want to stress that, a minimum of 25 per cent would be geared toward affordable housing. I think the Hon. Member knows full well, and will agree, that you do not want to set the whole proposal as affordable housing because that it just not realistic. However, I think it goes a long way toward assisting those who need affordable housing in the Metropolitan Toronto area. I can tell the Hon. Member it is never enough, and he knows that. I would love it to be more.

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, both I and my Party agree that there is a place for a mix of affordable housing on that site. However, on Friday, in response to a question I asked of the Minister of Supply and Services, I was told: "We are moving in the direction of providing additional social housing for senior citizens, the disabled, and affordable housing for young couples starting out".

As the Minister knows, the average cost of a house in Metropolitan Toronto today is around $230,000. Does he consider those people primarily on fixed income can get into that market? If they cannot, what does the Minister define as affordable housing?

Hon. John McDermid (Minister of State (International Trade) and Minister of State (Housing)): Mr. Speaker, I am not going to be pinned down on defining affordable housing. The press tried that on Friday and it did not work. However, I can say to the Hon. Member that our priorities in the 25 per cent are for the handicapped and low-income people through the various programs available in conjunction with the Province of Ontario with which we are working to provide social housing.

I might point out that this Government's record on social housing has been very significant over the last four years. This is not something new. It has been going on for a considerable amount of time. As a matter of fact, 18 per cent of our social housing budget is spent in the Metropolitan Toronto area, a very significant amount, because that is a special area that needs help.

UNITED NATIONS

CANADIAN PARTICIPATION IN IRAN-IRAQ PEACEKEEPING FORCE

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Defence.

A few weeks ago there was an announcement that pleased Canadians very much to the effect that Canada would be participating in the UN peace-keeping force in Iran and Iraq. Recently rumours were swirling about that either some or all of our forces will be withdrawn from that peace-keeping force. Would the Minister please advise the House and Canadians what this is all about?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to do that. As my hon. friend and as the House will know, all of the Canadian troops are now in place and our communications network has been set up. Our troops there are doing an outstanding job on behalf of Canada and on behalf of the United Nations.

At the time we announced that Canadian troops would be sent to Iran and Iraq, we indicated that our commitment to the United Nations was that the UN would replace our signallers as soon as possible with civilians working for the UN. I am pleased to confirm that good progress is being made. We expect to find the first of the civilian replacements going out within the coming weeks. We hope to start bringing our signallers back as soon as possible and we hope that perhaps the bulk of them will be home before Christmas.

Our observers will remain there for the duration of the six-month commitment that we have at the present time, but we are looking forward to bringing the first of our signallers home just as soon as possible.

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

PROGRAM REQUESTED FOR ONTARIO AREAS

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and it concerns the lack of regional development programs in Ontario at the present time.

In 1984 the Government eliminated the Canadian Industrial Renewal Board, CIRB, on November 8. This program encouraged the establishment of certain industries in designated areas. In June, 1988, the IRDP Program was allowed to lapse and was not renewed. In December, 1984, the Canada-Ontario Development Agreement ended.

Given that the Government has stated it had a commitment toward regional development programs, when are we going to get a regional development program for areas of Ontario such as the riding I represent, Hawkesbury which still has a 14 per cent unemployment rate, for Renfrew, for parts of the Bruce Peninsula and other areas of Ontario which are not doing nearly as well as the rest of the province?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, as my hon. colleague well knows, we have been working very diligently in changing the whole dimension of our regional development programs throughout the country. We have announced WDO, and ACOA. In Ontario we have announced FEDNOR. We have announced a new ... federal-provincial agreement between Canada and Quebec.

[English]

We have announced special programs for eastern Montreal. I have also announced a special program in Ontario that is being negotiated with the provincial Government to help those regions that are not covered by these new programs, to allow them to be covered by a special program, once again to be administered by people within the regions rather than being administered by people in the centre who often are not are fully aware of the local conditions. That program will be forthcoming in the same way as all the other programs that have been put in place.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER GIVE COMMITMENT

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a supplementary to the same Minister, and I may add that we are anxious to see these negotiations finalized, because the region I represent needs regional development.

I specifically wanted to ask the Minister whether he is aware of the case of Caron Fine Wood Products in Alexandria, an industry that was going to locate in our region and was turned down by his Department because of the free trade agreement, since recently, the Government's policy has been to stop giving grants to businesses in the lumber sector. Is the Minister prepared to review what his officials said and thus create at least fifty jobs in the riding of Glengarry—Prescott—Russell, or is he going to sacrifice Glengarry—Prescott—Russell to free trade?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, I can give the Hon. Member the assurance that not a single industrial development project in this country has been turned down because of the free trade agreement. Certainly not. In fact, many projects have been submitted as a result of the new potential provided by free trade.

Mr. Speaker, to give a more tangible indication of our commitments to regional industrial development, I can inform the House that between 1984-85 and 1988-89, contributions and subsidies to enterprises increased by 104 per cent in my Department's budget and the budgets for the Western Economic Diversification Office and the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency. This is one of the Budget votes, if not the vote, that has increased the most in this country. Regional development and industrial development is very important to us and will remain so.

TRANSPORT ROUTE CANADA—SITUATION OF TRUCK OWNERS

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Deputy Prime Minister in his role as Minister in charge of privatization.

He will know that as a result of the sale by CN of a trucking company almost two years ago to private operators who operated the company as Route Canada, it went bankrupt about 10 days ago. This means that 350 truck owner operators classified by the Labour Board as employees or dependent owner operators who worked for Route Canada, who are being forced into bankruptcy, are owed from $5,000 to $20,000 for work done, and find that they cannot use their own trucks because they were registered under the Route Canada name. They and the union representing the other employees have urged the Government and have asked the Minister to see that the agreement involving the sale by CN to these private owners will be tabled. Will the Minister now agree to table that agreement?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister, President of the Privy Council and Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member knows, this trucking firm was losing something in the order of $70 million a year. What was done at the time when the company was sold was to preserve the jobs and try to make a viable operation out of this particular company.

The Minister of Transport has indicated in the House on several occasions that he is looking into the matter. The Minister of Labour has also indicated that he is looking into the matter to ensure that all points pertinent to the Canada Labour Code are being honoured. The Minister of Employment and Immigration has indicated that whatever steps can be taken to ensure that help can be provided to the affected parties will be taken.

I can assure the Hon. Member the matter is under active consideration. I hope he will understand that in 1986 the firm lost $71 million, in 1985 it lost $42.6 million, and in 1984 it lost $31.9 million. In any event, what was going to happen that this operation would be closed down, and the Hon. Member should recognize that.

REQUEST THAT CNR REPOSSESS COMPANY'S ASSETS

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, if the operation had been closed down by the CNR in the regular way, workers and the truck owners would have been protected. That is why they are now beginning to deal with lawyers and the Minister knows what legal costs can be for these people. Will the Minister see that the agreement is made public?

I point out to him that 3,000 employees have neither been paid their most recent wages, their holiday pay, nor their severance pay, which were all part of the agreement they had with CN which Route Canada took over. As well, pension benefits have been reduced.

Will the Minister ask the CNR to repossess the assets of the company and recommence the operation so people can be dealt with fairly?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister, President of the Privy Council and Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member was in the House when the Minister of Transport indicated that a lot of rumours were circulating about this particular issue and that he was attempting to ascertain all the facts. I can assume he is engaged in that process right now.

Mr. Benjamin: You were the one that privatized.

Mr. Mazankowski: No, I am not the guy that privatized it. It was CNR.

Mr. Benjamin: You ordered them to.

Mr. Mazankowski: It was a business decision which CNR undertook.

If the Hon. Member is suggesting that he would support a losing proposition of $71 million a year which would have an effect upon the whole operations of CNR, that is a convoluted way to run a business.

I can assure the Hon. Member that the Minister of Transport is actively pursuing this matter and I am sure he will get back to the House in due course.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

MUNICIPAL SEWAGE TREATMENT PLANTS

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. In light of his recent commitment to the environment two weeks ago and the repeated requests of the Canadian Federation of Municipalities for the federal Government's share of sewage treatment and sewer separation costs, will the Government undertake today to assist municipalities with this program and help them to modernize and upgrade their projects at this time?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, this is a puzzling question coming from such a source because the hon. gentleman was a Liberal Member of Parliament when the Liberal Government of the day in the late 1970s, 1980 and 1981 cancelled the broadly based federal government program which supported the provinces and, through the provinces, the municipalities for this very purpose. In the absence of the program when we took office in September, 1984, we resorted to, I think, very creative devices to assist cities where the national interest was advanced. For example, in the case of Montreal, there was the clean-up of industrial wastes in the St. Lawrence River. In the case of Halifax, there was the clean-up of the Halifax Harbour. That is the sort of creative, innovative mechanism of federal-provincial co-operation that has served Canada and especially the country's environment.

REQUEST FOR FEDERAL FUNDING

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, the question that begs to be asked is why be so selective? What about the national capital region? What about the Regional Municipality of Ottawa—Carleton which has repeatedly asked for assistance in modernizing and upgrading the installations in this community? Today the regional municipality wants to make the quality of life in Ottawa better by dealing with how we dispose of waste water.

I say to the Minister, never mind what happened then. I was there in 1976. Yes, we needed a program then, but what about a program today, 1988, to help the municipalities deal with that very expensive program? How about your power to spend? Use it.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An Hon. Member: That's the Liberal approach, spend, spend, spend.

Mr. Gauthier: Everybody else is getting it.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Minister.

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I can understand why the Hon. Member would want the country to ignore what the Liberal Party has done and said in the past in favour of what it is saying now. In any event, I mentioned the St. Lawrence River clean-up and the Halifax Harbour clean-up only as examples of the kind of major environmental undertakings the Government has launched. I could have mentioned, for example, the clean-up of the Hamilton Harbour through a federal-provincial mechanism that involved federal money being matched by provincial money for a very important anti-pollution control purpose. The national interest was served in that case and provincial jurisdiction was respected. Through federal-provincial harmony, "we did good", and I think we will do better.

GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS

POINTE-À-CASCY DEVELOPMENT—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister and relates to patronage in the Pointe-à-Cascy development in the Vieux Port of Québec, a project on federal land which gave rise to strong opposition from the residents of Quebec.

Can the Prime Minister explain why the Government has asked the firm of Eastern Quebec Conservative organizer Marc Lefrançois to develop this site, in spite of the evidence of his latest project, the Terrasses du Vieux-Port, where he will allow the disintegration of a site which has been designated as world heritage by UNESCO?

Is the Government prepared to take into account the historic and heritage quality of this site by drafting a development plan in close consultation with local residents, or does the Government think it is more important to make a gift to a Conservative organizer and friend of the former Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion?

[English]

Hon. Otto Jelinek (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that the Minister of Public Works is not in the House today but will be later in the week, I will take that question as notice today.

REQUEST FOR APPOINTMENT OF COMMISSION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, we do not know whether or not there will be a chance to ask a question later this week.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Cassidy: Is the Minister aware, and if not, can he pass on to the Minister of Public Works, that some 500 citizens of Quebec met last week to voice their objections? They have asked for a moratorium on the development of the Vieux Port of Québec until there is a real consultation. They wonder why in Toronto there is a commission under Mr. David Crombie, former Secretary of State, to look into the Port of Toronto while there is not one in Quebec. Why can Quebec not have the same kind of consideration in developing its Vieux Port that Torontonians have for their port?

Hon. Otto Jelinek (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, as I pointed out, the Minister of Public Works will be able to answer this question in more detail, but the fact is that the Government has been proceeding and is very concerned with this issue. I can announce that—

Mr. Cassidy: Concerned with patronage.

Mr. Jelinek: No. If the Hon. Member would be willing to listen, nothing will proceed until an agreement is reached between the City of Québec and the developer, and this agreement insists on following those views. In fact, I believe that on this issue and on any other issue related to this, the Government is proceeding along the right track.

Mr. Speaker: This will be the last question of Question Period, a single question from the Hon. Member for Willowdale.

CANADA SCHOLARSHIPS

QUALIFICATION CRITERIA

Mr. John Oostrom (Willowdale): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Science and Technology. The Minister set up a good program to allow Canadian students to compete for full four-year scholarships in the fields of science and engineering. However, I have been informed by a constituent of mine that the schools did not inform qualified students of this and that universities were given a set number of scholarships. As a consequence, students with high marks may not qualify while students with lower marks may get in.

Will the Minister investigate this and rectify the unfair occurrences?

Hon. Frank Oberle (Minister of State (Science and Technology)): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his interest in this matter. This gives me an opportunity, and I know all hon. colleagues would want to join me, to congratulate the first 2,500 of the 10,000 Canada Scholars who have received their first scholarships this year.

I would be disappointed if the message had not been properly communicated. On March 28 all of the schools were informed and 4,000 packages were delivered. The Prime Minister subsequently wrote a letter to every school pointing out, first, the need for the program and second, our intentions for it. Other efforts were made to get the message across as well.

Indeed, I can say that I am particularly proud that 53 per cent of the new scholars in the natural sciences and engineering programs are women, and we had excellent co-operation from the Canadian Association of Universities and Colleges. Of course, next year it is intended that the program will be subject to a national exam, and that would, I hope, eliminate any of the problems that may have been associated with the initial start-up of the program.

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-136, an Act respecting broadcasting and to amend certain Acts in relation thereto and in relation to radiocommunication, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The House will now proceed to the next group of motions. They are Motions Nos. 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, and 43, and they are grouped for debate.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

Motion No. 32

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by striking out line 39 at page 5 and substituting the following therefor:

"aboriginal cultures and representative native languages should be".

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by striking out lines 9 to 25 at page 6.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by striking out lines 27 to 34 at page 6 and substituting the following therefor:

"undertakings should contribute significantly to the creation of programming that is distinctively Canadian in content and character; and".

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

Motion No. 35

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by striking out lines 27 to 34 at page 6 and substituting the following therefor:

"undertakings shall provide programming that is predominantly Canadian, using predominantly Canadian creative and other resources in the creation and presentation of programming, unless the nature of the service provided by the undertaking, such as specialized content or format or use of languages other than French or English, renders that use impracticable, in which case the undertaking shall make the greatest practicable use of those resources; and".

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway) moved:

Motion No. 36

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by adding immediately after line 35 at page 6 the following:

"(i) should deliver only duly licensed services,".

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by striking out lines 36 to 38 at page 6 and substituting the following therefor:

"(i) should accord priority to the carriage of Canadian programming services, in French and English, both public and private, with priority given to the Canadian public element programming services,

(ii) may carry foreign originated programming services only where the programming they provide is substantially different from that already offered by a licensed Canadian broadcasting undertaking or where those foreign programming services were already carried by distribution undertakings,

(iii) should be regulated in a manner that reflects a reasonable recognition of exclusive rights acquired by Canadian broadcasting undertakings,".

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by striking out line 38 at page 6 and substituting the following therefor:

"vices and in particular accord priority to the carriage of radio and television services of the Corporation and other public broadcasting

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by adding immediately after line 38 at page 6 the following:

"(ii) should ensure that foreign services, with the exception of conventional off-air broadcasters, are complementary to Canadian services,".

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by striking out lines 3 to 8 at page 7 and substituting the following therefor:

"(iv) may, where appropriate, originate a community channel as defined by the Commission, under terms and conditions set out by the Commission."

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by striking out line 4 at page 7 and substituting the following therefor:

"programming that is complementary to existing licensed programming services, including local program-".

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by adding immediately after line 8 at page 7 the following:

"(v) shall not be permitted to have an ownership interest in, or be in common ownership with, a pay television, specialty or any other network programming service as defined by the Commission."

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Madam Speaker, it is going to be very difficult to debate all these issues in such a short time. However, we will give it a good try.

• (1510)

Motion No. 32 is a recognition of aboriginal languages. In the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture we recommended, in our sixth report, that a new Broadcasting Act should make provision for service within the Canadian broadcasting system in aboriginal languages considered to be representative, where numbers warrant, and to the extent that public funds would permit. The Government has not included this particular aspect in its subclause 3(m) of the broadcast policy. I would suggest that this is vital to the National Aboriginal Communication Society which brought this to our attention once again and expressed its dismay at the Government's failure to act.

I can recall sitting on the Indian affairs committee and working very hard on the amendments and the concerns of the aboriginal peoples of Canada. I really care about this aspect of the Bill. I know that my colleague presented a somewhat similar concern earlier in the day and I hope that, in a reasoned way, the Minister will see fit to give consideration to this motion.

Motion No. 33 is a very serious matter and I would like to suggest to the Minister, through you, Madam Speaker, that this motion does not oppose the service of alternative broadcasting in any sense. I am convinced, as are many people who came before our committee, that it is defined much too broadly within the Act and that we really do not need this to allow us to move ahead in any kind of a new broadcasting venture. We have moved into specialty services and pay-TV, and we have not provided place in the Act to undertake these kinds of activities. I do not think it is necessary and it causes confusion to the CBC mandate.

I suggest that this amendment removes all references to alternative programming in legislation. It is not needed, in my view. The way the alternative services programming mandate is defined is so nearly identical to that of the CBC and its role in the Canadian broadcasting system that I think this only serves to undermine the CBC and marginalize high culture and multicultural concerns which should be contained within mainstream productions as well as within the confines of the CBC.

ACTRA brought its serious concerns to our attention when it said in its brief that the alternative program system would risk becoming a ghetto of programming appealing to very few people. In addition, because of this alternative programming services mandate in the Act, the other components of the system would be forgiven a requirement to participate in the production of minority or special interest programming and that would become the responsibility of the alternative programming service.

The standing committee, in its fifteenth report, in recommendation 100, recommended that the alternative television programming service to be created would be on a not for profit basis. This is not the approach the Minister has taken on page 35 in Canadian Voices Canadian Choices where she talks about a consortium approach for this service.

I would like to suggest to you that if, through consultation with the CRTC and interested parties, we do end up with the kind of Channel 4 format which you see in England, we might well be open and willing to having this kind of a program, but having this in the Act does not prevent that kind of thing. I suggest that this is premature. In fact, it is almost unnecessary. In the response that the Minister gave us the Government says that it is prepared to contribute substantially in these initiatives through new funding. I would like to recommend strongly to the Minister that if there is extra funding it should go to the CBC which has suffered some serious set-backs in its funding over the long term since 1984.

Motion No. 35 is divided into two parts. My amendment addresses both subclauses 3(q)(i) and 3(q)(ii). I believe the broadcasting law in Canada recognizes that the goal was to make programs that were made in Canada but also reflective of Canada. With regard to Clause 3(q)(i), my motion would require that broadcasting undertakings, that is network and programming undertakings, well, would require that programming be predominantly Canadian, as well as that there be predominant use of Canadian creative and other resources.

I know the Minister answered earlier, in response to subclause 3(1)(e), I believe it was, that it was so. I would like to remind her that if she looks at the amendment which I have proposed to that clause she will see that it keeps all the exceptions in place. It keeps the exceptions that we have all been very sensitive to such as Tele-latino and Chinavision, to use the Minister's own examples.

If you read Motion No. 35 you will see that I have indicated that private networks and program undertakings "shall provide programming that is predominantly Canadian, using predominantly Canadian creative and other resources in the creation and presentation of programming, unless the nature of the service provided by the undertaking, such as specialized content or format or use of languages other than English or French, renders that use impracticable, in which case the undertaking shall make the greatest practicable use of those resources".

I think that that would answer the concerns to which the Minister alluded earlier this morning, and I sincerely hope that for the sake of consistency and for the sake of the goals of the Broadcasting Act the Minister will take serious interest in this particular amendment.

In subclause 3 (q)(ii) we refer to the private networks and the programming undertakings being responsive to the evolving demands of the public. I would like to point out to the Minister that not only have I shown some serious concern in this regard, but the CRTC brings the following observations. It says that the phrase "responsive to the evolving demands of the public" seems at first sight harmless enough. However, the specific object could have the effect of rendering the other general objects of Section 3 nullities. Would this specific object override the objects of high standards of programming, balance in programming, and programming for aboriginal peoples, for the disabled, et cetera? This section could cause needless litigation and may contradict an underlying principle of the regulation of the broadcasting industry, that is, that programming be of high standard and of quality.

I concur with the CRTC's view that we should amend this section. I suggest that private networks and programming undertakings should have the same responsibilities as those that are defined in subclause 3(1)(e) and that the Minister should put this clause in the Act to distinguish the role of the distribution undertakings, that particularly of private networks and specialty services or programming services, so that they have the obligation of Canadian programming along with the exceptions which I have just noted.

My amendment, in essence, is to bring consistency to the Act and to the possibility of the role of these undertakings. I suggest that the major objective is predominantly Canadian programming.

The next amendment, Motion No. 37, is a major area of concern with which I have had some ongoing problems. I would like to recommend to the Minister that the carriage regulations for cable are at least as important as the requirements for Canadian content quotas for broadcasting networks in maintaining any reasonable balance between Canadian and foreign programming in the system. I think that we must define cable and cable's role more clearly.

That is the ultimate goal of my Motion No. 37.

The standing committee felt very strongly about this aspect and there certainly has been no change in my view with respect to this particular motion. Motion No. 37 deals with the priority of carriage, with the complementary role that foreign services should play, and the exclusivity of the rights of those Canadian broadcasters who purchase programs and how they should be allowed to use them in the interest of the Canadian system.

The purpose of the Minister's focus, as I understand it, has been to bring the broadcasting system into a perspective that would develop the conditions whereby cultural sovereignty could be achieved. That was the goal of Mr. Bennett. It has been the goal of everyone who has been addressing this particular issue. I believe that goal is missing in this Bill.

I suggest that this motion is fundamental to the well-being of the broadcasting system and will ensure whether or not we have a Canadian broadcasting system or a North American system.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Madam Speaker, we are dealing with a number of amendments. I wonder if the Minister accepts any of these amendments, but she is indicating that she is not.

This is a key part of the Bill in terms of the North Americanization of Canadian television. I did not expect the Minister to accept this amendment because in doing so she would have to go against the whole thrust of the Government's free trade initiative and the North Americanization that that embodies. I will say more about that in my speech at third reading.

This is a key part of the Bill because television is the most important cultural medium we have. Canadians, especially English Canadians, do not realize how our culture is potentially threatened by completely opening television airwaves to American programming.

Something can be done about this without hurting the choice of Canadians in watching television. That is the purpose of these amendments. These amendments respond to important recommendations of the sixth report of the standing committee. Motion No. 36 reflects recommendation No. 17 of the sixth report of the standing committee. Motion No. 39 reflects quite precisely recommendation No. 58 of the sixth report of the standing committee, a recommendation that was reiterated by recommendation No. 69 of the fifteenth report of the standing committee, which is the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture that has a Conservative majority. In recommendation No. 58 that committee stated:

> The act should be drafted so as to define the essential role of distribution undertakings as that of distributing Canadian radio and television services in French and in English, both public and private, with first priority given to public-sector Canadian services, followed by private Canadian services. With the exception of the "three-plus-one" services already carried—> —the act should make provision for the carriage of foreign radio and television services only when the programming they provide is complementary to that available from licensed Canadian broadcasters and network operators.

That is the American networks ABC, NBC, and CBS plus the American Public Broadcasting System. It continued:

"Complementary" means that they are showing different programs or adding something that we do not already have. If we have a Canadian news network, we do not bring in the American news network. If we have a Canadian arts and culture network, we do not bring in American ones.

We have to be able to say no to bringing in the superstation from the United States. That is absolutely fundamental because without this provision American channels like the ones we are getting now, such as Ted Turner's CNN news, will come in. There are no similar Canadian programs. Once they are available, we must have the Canadian service.

The Conservative philosophy is simply to let them compete with Canadian programming. However, the Canadian market is too small and Canadians cannot compete. That is why the market theory falls apart. That is why, without these amendments, we could see the elimination of private broadcasters. That is why Global, CTV, and other broadcasters oppose this Bill. The Bill fails to implement those recommendations in the reports of the standing committee.

Motion No. 36 would ensure that all services operating in Canada, including U.S. satellite to cable services, are licensed. As the House knows, for example, the U.S. Arts and Entertainment Network is beamed into Canada by satellite and affiliates with cable companies that package and sell it to Canadian subscribers. It makes no contribution to Canadian programming and does not need to meet the requirements of the CRTC. In fact, it basically does not cost Arts and Entertainment anything to tap the Canadian market.

As the Association of Canadian Film and Television Producers said before our standing committee:

> It would be consistent with the government's stated policies for broadcasting in Canada to require all broadcast services available in Canada to be subject to CRTC regulation and approval. The CRTC has a demonstrated sensibility to the needs of broadcasters and the government's policy priorities. We should all be confident in the Commission's ability to develop a realistic licensing process for foreign satellite to cable services coming into Canada, given a solid legislative base.

This is what Motion No. 36 seeks to do.

More important than this is Motion No. 39. This motion would ensure that with the exception of "three-plus-one", as I explained earlier, and border stations, the carriage of foreign signals should only be provided by cable systems if the programming they provide is complementary to that available from licensed Canadian broadcasters and network operators.

I admit that this motion is, in part, a response to the continuing penetration into the Canadian cable market by U.S. services. In particular I am referring to the recent decision to license U.S. superstations that provide the unique service of Beverly Hillbillies reruns 12 hours a day in addition to Atlanta Braves, Mets, and other baseball games.

As the producers' groups rightly said when they came before the legislative committee, "this will have a highly negative effect on Canadian producers to maintain a distinct Canadian market".

To quote Sam Jephcott again:

> Canadian producers have relied on the "cordon sanitaire" that kept such channels out of Canada in the past, an advantage that allowed them to license original Canadian programming to Canadian broadcasters as well as American ones, without the diminution in value that inevitably occurs when market exclusivity is compromised by trans-border signal penetration.

That means that the American channels will come in and take over from our channels.

Just as important as the question of distinct Canadian production market is that of the viability of Canadian local stations, such as City TV in Toronto and specialty stations, in the face of competition from directly competing U.S. services.

• (1530)

As I noted earlier, this motion comes from a direct recommendation of the sixth report of the all-Party standing committee. Gerald Caplan and Florian Sauvageau warned against creating in effect a North American TV market, an idea which is embodied in this Bill. I quote: "If the rights to show American programs in Canada were retained and exploited by American broadcasters rather than being sold to Canadian broadcasters, it would be destructive to Canada's broadcasting system, particularly of private broadcasting. More importantly, it would create an even greater imbalance between foreign and Canadian programs, and reduce Canada's ability to produce such programs".

The Minister in her reply in debate said:

> The prohibition of foreign radio and television services other than those whose programming is complementary to that available from Canadian broadcasters has not been included in the legislation, since it would unduly restrict Canadians' access to a range of international broadcasting services.

The impact of the Minister's policy is something different. I think the Minister is wrong. Her policy would limit Canadian choices and the chance to watch Canadian broadcasting services. As the Friends of Canadian Broadcasting rightly put it:

> If this country had adopted such an approach 60 years ago this country would never have developed a separate Canadian broadcasting system except in the public sector.

I am not proposing to stop Canadians from getting complementary services. We just want Canadians to have the chance to provide them. The standing committee's sixth report, chaired by the Hon. Member for Edmonton South (Mr. Edwards) I believe, said:

> We note that even in the large U.S. market, where service is provided entirely in English, there is only one available service in most programming categories. In Canada it is beyond question that a Canadian service could not co-exist with a non-Canadian service, especially if the Canadian service is expected to provide a meaningful contribution to Canadian programming.

I know that I have to wind up. I wonder if the House would bear with me for about one more minute. This is the most important element in the Bill.

There is a Conservative majority in this committee. What has made the Conservatives change their minds on this? We have to look at a group called The Cultural Industries Alliance, made up of more than a dozen major cultural organizations, which said the following:

> We have already seen evidence of the effect of the trade agreement on existing policies and policy development. This includes the rejection of key recommendation for broadcast policy made by the House of Commons standing committee—

I think that this is the answer. The answer is that the Minister has no room to manoeuvre. She cannot manoeuvre because of the trade deal and because of the Americanization of the North American market. That is why the standing committee reports were rejected, and that is why we are bringing forward these amendments.

If Canadian private broadcasting has to survive, I would hope that the Minister would accept it. If she wants it to survive in the future, in the face of this American competition, she should accept these amendments, at least the concept of complementary services.

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew—Nipissing—Pembroke): Madam Speaker, I want to say a few words on Bill C-136, and in fact at the same time congratulate the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), from my own Party, who has been carrying the debate in committee and in the House of Commons so effectively.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hopkins: She has indeed pointed out the great amount of evidence that exists that there is a tremendous liability to Canadian broadcasters in the future if this Bill is passed.

She has also brought out, very plainly, the fact that Canadian broadcasters will be very much under fire financially from the major television broadcasters in the United States under the trade deal. It is another example of how the trade deal can attack Canadian culture and will attack Canadian culture.

There must be a long-term look at this Bill. When you really take that long-term look, you realize the liability that exists therein for Canadian broadcasters. This is very clearly brought out in an article by Peter Mortimer of the Association of Canadian Film and Television Producers, who heads his article "Broadcast bill's flaws need fixing". He says that the legislation just would not do unless it is amended.

I am sure that the Minister is quite familiar with the comments contained therein.

Miss MacDonald: You are out of date. He has written again since.

Mr. Hopkins: She is talking now. I do not know whether or not she is agreeing with me.

Miss MacDonald: I was agreeing with Peter Mortimer's latest letter, the endorsement.

Mr. Hopkins: As the standing committee observed in its report, since Canadians receive television programming primarily by cable, the proportion of Canadian programming that cable offers is at least as important as the proportion of the programming offered by off-air broadcasters. Of course, we only need to take a look at the areas of Canadian life which Canadian television touches today to realize the percentage of the Canadian public that actually watch programs via cable television companies.

It concluded that the carriage regulations for cable are at least as important as the requirement for individual broadcasters in maintaining any reasonable balance between Canadians and foreign programming in the system. The task force and standing committee both concluded that broadcasting legislation should clearly define cable's role and give policy guidance to the CRTC regarding which channels cable television could carry. The standing committee recommended the following. The Bill should be drafted so as to define the central role of distribution undertakings—the cable systems—as that of distributing Canadian radio and television services in French and English, both public and private, with first priority given to public sector Canadian services followed by private Canadian services.

With the exception of the "three-plus-one" services that are very common to us, ABC, CBS, the NBC, and PBS already carried the bill and should make provision for the carriage of foreign radio and television services only when the programming they provide is complementary to that available from licensed Canadian broadcasters. For Canadian broadcasters to succeed they must be able to schedule the best foreign TV programs as well as Canadian programs. To the extent that directly competing American TV services become North American services, Canadian broadcasters' ability to buy attractive U.S. shows is eroded. If this happens, the value of rights that they manage to buy will be eroded by the lack of exclusivity. The Canadian Cable Television Association stated that it agreed in principle with this recommendation.

We are dealing here with professional people who have been in the cablevision business and television business for years. I think that their views should be taken absolutely seriously. They obviously have a few members of the committee. They have not been by most of the committee, and they have not as yet been taken seriously by the Government.

The Canadian Cable Television Association went on to suggest, however, that at the very least a cable subscriber should expect to receive every signal available off-air. The CRTC also stated that it agrees generally with this recommendation. It raised the same concern about border signals available off-air from the United States, although it noted that "the commission would agree that the spread of these non-Canadian services by means of microwave or satellite services should be discouraged".

The Government responded to this recommendation in Bill C-136 by avoiding the issue. Instead of offering guidance on how the CRTC should treat the carriage of foreign services, the Bill simply states that distribution undertakings should accord priority to the carriage of Canadian programming services. That is contained in subclause 3(1)(q) (i). In other words, as long as licensed Canadian services are carried, all American stations and networks can also be carried.

By explicitly favouring the carriage of conventional pay and specialty American television services that compete directly with licensed Canadian services, the Government has hidden its head in the sand on the implications this policy has for the existence of a separate Canadian broadcasting market. To the extent that conventional U.S. stations and networks come in to Canada they erode the value of Canadian rights. One can readily see that because of the massive, unbalanced distribution of signals and television companies on each side of the border and the wealth contained therein.

In the case of the United States pay and specialty services, such rights will not be available to Canadian broadcasters at all. Having introduced legislation to ensure a separate distribution market in Canada for film and video products, the Government is clearly unwilling to see the erosion of the separate markets that have traditionally existed for broadcasting programs.

Having addressed that in general terms, I would now like to move an amendments:

> That Motion No. 37 be amended by adding at the end of subparagraph (ii) and subparagraph (iii) the words:
> "under terms and conditions set out by the Commission",

These words would simply be added on to Motion No. 37 after subparagraphs (ii) and (iii). The motion is seconded by the Hon. Member for Hull—Aylmer (Mr. Isabelle).

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Chair would like to reserve on the amendment for the time being. I am sure the Hon. Member will understand that the Chair needs a little time to ensure that the amendment to the amendment is in order. Resuming debate with the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Madam Speaker, I want to support the amendment contained in Motion No. 40. I do so because, putting it politely, I am puzzled at why the Government's Bill gives the cable companies almost everything they want. Cable companies seem to have tremendous political influence with the Conservative Government. As far as expanding the rights of cable companies is concerned, what is contained in the Bill is in direct contradiction to the recommendations of the Caplan-Sauvageau report, and also the report of the all-Party standing committee.

I wish to put on the record a partial list of the organizations which, like us, oppose the Government's move. For example, ACTRA—

Miss MacDonald: That's wrong. It has reversed that position.

Mr. Orlikow: Madam Speaker, the Minister has every right to put on the record anything that I say that she claims is wrong.

ACTRA, the Canadian Film and Television Association, the Association of Canadian Film and Television Producers, Des Producteur de films et de vidéos du Québec, the Friends of Canadian Broadcasting, the Canadian Association of Broadcasters, the private networks First Choice, the CUPE Broadcast group, NABET, and the Public Interest Advocacy Centre.

I wish to put on the record part of a statement made by Michelle D'Auray of the Canadian Conference of the Arts who said, in part:

> We do not believe a cable operator licensed as a carrier should be a programmer, doing content, because the concentration of ownership we already see elements of, would allow for too much control over the system for one company, one corporation.
> We also believe the system has been built on the distinction of carrier and content and should be maintained at that level.

Let me take a moment to advise the Minister how unhappy and angry are many of my constituents, and almost all the people living in that part of Winnipeg west of the Red River, about the recent decision of the CRTC to permit the cable company which services more than half of Winnipeg the right to add three new stations to the stations carried—

Miss MacDonald: I agree. Tell the CRTC.

Mr. Orlikow: Well, it is the CRTC. However, sometimes the CRTC can be wrong.

Miss MacDonald: Absolutely.

Mr. Orlikow: It allowed Videon Cable to offer three more choices on its channel. The customers who buy the services provided by Videon Cable were not asked if they wanted an increase in the number of channels to which they could tune in. They certainly were not asked if they wanted the three that were added. In fact, not a single person who has called me agrees with those three channels, and the monthly bill was increased by 91 cents. It is time to have a careful look at the whole situation of the cable companies.

Almost every person and every group involved in television has opposed the expansion of rights that the Government is giving to the cable companies in the Bill.

Miss MacDonald: That is the CRTC.

Mr. Orlikow: Our position is the position brought forward in the Caplan-Sauvageau report and in the task force report. I wish to quote a couple of sentences from the report of the House of Commons standing committee on this question. In indicating why it did not like this idea, it stated: "There would be incentives to market the vertically integrated service in competition or to the detriment of independently owned pay or specialty services, and will lead to a further fracturing of the market for existing companies".

Therefore our position is supported by the Caplan-Sauvageau Commission, the task report, and in the briefs presented to the legislative committee which argued that content should be kept separate from carriage. We see the cable industry as being like Bell Canada in the transmission business. They should be subject, like Bell, to rate of return regulation. It has been suggested that one of the main reasons the cable industry wants to become involved in programming is to blur further its status as a carrier. If any Government were to come to them and attempt to make the cable industry subject to such regulation, we will have the CCTA come before us and say: "We are different from Bell and we are basically a programming undertaking", and so on.

We oppose the further expansion of the cable companies and the services they supply, and the ability it will give them to increase the rate of profits which, in our opinion, are already much too great for the cable companies.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Madam Speaker, I would like to speak to the subamendment and say, first of all, that I would have no trouble voting in favour of this provision because I believe it would provide a firm direction for the main amendment, Motion No. 37 now before the House.

I may recall Motion No. 37 to amend Bill C-136 in Clause 3, which adds the following:

> "(i) should accord priority to the carriage of Canadian programming services, in French and English, both public and private, with priority given to the Canadian public element programming services,
> (ii) may carry foreign originated programming services only where the programming they provide is substantially different from that already offered by a licensed Canadian broadcasting undertaking or where those foreign programming services were already carried by distribution undertakings,
> (iii) should be regulated in a manner that reflects a reasonable recognition of exclusive rights acquired by Canadian broadcasting undertakings,".

[English]

In speaking to these three points under the subamendment, I would like to make it clear that in ten minutes one cannot do justice to all the thoughts and points one would like to raise. I would like to talk about the parliamentary network and the recent shuffling of the parliamentary channel on cable. In my riding, for example, and I know the Speaker has received lots of letters and will be receiving more on this subject, there is quite a bit of unease about the fact that some cable companies have "elevated" the parliamentary channel so that many people who were receiving it cannot receive it any more unless they have a special hook-up. That hook-up is costly, I think $100.

In an article written on the weekend by John Warren, there is reference to a 1986 survey by Environics Research which shows that 3 per cent of all Canadians tune in, almost daily, to the parliamentary channel. Another 10 per cent watch it at least once a week. The numbers are 750,000 people daily with an additional 2.5 million each week. If their situation is like that of people in my riding where Skyline has moved it from Channel 16 to Channel 50, they are just out of luck. They cannot hear me anymore because someone made a decision to put other stations ahead of the parliamentary channel. I find that a bit difficult to accept, and I would like to tell the CRTC that indeed I expect that if this amendment is approved they will accord priority to a channel of such importance as the parliamentary channel.

We had the pleasure today of welcoming the British select committee on televising proceedings of the House of Commons of the United Kingdom. Maybe they would like to hear from some of us about what we feel about this broadcasting. Maybe they would like to hear from Canadians about how they feel about receiving the signal. I know I was quite impressed with the decision when it was taken some 11 years ago in this House. I was not too sure it was going to be very well received, but I am amazed to see how many people in my riding of Ottawa—Vanier come up to me every week and say: "I saw you on TV this week". I say: "What was I saying?" "I don't know but I saw you on TV".

Miss MacDonald: Is that good or bad?

Mr. Gauthier: The fact that they see you there is very important to people. I hope they understand I am trying to fight to get this channel back into the basic service so that people at home can receive the parliamentary channel.

The second point I want to make concerning according priority to the carriage of Canadian programming services in French and English, both public and private, is the famous question I raised this morning about TV-5.

I would like to get back to that, Madam Speaker, because TV-5 is important to French-speaking Canadians. I would like to give an overview of the present situation since I said this morning that people living outside Quebec have to pay more to receive the TV-5 signal, and that is quite true. It costs almost $6 more to receive the TV5 signal if you live outside Quebec.

The Association des câblodistributeurs du Québec has signed an agreement with the Quebec-Canada television consortium under which cable distributors may transmit the signal to all subscribers to their basic service at a cost of, get this, $1.63 per month, which includes TV-5, Canal Famille, Météo Média, Musique Plus and YTV. YTV is an English station which I watched at home not long ago, and I thought their programs were quite interesting.

Unfortunately, in provinces outside Quebec, for instance here in Ontario, negotiations did not lead to this kind of agreement. Here in Ottawa, as I said this morning, subscribers to Skyline Cablevision can receive TV-5 and Canal Famille—two channels, which is half the number Quebec viewers can receive—and they have to pay $2 per month more, while it takes another $4 to rent the decoder to be able to receive the signal. So it costs them $6 to get half the services that are available to Quebecers for $1.63.

Madam Speaker, I find that hard to swallow. We are not any richer over here. We are not asking for more. We just want the same kind of deal they are getting in Quebec. Under the agreement between the Association des câblodistributeurs du Québec and the Quebec-Canada television consortium, cable distributors, get this, can buy the signal at a cost of 29 cents per subscriber for the first year. To these costs should, of course, be added the cost of equipment depreciation and administrative costs, all of which are included in the $1.63 charge to Quebec subscribers. As for cable distributors outside Quebec, everything depends on the agreements which, I hope, will be signed some day by TV-5 with each distibutor. As I see it, considering the national investment in setting up the TV-5 network, and the fact that as Canadians we have invested millions to make this programming available to Canadians as part of a cultural mission and a desire to achieve a linguistic balance, I think equity should be restored as soon as possible in this respect.

I would therefore ask the Government and the CRTC—because I think the Minister is well aware of the problem, and she let me know she would try to push the CRTC to make this a priority—to put before the Canadian public a list of criteria that cable distributors should meet. That is in fact the purpose, as I see it, of item 1, the purpose we are trying to explain to Canadians, which is to accord priority to the carriage of Canadian programming services, in French and English, both public and private, with priority given to the Canadian public element programming services. That is all we are trying to do, Madam Speaker, and I hope the amendment and subamendment will be accepted.

In item 2, and I want to read it, "may carry foreign ordinary programming services only when the program they provide is substantially different". We are trying to grandfather the existing 22 foreign services, if I may use those words. I guess I would have to say that American programming is actually in the basic service right now. In support of this amendment I quote the Association of Canadian Film and Television Producers that stated the following in a publication:

> With the exception of the "three-plus-one" services (ABC, CBS, NBC and PBS) already carried, the Act should make provision for the carriage of foreign radio and television services only when the programming they provide is complementary to that available from licensed Canadian broadcasters.

I see that I should wrap up my comments, Madam Speaker. I want to tell the House that what we are trying to do here is to strengthen the legislation, to make it a little more responsive, to get the CRTC to move, and to get the priorities set.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Madam Speaker, I believe I can speak again on the subamendment, the amendment to the amendment. The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) raised some very interesting points about which we sometimes lose track when we are debating technicalities.

Cable companies, however, have incredible power. Recently there has been a switch of channels and people are very upset. Not only are people facing increased prices for cable—

Miss MacDonald: It is the CRTC.

Mr. Waddell: I know the CRTC makes the rulings, but on the application of the cable companies.

If you give the cable companies, as this Bill is doing, the power to broadcast, to originate programming, if you like, other than local programming, regular programming—and they are the ones that carry the transmission—you have a potential conflict of interest, Madam Speaker. As someone pointed out, the potential for conflict is great as demonstrated when used to promote Canadian pay services taken over by cable's own Home Shopping Club Network.

In its sixth report the standing committee, chaired by a Conservative Member, gave the following examples of the danger of what it called vertical integration. Let me quote from it:

> —the allocation of revenue between the distribution undertaking and the network operator directly affects the capacity of the network operator to meet its Canadian content and other programming obligations.
> If distribution undertakings are permitted to own and operate such programming services, they would in effect be negotiating affiliation agreements with themselves, and would have an incentive to maximize the allocation of revenue to the distribution function. Moreover, there would be incentives to market the vertically integrated service in competition with or to the detriment of independently owned pay or specialty services.

The Hon. Member from Winnipeg suggested that a number of groups opposed this but the Minister said: "No, they do not any more". These groups have consistently opposed allowing cable to originate broadcasting. I do not know where cable got all this influence with the Government, but the cable companies are the big winners in this Bill, and there is a potential for conflict.

Here is what Gary Neil of ACTRA, the union, summarized when he appeared before the committee:

> There are two aspects to the production of programming by cable. At the moment they are involved to some extent through the community channel and we do not think it is inappropriate and would not be particularly concerned if this bill were recognizing that in law.

In other words, you recognize that they can program with the community channel. He continued:

> However when you get to a more general question of them originating programming, the difficulty with vertical integration is that the individuals making decisions about what will be available to Canadians would also have produced some of the material available for distribution.

Not all of the material, but some of it. He went on to say:

> Clearly there will be prejudice on their part to decide in favour of the materials they have produced. It is a conflict of interest.

Michelle D'Auray of the Canadian Conference of the Arts said:

> We do not believe a cable operator licensed as a carrier should be a programmer, doing content, because the concentration of ownership we already see elements of, would allow for too much control over the system for one company, one corporation. We also believe the system has been built on the distinction of carrier and content and should be maintained at that level.

[Translation]

The Association des producteurs de films et de vidéos du Québec said this: We see to our dismay that the legislator ignored the recommendation in the Sauvageau-Caplan Report and preferred to authorize distributors to be involved in programming for local or other needs.

[English]

Our position is that content should be kept separate from carriage. We see the cable industry as being like Bell Canada in the transmission business. It should be subject, like Bell, to a regulated rate of return. The cable industry is making a tremendous rate of return, some say over 50 per cent. We feel that one of the reasons the cable industry wants to get involved in programming is that it would blur its status as a carrier. If any future Government were to come to it and attempt to make the cable industry subject to such regulation, like Bell as a carrier, it would come before the Minister and say: "We are different from Bell because we program as well as carry." We think that is the inarticulated major premise why the cable industry wanted in this Bill as a programmer and is what it won from the Government. I do not know what the price the Conservatives will pay for it but they have certainly given a huge favour to the cable industry, the one group that always supported the Bill.

These amendments attempt to stop the Government from mixing content and carriage. Let me quote Mr. Andrew Roman of the Public Interest Advocacy Centre when he discussed that danger:

> —it will not be long before you are going to start to see the cable industry wanting to program channels and wanting to accept advertising, and seeking exemptions from certain classes of regulations from the CRTC or the Cabinet and going head to head with broadcasters.
> If they can do that, because of the inherent advantage they have with the technology because they control the delivery system for 60 per cent or 65 per cent of Canadian households, they can put every broadcaster today out of business if they want to, just by grabbing up their advertising revenues and by using the same program producers on a contract basis as virtually everybody else does.

Look out, here comes Ted Rogers and the rest of the cable people to take over the private broadcasting in the long run in Canada or at the minimum to avoid their huge profits from being regulated. That is what is behind this.

I invite the Hon. Member for Edmonton South (Mr. Edwards) to speak. As I understand his sixth committee report, it said that there should be a distinction between carriage and content. Is he still holding that position?

Mr. Edwards: Madam Speaker, I think that some of what we have been hearing in the debate today relates to ideology and not to principle. I challenge the Hon. Member to tell the House whether or not it is the official policy of the New Democratic Party that the Canadian cable television industry should be nationalized.

Mr. Waddell: Madam Speaker, I do not regard that as our policy. That is such a red herring.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I thought the Hon. Member for Edmonton South was rising on debate and that is why he was recognized. There is no question or comment period at this time. Resuming debate with the Hon. Member for Mount Royal.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Madam Speaker, the new Parliamentary Secretary is very able in slipping in a bon mot.

We are addressing a whole distribution system. Subclause 3(r) relates to distribution undertakings. We have to realize that we are facing a new structure, a new option or a new right, whichever way we put it, that the Government has accorded to the cable industry. I will not argue with the Government's right to make those decisions. It has decided that the distribution undertakings can be concerned with both content and carriage, but I would ask the Minister if she would please seriously consider this.

There already is serious fragmentation of the base and tremendous competitiveness in the broadcasting industry with the networks, the programming undertakings and the broadcast undertakings now having the right to be programmers. Perhaps the Minister would at least consider containing their rights in this particular area to programming that would be complementary. It is in that regard that I had moved Motion No. 41. I would be very pleased if she would look at that particular motion and give some serious consideration to it.

When local broadcasters will be in competition with local distribution undertakings, it will set up a very difficult situation. The viability of those individual broadcasters may well be challenged.

What I consider one of the most fundamental aspects of this Bill, and one of the most fundamental principles that needs to be integrated into this Bill so that the Broadcasting Act effectively responds to a Canadian system, is Canadian content and Canadian realities. I would plead with the Minister to look very carefully at Motion No. 37. I suggest to the Minister that it is consistent with the view of the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture. It was supported by the CRTC and, believe it or not, by the cable people.

The limiting of the carrying of foreign programming services is seen as detrimental to our system. I have, in my motion, grandfathered that which already exists. I feel strongly that we ought not add any additional American services until we have enabled our own Canadian services to grow and to reflect what we believe to be in the best interests of the Canadian broadcasting system.

The standing committee recommended the prohibition of further carriage of foreign programming in its fifteenth report, and this was made quite clear in recommendations 139, 140, 141, and 142. The Minister answered this by saying that the prohibition of foreign radio and television services other than those whose programming is complementary to that available from Canadian broadcasters has not been included in the legislation since it would unduly restrict the access of Canadians to a range of international broadcasting services.

I would suggest that we in Canada are far from being discriminated against. Certainly our access to foreign services is not restricted. I would remind the Minister that because of our good-neighbour policy and because of the airwaves that flow over the border, 71 per cent of all the television programs viewed by English-speaking Canadians are American. I would remind her that 80 per cent of our publishing industry is in foreign hands, 97 per cent of films shown in Canada are foreign, and 85 per cent of records and tapes sold in Canada are based on imported master tapes. The thrust is to change that reality and enable us to have our own industries.

I think it is important that Canadian broadcasters have some exclusivity of rights. One of the things my amendment does is provide that the Canadian broadcasting system be regulated in a manner that recognizes exclusive rights of broadcasters. It would also, I think, enable the essential role of the distribution undertakings, the distributing of Canadian radio and television services in English and in French, both public and private. The first priority would be given to the public sector. Canadian services including specialty services would be clearly defined so that the CRTC could not in any way avoid the responsibilities which we believe it should have. Only if it has a clear direction in the legislation can it then be held responsible if it does not follow the will expressed in the Bill.

The Standing Committee said that this was very important. It is just as appropriate and important to establish a basis for requiring the licensed broadcasters to give priority to carrying Canadian programs and it is at least as important to establish a legislative base that requires that distribution undertakings give priority to carrying Canadian undertakings.

I was glad my colleague from Vanier talked about the place of the House of Commons channel. It is disappearing very far up the dial. In fact, I just spoke to an elderly aunt of mine. She tells me that she cannot get it because she has an MATV system which does not bring it in. My mother-in-law cannot get it because she does not have a converter that goes that high. Perhaps they have been saved from this unbelievable debate. Nevertheless, if this priority carriage was there, public and private Canadian services could be on basic services and these people could get access to those services.

I would suggest that we must limit foreign programming. It is absolutely fundamental. Rather than allowing the Americans to invade, I would suggest we could occasionally learn some lessons from them.

It is interesting to note that on May 18, 1988, this year, the United States Federal Communications Commission decided to reimpose a requirement which it had removed in 1980, that cable systems in the United States not import a distant broadcasting signal—that is about 32 miles or something like that—even when done on a compulsory license basis, whenever a program contained in that signal has been acquired for exclusive use by a local broadcaster. This rule is one from which we could learn and it would help Canadian broadcasters to have Canadian rights that would not be diluted by having their programs shown on Sunday while the other programs are shown on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday without simultaneous substitution. It will enable them to have a decent financing base from the advertising revenue.

The last point is that in the limiting of foreign program carriage, I would suggest we would end up, as I have indicated in my amendments, grandfathering the 17 presently accepted American programs and the 5 new ones that have been accorded as a result of the November, 1987 hearings. Thus we would limit the damage being done by this overwhelming presence which is eroding the program rights and the revenue base of our own Canadian broadcasters. I would like to see them have the exclusive rights which they buy right across the system and let us separate out our markets so we know that we have a Canadian broadcasting system that reflects Canada.

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, in this group of amendments, there are several subgroups that I would just like to comment on. The first is with regard to Motion No. 33 which deals with the proposals put forward in the legislation for an alternative programmer which the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) would take out.

We have heard a lot said in the House about Canadian content and and about the need for more Canadian content. Nothing will bring more variety of Canadian content whether from our multicultural communities or dealing with the regional nature of our country, the diversity of our country, or the arts and the culture of our country, than an alternative programming service. It has been argued for time and again by the Caplan-Sauvageau task force and by many, many others.

I would like to read an extract from a letter at which I had just been looking at as I was listening to the discussion. It is from the Dean of the Faculty of Fine Arts at the University of Calgary. He says:

> Needless to say I am absolutely delighted that there is provision in the proposed new broadcasting act for a new service that will pay attention not only to the multicultural realities of Canada but also to the vast storehouse of talent concerned with the arts. I believe unless the arts can find a place in the Canadian broadcasting system they are in danger of becoming irrelevant to succeeding generations of Canadians.

I mention that because this new service will offer, over and above what is now there, an additional outlet for our many Canadian creative talents: artists, composers, and so many people in that field. I would ask the Hon. Member to reconsider her position. The rules that would govern this are that the CRTC would hold hearings and that there would be input from groups all across the country in order to construct the best possible alternative programming service that we could have. We have asked only that it be ready to go on air within two years' time. I think that can be met. There have been many expressions of interest already made to us by people who want to see that come about.

The second group of amendments to which I want to speak is this key one with regard to the licensing of U.S. services. I have heard what Members have to say about this. I want to state specifically why we have gone the route that we have, in fact giving the responsibility and the power to a Canadian regulatory body to determine what is accepted on cable and what is not.

In fact, the CRTC itself regulates the introduction of U.S. services by permitting only those services that are complementary to Canadian domestic services. The CRTC is the gatekeeper. I have heard arguments put forward saying that we should really license all of these, whether they are off-air or whether they are by cable. The Hon. Member for Mount Royal said that she would grandfather certain ones. Well, that really is not a logical position because if you are going to ask for the licensing of one service from the United States, surely you should be consistent and ask for the licensing of all services.

I just want to ask the Members who have put forward these proposals whether or not they have considered what this would mean. I am very concerned and very serious about this because it is true, I suppose, that we could ask, we could determine, we could demand, that every U.S. service coming into this country be licensed under Canadian regulations, whether it happens to be HBO or ABC.

One of the key criteria about Canadian licensing regulations is that the Canadian distribution service and the Canadian broadcaster be 80 per cent owned in this country. That being the case, how would you ask HBO, ABC, NBC, or anything else to be 80 per cent Canadian owned and controlled in order to have a Canadian licence? I suppose the only way you could do it is by weakening the content or the requirements under Canadian licensing, that is, to less than 80 per cent Canadian controlled. However, we are not prepared to do that with regard to those systems which are licensed in this country. They must remain Canadian owned and controlled.

Therefore we ask how we then guard against the proliferation of a great many services coming into this country from outside. We do it through the regulatory body that we have established in this country, the CRTC, and by requiring that the CRTC tell the cable distributors that they must ensure that only those services that are complementary to what is being offered here are carried. In that way you have some means of control, but if we lose that control anything could be acceptable.

That is an argument that I want opposition Members to think very carefully about because, while what they are suggesting may sound good in the heat of the moment, if they really examine where it would lead us, they will find that it is not where they really want to be.

I feel that the authority and the power should be given to a Canadian regulatory body to determine what comes into this country. Look at some of the things which, even under the existing Act—and under the new Act it will be stronger—have been licensed and some of the things which have not been licensed. For instance, our cable services carry First Choice but they do not carry HBO. They carry The Sports Network but not ESPN. They carry Much Music, not MTV.

The CRTC looks at this and sees what is complementary. It is for that reason that we will put the requirement on the CRTC to decide what services cable carries and what they do not, and why they must maintain a larger balance of Canadian services than American. That is what you will see if you look at the division even in the present set-up.

The third area I want to mention briefly is the comments that have been made with regard to the cable programming role and whether or not they should be into programming as well as into carriage. There has been a lot of discussion about this. I think it is important to note that cable is already into programming. There have been a lot of services through community channels and through the Youth Television Network which have already been authorized by the CRTC. It is not as if this was something new.

We have written into this Bill very strict requirements with regard to programming as undertaken by cable. Yes, going that route was a very conscious policy decision on the part of the Government, but we ensured that the possibility of a conflict of interest arising when distributors originate programming was addressed by putting in two sections, with which I am sure the cable industry is not very happy, to ensure that the programming is properly monitored and properly produced. I am referring, of course, to Subclauses 9(1)(h) and 10(1)(h) of the Bill. We have put in these controls so that the conflict of interest possibilities are lessened, indeed regulated.

It is for these reasons, Madam Speaker, that I wanted to interject in the debate at this point. I wanted to explain why we are doing the things we are doing. We think that in the long run they will be better. We think that having the CRTC as the gatekeeper for programming is better than even considering the possibility in any way of lessening the demands of Canadian ownership and control. We think that there is a role for cable.

The Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) mentioned the moneys that cable companies earn. I want to see that money reinvested in Canadian programming. In the way in which the Bill is written, that requirement to meet Canadian content applies to cable companies ordistribution undertakings as it does on to programming of the CBC.

It has to apply to all sections of the broadcasting industry and not just to isolated parts of it, as it had in the past.

Mrs. Finestone: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I want to ask the Minister for clarification. In the set of motions we have been debating, Motions Nos. 32 to 43—

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Hon. Member puts the Chair in a very difficult situation. There is no question and comment period following these interventions at report stage. It is not a point of order, but if the House gives unanimous consent for the Hon. Member to ask a question, the Chair is prepared to accept it. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mrs. Finestone: Thank you for your gracious approach to that, Madam Speaker. I was not sure whether the Minister was accepting, by omission, Motion No. 32 on aboriginal concerns, or does it mean that all Motions Nos. 32 through to 43 are not being accepted?

Miss MacDonald: Right.

Mrs. Finestone: Thank you.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The graciousness was really on the part of the Minister. Does she wish to answer the question?

Mrs. Finestone: She did.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The first question is on Motion No. 32, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 33, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 35, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal, which would dispose of Motion No. 34, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway.

Mrs. Finestone, seconded by Mr. Gauthier, moved that Bill C-136, an Act respecting broadcasting and to amend certain Acts in relation thereto—

Some Hon. Members: Dispense.

Mr. Gauthier: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I just want to make it clear that when the House gives consent to dispense with your reading, I take it the House realizes that the amendment will be inserted in today's Hansard as read. In other words, it will be printed even though we dispense with you reading it. It is because we are co-operative and want to get through this Bill fast that we are doing this, not for any other reason.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Chair wishes to thank the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier. The question is on Motion No. 35. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 36, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Pursuant to Standing Order 14(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on the amendment to Motion No. 37, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Renfrew—Nipissing—Pembroke. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the amendment?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the amendment will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion, the nays have it.

Amendment (Mr. Hopkins) negatived.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The question is on the Motion No. 37, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 38, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 39, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 41, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal.

An Hon. Member: What about Motion No. 40?

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Speaker's ruling is that an affirmative vote on Motion No. 41 would obviate the need for a vote on Motion No. 40. The Chair cannot decide until Hon. Members have decided on Motion No. 41. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The House will now proceed to the next group of motions, Motions Nos. 44, 45, 46, 47, and 50, which will be grouped for debate and voted on separately.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 3 by adding immediately after line 8 at page 7 the following:

"(s) subject to priority being given to the other objectives of this subsection in the event of any conflict therewith, the Canadian broadcasting system should be regulated and supervised in a flexible manner that

(i) in respect to non-program services, does not inhibit the development of Canadian information technologies or the delivery of Canadian information services to Canadians, and

(ii) is sensitive to the administrative burden that may be imposed on persons carrying on broadasting undertakings."

Motion No. 45

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 4 by adding immediately after line 8 at lpage 8 the following:

"(5) For the purposes of 4(2), "carried on in whole or in part within Canada" includes the transmission of a broadcasting service, wherever it may be orgiginated, to a member of the public in Canada directly or indirectly, where such transmission involves a contractual relationship with a member of the public or with a distribution undertaking serving a member of the public"

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 5 in the English version by striking out line 18 at page 8 and substituting the following therefor:

"sion of the system."

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 5 by striking out lines 19 to 40 at page 8 and lines 1 to 10 at page 9.

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 7 by striking out lines 24 to 26 at page 9.

She said: Madam Speaker, we are talking in this group, first, about the definition of "network", which I would like to look at and discuss with the Minister. I proposed an amendment which I hoped she will find favour with. The second is a full amendment under Motion No. 47, which is a deletion of Clause 5(2) of the cable regulations and supervision of the system, and the consequential amendments which would flow from that on Motions Nos. 44, 46, and 50. Actually, Motion No. 44 would add the place of the CRTC within the broadcasting system into Clause 3, which is the broadcastng policy.

I would just like to start by addressing the question of networks. We talked for a long time of services, which are available in an increasing number of Canadian households, that operate without a licence and earn revenue from Canada without any obligation to contribute to the Canadian programming system. It is of concern. It was an ongoing concern of the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture.

In the prior set of amendments we were addressing the 17 American networks or superstations which had been accorded access to Canada through Canadian cable regulations, in essence. This amendment which I am proposing would in a sense stop the Americanization of our television system and create a better playing field, if I may use that rather overused term.

I would like to suggest that in the course of the amendment which I am going to bring on networking, the licensed Canadian services operating on the same basis that they presently work must spend money on Canadian programs and offer a balance of Canadian and non-Canadian programs. Therefore we have a sense of double standards. We have loose ends out there. We have a direct broadcast satellite service that is not properly covered—its signals are not covered—and pay per view has a potential of coming in here. I am suggesting that rules should be the same for everyone, and that the definition of networks should apply to satellite and cable services.

I would like to remind the Minister that even the CCTA endorsed the concept in the July, 1987 brief, and I refer to page 10 of that brief.

I had some legal advice which I would like to share with the Minister. When we look at the purposes of Clause 5(2), where the Minister refers to the services that carry on in whole or in part within Canada, it includes the transmission of a broadcasting service wherever it may be originated to a member of the public in Canada, directly or indirectly, where such transmission involves a contractual relationship with a member of the public or with a distribution undertaking serving a member of the public.

In that amendment which I am proposing I would like to suggest to the Minister that it implements recommendation 17 of the sixth report of our standing committee. Although the Minister made certain responses about the fact that she cannot cover services that do not have a business presence in Canada and operate under American law, she considers that it is doubtful whether it would be legally possible to require these services to submit to licensing by the CRTC, because Canada—did I say something wrong; sorry—cannot extend its laws beyond its territory.

I would like to suggest to the Minister that this comment is based on a misconception of fact and on an error in law. The misconception is that the recommendation would apply to off-air U.S. border stations. These stations do not contract to deliver these services to members of the public in Canada, and it is not captured through the nature of the amendment which I am proposing.

The principal focus of the recommendation is on the U.S. speciality networks, like Arts and Entertainment, CNN, et cetera, which enter into contracts with Canadian cable systems in Canada to deliver their service to Canadian homes. This activity is clearly capable of falling under Canadian law if legislatures wish it to, and if this be the case.

The term "undertaking" does not require actual physical presence or physical assets to be present in Canada. A number of cases have held that the mere presence of a signal in Canada can give rise to tortious—a marvellous legal word. the Minister does not know that I looked up her definition too—or copyright liability. I would suggest that her staff refer to Jenner v. Sun Oil (1952), or to CAPAC v. International Good Music (1963).

The wording proposed would also cover pay per view and direct broadcast satellite operations, offering their services to Canadians, to the extent that the services delivered on a contracted basis. In practical terms this confines the ambit of the clause to incrypted signals, where the signal originator authorizes a Canadian home to decode the signal for a fee. The committee certainly heard about how this is often sold under the table and illegally.

The fact that the United States service may not have a business presence in Canada does not preclude the Government from taking steps against the marketers or distributors of the service who generally operate in Canada. Making the legislation effective raises the same practical problems as going after illegal lottery operators or boiler room operations, operating over the border by telephone. You prosecute any local intermediary, issue stop mail orders, or take other quasi-criminal steps available in Canada.

The proposed amendment does not actually prohibit U.S. services from operating in Canada. However, it would require them to obtain a CRTC licence for the first time.

In order to make room for complementary U.S. specialty services, it is expected that the direction on Canadian ownership would have to be amended to permit such services to qualify for licences. However, under Clause 9(2), that exemption could certainly take place, or under a broad policy directive. Such licences would presumably be issued for a transitional period only, so that would-be Canadian services in the same program category would not be foreclosed from applying or eventually operating in Canada with a Canadian version of the U.S. service, often even more interesting. We do not allow—and the Minister alluded to this a little earlier—HBO or ESPN, because we have First Choice and TSN.

I would suggest that this whole thought of complementary versus competition in access to Canadian networks, to the Canadian little box where you punch buttons and you get what you want to see, is very key to the effective operation of this Bill. As the presence in Canada of American exports expands, and they take more and more money out of our market, we must find ways to be concerned about Americanization and take some kind of control over what is going on.

There has been an all-Party agreement in committee. If the cable industry was not so concerned, and it agreed, I would like to know why the Minister cannot agree to this particular motion. I strongly ask the Minister to give it serious consideration.

With respect to Motion Nos. 44, 46, 47, and 50, one of the elements in this Bill is Clause 5(2) which sets forth a number of objectives for the regulation and supervision of the broadcasting system. These are intended to be distinct from the objectives of the broadcasting policy set forth in Clause 3(1). Clause 5(3) states that the objectives for the regulation and supervision of the system set out in subclause (2) rank lower in priority to any conflicting objections in Clause 3(1). I would like to suggest to the Minister that there needs to be degree of clarity here. I have made what I hope the Minister will find, upon consultation, an amendment which can be helpful.

A review of the objectives stipulated in subclause 5(2) shows that four out of the six subclauses are largely duplicative and are of concepts already recognized in Clause 3(1). In particular Clause 5(2)(a) is the same as Clause 3(1)(b). Clause 5(2)(b) is the same as Clause 3(1)(h)(ii). Clause 5(2)(c) is the same as Clause 3(1)(c)(iv), and Clause 5(2)(d) is a watered down version of Clause 3(1)(i). As a result, I believe that it will be confusing and it will be ill-fitting to reiterate those concepts (a) to (d) in Clause 5(2). Therefore, my Motion No. 47 flows from that thought. It deletes the articles in Clause 2. It would leave only Clause 5(2)(e) and Clause 5(2)(f) unaccounted for, and they are genuinely important and represent new concepts in the Bill. I recommend that they be moved to Clause 3, which is the over-all broadcasting policy, and can effectively indicate the role, place, and importance of the CRTC in the over-all broadcasting policy for Canada. I have added only one word, which would be to add the "Canadian" dimension to the role to be played by the CRTC.

In summation, I suggest that Clauses 5(2)(e) and (f) would now be placed under general broadcast policy as a new Clause 3(1)(s) while at the same time adding that Canadian dimension. If all that is taken into consideration, I believe that we would avoid conflict between the objectives and the supervision of the system, and add a degree of clarity which I hope the Minister would find favourable. I would suggest that the CRTC also agrees with that perspective. I hope the Minister will see fit to give serious consideration to accepting the amendments.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Madam Speaker, on behalf of the NDP, it is true that many of the subclauses of Clause 5(2) are similar to Clause 3. We have taken a slightly different position than that taken by my colleague from the Liberal Party on this matter. We see Clause 5 as potentially serving a useful role. We have proposed some amendments which will be coming up in the next round of motions. If Clause 5(2) can be improved, we would probably support that clause.

We do support Motion No. 50 moved by the Hon. Member for Mount Royal. It is exactly the same as Motion No. 51 which I proposed. After a good deal of thought and discussion in the legislative committee, I have come to a position which is pretty close to that of the Minister with respect to the powers of the CRTC, as well as its decision-making process. Indeed, as I recall, the Minister accepted one of my amendments on this subject in committee. However, I believe that some refinements are still in order, and I believe that Motion No. 50 is one of them.

It would allow the broad power of policy direction to apply relative to Clause 3(1), the broadcasting policy for Canada. However, it would take away from the Government the power to make direction under Clause 5(2). I believe this would improve this section of the Bill by allowing the commission to act more independently, while at the same time maintaining the general power of policy direction by the Government. I urge the Minister to support Motion No. 50.

[English]

Mr. Thacker: Madam Speaker, I rise to seek unanimous consent in order that Motion M-151 in my name may be transferred to the name of the Hon. Member for St. Catharines (Mr. Reid), seconded by the Hon. Member for Esquimalt—Saanich (Mr. Crofton). I would, of course, give the first speech. Members will be pleased to know that I will be limited to 10 minutes. That in itself might induce unanimous consent.

Mr. Gauthier: Madam Speaker, it is an unusual procedure but, for the sake of the debate, we do not have any objection to the Parliamentary Secretary transferring the sponsorship of the motion to his colleague. I do not know why he would restrict himself to 10 minutes because the first speaker has 20 minutes. Is he telling us that the mover of the motion would have 20 minutes? I am just trying to clarify how much time would be given to all of us.

Mr. Waddell: Madam Speaker, the NDP has no objection. As a matter of fact, given that the Government just gave $3 billion to upgraders and another $1 billion for Hibernia, we want to see the sleight of hand that will produce a resolution which says that deficits will be eliminated and budgets balanced. Not since the National Energy Program has there been such a massive infusion of funding for energy, and I find it very ironic. I am waiting to hear this because I recall our past debates.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I understand there is unanimous consent.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

FINANCE

BALANCING OF BUDGET

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, the government should consider the advisability of amending the Constitution of Canada so as to require the government to submit a balanced budget except:

(a) in times of a declared national emergency or disaster, or

(b) if the deficit receives parliamentary approval by a two-thirds majority.

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, it is an honour and privilege to rise on Motion M-151 to put to the House and Canadians an idea that I believe is essential to the future and the long-term stability of our country as a nation and as a society.

The basic principle of the motion requires a constitutional amendment that would require governments to balance the budgets we present here in Parliament. I have listed three exceptions. One is a declared national emergency. Another is a declared national disaster. The third is if this Parliament, by a vote of two-thirds of its Members, declares in favour of a deficit. I hasten to reassure Members that I am not wedded to the specific wording of the basic principle or the exceptions. There may well be other exceptions that Members come up with that we would all find acceptable. Perhaps a two-thirds majority is too high. However, it seems to me as parliamentarians our prime concern has to be for the long-term future and stability of our country.

We entrench in our Constitution our democratic rights because we know we cannot trust power solely to people. We also entrench human rights. I certainly would be prepared to work with other Members to work up a constitutional amendment that would protect future generations from environmental breaches. We need environmental protection in our Constitution for future generations. However, the purpose of this debate is constitutional protection for future generations on economic matters.

Why am I concerned? This year the deficit will be some $28 billion. Members know that a mere four years ago it was $38 billion. Certainly it is being reduced each year and that is a step in the right direction, but on April 1 of every year the deficit is moved over to the national debt. Members will remember that in 1968 the national debt was some $18 billion, even though we had built this country, fought two world wars, and endured 10 years of depression. However, since 1968, as a result of succeeding government budget deficits, the national debt has gone up to over $300 billion. The cost of servicing that debt is something like $31 billion or $32 billion. That is at current interest rates. We remember that three short years ago interest rates were 23 per cent. That would mean over $60 billion coming right off the top just to service the debt. I firmly believe that would lead to instability and rash action which could impair the future of our country. Certainly it would affect the well being of future generations.

As you well know, the national debt is simply excess spending on ourselves. Yet it has to be paid for by someone. If we do not, it will be put off into the future and our children and grandchildren will pay it. That will be done either through increased taxes or they will receive far fewer services. Or, some future Government will simply turn on the printing presses and we know what that does. We just need to look at all the Third World countries which have a small group of people who are fabulously rich and a mass of poor people. When you look at their economic history, every one has had a government which turned on the printing press and paid their national debt in that way. However, that leads to inflation, high interest rates and collapse. Surely none of us would individually impose that on our children or our grandchildren. Yet collectively since 1968 we have run our national debt from $18 billion to over $300 billion.

What I am saying, and I would like to hear other Members' views, is that it has got so bad that we now need a constitutional amendment that will protect our children and grandchildren from us. That is a terrible thing to say, but the fact is that representative parliamentary democracy has developed to the point in this country and others, particularly in the western world, where the interest groups are so powerful that they are able to convince Parliament to override the broad general interest of the country as a whole. We can all list examples of special interest groups which have received special concessions in this and past Parliaments. They were probably not in the national interest in the long-term, and if we had an entrenched constitutional amendment we would be protected from those types of pressures and powers.

Clearly, I want Canadians to appreciate the magnificent job done by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). Today we spend about $100 billion on programs such as health care and defence and we are taxing away from Canadians about $103 billion. Therefore, we have a surplus of some $3 billion, yet we have a deficit of $28 billion. The reason is that we have to take about $31 billion right off the top to pay to people who have lent money to the Government.

Who are those people? They have more money than they are using at the moment, so they lend it to the Government. If you had $1 million you would never go out and put it in the business. You would lend it to your own Government where it is absolutely guaranteed, particularly as interest rates go up. That is what happened during the late 1970s, and it is not good for the country or our children.

Just imagine if past Governments had done what the Minister of Finance is doing in producing a balanced budget or indeed a surplus. We would not have a national debt. Think of what we could do in health care. Think of what we could do in research and development at a time when the nation needs to have research and development. We are on the cutting edge in competition with other countries. Just think of what we would be able to do for young women who in our society today have to work and choose an abortion for economic reasons rather than keeping a child.

Because of interest on the national debt, we today are beginning to lose opportunities. I think that is very bad. I wish I could have a full 20 minutes because there are many other points I would like to make, but I am anxious to hear from my colleagues. I hope in due course, if not in this Parliament but perhaps as a result of the debate here today that we will be able to refine the motion and in the next Parliament it will be resubmitted by myself if I happen to be successful in the election or by some other Member, and over a period of years this idea will grow to fruition. I hope within my own lifetime it will lead to the entrenchment of economic protection for future generations against our excesses as a result of the state of our democracy today.

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, I am always surprised to hear Tory Members discussing the deficit. In 1984 we on this side of the House, particularly myself, took a very firm position on that during the campaign. I must say that Tory Members also took a position on the deficit. I suggest it was a normal course of action, particularly after the economic crisis that we had here in Canada. The former Liberal Government had to do something to support the unemployed by developing special programs to create jobs, otherwise the rate of employment would have been larger and small business people would have lost a greater part of their market, resulting in more difficulties for Canadian workers.

After having heard speeches, particularly from the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), we expected something important from the Tory Government, but what we saw was in direct contradiction to what was said. Both the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance said publicly, and repeated during the 1984 campaign, that they would cut the deficit but would never increase taxes. The Government has done exactly the opposite. The Government did not cut spending in terms of inflation, but has increased taxes to the tune of $26 billion. In the actual fiscal year that represents $11 billion, but if we take into account the positive effect of fiscal reform, it amounts to a net $9 billion in new taxes, not because of the growth in the economy but because of tax increases, sales tax, gasoline tax, personal income tax and so on.

I guess the Member is expressing the Tory point of view. He is coming back with the same rhetoric as before. In other words he is saying "we have to cut the deficit". He is proposing to put in the Canadian Constitution that, except in very difficult situations, we should not have a deficit at all.

It is very nice to hear those kinds of speeches a few weeks before the writ is dropped and before the election, but it is another thing to deliver the goods. After six years of economic recovery, where have the Tory Members been while we have had tax increases and big deficits year after year? That is two more years than the number of years the Tories have been in power. The recovery started two years before the Tory election in 1984. They voted for tax reform. When the Minister made his speech, they applauded him. Where were they when the deficit was still $28 billion or $29 billion after six years of economic recovery? They were no place at all. They did not raise any questions. After the damage has been done and after the Tory Government has added an almost 60 per cent increase to the national debt, we are presented with a motion for a change to the Canadian Constitution to eliminate the deficit. But where were they during that actual debate?

I read in the the Toronto Star about the series of promises which the Prime Minister and other Ministers have made. They add up to more than $14 billion. Where were you, Sir, when all those announcements were made?

Mr. Redway: Are you for or against it?

Mr. Garneau: These will increase the deficit. We hear the Prime Minister saying that the environment is becoming the main priority for the Tories in the coming election, but where are the Members? They probably discussed the matter in caucus because they will have to increase the environmental budget which was cut by the Tories themselves. I read in The Globe and Mail for September 19 that the Government is now reconsidering cutting environmental jobs after having cut the budget. Now on the eve of the election the Tories want to increase it. The only hope we have is that the Government will bring the budget back to the same level it was in 1984. At least it could do that. When I hear Tories talking about the deficit at this time in our electoral process, I cannot believe my ears. It seems that the Tories are good at rhetoric but they do not live up to promises.

In 1984 the Government promised a net increase of 6 per cent for defence.

Mr. Hopkins: A real increase.

Mr. Garneau: A real increase, yes, but when we look at it, not only was there not an increase of 6 per cent in real terms but there was a decrease in the budget in two of the three years for which the Government was responsible. Now the Tories are presenting a White Paper saying the Government will increase the budget by 2 per cent in the coming year. I think Canadians will understand that the Tory Party is good at rhetoric but very thin when it comes to delivering the goods.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, that is why I am surprised, in fact there is no word to describe how I feel. I had no intention of rising in this debate, but when again I hear the rhetoric of the Hon. Member who just spoke and who translates the rhetoric and speeches of Conservative Members, I simply do not understand! Perhaps I am naive, or would it be that I am not intelligent enough? What I cannot understand is that on the eve of an election campaign they keep telling us how important the deficit is, yet their Prime Minister is crisscrossing Canada and making promises right, left and centre. As I said earlier, the Toronto Star has put a price tag on all those promises—$14 billion!

How can we have the Prime Minister going around and making promises which will increase the deficit while at the same time his backbenchers stand up in the House and make speeches to show how deeply concerned they are over this issue.

Mr. Speaker, I would suggest these are crocodile tears and that we cannot give credence to these people who in 1984 promised to lower the deficit without raising taxes. Well, they did not accomplish much in terms of deficit reduction, but the taxes certainly went up! So now they are telling us they want to introduce a constitutional amendment outlawing deficits, yet their Prime Minister is travelling across Canada making million—and even billion-dollar promises which will totally defeat the purpose of the Hon. Member's constitutional amendment.

[English]

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, I am glad to participate in this debate this afternoon because it fulfils one of the objectives of private Members' hour, which is to bring before the House certain ideas that are not part of the agenda of a Government or of the opposition Parties but which nonetheless can be introduced into this forum by Members of the House so that we can exchange one with another.

I certainly cannot conceive of anything more pressing in its importance than the subject before us today. The sands of time are obviously running out for this Parliament, but I would hope that if this debate accomplishes nothing more, it will at least put not only on the record but into our minds the importance of addressing the issue of the deficit and the public debt with a sense of priority when the next Parliament resumes.

I think we can take as a satisfaction from this Parliament, which is coming to an end, the progress that has been achieved. We know that when this Parliament assembled, we faced the spectre of a runaway, uncontrollable deficit. We can say at the end of this Parliament that we have achieved control over it. We have arrested the growth of the deficit. Instead of its mounting up from the $38 billion with which we began, it is now $10 billion less. If that rate of progress were to continue, obviously in due course we would get it down to the zero mark, which is the hope of many Hon. Members.

I think we need to address this problem with a greater sense of urgency. We should address it without resorting to the magic wand that some Hon. Members will doubtless want a Government to wave and without berating the Government for not doing this or for doing too much of that. We should face up to the realities that will confront Parliament when it will want to achieve a realistic, practical, achievable elimination of the deficit. Let us look at the possibilities. One of them is to reduce spending.

We have had a measure of fiscal responsibility in this Parliament in so far as the rate of spending before we took office was growing at an annual rate of 14 per cent per year over the preceding four years, and it has been reduced by this Parliament to an average rate of 3.5 per cent, less than the rate of inflation. If we are to make progress in eliminating the deficit, we will have to cut spending still more. Here is where the difficulty arises.

It is all very well for opposition Members to tell the Government that it is making promises that mount up to $12 billion. Which of these commitments would the opposition Members or Members on the Government side of the House want to challenge? One of the recent commitments has been $10 million for a proposed conservation area in Scarborough's

Rouge Valley. Is the Liberal Party against that? Is the NDP against that? Will they criticize the Government for making that commitment?

How about a donation of 123 acres of Downsview Airport land as a site for possibly 5,000 new homes at an estimated value of $60 million? That is $60 million that could come into the public treasury. Certainly money will be spent achieving this development that will provide low-cost housing. Would any Member of any Party oppose that?

Almost every spending proposal that can be put before the House of Commons is one that commends itself to reason because it is filling some human need. It is extremely difficult, therefore, to talk about cutting spending. We face the same difficulty when we move in the other direction, which is to attempt a radical change in the tax system.

I have found over the years that it is usually people right of centre who want to cut spending and people left of centre who want to achieve the no-deficit ideal by changing the tax system, usually by imposing more taxes on someone who is supposed to be paying very little in taxes. The NDP spokesperson is here. I will remind him that years ago, we used to hear a lot about Inco, International Nickel, being the villain. We heard that if only Inco would pay all the tax it should, then we would have no deficit problems at all. We have not heard as much about that lately. I suppose it is because Inco has not been doing very well for several years.

We hear now about certain individuals who are getting away with murder because of the various tax loopholes that are supposed to have been opened. I think we should realize that no matter how we plug those loopholes, and tax reform is certainly heading in the right direction, the mass of taxation will be paid by the mass of people. We have to realize that the mass of people will do the mass of the spending, and they will put up most of the revenue. We have to get away from thinking about Government grants and Government awards and move toward realizing that we are talking about taxpayer grants and taxpayer payments.

The real challenge to us in this debate is to recognize the enormity of the public debt. Every year, we have a deficit we add to the public debt, which has now grown to a size that a few years ago would have seemed beyond comprehension. When we add to that the public debt of the provinces and the municipalities, we begin then to take fright.

While most of the federal debt is owed within Canada, a very large portion of the provincial and municipal debt is owed offshore. Consequently, I believe that one of the challenges that cannot be ignored is the challenge of deficit budgeting and the increase of public debt. We will have to address this, and what I will suggest to address it is a scheduled plan.

It is not possible to eliminate the debt simply by legislation. It is not possible to eliminate it simply by a stroke of the pen. If we were to cut the deficit down to zero in one fell swoop, we would cause such a disruption in the economy that the result would be worse than the solution. The cure would be worse than the disease. However, it is conceivable, and I put this before the House as a concept to be taken seriously, that we could attempt a schedule of deficit elimination. We could attempt to bring it down by a certain number of percentage points year by year until we reach a balanced budget. That would be done by eliminating certain expenditures and by further tax reform and adjustment, but the real possibility of achieving this is by something which has begun in this Parliament and is due greatly to the economic policies of this Government, and that is by maintaining a buoyant economy.

If we want to eliminate the deficit without removing vital, essential public services, we will have to do it by increasing the revenue possibilities of our economy. We have done a great deal of that in the past four years. The number of people working and thus becoming income tax payers has increased by 1,300,000. We have had a growth of revenue not simply because of increased taxes but primarily because of more taxpayers and because of people earning bigger incomes and thus paying more individually in income tax or in consumer tax and the like. That is the real secret to it, being careful managers of the public purse in the kinds of expenditures that we authorize; being fair, just, and reasonable in a tax system that will eliminate all possibilities of a free ride at the taxpayers' expense and, most of all, carrying out those economic and trade policies which will bring to this country ongoing prosperity and bring to the Government the kind of revenue that makes possible the programs that meet the approval of our people.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to speak on this kind of motion for the umpteenth time in my years here. I have listened to a number of people at various times talking about the deficit and the national debt. What I find most ironic about it is that it was not socialists who rang this up. It was always private enterprise Parties. They have never been to able to explain, or have never even tried to explain, why.

In fact, the socialist Governments of Tommy Douglas, Allan Blakeney, and Woodrow Lloyd, had balanced budgets in a total of 26 of 31 years. I would like to find another political Party of the private enterprise bent somewhere in this country that could claim that kind of a record. So it was not any kind of a socialist ideology that brought about these national debts and deficits.

I am glad that my hon. friend from Lethbridge—Foothills is here to hear my remarks. I read his motion with great interest this morning. One of the myths that he and people like him like to peddle is that governments, like any individual or corporation, have to live within their means. Well, there is one fundamental difference between individuals and corporations on the one hand and Governments on the other. The difference is that the individual or the corporation cannot tax the people that they owe the money to, but Governments can, Governments do, and Governments will. That sort of mythology which is peddled by some of these outfits and their spokesmen in their places completely overlooks that basic difference between individuals and corporations living within their means and Governments doing so.

I am surprised that my good friend and colleague on the Transport Committee would move a motion like this, unless it is to pacify the Lethbridge Chamber of Commerce, because it is mindless and simplistic. It is a repetition of Reaganomics. It is the Proposition 13 syndrome imported from California.

What I find amusing about this is that the hon. gentleman is challenging his Government. I would be tempted to vote for this stupid motion if it would have the effect that I would like to see. He is challenging his Government to bring in a balanced Budget starting tomorrow, which would mean an increase in taxes of at least 50 per cent. It would mean a chopping of at least $10 billion or $15 billion off present expenditures. I could just see the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) jumping up and down with joy about that idea when he is on the verge of calling an election. He might be ignorant but he ain't stupid. However, that is what the Hon. Member for Lethbridge—Foothills (Mr. Thacker) wants him to be.

I would like to remind my hon. friend that during World War II Canada ran up a national debt and annual deficits that were mind boggling in those days. If fact, if you translated those into 1988 dollars, the national debt and the deficit for every damn year during the war, and the national debt at the end of 1945, was greater than it is now per capita and in total.

I invite my friends to read a book called, I think, The Unnecessary Evil, by Professor Bellam from the University of Manitoba. He throws all these wild eyed, right wing, mindless, simplistic Tory theories about deficits and national debts into a cocked hat.

What happened at the end of the war, Madam Speaker? During the war we turned the entire productive capacity of this nation to work. We had full employment. We did not have enough people to work. I remember working in the shipyards as a 17-year-old and seeing 15-year-old girls catching hot rivets for the war effort. We did it. When the war ended we had this huge national debt and deficit facing us. I will give credit to Mackenzie King, Louis St. Laurent, John Deifenbaker, and Lester Pearson, who had smarter people around them than present leaders have, except for the NDP.

We had to rebuild most of our industrial infrastructure and capacity. We had to reorder the whole thing from a wartime to a peacetime production. We built up to a half a million homes per year. We are building half that many now and we have waiting lists as long as your arm in every city in this country. But at that time, in the late forties and all during the fifties, we had relatively full employment and we acquired that war debt.

By the way, that debt was wiped out without one nickel of foreign investment. We raised the money ourselves. Yes, our taxes went up. We had to buy war savings certificates and victory bonds through payroll deductions. Everybody did, the nation pitched in. During the late forties and all during the fifties the nation pitched in and we wiped out that debt in something like eight or nine years following World War II, and we had relatively full employment.

If we can do that with a declaration of war, we can do it with a declaration of peace, and we challenge our whole nation to do the kinds of things now that we did then. Madam Speaker, I want to say to my hon. friend, as the gentleman whose book I read said, if you were to reduce unemployment from the present 9 per cent down to 5 or 6 per cent over the next one or two years, you will have wiped out the deficit in three years.

It is not as though nothing needs to be done. We can put a quarter million people to work cleaning up our air and water. That will require billions of dollars that we will have to borrow. All those people are put to work, they pay taxes and that pays for the borrowing. I am an innocent stubble jumping prairie boy, but that has always worked before. It seems to make sense.

I talked about the requirement for places for people to live. Every city in this country has a list as long as one's arm for chronic care beds, hospital beds, low income housing and public housing. That would require the construction industry to go to work like it did during wartime. We could cut the national debt in half if those guys over there had something more than the imagination of a doorknob and did not rely on the theories of the 17th and 18th centuries, let alone the 19th century. It is outmoded thinking. It does not work. It never has and never will. It only appeals to the mindless selfish greed of those who ask: "What is in it for me and to hell with everybody else". Again, that is imported from south of the 49th parallel.

Canada is something more and better than that. I do not want to hear any more silly motions. What if there was a national emergency, a natural disaster which required the federal Government to spend $10 billion?

Mr. Thacker: Read the motion.

Mr. Benjamin: What would happen to the balanced budget? I expected more from the Hon. Member for Lethbridge—Foothills than what I see in this motion. This motion should get the contempt it deserves. Perhaps we should pass it to see what the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) has to say about it.

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Madam Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to say a few words on the motion brought forward by my friend, the Hon. Member for Lethbridge—Foothills (Mr. Thacker). The motion states:

That, in the opinion of this House, the government should consider the advisability of amending the Constitution of Canada so as to require the government to submit a balanced budget except:—

Of course, the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) did not bother reading "except", which states:

(a) in times of a declared national emergency or disaster, or

(b) if the deficit receives parliamentary approval by a two-thirds majority.

I have great respect for the Hon. Member for Lethbridge—Foothills. I have served in the House with him since 1984, and have learned to listen to him carefully. I certainly have a great deal of respect for the things he says, the ideas he puts forward, and the actions and initiatives he takes.

The motion which he has put forward today is one in which I can share in a sympathetic way many of his feelings. We have an enormous deficit today and have had for a number of years. The Hon. Member's point of view is one that is shared not only by Members on the Government side of the House but by many Canadians.

I was knocking on doors yesterday and a number of people confronted me on the deficit issue. They were very concerned about the deficit situation and the actions the Government had or had not taken with respect to it during the last four years.

As one who served in municipal government for many years, like the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Ms. Dewar), I am certainly most sympathetic with the concept put forward because municipal governments must balance their budgets by law. They are required not to spend any more money than they raise for current expenditures. This is a concept which certainly raises a lot of sympathy in my soul.

However, I must depart from the position taken by my hon. friend, the Member for Lethbridge—Foothills. During the last two centuries, until the Great Depression of the 1930's, it was traditional economic thinking, traditional government thinking and traditional business thinking that we should have balanced budgets and no Government should spend more than it takes in. It was traditional thinking that we should always make sure that we either raise enough money to pay or cut our cloth according to the money we raise so that there will be a balanced budget.

That concept had some problems in the 1930's, with the Great Depression. The enormous economic difficulties we suffered at that time caused people to begin re-examining that issue and determine whether or not it made sense in all circumstances to have a balanced budget. The Hon. Member for Regina West has raised this in a practical sense, but in a theoretic sense, prior to the 1930's an economist named John Maynard Keynes wrote a book entitled "The General Theory of Employment, Interest and Money". He really turned the world of economics and the world of government financing upside down.

That book and the propositions that were put forward by John Maynard Keynes, later Lord Keynes, advocated what has become known as counter cyclical fiscal policy on the part of government. According to that policy, when a country is faced with hard economic times, it should be offset with expenditures to try to raise the level of demand in the country in order to encourage people to start businesses, to spend money and to put people back to work.

It may not be as well known that Lord Keynes had another part to his theory. It was not just to spend money and have deficit financing if there were hard times. He advocated that one in fact run a surplus, perhaps not enormous, but a surplus in good times. When people were working and the economy was booming and there were inflationary pressures, he suggested that we should not be running a deficit but should be running a surplus and trying to tax away some of that excess of spending power in order to keep inflation under control at the same time as running full employment.

The Keynes theory as set out in his book of general theory, employment, interest and money back in the 1920's was an anti-cylical policy. It was to run a deficit in bad times and run a surplus in good times. He advocated that policy very strongly through the 1930s and the times of depression. Some politicians and government leaders listened to his proposals, but even the ones who listened had some difficulty because it was certainly revolutionary in the sense of the then accepted economic theory. People said that this was really extreme leftism, communism, and would destroy capitalism. In fact, the theories of John Maynard Keynes, when put into practice, actually supported the capitalist process and made sure it worked.

Some people tried to put his theories into effect. Here in North America, Franklin Delano Roosevelt made some effort to put that into effect. In Canada, R. B. Bennett, the Prime Minister of Canada in the middle 1930s, made some effort to put it into effect. They did not go quite far enough to make it work. As my friend from Regina has pointed out, it took the Second World War to really force us into expenditures of the size that were necessary to bring us out of that enormous depression of the 1930s, to right the situation again. It was because of those expenditures and, quite frankly, the deficits that were run at that time that we did come out of the Great Depression of the 1930s.

It was during the closing years of the Second World War when people finally began to realize what Lord Keynes had put before them. They saw a method of maintaining full employment, keeping inflation at a reasonable rate, merely by fiscal policy, not by running up the Bank of Canada rate to enormous rates like they did a few years ago in the 1980s, but by controlling inflation with fiscal policy, not monetary policy, and taxing away those inflationary pressures.

Immediately after the Second World War, that is the sort of policy that the federal Government in Canada put into effect. I have to give an enormous amount of credit—I am not sure if the Prime Minister of the day deserves that credit, but his Finance Ministers certainly do; Mr. Ilsley and Mr. Abbott. Mr. Abbott passed away a short time ago. I am a great admirer of those two gentlemen because I think they truly put into effect the other side of Keynes' policies, the side where you actually ran surpluses in good times. But the problem was that that was not politically acceptable. Unfortunately, it is not very nice for politicians to go out and tell the public that they are going to raise taxes to run on a surplus. The public, understandably, does not want to pay higher taxes and, as a result, that sort of a policy became very unpopular. I am one who thinks that it was one of the main reasons why, in 1957, the Government of Prime Minister St. Laurent lost the election to Prime Minister Diefenbaker. The Government of the day, in good times, was running a surplus and keeping taxes at a rate to actually run a surplus on its current account.

You know where we have gone from there. The Government decided that since that was not politically popular, from then on it was going to make sure that it ran the country in a politically popular way. Finance Minister after Finance Minister has been afraid to raise taxes and to run that surplus in good times. As a result of that we have worked ourselves deeper and deeper into the debt that we have. It is only in the last four years that the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) has tried to address it. He has not tried to address it all at once, but has tried to address the problem slowly but surely.

With the greatest of respect to my hon. friend from Lethbridge—and I know my time has come to an end—I would like to say that while I have great sympathy for his proposition, I think if we practised a little Keynesian economics in this country and if Governments had the intestinal fortitude to do that, we would not have any problems with deficits or inflation or full employment. We would have the kind of economy that we all want in Canada; full employment with reasonable crisis under control at all times.

Ms. Marion Dewar (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, I rise to speak to this because I certainly agree with a lot that the previous speaker has said. I am glad to see that some members of the Conservative caucus are taking on some of our program of full employment and responsible fiscal management, because they certainly have not done that in the last four years.

I see the Government going out and buying its way through every vote, taking a populace kind of approach to policy rather than looking at some good-management, long-term planning.

I recommend that Members look at the management of the Government of Al Blakeney in Saskatchewan. He had three surplus Budgets in the last three Budgets and he was not afraid to say to the people of Saskatchewan that this is how we are managing. It has been downhill ever since the Conservatives took over in that province. That gives you a sense of what fiscal management is all about.

However, my approach to this would be a little different than what we have heard today. I have great concerns about using our Constitution to contravene the political will of the country. If we want to build a strengthened democracy in this country, we have to put forward political platforms, let the people know how we feel about them, and let the people vote one way or another.

We have to be very careful about how we are using our Constitution. It is a simplistic approach to suggest that we can just make a constitutional amendment on things and then let the courts look after it. As responsible human beings who are democratically elected, it is up to us to put in place the kind of policies that we think are responsible and accountable. Bringing forward something like this to amend the Constitution is a lack of faith and trust in the democratic process and in the people who electus. I have great respect for those people. I do not always agree with them, but I have great respect for those who elect us. I think that they have the right to forge the avenue that we are to take.

After the next election I think that many members of the Conservative caucus are going to see that they did not forge that road when they had such a huge majority. They could have had their full employment and a real tax reform. They could have been able to say to the people of Canada that they do not have to have just a small group of rich people getting richer.

If we look at the tax system, we recognize that there is about $29 billion in tax expenditures. Loopholes could be closed. With one stroke, it almost starts to look at dealing with the carrying of that deficit that is about $32 billion.

Those are the kinds of things that you have to look at and say to the Canadian people that it is not as simple as raising taxes or not raising taxes and this kind of thing. It is looking at good management and accountable fiscal policies that give you some long-term planning where you cannot be responsible.

Sometimes people have suggested that municipalities legislatively cannot accumulate debt. That, too, is a bit of smoke and mirrors. Municipalities have the ability of launching debentures. Some of those debentures can be very much an encumbrance on their assets.

In municipal government we adopted a policy that was called "pay as you go". Instead of increasing the debenture, we paid for the things in the good times so that we would have the infrastructure there and they would not fall apart. Proposition 13 did the opposite. It was a legislative proposition. The infrastructures in the cities of California fell apart. The kind of terrible disparities that came into that municipal legislation was really tragic. It showed that you cannot approach government in the simplistic way. I think it is six o'clock.

CANADA CHILD CARE ACT

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-144, an Act to authorize payments by Canada toward the provision of child care services, and to amend the Canada Assistance Plan in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): It being 6 p.m., pursuant to Standing Order 13(4)(a) the House will now proceed to the deferred recorded division on the report stage of Bill C-144, An Act to authorize payments by Canada toward the provision of child care services, and to amend the Canada Assistance Plan in consequence thereof.

Call in the Members.

• (1810)

[English]

And the division bells having rung:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The first question is on Motion No. 4.

Ms. Mitchell moved:

Motion No. 4

That Bill C-144 be amended by adding immediately after line 24 at page 3 the following:

"3. It is hereby declared that the primary objective of the Canadian child care policy is to establish a national child care program which provides non-parental care for children who require it and which is consistently affordable, accessible, available and of assured quality across Canada, and which is provided by not-for-profit child care agencies."

The House divided on the motion (Ms. Mitchell), which was negatived on the following division:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I declare the Motion lost.

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: Madam Speaker, there have been discussions, and I think you will find that the House is agreeable to the results of the division that has just been held applying to motions numbered 21, 22 and 36, so as not to delay the proceedings of the House.

[English]

Mr. Riis: Madam Speaker, I agree that discussions have taken place and we support the proposal put forward by the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier). May I further suggest that we reverse the voting pattern to apply to the concurrence motion.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is there unanimous consent for the proposal put forward by the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier and for the proposal put forward by the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The next vote is on Motion No. 21. Mrs. Pépin moved:

Motion No. 21

That Bill C-144 be amended in Clause 4 by adding immediately after line 38 at page 4 the following:

"(h) indicate the means by which the province will encourage the development of childcare spaces in the workplace;"

The House divided on the motion (Mrs. Pépin), which was negatived on the following division:

(Division No. 572)

PRIVILEGE

ALLEGED COERCION TO FALSIFY TRAVEL CLAIMS

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege. In an article in The Ottawa Citizen dated Tuesday, September 20, 1988, an ex-employee, Grace McCaffrey, alleges that she was coerced into falsifying travel claims.

Miss McCaffrey became seriously ill shortly after she became a permanent employee of my office. We held the job open for her while she recovered her health. Two months later she resigned.

Miss McCaffrey makes no direct charge as to who coerced or encouraged her to fabricate the "reason for travel". At no time during her employment in my office did she raise this issue with myself or Miss Janet Binks, my executive assistant. We are surprised that she would wait six months to raise such a serious charge.

I have asked my staff if there is any truth to this allegation. They have assured me that they have no knowledge of any threat, coercion, or encouragement in connection with travel claims, or any other matter. To the best of our knowledge, all travel claims before, during and after Miss McCaffrey's employment have been completed in accordance with the regulations. There is absolutely no truth to these allegations.

However, I have asked the Privy Council Office to oversee an investigation into these allegations, and the PCO has arranged with the Comptroller General to conduct an audit of the travel claims submitted during Miss McCaffrey's term of employment to ensure that they are in compliance with the regulations for travel by Ministers and their staff. The results of this audit will be made public as soon as they are made available.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I just want to tell the Minister that we believe him. Indeed, we feel as he does, that these things have to be clarified. Miss McCaffrey's allegations raise certain questions in the public mind such as for whose purposes these travel claims were made, if any, and who signed them. I take it that when the Minister makes public the results of the investigation we will have answers to those questions because I understand only a Minister can sign such claims.

I take it we will get answers and I would like to join with other Members of Parliament in saying to the Minister that he has our support.

BROADCASTING ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed from Monday, September 19, consideration of Bill C-136, an Act respecting broadcasting and to amend certain Acts in relation thereto and in relation to radiocommunication, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee; and the amendment of Mrs. Finestone:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 44 by striking out line 14 at page 28 and substituting the following therefor:

"contemplated by subclause 3(1) and in particular paragraphs 3(1)(j) and 3(1)(k),"

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Motions Nos. 49, 56, 67, and 68 are grouped for debate and will be voted on separately.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 5 by striking out lines 32 and 33 at page 8 and substituting the following therefor:

"(d) facilitates the provision of Canadian programs to Canadians;"

Mr. Alan Redway (York East) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 10 by striking out line 35 at page 12 and substituting the following therefor:

"gramming undertakings in order to protect the financial viability of the programming undertaking or to assure the retransmission by distribution undertakings of programs produced in a language other than French or English;"

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 25 by adding immediately after line 36 at page 21 the following:

"(3.1) Where, under subsection (3), the Commission reconsiders a matter that relates to the conditions of a licence issued or to be issued to the Corporation, it shall not render its decision under that subsection before holding a public hearing on the matter, thereby giving the public an opportunity to make representations."

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 29 by adding immediately after line 23 at page 22 the following:

"29.(1) An order or a regulation that is proposed to be made under section 9 or 10 of this Act shall be laid before each House of Parliament at least thirty sitting days before the proposed effective date thereof.

(2) Where, within twenty-five sitting days after a proposed order or regulation is laid before either House of Parliament under subsection (1), a motion for the consideration of that House to the effect that the proposed regulation not be approved, signed by no fewer than eight Senators or fifteen Members of the House of Commons, as the case may be, is filed with the Speaker of the House of Commons, the Speaker shall, within five sitting days after the filing of the motion, without debate or amendment, put every question necessary for the disposition of the motion.

(3) Where a motion referred to in subsection (2) is adopted by both Houses of Parliament, the proposed order or regulation to which the motion relates may not be made.

(4) Where Parliament dissolves or prorogues earlier than twenty-five sitting days after a proposed order or regulation is laid before both Houses of Parliament under subsection (1) and a motion has not been disposed of under subsection (2) in relation to the proposed order or regulation in both Houses of Parliament, the proposed order or regulation may not be made.

(5) For the purposes of this section, "sitting day" means, in respect of either House of Parliament, a day on which that House sits."

Mr. Waddell: Madam Speaker, let me just quickly go through my amendment, Motion No. 49, and make a couple of comments about the amendments moved by the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway). I keep telling this story, to the Hon. Member's consternation, but I want to warn him that there is an election coming. The House will recall Robert McGregor, who used to be the Member for York East for about 22 years. They called him Silent Bob McGregor because he did not speak for 22 years, then he made the mistake of getting up and moving a motion and was defeated in the next election.

One of our concerns in the NDP with Clause 5(2) as it stands is that it does not clearly indicate that the system should facilitate Canadian programming in particular. It must be made patently clear, we believe, to the CRTC, the regulatory body, that it should give priority to Canadian programming services over others. This has already been stated in Clause 3(1)(r) and should be reiterated here. I find it difficult to understand how the Minister can oppose this motion which I think is consistent with past reports and the history of broadcasting policy in Canada.

I want to make a few comments about Motions Nos. 56, 67 and 68 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for York East. I have no objection to Motion No. 56 which involves protection of non-English or French services in case of difficulties with the carriage arrangements with cable companies. It gives priority to program undertakings in such disputes. It was submitted, I believe, by the Ethnocultural Council and I could support that.

Motion No. 67 would permit a new public hearing on matters referred back to the CRTC by the Cabinet through its power of review. As the amendment explains, this is not a bad idea as it will permit the public to express itself at such hearings and perhaps open up the process a bit. That is supportable.

Motion No. 68 is where the Hon. Member's streak ends, as far as I am concerned. I find this an extraordinary amendment, perhaps because it is from an extraordinary Member. It says that any order or regulation made by the CRTC under Section 9 or Section 10 would be laid before Parliament for 30 days before it comes into effect. At least 15 MPs or 8 Senators, if they filed a motion that the proposed order or regulation not be put in place, could cause a vote on that motion. If the MPs win the vote, the CRTC regulation or order could not be carried out.

To put it mildly, I find this a recipe for regulatory and parliamentary chaos. It is also a recipe for massive political interference in the affairs of the CRTC. This is a little bit of back-bench dinosaur type of thinking of the Conservative Party. Perhaps my friend will explain it as opening up the process for participatory democracy or something like that, but I would like him to deal with the fact that it seems to me it will mean chaos. The CRTC is a quasi-judicial body, and what does he want to do? He wants us to review the decisions of that body after we have given it the power to make certain decisions. He wants to drag some controversial matters back into Parliament after the CRTC has dealt with them. Perhaps the Hon. Member can explain himself.

However, I can support his other motions and I hope he will support my Motion No. 49, as I would think the Minister would support it. Once again, it deals with strengthening Canadian programming and giving choices to Canadians so they can see good quality Canadian programming and we are not submerged in the North Americanization of the media that this Bill will bring in as well as the Government's free trade legislation.

Those are my amendments and my comments on the amendments of the Hon. Member for York East.

• (1120)

Mr. Redway: Madam Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to speak to these three amendments that I have laid before the House, which deal with three different issues. I am not entirely sure why it was decided that they were to be grouped for debate, but let me say I want to deal very briefly with the first one, Motion No. 56, and then spend most of my time with Motion No. 68.

Motion No. 56, as the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) has pointed out, was originally suggested before the legislative committee by the Canadian Ethnocultural Council. It was one of its submissions. I put it forward also in light of concerns that had been raised with me by my own constituents and by ethnic broadcasters in Metropolitan Toronto. One of the great concerns, particularly with broadcasters who are involved with a closed-circuit FM broadcasting from cable television is that their existence, their career and livelihood are dependent upon the whims of cable companies. They can be cut off at a moment's notice. I refer specifically to Mr. Gus Agathos who broadcasts in this fashion in Metropolitan Toronto. He is a Greek broadcaster who has been on the air for years and years but is constantly under the threat of being cut off by the Rogers Cable Company. There is the possibility that all of his lifetime of work, the business he has built up with his listeners, can just be wiped out by some sort of arbitrary decision without some form of appeal. This motion would give at least some form of mediation to that process.

A second problem Mr. Agathos and others like him have is the lack of access to other cable companies within the Metropolitan Toronto area. Because of the monopolistic distribution of cable franchises, one part of Metropolitan Toronto has one cable company, another part has another cable company and still another part has another cable company. He can only broadcast by negotiating with one cable company. While his potential audience lives all over Metropolitan Toronto and beyond, he is limited by the geographic territorial limits of the cable company's franchise. This would hopefully give Mr. Agathos and people like him some opportunity to deal with the CRTC and the cable companies in a way that would give him at least a little more right than he has now.

Moving on to Motion No. 67, this is aimed at allowing for public participation in the process. Again this is a suggestion put forward by the Canadian Ethnocultural Council to the legislative committee, and one which I as a great supporter of the principle of democracy and public input wholeheartedly endorse.

Motion No. 68, as the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) pointed out, is somewhat unique, but not entirely unique in the annals of Parliament. If the Hon. Member had carefully been following what has been happening in this Parliament he would know that in Bill C-72, in amendments to the bilingual legislation, a provision of this kind was incorporated in the Bill as passed by Parliament. It was a provision agreed to by the Government in that piece of legislation and it is part of the law of Canada at the present time. I suggest that we incorporate a similar provision in this legislation.

I again go back to my concern relating to condominium owners. Here where a regulation comes down we have been assured by the Minister there will be exemption for condominiums broadcasting with satellite systems, but the Minister may not be around forever, as suggested by some. We would like to see her around forever but immortality has so far escaped the human soul.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Redway: As a result of that, with another Minister, with another CRTC, even with the same CRTC, who knows what it may do with respect to the rights of condominium broadcasters with satellite systems? If the CRTC should by any chance bring down a regulation which would include a condominium satellite TV system as a cable company, this would give Parliament the right to deal with that sort of regulation and reject it. This would be protection for what the Minister is telling us will come to pass and will give Parliament that right as far as condominium ownership is concerned.

That raises the whole issue of the concerns of condominium owners. I agree with them that this legislation is discriminatory against them with respect to their position vis-à-vis a single family detached dwelling owner. As far as condominium owners are concerned, if they are to be regulated as a cable company, that leaves them with no alternative reception, whereas a single family homeowner would have an alternative. If that single family homeowner did not want a cable company, the individual could always put a satellite receiver in his or her backyard and not be regulated. That is not the case under this legislation as far as a condominium owner is concerned. Condominium owners stand to be regulated under the legislation as it is now, apart from the assurances of the Minister, as if they were a cable company. There is no alternative to opting, as a single family home owner can.

In fact, as you know, Madam Speaker, systems that condominium corporations operate as far as satellite television reception are concerned are operated on a non-profit basis. They are not a commercial undertaking. They are operated basically by volunteers. If they are to be regulated, most of these volunteers have told me, and I am sure this will happen, they will just throw up their hands and walk away from the systems, leaving condominium owners no other alternative but to fall into the clutches, if you will, of a cable company. The cable company then will be the only one that can offer them television reception service.

The whole thrust of this motion is to protect condominium owners, to give Parliament the right to deal with that, and to make sure that what we are being told is that condominium systems will not be regulated.

The legislation as it now stands, we have been told in response to my specific questions at the legislative committee, not only will catch condominium satellite television systems but also satellite television systems that may be in a senior citizens' home. Senior citizens' homes in my riding such as True Davidson Acres, the Mennonite Home, the Canadian Macedonia Place and the Ina Grafton Gage Home stand to be caught and regulated by this legislation unlike a single family dwelling which will not be.

For all of these reasons it seems to me essential that if the Minister somehow or other leaves this post thousands of years down the line and we have another Minister, or if the CRTC changes its stripe or philosophy and suddenly comes up with a regulation that does catch condominiums and senior citizens' homes, under Motion No. 68 that regulation would come here to this House and if 15 Members of Parliament thought that was objectionable—surely there would be at least that number—we would then have an opportunity to deal with it. If we felt that it was improper to regulate condominium satellite television systems and systems going into poor, benighted senior citizens' homes, then we could deal with it here and reject it.

It is on that basis that I put forward this motion and I commend it to the Minister and the Government. I hope she and the Government will see fit to adopt not only Motion No. 68 but Motions Nos. 56 and 67 as well.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Madam Speaker, Motion No. 56 relates to Clause 10 and indicates the Hon. Member's desire to have protection of distribution undertakings in order to protect the financial viability of programming undertakings or to ensure the retransmission by distribution undertakings of programs produced in a language other than English or French. Certainly if these programs have been licensed by the CRTC and have received the approval of those communities to which they relate, as is the case with Tele-Latino or Chinavision, et cetera, I think this is a very worthwhile amendment. If it does that, I would certainly support it.

I would like to support the motion of my colleague from Vancouver—Kingsway as well. I think it too is a very worthwhile amendment. The Hon. Member is saying that the Canadian broadcasting system should be regulated and supervised in a flexible manner, and with that I am totally in accord, and that in and during that regulatory process by the CRTC, the provisions of Canadian programs to Canadians should be facilitated. I think that is the fundamental issue facing us as Canadians and as legislators here in the House of Commons.

It is with somewhat of a sense of sadness that I have been watching the whole process unravel. This is a very important Bill for Canadians and for Canadian content. It is so technical that very few people who are watching this debate sense the real vitality and importance of the thrust of this whole Bill. I had hoped that the thrust would be the Canadianization of the Canadian broadcasting system.

Although the Minister has brought some substantive measures forward, she has also done a fair degree of tinkering. I do not see this as being a partisan issue. I think this is a fundamental issue, irrespective of which Government is in place. We are talking about policies that will endure much longer than any Minister or any Government.

The system will not be Canadian in many ways. It will be a North American system. The Bill really provides for the continentalization of our system. The Minister knows fundamentally that we are not dealing with satellite-to-cable networks which can limit the additional American programs that will have access to our system. She has not accepted constructive amendments which would ensure predominantly Canadian content, nor has she ensured carriage priorities on our cable system in law, issues which will also affect the advertising income of our own broadcasters and will have an impact on the business community.

When I spoke to the Minister about the importance of the amendments brought forward in Motion No. 45 and Motion No. 37, I felt that she was ignoring the fundamental direction of this whole Bill which is that it is a Canadian Bill. Broadcasters cannot even be assured of the exclusivity of Canadian rights. American majors, as she knows, including ABC, NBC and CBS, are players in the field. They can bring programs into our market which carry non-simultaneous advertising because they are in a different time period.

I tried, through amendments, to grandfather every network that we already have in the system, the 17 that were there previously and the five new ones, the 22 stations. My motion provided that we could bring in other American programs as long as they are complementary services, not competitive services. I think I have made it very clear that my intention is not to block out what is new, exciting and dynamic but it is to ensure a Canadian broadcasting system. This, regretfully, the Minister has not seen fit to accept.

I talked about the importance of limiting foreign programming carriage, services that would change substantially what we have now, but complementary services are totally acceptable. In the opening clause of 3(1)(a), we say that the first obligation of the Canadian broadcasting system is to provide a public service essential to the maintenance and enhancement of national identity and cultural sovereignty.

I would suggest that the mechanisms for which we have asked have not been dealt with. Perhaps if we accept the amendment proposed to the CRTC's mandate that would provide that it knows what the Minister and the Government want, that they want a Canadian broadcasting system with Canadian programming, it may well facilitate that.

I sincerely hope that my sense of sadness will be alleviated by some changes that will be accepted by the Minister so we can see in the long run networks that are direct broadcast services and so we can see a diminishing access by new American services in the light in which I think many Canadians see it. They have access to American programming in many ways, and I think that enough is enough. Now let us promote Canadians and let the broadcasters find the financing mechanisms that they need. They need advertising revenue. They cannot sell their stuff if they cannot advertise because their audience is disappearing.

I would suggest to the Minister that she find some more constructive mechanisms, as she has tried to do to date, so that we can have the kind of Canadian broadcasting system that we want.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Madam Speaker, I am pleased to participate in the discussion on this motion. We are attempting to provide more Canadian programming for more Canadians and I do not expect that there would be a single Member of the House of Commons who would not support that principle. I do not think there would be a single Canadian who would not like to see more Canadian programming on television.

To make this case very clear, it is my privilege to present the following motion. I move: "That Motion No. 49 be amended to read as follows: That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 5 by adding after line 33 on page 8 the following: Subsection (e), facilitates the provision of Canadian programs to Canadians."

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): After reading the amendment to the motion which the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap has presented, the Chair will want to reserve, because at first reading, it seems that the Hon. Member may want to amend the Bill further and not actually the motion which is before the House. I will reserve on the motion and will study it further.

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, I realize that you have reserved on this, but I think it is important to point out that what the original Motion No. 49 did, which the Member for Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) put forward and which the Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) automatically adopted, not understanding what it would do to broadcasting in Canada. Unfortunately, it would have had the impact of reducing the extension of services of all broadcasting to those communities, those isolated areas, to which we are trying to direct the extension of services for all broadcasting. We intend to carry that out. We do not want to limit the extension of service.

What the proposed amendment to the amendment is seeking to undertake is to extend as well Canadian programming. It has been stated many times before in this Bill, and I have no difficulty in stating it again. It is somewhat redundant. It is the provision of Canadian programs to Canadians, but it must not interfere with the extension of all services across Canada to people who are not now able to receive them.

I would say, in looking at the proposal, even though you have not ruled on it as yet, that it does have my acquiescence.

With regard to the other matters, I would just say briefly to the Member for York East (Mr. Redway) that I want to assure him, with regard to his Amendment No. 56, that the Bill does cover all languages and not just English and French. Any kind of broadcasting that is done in other languages has to come under the rubric of the Broadcasting Act, and we have taken measures throughout to ensure that that will be both honoured and acknowledged. There is no question of trying to retain broadcasting only in the two official languages. As you know, we have many stations that do broadcast and program in other languages.

With regard to Motion No. 67, regarding hearings in relation to the CBC, the CRTC always holds public hearings in relation to the renewal of or the application for licences by the CBC. That is automatically done, and I want to leave it up to the CRTC to follow that practice, and not say that you must do this with one hearing and you must do that with another.

There is a final amendment that I would like to speak to. I have tried to direct my concern to the problems that the Member for York East sees with regard to condominiums. I am very conscious of it and I know that in the past, in the 1968 Bill, regulations did apply to cable, condominiums, and multi-unit dwellings. Exceptions were granted by the CRTC at that time. I have said many times that I expect that to continue. There is no reason to believe that it will not continue.

While I understand the goal of this particular amendment, to try to get even greater certainty for that particular group of people, nevertheless the proposal here would be so onerous, both on Parliament and on people who are involved in the broadcasting industry, waiting for decisions, that I think it would in effect be somewhat of an overkill.

The CRTC in fact issues hundreds of regulations and decisions on issues all the time. To have all these coming before Parliament might very well block everything else that Parliament is able to accomplish. We do not get through very much here as it is.

I want to assure him once again that I have his concerns in mind. I will continue to stress them and I will make a point of conveying that to the CRTC.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): On a point of order, the Hon. Member for Mount Royal.

Mrs. Finestone: Madam Speaker, I would like further clarification on the amendment to Motion No. 49. The Minister has indicated her interest. I certainly support that amendment. Could you indicate to me when we intend to deal with that? I would like to speak to it, if possible.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I thank the Hon. Member for Mount Royal for her patience. I was just about to deal with it. The amendment has been ruled acceptable, and it will read as follows: Mr. Riis, seconded by Mrs. Finestone, moves:

> That Motion No. 49 be amended by deleting all the words after the words "Clause 5" and adding the words "by adding immediately after line 33 at page 8 the following
> "(e) facilitates the provision of Canadian programs to Canadians;".

Resuming debate on the amendment. The Hon. Member for Mount Royal.

Mrs. Finestone: Madam Speaker, I would just like to support the amendment and to recognize the Minister's concern which was brought to our attention. I think it is a valid concern. We have never underestimated the power of good American programming. We have never said that good American programming is not welcome on our airwaves.

I would certainly understand that people in small and isolated communities would like to have the ongoing access, particularly to three plus one. I would suggest that this amendment is a very good one. It would enable, I hope, at least the CRTC to ensure Canadian programming for Canadians and at the same time allow what we presently have of the American system access to our airwaves, but then limit any additional access unless it is complementary.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The first question is on the amendment to the amendment in Motion No. 49, in the name of Mr. Riis. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the amendment.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Amendment (Mr. Riis) agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The next question is on Motion No. 49, as amended. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion as amended?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 49 (Mr. Waddell), as amended, agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The next question is on Motion No. 56. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: No.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The motion is negatived on division.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The next question is on Motion 67 in the name of Mr. Redway.

Motion No. 56 (Mr. Redway) negatived. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

Motion No. 67 (Mr. Redway) negatived.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The next question is on Motion No. 68 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

Mr. Gauthier: On division.

Motion No. 68 (Mr. Redway) negatived.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The next group of motions includes Motions Nos. 49A and 57A standing in the name of the Minister of Communications (Miss MacDonald).

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 5 in the French version by striking out line 32 at page 8 and substituting the following therefor:

"ques d'information et leur application ainsi que".

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 12 in the French version by striking out line 1 at page 15 and substituting the following therefor:

"être annulées ou modifiées par le Conseil, après".

She said: Madam Speaker, these are two very minor technical amendments to ensure concordance between the English and French languages in the text.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Madam Speaker, I find the motions perfectly in order and would certainly be pleased to support them.

[Translation]

Mr. Waddell: Thank you, Madam Speaker. We in the New Democratic Party also agree with these amendments.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The first question is on Motion No. 49A, standing in the name of the Minister of Communications (Miss MacDonald). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 49A (Miss MacDonald) agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The next question is on Motion No. 57A standing in the name of the Minister of Communications (Miss MacDonald). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 57A (Miss MacDonald) agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): We will now proceed with Motions Nos. 53, 54, 58, 59, 60 and 69. They are grouped for debate and will be voted on separately.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

Motion No. 53

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 8 by striking out lines 27 to 29 at page 10 and substituting the following therefor:

"by making an order under section 7."

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 8 by adding immediately after line 33 at page 10 the following:

"(5) The Commission shall hold a public hearing, unless such committee of either House of Parliament has held public hearings pursuant to subsection 8(2), in connection with a proposed order by the Governor in Council, after the order is published in the Canada Gazette in accordance with subsection 8(1), or unless the Commission is satisfied that such a hearing is not in the public interest."

That Bill C-136 be amended by deleting Clause 12.

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 13

(a) by striking out lines 6 and 7 at page 15 and substituting the following therefor:

"13.(1) Any decision or order made by the Commission may be made an order of the Federal".

(b) by striking out lines 11 and 12 at page 15 and substituting the following therefor:

"(2) To make a decision or order an order of a court, the usual practice".

Motion No. 60

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 17 by striking out lines 19 and 20 at page 16.

That Bill C-136 be amended by deleting Clause 32.

She said: Madam Speaker, Motions Nos. 53 and 54 go together. Motions Nos. 59, 60, and 69 are consequential amendments to Motion No. 58. Motions Nos. 53 and 54 deal with a procedural matter which is far more procedural than it would seem on the surface. This motion would delete the words "either in the form proposed or revised in such manner as the Governor in Council deems advisable".

The present wording would allow the Cabinet to alter directions to the CRTC that may be fundamentally different from what was originally laid before the Houses of Parliament. This would result in no opportunity for public hearings on the revised direction. We have said time and time again that in the field of broadcasting there is to be no Governor in Council intervention. It is to be an open process and what takes place must be known by the general public.

The purpose of the motion is to remove the possibility of unwarranted pressures on a Minister and interference in the very sensitive broadcasting area. If anyone should know about the sensitivity of broadcasting and the impact it has on the country it is Members of Parliament whose interpretations are out there for the public to see and who count on the broadcasting media to get their message out.

Whatever the issue—today the truckers, yesterday free trade, tomorrow the taxation Bill—this is a very sensitive industry and it must be treated by Government in the most arm's length fashion in order that we cannot be perceived to be interfering. Unfortunately we are now getting to the point again where the length of one's arm is to the shoulder, and I do not think that that ensures an open process.

I recognize that the Bill cannot direct a House committee on how it should deal with proposed broad policy directions. One can hope it would deal with it, or even expect that it would deal with it, but we cannot direct it to deal with it.

The standing committee made it very clear, first, that it felt that broad policy directives should be tied directly to broadcasting policy as outlined in Clause 3, which the Government has not done directly and, second, that the broad policy directive be heard. Therefore I have proposed in Motion No. 54 that we agree to a process of developing a broad public direction which should be held and involved in a public hearing.

So Bill C-136, while containing provisions for referring directions to committees, is unable to require that a committee hold such hearings. It is for this reason that I bring this amendment forward. I hope that the Minister will be receptive of this amendment because it is asking the commission, in the case of the absence of action on a broad policy directive by the House, or by either part of the House, to hold such a hearing. I believe that this would open up the process.

In Motion No. 54 I have recommended the addition of Clause 5 which would state:

> The Commission shall hold a public hearing, unless such committee of either House of Parliament has held public hearings pursuant to subsection 8(2), in connection with a proposed order by the Governor in Council, after the order is published in the Canada Gazette in accordance with subsection 8(1), or unless the Commission is satisfied that such a hearing is not in the public interest.

I think that leaves the commission, the Minister, the Governor in Council, and everyone else with enough latitude.

I would like to deal with the last of the series of my amendments in this particular block of motions. Here I am addressing fundamental and basic procedural fairness in the rule of law. I suggest, through you, Madam Speaker, to the Minister that through Clause 12 we have made the makers of rules, regulations, and orders judges in their own case. This is totally out of Canadian and democratic concepts of fairness in law.

I am sure the Minister received, as did I, a brief from the Canadian Bar Association. They make the observation that Bill C-136 substantially increases the powers of the CRTC over the broadcasting industry. They point out that any person involved in the broadcasting industry may be subjected to several different sanctions for failing to comply with a regulation, license condition, decision, or order of the CRTC. In creating duplicate offences and multiple sanctions, in their view, the Act places licensees in double jeopardy without sufficient protection. The problem is compounded by the fact that a licensee may be subjected to different orders or decisions issued by one or more panels of the CRTC or even by the full commission itself.

The Minister knows there was a lot of discussion and that there is some disagreement and some serious concern about the use of panels on the "he who hears decides" concept. I think the Minister may be right, but we have to test that out. However, we certainly must be very careful about procedural fairness, and that is what the Canadian Bar Association is talking about.

Through the different powers granted to the CRTC by this Bill it becomes the lawmaker, the law interpreter, and the law enforcer at the same time. The Bar Association says that while this position is not uncommon in the administrative law field, it does give rise to concern that duplicate offences or penalties should be reduced to a minimum.

• (1200)

The purpose of my Motions Nos. 58, 59, 60 and 69, is that the courts would decide upon breaches of orders and regulations and the CRTC would decide upon breaches of conditions of licence. The reason I leave breaches of conditions of licences with the CRTC is that the conditions which we now put as a punishable offence on summary conviction are frequently very elaborate in detail and could easily be subject to a subjective interpretation.

I believe the CBC supported me in this respect, that conditions are not solid grounds for prosecution in the criminal courts. Furthermore, since there are tailored conditions of licence by the commission, I think that is the best place to deal with it.

Therefore, I suggest that the Minister reconsider these particular clauses. She should review Clauses 12 and 13, then bring in the appropriate motions I have made and be supportive of the fact that we talked about fairness in rule of law.

You cannot be judged in your own case. That is not the Canadian way. I ask the Minister to give that very serious consideration.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Madam Speaker, I can support Motions Nos. 53 and 54 brought forward by the Hon. Member because I believe they would lead to a more open public process. I believe that the Member has already cited the relevant testimony we received in committee from such groups as the Canadian Ethnocultural Council among others.

Motion No. 58 is more difficult. The CBC objected to this. I suppose it depends on one's assessment of what is an unreasonable power that the CRTC would have. I believe that it is not an unreasonable power. Accordingly, I would not support that motion.

Motion No. 59 simply adds the word "decision" to this section, meaning that the CRTC decisions as well as mandatory orders may be made orders of the Federal Court. Again, that sounds like a reasonable amendment.

Motion No. 69 deletes the clause that makes the breach of a licence condition. If you breach a licence condition set down by the regulatory body of the CRTC, you can be guilty of an offence punishable by summary conviction. The CBC and others feel that the conditions of a licence are by nature not grounds for prosecution in the criminal courts.

I took the opposite view in committee and said that, in fact, there are two different penalties set down in the Act. If you breach a regulation you get some sort of penalty. If you breach an order you get another sort of penalty. I thought that was inconsistent.

I draw the Minister's attention to the hearings of the legislative committee as reported at page 10:143 to 10:146, where I deal with the Minister and Mr. Kinsman, her official, and some other people on this issue.

I oppose the amendment by the Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), but I believe that there are some inconsistencies in the Bill as it is set out. I do not think it is a major matter, but there are inconsistencies. That is the position of our Party on this particular group of amendments.

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, with respect to policy directions to the CRTC it is important to recognize what is being proposed in this legislation in the way of hearings, consultations and so on.

The Minister must consult with the CRTC on a policy directive. Bringing in this new power of policy direction lays certain requirements on the Governor in Council and on the Minister. The Minister must consult with the CRTC about any policy directive. It is then published in the Canada Gazette with calls for comments. Third, it is tabled in the House of Commons and referred to committee for 40 days for consideration and response. Fourth, there is a second consultation with the CRTC. Finally, the CRTC can then decide whether or not to hold public hearings on general criteria and processes of implementation.

What we have is a very lengthy consultation process on any new policy directive. I think that indeed enhances the process and gives a great deal of latitude for public input and for parliamentary consideration.

With regard to mandatory orders, I think it is very important to recognize that this is indeed an important new power and something which I think will enhance the work of the CRTC. I know that the former Chairman of the CRTC felt, having worked with the existing powers either to revoke a licence or to administer a slap on the wrist to someone, that neither one was effective. This new power to issue mandatory orders is an important new power and one that I think should be welcomed.

Finally, I just want to say that on the question of legal remedies for a breach of condition of licence, there may well be some argument about this. I want it to be noted that the route we have taken in leaving it with the CRTC was a recommendation of Caplan-Sauvageau, who were in favour of this route, as was the standing committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Motion No. 69 (Mrs. Finestone) negatived.

• (1210)

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The next group consists of Motions Nos. 57 and 61.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 10 by striking out line 4 at page 13 and substituting the following therefor:

"of one or more classes, or to any persons or class of persons who are exempted from the requirement to hold a licence by subsection 9(2) or section 25."

Motion No. 61

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 17 by adding immediately after line 20 at page 16 the following:

"(d) the making of an order under subsection 9(2)".

She said: Madam Speaker, Motion No. 57 is an amendment to Clause 10(2), which in a sense I am hopeful will allow for a level playing field for all distribution systems and which looks at regulations for exempted persons.

Motion No. 61 will ensure public hearings if an exemption takes place. That is found in Clause 17.

Motion No. 57 enlarges the list of regulations that are possible by the CRTC under the general powers of the commission as set out on page 13 of the Bill. It would define and enlarge the places in which licences could be applicable, or the classes of licence that could be applicable. It would be applicable to one or more classes, or to any persons or class of persons who are exempted from the requirement to hold a licence by subsection 9(2) or Section 25. In essence, what the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway) has been talking about, in a sense, would make the process a little more open and a little more fair, I would hope.

The Canadian Bar Association addressed this issue in its brief to the legislative committee. It said, and I quote, "In order to have a level playing ground MATV systems should be governed by the same rules as those applicabale to cable television systems or other distribution systems. Under the proposed Act, these rules could be applied directly through regulations or licence conditions, or indirectly by the terms of exemption orders under Subclause 9(2)".

The purpose of my suggestion is so that where the MATV and the SMATV systems want to bring in and have Canadian content and follow the local rules they will also have the right to get pay-TV, and the kinds of things which they are having a great deal of difficulty doing.

There is one omission in the Act, I believe. It is the fact that the regulations enacted by the commission under Clause 10 of Bill C-136 cannot be made applicable to exempted persons. Clause 10(2) states that the regulations are only applicable to persons holding licences.

This is contrary to recommendation 14 of the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture, a recommendation which is contained in our sixth report. I would like to remind the Minister about what we had to say, as well as what First Choice, Canadian Communications Corporation, recommended in support of the type of amendment I have brought forward.

First, the standing committee said in recommendation 14 that the power to exempt undertakings from the requirement to obtain a licence should be subject to the right to impose terms and conditions, and regulations applicable to licensees should also be able to be applied to exempted persons. This would permit the CRTC, for example, while exempting MATV systems to require such systems to meet the same obligations or requirements related to the carriage of services, or any other matters as would apply to cable television systems or other comparable licensed undertakings. If they are using our airwaves, and we have said they are to be exempted, then let us find a way to make it a legal exemption.

As well, First Choice, Canadian Communications Corporation, said that there is one omission in the Act, that is, the regulations to be enacted by the commission under Clause 10. Clause 10(2) states that regulations can only be applied to persons holding licences. I bring that to the attention of the Minister.

To implement this I have presented Motion No. 61 to the Minister. I am not quite sure if the wording of it might well raise some concerns with respect to its being too broad a net. I have made the recommendation that the making of an order under subsection 9(2) would allow for this exemption clause to be a more open situation. Maybe it should state "substantial order". Maybe it should read "significant order." Perhaps it needs some kind of refinement, although I personally feel that it is broad enough to allow for the kind of approach that I have been talking about.

With respect to Motion No. 61, the goal is that subsection 9(2) would allow the CRTC the discretion to exempt persons who carry on broadcasting undertakings of any class from licensing and regulations. This is an expansion of Section 17(1)(e) of the 1968 Broadcasting Act that only permitted exemptions of broadcasting receiving undertakings from licensing. This is a good power. It is a great power. But because of the broadness of this expanded power there needs to be a public process to provide fairness for all the players in the Canadian broadcasting system. They should really know why x, y and z were exempted. The Canadian Cable Television Association has said, "The unilateral power to exempt is a very powerful mechanism. The language of this section is very broad, offering no checks or balances on the exercise of power to exempt".

Since the goal of the broadcast policy is the degree of fairness for all players, the rules of the game should be clear, understood and well-defined, and they go through open public process, through the CRTC, through hearings or through procedures. I would like to recommend that the Minister give serious consideration to accepting the amendments which I have proposed under Motion No. 61.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Madam Speaker, both the amendments of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) are acceptable to us. I think she has outlined the reasons for that.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The first question is on Motion No. 57. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(1), the recorded division on the motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 61. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(1), the recorded division on the motion stands deferred.

The next group is Motions Nos. 54A, 63, 64 and 66. They are grouped for debate and will be voted on separately.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway) moved:

Motion No. 54A

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 9 by adding immediately after line 34 at page 11 the following:

"(i) determine whether the rates charged by distribution undertakings are at all times just and reasonable, and if they are not, may revise them accordingly."

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

Motion No. 63

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 19 by striking out line 25 at page 17 and substituting the following therefor:

"casting policy set out in subsection 3() and Commission regulations and orders as provided for in sections 10 and 11."

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 25 by striking out lines 23 to 28 at page 20.

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 25 by adding immediately after line 46 at page 20 the following:

"(4) The Minister shall consult with the Commission before the Governor in Council makes an order under subsections (1) and (2)."

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): On a point of order, the Hon. Minister of Communications.

• (1220)

Miss MacDonald: On this grouping I am prepared to accept Motion No. 63. I understand there has been some discussion with regard to Motion No. 66, and a possible change to the wording of it. If that wording is worked out then I would be prepared to accept Motion No. 66.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): On debate the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway.

Mr. Waddell: Madam Speaker, I appreciate the Minister accepting those amendments. That leaves Motion No. 54A and Motion No. 64. Motion 64 is the amendment of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). It is identical to my Motion No. 65 which was ruled out of order, because it was identical. I would, of course, support Motion No. 64.

I want to speak on Motion 54A. This is a very important motion. It states:

> That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 9 by adding immediately after line 34 at page 11 the following:
> "(i) determine whether the rates charged by distribution undertakings are at all times just and reasonable, and if they are not, may revise them accordingly."

This amendment reflects the belief of the NDP that cable companies should be regulated by rate of return legislation, and as a result the prices charged to ordinary Canadian subscribers should, like telephone rates, be more closely linked to profits. This has enormous implications, and is extremely important to the average Canadian. It is a necessary protection for consumers who increasingly, especially in urban areas, but also to a great extent in rural areas, view cable as an essential service. Everybody wants cable today.

This is a particularly important amendment at this time because many Canadians are now faced with very substantial increases in cable fees. In the lower mainland of British Columbia, where I am from, whether it is in Port Moody, Belcarra, Coquitlam, Ioco, Port Coquitlam, or Burnaby, those areas are served by Rogers Cablevision which has a territorial monopoly on cable services. That means that my constituents, if they are unhappy with Rogers' prices or services, cannot move to another company. There is only one cable company, and they are stuck with it. I might add that this is a very lucrative area for Rogers as 95 per cent of the households are cabled.

A great deal of concern has been expressed about that part of the recent price increase which is paid to subsidize the addition of four new services: YTV, Vision TV, Weather Now, and Much Music. They have been added to the basic services in my area of British Columbia. The Sports network will be added next year. There is a lot of controversy about who does and who does not want those services.

The Minister will say that this is a matter for the CRTC. I can hear her argument now. However, as the Minister knows, the Cabinet has power of review over the CRTC decisions. The Minister should know this, because it is part of the same decision that brought those services into the basic service. The CRTC gave the licence for an all-news network to the CBC. Of course, at that time that was not acceptable to this present Cabinet. This was the only part of the decision on which the Minister decided to intervene. The Minister did intervene in this matter because of the pressures from her friends in Alberta. She has delayed and perhaps sabotaged the All-News Network plan. The others, however, which in some cases add very little to the Canadian character of the system, she said nothing about. As one of her colleagues stated four years ago: "But, Sir, you had an option". The Minister did not exercise her option.

Miss MacDonald: You did not want a French-language service.

Mr. Waddell: What is less well understood is that 73 cents of the increase will go straight to the cable company, in this case, Rogers. Even if there had been no new specialty services added to the basic service, Rogers would have received a 60-cent per month increase.

Canadians who are watching this debate on cable may be interested in knowing how their cable fees are set. The cable industry is the only territorial monopoly in Canada whose profits are unregulated. The industry is certainly regulated in general terms, but it is still a special case in terms of profits. What is the result of this situation? As Andrew Roman of the Public Interest Advocacy Centre rightly notes:

> As a result of this regulatory vacuum, Canadian households pay far more than they should for cable television services. The proprietors of cable licences have been given what has been called "a licence to print money" and, when they wish to get out of the business, to sell their share at a price at which they earn a profit on the sale of the printing press itself.

Cable prices are regulated somewhat by the CRTC. The rates are set by the commission on the basis of a number of variables. The Caplan-Sauvageau report listed those as "the quality of service provided by the operator, additional service proposed, the difference between the projected rate and the rates charged by other operators in the region, the intent of the operator to share the cost involved in providing the service, and financial need." It should be noted that the economic profile of the cable industry prepared for the Caplan-Sauvageau task force by Moss, Roberts and Associates noted the "lack of any formalized, explicit policy for rate setting."

As the Public Interest Advocacy Centre pointed out in practice, "The main criterion is how much other cable companies charge in the same area". The centre also stated: "It . . . means that the greediest or least efficient cable operator will apply first for a rate increase and the others will follow shortly to preserve consistency in the area whether they need the higher rates or not. Over time, the rates tend to reflect the needs of the least efficient system, which provides service to a majority of customers to earn very handsome returns indeed. In effect these small systems are used by the larger ones as an excuse to overcharge the majority of Canadian subscribers". Think about that, Madam Speaker, to overcharge the majority of Canadian subscribers.

We in the NDP believe that cable companies deserve to earn a fair rate of return. However, Canadian consumers will pay approximately $1 billion for cable services this year, and they deserve to know that they are not being overcharged for those services. Cable, like the local telephone company, has a monopoly. One cannot change companies. Consumers deserve fairness. The amendment that we have proposed goes a fair distance to ensuring for Canadians just that fairness.

It should be noted that the cable industry is, on the whole, enormously profitable. This is particularly true in large metropolitan areas, although some small companies are less profitable. It was Canadian cable subscribers who, in large part, underwrote Ted Rogers' billion dollar American empire from the money that he made in Canada.

If one looks at the financial projections for cable over the next 15 years, as assessed by the broadcasting task force, one can see how profitable it is. If it is assumed that cable fees rise with the rate of inflation, the average return on equity would be some 25.7 per cent. This is almost double the rate of return on equity that Bell Canada is permitted, which is also a carrier and regulated.

We can well inflate the figures for the biggest cable companies. As stated earlier, the result is that consumers are and will be paying far too much to the cable monopolies. The proper criterion is NEED. Andrew Roman has stated: "The correct criterion for determining need is to allow the shareholders a return on their investments of similar risk.

This amendment picks up some of the language regulating Bell Canada in the Railway Act. We believe that it will provide the appropriate basis for setting cable rates in the future, in order that the consumer, as well as cable shareholders, are protected. It is a significant amendment for average Canadians who have cable and have to pay cable fees.

Mrs. Finestone: Madam Speaker, first I want to thank the Minister for indicating that she is prepared to accept Motion No. 63 and an amended Motion No. 66. I understand and appreciate the nature of the amendment. The Minister is perfectly right that we make that move and we will do so in due course.

Speaking to Motion 54A, moved by my friend from Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell), I think what he is asking makes good, solid sense. He is saying the CRTC already does this so why not put it into law?

The determination of rates outside of the cost of living adjustment I do not happen to agree with. In this case I think it should be part and parcel of the rate hearing. If there is one thing I have had more complaints about in the last three months, this is it. I am sure the Minister has had the same thing in her riding, although perhaps my riding is somewhat different as it has a very large English and French division. Some of the decisions of the CRTC now being implemented, on the French side by Videotron which has the responsibility to implement them, and on the English side by CF Cable, which has the option to implement them, have created some very serious concerns for both anglophone and francophone viewers in my riding. The cost increases in particular for programs which they do not want have created a lot of concern. We have even had a city council pass a motion expressing its disappointment and concern over the cost and content of the carriage in the system that they are hearing about from their constituents. Therefore, I certainly will support Motion No. 54A because I think it would perhaps settle some of the problems.

The Minister has addressed the panel and its obligation to consult. The Minister has not addressed the last one in this series, the deletion under Motion No. 64. This was brought to our attention by the Agency for TeleEducation in Canada. They felt very strongly that "another area which gives us cause is the cabinet authority in Clause 25(1)(d). This new power appears to allow the Governor in Council to prescribe the terms under which licences can be issued to otherwise ineligible groups". Perhaps the Minister would care to respond to that. If she is refusing to allow that amendment, it would be only fair to advise the people concerned why she finds it not in the interests of the Canadian broadcasting system and where it might interfere with provincial jurisdiction.

I went to outside legal counsel and they suggest that Cabinet could direct the CRTC to prescribe conditions for provincial educational broadcasters. It strikes them that specific directions on educational programming issues challenge provincial jurisdiction over education. This appears inappropriate unless we are to reach new agreements through federal-provincial communications meetings or appeal to the courts.

The Ontario Ministry of Culture and Communications took the view that the power in Clause 25(1)(d) was too detailed and could lead to interference with the CRTC's normal regulatory and licensing process. The Minister must make a decision and let the community up there know why she is either rejecting or accepting this power which is seen as prescribing conditions for the issuance of licences to provinces. It is seen by others as diluting the federal powers in broadcasting as outlined in 3(h)(3) which I addressed in Motion No. 22.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I just want to put to the House a proposition concerning Motion No. 66. I cannot move this because I seconded the motion, but I understand there is a disposition by other Members to do so. What we are trying to do here, with the Minister's concurrence, of course, is to remove the obligation under Clause 25(2) for the Minister to consult. She would then accept, I think, the amendment of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) which says that the Minister shall consult with the commission before the Governor in Council makes an order in subsection (1). We are removing the "s" from "subsections" and removing the "and 2". I understand another Member of this House is ready to move that amendment and I just wanted to explain that what we are doing is removing the consultation obligation in Clause 25(2).

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Madam Speaker, before I move the appropriate amendment I want to add my comments to those of my colleague from Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) who suggested in Motion No. 54A that we add immediately after line 34 at page 11 the following:

> "(a) determine whether the rates charged by distribution undertakings are at all times just and reasonable, and if they are not, may revise them accordingly."

We all know that the CRTC regulates cable companies and to a certain extent the fees they charge. It is appropriate, when you consider the role cable has come to play in the lives of ordinary Canadians, that we be somewhat more vigilant in determining what they charge to individual subscribers. I know in my constituency that people who have the opportunity to watch the proceedings of this House do so only if they are hooked up to a cable system. If for no other reason, we ought to be more sensitive to the role cable companies play in influencing the awareness of issues by Canadians.

Consider for a moment that cable companies have a monopoly in providing a community service, yet to a certain extent they are unregulated when it comes to the fees they charge. I know that as a Member of Parliament I have received correspondence on a number of occasions from people who feel that certain cable companies have been charging excessively for the services they provide. We have all heard that, at least in certain instances, owning a cable company or being a major shareholder in a cable company is akin to being able to print your own money. It is extremely lucrative. I would emphasize that is true in certain cases. I would not want to suggest that every cable company is a major money-maker because I am aware of some that are not, and which for a variety of reasons have got into some financial difficulty.

However, this very reasoned amendment from my colleague is simply saying that the rates charged to subscribers be just, reasonable and fair. I do not suppose anyone would suggest that rates charged should be anything other than that. We all recognize that as only appropriate. If rates became excessive for whatever reason, this motion would enable an intervention and revision of those rates.

I think we all recognize that at times having an outside organization keeping an eye on the goings on of a cable company with respect to their fees would be appropriate. I know the Minister feels this way herself because of the issue raised by my friend regarding the All-News network. All of us who have been supporters of the CBC over the years recognize the quality service that it has provided and the role it has played in the development of the Canadian ethic. I think the proposal for an All News network was a good one.

Miss MacDonald: You didn't want a French-language one.

Mr. Riis: Yet the Government, I hate to say in its wisdom because I do not think it was wisdom, because of political pressure decided not to approve the license and enable the All News network to proceed, much to the disappointment and chagrin of all progressive Canadians. Setting that aside, I think this motion put forward by my colleague is again a motion that is simply asking us to be just and reasonable. I cannot imagine anybody not supporting this.

To go on to the point made by the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) regarding a small change to Motion No. 66, which I understand now has the approval of all Parties involved and makes a good deal of sense, I would like to take this occasion to move an amendment to Motion No. 66. I move:

> That the motion be amended in the last line by deleting the words:
> "and 2", and removing the "s" from "subsections".

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, I think it is very important for those who have not completely read the Bill to take a good look at it with regard to Motion No. 54A. I want to point out that Clause 3.(1)(r) states:

> Distribution undertakings . . . provide efficient delivery of programming at affordable rates . . .

Then Clause 5.(1) requires the commission to implement the policy found in Section 3.(1). Clause 5.(2) requires the broadcasting system to be regulated in a manner that facilitates the provision of broadcasting to Canadians. Furthermore, Clause 9.(1)(b) permits the commission to impose conditions of license to implement the policy in Clause 3.(1). Clause 10.(1)(k) allows it to make regulations to do the same thing. In other words, Madam Speaker, this issue has been addressed in the Bill. Obviously we understand the reason and the necessity for affordable rates of television throughout the country.

One other comment I would like to make is with regard to Motion No. 64. The question was raised by the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) whether or not this applied beyond the scope of municipal cable companies. This clause was put into the Bill in the first place to rectify a problem that was raised by the Standing Joint Committee on Regulatory Instruments which found that the 1968 Bill did not meet this requirement. It applies solely to municipal cable companies in a way that they exist, say, in isolated communities on the Prairies or in any province. It has nothing whatsoever to do with educational broadcasters, which are independent of the province and have to come to the CRTC for their license.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Madam Speaker, there being an amendment, that allows me to speak again. I think it is a very specious argument that there are affordable rates buried in the Bill in these clauses.

Miss MacDonald: It is right up front in the major section.

Mr. Waddell: I think you have to look at them very closely and put that together. I do not think for a moment the Bill tackles the problem of excessive cable fees. If you double my phone bill, for example, you could still call it an affordable rate and I could still pay it. But the phone company is regulated as such. It looks at the rate of return—

Mr. Gauthier: You get some value.

Mr. Waddell: —what kind of rate of return it is getting here compared to other businesses, the service that is provided, et cetera. This amendment attempts to deal with the real issue. It talks about the rates, making sure at all times that they are just and reasonable and they can be revised accordingly. This really sets it down. I do not know what the cable companies have on this Government or this Government has with the cable companies. They seem to be kissing cousins. They are more than kissing cousins in this one.

In this Bill the cable companies are the big winners. They get to broadcast as well as just transmit. As I said before, it will make it really difficult to regulate their rate of return in the future because of that. If the Minister would just listen, what is it that these cable companies have with the Government? They are immensely profitable. I cited all the reports. Canadians are complaining. We have complaints about the increases. Why is the Government not tackling that? Why will it not meet the demands of the ordinary Canadian here and not accept a clause like this which gives the CRTC some real power, some real terms, not just previous terms that were in the Bill, and some real criteria with which to regulate those rates so that average Canadians and their families can pay a fair rate of return for their cable, which is an essential service.

Let me conclude by saying something to the people in British Columbia who will be watching this at a time three hours earlier than where we are here. Many people in B.C. think that provincial politics are the really important politics and that federal politics are just out there and not that important. I say to them, and I hope they will consider this, that their telephone rates are regulated federally, cable rates could be regulated partly federally, and their income taxes are regulated federally and so on. So many of the day-to-day issues are regulated by the federal Government. British Columbians should take interest in the upcoming federal election and look at what Party is prepared to deal with fairness for average Canadians and their families. This is the perfect issue here with cable rates. This Government is very cozy with its big, rich friends in the industry, ignoring the interests of average Canadians. This is why it is rejecting this amendment today. Make no mistake about it, Madam Speaker.

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Madam Speaker, I was listening to my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell). I think his amendment put forward here is an appropriate one. It states:

> That Clause 9 be amended by adding immediately after line 34:
> "Determine whether the rates charged by distribution, undertakings are at all times just and reasonable and if they are not, may revise them accordingly."

I cannot get together in the Nickel Belt area with a couple of people and start a cable company because Northern Cable Services has the monopoly. It has been given the license to provide the cable services in the Nickel Belt area which is made up of the City of Sudbury and a large rural community.

We are told that the CRTC regulates the cable companies. One of the things not effectively regulated by the CRTC is the question of the rates. People in the Nickel Belt area know that, for example, Bell Canada, which has been given a charter to provide telephone service in the Province of Ontario, when it wants a rate increase has to go before the CRTC to justify it. The CRTC looked at the profitability, at all the funny little games that Bell Canada used to play in the past with its subsidiaries. Northern Telecom used to charge Bell Telephone an arm and a leg for the little piece of telephone equipment that was required, so Bell Canada was always showing that it was not making money when it fact it was its subsidiaries that were doing this. After a long process, Bell Canada had to justify this. Oftentimes, the CRTC would not approve the increases. In fact in some cases, Bell Canada was forced to reduce its rates retroactively.

The same is not so with the cable companies. The CRTC has no power to determine whether in fact requested rate increases are fair, justifiable and reasonable. This amendment attempts to deal with that. It attempts to provide the CRTC with the ability to see whether those rates are fair and reasonable. I think that is what the consumers want.

Many of the consumers of cable services in my riding are retired folk, older Canadians, and television has become a very big part of their lives in retirement. We can almost call it an essential service for that element of society, yet they are captive to the rates being charged.

I think the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) has put forward a very thoughtful amendment, and I would urge Hon. Members to support it. I think it is essential, in a regulated monopoly, that the regulating body have the power to determine whether the rates charged are reasonable and fair, not just in comparison with what other cable companies in the region are charging. That ought not to be the main factor in determining the rates. It ought to be the profitability of the company, what is fair and what the market in the local area will bear.

I have not seen any of these cable companies going out of business. The Hon. Member referred to the relationship between the Tories and the cable companies. I would like to know about the election contributions of the cable companies to the Conservative Party. I wish the Minister would show as much spunk with respect to the CRTC and the cable companies as she showed when she interviewed on the all-news channel. I would like to see some spunk here as well.

I ask Hon. Members to support this amendment. It is fair and reasonable and I think it should be supported.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The first question is on Motion No. 54A standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 63 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mr. Finestone). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 63 (Mrs. Finestone) agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The next question is on Motion No. 64 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on the amendment to Motion No. 66 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the amendment to the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Amendment (Mr. Riis) agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The final question is on Motion No. 66, as amended, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion as amended?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 66 (Mrs. Finestone), as amended, agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The next group consists of Motion Nos. 71, 73 and 76. They are grouped for debate. Motion No. 71 will be voted on separately. A vote on Motion No. 73 will apply to Motion No. 76.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

Motion No. 71

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 34 by adding immediately after line 29 at page 24 the following:

"(3) The Minister shall consult with the Chairman before the Governor in Council makes an appointment to the Board."

Motion No. 73

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 39 by striking out line 14 at page 26 and substituting the following therefor:

"hold office for a term not exceeding seven".

Motion No. 76

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 74 by striking out line 20 at page 45 and substituting the following therefor:

"behaviour for a term not exceeding seven".

She said: Madam Speaker, the purpose of this amendment is to have the Minister consult on appointments to the Board of Directors of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. We find some very specific criteria in Clause 35 which defines the essential qualifications for such appointments. A person is not eligible to be appointed or to continue as a director if the person is not a Canadian citizen ordinarily resident in Canada or if, directly or indirectly, as owner, shareholder, director, officer or partner or otherwise, the person is engaged in the operation of a broadcasting undertaking; has any pecuniary or proprietary interest in a broadcasting undertaking; or is principally engaged in the production or distribution of program material suitable for use by a broadcasting undertaking. It is a matter of amounts or percentages when we are talking about "principally engaged in the production", etc.

I submitted for consideration the fact that Clause 36 provides that a person who is engaged in the production or distribution of program material suitable for use by a broadcasting undertaking may be appointed a director of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, provided it is not his principal activity. The Board of Directors believes that before the person is appointed a director of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, there should be consultation between the Chairman of the Board and the Minister. We make this suggestion in view of the very real possibility of a conflict of interest being created by such appointments, and that is why I moved this amendment and this motion.

Mr. Grisé: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Parliamentary Secretary, on a point of order.

• (1300)

Mr. Grisé: Madam Speaker, I am sorry to interrupt the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), but I believe that you will find unanimous consent in the House to continue the debate after one o'clock.

[English]

Mr. Riis: Madam Speaker, we are quite prepared to complete report stage debate on this today, with the clear understanding that the vote on the amendment will occur at three o'clock.

Mr. Gauthier: I concur that we could finish report stage, but I have not been consulted nor have I been given a chance to state my views as to whether the vote should be held at three o'clock or later on today. I would like to reserve on that. I agree that we would finish with report stage and the vote would be deferred by the Whips as usual at the time of the Whips' judgment call.

[Translation]

Mr. Grisé: Madam Speaker, I thank the two Opposition parties for agreeing to continue the debate, but as for the time of the vote, obviously, there will be discussions in the next few minutes.

[English]

Mr. Riis: I want to make it very clear that consultations are taking place at this moment. We are agreeing to complete the report stage debate right now, to facilitate this particular stage of the Bill, with the clear understanding that the vote would be taken immediately after three o'clock on the amendments. If that is not understood, then I am afraid it is one o'clock.

[Translation]

Mr. Grisé: Madam Speaker, I think that it is very clear that these discussions are taking place immediately, that is, I cannot discuss this while I am here—but I can agree in principle that the vote be held at three o'clock, as the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) has just suggested.

[English]

Mr. Waddell: I understand that my colleague has a holiday this afternoon. I know it will be difficult for him. Why don't we just call it one o'clock now, and we can finish this off some other day?

Miss MacDonald: We will finish it this afternoon.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): It seems extremely difficult for the Chair to decide at this time, because there is no unanimity on the whole subject of consideration of the motions and amendments and the time of the vote. I must therefore say that it being one o'clock, I do now leave the Chair until two o'clock this afternoon.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

DEPARTMENT'S STAFFING POLICY

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, despite the denials of the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan), the truth about his plans to cut further the number of his employees is emerging. A top official says that senior staff were told last Friday to put off cuts for the time being but were not told of changes to the policy of cutting 361 jobs over the next two years.

The Public Service Alliance has a document prepared by Environment Canada setting out a timetable for cutting 742 jobs over the next five years. Since Friday last the Director of Personnel Policies in Environment Canada has been muzzled after confirming the proposed cuts.

All of this is familiar. Be it toxic chemicals in the St. Clair River, PCBs, or departmental budget figures, when the story told by Environment Canada staff conflicts with that of the Minister we see desperate denials and muzzling of staff.

We hope Mr. Marks, Director of Personnel Policies, will not end up herding muskox in Ellesmere Island National Park as a reward for speaking the truth.

THE LATE JACQUES BEAUCHAMP

Mr. Gabriel Desjardins (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, last Saturday, the great family of sports fans in Quebec lost a friend, a giant of the sporting world and one of its most distinguished ambassadors, Jacques Beauchamp.

Jacques Beauchamp was a man loved and respected by all, for his simplicity, his honesty, his frankness, his big heart and his devotion. The Abitibi-Témiscamingue region will keep a cherished memory of this man who did not hesitate to put his trust in one of our local people, Ghislain Luneau, also a sports journalist, who died in a tragic car accident.

Jacques Beauchamp came to our region several times and in his daily column, he regularly kept his readers informed of the people and the sports events in our area.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of my fellow citizens and on my own behalf, I would like to extend my sincerest condolences to his wife and family as well as his co-workers.

ABORIGINAL PEOPLES

HOUSING REQUIREMENTS

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, the Conservative Government, under the pen of Erik Nielsen and the leadership of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), produced a document known as the "Buffalo Jump of the 1980s". Similar to the Liberal White Paper of Jean Chrétien of the early 1970s, it proposed assimilation of Canada's aboriginal people and extinguishment of their rights.

The implementation of this plan is now in full flight. Bands presently require over 10,000 homes. These are desperately required by families presently sharing accommodations or living in substandard dwellings.

Earlier this month the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. McKnight) admitted to me:

> Following discussions with Treasury Board, CMHC made slight cuts this year in its social housing program.

Over the past decade 4,295 units lapsed from CMHC programs due to poor management by the Minister and his Department, a figure not disputed by the Minister. The same Minister has identified needs for 21,000 new units but has yet even to approach Treasury Board with a submission.

Without adequate housing or jobs there is little choice for most first citizens but to move. This, of course, is precisely what the Conservatives planned and anticipate. By adding to this, cuts in administrative budgets, economic development, and education, and refusing to settle comprehensive and specific claims, the Conservative plans for assimilation and extinguishment gain momentum.

SPORTS

OLYMPIC GAMES—STATUS OF UKRAINE AND THREE BALTIC STATES

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale—High Park): Mr. Speaker, close to 100 Ukrainian athletes are participating in the Olympic Games being held in Seoul, Korea. They are the pride of their homeland, yet none of them will be carrying the flag of Ukraine. Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania were once members of the Olympic movement. Yet they, too, have been denied independent participation by Moscow.

The Soviet Government claims that these countries cannot participate independently because it would violate the Olympic Charter. Yet the President of the IOC has contradicted this claim and the Charter itself states that any nation or dependency which forms its own national olympic committee may join.

We share in the pride of our own Canadian olympians and this only serves to underscore the injustice to the fine young athletes who have been denied, by Moscow, the opportunity to represent their homeland.

I call on the Government of Canada to issue a formal protest to Soviet officials against this flagrant violation of the Olympic Charter and fundamental human rights, and to demand that Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia, and Ukraine take their rightful place with the Olympic family.

CAPE BRETON DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

EFFECT OF GOVERNMENT POLICIES

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I have some very serious concerns that the Government has a hidden agenda with respect to the Cape Breton Development Corporation. I believe that the Government intends to privatize this Crown corporation.

Legislation has been passed to drop the Industrial Development Division from the Cape Breton Development Corporation. Second, the Government is supporting a new coal mine in Pictou County which will impact negatively, both on the future and the present operations of the Cape Breton Development Corporation.

There is a clear lack of progress with regard to the Lingan Mine in New Waterford. This lack of progress at Lingan Mine will cause 100 workers to be dropped from the payroll by April 1, 1989. I realize that senior members of the United Mine Workers of America are trying to consummate an agreement with the Cape Breton Development Corporation to ensure that this does not take place.

The real problem with the Cape Breton Development Corporation is here in Ottawa with the Conservative policies that relate to coal development in eastern Nova Scotia.

In addition, no effort has been exerted by the Government with regard to the Donkin Coal Mine. Here we have a coal mine ready to go into production but the Conservative Government of Canada provides monies to a new company to open a new coal mine in Pictou County.

I find this appalling in view of the tremendous history of commitment been made by previous Governments to the miners of Cape Breton.

HEALTH

AIDS DISEASE—PROPOSED FREE HYPODERMIC NEEDLES FOR DRUG ADDICTS

Mr. John Oostrom (Willowdale): Mr. Speaker, the Ottawa-Carleton Health Department has joined Toronto and Montreal in considering giving free hypodermic needles to drug addicts to help combat the spread of AIDS. I find this type of initiative disgusting. We should be finding ways of curtailing drug use, not looking for ways to continue it.

Consider this. No diabetics receive free hypodermic needles to inject insulin each day in order to live. Diabetics did not choose to contract the disease. Drug addicts, on the other hands, chose to use drugs and they have the option to curtail their use. Diabetics have no such options. They have to inject insulin for the rest of their lives.

If any free needles are to be given, it should be to those who medically need them. In fact, these three boards of health should concentrate on helping individuals who truly require assistance rather than indirectly condoning drug use.

UNITED NATIONS

INTERNATIONAL DAY OF PEACE

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, today is the United Nations International Day of Peace. In calling the attention of the House to this particular day I have a couple of points which I would like to make.

First, with respect to a lot of the optimism which surrounded the INF agreement and what one might almost call a dangerously relaxed view of the world now toward the issue of nuclear disarmament, we need to remember that the INF was only a beginning and that the Canadian Government and others should be very careful that it not simply become the end of one era and the beginning of a new era of modernization of nuclear weapons through sea-launched and air-launched Cruise missiles, et cetera. It is very important that that be seen.

Second, when we talk about peace we should be careful that we do not commit the sin of the false prophets who cry "peace, peace" when there is no peace.

We should remember always those people whose oppression sometimes dwells in obscurity. I think of the Kurds of Iraq, the people who were recently massacred in Burundi, and the people of East Timor who have been oppressed by the Indonesian majority. These people do not make the headlines but are nonetheless human beings and part of our common humanity. We should be paying more attention to them when we talk about peace. There can be no peace without justice.

STATUS OF WOMEN

PERSONS AWARD RECIPIENT NELLIE CARLSON

Mr. William G. Lesick (Edmonton East): Mr. Speaker, Albertans are pleased to learn that Nellie Mildred Carlson of Edmonton is a 1988 Persons Award recipient, one of only five across Canada.

The Persons Award recognizes outstanding contributions toward improving the status of women in Canada by celebrating the efforts of five well-known Alberta women pioneers; Emily Murphy, Louise McKinney, Nellie McClung, Irene Parlley, and Henrietta Muir Edwards. These five outstanding pioneer Alberta women were instrumental in petitioning constitutional amendments in 1929 to allow women to be appointed to the Senate.

Nellie Carlson has been a dedicated promoter of native women's rights in Alberta. Albertans are justly proud of the historical contributions Alberta women have made to Canadian society.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

PRESIDENT'S REMUNERATION

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker,

> The Cabinet announced yesterday that it was giving a salary increase to Mr. Donald Lander, President of the
> . . . Canada . . .
> . . . Post Corporation, but refused to specify the amount.
> What is known is that the salary for Mr. Lander's position was between $175,000 and $205,000. It is now between $189,000 and $221,400.

Furthermore, over the summer, the President of Canada Post was to receive 25 per cent in bonuses. On a salary of $205,000, Mr. Speaker, that makes $51,250. Adding the two increases together gives a total of $67,500, or a 33 per cent increase, Mr. Speaker; 33 per cent for the President of Canada Post and 3 per cent for the employees. That is a Conservative Government for you, Mr. Speaker: the rich get richer and the poor are always poorer.

FREE TRADE

QUEBEC'S PERSPECTIVE

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, 57 per cent of Quebecers questioned on free trade believe that it will be beneficial. The Government of Quebec has made its position on free trade official and its manifesto analyzing free trade from the Quebec point of view comes out in favour of free trade.

The Leader of the Opposition in Quebec, Jacques Parizeau, has made the Parti Québécois's position official in a preface to Bernard Landry's book Commerce sans frontières ("Trade Without Boundaries"). Quebecers want free trade, which has been good for auto workers in Ontario for 23 years, to apply to all workers in Canada and to every Canadian province.

That is the message they will give in the coming elections.

CANADIAN HERITAGE

PRESERVATION OF RAILWAY STATIONS—SENATE DELAY IN PASSAGE OF BILL

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, the CPR still haunts the Canadian people through its former president who is now a Liberal Senator.

Bill C-205 is a Private Members' Bill proposed by the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) which would help Canada keep part of its heritage by allowing us to preserve our historic railway stations. We had all-Party agreement in the House of Commons and the House of Commons committee, but preserving our heritage does not seem to matter much in the infernal other place. They have stalled Bill C-205 by having it sent to a committee for study.

The former CPR president, now a Liberal hack in the Senate, is telling this country that, after all the people of Canada have done to support and build the CPR and CNR for a hundred years, with land grants, cash grants, loans and tax breaks, it is just not important to them to preserve the physical reminders of our railroad history. This is the thanks we get as taxpayers from the CNR and CPR for ensuring their viability.

This insulting arrogance on the part of railroads continues. The latest example is the unconscionable behaviour of the Government and the CNR in the treatment of employees and independent truckers by Route Canada. It is a swindle of the taxpayers, the employees, and the contracted independent truckers.

It is with great sadness that I must report to you and the Canadian people that both the Tories and the Liberals, as well as the railroads, today stand convicted of arrogance and callous insensitivity to the needs, hopes, and history of our country.

NATIONAL CAPITAL COMMISSION

GATINEAU PARK—THREATENED BAN ON DOWNHILL SKIING

Mr. David Daubney (Ottawa West): Mr. Speaker, I was disturbed to read in the Ottawa Citizen today that consultants are suggesting that the National Capital Commission ban downhill skiing at Camp Fortune in the Gatineau Hills.

This apparently is one of the dozens of suggestions in four plans for the redevelopment of Gatineau Park over the next five years.

I consider myself to be an environmentalist. I have spoken many times in this place on environmental issues. I strongly support greater conservation measures at all national parks, but we must strike a reasonable balance between conservation and recreation.

One of the many wonderful features of life in the nation's capital is easy access to excellent recreational and skiing facilities. To ban skiing at Camp Fortune totally, allegedly in the name of conservation, would be sheer idiocy.

THE LATE JACQUES BEAUCHAMP

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Mr. Speaker, "Monsieur Jacques", as Pierre Péladeau called him so well, has passed away. Jacques Beauchamp, whom I had the pleasure to know, was a builder, a communicator, a man loved by all sports fans.

As kind and generous a man as could be, he made his mark on hundreds of journalists whom he helped and inspired and on Quebecers, man and women alike. He was a father to so many people in the trade that I cannot name them in the time available to us.

A hard worker, he was a great inspiration to all around him in journalism. An innovator, he helped set up the widely read newspaper Le Journal de Montréal.

To his family, I extend my sincerest condolences and those of my Party. To all his friends, and especially to Pierre Péladeau and Maurice T. Custeau, I want to say that I share their sorrow.

FUR TRAPPING INDUSTRY

EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT'S ADOPTION OF FUR LABELLING RESOLUTION

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, earlier this year Parliament successfully came to the defence of our trappers and our fur industry over the British fur labelling issue. However, we must not become complacent.

Goaded by a combination of animal rights activists and former British Labour Party MP's such as Barbara Castle and Clinton Davis, the European Parliament has adopted an anti-Canadian fur labelling resolution.

The Government of Canada must redouble its efforts to protect the livelihood of Canadian trappers.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

SUPERMAILBOXES—OPPOSITION TO INSTALLATION

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, postal rates are going up again but some residents who pay those same rates do not get equal service. I rise on behalf of the residents of Port Moody, Port Coquitlam, and Coquitlam, British Columbia, who have written to me protesting the installation of supermailboxes in their community.

Mr. John Collins writes: "We are both senior citizens and I am in a wheelchair. No consideration or thought went into allotting our postal superbox. Our's is the second row from the top and hard for me to reach from my wheelchair".

Beth Christianson writes: "Collecting mail from a superbox is a hardship not only for seniors and the disabled, but also for mothers at home with very young children".

Are these mothers or fathers, as the case may be, supposed to hire a babysitter every time they have to pick up their mail?

Let us get rid of these Mulroney superboxes and give our seniors, our handicapped, and the Canadian public in general the door-to-door service of mail they deserve and have paid for.

TRANSPORT

ROUTE CANADA CLOSURE—EFFECT ON TRUCKERS AND EMPLOYEES

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Because the Government appears to be in such obscene haste to privatize everything that moves, the Conservative Government is directly responsible for crushing and destroying the livelihood of thousands of employees of Route Canada.

Over 2,000 men and women with families to support have no severance pay, no pension benefits, and now no jobs. Three hundred truckers are out of pocket an average of $13,000 each. Thanks to the Government's policy of privatization, and the privatization of the trucking arm of CN, a couple of people now have real estate worth tens of millions of dollars, and thousands of people are out on the street and out of work.

Why has the Government, which is responsible for this privatization, not already arranged for some interim support for the employees who are out of a job as a result of this privatization, and for the 300 truckers who now have no contract, are carrying their machines under debt and are in an impossible position? Why has the Government not given some interim help until they can get back on their feet?

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, on several occasions, the Minister of Labour, the Minister responsible for financial institutions and myself have explained in the House that in 1986, because Canadian National was losing $70 million, it could either shut down Route Canada or sell it—which it did—to the private sector, which meant that 2,700 workers, less the 600 for which it would become responsible later on, were able to keep their jobs. Mr. Speaker, there were two options. One was to shut down the company, while the other was, basically, to sell to the private sector and thus guarantee these workers a job. That is what CN did, and, Mr. Speaker, until further notice, if the Leader of the Opposition can show us the papers, fine! However, we have yet to see any notice of bankruptcy or other paper that would lead us to believe that the company has not only stopped operating but has gone bankrupt. If the Leader of the Opposition has such evidence, perhaps he will be so kind as to send us a copy.

REQUEST FOR INDEPENDENT PUBLIC INQUIRY

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Transport is not responsible for privatization.

Every day of unemployment worsens the situation for these truckers. They need an operating licence and immediate assistance to compensate for the losses they have incurred.

When drought wiped out the harvest of Western farmers, the Canadian Government quite rightly offered several million dollars in assistance. Today, as a direct consequence of this Government's privatization policy, these truckers are suffering incredible losses, and the Government won't help them. They are deprived of their means of making a living because of this Government's brutal policy.

Mr. Speaker, we know from experience that we cannot count on this Government to investigate its own actions and shortcomings. Will the Government hold an independent public inquiry to determine why the Government acted this stupid and brutal fashion toward these truckers and employees?

• (1420)

[English]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I am very happy to hear what the Leader of the Opposition has said. He should know that Route Canada is a private company.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Bouchard (Roberval): I am very happy to know—and I want Canadians to know this—every time a private sector company faces difficulties the Leader of the Opposition wants to inject money. In regard to this private company, which three years ago was the property of CN but which for two years has been a private company, the Leader of the Opposition wants us to inject money.

I want to repeat something which I said in French. There is no document at the present time which declares officially that Route Canada is bankrupt. The right hon. gentleman wants us to give it money and yet it has not declared bankruptcy.

SITUATION OF TRUCKERS

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I wish to turn back to the Deputy Prime Minister who is in charge of privatization and who once had responsibility for transport.

This is a direct result of the privatization of Route Canada. This type of political fraud and Tory economics ruins any faith in our system in Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, I had trouble getting on the Hill today but I finally had an opportunity to meet with demonstrators. I understand their anger.

I wish to ask the Deputy Prime Minister a question, and I hope he responds. When the Prime Minister returns to the capital—and I understand he is on government business today—will the Deputy Prime Minister remind him that during the last election, and since, the Prime Minister boasted that he was once a trucker? Let him have some sympathy with the truckers who are now in an impossible position as a result of the politics of the Government.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): The Prime Minister ordered this privatization. CN privatized its trucking system. The company is nearly belly-up. A few Canadians have ended up with millions of dollars of real estate. Some 300 truckers are out on the dole, 2,000 other employees are out. For God's sake, give us an answer that makes sense.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I would like to understand the Liberal policy but I cannot.

There was nothing to do with privatization in this case.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Bouchard (Roberval): In 1986, CN lost $70 million. It has lost money for 10 consecutive years since 1978. Yet the Liberal Government which was in power during that time was never bothered by this question—absolutely not. When $100 million was lost the Liberal Government was not worried. Today, in 1988, CN is not losing that money.

The type of policy that the hon. gentleman proposes to Canadians is that if it is a private company which is losing money then it should receive money from the Government. It was such actions which resulted in the type of deficit created by the Liberal Government in the 20 years it was in power before we took office.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

DISPOSAL OF COMPANY ASSETS

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question likewise is directed to the Minister of Transport. The Government has taken a Crown corporation,

CN Route, sold it, and the private sector buyers split it into two companies. One was for the trucking assets, and the other was for the property. The private owners then took mortgages on the real estate, along with moneys they saved by not paying their bills for supplies such as tires and gasoline, bought Holmes Transportation, a trucking company in the United States with 30 terminals, and then closed the private company in Canada, throwing almost 3,000 Canadians out of work.

Why did the Government finance and allow this private sector company to bleed the assets of a former Crown corporation, buy a company in the United States, and close the company in Canada throwing 3,000 Canadians out of work?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I think that the Hon. Member is a trustworthy Member. However, the story that he has just related is not true. There is no document to support what he has said.

He talked about real estate. He talked about the operations of the company. What document does he have to substantiate what he has said?

Mr. Gauthier: What about the facts?

Mr. Bouchard (Roberval): Once again, in 1986 there were two options. The Liberals did not deal with the second one. What they would want to do if CN lost $70 million is they would like to close the shop. It would be because a company with a $70 million deficit could not operate.

MORTGAGES ISSUED ON COMPANY PROPERTY

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, last week the Minister of State for Transport said that his officials assessed the land value of Route Canada Real Estate Incorporated at $34 million. Why is it then that on this sheet of paper that I have in my hand it shows that Royal Trust has given $80 million in mortgage funding to Route Canada Real Estate Incorporated? Is the Government saying that Royal Trust overvalued the property by $46 million? Or is the Government saying it undervalued the property by $51 million? Is the Minister saying that the trust company is stupid? Let us find out. Tell us. Canadians want to know.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I will be very short. I will ask my hon. friend to table the document to which he refers. We will then see if it is true.

Mr. Gauthier: That is a phoney request.

CN ROUTE—AUTHORIZATION FOR PRIVATIZATION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I have a question on the same subject to address to the Deputy Prime Minister who responded yesterday in a way that misled the House—

Mr. Shields: Come on!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: If he could control the yappers behind him—I am sure the Deputy Prime Minister did so inadvertently. However, I want to give him a chance to clarify the record.

We now know this. Two years ago in this privatization move the company, which at that time was CN, was obligated to keep its trucking operations going for three years. It has not done so. It is a company about which there have been serious questions raised concerning the value of the real estate. Some 300 truckers and their families have been seriously affected, as well as others. These factors were all part of the deal.

With reference to the claim that the Government was responsible the Minister stated in the House yesterday in reply to my colleague: "No, I am not the guy that privatized it. It was CNR." My colleague stated: "You ordered them to." The Deputy Prime Minister said: "It was a business decision which CNR undertook."

I have a copy in my hand of an Order in Council decision from the fall of 1986 that authorized the privatization of this enterprise by CN, without which decision it could not have taken place.

• (1430)

Will the Deputy Prime Minister admit that it was the Cabinet that made a decision that authorized this privatization and, if so, is the Cabinet not obligated to make sure the obligations undertaken at that time were lived up to?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister, President of the Privy Council and Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Leader of the New Democratic Party is deliberating with more precision today than he normally does.

The fact of the matter is that this clearly was an initiative by the CN which was approved by the Government of Canada.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT ACT ON ISSUE

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Government said it was not responsible for it being privatized. Today it was an initiative taken by CN, but approved by the Government. The Deputy Prime Minister has just acknowledged that the Conservative Government is responsible for this decision. That is what he has done.

If we have now got the Minister to tell the whole truth today, which he did not do yesterday, and since there are more than 300 truckers' families directly affected to the tune of thousands of dollars each, and a few thousand other employees who have their pension plans and health benefits skewered by the company, will the Government live up to its moral obligations and do something about rectifying this situation for the Canadians affected?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister, President of the Privy Council and Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I not only try to live up to the truth, I like to conduct myself in a manner that would be perceived as living up to the truth.

I suspect that under the terms and conditions of the Financial Administration Act, or the Crown Corporations Act, because it is a Crown corporation it would ultimately have to have that approval.

REQUEST FOR MEETING WITH WORKERS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, at the time of the privatization CN issued a press statement that said, among other things, that it took a lower price than otherwise would have been the case because it wanted to keep the trucking business in business; second, that it would do so for three years, not two years.

Since there have been serious questions raised about pension benefits for workers, and perhaps a totally inaccurate value given to the real estate transactions, will the Deputy Prime Minister now undertake to do three things: meet with the workers who are in town today who would like a meeting to have their concerns addressed; second, undertake an immediate inquiry into that decision and its consequences; and third, do something about redressing the serious, unfair injury that has been done to many Canadian workers?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister, President of the Privy Council and Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I can only conclude from the comments of the Leader of the NDP that he would much rather have seen CN shut the operation down completely at that time.

Mr. Broadbent: Come on!

Mr. Mazankowski: That was an option that could have been considered—

Mr. Riis: An unacceptable option.

Mr. Mazankowski: As the Minister of Transport indicated, and has reminded the House on many occasions, this firm was losing some $71 million in 1986, and it lost money consistently for ten years.

Mr. Blaikie: Will you meet with them?

Mr. Mazankowski: CN management and the operation wanted to redress that.

Mr. Blaikie: Will you meet with them?

Mr. Mazankowski: I am not aware whether we have been invited to meet with them.

Mr. Boudria: Everybody else is aware except you.

Mr. Mazankowski: If the Hon. Member wishes to ask a question, I am sure Mr. Speaker will allow him to do so.

Mr. Boudria: I will.

Mr. Mazankowski: I can assure the Hon. Member in the New Democratic Party that I may not be able to meet with them personally, but I am sure that the Minister of Transport would be glad to meet with the representatives.

TRANSPORT ROUTE CANADA INC.—REQUEST THAT MINISTER HELP INDEPENDENT TRUCKERS

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport who, like Pontius Pilate, preferred to wash his hands, saying it was a private company.

What I want to know is not whether the Minister of Transport has the documents. We are talking about human beings who have specific problems, who have monthly payments to meet, and the Minister of Transport seems to have forgotten the harsh facts of life that face Canadians who are laid off.

My question to the Minister fo Transport is simply this: The independent truckers are entitled to about $13,000 and they need that to make their monthly payments. The bank is not going to wait until the Minister has his documents and the findings of his investigations.

Is the Minister prepared to take some concrete action to provide financial assistance for those affected by the savage shutdown of this company? Will he help the independent truckers? Yes or no?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, once again, the Hon. Member for Shefford can argue as much as he wants, but after four years, this is not going to impress very many people in this country, especially in Quebec.

I may remind the Hon. Member once more: We know the Liberal Party's policy and we don't need to be reminded of what it was like. We may do some reminding ourselves if we have to. Mr. Speaker, the issue is simply this: In 1986, 2,700 workers were going to lose their jobs because CN had to close down. It had annnual deficit of $70 million. There was an offer to sell, and there were thirty bids. It was sold to a company that maintained the jobs of 2,700 employees less the 600 that received severance pay from CN, and today, I repeat, there has been no official notice. If you want to invoke any evidence, we will see what it's worth later on.

In any case, right now there has been no notice of bankruptcy or official liquidation notice. An application for bankruptcy was filed in the province of Quebec. The application has been postponed until October 4.

So before playing on the emotions of Quebecers, I think the Hon. Member should start by looking at the procedure that is customary in such cases.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER INTERVENE

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Transport is completely out of touch with ordinary people and their day-to-day problems. The 2,300 people who lost their jobs are waiting for severance pay, holiday cheques, money owed to them. They are not waiting for documents. The only documents they need are cheques to meet their end-of-the-month payments and lay-off papers—that kind of practical documents. Has the Minister forgotten the realities of living out there just because he made it to Cabinet?

Here is my question to the Minister: Is he prepared to do something for the laid-off workers and for the operators who lost their contracts? What concrete measure is he prepared to take instead of simply waiting for court documents and what else? The court will go after these people if they fail to make their monthly payments.

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, if there were official lay-off notices, and if on the part of . . .

Mr. Lapierre: There were no lay-off notices!

Mr. Bouchard (Roberval): Well yes, but my colleague says there were no lay-off notices. Of course, Mr. Speaker, as the Liberals are wont to do, they say anything without checking the facts. We know what happened after the Liberals intervened in 1982 when they gave Maislin $34 million. A year later the company closed shop, so the Government must have lost the $34 million. Is that what you want?

[English]

EMPLOYEES' PENSION FUND

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, last week in answers given by the Minister of State for Finance about the losses alleged by some of the people working for this company in respect to their pension benefits, the Minister stated that the company had paid the money which it was obligated to pay into the pension fund.

We were told today that a cheque for $600,000 to cover its obligations that was sent to the Ontario Teamsters' Pension Fund by Route Canada bounced.

I want to ask the Minister what he is prepared to do to see that the pension money, which these employees paid into their pension fund, will in fact be protected.

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, in answer to that question, and also in answer to the question put by the Hon. Member for Oshawa who mentioned that the pensions may be, to use his word, "skewered", whatever that means—

Mr. Broadbent: I will send you a dictionary.

Mr. Hockin: No. I will be happy to tell the Hon. Member what the situation is, because he is asking for the answer, and it is very important that we know where everybody's situation is with regard to pensions, and that is what the question was.

The payments for pension arrears up to the end of July have been submitted by the employer via the Royal Bank, and 90 per cent of the cheques have cleared. The contributions for August have to be in by the end of September. Therefore, there are a few days yet to know what the contributions will be for August. However, 90 per cent of the contributions have been made for July.

Mr. Benjamin: Better check that.

Mr. Hockin: I might take this opportunity to tell the Hon. Member that, with regard to payroll, and that is a very great concern for Route Canada, it is in place up to September 24. The bank that is handling this matter will clear the payroll to ensure that those employees are paid. That has been cleared with the creditors as well as Revenue Canada.

COSTS INCURRED BY TRUCK OWNERS

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, the information given by the Minister does not square with the information that we were given this morning. I can assure the Minister that we will check into it.

Mr. Shields: You can't always rely on Shirley Carr.

Mr. Nystrom: Shut up, Jack.

Mr. Riis: Give Jack another hand-out for the oil companies.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Winnipeg North.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Minister a question about insurance. The truckers were obligated by the company to pay 4.8 cents a mile to cover insurance on their trucks. The company decided that it would carry the insurance itself. Now many of the truckers whose trucks are in service stations and garages being overhauled or tuned up find that they cannot get their trucks because the company will not pay the bills. The Superintendent of Insurance says the plan Route Canada had is not covered by our insurance laws and regulations.

• (1440)

Will the Minister look into what has happened and see what can be done to let these people get their trucks so they can begin earning a living?

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member should be reminded that the trucking company is in receivership and the Receiver is dealing with that and all other matters.

SALE PRICE OF CN ROUTE

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, the House is witnessing an incredible spectacle today. We have 2,300 Route Canada employees out of work. We have

300 truckers who no longer have running rights even if they were able to work. We have $3 million worth of trucking equipment here today as part of a protest. People have come here at their own expense to make a point. We have an application for bankruptcy before a Quebec court. Then we have a Minister who says: "Where is the evidence of a problem?"

I want to ask the Minister a question he has so far not answered. How is it that the Cabinet, according to the Deputy Prime Minister a moment ago, approved the sale of Route Canada, or CN Route as it was then called, for $29 million, when I have in my hand a certificate of title which shows that the new owners of Route Canada in the fall of 1987 raised some $80 million through a mortgage on the assets of that company?

I repeat the question. Is the Minister telling the House that the banks overvalued the assets by $50 million? Or is he admitting for the first time that the Government undervalued the assets by $50 million in selling that company, fully aware that the intention was to split off the real estate and abandon the 2,300 Canadian employees?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I will be very short because the answer will interest everyone here. We would like to save 2,700 jobs.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER MEET TRUCKERS' REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, one cannot help but come to the conclusion that the Government knew these 2,300 people would be out of work but the game plan was to have these people laid off not by a Crown corporation but by a private sector corporation. Hopefully it would be after an election, but unfortunately it happened before. The reward for doing the dirty work was a $50 million windfall. That is what happened here.

The truckers are here today. They are in our gallery. They have questions to which they have not got answers. They want to know that someone cares and is willing to listen. Will the Minister commit himself right now to meeting the truckers and their representatives immediately after Question Period this day and answer their questions so he can find out, yes, there is a human face called misery and there is a problem?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the Deputy Prime Minister said I will be available to meet those workers just after Question Period and I will.

I will just remind the House of the consistency of the policy of the Liberal Party. In 1986 they proposed that we could close the shop. We could lose 2,700 jobs. Look at the policy of the Liberal Party. In 1986 they wanted CN to close the shop. They had two options. One was to close the shop, or sell the company to Route Canada.

I said before in French that is the same kind of policy they used in 1982 with Maislin. They put $34 million into that company to save jobs. One year afterwards everything was in bankruptcy and the Government lost $34 million.

REQUEST THAT WORKERS HAVE FIRST CALL ON COMPANY ASSETS

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, my leader made available the Order in Council passed by Cabinet in which the Government gave its blessing, authorization and, I suspect, orders to CNR to get rid of CN Route. It seems to me there is some responsibility on the part of the Deputy Prime Minister in charge of privatization. Will he assure this House that the employees and the for-hire truckers working for CN Route, subsequently Route Canada, will have first call on all the assets and/or cash, if any, until they have been paid what is owing to them?

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I wish the Hon. Member had been listening to my answer to the question from his colleague. The fact is the payroll will be met up until September 24. I am very pleased to confirm that has been arranged with the creditors and the Department of National Revenue. It is not being responsible to raise doubts about that.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT ASSIST TRUCKERS

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, there are truckers sitting in the gallery of this House today to whom Route Canada owes $10,000, $12,000, $15,000 or $20,000 for the freight they hauled just in the last few weeks. The Government bailed out banks, trust companies, Massey-Ferguson, which by the way disappeared, but it cannot bail out the taxpayers of Canada.

Will the Deputy Prime Minister assure us that the Government will provide the same kind of treatment to the for-hire truckers and employees of Route Canada as it provided to the banks and trust companies?

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, there is an astonishing premise behind the question. It is really a request, not a question. The Hon. Member is asking for the normal orderly procedures which go on in any kind of receivership to be short-circuited or ignored. Those procedures are fair for the people of Canada, and that is what should be followed.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

PCB STORAGE REGULATIONS—EMPLOYMENT OF INSPECTORS

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment. Canadians welcome the new PCB storage regulations but are apprehensive about the fact there was no announcement of an increase in the number of inspectors required to ensure enforcement of these regulations.

In light of the five-year plan for reductions in the Department of the Environment, which we debated yesterday, and in light of the fact that the budget of Environment Canada cannot keep pace with inflation, will the Minister indicate how he intends to ensure the effective enforcement of the regulations on the 2,000 PCB sites across Canada?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member's question is replete with inaccuracies and falsehoods. He says the budget of Environment Canada, supplemented as it has been by resources from other Departments, has been unable to keep up with inflation. That is a total and utter falsehood.

For example, I have been successful in getting from Cabinet 56 additional person-years to enforce the Canadian Environmental Protection Act under which we are taking action with respect to the subject of PCBs to which he made reference. Thanks to a decision rendered today by Cabinet, I will be making an announcement tomorrow on this subject which I think will be welcome news to the Hon. Member and to other Members.

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, the Minister is referring to 56 inspectors to enforce an Act which covers all our toxic substances. In addition, they will have the responsibility for inspecting and enforcing regulations regarding these PCB sites of which there are over 2,000. How can he do a proper job with 56 inspectors?

• (1450)

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member's question is rooted in the assumption that a government-wide size reduction fiat that applies fairly uniformly across the government, affecting different Departments, will not be modified as far as Environment Canada is concerned. That is false. It has been modified, I think, 492 times between 1984-85 and the current fiscal year 1988-89. In the current fiscal year, Sir—we are only five months into it—we have already had 132 modifications to that cut-back program.

In addition to the 56 person-years we have been able to get for the Canadian Environmental Protection Act, we were able to get 12 additional person-years in water quality monitoring and, shellfish harvesting areas, and to mention one other only—I could mention many others—we were able to get 17 additional person-years for the St. Lawrence River clean-up.

Again, Mr. Speaker, the premise of the question is false, so the conclusion of the question has to be what I have stated.

MUNICIPAL INCINERATION OF GARBAGE

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of the Environment who will know that Canadians are very concerned that they are eating dioxins in their food, despite the fact that the presence of dioxins in food is contrary to the Food and Drug Act.

Would the Minister agree that the real solution to this problem is not to legalize dioxins but to tackle them at source. Since a major source of dioxins, if not the major source, is in municipal incineration of garbage, is it not time that we had a national strategy to work at this problem with the provinces to have recycling instead of incineration that causes dioxins, and to get rid of the dioxins in pulp and paper. In short, will the Minister get down to the tough problem of eliminating dioxins instead of moving toward legalizing them?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member must know that we have been addressing the problem at source, for example, through the Canadian Environmental Protection Act which, among other things, manages toxic chemicals, including dioxins, through their full life cycle—from the time they are the subject of research and development through to the time when they are brought into the marketplace as products, through to their use, transportation, and ultimate disposal as waste. It is full life cycle approach to toxic chemicals, a cradle to grave management of that very subject.

In addition to that we have greatly tightened the rules and regulations surrounding the Canada-U.S. Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement. To boot, we have achieved, for the first time in the history of the country, a four-jurisdiction agreement on stemming the flow of industrial chemicals into the Niagara River by 50 per cent by 1996. Those are all initiatives of the Government of Canada on the very subject which the Hon. Member has mentioned.

HEALTH

PRESENCE OF DIOXINS IN FOODS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Wouldn't the Minister agree that instead of legalizing dioxin in food, it would be better to get rid of them by eliminating dioxins from the environment? Or can he guarantee to Canadians that the dioxins found in food are not dangerous to our health? Could he guarantee that? Otherwise, why not work on eliminating dioxins from the environment?

[English]

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, in response to the Hon. Member, she should probably refer back to 1980 under the Food and Drug Act whereby at that time the Government promulgated regulations that no dioxins should be in food.

In 1982 there was a change relating to fish. Subsequent to that period of time obviously there have been better methodologies relating to trace quantities of dioxins.

The Hon. Member says that we should be working toward removing dioxins. She is absolutely right. I say to her and through you, Mr. Speaker, to the House, that in 1983, for example, under the national incinerator testing evaluation program, in conjunction with the Department of the Environment changes were made in order that dioxins would not be produced. As well changes were made to reduce chlorophenyls and herbicides and to protect the wood industry. The Hon. Member knows recently that there have been questions in relation to paper products.

I want to reassure the Member and the House that the Government is not looking at changing regulations in order to fit the new requirement whereby trace amounts of dioxins are found under these sources but rather to eliminate dioxins, and that remains our purpose.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

QUERY ON JUSTIFICATION FOR INCREASE IN PRESIDENT'S REMUNERATION

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, yesterday, Cabinet announced it had approved a salary increase for the President of the Canada Post Corporation. My question for the Minister responsible for the Corporation is this: How can the Minister approve this increase for the President of Canada Post, who earns more than $200,000 a year, while at the same time cutting services for citizens across Canada and increasing the cost of stamps and related services? Under the Conservatives, the rich always get richer and the poor get poorer. Why does the President get a 30 per cent increase and why do the employees only get 3 per cent? How can he justify that?

[English]

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, one of the carryovers that our Government inherited from the previous Government quite gladly was the existence of a private sector committee to advise on remuneration of senior officers of the Government and Crown Corporations. The committee is basically made up of the same membership today as that in existence under the Trudeau Government.

The committee has brought forward recommendations regarding remuneration. The corporation referred to is a very large corporation. The salary paid to Mr. Lander is in a range considerably less than would be paid by a private sector corporation. The increase is not 33 per cent but, in fact, 8 per cent over some 30 months, which is not unreasonable.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, it was this Government that announced at the beginning of the year it was paying bonuses to civil servants who were reducing service and firing people. It was not the Liberal Government but this Government.

According to the figures that we have, Mr. Lander received between bonus and salary increase, approved by Cabinet yesterday, over $67,000. That adds up to 33 per cent. How can the Minister justify a 33 per cent increase for the president of a Crown corporation and a 3 per cent increase for salaries of employees who have to strike three times to get 3 per cent, while at the same time it reduces service, closes post offices in rural Canada, and refuses to deliver mail door-to-door in cities across the country?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, there has been no reduction in service. There has been a change in service in rural Canada and in other places and opening up of rural post offices.

A survey of the people affected indicated that 90 per cent of customers have expressed satisfaction with this change in service. Of those, 80 per cent stated they were very satisfied. We will continue with that kind of so-called diminution of service when we have 80 per cent satisfaction of the people affected.

I have already answered the question on salary. The Hon. Member ought to invest $20 in a calculator.

NUCLEAR ENERGY

FERMI II NUCLEAR REACTOR

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I would like to put a question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

The Fermi II nuclear reactor which is right beside my riding has a record of continuing accidents and poor ratings from nuclear regulatory authorities. Yet Secretary of State Shultz has rejected Canada's request for a safety review by the International Atomic Energy Agency, and External Affairs officials here have said "we have to give them the benefit of the doubt".

Why is the Minister giving in on this question? Why, in fact, is the Minister not pushing as strongly as he possibly can to get a full-scale outside review of this dangerous reactor?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, as is often the case the Hon. Member is overstating matters somewhat seriously, with the result, which I am sure he does not intend, of misleading Canadians and others about this situation.

He will know that I not only wrote Secretary Shultz but as recently as a week ago I discussed the matter directly with him. He will know the reason that the United States has declined at this time to seek a review by the International Energy Agency is because it is its view that to call upon that kind of review would interrupt a process of review that is already in place in the United States. Their interest is in getting conclusions and getting facts as quickly as possible. I am sorry to hear that the New Democratic Party appears to want to delay that process.

• (1500)

REQUEST THAT MINISTER SEEK OUTSIDE INVESTIGATION

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, as the Minister is absolutely well aware, it is quite possible to have the NRC continue its work and to have an IAEA investigation take place. It is not a question of one or the other.

Why has the Minister simply accepted this explanation from the United States? Why is he not meeting his responsibilities to Canada by pushing hard to get an outside investigation which will satisfy the deep worries of thousands of people in that part of our country?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, that is a very interesting view of sovereignty that is put forward by the New Democratic Party. I wonder how they would react if the Government of the United States were to summons in agencies to conduct investigations in matters that are within the sovereign jurisdiction of Canada.

Mr. Broadbent: That is what the agency is for, Joe.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): I understand the Leader of the New Democratic Party is operating under a short fuse, but he is wrong again today.

What we are dealing with here is a very serious concern on the United States and the Canadian sides of the border. There is a process in place in the United States that is looking into the facts and that it is conducting a review now. It is the view of the United States that that process would be delayed if there were to be a parallel investigation, another investigation, that, in their words, might interrupt the process now in place. They have not ruled out forever the possibility of an investigation by the international agency. I am continuing to press the matter and will continue to press the matter until there is some sense of satisfaction as to the safety of the facility.

IMMIGRATION

POINT SELECTION SYSTEM

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale—High Park): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. There were reports yesterday of an Immigration Department memo which recommended the development of a new immigration point selection system and further suggested that foreign service immigration officers should make the final determination in selecting prospective immigrants. These recommendations have caused great concern for many Canadians who believe that immigration officers already have too much discretion in processing immigration applications.

Will the Minister advise the House whether there is any truth to these reported changes to the current point selection system? Can she provide assurances that the reported discretionary powers will not be delegated to our foreign service immigration officers?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the Hon. Member for his continuing interest in immigration matters. We have no intention whatsoever of substituting discretion and arbitrariness for the point system which we now have.

I should say that when the Act was introduced in 1976 there was a long discussion about the point system which certainly has its drawbacks, but I think it was determined after much public debate that it was the most objective and the most fair system. It does, of course, get altered from time to time, as it did with changes to the assisted relative class this summer, and we can expect to see some of that in future from time to time, but there is no intention to change the basic criteria for the point system in immigration.

Mr. Speaker: I am afraid, given the time, that is the end of Question Period.

The Hon. Member for York West has a question of privilege and I will hear the Hon. Member in a moment. I will first hear the Hon. Minister of State on a point of order.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, there have been discussions among the Parties with respect to the business of the House. We made excellent progress on report stage of Bill C-136, the Broadcasting Act, this morning. Unfortunately, the Liberal spokesperson is unable to be in the House this afternoon or tomorrow, she is away unavoidably, and under these circumstances, we have decided to change the order of business to accommodate the Hon. Member.

This afternoon, we will proceed with third reading of Bill C-144. We will continue with third reading tomorrow, backed up by Bill C-158, the variable entrance requirements Bill, and on Thursday morning, at 11.00 a.m., we will call Bill C-136 to continue report stage discussions.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I just want to say that we appreciate the Government's sensitivity. Indeed, the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), who is our spokesperson on this Bill, has worked assiduously and very hard. Today a Jewish religious holiday, starts Yom Kippur, the Hon. Member is away doing what she should be doing, following her religion.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I too want simply to echo the comments made by the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier). There had been discussions, and I want to say on behalf of the New Democratic Party that we too are appreciative of the consideration the Minister has given regarding proceeding with this business. We look forward to expediting that Bill on Thursday morning.

PRIVILEGE

PROCEEDINGS OF LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE ON BILL C-152

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to raise a point of privilege concerning the meeting earlier today of the legislative committee on Bill C-152. Simply to provide you with a quick overview so you can take this under advisement, Mr. Speaker, Bill C-152 is the Bill designed to create the Heritage Languages Institute, a piece of legislation that has received the consent and approval in principle of all three Parties. The Bill was first read on September 13 and today was the first organizing meeting of the legislative committee.

Rather than simply discuss some of the future business of the committee, which witnesses to call and the manner with which committee members wanted to proceed and the like, there was what I found to be a very scandalous and very shameful comportment by government Members who moved the Bill into a clause by clause study.

As I mentioned, there is approval in principle from all sides, yet by going into a clause by clause study, not only did government Members not afford any advance notice for members to provide the clerk with the necessary and approved amendments in writing, they also closed the process of consultation with the communities and the various ethnocultural organizations that had wanted to participate.

I find this an affront to parliamentary reform, making it parliamentary reform in theory only. I was quite offended by the practice of moving from a first organizing committee meeting into a clause by clause study, with a deadline of six o'clock this evening for members to provide the clerk with the necessary amendments.

I find this to be a ghettoizing approach. It was tried in the committee on the last multiculturalism legislation where witnesses were cut off. We now find again that Canadians will not be able to come before the committee.

It is not the intention of the Opposition Party to delay this Bill. At second reading, I was the only Member to speak on behalf of my Party. The New Democratic Party only put up one speaker. It was our intention to try to move the Bill into committee as quickly as possible, but I find it an affront to go to the first organizing committee and have it turned into a clause by clause review by the majority of Conservatives on that committee, thereby negating any preparatory work done by Members of Parliament and negating the possibility of witnesses aside from Members of Parliament coming to the committee to render their views of the piece of legislation in an attempt not to delay the Bill but to make it better.

I bring this to your attention, Mr. Speaker, because I find that this pattern of dealing with multiculturalism by the Government is not an isolated incident. It happened with the multiculturalism Bill, it is now happening with the heritage languages Bill, and I find it an affront for Members of Parliament simply to say that the reason they are doing this is that they are running out of parliamentary time.

If it was the intention of this Government to get this matter into legislation as quickly as possible, it should have brought it before the House a few months earlier or a year earlier. That is not a good enough reason to negate a proper dealing of this piece of legislation. It has taken advantage of the situation because it happens to be dealing with a multicultural matter. If this was a Bill on official bilingualism or on native people, it would not have tried to pass this under the rug, as it has so shoddily done in this case.

I appeal to you, Mr. Speaker, to look into this question, to protect the integrity of individual Members of Parliament and therefore to protect the integrity of Parliament, and to have a true partnership with Canadians rather than steamroll and railroad the committee and Members of Parliament into this kind of action.

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, I am chairman of that committee, and consequently I am the servant of the members of that committee. That committee did not go into clause by clause consideration, and I do not think the Hon. Member intended to say that. He left the impression that we had gone into clause by clause study.

The committee decided not to call witnesses, and it also decided that it would go into clause by clause at the next meeting to be called by the chair, and amendments should be presented by that time. Actually, amendments may be made to any clause during clause by clause study.

That was the decision of the committee, and I simply followed the decisions made by the majority of the members on the committee.

Mr. Speaker: Is the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell seeking the floor?

Mr. Boudria: On a new point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I have listened carefully to the Hon. Member for York West and to the Hon. Member for Bow River. The complaint is clear. I know that the Hon. Member for York West will understand that it is a little difficult to take the complaint and turn it into something which affects the privilege of the Hon. Member. As Hon. Members know, the definition of privilege is some action which has hindered a Member in carrying out his or her duties.

The other difficulty is, unless there is a very clear case and a pretty obvious breach in privilege of the jurisprudence that I have to follow, that that indicates to the Speaker that one should trespass very carefully into the affairs of the committee. The Hon. Member for York West has made his point. Perhaps some consultation between himself and others may go some distance in alleviating the difficulty. I thank the Hon. Member, and I thank the Hon. Member for Bow River for his intervention.

The Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell on a point of order on another matter.

ORDER PAPER QUESTION NO. 289

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, I hesitate to rise again to speak on the fact that the Government has once again failed to adhere to Standing Order 64(3)(b) of the House of Commons, which says that the Government must answer, at the request of a Member, a question on the Order Paper within 45 days. I thought, given a commitment yesterday by the Government, that at least if the question could not be answered today, a question which had been on the Order Paper for 90 days in relation to the amount of funds given to Mr. Jean Sirois of Quebec City, I would be given an oral explanation of what the status was.

Upon trying to obtain that information from the Government, a Member indicated to me that in fact no answer at all would be given orally at the appropriate time by the Government earlier today in terms of an official response. The question bears No. 289. It was placed on the Order Paper of the House of Commons on March 15.

There are other questions which have been on the Order Paper for much longer than the rules permit, but they are in the name of other Hon. Members. I only concern myself with the question that I have placed, and I do believe that I have been reasonable in terms of communicating on a personal basis with the Parliamentary Secretary. I would like, through you, Mr. Speaker, to appeal to the Deputy Government House Leader personally in order to see whether he is willing to commit the Government to answering that question tomorrow, in whole or in part, at the appropriate time after Question Period.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell has raised a matter which has been raised before in this House, although happily not too often.

Put simply, the rules are that the Government must reply within 45 days to a question on the Order Paper. In this case, for some reason the Government has not done so. There may be some explanation for it, but if the facts are as the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott-Russell has put them, that the Government is in breach, I have some difficulty with that because there is no particular sanction that I could use to coax the Government along a little bit or to enforce it to meet those rules.

I know that the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary would like perhaps to assist the Chair and give some explanation of why the Hon. Member's completely legitimate request has not been followed. There may be reasons that are out of the hands of the Government.

[Translation]

Mr. Richard Grisé (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, first of all, I would like to clarify the statement by my colleague from Glengarry—Prescott—Russell (Mr. Boudria), who said that I was not at all willing to answer his request. What I meant, Mr. Speaker, is that I did not have the answer today, I did not have the information to give the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell today. But at no time did I mean by that that I was unwilling to answer the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell today. There is a difference and I would like to make that clear.

As for the complexity of the question . . . I referred to the complexity of the Hon. Member's question yesterday yesterday and I come back to the Order Paper and Notices where his question reads, " . . . the government, its agencies or Crown corporations". That takes in a great deal, Mr. Speaker.

Perhaps if the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell could specify what Crown corporation he is referring to, the answer could be given more quickly. But when he talks about "investigating all Crown corporations", you can imagine, Mr. Speaker, that it would take more than 45 days to investigate and report to the Hon. Member.

So I suggest that the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell clarify his question and in so doing, he would help the Government speed up the process of answering him or giving him the information.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I will just make it clear, but I do not want to dwell on it.

The Parliamentary Secretary tells me that if I were prepared to cooperate and specify for which Crown corporation I want information, there might be an answer.

Mr. Speaker, I draw your attention to page 19357 of yesterday's Hansard, when I personally put the same question to the Parliamentary Secretary, as follows: "Does the Parliamentary Secretary have some of the information already available, and I would be prepared to accept it if he is prepared to tell me what part of the answer he already has on hand."

Now, Mr. Speaker, this hypocrisy is totally unacceptable!

An Hon. Member: . . . co-operation.

Mr. Boudria: I already showed that I would cooperate, yesterday and previously. The Parliamentary Secretary can say what he wants, but it does not change the truth!

Mr. Grisé: Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to get into a debate with the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell. When he asked me for some information yesterday, it was for some information on what? On which Crown corporation or government agency does he want it?

Mr. Speaker, I say to him to tell us for which Crown corporation or government agency he wants more data, comments or information and his question will be answered.

Mr. Speaker: I understand the problem well, but it is probably not possible to have an answer today. The Parliamentary Secretary has clearly indicated that he is prepared to provide an answer, hopefully soon, and perhaps a discussion between the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell and the Parliamentary Secretary would also be helpful in solving their problem.

But I stress that the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell is entitled to receive an answer for his question, which he has raised for the second time in the House. Nevertheless, I am sure that the Government will co-operate with the Hon. Member and I repeat that we hope to have a solution shortly.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANADA CHILD CARE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare) moved that Bill C-144, an Act to authorize payments by Canada toward the provision of child care services, and to amend the Canada Assistance Plan in consequence thereof, be read the third time and passed.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I am very proud, on behalf of the Government, to rise and speak at third reading of Bill C-144, the Canada Child Care Act. This Bill will enable the Government to implement a major element of the national strategy on child care. As all will agree, it represents a milestone in the history of social policy in Canada and establishes child care as a separate and significant human service.

We have made child care an important social priority for the Government because we know it has become a pressing problem for an increasing number of Canadian families. Over the last decade we have seen significantly larger numbers of women participating in the workforce, and we have seen substantial changes in the structure of the Canadian family with more single parent families and two-earner families than ever before.

These factors have created a very high demand for child care services that meet the standards parents require for the care of their children. Helping to meet this demand is an important national mission. No one disagrees with the need to provide quality care for our children, just as there is no one who will deny that the availability of child care services is critical if we are to improve economic and social opportunities for women in Canadian society.

The question then is how best to provide those essential services. This has been the subject of much debate across the country. Even the special parliamentary committee chaired by the Hon. Member for Lincoln (Mrs. Martin), now the Minister of State for Transport, which was established to examine the issue and which held public hearings in 1986, was unable to reach a consensus on the best approach. The Government concluded that we must adopt a strategy that was flexible enough to support the diversity inherent in Canadian society and, above all, to be supportive of parents' rights to choose the type of care their children will receive.

The national strategy on child care represents a major step forward in the development and improvement of child care services for Canadian children. Unlike other proposals that have been raised and discussed over the past few years and which continue to be repeated today, the national strategy on child care meets this important social need in a manner that respects the rights of parents to make their own choices regarding the best means to care for their children. We must all respect that right because it is a fundamental part of our family based society.

At the same time, our strategy respects the jurisdiction of the provincial and territorial Governments when it comes to child care services. The federal Government should not, and this Government will not, dictate to the provinces the design and delivery of services that are so clearly within their own jurisdictions. Dictating to the provinces would not only be inappropriate given the jurisdictional circumstances, it would also be counter-productive and would not meet our goal of developing a caring and workable policy.

Provinces already have a variety of child care services and programs. These services have developed over the past number of years in response to the needs of the residents of each province and in accordance with particular regional circumstances. I am pleased to be able on say that our national strategy on child care is flexible enough to build upon the system that currently exists and to adapt to the differing needs of the provinces and the families within those provinces.

Members will recall that the national strategy on child care, which I announced last December, consists of three interrelated elements: enhanced tax assistance to families with young children, a new child care initiatives fund, and a new federal-provincial cost sharing program. The first two elements of the program are already in place. The third is represented in legislation being debated for the third time today. In addition, in July I announced an additional $60 million for accredited on-reserve Indian day care services, and I am pleased with the response from Indian leadership on that issue as well.

The tax component will be of benefit to well over one million Canadian families. For parents with receipted child care expenses the maximum child care expense deduction has been raised from $2,000 to $4,000 per child for children six years old and under and for children with special needs, making child care significantly more affordable for many Canadian families.

For parents who choose to remain at home to care for their children or do not have receipted child care expenses, we have provided a supplement to the current child tax credit. The effect of this supplement will be to raise the total child tax credit to approximately $760 per year effective 1989.

The second component of the the national strategy on child care is the $100 million special initiatives fund. It will play a vital role in our goal to improve the quality and diversity of child care services across Canada. The purpose of the initiatives fund is to provide financial support to demonstration projects and applied research initiatives which meet the child care needs of special groups in society and stimulate the development of child care facilities in underserviced and remote areas of Canada.

For example, some of the priority areas which need examination include meeting the special needs of disabled children, children whose parents work part-time or in shifts during which normal child care services are not available, children from minority cultural backgrounds, and children in rural communities. Those are only some identifiable areas.

This fund has been made available since the beginning of April of this year, and the Department is already receiving and reviewing applications and awarding funding to applicants from across Canada.

The new $60 million initiative for day care for Indians on reserves will be used, among other things, to determine child care requirements for on-reserve Indians, to develop and train day care workers, and to build and operate accredited day care facilities for Indian communities. Indian communities and groups from across Canada have already shown a vital interest in child care and the potential which these funds represent. By the new year I plan to announce the details of the program so that I may enter into agreements with Indian communities immediately, namely, that funds will be available on April 1, 1989.

I will now turn to the issues of debate of the last number of days, those being the key provisions of the Canada Child Care Act and the manner in which they relate to our objectives to increase the availability, affordability, accessability, and quality of child care services across Canada.

As Members of the House will know, at report stage I addressed a number of issues which were raised within the legislative committee. I would also like to take this opportunity to focus on some of the more major issues including that of establishing national standards within the framework of the Canada Child Care Act.

Passage of Bill C-144 will authorize the federal Government to enter into agreements with provincial and territorial Governments to share in the costs of the provision of child care services. The Bill will authorize the federal Government to commit some $4 billion as its share of the program over the next seven years. When the national strategy on child care was announced last December, we estimated that meeting the goal of an additional 200,000 new subsidized spaces would require a federal commitment of some $3 billion.

However, on the basis of plans submitted by provincial Governments over the last six months, it became clear that extra financial assistance would be required if we were to achieve the growth in spaces we wanted as well as ensure that the quality of the system as a whole, including existing spaces, salaries, and subsidies, continue to improve.

That is why we announced in July that the Government was committing a further $1 billion for seven years to the program. We are not prepared to sacrifice quality for quantity. Both are equally important to parents whose children will be utilizing the child care system.

During the seven-year period, what we are calling the boost period, we intend to support the creation of 200,000 additional subsidized child care spaces. In effect, this will more than double the size of the current subsidized system in Canada.

To assist provinces to meet that national goal, we will provide 75 per cent of their capital costs involved in the development of new spaces in not for profit child care agencies for the seven-year boost period, as well as 50 per cent of ongoing operating costs for non-profit and commercial agencies funded by the provincial Government.

We made this decision to permit federal cost sharing of provincial support for commercial agencies under the terms of the legislation because we recognize that we cannot afford to ignore the basic fact that 40 per cent of Canada's child care spaces presently are in the commercial sector. As I said earlier, the reason our national strategy on child care is a workable policy is that it works upon the system that currently exists and adapts to the regional diversity of our country.

This legislation will also permit the Government to enhance the effective rate of federal cost sharing for certain provinces through a top up provision. We have included this provision to assist parents and children who reside in provinces which are attempting to catch up to other parts of Canada in what they spend on child care.

This is the national strategy. We believe that child care facilities and services should become more equally available in all regions of the country.

Beyond year seven, the top up will continue. In addition, there will be a provision which will allow, over time, for the reduction of differences among provinces with respect to federal per child contributions.

Let me emphasize the point that what this legislation proposes is to reimburse the provinces for the costs they incur for these purposes. They must spend the money on their child care systems to be eligible for the federal funds. There cannot be a diversion despite the fact that Members opposite have said that could be the case. We are not handing over money to the provinces to spend as they see fit on services, other than those spelled out in this Bill.

Clause 4 of the legislation sets out the various terms and conditions that will form part of the negotiated agreement between the federal Government and each province. They will include the annual federal commitment to each province, the number of spaces to be created during the seven-year period, and the basis for subsequent cost sharing arrangements with respect to child care services.

Clause 4 also requires provincial authorities to specify the standards established for child care services within the provinces, the methods of enforcing these standards, and the means by which both standards and enforcement procedures will be publicized within each jurisdiction. Provincial Governments will also be required to provide evidence of the fact that they are enforcing their standards.

The standards that we are asking provinces to develop and enforce will include: child-staff ratios; the qualifications of child care staff; group sizes, both by age and by type of care; health and safety measures; and the nature of parental involvement. Some provinces will already have all or some of these standards in place. For those that do not, there will be a negotiated time period for them to put them in place.

Under the terms of these federal-provincial agreements the federal Government will not be enforcing a rigid set of national program delivery standards across the country. The agreements may in fact result in such standards if all provincial Governments were to agree on a common set of standards. However, I am personally unconvinced that national standards are the right way to proceed. Apart from being an unprecedented direct intrusion in an area of provincial jurisdiction, rigid national standards do not meet our goal of flexibility, nor are they responsive to community values and needs that vary considerably from one end of the country to the other.

We believe that parents, caregivers, and community and professional groups are the best judges of the standards which are important to their communities and their children. They are surely in the best position to work with provincial authorities to develop and ensure the enforcement of the standards appropriate to their circumstances. This is one reason we are asking the provinces to publicize their standards so that parents can participate in the quality control of the care given to their children.

The federal Government has provided leadership in specifying areas where standards are required and in ensuring that they will be publicized and enforced. The responsibility then rests with the provinces to proclaim those standards. After all, in this matter the provincial Governments are directly accountable to the residents of each province even more so than the federal Government, due to the jurisdictional requirements within our country.

Provinces remain free to negotiate an agreement with the federal Government under the terms of this legislation or to continue to cost share child care expenditures under the terms of the Canada Assistance Plan. CAP, however, only provides operating funding. It does not provide capital assistance. Further, CAP provides only limited funding to the commercial sector, thereby excluding many of the spaces that provinces are subsidizing in commercial child care centres.

On balance, the Canada Child Care Act provides provincial Governments with significantly greater benefits over both the short term and the long term. When a province has signed an agreement with the federal Government, it will no longer be able to access the Canada Assistance Plan for the support of its child care system. Once all provinces have signed agreements, under the terms of this Act the Canada Assistance Plan will be amended to exclude references to day care. The Canada Child Care Act over the longer term is intended to replace the day care provisions of the Canada Assistance Plan. Many have said that they wanted to move from a welfare based system to a service based system. Those who vote against this Bill are voting in favour of retaining welfare for the purposes of child care.

While there are a number of features common to those two programs, the Canada Child Care Act holds significant advantages for the provinces, advantages that many provinces viewed as important and necessary to enable them to continue their efforts to expand child care. For example, according to Clause 3(2) of the Bill, provinces can negotiate and sign agreements at any time. If, however, provinces sign prior to April 1, 1990, that agreement may be retroactive to April 1, 1988.

As I said, we have designed this program to be as flexible as possible and to accommodate all provincial requirements consistent with meeting our objectives. Where possible, we have continued to offer improved flexibility to provinces. For example, provinces made representation to us that they could not always control the pace at which new spaces would be created since in most instances the spaces would not be created by the province but by individuals or by groups. Therefore we have introduced a new provision into the agreements which will help provinces with their funding requirements by allowing for some carryover of unused federal funds from one year to the next.

I am pleased that Members opposite approved that plan. On the one hand, they argued about flexibility and no jurisdictional encroachment into the provincial area, while on other areas they seemed quite pleased to do just that.

The federal Government has made a major commitment to provisions of child care services in co-operation with the provinces. The seven-year program represents a federal expenditure of approximately $4 billion to add 200,000 new subsidized spaces, doubling and maintaining the current supply while supporting and expanding parental choices. That does not include the financial commitment of the provinces or expenditures following the seven-year period to finance child care services at their new expanded level. That ongoing commitment will provide approximately $800 million per year to the provinces to maintain their expanded systems. If we compare that $800 million to our current investment federal per year of about $106 million, it is a fivefold increase.

The strategy is a significant step forward and one within the capacity of all levels of government to afford. In fact, I think all Members of the House owe my colleagues, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), a vote of thanks in this regard. Under their direction our Government has managed the economy well. We have gained the financial flexibility necessary to embark on this major new social programming.

We now have before us this Bill which represents an historic milestone in Canadian history. It is a product of broad consultation with interest groups and citizens across the country, through not only the recent legislative committee but other forums as well such as the special parliamentary committee. It involves support to the formal day care sector and to parents using informal child care arrangements. It involves support to the family. It extends flexibility to the provinces and territories so they can develop a system best suited to their situation. It addresses the issues of availability, affordability, and quality.

The Bill also offers special attention and recognition to the needs of lower income families, as well as families of different linguistic and cultural backgrounds. Providing for the needs of their children is the most important priority of all parents in this country. Providing choice to parents, improving the quality of child care, and increasing the number of quality subsidized spaces available to parents is what this caring policy is all about. It is a flexible policy that is fair to all regions. It meets the needs of parents and children across our country.

I would like to thank Members of the House who worked through the past few weeks to complete the review of the child care legislation. Some have worked at it for years. I believe their efforts and deliberations have helped to shape the over-all effectiveness and understanding of this new child care legislation.

Thank you for your time and patience, Mr. Speaker. I would ask all Members not only to approve Bill C-144 in the next number of hours but also to celebrate the obvious success that it will be.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, in Canada the day-care concept is nothing new. Formerly, working parents sought help from relatives or neighbours while wealthy families would hire nurses, governesses and tutors.

The first day-care centres appeared 135 years ago in Montreal and Toronto as a result of the industrial revolution.

During World War II the federal Government, which needed women in the labour force, entered into cost-sharing agreements with provinces that were willing to set up day-care centres. At the end of the war, the cost-sharing agreement and the day-care centres thus financed disappeared, and many women returned to their homes.

Since then, a number of studies have pointed out the need for setting up a better day-care system. Since 1970, when we had the Royal Commission of Inquiry on the Status of Women, it was no longer acceptable to refuse to provide day-care, in the hope of discouraging women from seeking employment. However, the Government's present policy fails to reflect the double role played by most parents and most mothers with pre-school children who work outside the home and on whom our economy depends today.

Although fiscal measures were introduced to alleviate the burden on parents, there has never been a national program to promote the creation of day-care services. In 1986, when 52 per cent of Canadian women with children under the age of 3 were working outside the home and nearly two million children under 13 needed full-time or part-time day-care, there were fewer than 172,000 spaces in quality day-care.

The Government's hesitation cannot be attributed to a reluctance to set a precedent in the area of federal-provincial agreements, since social programs initiated by the federal Government are nothing new, Mr. Speaker. In the past, programs of this kind have been introduced to respond to other social needs, and more specifically, established programs financing in the areas of post-secondary education, universal health care, old age security, spouse's allowance and unemployment insurance.

Canadians have long accepted the principle of paying the cost of training and developing new generations. The first step was creating our education system. Today, most Canadians believe that a national day-care program, properly planned, is a logical extension of universal public education that would lend itself well to a federal-provincial agreement. Nor can we say that the reluctance of the present Government to show some initiative in this respect is due to a lack of information on programs that exist elsewhere.

The Scandinavian countries, Germany, France and Italy all have publicly-financed programs for pre-school children, more specifically, children between the ages of 3 and 6. In France, for instance, day-care centres were established at the beginning of the nineteenth century for the children of factory workers. In 1975, more than 30 per cent of children are outside the home and two-thirds of these are in day-care that is financed, licensed and supervised.

Furthermore, children between the ages of 3 and 6 have practically universal access to day-care. In France, 95 per cent of these children have access to a network of day-care centres and public nursery schools.

It has also been recognized that quality day-care is especially worthwhile for children from low and middle-income families. Six studies carried out over a long period in the United States revealed striking differences among children raised in poor families, depending on whether or not they had access to quality pre-school programs. Among those who did, a much higher percentage finished high school, college, professional training, while the number of teenage pregnancies dropped. They were also more likely to find jobs. They were less likely to live on welfare and the crime rate was lower.

Mr. Speaker, in addition to promoting earlier reading, the program made it possible to detect and treat far more quickly all kinds of problems and disabilities. These programs enhance the child's development without the pressure of school marks which comes into play as soon as the child enters primary school.

In the case of disabled children, the day-care system may be particularly useful for learning social skills, including tolerance and awareness of others.

The Prime Minister says he wants to set up a program to help young people shake off their drug habit, but I think if we set up a program for pre-school children and do it properly, we would have an excellent drug prevention system right there. I have said this many times. However, Canada has no comprehensive policy in this respect. In fact, in 1970 the lack of quality day-care was said to have reached crisis proportions when the Royal Commission of Inquiry on the Status of Women prepared its report. Fifteen years later, more than 7,000 parent groups and 200 organizations that came to make presentations before Katie Cooke's group showed that lack of day-care is a recurrent source of problems for many Canadian families.

Today, the federal Government helps day-care in Canada in two ways: by granting a deduction for day-care costs and by administering a federal-provincial cost-sharing program, the CAP. This assistance for low-income families is provided on a cost-sharing basis under the CAP, but less than 20 per cent of the children below the age of six who meet the criteria have actually received a full or partial allowance. Furthermore, the contribution made by parents who raise their children full-time is not sufficiently recognized by society.

Add to this the fact that measures intended to help parents raise their children, such as family allowance, income tax deduction for children and the child tax credit, have all been revised downward and de-indexed by the present Government, to the extent that all families, even those receiving welfare, will be worse off after 1995.

Funding for day-care seems rather meager when we look at what it costs to raise children today. To the Liberals it is clear that we urgently need a genuine national childcare program. To achieve this, we must have a policy that reflects current trends, Mr. Speaker. When we look at what those trends are, we see how the Canadian family has evolved and how it is structured, the rapid increase in the number of mothers working outside the home, the regular decline in jobs in traditional manufacturing sectors where the jobs were previously held by men, and the regular increase in underpaid employment in the services sector where the majority of workers have customarily been women.

Canadians are increasingly in favour of universal day-care whose cost would be shared by the Government, the private sector and parents. The public favours various types of day-care, including home day-care, school day-care, day-care in the work place and stop-over centres. There also seems to a broad consensus on a number of initiatives that would be politically feasible, such as providing more time for family life. There have been discussions about the need for providing more parental leave under the Unemployment Insurance Act and to make more frequent use of flexible hours, job-sharing and extended leave or sabbaticals to enable one family member to spend more time with the family. All this has yet to gain recognition.

There must also be a choice, Mr. Speaker, with respect to the location of day-care centres and their facilities. I think it is extremely important to offer a choice of locations and facilities in order to meet the needs of each family. The main criteria are quality of service, parent participation and providing a choice of day-care, depending on the kind of care involved. The needs of infants, pre-school children and children between the ages of 6 and 12 are not all the same. We also have to offer a choice of schedules. We know that parents who work outside the home and who work evenings and at night must have access to flexible hours or weekend schedules. When setting up a network of day-care services, we must consider these needs which vary from one community to the next.

We also have to set up the infrastructures. Although there is general agreement on the need to provide a universal, affordable and top quality day care system, there is no consensus on the way to achieve this. The major problem relates to the shortage of quality spaces, yet we cannot set up the infrastructure of a national program unless we promote the rapid growth of first quality and affordable facilities. Quality must be guaranteed. Mr. Speaker, practically all people agree that if we want quality we have to increase staff salaries and improve the training and qualifications of those who are made responsible for our children. Standards also have to be similar from one province to the next. And we should discuss the issue and give financial assistance. We know that most observers agree that top priority should be given to low income or single parent families. Employers ought to be given incentives to provide child care facilities at work. But with all that . . .

[English]

What has the Government done? It has produced legislation limiting subsidies, legislation limiting growth, and legislation without national guidelines. Interestingly enough, my colleague, the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), pointed out on Friday that even in the preamble of the legislation there is a contradiction. There the Government, thanks to an amendment put forth by the Liberals, undertook to create at least 200,000 spaces. Later, however, it says that it will make payment not exceeding $4 billion. Thus the very preamble of the Bill is confusing.

What if 200,000 spaces cost more than $4 billion? Before we even explore how the spaces are to be created, we do not know how many spaces the Government intends to create. Mr. Speaker, 200,000 spaces are not enough. The House had heard many Members this last week speak on the necessity of child care. It should now be known by all Members that one in five children in Canada is poor, and that 50 per cent of children aged six through thirteen years old are left alone after school. We have the figures showing that 1.8 million children in Canada have parents who work or study for more than 20 hours per week. That 1.8 million is the core need group.

There are approximately 200,000 spaces in Canada. The Government intends to create another 200,000 spaces over seven years. Therefore by 1995, should the Government manage to create its 200,000 spaces, 70 per cent of the children in Canada who need child care spaces will be left without them; and we call this a national strategy.

During the last weeks we also heard about the importance of adequate care in early child development. I will not go into elaborating on the head start program again. However, I will point out an interesting fact that emerged recently from an American study. Committee members were all told two weeks ago that the best indicator for the successful completion of Grade 12 was not the neighbourhood, the socio-economic background, or any other factor but the child's mark in the first grade.

Before we applaud the Government for meeting a paltry 15 per cent of the child care needs over a seven-year period, let us at least recognize the social investment child care provides. Let us recognize that caring for our children before Grade 1, permitting our children to enter Grade 1 and successfully completing it, gives those children phenomenally better chances to perform as fully productive members of society. Imagine the social costs saved by society, not only in lower crime rates, lower rates of toxic abuse, and teenage pregnancy. It will also lower the rate of failed academic or professional carriers and increase the productivity of our workforce.

It is also important to note that while the Conservative Government now proposes to recognize Canada's multiculturalism in the preamble pursuant to an amendment proposed by the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell), the Minister found himself unable even to mention the Charter of Rights and Freedoms or the Multiculturalism Act in the preamble. That is interesting, is it not? Is the Government hoping that a mention will quell the anxiety of our multicultural community by protecting them in the preamble without protecting them legally in the body of the Act? There definitely were witnesses before the committee who did not feel protected.

Then there is the issue of standards or objectives. There has been a lot of talk about federal and provincial jurisdiction, about the inability to mention standards in the Bill, and about Meech Lake. The Opposition, along with every child care advocacy association across this country, has had enormous trouble with the lack of standards set out in the Act. My colleague from Vancouver East pointed out that this might even be the first great failure of Meech Lake.

The Liberal Party strongly believes in a national child care strategy, which is why we support the idea of national standards. These would be established with the provinces and specialists in the field in order that all interested parties have a say and agree once the standards are defined. They will then be included in the legislation in order to ensure that Canadian children from Newfoundland to Vancouver, from southern Ontario to the Northwest Territories, are assured of adequate day care. Provincial child care agencies with no previously high standards would not be hampered or prejudiced in any way because they would be meeting these standards.

The Government is using $2.3 billion, it says, to encourage development of child care through the tax system. The child care expense deduction is regressive, benefiting the wealthiest taxpayer more than the middle class. Not only is this measure regressive, but it assumes that all parents who must pay for child care can produce receipts which will qualify them for a deduction. In fact, the majority of parents use informal care arrangements such as babysitters, from which receipts are generally unavailable. Informal caregivers are often reluctant to issue receipts for their services because they would then have to declare all their child care income for tax purposes. Thus, the families benefiting from this provision are the wealthiest with the highest taxable income and the ability to pay for formal, licensed care.

For parents who take care of their children at home, the Conservatives propose to increase the child tax credit. This credit is refundable and, unlike the child care expense deduction, it benefits all taxpayers equally. However, the miniscule amounts of money involved would hardly compensate a mother for income while she stayed at home to care for her children. Instead of enriching the tax break for parents, giving every family a few dollars which will hardly make a dent in their child care costs, the Conservatives should have invested the entire $6.4 billion, at the very least, in the construction and renovation of new spaces, improvement of existing centres, and upgrading of salaries for child care workers.

The Liberal Party will effectively place all of its child care funds into the creation of child care spaces. There will be no resort to regressive fiscal measures. The federal Government claims that the infusion of funds over a seven-year period is a boost to the child care structure. Once such a structure is in place, after the seventh year it will continue to fund the child care system but only according to a minimum formula which will be not less than "the contribution payable to the province in respect of the year ending March 31, 1995, less a reduction in respect of the cost of capital assets, the difference being adjusted for the national rate of general inflation as determined by the Minister of Finance, with a top up fund for lesser developed provinces".

It seems to me the Government is failing completely to acknowledge the fact that we need a child care structure in this country. It deems a seven-year boost period to be enough. It deems the creation of 200,000 spaces to be enough. As I said, that meets only 15 per cent of the need. That means after the seven-year period, after the Government has finished its boost, 1.4 million children will not have places in child care spaces. There will be no program in place to encourage the creation of new places. I think the Government has to own up to the fact that this is not a national child care strategy. It is a feeble attempt to quell the demand for child care. The timing, after all, is interesting.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) promised to introduce a national program in the 1984 election campaign. Four years later, on the eve of an election, his Government comes up with what it calls a national child care strategy. It then, upon meeting with the provinces that in turn feel gypped by the program, adds another $1 billion to the strategy. This, however, is only to meet the need of creating the original 200,000 spaces the Government promised in its original strategy. I have spoken to the Ministers responsible for child care in many of the provinces. Ontario has had to cut back its proposed expansion by 12,000 spaces.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the problem with these additional funds is that they left people with the impression that the Government was again adding new money while in fact it had to provide these funds to launch the program it had already unveiled in December. This was a false impression and we must set the record straight: the money recently provided by the Government was simply the money required to begin the program which had already been announced.

Nor are the provinces altogether satisfied. Quebec does not know what to expect, what with all its places in the school system. We happen to know there are now 30,000 places for school children throughout the Province of Quebec. It is made quite clear in clause 2 of the Bill under consideration that all services relating wholly or substantially to education will be cut off.

So the current program is woefully inadequate and most of our children aged 6 to 14 are still left without any supervision, without any of the services they so badly need.

• (1610)

[English]

The Liberal Party will develop twice the number of spaces the Conservatives promise. What about native Canadians, Mr. Speaker? We heard representatives from the Assembly of First Nations and the Inuit Women's Association, both of whom eloquently pointed out that their children were also in need of child care services. The AFN is in no way comforted by the fact that the Government has put aside $60 million for on-reserve child care because it deems that its children should have their rights entrenched in legislation and not left to the discretionary whims of the Governor in Council.

The Inuit population, not specifically mentioned in the legislation, will probably not be covered by it because it does not have on-reserve communities. It will, of course, fall under a cost sharing agreement should a province sign one, but nothing is there to guarantee that once a province signs such an agreement a culturally sensitive child care program will be provided to the Inuit populations.

When amendments were introduced at committee to modify the legislation to meet the needs of our native peoples, they were "deemed beyond the scope of the Act". It is a sorry state, Mr. Speaker, when a Bill is structured such that certain needs are so fully excluded that they cannot even be placed on the table for discussion.

Let us look at the scope of the Bill. It does not include mention of parental leave, for example. However, every committee dealing with issues pertaining to child care suggested that UIC parental leave should be increased from 15 weeks to 26 weeks. The Liberal Party would address this issue and place it within the scope of child care legislation where it belongs. The scope of the Bill might have included different types of child care settings. However, amendments were proposed to encourage child care in the workplace and child care in an after-school setting, but they were defeated by a Government that purports to encourage choices.

Perhaps the Government fails to see the link between child care in the workplace and choices. The Government will have to answer to the parents working in fishing canneries on one coast, of this country and lumber mills on the other coast, as well as to all clerks and business persons in every city of the nation. I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, that a Liberal Government will offer a tax write-off in excess of 100 per cent to employers creating an employer subsidized child care service.

Two of my amendments were adopted at committee, two which I hold particularly dear. One according priority to low to modest income children and one according special protection to the French or English minority of a province and to its multi-ethnic communities. On the first and foremost point, low to modest income children, we must mention the Canada Assistance Plan, CAP, which has been used to reimburse provinces which provide child care services to children of low-income families. Though CAP failed to meet the child care needs of this country, by its very nature it accorded special assistance to the neediest children first. Prior to our amendment, now Clause 4(b) of the Bill, Bill C-144 failed even to mention the needs of low to modest income children. It was this original abomination which caused witnesses from across Canada as well as the Liberal Party to plead for the maintenance of CAP in conjunction with the new legislation. This would ensure that the needs of the poorest of our children would continue to be met systematically.

I will tell you why this is important, Mr. Speaker. First, only 200,000 spaces will be created leaving very, very heavy needs unmet. As was pointed out by a witness for Ontario in the committee hearings before the Senate, the limited funds being accorded to meet child care needs will leave the provinces with hard choices to make, including choices of the types of child care to provide, the cost of user fees and, in effect, the income bracket to be served. This is unacceptable in so far as it will cause children from rich families to be in competition with children from poor families. It is essential that CAP be maintained. If the $4 billion the Government intends to pour into its alleged child care program is new money, then there should be no problem in at least maintaining CAP at its present level.

For all these reasons, Mr. Speaker, the child care legislation is completely inadequate. I can only hope that the Government now takes heed of what the witnesses have clearly stated and reconsiders the action to be taken.

The Liberal Party policy on child care recognizing that there is a greater need will create at least 400,000 spaces over the next seven years. It will, after discussion with the provinces, reach a consensus with them to establish minimum standards. It will encourage the development of child care in the school setting. It will encourage the development of employer subsidized child care through a tax write-off in excess of 100 per cent cost. A Liberal Government will meet the needs of Canadian children. It will be a priority.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I think that this day care legislation falls far short. Under a Liberal Government we would indeed make it a priority, and one of our immediate objectives would certainly be to create child care spaces at the workplace as well as establish after school day care facilities for our children.

Again I urge the Government to reconsider this totally inadequate Bill which we are debating today.

CANADA CHILD CARE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Epp (Provencher) that Bill C-144, an Act to authorize payments by Canada toward the provision of child care services, and to amend the Canada Assistance Plan in consequence thereof, be read the third time and passed.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, during World War II when women were needed to man the factories and maintain the economy in Canada, Governments recognized that child care was an essential service. So we had government funding for free day care nurseries near many workplaces. However, after the War women's work was no longer considered to be essential and subsequently child care was not a government priority. For the past more than 20 years now since the royal commission on the status of women, women have been saying that licensed day care is a basic requirement for women to achieve equality. It must be developed as an essential community service.

• (1620)

During the past 20 years society has changed dramatically. Over 60 per cent of mothers of young children are now in the workplace, either part time or full time. This trend will be maintained and indeed will increase in the future. Most mothers work because they have to. Their incomes are essential to maintaining their families, and particularly to help pay the high costs of housing.

The great increase in single parent families usually headed by females has significance for planning policies for child care. Increasing numbers of women with young children are left alone to raise children on their own, usually with very low incomes. We know that about 61 per cent of children of these mothers are poor.

It continues to be an absolutely deplorable fact that one in six Canadian children are being raised in poverty. Their mothers need child care as do average parents. Certainly teenage mothers, who have been on the increase, do as well. They need child care if they are to work, to study, or to train for the future so they will have an alternative to life on welfare.

Families have changed over the past 20 years. Relatives are not as available as they used to be to provide babysitting on short notice. Grandmothers often live far away or they themselves are working.

As my colleague who spoke previously said, we were very moved by the presentations of First Nations groups and also Inuit women about the needs of children in their communities. For native families, their children are their future. They want to be able to control and develop their own child care programs, programs that are relevant to their traditions and their communities. However, they must have adequate direct funding for this, funding that is guaranteed. As my colleague said, that funding is not guaranteed under this Bill.

Mothers or fathers who remain at home to care for children full time also need part-time child care services. This is not just for working parents. They need it for relief, for occasional recreation, for parent support programs, and for training. Many also want their children to develop socially and to be better prepared to enter kindergarten so they want half-day pre-school programs which are also child care programs.

Study after study under first Liberal and then Conservative regimes has documented again and again the need for a comprehensive system of quality, affordable services. These studies have also documented the crisis we are facing with children because of the neglect and inaction of provincial and federal Governments.

There is ample evidence of inadequate standards for child care and of the high fees which must be charged because there is not adequate funding for child care services. There is ample evidence of the long waiting lists of children who need child care and of the inadequate training that is provided for caregivers because of the lack of capital or operating grants that exists in most regions of Canada. Child care is in a very critical situation and it has become worse in the four years of delay by this Conservative Government.

What is happening to our kids as a result of this neglect? The parents of close to two million children are working either part time or full time or are studying, yet only about 240,000 licensed day care spaces exist to accommodate them. Most of these children are cared for in very risky, informal kinds of babysitting arrangements. Fees are usually unaffordable, close to $4,000 or $5,000 a year for one child, so that average families, particularly those with more than one child, certainly cannot afford the child care that is available now.

As our committee travelled across Canada, we heard repeatedly of parents who could not get their children into day care so they often had to use babysitters they did not know or who probably had no training or they had to use family day care homes that were unlicensed. We heard of children in informal care arrangements who were entertained all day by sitting in front of television sets and of some who were neglected or abused. Parents told us they worried all day at work and often missed work when these child care arrangements broke down.

There is a high incidence of school-age children who go home to empty homes. Latchkey children form another group of kids being neglected in every province of Canada, perhaps with the exception of Quebec which has quite a comprehensive program for school age children. However, this program will probably not be covered under this Bill. This was also of great concern to the people to whom we talked across Canada and to the witnesses who appeared before the legislative committee.

Witnesses, studies, and parents have told us over and over again that a comprehensive national child care program must be developed, that it must have a full range of supports for parents, And that it must have services for children under the age of 12. New Democrats believe this must start with pre-natal and post-natal care and education for parents. Family allowances must be reindexed and child tax credits must be increased to help parents with the costs of rearing their children.

Parents should have the opportunity to stay home, particularly during the period of their children's infancy, this very, very critical period in a child's life. It is very regrettable that this Government has refused to introduce amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act to extend and enrich parental leave for fathers as well as for mothers so that they can have this choice when their children are young.

The NDP goal is a national child care program which should assist provinces and communities to develop a comprehensive range of affordable services. Most communities, for example, need family drop-in centres for parents and kids where there are parenting classes as well as many positive support programs available. We need Mom and Tot programs such as the ones the YM-YWCAs offer, for recreation, relief, and informal education with good child care.

We need licensed family day care homes that take up to five children of mixed age groups. There are not nearly enough licensed, good quality day care homes across Canada. We certainly need good quality, licensed day care centres that operate with flexible hours and have separate facilities and staff for infants and toddlers. There is a great lack of care given to those age groups. We need expanded out of school care and summer programs with hot meals for school age children whose parents are working.

Facilities for child care must be accessible. The Government has completely ignored this in its legislation. Child care centres must have adequate staff to accommodate disabled children and children with special needs. There must be training programs and resources for caregivers, whether they be in family day care operations or in group care.

Some communities also need head start programs which offer enriched programs for disadvantaged children to help prepare them for school. These have been very, very successful in the United States and have reduced later problems in adolescence. Indeed, they have more than paid for themselves because of the prevention they offer.

Native child programs are needed, but they must be controlled and developed by native communities with adequate funding. Rural communities need direct funding so that they can develop their own kinds of innovative arrangements. Traditional day care centres are often relevant in rural communities. Farm families need to have a say in what is important for them. Multicultural child care programs with language training are also needed, and these are surely a federal responsibility.

In 1984, women succeeded in eliciting promises from all three political leaders to make a national child care program a federal priority. This was a political issue for women then. I can tell you that it will be an even greater political issue for women and indeed for most citizens in the coming election. It is now a public issue, and I think that most voters are aware of how society has changed and how important it is to have good child care available.

Despite repeated promises of this Conservative Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) over the last four years, where he has said that he would develop accessible, quality, affordable child care, the Government has delayed over and over again, until the very last minute, until a kind of death knell of this Parliament, before it introduced the Canada Child Care Act. What kind of priority is this?

Mr. Riis: It is no priority at all.

Ms. Mitchell: That is true. It shows how little this Government really cares and how all it cares about are the polls and trying to have a token gesture for women who are not going to be fooled when they go to the polls to vote. Canadians are tired of cynical policies on the eve of federal elections.

The government child care strategy introduced some time ago the tax measures which the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) has put in this year's income tax. They allocated some $2.3 billion for what we considered to be very regressive tax measures, doubling the deductions for wealthier families who could afford to pay for child care for their children, ignoring poorer families who do not pay taxes, and offering a token $200 a year to mothers in the home and those who use informal care.

We felt that this $2.3 billion was not only regressive in the way that it was used but that it should have been used for the greatest priority, which is to have affordable, quality child care available in order for mothers and families to have a choice of good care for their children.

The Government also allowed only two days of debate in our legislative committee. They rushed this again and it was after introducing an extremely inadequate Bill C-144, the Canada Child Care Act. There was no time or funds to bring in representatives from the various regions of the country and the territories. I think that this was again an insult to Canadians.

Despite this rush, however, the 40 expert witnesses who appeared were unanimous in their condemnation of Bill C-144. There was not one representative or speaker who spoke in favour of this Bill. Even the Government, you would think, could have found one supporter. That is not the case, though.

It is a restrictive piece of legislation that immediately removes child care from the Canada Assistance Plan, offers capital funds for only seven years, makes no attempt to assess or meet real needs for spaces, and provides for only about 30,000 new subsidized spaces per province or territory per year. Future growth is terminated by the end of seven years. Child care will not go away at the end of seven years. This plan to allocate $4 billion for 200,000 spaces is only a start, and a very meagre start at that. Along with the present spaces it will not even meet a quarter of the needs of children across Canada. We believe that it is very short-sighted, indeed.

I would like to mention the five worst points of the Tory Child Care Act and elaborate on them. First, it offers funding for too few spaces. Second, it establishes no national objectives for the first new major social programs since medicare. Third, it entrenches the present system of poor quality and unaffordable child care services, leaving it up to provinces to determine how they will use federal child care funds rather than requiring that these funds be used to improve the quality and to develop new kinds of child care services. Fourth, it caps funding and restricts growth at the end of seven years. All indicators show that the needs for child care will have expanded from what we now have, not diminished. Poorer provinces will not have a top up at the end of seven years, and there is no way that they can continue their services without it. We also have the whole question of funding for new spaces.

Instead of assessing the real need for child care services in Canada and developing a rational plan, phase by phase, as we have done, for gradually meeting these needs, the Government has arbitrarily chosen 200,000 new spaces as its goal and slapped this on as the subsidy for the next seven years. As I said earlier, this only doubles the amount of spaces that we have now. It is far, far from adequate.

We know that we cannot do everything during the first few years, but certainly we could do a lot more. As my Leader said in Vancouver, we would have increased this number within four years under our program while retaining the Canada Assistance Plan. It would have cost $2.3 billion. There should certainly have been a much greater increase in the number of spaces.

We have also said before that the growth rate under the Canada Assistance Plan is now 15 per cent, and under this new program it will be reduced to a 10 per cent growth in spaces. What kind of progress is that?

Our New Democrat plan would offer direct grants during the first phase of development while maintaining the Canada Assistance Plan. As I said, it would have presented 200,000 subsidized spaces at the end of four years. We would have progressively developed it from there, with adequate shared funding over the years, into the next century.

We believe that any national plan must be based on real needs and must plan for the future. We criticize this policy of the federal Government, and we wish that it had put the tax money into increasing spaces as well.

There are no national objectives, and this is the first major national social program since medicare. Medicare spells out national objectives. We have the five principles of medicare. It has been a fine program, and we are very proud of it.

Unfortunately we cannot be proud of this child care program. It should be a landmark in the development of good social policy. It has not even conformed to the requirements the Conservative Government made under its own Meech Lake Constitutional Accord, where federal spending for social programs was to be based on the national objectives. It ignores the Canada Health Act.

The Minister refused repeatedly to accept any of our amendments in committee which would have inserted objectives into the body of the Act, even his own objectives which were pretty limited. He deliberately confuses national objectives with provincial standards, which of course are under provincial jurisdiction. The federal Government has an obligation to ensure that families and children across Canada have adequate access to programs.

Just before I move to the closing of my remarks, I would like to move:

> That the motion be amended by deleting all the words after the word "That" and substituting the following therefor:
> That Bill C-144, an Act to authorize payments by Canada toward the provision of child care services, and to amend the Canada Assistance Plan in consequence thereof, be not now read a third time but be referred back to the legislative committee for the purpose of reconsidering Clauses 3, 4, and 5."

I outlined earlier the other concerns that we have with this Act. It entrenches the present inadequate system of child care which is different in different regions. It should be encouraging provinces to improve the quality of care. Instead, it allows them to continue with untrained workers in some programs and it allows some provinces to use the money just for subsidies while not putting any into operating grants. There is no assurance at all that programs will be developed for children over five and under three, for disabled children, and for family day care homes.

The Canada Child Care Act is very restrictive in that it grandfathers the capital funding at the end of seven years. I have said how inadequate it is that this is a seven-year program. It is a seven-year fiasco. It really restricts child care programs rather than developes national child care for the future.

Finally, the Act requires provinces to give up share funding under the Canada Assistance Plan for children in need and those likely to be in need. This concerned many witnesses and it concerned us. We tried to get this amended because we do not feel that poor children are protected under this new plan. There will be great competition for very few spaces, and funds are not guaranteed for children in need who must have some priority.

Our Party, in our minority report "Caring For Canada's Children", put forward a national child care program with seven national objectives. It is a three-stage plan that is cost effective and allows the system to grow into the year 2,000 and beyond. I want to stress once again that New Democrats want a comprehensive range of child care programs so that parents will have choices to meet their special needs.

We are not advocating compulsory, institutionalized care for every child in Canada as other Parties, in particular the Government, like to claim that we are advocating. We want a practical, phased-in plan that will develop realistically with the ultimate goal of achieving child care that is accessible in all communities, that will give parents choices, and that is an essential available service, as it is in most western European countries, in the same way as education is.

I call on the Conservative Government to resist the political games it is playing in order to respond to the gender gap in the polls and to resist the token pre-election gesture it is offering in the child care field. After waiting four years it is forcing this completely inadequate program through the House after two days in committee and very few more in open debate.

This program is not going to please women voters. They know how inadequate it is and what a disappointment it is. The Prime Minister, once again, has let Canadians down on a very important promise. Surely children are more important than nuclear subs. This country has the kind of caring citizens who put children first and will not tolerate the neglect of our children that we are experiencing under this Government.

It is time we had a comprehensive child care program which is positive, which stresses quality, which is non-profit in nature—because that is the best kind of quality care—which will have well trained workers paid good wages, and which will offer a range of services in every community: north, south, east or west; rural or urban. Let us do it right. Our children deserve the best.

I call on the Government to withdraw Bill C-144. Through this motion we have asked that it be referred back to the legislative committee for reconsideration. Better still, call an election immediately. Let us have a new Government to put forward a New Democrat child care policy.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair has heard the amendment of the Hon. Member for Vancouver East and finds it to be in order.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Hon. Member a question. My daughter is like many young wives who have young children but also have to work in order to help meet the mortgage payments. I have, therefore, watched my two grandchildren spend a considerable time in day care centres. I have been impressed by the hard work and devotion of the people working in day care centres, but I have also been impressed with the necessity for them, in these non-profit day care centres, to work for very low wages, not much over the minimum wage in the Province of Manitoba.

I am puzzled about why the Conservative Government's proposal and the proposals of the Liberal Party, both here in Ottawa nationally and the Liberal Party in Manitoba, would permit the funding by Governments, federal and provincial, of day care centres run for a profit.

I cannot blame the operators of privately owned and operated day care centres for wanting to make a profit. After all, that is the legitimate objective of every private business. If they have to make a profit, is it not axiomatic that the wages of the people working in those privately owned and operated day care centres will have to be much lower than those working in non profit day care centres?

Ms. Mitchell: Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague for a very important question. I want to join him in acknowledging the devotion of child care workers across this country. It is the most important job in Canada, I would say, yet they probably are the least recognized. In fact, one witness said that it was the poor helping the poor, poor mothers helping poor mothers very often, because their wages are so atrocious.

I would like to remind the House that in order to qualify caregivers need at least two years of post-secondary education. In many provinces, and I must mention the Province of Alberta in particular, they do not require training. They require only that caregivers be 18 years of age. This is not good enough from a standards point of view.

Of course, the best paid caregivers are those who are unionized, but even unionized centres do not pay high enough wages because they simply do not have sufficient money coming in from fees or subsidies to improve that.

The Member was talking about commercial day care. I agree with him completely. It is not just our own political bias about the commercialization of services for children. Objective research studies have been done, and I can think of at least three, which showed that on average the quality of child care in commercial day care centres is lower. There are some very good private centres, but by and large the only way to make a profit is to pay lower wages to the people working there and to charge higher fees to parents. But you can only go so far in that direction or you will not have any children.

In addition, caregivers tend to burn out more quickly as a result of carrying heavier work-loads and there is a higher turnover of caregivers. Children need continuity, particularly when they are away from their own parents. They need to have a loving person who is their constant and is there to give them attention every day.

One of the things that was lacking in this Bill, and we tried to get it amended, was a conversion clause. Many private operators that we heard from, particularly in the Atlantic region, are mom and pop operations that are not making a profit. In fact, they are using their own homes and probably taking a great loss. They are doing it because they love children, because there is a need, and because they need a job.

They have told us that they would be far happier if they were able to convert to non-profit child care, if there was an agency that would help them to get proper equipment, that would help them to get capital funding for a decent building, and that would help them organize a parent body. They then, rather than getting hardly any take-home pay, would have a decent, fair wage.

I think that most of the smaller operators of profit-making day care across the country would be persuaded, with proper incentives, to convert to non-profit care. They would have the advantage of training programs offered by parent organizations, of creative toys, and of enrichment programs. It is also important for those family operated day care homes to be licensed and affiliated with a non-profit agency. It is another area where the care is very sporadic and where I am sure parents who take children in the home would like to be connected with some kind of outside agency in order to provide better service and have better pay.

Mr. Blaikie: Mr. Speaker, I was pleased that the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow) raised the policy of the Liberal Party in Manitoba because I believe it points out one of the basic differences between Liberals and New Democrats with respect to child care. We have a difference with the Government as well, obviously, but some Canadians might be under the impression that because we both oppose the child care Bill there are no significant differences between the Liberals and the New Democrats. We have come to see what those differences are just recently in Manitoba, for example, where the Liberal Party of Manitoba has not criticized or opposed the decision of the Conservative Government there to extend public funding to profit making day care centres. I believe that should be on the record.

We know that many Conservative back-benchers often seem to regret the way in which society has developed, and the way in which many families now have both parents in the job market. They suggest that it detracts from the traditional family situation where most often the mother was at home looking after the children.

This points out to me a problem with Conservative philosophy. Certainly one of the main reasons so many families need two incomes is to pay the mortgage. I recall when I first became interested in politics in the late 1960s and early 1970s, when the NDP called for measures to reduce land speculation to prevent the incredible inflation of housing prices that occurred then and which is occurring again, particularly in Toronto. Yet any time one would move to curb the free enterprise market that creates the economic situation in which families feel both parents and even the kids sometimes must work to pay a $435,000 mortgage that was only $135,000 five years previously, Conservatives say it cannot be done because it interferes with the market-place. Conservatives should make up their minds. What do they value, the family or the market-place?

For the last 20 years their real priority, their idol, has been the market-place. If the market-place happens to drive families on to the streets or make it impossible for people to stay at home, then they just have to live with that. Conservatives can get up to make speeches regretting the passing of the traditional family, but do not do anything about it because they do not want to interfere with free enterprise.

Ms. Mitchell: Mr. Speaker, my hon. colleague who is indeed a philosopher in his own right, has pointed out the weaknesses in both the Liberal and Tory philosophies on child care.

He is quite right that the Liberal Party in Manitoba, as well as nationally, is quite in favour of commercial child care. It has said that the funding should go to for profit child care.

The situation is the same with respect to care for the elderly. Operations that function primarily as businesses to make a profit are really not consistent with good quality care. We challenge the Liberals on that point.

The Hon. Member is quite right that the Conservatives face a real dilemma with their philosophy. On the one hand they would like to send all women back into the home, I am sure. That was the dilemma they faced in trying to come forward with a child are program. While they profess to recognize the family, it is that Party which deindexed family allowance, deindexed the child tax credit, and imposed more taxes on families than on taxpayers without children or on corporations. One must question the conflicting philosophies of the Conservatives.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I would ask the Hon. Member to conclude. The time for questions and comments has expired.

Ms. Mitchell: I believe the child care Bill is an example of how the Conservatives are not committed to sound child care policy but are trying to do as little as possible in as negative a way as possible.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair will recognize the Hon. Member for Regina West. Since it is three minutes before five o'clock, would it be the wish of the Hon. Member to call it five o'clock?

Mr. Rodriguez: We want to hear him.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Members of the House want to hear the Hon. Member.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, let me begin my third reading speech by suggesting that there were many people in this country, and at least one political Party of which I am aware, who for many years promoted the participation of the public through Governments at all three levels in the caring of children as a responsibility not only of parents but of the nation because of the requirement of parents to earn a living.

Over a period of some 40 years it became an issue like motherhood. The Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) is all for motherhood. The Tories support motherhood, yet they introduced legislation that would erect all the handicaps possible to prevent motherhood and mothering.

I know that there are some Tories who still say that the mother should stay at home and look after the kids. The problem is that her husband has been laid off or his company has gone bankrupt, but she can get a job, even a part-time job, to help support the household and the family. May I call it five o'clock?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being five o'clock, the House will proceed to consideration of Private Members' Business as listed on today's Order Paper.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS—MOTIONS

[English]

THE MEDIA

ROYAL COMMISSION ON NEWSPAPERS (1981)

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York—Peel) moved:

That a special committee of the House be established to consider what action has been taken by the government and former governments with respect to the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Newspapers (1981), and that the committee be empowered to consider which of the recommendations should be implemented and, in particular, the recommendations made by the Commission with reference to Thomson Newspapers Limited.

He said: Mr. Speaker, since there might be those in the House who are perhaps unfamiliar with the Royal Commission on Newspapers which brought in its report on July 1, 1981, I felt I should begin my remarks by reminding Hon. Members that this was a commission on which Tom Kent was chairperson, Gordon Spears was a commissioner, as was Laurent Picard. If I could summarize it briefly, the thrust of the commission report was that it was felt that there was an undue concentration of newspapers in the country and that perhaps this resulted in a less than favourable freedom of the press. There were certain questions raised about ownership of not only newspapers as far as chains were concerned but the fact that certain instances were cited wherein chain ownerships were also linked to conglomerates.

Based on that type of analysis, the report came up with various recommendations which I hope to deal with today. Even if one does not believe in all the recommendations—and certainly I do not believe in them all—or if one believes in none of them or, in fact, if one believes only in some of them, it is important that we as legislators, and the most senior House in the country, at least consider the evidence and the information that this commission put before the country linked, if you like, Mr. Speaker, with its recommendations.

One other matter which I should perhaps clarify is that the actual report was triggered by the closing down The Winnipeg Tribune and The Ottawa Journal. In the forward to the report it is stated:

The Winnipeg Tribune and The Ottawa Journal closed their doors on August 27, 1980. This commission in direct response to that event was created six days later.

In short, it was conceded that there was a certain anxiety at the time that an already concentrated situation was perhaps becoming that much more concentrated.

In a map that the commission includes on page 10 of its report it points out that chains at that time controlled 94.6 per cent of the total circulation in British Columbia; 96.2 per cent in Alberta; 100 per cent in Saskatchewan; 87.1 per cent in Manitoba; 60.6 per cent in Ontario; 95.9 per cent in Quebec; and throughout the Maritimes it was generally the same, although Nova Scotia was just 26.6 per cent controlled by chains. I think that a compelling case is made in the report which demonstrates the concentration that existed as far as chains in the daily newspaper field were concerned.

What I mainly want to deal with today is what happened after the report. Were any of the recommendations implemented? To the best of my knowledge, none were implemented. I will come back to one instance wherein there was temporary implementation of one, only to be withdrawn later. Also, was there ever any further study given to the questions that were raised in the report?

First, I would like to touch on what some of these recommendations were all about. On page 237 the commission had this comment to make:

The ownership and control of most newspapers is today highly concentrated under interests whose business concerns extend far beyond the particular newspaper. Much of our press, consequently, is not itself dedicated exclusively to the purposes of the press, to the discharge of its public responsibility. Extraneous interests, operating internally, are the chains that today limit the freedom of the press.

The chain you will note, Mr. Speaker, that is referred to there is the chain in a binding sense. That is what the commission stated is limiting the freedom of the press.

In answer, then, what can be done about it? It suggests, for example, that there is room for a Canada newspaper Act and that it would provide for a resistance at least to a further concentration of newspaper power in the country.

Many of the recommendations, and I should be frank about this, I feel contemplate the possibility at least of undue government intervention. The commission tried to be very guarded in its comments that that was not its intention. Anything that we say today I think we should weigh in the context that I am certainly not speaking for direct government intervention. I am speaking in the context of asking this. Is there not something worth considering in what the royal commission reported on back in 1981 and, specifically, what has happened?

The only instance that I know of anything coming out of this study was a directive which was given to the CRTC by the Government of the day asking that it refrain from granting TV licences or radio licences in communities where the applicant was, for example, the local daily newspaper. I do not know whether that directive was ever acted upon by the CRTC. It was subsequently withdrawn. To the best of my knowledge there has been no direct implementation of these recommendations.

Let me first deal with the suggestion of the Canada newspaper Act. The report states that while the local monopoly of a newspaper is a problem in itself, often reflected in profit maximization by an impoverishment of editorial comment, the worst feature of concentration is not the ownership of several newspapers by one company, it is their ownership by a conglomerate, a company having or associated with extensive other interests. As an example of this type of conglomerate Thomson Newspapers is cited.

I think most Hon. Members are familiar with the Thomson empire. For those who are not, I recommend that they take a look at the 1988 summer issue of The Financial Post wherein the trees of various conglomerates of Canada are shown. Under the title: "Ken Thomson—Read all about him" the various concerns that Lord Thomson controls are listed. Of course that includes Thomson Newspapers which is 61 per cent owned by a private company owned by the Thomsons; 74 per cent of Hudson's Bay; 100 per cent of The Bay, 100 per cent of Simpsons; 100 per cent of Zeller's; and 100 per cent of a real estate company called Markborough Properties. On the international Thomson organization side there are various other interests such as oil and gas and book publishing and that type of thing.

I would simply like to summarize the Thomson situation as one in which when the royal commission looked at the situation it found that Thomson had 40 newspapers in Canada. That is the same number that it has today. I am referring to daily newspapers here. The Globe and Mail is of course one of the newspapers that it has. Its growth since the 1981 report has been mainly in the United States. When I speak of growth, it is truly sensational.

The Thomson organization—and when I refer to these figures I am referring to Thomson Newspapers Limited—are running at roughly a 40 per cent pre-tax profit margin on revenues. In smaller communities it is even higher than that. The net result is that in 1987, on earnings of $1.95 billion it was able to have a net pre-tax income of $379 million. Royal Securities, RBC Dominion Securities, has indicated that it believes that profit will get up to over $.5 billion by 1990.

Let us make one thing clear. There is nothing wrong with a business concern making a profit. The bottom line is what insures the solvency and the continual prosperity of that organization. What we have to ask ourselves is whether the tremendous concentration that Thomson is showing in a business sense of developing what it calls "cash cows" is in the best interests of a free responsible press in this country.

The formula is very simple. If one maximizes revenue and minimizes costs, the net result is editorial staffs are short-changed as far as remuneration is concerned. As a result of the underpaying of many of the personnel, it is very difficult for those papers in the Thomson chain to get the type of seasoned, well-educated employee that one would normally expect to handle what is one of the crucial jobs in any democracy, and that is the reporting of the news.

I am not talking about so-called interpretive reporting. I would suggest that what we need, as much as anything in this country, are responsible journalists reporting what actually is the news, and hopefully conveying it through their newspapers to their reader who can judge accordingly as to what action he or she should take on whatever topic may be relevant at the time.

I would like to touch very briefly on some of the recommendations that the commission has come up with in the context of what it feels is an over concentration. It points out there should be a divestiture of either the The Globe and Mail with Thomson retaining the other 40 newspapers that it owns, or it should retain the The Globe and Mail and sell off the other 40 newspapers. We know that has not occurred. What indeed has happened, and if you are interested, Mr. Speaker, I could give the specific profits, is that those Canadian newspapers have generated an income that, in 1980, the year that the royal commission was looking at, had Canadian revenue of $284 million. By the end of December, 1987, that had gone up to an even $.5 billion. That is a nice increase during the 1980s. As far as the income is concerned it is even more dramatic. One finds that the segmented operating income in Canada has jumped from $62 million to $157 million, as far as Thomson Newspapers is concerned.

Where was that money used? Was it used to ensure that there was a high calibre reporting staff, that the editorial content that appears in what is generally called the news hall of a newspaper was of a high calibre? No. It was substantially used to give the cash flow needed to make further acquisitions in the United States. That is where the growth has been; in short, the funelling off of those profits out of the Canadian newspaper empire, short-changing the production of the newspapers in this country, so that there could be further acquisitions made in the United States. Today the chain has 160 newspapers; 103 daily and 5 weekly newspapers are in the United States. The remaining are 40 daily in Canada, and 12 weekly newspapers.

The first comment I would make is that the Royal Commission I have referred to asked that Government consider the desirability of a divestiture of this empire. Is it worth revisiting to determine if that divestiture would have been wise? There is a five year time given for the divestiture, or has the inaction been the appropriate course to take?

I would then mention that there is a rather novel approach of a taxation nature to try to get more competition into the newspaper field in Canada. The recommendation had two parts. It was suggested that there may be room to give an added tax write-off to those who would like to invest in new newspapers, the concept being something similar to what one could obtain by going into the film business in Canada. For example, if somebody wanted to raise $1 million, the royal commission asked: "Would it be possible to give a tax credit so that somebody who is raising $1 million to get into the newspaper field in Canada would at least have that incentive?" Again there was a formula for the adjustment of taxes within a newspaper in accordance with how much editorial content was put into the newspaper and what the expenditure was in generating satisfactory editorial content in the newspaper. It was a surtax, and tax credit approach. Again, I would recommend that Hon. Members who may be interested in this subject take a look at the report and see the nature of that recommendation.

Another recommendation was the role of the editor in the newspaper. They suggested that if one has this highly concentrated ownership such as Southams, The Toronto Star, or the Thomsons, perhaps there had to be something done to ensure an independence at the editorial level. The suggestion was that editors-in-chief be asked to sign a contract that would be binding on the owner to ensure that he would have certain security of tenure during his employment, and that if he had to make some tough decisions that might be embarassing to the owner or somebody else connected to the newspaper, he would not feel that his job was at stake as a result of making that decision.

The commission pointed out, and perhaps I should quote page 246 which states:

> Overall, the structure is most certainly not one that can give any confidence—

That is the present industry structure:

> —that newspapers in Canadian communities are edited independently of the other business interests of their chain or conglomerate proprietors. The structure is, in other words, incompatible with the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association's own declaration, in its 1977 Statement of Principles on this point.

It then quotes what the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publisher's Association stated should be the principle:

> The newspaper must hold itself free of any obligation save that of fidelity to the public good . . . Conflicts of interest, and the appearance of conflicts of interest, must be avoided. Outside interests that could affect, or appear to affect, the newspaper's freedom to report the news impartially should be avoided.

In short, the association pinpoints what appears to be an inherent defect in the system that the commission found.

I know my time is quickly running out. I would like to simply conclude by saying that I believe Hon. Members should revisit the Royal Commission, look at the evidence that it mustered, look at the recommendations that it proposed, and ask themselves: "Are you indeed happy with the way the freedom of the press is functioning in the country at the present time, and in particular can it be bettered?" Democracy at any time needs a truly free, objective, responsible press, and that is what I am hoping measures in future will attempt to attain.

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I am happy to participate in this debate with respect to a special committee of the House being formed to decide which of the recommendations of the Kent Commission report will be implemented by the Government.

I must say that in listening to the Hon. Member, a former champion of free enterprise and the free market system, I was a little bit puzzled about his defence of government intervention in such an important matter as concentration of ownership. I recall myself and my friend, the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez), advocating that the Government intervene or examine closely the excessively high profits of multinational drug companies. We also recommended that certain foreign takeovers of Canadian operations be examined in detail as they were under FIRA. The Hon. Member for York—Peel (Mr. Stevens) would obviously argue the Government's side and say you have to let the free market take its course. We now find our efforts have been rewarded. We now have before us in the House a conversion. The Hon. Member now agrees with and understands fully the importance of the Government of Canada taking its public responsibility very seriously.

I found the subject matter of this motion very interesting because I do not believe the Hon. Member talked about a fundamental underpinning of that sector of our economy, namely freedom of the press. He may have alluded to it but I cannot recall him mentioning it in his remarks. That issue has to be first and foremost as we proceed down this long path. Quite frankly, there is nothing inherently wrong with what the Hon. Member is asking for. I would hope that the House would concur with this motion, although it only deals with one particular industry.

The Hon. Member took great pains to point out many things about the Thomson chain of newspapers. Perhaps as we proceed along in this debate, this particular Parliament, and even into subsequent Parliaments, we will discover the real reason why he wishes to do that. However, corporate concentration and control is not a problem just for the newspaper industry in this country. It is part and parcel of a growing problem for Canadians everywhere.

I had to be careful because I did not want to laugh while the Hon. Member was speaking, but when you have the major mergers that are taking place in this country, increasing corporate concentration in the retail sector, and then hear the former Minister say the Government now has to look at a particular sector, one has to ask, rightly so, as no doubt my friend from Nickel Belt will, why all of a sudden this concern about corporate concentration in the newspaper industry?

I do not want to take all the credit. The Hon. Member for Nickel Belt will want to share the credit with me for finally convincing the Hon. Member to see the correctness of our suggestions regarding government intervention and the public interest.

I, too, would want to examine some of the recommendations contained in the Kent Commission report. However, it is important to note that there is both provincial and federal jurisdiction involved with respect to how the recommendations would be implemented. It does not necessarily follow, either, that with corporate concentration you are automatically going to see editorial writers or particular newspapers slanting their views in a particular way. I think the best example of that was the K. C. Irving case when it was alleged that K. C. Irving acquired a complete monopoly of English language newspapers in New Brunswick to complement other media and diverse industrial holdings in the province by purchasing the remaining independent newspaper. The Supreme Court of Canada acquitted Irving in that case by holding that no presumption of detriment to the public arises merely from the fact of a monopoly.

However, I would want to go back, not necessarily to argue that case again, but as the Hon. Member suggested, to review some of the recommendations and some of the cases which have followed that particular case. We would re-examine whether or not that ruling of the Supreme Court at that point is really relevant in 1988 and beyond.

It should also be noted that although there was not much action subsequent to the Kent Commission, Bill C-226, the Daily Newspaper Act, sponsored by the Hon. James Fleming, formerly the Minister responsible for implementation of the Kent Commission report, received first reading in the House on March 12, 1984, as a Private Members' Bill. Under that legislation no one would be able to control newspapers with an aggregate of more than 20 per cent of all daily circulation. That provision would not have any retroactive application.

I bring that to the attention of Members who might be under the false impression that no activity whatsoever followed the recommendations of the Kent Commission. In fact, that Bill would require any non-media company acquiring or establishing a newspaper to demonstrate to the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission that any such newspaper would be managed independently of the non-media company's other interests.

I repeat that an issue which the Government of Canada should be intricately involved in is the issue of corporate concentration and the effect it is having on the Canadian economy. It is absolutely essential. The Hon. Member raises the issue of the newspaper industry, but there are many other industries and sectors of our economy where we have a high degree of corporate concentration, and the Government of which he is a part has refused to take any concrete and specific action to address those important concerns.

In conclusion, I find nothing inherently wrong with the suggestion of the Hon. Member. I would hope that the conversion we have seen here today will continue beyond the imminent election and that we will go into the 1990s secure in his support for measures affecting other sectors of the economy which we deem to be important.

• (1730)

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I want to participate in this debate. I too, when I saw this motion on the Order Paper, could not believe my eyes. I looked once, I looked twice, and there it is, a motion dated—this is very important—September 11, 1987, by the Hon. Member for York Peel (Mr. Stevens), the former Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

Mr. Dingwall: And Privatization.

Mr. Rodriguez: Yes, and Privatization. That Minister brought down this motion on September 11, 1987 in which he calls upon Parliament "to establish a special committee of the House to consider what action has been taken by the Government and former Governments with respect to the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Newspapers (1981)"—the Kent Commission—"and that the committee be empowered to consider which of the recommendations should be implemented and, in particular, the recommendations made by the Commission with reference to Thomson Newspapers Limited."

I became intrigued, Mr. Speaker. I was not going to speak on this motion, to be honest, but I became intrigued with the whole process. Here is a free-enterpriser, a rocking and rolling free-enterpriser, the modern day 21st century baron of free enterprise who sits around, we know, on weekends with his wife discussing new ways to make money. They invented the original game "Let's Make a Deal". It plays on TV these days.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Rodriguez: That intrigued me as to why this gentleman would bring forward this motion. I have an inherent dislike for monopolies. Whenever I see them I want to break them up, but I could not figure out why this Member from York Peel would want to do that. I had to go back and dig up the Kent Commission recommendations and look at what was specifically said about the newspaper business in this country, particularly the Thomson chain. Basically it said:

> It would prohibit significant further concentration of the ownership and control of daily newspapers and of the common ownership of these newspapers and other media.
> It would correct the very worst cases of concentration that now exist.
> It would provide an incentive to the wider ownership of newspapers that change hands, and of new newspapers and magazines.
> It would raise the status and enhance the freedom of journalists by protecting their rights, if a newspaper is under an ownership that has major interests outside the newspaper, and provide an opportunity for the voice of the community whose citizens have a particular stake in the quality of the local newspaper, to be heard.

The recommendation continued:

> Therefore the Newspaper Act should prohibit the purchase of a newspaper business by a company or person, or any association of persons or companies not at arm's length, if the total net value of the assets employed in non-newspaper business by the company, person, and any associated companies or persons, exceeds the net asset value of the newspaper which is to be purchased.
> While the Commission thinks that large chains, and chains which are geographically concentrated, should never have been allowed to develop—

And it goes on and on.

With respect to the Thomson chain, the Kent Commission was very clear. It wrote:

> It is in our judgment an entirely unacceptable concentration of power that this paper—

Referring to the Globe and Mail.

> —should be owned by the Thomson organization which also owns a third of the other daily newspapers in Canada . . .

> Thomson would thus be required to divest itself, within five years, either of the Globe and Mail or of its other papers.

I had this question nagging: Why would this Member put this motion with which I have no problem? I always look for reasons why things get done. When I dug up the clipping files of the Library of Parliament something rang a bell in my mind because I remembered the Ottawa Herald. I have in my hand a clipping from The Globe and Mail which reads:

> Herald first of many, ex-minister says.
> Stevens launches career as press baron.

Now, Mr. Speaker, you have to read some of these choice quotes. This blew my mind. Now it started to click. I put two and two together and I came up with five. I knew there was a fox in the hen house. I knew it right off the bat. Here is a man who wants to break up monopolies but that was September, 1987. Remember I said the motion was September, 1987 but this quote from The Globe and Mail is dated May 12, 1988. It continued:

> Mr. Stevens said yesterday that turning the Ottawa Herald into a daily will be only the first of a string of newspaper ventures.

Do you get it, Mr. Speaker? There is going to be a chain. The article goes on to say:

> "One of the most attractive investments is newspapers, especially newspaper chains," Mr. Stevens said. He spoke of building a network of community and daily newspapers throughout Canada and the United States.

He now wants to replace the Thomsons. That is what he wants to do.

Mr. Stevens: Competition.

Mr. Rodriguez: Here is the guy who in 1987 was talking about breaking up monopolies. Then he quoted Tom Kent who headed the royal commission into Canadian newspapers. The article continues:

> —Mr. Stevens said: "The profit is only the beer, the power is the champagne."

When he opened up this Herald he was just drinking the beer and was looking to the champagne. I cannot believe it, Mr. Speaker. This other paper carried the same story but with a different twist. This is from The Ottawa Citizen from May 12, 1988 and we read:

> Stevens deal heralds new presses, building.
> Sinclair Stevens, who was formerly industry minister, said his company has big plans for its newspaper division, including expansion in Canada and into the United States.
> The newspaper business is extremely profitable and new publishing technology has made the business even more attractive as an investment, Stevens said at a news conference.

The Minister talked about avoiding conflict of interest or the appearance of conflict of interest. Here is a Member of Parliament owning a newspaper. Can you see it now? He would dictate the editorial page. He would be the greatest MP, he would dictate the cartoons. Can you just see it now? "Sinc Stevens conquers Ottawa." "Sinc Stevens makes a big speech in Parliament."

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Could I ask the Hon. Member to refer to the Member as the Hon. Member for York Peel, please?

Mr. Rodriguez: Yes, the Hon. Member for York Peel. Is there any greater askance about conflict of interest than a Member of Parliament owning a newspaper, a newspaper that relates and conveys to the public the business of this House, the business of the country? It boggles the mind.

While I do not have a problem with setting up a special committee to look at the Thomson chain and how to break up its monopoly—God knows, we have one of them in Sudbury—I want to say that I have to raise in my own mind the propriety of a man who proposes this motion while he himself starts out to establish his own dynasty. He wants, as he says, to revisit the royal commission. I want to say with déjà vu while this committee might be looking at the Thomson paper monopoly today, down the road we might be looking at the Sinc Stevens' newspaper monopoly.

Mr. Stevens: Good idea.

[Translation]

Mr. Vincent Della Noce (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State and Minister Responsible for Multiculturalism): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in this debate because I come from the riding of Duvernay and the City of Laval where we have several very important weeklies.

Mr. Speaker, the Canadian publishing industry is thriving in my riding, to the extent that every week we almost have a war of weeklies. I simply cannot understand how these people manage to put out such quality papers with such limited financial resources and without any tax incentives or postal rate discounts, yet most of these weeklies are delivered right to our doors free of charge.

The newspaper publishing industry has always been the subject of particular consideration on the part of Governments because of its dual characteristic, either commercial or cultural. Given their vast land expanses and living next door to a giant, Canadians have long since acknowledged the significance of a way of expressing themselves which makes up for their regional differences and strengthens this original and diversified human fabric which is the source of unequalled pride for all of them from coast to coast.

Aware of this problem and concerned over their role in the establishment and expansion of a genuinely Canadian publishing industry, in recent years the various Governments have taken steps to help Canadian publishers, first and foremost through the publication distribution assistance program and Bill C-58. With the program to assist the distribution of publications, in January 1987, the Government announced a thorough review of the postal subsidy program for publishers, which allows eligible publishers to mail their publications to readers at preferential rates that are much lower than the commercial rates of Canada Post. This review was pursuant to the recommendations of the Nielsen Task Force, in 1986, to the effect that publishers of dailies and periodicals be consulted as soon as possible in order to agree on an acceptable timetable for the phased reduction of the postal subsidy.

Reacting to economic constraints to reduce the federal deficit and wishing to maintain a strong, original publishing industry, the Government tried and succeeded in reconciling its financial objectives with the needs of Canadian publishers and readers. In April 1988, speaking to an audience mainly made up of distinguished representatives of the Canadian press, the Minister of Communications (Miss MacDonald) announced that the postal subsidy program would be maintained at approximately the same level of funding as it then was, namely $225 million a year, for the next five years. The program will from now on be called the Publication Distribution Assistance Program, which better expresses the Government's intentions to support the press and the objectives of the program itself.

The postal subsidy program for publishers predates Confederation and is directly derived from our European cultural heritage. In 1710, the British Postal Act gave back control over postal systems in the colonies. In 1851, the British Post Office transferred to the English colonies control over their own postal services, which until then had come under the British Postmaster, and stipulated that they could set postal rates as they saw fit within their territory. By 1855, the territories that were to join the Canadian Confederation, strongly influenced by the colonial traditions advocating the circulation of information and ideas, had abolished the postal tariffs on newspapers. In 1867, an Act of the first Canadian Parliament established a Canadian postal service for citizens throughout the country.

The then Postmaster attempted to impose high postal rates on newspapers. That attempt was met with strong opposition from the industry. They asked the then Government to roll that decision back and establish free postal distribution for newspapers. Faced with that opposition, the Postmaster amended his proposal and introduced a low postal rate for newspaper distribution in Canada.

Since 1867, successive governments continued to apply that de facto policy of low rates to newspapers, and later on to other periodicals, under what is now called the second class mail or the publications distribution assistance program. Mindful of the basic goals of the program, they all wanted to ensure easy and widespread dissemination of information to every possible destination across the land, for both educational and democratic purposes. The postal program seemed the best way to meet this objective.

As the Canadian publishing industry developed, the objectives of the program changed as well, so that today, we can define the three main objectives of the policy governing it as follows:

A) encourage communication: i.e., promote the spread of the printed word at an affordable cost everywhere in the country that Canadians live;

B) encourage culture: i.e., promote the dissemination of printed matter from Canada in order to strengthen our cultural identity;

C) encourage industrial development: promote the development of an ever more prosperous publishing industry in our country, in spite of keen foreign competition.

Today, 144 daily newspapers, which means practically the entire daily press in Canada, and over 600 Canadian weeklies—half the total number in Canada—benefit under the program. Generally speaking, national daily newspapers mail only a small percentage of their total circulation. However, 45 per cent of these mailings go to rural subscribers who otherwise would have trouble obtaining these papers. There are forty regional dailies that distribute more than 10 per cent of their circulation by mail, while 15 small daily newspapers depend to a large extent on the assistance they receive under this program to serve their subscribers by mail, for instance the Guardian and Patriot in Charlottetown and the Shebrooke Record in Quebec. Today, 466 local weeklies may deliver free of charge the first 2,500 copies of each issue in rural communities with a population of 10,000 or less. Without the program, these weeklies would probably be unable to survive. Other weeklies enrolled in the program pay reduced postage rates which help them continue their publishing activities.

In concluding, Mr. Speaker, I think it would be correct to say that the present Government has not only fought in favour of the Canadian publishing industry but has also won many battles on its behalf. Whether we are talking about the postal subsidy or Bill C-58 or free trade, the Canadian publishing industry has come out a winner. Like its predecessors, the present Government has recognized the vulnerability, the uniqueness and the importance of this sector of our economy and has agreed to make available all the necessary resources, financial or otherwise, to maintain a publishing industry that is representative of Canadian society and the communities across this country.

My concern, Mr. Speaker, is that they have so much to do and so little money to do it with, and if they could continue to have these benefits, it would enhance the quality of newspapers in our small communities.

[English]

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make some background comments in addition to those made by the Hon. Member for York—Peel (Mr. Stevens) on the report of a royal commission that is commonly known and referred to as the Kent Commission. The motion introduced is of a fact-finding nature. It is about what has been done as a result of that inquiry, not what should be done by reason of the concentration of journalistic interests then and perhaps even more so now, and it is worthy of public consideration. The commission was created with good reason, I think, as a result of events that took place on August 27, 1980, when, on that day, the two largest newspaper chains were involved in the closure of two major newspapers, one in Winnipeg and The Journal here in Ottawa. Where there was a joint interest of those two chains in Vancouver and Montreal, the Southam interests bought out the Thomson interests.

The commission presented a report, including a number of regulations and recommendations, directed to both Government and industry. These recommendations flowed from the commission's conclusions on the state of competition within the industry. It found that the trend to chain ownership in the newspaper industry compromised the freedom and independence of the press, Canadians' access to diverse sources of news and opinion, and press quality. It felt that action by the Government was needed to protect Canadians' political rights with regard to which the press plays a major and central role.

The commission urged that the Government strengthen the then existing competition legislation. "Break up the chains", they said, so that there would be one newspaper with one owner. Prevent cross-media ownership, that is newspapers owning radio stations. Create a publicly-owned newspaper or a chain of newspapers, something on the model of the CBC. On and on it went.

A review of the Government's response to that commission report shows that action was taken, not to the degree that some might have wished, and it might not have been as wide ranging as the recommendations of the commission itself, but with respect to the subject of cross-media ownership.

The Cabinet of the day accepted that media ownership patterns did present problems which Government should address. Direction to the CRTC was issued by the Governor in Council in July of 1982. It prohibited the granting of broadcasting licences or the renewal of such licences to applicants who were proprietors of daily newspapers and whose major circulation area substantially encompassed the same market as that of the broadcasting undertaking. Exceptions were allowed, of course.

In every case but one the CRTC renewed the licences of the applicant. In the one case, involving the New Brunswick Broadcasting Corporation, the licence was renewed on a conditional basis and for a shorter period of time. It should be noted that the New Brunswick Broadcasting Corporation took its case to the Federal Court of Appeal and successfully appealed the authoritative direction. In other cases, the direction resulted in a number of structural ownership rearrangements and arms-length standstills to create agreement within the industry.

With respect to the issues arising from the Kent Commission regarding the business operations of newspapers, the Government of the day released legislation of a draft daily newspaper Act in July, 1983. It proposed the following: To limit further concentration of ownerships by barring acquisitions which would raise any individual or chain's share of national daily newspaper circulation above 20 per cent; to protect and promote editorial independence it would require non-media companies to give notice to the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission of its intent to acquire a daily newspaper and to demonstrate that such acquisition was in the public interest. Further, to promote editorial quality and public accountability in the operation of the daily press, it required the establishment of a national press council independent of Government, and by offering incentives through matching grants for the establishment by Canadian newspapers of new inter-regional or international news bureaus.

The general reaction of the critics to this proposed daily newspaper Act was that even if the actual legislation was benign with regard to governmental involvement, an Act which addressed the daily press would be on the books and would make it easier to introduce substantive amendments in the future, and would lower the threshold of public concern about governmental involvement in the news media or in the freedom of the press.

In the view of the critics, the problems attributed to the highly concentrated ownership suggested that this concentration should be dealt with instead within the context of other concentration of markets. In this regard, they supported the proposal that amendments should be made in the Combines Investigation Act rather than in a single legislative common Bill.

While the proposed daily newspaper Act was never really introduced into the House, as mentioned earlier this evening, a Private Member's Bill was introduced by Mr. Fleming in May of 1984. It was based very heavily on that proposed legislation.

Responsibility for the Government's legislation was assigned to the Honourable Judy Erola. In November of 1984, an article appeared in The Globe and Mail to the effect that she felt strongly that concentration of newspaper ownerships and other issues raised by the Kent Commission should be dealt with in a revised Competitions Act.

With respect to the issue of a national press council, she is quoted as saying that the industry "was on a path that was a very healthy one" and that the "threat of the newspaper Act was basically the reason why they decided to move on press councils and doing a bit of self-government, self-policing, which was more effective than otherwise".

Since that time, this Government has introduced amendments to the then Combines Investigation Act, now the Competition Act. It is widely felt that this general law of general application is an appropriate means to address concerns of corporate concentration primarily through news mergers and abuse of dominant positions and provisions. I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Dennis H. Cochrane (Moncton): Mr. Speaker, there is not a great deal of time left, but I want to speak against this Private Member's motion, basically because I do not believe that the Government should get any more involved than it has in the past in this industry.

I think that what caused the beginning of this whole process was a case that took place in New Brunswick that was referred to by some of my colleagues in their speeches, and it involved a case before the Combines Investigation Act with regard to the Irving connections and their newspaper holdings.

They went on to the Federal Court of Canada and were found not to be in contravention of that particular piece of legislation, and so they should have been. As a result, we saw, subsequent to the Kent Commission, a report showing some effort by the CRTC to not grant a licence to public broadcasting. That, too, was taken along the line and I guess it finally ended with a cabinet agreement of no further action to be taken regarding that.

In each of those cases they assumed that some abuse was evident. Certainly, as a resident of New Brunswick and somebody who has followed all of the newspapers that are involved, I would find it very difficult for the Government to get further into this.

With time running out, I would certainly not be supportive of this. I think that the Government has meddled in the past, and in those cases it, too, showed discrimination in this particular regard. I do not think that the interests of the newspaper industry or the public at large would be served by continuing the witch hunt that we saw in the late 1970s and early 1980s.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The time provided for consideration of Private Members' Business is now expired. Pursuant to Standing Order 42(1), the order is dropped from the Order Paper.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 66 deemed to have been moved.

HOUSING—SITUATION IN TORONTO—SURPLUS FEDERAL LANDS

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have this opportunity tonight to pursue a question I asked of the Government on September 16 of this year. In fact, it is a question that I, as a Toronto Member of Parliament, have been on my feet about on a fairly regular basis. I have been trying to press the Government to do something about its responsibility in the area of housing.

It is sad to note, in the dying moments of a dying administration, that in the last four years the administration of the Conservative Party has clearly abdicated its responsibilities in the area of housing. More and more the Government has cut back on and slashed various programs that were in place from previous administrations and has passed the political buck for housing to the municipalities and the provincial governments.

It has cut back on the social housing subsidies for non-profit and co-operative housing by $9.6 million. It cut the RRAP funding by 25 per cent. It terminated the RHOSP program which helped first time home buyers to own their first home. It cut non-profit housing in 1986 from 25,000 units to 17,500 units. Total CMHC subsidies fell by almost 20 per cent in 1984. Between 1984 and 1986 capital funding was cut by 61 per cent from $439 million to $267 million. In addition, the Residential Rehabilitation Assistance Program was cut by almost 51 per cent. These are only a few examples that I have the time to outline in the short time I have available to me. In these four years there has been a regression in the federal role in housing.

I take offence to the fact that on the eve of a national campaign, rather than dealing with the substance of the federal housing issue, rather than addressing the housing crisis of affordability in Metropolitan Toronto and other urban centres where there has been a housing malaise in terms of affordability, the Government has preferred to deal with cosmetic surgery and perceptions. It has announced, in the few days remaining of this Parliament, a Minister of Housing. That was somehow supposed to give the perception that the Government was interested in the housing issue. I am not sure that Canadians, particularly in the urban centres, in my own municipality of North York and in the Metro Toronto area, are going to be taken by this late conversion, if you will, on the question of housing.

That is the first part of the question that I raised on September 16 and on other days in the House of Commons with the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski). The other aspect I raised was the announcement last Friday of the provision of some 50 hectares or 123 acres of Downsview air force lands for what was deemed to be affordable housing. As I mentioned in the House on a number of occasions, I was pleased that at least there was a step in the right direction in using some of the surplus lands for federal housing projects.

However, I was distressed to learn that there was no commitment on behalf of the federal Government to provide the sewer lines that are necessary to put up the kind of subdivisions they are talking about. The federal Government knew about this two months ago when it met with North York city officials. The President of CMHC, Robert Jarvis, and his chief engineers, went to North York and were told, in clear terms, that the sewer capacity was absolutely nil in that area. The feds not only put out a news release to say that they were going create this housing, but there was obviously the expectation that they would come across with a price tag of upwards of $200 million for the sewer infrastructure, both local and metro.

In addition to that, I found it amazing that they would call it affordable housing when 75 per cent of the homes would be built by private developers at existing market rates. I asked the Government to up the 25 per cent to at least 35 per cent of the entire project to meet the provincial standard and, in addition, to encourage the private developers, as the provincial government in Ontario does, to have the private housing development include 25 per cent for affordable units. Otherwise, we would only be putting up on Downsview air force lands homes that are selling in Metropolitan Toronto for an average of about $225,000 to $230,000.

In closing, I say that the Government should not only get involved in cosmetic surgery but should get involved in the substance. Let us talk about an affordable housing scheme on Downsview air force base. Let us come through with the sewer commitments that would make it a reality. Otherwise, it will only be a fairy tale project simply in time for an election call.

Mr. William C. Winegard (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, may I assure the Hon. Member that the federal Government and Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation are fully aware of the Toronto housing situation and are monitoring the market very closely.

The federal Government is promoting access to the security of home ownership in a number of ways: Through the provision of public mortgage insurance, mortgage backed securities, policies to promote moderate and stable interest rates, and more generally, good economic management. Low interest rates have produced record housing starts.

In 1987, net migration to Toronto totalled 61,200. That is triple the average per year reported for the 1976 to 1982 period.

This high level of migration has significantly increased the demand for housing. This resulted in 46,518 housing starts in 1987, an all-time record. In 1988, starts are forecast to reach over 40,000. Demand has outpaced the ability of the construction industry to supply sufficient number of houses.

The federal funds that are provided under the federal-provincial social housing programs are targeted to needy households. A great deal has been accomplished in the Toronto area. The social housing portfolio is now 100,657 units of federal and provincial subsidized housing.

As mentioned in responses to previous questions, the Government spent about $250 million in social housing expenditures in the Toronto area in 1987. This figure is approximately 18 per cent of the total federal social housing budget. In 1987, the federal and provincial governments added, under the terms of the federal-provincial agreements, an additional 2,150 units.

The recent announcement by the federal Government that Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation would develop lands for approximately 10,000 to 12,000 people in North York is a clear demonstration that this Government does care about affordable housing in the Toronto market area.

PUBLIC SERVICE—WAGES OF HALIFAX NAVAL DOCKYARD WORKERS

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Mr. Speaker, I want to address the issue of wage parity in the Public Service of Canada. On August 31, 1988, I questioned the Minister of State for the Treasury Board (Mr. Lewis) respecting the wages paid to workers in the ship repair unit at CFB Halifax.

Briefly stated, this raises the long-standing issue of wage parity between ship repair trades on the East Coast and the West Coast of Canada that requires some explanation.

First, let me describe the ship repair unit at CFB Halifax, commonly known as the dockyard. This ship repair unit provides support to Maritime Command, Canada's Navy, with repairs to the fleet and maintenance of the fleet as well as refit and repair of equipment. This means establishing the facilities, skills, trades and talents necessary to perform these functions in normal times and in times of crisis.

Let us simplify the whole matter and say that what is really required is a competent and capable workforce. Meeting that requirement necessitates adequate compensation. What we have to do is find a method for adequately compensating our workers, not only in the ship repair unit but across the Public Service.

I believe the workforce at the dockyard has every right to reasonable compensation and every right to complain that reasonable compensation is not being paid, particularly when we look at their brothers on the West Coast. We must recognize the comparability of wages in regions and across Canada. As you may know, Mr. Speaker, the workers at the dockyard are represented by the Government Dockyard Trades and Labour Council—East. I have had occasion to speak to them. I believe they fairly represent the views of the 1,800 workers in the ship repair unit.

Let me deal with the question of wage parity, with particular reference to the ship repair workers on the East and West Coasts. It is not a new problem. It goes back to the early 1970s when a distinction was first made between the wages paid to workers on the East Coast and the West Coast. I will update it to 1985 when I had occasion to ask the Minister to review the policies with respect to payment of wages. That is to say equal pay for work of equal value.

I received a response in 1985 from the then President of the Treasury Board who referred to a problem on pay parity between home economists and occupational therapists and wrote this to me in a letter:

—resolution of the complaint demonstrates the joint union-management approach to be a responsive vehicle to satisfactorily address issues of long-standing concern regarding equal pay for work of equal value.

I would be the first to agree that that is an appropriate method to address these differences. It is union and management, workers' representatives and government representatives getting together to resolve this dispute. But it has not worked in this case.

In June of 1988 when I met with representatives of the Government Dockyard Trades and Labour Council to discuss this matter I undertook to address the President of the Treasury Board, the Hon. Member for Vancouver Centre (Miss Carney), and deal with the matter of wage parity. I received a response from the Minister shortly thereafter in July of 1988. The problem was a very specific one. The Minister indicated that in order to comply with the request for wage parity it would require over a 32 month period a wage increase of 36.1 per cent, as opposed to the offer that had been made of 11.5 per cent. One can see that it is a very substantial problem.

The Minister also pointed out, and I would like to read from the letter:

> Regional differences in rates of pay do exist in the private sector and the Public Service endeavours to reflect these differences. Currently, about one-fifth of all federal public servants are paid on some form of regional pay basis.

In July of 1988 the Minister indicated that in her opinion the regional pay differences were justified. However, that requires us to look at the principles involved in pay for Public Servants.

I know that in 1977 the Government's position was very clear. It was stated in the policy paper:

> The approach that the Government intends to pursue in compensating Federal public servants is one of average comparability of total compensation with a representative sample of private sector employers.

It was very clear that there were three principles involved in settling wages of public sector employees, our public servants. First, the public sector compensation must be fair to both the employee and the taxpayer. Second, the public sector compensation should be related in a reasonable and an acceptable way to the private sector. We more or less concede that government wages should trail the private sector. Third, there has to be proper collective bargaining, responsible collective bargaining to arrive at the actual dollars and cents. Nobody disputes those principles. What is in dispute is what has happened.

The dockyard council makes a very clear case that in 1975 the differences were not too great. In fact, the ship repair unit received 93.4 per cent of what was considered a comparable base wage. By 1987 it had dropped to 77 per cent of comparable wages in comparison to other areas. For example, the ship repair unit wages in comparison to municipal employees had dropped from 113 per cent to 91.29 per cent. I do not want to dazzle anybody with statistics. I simply want to say that there has been a dramatic change over this almost 10 year period. Today the East Coast workers are paid less than 85 per cent of what West Coast workers receive. That amounts to more than $3 an hour.

I am sure that everybody in the House of Commons would agree that that is not fair and that something has to be done. The hope for the future is a mediation process which the President of the Treasury Board has mentioned, and which I understand is now taking place.

My message is the following: In this mediation the proper officers have to consider the principle of wage parity. They have to move to reduce the discrepancy that has arisen over the years. The workers on the East Coast require and demand fair treatment, and they are entitled to fair treatment. On behalf of my constituents at the CFB Halifax dockyard, I ask for fairness.

Mr. Ken James (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, I wish to speak to this very important subject that has been brought to our attention by the Hon. Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby). He has a great interest in his constituents and the workers on the East Coast, particularly in the Halifax area. As the Hon. Member is aware, the issue of wage parity between the East and West Coast ship repair employees is at this moment the subject of mediation between the parties. In view of the fact that today it was mutually agreed that neither party would comment publicly on that dispute while this mediation effort is under way, I am not prepared to comment on the specific outstanding issues between the parties in that labour dispute, and I am sure that the Hon. Member would not wish me to do so.

Recently there has been much discussion with regard to the issue of wage parity within the Public Service, and in particular over the practice of successive governments' long-standing policy of paying regional rates of pay to certain groups of Public Service employees.

The Treasury Board as employer has traditionally attempted to negotiate regional rates for groups in which employees are located in two or more regions where outside data indicates significant variations in rates of pay among various regions in Canada, and where the mobility and the area of recruitment of the employees are limited.

There are presently approximately 43,000 unionized employees in 11 occupational groups in the federal Public Service who receive regional rates of pay. Regional rates have been in effect for some groups for many decades, and this policy has been embraced by many previous Governments.

Both the Pay Research Bureau and the Conference Board of Canada have surveyed the practice of regional rates prevailing in the private sector. Employers with operations in more than one region apply this practice in varying degrees, based upon the type of occupational groups that they employ. The practice is most prevalent for operational, administrative, and technical support positions. In its soon to be published report, the Conference Board of Canada, based on preliminary data received to date, has identified that 47 per cent of the respondents paid regional rates to their clerical and support positions.

The Hon. Member can see that this practice is quite common for many private sector employees in Canada.

It is for those reasons that the Treasury Board as employer continues to embrace the concept of paying rates of pay for certain occupational groups that are based on regional labour market conditions prevailing in the private sector.

I thank the Hon. Member for Halifax West for bringing this important point to the attention of the House of Commons.

NATIONAL PAROLE BOARD—VIOLENT OFFENDERS—RETENTION IN PRISON

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, where were you on July 24, 1986? Think back, carefully, Mr. Speaker. Where were you that day? Were you out on the golf course? I know that you like playing golf. Were you at the lake? I know you enjoy a little recreation. Were you in your constituency office working hard? This date was two years ago this summer, Mr. Speaker. Think very hard.

You do not have to scratch your head, Mr. Speaker, because you and I were both here in the House. We were called back for one or two days to deal, on an emergency basis, with Bill C-67. You remember that debate. The Bill was supposed to ensure that federal prisoners incarcerated in our penitentiaries who were considered violent would not automatically be released from prison after serving only two-thirds of their term, the way the previous legislation read. They could be kept in prison until the end of their term and not released on this ridiculous business called mandatory supervision.

I do not know about you, but I was rather pleased to be here at that time and take part in that debate and see that legislation passed into law. I felt the Bill was going to help restore the faith and confidence of Canadians, what perhaps might be called the silent majority of Canadians, in our criminal justice and parole systems, and in the National Parole Board itself.

Here we are two years down the road and what has happened? Did Bill C-67 do what it was supposed to do? Did it restore the confidence of Canadians in the system? Did it make sure that violent offenders were kept in prison to the end of their term rather than being released early? If it did, why is it that in Toronto earlier this year one Melvin Glenn Stanton, described by police as a dangerous sexual offender, after being convicted of bludgeoning to death a 14-year-old girl, was released to a halfway house in Toronto? He then went missing from that halfway house and, as you know, was subsequently convicted of the stabbing death of one Tempa Conter in Toronto.

If the Bill had worked the way it was supposed to work, why was it that again earlier this year in Toronto one Herbert Ray Smith, described by police as violent and mentally unstable and sexually aggressive toward women, was released on mandatory supervision? Again, he walked away from a halfway house. Why was it that earlier this year, again in Toronto, one Kevin Paul Mott, considered dangerous by police, was allowed out on a two-day pass and again walked away from the halfway house even though he had previously been convicted and had a record which included five robberies and assaults with dangerous weapons? If that Bill C-67 which you and I came back here to deal with had been effective, why was it that again earlier this year in Toronto one Lawrence James Munro, who was charged, convicted and imprisoned for rape and assault and was considered violent, was out in a halfway house and again walked away?

It is no wonder, with that sort of record, that Canadians continue to have anything but confidence in our criminal justice and parole systems. Recently, as you know, a poll was released which showed something like 68 per cent to 70 per cent of Canadians said they had absolutely no confidence whatsoever in the criminal justice system.

You know that this message has got across to the Solicitor General of Canada (Mr. Kelleher), apparently, and he says he is going to do something about it. In June of this year he announced that he was going to make changes in the parole system. You will remember he said that he was going to abolish the system of earned remission. He was going to replace it with a short statutory period not to exceed 12 months. He was going to reduce the time in which prisoners were eligible for full parole from one-third to one-half their sentence, and he was going to limit day parole eligibility to six months prior to full parole eligibility. That is not going quite as far as the Sentencing Commission wanted in their recent report. They said we should abolish parole altogether. However, it would seem to be moving somewhat in the right direction.

• (1825)

That was announced in June. We have been sitting all summer on an emergency basis. We have not seen any Bill. We have seen nothing other than a draft Bill that was submitted to the House. The Solicitor General has gone on to say, as you know, that in granting parole the risk to the public should be the only criteria for that. In fact, when he defines that he says that parole will be granted if an offender does not present "undue risk of re-offending while on parole".

What has been happening all this time? Surely that is what has happened. We have had an undue risk of re-offending because all these people have been re-offending while on parole. Words are not enough any more. The public has had enough words and wants some action. When are we going to get some action, Mr. Parliamentary Secretary?

Mr. William C. Winegard (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, it is always a pleasure to respond to the penetrating analysis supplied by the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway).

In the summer, 1986, as the Member has said, this Government acted to close one loophole in the process of releasing violent offenders, that being the passage of Bill C-67. As

Members will recall, its purpose was to ensure better protection of the public from dangerous offenders by authorizing the Parole Board to keep such offenders in custody until the last hour of their court-imposed sentence if necessary, even if they had earned remission in the penitentiary.

Not only did the Government act responsibly in promoting Bill C-67, and not only is it working generally as intended, but we know that we must and we are prepared to go further as was promised at that time.

In July of this year as you have just heard, Sir, the Solicitor General (Mr. Kelleher) announced major new proposals to reform the parole system in Canada. On August 25, these proposals were tabled in the form of draft legislation in this House.

I might go on to point out that the Parliamentary Committee on Justice and Solicitor General's Review of Sentencing and Parole has resoundingly endorsed these proposals, as has a sizeable portion of the public. Under these reforms, inmates who have committed violent crimes will be required to serve one-half of their sentences or 10 years, whichever is less, before being eligible for full parole. Currently all federal inmates are eligible after serving one-third or seven years.

This new measure has been introduced to ensure that there is more balance between sentences imposed by the court and the decisions made by the parole system. To replace mandatory supervision, the Solicitor General has proposed a short statutory period, never to exceed 12 months, for transition to the community prior to the end of every sentence, but always subject to the detention provisions of Bill C-67.

The actions of the Government are intended both to protect the public better and to support the efforts of very dedicated and professionally responsible correctional workers trying to do their best to protect the public within the limits of the law. I believe we owe a debt of gratitude to these professionals and the community agencies for their dedication to this thankless task on our behalf. The Government is committed to ensuring better the safety of the Canadian public. The Solicitor General has acted on this commitment and continues to act on it. With the support and encouragement of all Members of the House, particularly those with the understanding of the Member for York East we can make this country a safer place for everyone.

Mr. Redway: Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member will table and introduce first reading of that Bill, I will give my unanimous consent tonight.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Unfortunately we cannot do that.

The motion to adjourn the House is deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at two o'clock.

The House adjourned at 6.30 p.m.

HEALTH

ENVIRONMENTAL SENSITIVITY DISEASE

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, thousands of Canadians suffer health problems because of a distinct sensitivity to food additives, chemicals, and other synthetic substances. Only recently has this been recognized as a physical illness. For example, last year the Ontario Medical Association called on Governments to increase research on causes, effects and treatment of environmental sensitivity, also called the 20th century disease.

Individuals, organizations, and even the Human Rights Commissioner have asked the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) to take action on this serious health problem. Instead of action he has only sympathy. We urge him to recognize the existence of this illness, to instruct his Department to become competent in the field, to launch a campaign to educate health professionals, and to consult with those who suffer from environmental sensitivity. In short, we urge him to stop sympathizing and start acting.

PUBLIC WORKS

EDMONTON—OPENING OF CANADA PLACE

Mr. William G. Lesick (Edmonton East): Mr. Speaker, tomorrow, September 22, 1988, will be a day of significance in Edmonton. At noon we will witness the official opening of Canada Place in Edmonton. The building is a blend of award winning architectural design, leadership by Trizec Corporation, construction by Ellis-Don, and dedication and work by 1,500 Edmontonians.

This structure will house 29 federal government Departments, the most important being the head office of the Western Diversification Office, as well as 3,200 employees. Canada Place also has shops, a conference room, a National Film Board theatre, fountains, restaurants, and day care facilities. The downtown core will be revitalized with the addition of 1,000 parking stalls which are desperately needed by the Convention Centre.

This building represents a new start; a new era of reliance on the private sector to do what it does best; a new era of co-operation between government and industry; a new method of building financing at a time when government dollars were tight and construction jobs were desperately needed. The presence of the federal Government in Edmonton will now be fully recognized with the magnificent $150 million Canada Place. It is a beautiful building for a beautiful city which I am proud to represent.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

FAMILY VIOLENCE—TREATMENT OF WOMEN

Ms. Marion Dewar (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, women have long fought for recognition of their right to a life of dignity, respect, and justice. Unfortunately this struggle is still to be fought in the court system of this country.

Violence is an unacceptable social behaviour in our society, yet when it is committed against women and their children, new standards seem to apply. A woman's behaviour is examined as if her words or actions could justify being beaten, pushed, kicked or verbally abused. Light sentences, if any, are handed out to men considered to be respected members of the community. Importance is given to keeping a family together even though the violence usually escalates.

The Kirby Inwood trial was unfortunately an example of the treatment of women by our justice system. For brutally beating his son and wife this man was given 30 days and three years probation. The pain and fear he inflicted on his family will certainly be with them for many years. Their suffering must start to take priority in our justice system.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

INDECENT ACTS—PUBLICATION OF NAMES OF CONVICTED PERSONS

Mr. Jim Jepson (London East): Mr. Speaker, recently in London the Vice Squad arrested 42 homosexual men for committing indecent acts in public washrooms in two parks and a shopping plaza. I commend the press and the police for withholding the names of these individuals until they have had their day in court. However, I believe it is absolutely imperative that, upon conviction, for the protection of society, these names be released.

In many instances we have repeat offenders who get off with either a suspended sentence or a small fine. I think it is very important that society be protected and these names be publicized.

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

COST OF PRESCRIPTION DRUGS

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, the evidence is out and it is conclusive: Tory Bill C-22 is causing increases in the cost of prescription drugs.

Some Hon. Members: Nonsense!

Mr. Dingwall: The evidence was adduced by the Senate Committee reviewing Bill C-22, and more particularly Bill S-15. The committee report said:

> Most of the evidence indicates that in the past year drug prices have increased at rates in excess of the rate of increase in the Consumer Price Index.
> Representatives of Green Shield Prepaid Services Inc. (Green Shield), a large Ontario-based prescription drug plan, told the Committee that for the period from January 1, 1987 to January 1, 1988 the average ingredient cost of the prescriptions filled under its plans increased by 12.6 per cent.

It is clear that the Tory promise to maintain increases in the price of drugs below the CPI was wrong. Drug prices are going up. The Tories have breached their commitment to the Canadian people and I tell them that this ought to be rescinded and a new Act put in place in order to protect senior citizens and other consumers all across the country.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

HONG KONG VETERANS—CALL FOR COMPENSATION BY JAPANESE GOVERNMENT

Mr. Albert Girard (Restigouche): Mr. Speaker, time is definitely not on the side of our Hong Kong veterans. Many did not make it through the brutal incarceration inflicted upon them by the enemy. Many more who managed to survive have lived diminished lives as a result. Today there are fewer than 700 survivors, yet a major crime against those veterans has not been redressed.

The issue of compensation has been raised on the floor of the British House of Commons, the U.S. Senate, and the UN. The time is right for our Government to take forceful action. Japan owes our Hong Kong vets equitable compensation for the slave labour, starvation, beatings, and unsanitary living conditions it forced on our boys.

This Government must do everything in its power to ensure fair compensation is paid by the Japanese Government without further delay. In this case time really is of the essence.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

NEWFOUNDLAND—BELL ISLAND'S REJECTION OF INDUSTRIAL WASTE STORAGE PROJECT

Mr. Jack Harris (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, the community of Bell Island was rejected by this Conservative Government as a site for a federal penitentiary, despite meeting the criteria and having special economic needs. Hot on the heels of this decision a company called Canadian Ecology Ltd. offered to use the community as a dump for industrial waste. "The abandoned mines would be perfect to store industrial waste", they said. "We would offer 100 jobs", they said. "It would be perfectly safe", they said.

They thought that the people of Bell Island were desperate and had no choice. Well, the people of Bell Island said no, and 2,401 of about 2,800 adults signed a petition opposing this use and they organized meetings against it. Together they said no to being a dumping ground for the waste of an industrial society that will not let them participate in a meaningful way.

I congratulate and support their opposition to this project and congratulate them on their victory in having it stopped. I will continue to work with and fight for the people of Bell Island in their effort to achieve real economic development. Working together, the people of Bell Island have stopped this project. Working together, we will fight to ensure Bell Islanders are given real alternatives to unemployment and lack of opportunity.

THE ECONOMY

EXCHANGE VALUE OF DOLLAR

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, the value of a nation's currency in the international market place is very much a measure of the world's confidence in the ability of that country to govern itself effectively and pursue sensible economic and social policy.

This is reflected in the recent behaviour of the Canadian dollar. When the polls were showing the possibility of a Turner-Broadbent win in the next election and the consequent ripping up of the free trade agreement, our dollar plunged to 80.63 cents U.S.

Now the polls indicate a clear-cut victory for the Conservatives, confidence has been restored, and our dollar stands at over 82 cents.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

NOVA SCOTIA—PROPOSED SALE OF SYDNEY POST OFFICE

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, the post office in Sydney is one of the most profitable in the country. Labour costs as a percentage of total revenues are 12.5 per cent of every dollar earned. If you exclude income from postage meters, priority post, and postal boxes, labour costs are still a very reasonable 45.8 per cent of every dollar earned.

Revenue projections for the current year are up by over $109,000 to $2,312,322. The people of Sydney have demonstrated their support for the Canada Post outlet by their utilization of this Canada Post outlet in the downtown area.

Yet despite all this good economic news, the Government through the Corporation is closing the downtown outlet and moving it to a low traffic area. The Government, with no regard for the workers, has plans to sell the Sydney post office to one of its corporate friends who will then reap the benefits of this very profitable operation.

POLITICAL PARTIES

CANADIANS' CHOICE

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, more and more, Canadians choose the team that will have to govern in the coming years, which will be a time of change. The Constitutional Agreement, co-operation among the provinces, the quality of social programs, our control over the economy, our action on the deficit and our job creation are acknowledged and Canadians are getting ready to say yes to the team made up of people like Wilson, de Cotret, Crosbie and Mulroney. Canadians want to have nothing to do with the bounty hunters and the rats. Nor will Canadians want to have anything to do with the eccentric and marginal world of Broadbent—they never have!

ATOMIC ENERGY OF CANADA LIMITED

CANADA-THAILAND FOOD IRRADIATION TECHNOLOGY AGREEMENT

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I would like to call the attention of the House to an agreement between Atomic Energy of Canada Limited and the office of Atomic Energy for Peace in Thailand. This has to do with technology transfer, particularly the transfer of food irradiation technology.

Two things about the agreement concern me, Mr. Speaker. The first is that part of the contract refers to the obtaining of Canadian governmental regulatory approval for the sale of three irradiated Thai foods in Canada, apparently papaya, mangos, and shrimp. The second aspect of the agreement, Article 6, provides that AECL will be compelled to take back any of the spent Cobalt 60.

Many times in this House I have said the Government's eagerness to approve food irradiation in this country and AECL's eagerness to prove that it has solved the nuclear waste problem have been related more to global marketing strategy vis-à-vis food irradiation than to anything else. I think we see here in this agreement between Canada and Thailand the proof of that claim.

I would ask the Government to explain why it is setting Canada up to being a nuclear waste depository for the entire world.

NATIONAL PARKS

BANFF AND LAKE LOUISE—RENTS CHARGED RCMP AND PUBLIC SERVANTS

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, our Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Ministers of this Government want all Canadians to be treated fairly. The rent charged RCMP and public servants who are living in government-owned houses in Banff and Lake Louise is excessive and out of line with rents charged in all other national parks and in all towns in Alberta of similar size.

Section 128 of the Treasury Board manual states:

> The base shelter shall be reduced by 25 per cent where there is imposed occupancy.

The occupancy of these houses is imposed. There is no other available accommodation. They either live in these houses or they don't work. And the bureaucrats by placing a rigid meaning on the word "imposed" have been chiselling these dedicated police and workers. If we want to appear to be fair these excessive rents should be reduced immediately by 25 per cent.

Oral Questions

CANOLA INDUSTRY—EFFECT OF UNITED STATES EXPORT ENHANCEMENT PROGRAM

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, canola is a triumph of Canadian agricultural research and technological development. However, today the Canadian canola industry is being destroyed by the United States Export Enhancement Program. Sales are down by 15 per cent in just the first six months of this year. This represents a loss of income of $150 million to Canadian agriculture producers, stolen away by the U.S. export subsidy programs. This is a direct violation of the Prime Minister's (Mr. Mulroney) trade deal with the United States.

The United States undertook in that agreement to take into account Canada's interests in the use of the Export Enhancement Program. This the Americans are not doing. Likewise they are violating the "standstill provision" of the agreement.

The viability of the Canadian Canola industry is at stake in this matter. I call on the Government to make the United States Government live up to the terms of the agreement.

GOVERNMENT RECORD

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, yesterday in Toronto the Prime Minister accused others of "grubby little scenarios". I want to tell him that he is the master architect of grubby little scenarios.

The Prime Minister spent four years gutting the Department of the Environment. Now he pretends to have a new national vision for the environment.

He said he wouldn't raise taxes by one cent and during the past four years he has imposed the heaviest tax burden in history on Canadians to the amount of $26 billion.

He talked about a commitment to fiscal responsibility—

Mr. Speaker: I do hesitate to interrupt the right hon. gentleman but I think the preamble may be going on a bit too long. I ask the Leader of the Opposition to put his question.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, I am leading up to a question for the Prime Minister.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): And to give him time to prepare, I am setting out his grubby little scenario.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): He said he was going to have fiscal responsibility, paraded his Minister of Finance around, and dished out millions of dollars as a pre-election slush fund for the Conservative Party. Leading to the question, Mr. Speaker, he said he was against—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: I would ask the right hon. gentleman to put his question.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I know you understand the sequence of this question, Mr. Speaker. He said he was against a free trade deal with the United States and yet he signed a deal selling out our country.

Why did he negotiate a comprehensive trade deal with the United States after he told Canadians he was against any such deal? Will the Prime Minister explain to the country that grubby little scenario?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, my right hon. friend began with some complaints about the Government's environmental record. The environmental record involved the St. Lawrence River clean-up of $110 million; the Halifax Harbour clean-up; the Acid Rain Program of $150 million for smelter modernization; federal-provincial Accords on sulphur dioxide emissions with a $350 million federal contribution; the Canadian Environmental Protection Act—the first environmental Act of any substance that was passed by this Chamber in a good number of years; the Niagara River pollution cleanup; the Environmental Conference in June—

Mr. Allmand: Window dressing.

Mr. Mulroney: My hon. friend from N.D.G. says window dressing, and a lot of rhetoric.

Mr. Allmand: A lot of baloney.

Mr. Mulroney: How would he have qualified—

An Hon. Member: Smoke and mirrors.

Mr. Mulroney: I am trying to answer my hon. friend, Mr. Speaker. Is he opposed to South Moresby, to the cleanup of the St. Lawrence River, the Halifax Harbour, or Hamilton Harbour? He may be opposed to these in the House of Commons but he should not go across the country saying that he is opposed to these very, very appropriate environmental plans for the people of Canada.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT—PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I think the country deserves to know the truth about the last-minute deathbed conversion of the Prime Minister on the environment. I will concede one thing to him. He was right yesterday when he said in Toronto that Canadians will judge him on his record of free trade.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: The Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition has the floor.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, I just hope that the flapping of the fins of the trained seals will not be taken off my time.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Canadians will judge whether this Prime Minister can be trusted. Does the Prime Minister deny that he said: "Free trade with the United States is like sleeping with an elephant"? Does he deny that he said: "Canadian plants would not be able to compete"? Does the Prime Minister deny that he said: "Canadians rejected free trade in 1911, they would do so again"? Does the Prime Minister deny that he said: "Free trade? It affects our sovereignty and I will have none of it"? How does the Prime Minister square what he said with what he has done to Canada in selling us out?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, does the Leader of the Opposition deny that he said that he would reduce the federal deficit by 50 per cent in his first term of office, and that he has spent four years as the Leader of the Opposition spending money that he and the Canadian people do not have?

This is going to be good. The Leader of the Opposition is getting coached by the Member from Winnipeg. This is going to be something to behold.

Our commitment was to the creation of jobs, new wealth and new prosperity for Canada. We said we would create new jobs. Canadians have created 1.3 million new jobs, bringing about a new degree of prosperity.

We said we would bring about new unity for Canada and we have unified Canada as never before. That is the commitment of a great national Party, and we have delivered on both of those fundamentals.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, the right hon. gentleman mentioned the Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry who has calculated that the grand total of all spending announcements, for the period May 30 to September 13 of this year, from the Conservative slush fund is $12.248 billion. That is what this Government has spent in the last three months, $12 billion dollars.

An Hon. Member: Table it.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I will be glad to table it.

PRIME MINISTER'S STATEMENTS CONCERNING FREE TRADE

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister did not answer the question, namely, which of his statements can be relied on and which cannot be believed. Does the Prime Minister deny having said that he was not in favour of a "comprehensive" trade agreement with the United States, but that he was for negotiating sector-based agreements instead? Does he deny having said that free trade would affect our sovereignty and that he would have none of it? Does he deny having said that U.S. laws providing for trade sanctions could not apply to Canada, and that's all there was to it? Why did the Prime Minister deceive Canadians on such a vital matter for the future of our country? Why should his statements be trusted in the next election campaign?

[English]

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition is now apparently being guided in regard to his calculations by the Member from Winnipeg. We should then find out what the objections are.

Is the objection to spending for the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency? Is the objection to spending for western diversification? Is the objection to spending for Hibernia, the development in offshore Newfoundland and Labrador? Is the objection to the deficiency payment for Canadian farmers, the largest deficiency payment? Where do the Liberals object? You can't have it both ways. You can't be in favour of farmers and against deficiency payments.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Is it fiscal responsibility to portion out $12 billion in the last four months?

Mr. Mulroney: My hon. friend is talking about fiscal responsibility. We will find out what he is against.

[Translation]

He asks me about Quebec and free trade. Premier Bourassa clearly said that Quebec's best interests are served by a free trade treaty. Jacques Parizeau is in favour of free trade. And more recently, a great French Canadian, Robert Campeau, came out in favour of free trade.

TRANSPORT

ROUTE CANADA—SITUATION OF WORKERS

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. The Government sold what is now Route Canada to three private businessmen for $29 million when the real property alone is worth well over $80 million. This allowed the businessmen, of course, to cream off millions of dollars to buy another private trucking company in the United States. It allowed the private businessmen to cream away $50 million from the Canadian taxpayers. It then allowed the private businessmen, once they had the American company, to close Route Canada, the Canadian company, throwing 2,500 men out of work, including 300 truckers who are owed by that company an average of $13,000 and cannot pay for their rigs. Now that the Government has created this mess, what will it do for the workers?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I said yesterday exactly what I will say today. We know that there was a choice to be made in 1986. It is obvious that the Liberal Party would have preferred to close the shop in 1986. That is what we hear today and what we heard yesterday.

What we proposed was to continue the operation of the company by selling the company to the private sector. Today my friend is describing some scenario without any legal consideration. We are waiting, as I said yesterday and I repeat today, to see the legal picture of Route Canada and what will be proposed by the company. I challenge my hon. friend to say that the company will not, for example, reorganize and do something other than what he described to the House of Commons.

I repeat what I said yesterday and what I told the contractors yesterday afternoon. There is a legal consideration here and we cannot stand aside from the legal consideration. I hope that my friend does not propose that I intervene for the contractors without any legal consideration involved at the present time.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, the Government has only ever been interested in one thing. Once it decided that Transport Route Canada was to close, the only thing it was interested in was laundering the bad news through the private sector so it would not have to give it out itself. For that the Government paid over $50 million in valued land belonging to the people of Canada.

• (1430)

What is the Government going to do? Why is it ruining people's lives just to try to clean up its own sordid political messes? Does the Minister want to get into the trucking business? Here are the keys, because one of the truckers told me he can't make the payments on his rig because of what this Government has done.

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, obviously, anyone could fall into the trap set by the Hon. Member.

Mr. Speaker, the fact remains that in 1986, the Liberal Party would have closed the company, which is hardly consistent with what Liberal policy has been in the transport sector, since for the past four years, it has been asking the Government to support all companies that are losing money, and today, after the Government sold the company to the private sector and 2,700 jobs were maintained for two years—I repeat, it is very likely that various scenarios will be suggested, since they are already prepared to table requests for millions of dollars.

I repeat what I said yesterday. Canadians remember 1982, when that Party put $34 million in Maislin, and the following year, the whole business was bankrupt, everybody lost his job, and the Liberal Party had spent another $34 million. They did that kind of thing for a long time, but I think today, Canadians know the score.

HEALTH

PRESENCE OF DIOXINS IN FOODS

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Canada has been treated to the spectacle of a Minister of the Environment who chases ambulances to the scene of an environmental disaster and then pops up with a press kit. Well, Canadians are really concerned about preventing pollution in the environment.

What does the Government plan to do—and what is it doing—about a really serious environmental problem, namely, dioxins in our food because there are dioxins in the environment? There is a report of the Minister's expert advisory committee on dioxins from 1983. The Liberals slept on it for a year. This Government has had four years. What is the Government doing to act on these recommendations which say we ought to eliminate the sources which put dioxins into the environment? It has been four years and dioxins are not yet even on the toxic substances list and cannot be regulated. What is the Government doing about the serious environmental problem of pollution besides just reacting to the crisis after it has been discovered?

Hon. Pierre H. Cadieux (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I just want to remind my hon. colleague, in the absence of the Minister of National Health and Welfare who is absent on government business today, that the Minister did reply to that question yesterday. So did the Minister of the Environment, if my memory serves me right. I would direct my hon. colleague to page 19440 of Hansard. I think the answer is pretty clear.

Ms. McDonald: Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Minister of the Environment misled the House in answering my question on precisely this matter.

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Mr. Speaker: I am sure the Hon. Member would not have meant that the Hon. Minister was intentionally misleading, and I would expect she would make that clear in the remainder of her question.

Ms. McDonald: Mr. Speaker, I repeat, the Minister of the Environment yesterday misled the House—

Some Hon. Members: Out!

Ms. McDonald: —in answering my question, namely—

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Ms. McDonald: —he stated that through the Canadian—

Some Hon. Members: Out!

Mr. Speaker: I would ask the Hon. Member to make it clear to the Minister and to the House that she is not suggesting the Minister intentionally misled the House.

Ms. McDonald: Mr. Speaker, I didn't say intentionally. I simply said "misled".

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

ABSENCE OF DIOXINS FROM LIST OF TOXIC SUBSTANCES

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, the Minister's reply referred to "the Canadian Environmental Protection Act which, among other things, manages toxic chemicals, including dioxins, through their full life cycle—" I have a copy of the Act and dioxins are not on this list. So I would like to ask the Prime Minister why dioxins are not on the list of toxic substances? They were certainly not put there by the Liberals. They ignored the problem for long enough. Why has this Government not put them there? And how is the Government going to deal with the serious problem of dioxins in the environment and, therefore, in the food supply, when it has not even begun to put them on the toxic substances list?

Hon. Pierre H. Cadieux (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, again, with respect to the question of food, since the Hon. Member did refer to that, I refer to the answer of my colleague, the Minister of National Health and Welfare, who said yesterday, and I quote particularly his last paragraph in Hansard at page 19440:

> I want to reassure the Member and the House that the Government is not looking at changing regulations in order to fit the new requirement whereby trace amounts of dioxins are found under these sources but rather to eliminate dioxins, and that remains our purpose.

[Translation]

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, do we need a crisis like the one at Saint-Basile-le-Grand for every toxic substance? What is the Government going to do to eliminate these very hazardous substances from the environment, when the substance is not mentioned on the list? Shouldn't we start with the list and then set up a program to eliminate the substance? Do we have to wait until the next crisis?

Hon. Pierre H. Cadieux (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I think that for once I agree with the Hon. Member. Obviously, no one sees a crisis as a way to solve the problem, if there is one, Mr. Speaker. I think that using the example of Saint-Basile-le-Grand to show that we only act when there is a crisis, is totally wrong.

I would like to refer to Hansard at page 19439, where the Minister of the Environment also said, although the Hon. Member omitted this passage in her quote:

[English]

> In addition to that we have greatly tightened the rules and regulations surrounding the Canada-U.S. Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement. To boot, we have achieved, for the first time in the history of the country, a four-jurisdiction agreement on stemming the flow of industrial chemicals into the Niagara River by 50 per cent by 1996. Those are all initiatives of the Government of Canada on the very subject which the Hon. Member has mentioned.

And there are a lot more initiatives of this Government on the environment issue.

TRANSPORT

TRANSPORT ROUTE CANADA INC.—TRUCKERS' DEMANDS—MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland—Kent): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. Yesterday, the Minister met the truckers and promised they would get an answer today about their operating licences. The Minister has the authority to issue these licences, which means that the truckers would be able to continue their business and thus meet their financial obligations.

The truckers were back this morning, and unless the Minister takes action, they will not only be underfoot but literally on foot and out of work!

Has the Minister acted on the request of the truckers; and if not, when will he do so?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, yesterday, I said we would look at the Transportation Act to determine what our responsibilities and what our options are.

It is a fact, and the Hon. Member for Shefford ought to know, that the provinces have jurisdiction over this area, and I would have to suspend the provisions of the Transportation Act in order to—In other words, I would have to forget about provincial jurisdiction to be able to intervene. We are trying to do what we can, and we will try to get in touch with the provincial Governments to find out exactly what their position is. Obviously, we cannot give an answer today.

• (1440)

Mr. Robichaud: Mr. Speaker, I am sure the truckers are not at all pleased with this answer.

Mr. Boudria: Certainly not!

SETTLEMENT OF ACCOUNTS—REQUEST THAT MINISTER INTERVENE

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland—Kent): Mr. Speaker, will the Minister also ensure that the thousands of dollars owed these independent truckers and other workers by Transport Route Canada Inc. will be paid, and will he prevent Transport Route Canada Inc. from selling off its assets before all its accounts with the independent truckers and other workers are paid up? Before letting this company sell off its assets, we must make sure its accounts are settled. Will the Minister take action? Will the Minister be able to do what is necessary?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member will stop playing politics he knows perfectly well that in the case of a private company, the Minister of Transport has no authority to force that company to make payments on which it is in arrears, especially since the company has not filed for bankruptcy. The company has given no notice whatsoever. I repeat what I said earlier and that is that the Liberal Party has always ignored the legal implications and considerations governing the private sector, and just look at the disaster we had in 1984!

[English]

TRUCKERS' LICENCES AND HIGHWAY PERMITS

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to get some answers from the Minister in charge of privatization instead of from people who do not know anything about what is going on in transport. I want to raise the matter of the sale of CN Route to Route Canada. The Cabinet authorized this swindle of taxpayers, more than 2,000 employees, and about 350 truckers.

I will direct my question to the Deputy Prime Minister. These truckers are owed some $4 million in unpaid fees and freight rates from Route Canada and they cannot continue to operate. These truckers do not have their licence plates, and the Highway Traffic Board permits as well as the licence fees and the insurance are in the hands of Route Canada.

Would the Minister now intervene and request the provincial highway traffic boards to cancel all the permits of Route Canada and allow them to be taken up by these independent truckers?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, of course my friend is a specialist in transport. I understand why Canadians have always kept that expertise on that side of the House of Commons.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Bouchard (Roberval): Route Canada is a company which is officially in operation in this country. As long this company is legally in operation we do not have the ability to cancel its permits. It is a company which operates officially in this country.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, they just do not care what they have done to people with privatization.

REQUEST FOR ESTABLISHMENT OF JUDICIAL INQUIRY

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Would the Prime Minister be good enough to use his good offices to ensure that the employees and the truck operators under Route Canada be guaranteed first call on any cash or assets of Route Canada, and then order and set up a judicial inquiry into the sale and the operations of Route Canada since it was taken over?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Minister—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mulroney: I know the Liberals do not view this as a serious matter but I am trying to answer a serious question from the NDP.

Mr. Boudria: We were there to meet with them. Were you, Brian?

Mr. Axworthy: He was at the Empire Club.

Mr. Nunziata: Tell us about your trucking experience.

Mr. Speaker: The Right Hon. Prime Minister.

Mr. Mulroney: Mr. Speaker, I thank you. I am trying to answer a serious question from my friend in the NDP and we are both being obstructed by the Liberals who apparently care very little about it.

My hon. friend asks a very legitimate question. The distinguished Minister of Transport met yesterday with representatives of the truckers. He has undertaken to initiate the necessary inquiries. He is clearly looking for an appropriate and helpful solution. I know that in that process he will bear in mind the suggestions made by the distinguished Member from Regina whose expertise is widely noted in this area.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): You just got him defeated. He's washed up.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

ELECTIONS

PLACEMENT OF CHIEF ELECTORAL OFFICER'S ADVERTISEMENTS

Mr. Ross Belsher (Fraser Valley East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Many of us are expecting an election in the not too distant future and we have heard from the Canadian Community Newspapers Association that the Chief Electoral Officer might be planning to reduce the number of publications in which he puts the advertising for the upcoming election, and resort mainly to the daily newspapers.

In that the local papers are important in rural communities, and many of them are delivered free of charge to every household, some of which may not receive dailies, can the Minister request the Chief Electoral Officer to review this decision and, hopefully, change it?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister, President of the Privy Council and Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the Hon. Member for that question. I have received a number of representations regarding the issue that he has brought forward and I have, in fact, made representations to the Chief Electoral Officer in a telephone call this morning.

He indicated that he is already in the process of acting upon some of the representations that individuals have made to him. He assures me that he will be making the necessary exceptions wherever possible to ensure that the broadest possible coverage will be carried out in the rural areas in terms of advertising.

IMMIGRATION

LOCATION OF OFFICE IN MINISTER'S RIDING

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. The immigration office at 130 Bloor Street in Toronto was closed on August 25, relocated in the Minister's own riding one and a half blocks from her campaign office, began operating on September 6, and yesterday, after complaints from area residents, and after blaming her own officials, the Minister quickly decided to wind down the operation and move it elsewhere.

This chain of moving episodes gives the clear appearance that her obligations as a national Minister in charge of a national Department have been juggled to satisfy her own personal political interests in her own riding. Why did the Minister permit the office to move into the riding in the first place? Was this move simply a politically appetizing venture that quickly went sour?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, first, I found out about this office probably about 24 hours before the Hon. Member did. There was a decision made in our Department under my predecessor, my colleague to my right, in order to serve our immigration clients, that the policy of the Department—and it is a good one— would be to open offices to serve the public in areas where there is a high demand.

It was decided to open an office in Scarborough and in North York. As the Hon. Member well knows, Eglinton Avenue is not in North York and the location that was chosen is in a neighbourhood with small retail shops, a residential area with seniors, and no parking.

The officials of my Department, in their ongoing commitment to improve the service, are going to be doing something about the line-ups at that office and at other offices in Toronto. They will be looking at a more appropriate location for this office in an area that is better served, a commercial area or an area near public transport.

Mr. Marchi: Mr. Speaker, the Minister might as well put the office on wheels. One must really stretch one's imagination to believe that a Minister, who is supposed to be on top of her Department, did not know that an office was going squarely in the middle of her riding, one and half blocks from the Conservative campaign office for the next election. That really stretches the imagination.

COST OF RELOCATING OFFICE

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): I will direct my supplementary question to the Minister. The Regional Director of Public Works in Toronto has refused to release any financial information to anyone with the exception of the Minister and her colleague, the Minister of Public Works, which I find offensive as a Canadian.

Therefore, can the Minister inform this House what the final costs were to close the office at 130 Bloor Street, relocate it in her riding, break the lease agreement, and move it yet again?

How many taxpayers' dollars have been scandalously wasted in order to subsidize the Minister's own political interests in her riding, in first having the office come to the riding and then relocating it?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of Employment and Immigration): First, Mr. Speaker, there is the question if it is determined that the office will be moved to another location, and I should say that this is not an appropriate location either for the neighbourhood or for the clients it serves. People who come to that office do not have a place to park.

Mr. Boudria: Why is it there?

Mrs. McDougall: It is in the wrong place. I have already said that.

An Hon. Member: You are in the wrong place.

Mrs. McDougall: We have started to open some branch offices. We have opened one in Brampton. There will be another one in Scarborough in November. We have established criteria for doing this in immigration offices. One of the criteria that will be added, as I think is appropriate, is whether the neighbourhood is a suitable location, whether it is here or anywhere else.

I can assure the Hon. Member that the money will not be wasted, nor will the space.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

CFB—SUFFIELD—PRE-1968 NERVE GAS TESTS

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Defence. The Minister has confirmed in a recent letter to me regarding nerve gas tests at CFB Suffield: "Before 1968, there was a small number of nerve agent tests, mostly conducted in the laboratory, in which people participated".

Yesterday, neither the Minister nor his Associate, nor the ADM responsible, knew how many people were tested or were involved in how many tests over how many years prior to 1968. If we do not know who the participants were in these tests of deadly nerve gases, how can the Minister be so sure as he said in his letter to me that none has suffered any lasting ill effects?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Because, Mr. Speaker, in trying to reconstruct the records of some 20 years ago, what we found was that in the vast majority of instances the people who participated were themselves civilian researchers at DRES. Employees at DRES are required to take annual medical check-ups, and over the course of that time at no time was there a single instance when we found any long-term effects of exposure to nerve gas whatsoever.

NUMBER OF TESTS

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, the Minister is continuing to be evasive on this subject.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Ms. Jewett: I have asked how many there were, who they were—

Miss MacDonald: He just answered that.

Ms. Jewett: His Assistant Deputy said there were 10 or 12 tests. How many tests were there? Has there been any follow-up on those who submitted to these tests?

Mr. Kempling: Yes.

Miss MacDonald: He just said it.

Ms. Jewett: Tell me exactly who was subject as a guinea pig to these nerve gas tests?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I think any reading of Hansard will show that I answered the question that was asked. Now the Hon. Member changes the question.

Ms. Jewett: I said how many. That was the question.

Mr. Beatty: If she will permit me to answer the question instead of shouting—

Ms. Jewett: How many were involved?

Mr. Beatty: If the Hon. Member will permit an answer I will be glad to give it.

We have gone back. There have been none in the past 20 years whatsoever.

Ms. Jewett: I said before 1968.

Mr. Beatty: During the 1960s we have been able to identify some nine separate tests. We are looking for information on that at the present time. In terms of who was involved, as I have indicated, in the vast majority of instances it was civilian researchers at DRES themselves.

Ms. Jewett: Who?

Mr. Beatty: Who? Civilian researchers at DRES themselves.

Ms. Jewett: Any lasting effects?

Mr. Beatty: The Hon. Member asks how do we know, then, that there have not been any long-term effects. It is because civilian researchers at DRES are required to take annual medical check-ups. If the annual medical check-ups of these civilian researchers had shown any problems associated with exposure to nerve gas we would have known.

Notwithstanding that fact, I have asked my staff to go back and try to identify the individuals involved in each case and to do follow-up studies, notwithstanding the fact that never has there been any evidence of any long-term effects. But in view of the fears that are being created by the NDP, I think we owe it to these employees to do follow-up tests.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

ALLEGED INVESTIGATION OF MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. It concerns a matter which falls into the jurisdiction of the Solicitor General, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Can the Deputy Prime Minister confirm that the RCMP are in the process of conducting an investigation into the conduct of two Members of the Conservative Caucus, the Hon. Member for La Prairie and the Hon. Member for Hochelega—Maisonneuve? Can he indicate to the House the nature of the RCMP investigation?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Solicitor General I will take the question as notice. I have not been informed of any such investigation as Acting Solicitor General, but I will take the question and make the appropriate inquiries.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER MAKE INQUIRIES

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, I do not believe this matter should wait for the return of the Solicitor General. Will the Minister of Justice undertake to inquire into this particular matter and report to the House at the earliest opportunity?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I find this line of questioning quite offensive. The Leader of the Opposition at the beginning of this Parliament laid down what I thought were quite reasonable rules respecting the whole question of raising allegations on the floor of the House on the basis of some alleged investigation. Our system of justice requires that when allegations are made or investigations take place, they should be left to the RCMP who are a competent and dedicated police force in this country.

To have the Hon. Member stand up and suggest by innuendo that there is something wrong, I find that offensive and I think he should get up and apologize to the House and the Members in question.

HOUSING

METROPOLITAN TORONTO—FEDERAL SURPLUS LANDS

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Housing. When the Minister announced last week that the Government was releasing some 123 acres of surplus land at the Downsview Airport, the Minister also said that only about 25 per cent, or 30 acres of that land, would be put aside for affordable housing. That is like trying to use a garden hose to put out a forest fire.

In order to face the housing crisis in Toronto, is the Government prepared to release some if not all of the additional 25,000 acres of land that the federal Government owns in Metro Toronto, for the construction of affordable housing?

Hon. John McDermid (Minister of State (International Trade) and Minister of State (Housing)): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his question. We have commissioned the McLaughlin Report which assessed the available federal lands in Toronto and made certain recommendations. Those recommendations are being assessed at the present time.

One of the recommendations within that report concerned the lands at Downsview. I can also be very up front with him and say that that was the easiest one to deal with. Some of the others caused other problems that Mr. McLaughlin has presented in his report.

We are looking at those lands and, when we have an announcement, we will make it at the appropriate time.

CANADA MORTGAGE AND HOUSING CORPORATION—DEFINITION OF AFFORDABILITY

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, in response to questions from the press last Friday when the Minister made his announcement, the Minister or other Ministers who were at that press conference refused to define affordability. Indeed, when I asked the Minister again on Monday whether or not he could define affordability, he said he would not be pinned down on the question.

Is the Minister aware that his own Department, Canada Mortgage and Housing, has a definition of affordability? If he is aware of that, is he also telling us that it is the Government's intention to change that already long-established definition of affordability?

• (1500)

Hon. John McDermid (Minister of State (International Trade) and Minister of State (Housing)): Mr. Speaker, affordability differs from community to community, as the Hon. Member can appreciate, with cost of living that is taken into consideration and so on. To pin down what is affordable is a very difficult thing to do. The Hon. Member is not going to pin me down today on that.

As far as a definition from Canada Mortgage and Housing regarding affordability is concerned, those policies and those statements are always under review, and could be changed.

PUBLIC SERVICE

WAGES OF NAVAL DOCKYARD WORKERS

Mr. Pat Nowlan (Annapolis Valley—Hants): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the President of the Treasury Board my question is addressed to the Minister of State for the Treasury Board. It has to do with the dock workers on the East and West Coasts. I think the Minister is aware of this, and I appreciate the matter is in mediation, but I would like to ask the Minister a question. Would the Government be prepared to admit that wage parity on the East and West Coasts will come in time, and the mediation will be about how it is supposed to come in time, whether it is over a three-year contract period or a two-year contract period? Would he please answer that, Mr. Speaker?

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Speaker, for some time now it has been the policy of the federal Government to reflect local rates of pay for public servants which are comparable to that of workers in the private sector in the regions. My hon. friend asks me to reverse that policy by way of a question, and I am not prepared to do that.

The matter which he refers to is subject to mediation which started yesterday afternoon and may still be going on. For that reason I do not wish to comment on the actual question he asks, either in generalities or specifics.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

CLOSURE OF CERTAIN POST OFFICES—REQUEST FOR JUSTIFICATION

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister responsible for postal service or his representative. A document obtained from Canadian Press shows that some post offices to be closed by Canada Post are cost-effective. For a long time, the Minister has been telling us that he is closing these post offices because they are unprofitable. If someone could answer in the Minister's place, I would like to know the real reason for closing these post offices, which nevertheless are cost-effective.

[English]

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Speaker, it being 3.04 the Hon. Minister has left the House. I will put that question to him and he will try to get back to my hon. friend.

Mr. Speaker: The Chair recognizes the Hon. Member for La Prairie on a question of privilege.

PRIVILEGE

RECTIFICATION RESPECTING ALLEGED RCMP INVESTIGATION

Mr. Fernand Jourdenais (La Prairie): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the House and the Chair to give me a few moments. My name was just mentioned while I was outside the Chamber. A Member said that the RCMP was investigating me in my riding. I would like to see the "blues" tomorrow, but I would say that no one from the RCMP ever came to my riding or questioned me about anything whatsoever.

I think that before making such accusations, the Opposition Member should seek the facts, analyze them and know what he is talking about before starting to accuse some people publicly in this House.

FOOD AND DRUGS ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-328, an Act to amend the Food and Drugs Act (cautionary label on alcoholic beverage container).

Mr. Speaker: Shall the Hon. Member have leave to introduce the Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

LABOUR, EMPLOYMENT AND IMMIGRATION

CONCURRENCE IN FIRST REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, I would like to move that the first report of the Standing Committee on Labour, Employment and Immigration presented to the House on March 19 be concurred in.

Mr. Hawkes: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. Quite often in the Chamber there are prior discussions that lead to a general acceptance in the Chamber, quite often unanimously, of a committee report. I am unaware of any conversations that have gone on in advance of the motion on this occasion. I just wonder whether it was because I was away from the House on Monday when such discussions took place, or whether they did not take place. I wonder if we could have that clarified before we proceed.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. I recognize that while there have been pockets of prosperity in the last little while, particularly in southern Ontario, there are vast parts of the country that in fact are still experiencing excessive and unacceptable levels of unemployment. We had some discussions earlier in the day, I want to tell you, Mr. Speaker, indicating that perhaps this would be a good day to put on the record some of the concerns that opposition Members have regarding the unacceptable levels of unemployment in parts of Canada and the ways and means in which the Unemployment Insurance Act could be used to alleviate some of those concerns.

I simply want to say to the Parliamentary Secretary that, indeed, perhaps he has not been privy to these discussions, but there have been consultations and discussions I know between ourselves and the Official Opposition at least.

Mr. Speaker: Just to clarify the situation, the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grace—Lachine East (Mr. Allmand) has put a motion for concurrence. In the usual course—just so Hon. Members understand and so that the public watching and listening understand—that will of course now lead immediately to debate. The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary has said that often these matters are discussed between House Leaders. They are often discussed between House Leaders. However, the rules are clear, and whether or not there was any discussion, or as full a discussion as the Parliamentary Secretary might have wished, the situation is quite clear. The Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East is entitled to lead off on debate.

• (1510)

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, just so that Members can plan their day, I wonder if perhaps both Parties would be willing, through unanimous consent, to not see the clock at six o'clock so that we could continue subsequently to debate the child care legislation which was on the Government's agenda for today. It is very important to an awful lot of parents and children in this country.

An Hon. Member: Hear, hear!

Ms. Mitchell: Why did you not bring it in two years ago?

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, on the same point of order, we recognize that since the Government was very remiss in not allowing witnesses to appear before the committee and actually jamming this matter through the committee, we want to have adequate time on the floor of the House of Commons at least to allow Members of Parliament an opportunity to reflect on this issue of child care.

Since we are likely going to be here for another three or four weeks, I do not see any reason for wanting to rush this legislation through. We will debate it for the rest of the week, all of next week and the following weeks, until it is appropriately debated.

Mr. Allmand: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Minister of State.

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Speaker, I wish to advise the House that an agreement could not be reached under the provisions of Standing Orders 115 or 116 with respect to an allocation of time for the third reading stage of Bill C-144, an Act to authorize payments by Canada toward the provision of child care services, and to amend the Canada Assistance Plan in consequence thereof.

Under the provisions of Standing Order 117, I give notice of my intention to move a time allocation motion at the next sitting of the House, for the purpose of allotting one additional day for the consideration of disposal of proceedings of that stage of the Bill.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier on a point of order.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, this is completely out of order. The floor had been given to the Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East (Mr. Allmand), and I object to that kind of procedure, bootlegging in a motion by the Government, or giving notice of a motion, I should say, when the floor, with respect to all the Members here, was given in good faith to the Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East. I think that it is completely contrary to our rules.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I am perplexed at this initiative by the Government, because we have only had one speaker per Party, as far as I know. I have never heard of having time allocation or muzzling Parliament with only one speaker having had the floor on a piece of legislation that is not routine legislation. This has to be one of the most important social initiatives being considered by this House in decades. We had one speaker, and already we have time allocation for a single day. It is unprecedented.

Mr. Allmand: Mr. Speaker, I am on a point of order now, but I understood that I had the floor when I was interrupted by points of order on the other side. When you called Motions, I got up to move concurrence in my motion and to debate the motion. I had the floor.

Mr. Speaker: I must say that the Chair has been taken by surprise, and I would prefer that that not happen. I have listened to the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) and I understand his objection as far as what has happened. Strictly speaking, the Minister was recognized on a point of order, and I, of course, had no knowledge at all of what the Minister was going to rise on.

The Minister, when recognized on a point of order, can move a motion. I know that what has happened has angered some Members but, procedurally, the Hon. Minister is within the rules. I had recognized the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East for debate, but even if the Hon. Member had been speaking and a Minister had risen on a point of order, he could still be recognized by the Chair.

The Chair does not know in cases like this what the particular matter is. Even if I had, I think that the Hon. Minister is within the rules. The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I do not want in any way to question your comments—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gauthier: Just a minute. I am part of this House like everybody else, and I think that I have the right to say—

Mr. Speaker: Just a moment. The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier has asked to be heard again. The Hon. Member is an experienced and long-time Member of this House, and I think that he ought to have the attention of the House when he speaks. The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I do not want to quarrel with the way that you have interpreted the rule. I always believed that the point of order to put a motion under Standing Orders 116 or 117 had to be—

An Hon. Member: Notice.

Mr. Gauthier: It is notice. It has to be given on a bona fide point of order, but the Member could not be interrupted while he is making his speech. This is the first time in my experience that I have seen a Minister interrupt a Member while he had the floor, to put that kind of notice. The rules do not say anything else but that the Member or the Minister can rise in this place on a point of order, but not that he can interrupt a Member of this House. I think it is impolite and absolutely contrary to our rules to interrupt a Member who has the floor and do what the Minister just did. It should not be accepted.

Mr. Lewis: With respect, Mr. Speaker, I followed the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis). I did not make the interruption. I want to get that straight. I did not create the interruption in the speech of the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East (Mr. Allmand). I think that should be made very clear.

The rules state that notice shall be given. I respectfully suggest—and Mr. Speaker has confirmed that—that notice has been given under Standing Order 117. That is all that we intended to do, because the business of the day, which was child care, has been interrupted by this manoeuvre of the Opposition. That is fair ball. Let us have the two-hour debate. The notice has been given on time allocation.

Mr. Allmand: Mr. Speaker, I would like some clarification of your ruling, because as far as I am concerned it is the first time that I have seen this kind of ruling in my experience here in a long period of time. If I understand correctly, when you called Motions, I moved a motion that I had had on the Order Paper for a long time. I had been recognized to move and debate that motion.

It is also my understanding that points of order, once I moved that motion, were to relate to the motion that I had made and not to anything under the sun. For people to make points of order with respect to the motion that I had made, or with respect to the rules of the House as they impacted on that motion, I can understand, but to get up on a point of order and make a motion such as was made by the Hon. Member, as far as I can see, is unprecedented.

Does this mean that we shall now interrupt the motion that I had moved, debate the motion but by the House Leader, and then return to the motion that I had put?

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps I can assist the Hon. Member. Whatever Hon. Members may think of the tactics of either side at any given time, I have to call it as the laws of procedure prescribe.

I want to repeat again that I have made it clear that it has been done in the past. As I understand it, there is precedent for this. Whether the Hon. Minister's rising when he did is necessarily conducive to a generous reaction on the other side is another question.

With respect to the Hon. Member's concern, the Hon. Member was recognized for debate before the Hon. Member commenced debate. Another Hon. Member was recognized on a point of order, and then the Minister. The Minister has moved a notice of time allocation. No debate flows from that at this time. As a consequence, the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East has the floor in debate on his motion.

Mr. Allmand: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I want to remind you, Mr. Speaker, that in November of 1984, soon after the election of 1984, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) rising in this House tabled a financial statement in which he spoke about a broad range of cuts in Government and an approach to what he called fiscal responsibility of Government.

In making that statement in November of 1984, he said that there was an urgent need to reform our unemployment insurance system and that he was going to set up a commission to review the unemployment insurance system and to recommend changes. That was in November of 1984.

In July of 1985, some seven or eight months later—one might ask what that says about the urgency that the Minister of Finance mentioned in November of 1984—but in any case, in July of 1985 the Government set up a Royal commission, known as the Forget Commission, to examine and to recommend on changes with respect to the unemployment insurance system. That commission, the Forget Commission, sat and heard witnesses and travelled across the country for one and a half years, and it cost Canadians approximately $7 million. It tabled its report in November of 1986. In that report the Forget Commission made approximately 35 recommendations concerning unemployment insurance.

At that point the Standing Committee on Labour, Employment and Immigration had the report referred to it for additional study. That all-Party committee immediately set up a series of meetings both inside and outside of Ottawa. The hearings went on for more than three months, and finally the committee produced a report containing 90 recommendations. That report was tabled in this House on March 19, 1987. Immediately after tabling the report I moved a motion that this House concur in the recommendations of that report.

I want to make it absolutely clear that the report was almost unanimous. This was before parliamentary reform and I believe there were more Members on the committee then than there are now. However, it was unanimous except for two recommendations out of the 90. Recommendation No. 17 was subject to two dissenting votes, and another recommendation was opposed by one vote. What did the Government do? After several months of study the then Minister of Employment and Immigration totally rejected the recommendations of both the committee and the Forget Commission. This despite the fact that the Minister of Finance said in November of 1984 that reform of unemployment insurance was absolutely necessary. This despite the fact that a committee of this House unanimously recommended serious reform of the Unemployment Insurance Act.

For example, a principal recommendation was that unemployment insurance should be available to part-time workers. As we all know, the long-term trend since 1980 in the number of part-time workers has been going up. Management of many businesses are laying off full-time workers and replacing them with part-time workers. In a way that explains how the Government can boast of creating more jobs. Of course it is easy to create more jobs when you do away with one full-time job of 40 hours a week and replace it with two part-time jobs of 20 hours a week. You double the number of jobs, but it is part-time jobs replacing full-time jobs.

Not only that, if those part-time jobs involve fewer than 15 hours, the workers do not qualify for unemployment insurance. Not only that, they usually do not qualify for pension or health benefits. Shifting your workforce from full-time to part-time is a way of lowering the cost of salaries and benefits for your workers.

The committee also recommended that there be extended maternity and child care benefits under the unemployment insurance system. It also made an excellent recommendation that those on unemployment insurance be allowed to take training which would give them a better chance of finding employment. As we know, a good number of people who are laid off and collecting unemployment insurance benefits very often do not have the qualifications or training to get the jobs that require a higher technology and new skills. Under the present law you must be ready and available for work in order to qualify for unemployment insurance. If you go off and take a part-time education program or part-time training program you lose your unemployment insurance. We think this is a bit ridiculous and the committee unanimously recommended that in that case you be allowed to keep your unemployment insurance benefits.

The committee also made a very excellent recommendation with respect to strikes and lock-outs. Let us say you have a large industrial plant with several unions. One union goes on strike and the others do not but the company shuts down and the non-striking workers are locked out or laid off. They cannot collect unemployment insurance. That issue went to the courts, and it is true that the courts ruled in those circumstances that the workers who are laid off because of a strike should be eligible for unemployment insurance. However, this should be clarified in law.

There were also excellent recommendations with respect to overpayments. Members of this House from all Parties are faced time and again with constituents who tell them horror stories of how they, by a mistake not of their own making, received unemployment benefits that were too high. This sometimes would go on for five or six months. Finally the UIC realizes its mistake and tells the unemployed worker "We have paid you $3,000 or $4,000 too much, give it back". It has been absolutely cruel and harsh in its approach to those unemployed workers. The money they receive is less than their salary or wage, it is used to pay rent, buy groceries and so on to keep them going while they try to find another job, and how are they to pay back thousands of dollars to the UIC because it made a mistake?

Recently I had a case in my own constituency where a worker finally got a job and got back on his feet. Then the first thing the Unemployment Insurance Commission did was to seize his salary to collect the moneys which the UI had overpaid to him because it had made a mistake.

We can all understand claiming those moneys back from a worker who intentionally misled the Government or who put down false information, but the committee is not talking about that. The committee is talking about cases where the Unemployment Insurance Commission makes a mistake, overpays and then harshly tries to claim moneys back without any reasonable term of payment or whatever against the unemployed worker.

There were 90 recommendations made by the committee. Those are some of the major ones relating to unemployment insurance and part-time workers, unemployment insurance with respect to maternity and child care benefits, unemployment insurance with respect to job training while a person is unemployed, unemployment insurance with respect to workers who are put out of work through strikes and lock-outs, and unemployment insurance as it relates to overpayments and the collection of them.

Some recommendations also relate to the administration of the Unemployment Insurance Commission and how the commission can be made a more effective and efficient operation.

Since this report in March, 1987, Members in the Opposition have time and again put questions to the Government asking if it would move on certain recommendations of that report, but the Government has always refused. The Government appointed the Forget Commission but did nothing about its recommendations. We recognize that three of the recommendations of Forget were rejected by the parliamentary committee. The Forget Commission recommended that we do away with regionally extended benefits and benefits for fishermen. We rejected those recommendations and also rejected Mr. Forget's recommendations that UI benefits be calculated on an annualization formula, which is a complex one, and which would have resulted in extremely low benefits for unemployed workers, benefits which would not allow them to pay the required rent and costs for families. We rejected those major recommendations of the Forget Commission.

By the way, I said earlier that Forget had made 35 recommendations. I was wrong. He made 53 recommendations. Our committee made 90. While we rejected several of Forget's key recommendations, there were many recommendations in common between the Forget Commission report and the report of the Standing Committee on Labour, Employment and Immigration.

Despite the fact that this report of the committee was unanimous, Conservative Members included, and despite the fact that many of the recommendations were in common with the Forget Commission report, the Government did nothing. The Government is the one that said that something had to be done in November, 1984. The Government is the one that said we must set up this Royal commission to re-examine the unemployment insurance system to make it more effective, but it did nothing.

Just this year, because all of a sudden a specific case came to our attention with respect to maternity leave and child care, the Government made a very small amendment. In that case it is a typical example of this Government, that it will do nothing until we get a flagrant abuse of a system and then it is dragged kicking and shouting to make a reform that was necessary. In that case, Mr. Speaker, you will remember the case of one young mother who died giving birth to a baby. The father felt he had to leave work to take care of the newborn baby because the mother had died, but because he was the father he was denied unemployment insurance. Only the mother would have been allowed unemployment insurance to take care of the baby for the 15 weeks following the birth. This young man was a worker. By the way, he was a trucker, I believe. We have had the problems of truckers presented to the House in the last few days. However, because this father was not working as a trucker during his absence he lost his salary and could not collect unemployment insurance although he was taking care of a newborn baby as a result of his wife having died giving birth.

That individual case caused so much controversy that finally the Government did bring in a Bill just to correct that one instance. A year previous to that the Standing Committee saw that kind of problem and recommended that child care benefits under the Unemployment Insurance Act be considered for both father and mother, that either one should be able to receive those benefits if necessary to take care of a child, but the Government did nothing until we got the case to which I have just referred. Then the change was made because there was an uproar in the country and people felt that something had to be done.

These problems have not been resolved. In a recent case that went to the Federal Court of Canada, again with respect to maternity leave and child care benefits under the Unemployment Insurance Act, Mr. Justice Strayer of the Federal Court said that the Unemployment Insurance Act is:

—shot through with arbitrary distinctions—

He said that several of its provisions were discriminatory. Mr. Justice Strayer recommended that certain corrections be made. I asked a question a few weeks ago of the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mrs. McDougall) as to whether she would take action and correct these ambiguities in the law and introduce some of the recommendations of the unanimous committee report. She said she would not do that. She said she was waiting for the written judgment of Mr. Justice Strayer which she said she expected shortly.

Here we are with a situation which has been ongoing. There are many cases of unfairness, injustice, inconsistency, and arbitrariness under the Unemployment Insurance Act, waste in some cases and poor administration. The Government recognized that in 1984 but did nothing about it, and it should be no surprise to the Government that I now move concurrence in that report. I put that motion to the House several years ago and I have been waiting to see whether the Government would do something, but it has not.

Finally, with an election approaching, we want to put the Government to the wall to respond. I will be particularly interested to see how Conservative Members on that committee will now vote on my motion. Conservative Members who were an overwhelming majority on that committee supported the recommendations of the committee. As a matter of fact, the committee could not have reported if the members had not supported the recommendations. There was overwhelming support for them. Now I am asking the entire House of Commons to approve that report and to do something worthwhile for Canadian workers who are unemployed.

Every time we raise this issue of unemployment insurance benefits and the reform of the Unemployment Insurance Act and ask why the Government is not implementing the unanimous report, the Government does not answer the question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member's time has expired, but I will give him an extra minute to wind up.

Mr. Allmand: I will conclude my remarks, Mr. Speaker. When we ask the question, the Government simply says: "Look at the great number of jobs we have created". But a great percentage of the jobs that the Government has created are in Ontario. They are not in Atlantic Canada, not in the northern part of our provinces. In British Columbia there is over 10 per cent unemployment. The new jobs created are very regionally located. Despite that, over the last two months the rate of unemployment has increased. It has risen to 8 per cent, with over one million Canadians unemployed. There is an increasing rate of part-time work. The Government has done nothing about the older worker problem. The rate of unemployment among our youth is still well over 12 per cent.

Mr. Della Noce: It is better than it was.

Mr. Allmand: The Hon. Member again shows that he does not know what he is talking about. Of course it is better than it was in the depth of the recession of 1982-83. Before the recession in 1981, the rate of unemployment was 7.5 per cent. Here it is five years after the recession and the Government has not yet got the rate of unemployment down to 7.5 per cent. In the years of Liberal Government from 1965 to 1980, the rate of unemployment was 5.6 per cent. This Government cannot come anywhere near it, nor does it have the political will to do so.

• (1540)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions or comments? Debate.

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise to speak to the motion of the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East (Mr. Allmand). I note that his motion has been on the Order Paper since March of 1987, some 19 months. I have been waiting all those 19 months for him to raise this motion so we could address it, but in actual fact, the House was debating Bill C-144, the child care legislation, which is a critical piece of law for the millions of women in Canada who are working and need help. As such, I believe it is important for the House to get back to that debate.

I therefore move, seconded by the distinguished Hon. Member for Scarborough Centre (Mrs. Browes):

That this House do now proceed to the Orders of the Day.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Thacker), which was agreed to on the following division:

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

ORDER OF SPEAKERS ON BILL C-144

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. There have been some consultations regarding the speaking order. I know that yesterday the Speaker recognized the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), and he had the floor. He spoke for but a few minutes. However, I think the order in which the Speaker should have seen Hon. Members in the House yesterday was for the Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson) to be ahead of the Hon. Member for Regina West. The Hon. Member for Regina West has been very nice to let his place stand without prejudicing his right to speak so that he will be the next speaker in the order of speakers. There has been agreement in this respect.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, as a matter of courtesy to my colleague, the Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson), I hope the House will agree. I will explain to the Chair at some other occasion why. I was only on my feet for a minute and a half or two minutes. I would appreciate it if the Hon. Member for Trinity could take her proper place in the debate without precluding me from making my speech at a later time.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is it so agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan) has a private Member's motion which he wishes to debate on Friday. I have one which I planned to debate tomorrow. There have been discussions that we would want to switch these two private Members' hours. However, that requires the unanimous consent of the House. Therefore, I seek unanimous consent to switch the private Members' hour with the Hon. Member for York Centre on Thursday and Friday of this week.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is there unanimous consent?

An Hon. Member: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): There is not unanimous consent.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANADA CHILD CARE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed from Tuesday, September 20, consideration of the motion of Mr. Epp (Provencher) that Bill C-144, an Act to authorize payments by Canada toward the provision of child care services, and to amend the Canada Assistance Plan in consequence thereof, be read the third time and passed.

And on the amendment of Ms. Mitchell:

> That the motion be amended by deleting all the words after the word "That" and substituting the following therefor:
> "Bill C-144, an Act to authorize payments by Canada toward the provision of child care services, and to amend the Canada Assistance Plan in consequence thereof, be not now read a third time but be referred back to the Legislative Committee for the purpose of reconsidering Clauses 3, 4 and 5."

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank my colleague, the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), for his courtesy and co-operation.

I have been associated with the day care movement for a very long time, first as a volunteer and later as a professional in the field. I served as a volunteer on committees of the Ontario Welfare Council and the Social Planning Council in the late 1960s. Later, I was Executive Director of a day care agency. Thus my knowledge of the need for day care goes back for a long time before this Bill.

I am very sad indeed that the Bill that we have before us is in fact a cosmetic exercise severely flawed, opposed by all 40 organizations which gave evidence before the legislative committee. I am also sad that the Government, instead of accepting the fact that this is a flawed Bill which could be improved upon, and instead of allowing for serious study, is rushing it through with indecent haste before the election.

One speaker from our Party has spoken on the Bill, our critic, the Hon. Member for Outremont (Mrs. Pépin). There has been but one speaker from the New Democratic Party. Yet the Government has served notice of closure after only two speakers at third reading, all of that for a Bill which should have been one of the most important social policy initiatives of the decade, a Bill which was rushed through a committee.

The hearings at the legislative committee stage took less than one week. The 40 organizations which appeared before it were asked to curtail their briefs and to keep their presentations down to less than 30 minutes. This is from a Government that has been talking about doing something about day care for the last three years. It is a very sad and sorry effort, and greatly disappointing to people who care about the provision of quality child care in Canada.

Of course the need for day care is well established. In Canada there are now approximately 1.8 million children aged 13 and under whose parents either work or study 20 hours per week or more. At the present time we have 240,000 licensed spaces in centres and in homes. Granted, there are some parents who have quite satisfactory unlicensed arrangements, be it with relatives or friends, or be it in a competent home. However, they are the minority. There remains a great need for child care.

It is not only parents but I think every single citizen who needs to be concerned about the quality of child care. It is not enough that child care be in a safe, clean environment and that children be fed properly. Child care has to be emotionally supportive and intellectually stimulating if it is going to match what ordinary devoted parents give at home.

We all are or should be concerned not only about the provision of child care but about the quality of it. Parents these days are mainly in the workforce, and not for frivolous reasons either. If parents are going to be able to work with peace of mind they must be assured that children are happy and well cared for.

Let us look at some of the specifics of this Bill. First, the Government was totally unwilling to tackle the question of national standards. Granted, education has traditionally been a responsibility of the provinces. But when we are talking about the care of very young children, particularly children who do not have language yet and who are not able to tell their parents whether they are being well cared for or not, surely it is more than ever important that the standards be high and reliable and that they be consistent. With careful negotiation it would not be impossible to reach national standards. This is one of the reasons why my Party has proposed a national day care foundation to work with provinces in an attempt to reach national standards.

This Government, in its haste to get the Bill through, simply wants the committee and Members of this House to rubber stamp what has been compared by the officials, and the input from people who are knowledgeable in the field has been totally neglected.

Some groups that gave evidence before the legislative committee were indeed very knowledgeable in the field. We had parents' associations, briefs from early childhood educators, from day care action coalitions, and from the Metropolitan Toronto Child Services, which is perhaps one of the largest providers of day care services in the country. There was a brief from the National Federation of Nurses' Unions, the Canadian Teachers' Federation, the Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women, the National Action Committee on the Status of Women, the Canadian Jewish Congress, and so on. Every one of these groups, without exception, criticized the Bill, mainly on the grounds that it did not provide extra spaces and that it put a cap on growth.

The Government, in its haste to get a piece of cosmetic legislation out before the election in order to be able to say to the voters "we have put some money into day care", would not listen to any of these criticisms or make any attempt to do it better.

One of the most telling briefs was from Toronto, and it was from both a Toronto alderman and a staff member. They spoke to their particular situation, and they put forward the opinion that if the existing day care funding had been provided through the Canada Assistance Plan, they would foresee doubling the number of spaces available by 1995. As it is, they are facing a cut. The brief from Toronto pointed out, as did others, that the Bill before us would limit spending on child care over the next seven years and did not establish a framework for a comprehensive universal system of early childhood education and child care.

The National Action Committee on the Status of Women pointed out in its brief that provinces would prefer to access further funding for subsidies under the Canada Assistance Plan, but most provinces were unhappy with the new legislation. The new legislation, according to the National Action Committee which had conducted its own surveys, will slow the growth in child care spaces. It overlooks the needs of older children for after school care, limits capital spending after seven years, and sets an undesirable precedent by providing government funds for profit-making child care centres.

Perhaps we should make a distinction here. At the present time many profit-making child care centres in fact provide subsidized spaces for individual children. Metro Toronto, for one, purchases space in profit-making child care centres.

Provided that the child care centre is meeting basic standards and is providing an acceptable quality of care, I think that most of us have no objection to government funds being used for operating expenses in this way. However, I think we would have very grave reservations about using government funds to build privately owned day care centres or for capital funds initially. That is particularly important in view of the Canada-U.S. Free Trade Agreement, because there is no guarantee that franchised child care chains would not move into Canada.

While I do not share the NDP position that all commercial day care is bad, I have to look at the record and the record shows that commercial day care centres have a much higher incidence of infractions of provincial standards than do not for profit day care centres. Therefore, I would say that while they can be used they should be used very selectively, and I certainly would not want to see government moneys going into capital funds or into assisting commercial day care centres in getting started.

Representatives of the Canadian Day Care Advocacy Association also had a very thoughtful, knowledgeable brief, in which again they said that the current system of financing was preferable to the proposed legislation. This legislation will pose very real problems. It already has done that in Metro Toronto. Not only has the mayor spoken out against it, but so have two aldermen who in fact are Conservatives and who belong to the same Party as the Government which has introduced this regressive legislation. They have pointed out that it would limit day care spaces.

We hear of young women, sole support mothers, who want to undertake training so that they can get off welfare in order to support their children themselves. They are very worried at what is going to happen concerning the prospect of day care spaces being limited. These young mothers may be trapped in the cycle of dependency on welfare and relative poverty when in fact they want to become more independent.

This Bill proposes to allocate $5.4 billion over seven years for child care. That sounds very good at first blush, until one looks a little into the breakdown. More than half of it, $2.3 billion in fact, goes to tax breaks for parents. This is helpful up to a point. It is helpful to middle-class parents who perhaps have nannies or home help and have a satisfactory situation that gives them a better tax break. However, this does nothing to increase the number of spaces and the availability of day care.

For parents who would like their child to be in a licensed day care centre for whatever reasons, whether they think it would be a more stimulating situation for the child or it is an only child who needs the companionship of other children, this Bill does nothing because it is not creating any more spaces.

While the Government says that we are putting $5.4 billion into child care, the reality is that this amount has to be cut in two, since $2.3 billion merely increases the tax breaks for parents who already have some kind of day care situation that they are satisfied with.

Then there is a figure of $100 million over seven years for research. The Bill does not say what kind of research or how the research will be used. If the research is merely to tell us that we need more day care, we already know that.

The remaining $3 billion, which will be used for both capital and operating grants and is dependent on cost-sharing agreements with the provinces, has replaced provisions under the Canada Assistance Plan that used to be open-ended. Instead of an open-ended situation where day care spaces could be provided according to the availability of money and according to need, we now have an arbitrary cap imposed by the Government.

If one looks at what has happened in the past under Canada Assistance Plan funding, between 1973 and 1980 the number of licensed spaces increased almost fourfold. Between 1978 and 1985 the number of spaces more than doubled. Is the Government alarmed by this increase? Why has it moved to cap the natural growth of spaces?

We now have, as I said at the beginning, 240,000 licensed spaces in centres and homes. There are 1.8 million children whose parents work. Faced with this continuing need for more day care, the Government imposes a cap and wants us to believe it is doing something good for parents and children. Because of the cap, the present legislation will create no more than 200,000 new spaces over the next seven years, whereas the natural rate of growth, if we follow on from the way it had grown since 1973 using CAP, it would have been of course much greater and much more related to the need.

This legislation puts a limit on child care spending by the provinces where none existed before, despite the fact that the need for child care facilities has increased. In addition, the Government has made no provision for carrying over unused funds to following years. If a province does not manage to disburse all its funds in a particular year, and one can think of all kinds of reasons why that might happen, it has lost out on that year's quota of spaces.

We have legislation introduced with fanfare. The Government maintains it is creative and constructive. There is a lot of smoke and mirrors—

Mr. Riis: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. There have been some further discussions between the Parties and I would like to seek unanimous consent for the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan) and myself to switch our Private Members' Business on Thursday and Friday.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): There is not unanimous consent. The Hon. Member for Trinity has about one minute left.

Miss Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I very much regret that the Government which produced this poor Bill in great haste has not been willing to allow this House to debate it in order to improve it. I know the Government produced this very limited instrument out of naivete, but surely one of the normal functions of this House of Commons is for opposition Members, indeed members of the government Party, to debate and advance constructive amendments to improve legislation. Yet here we have legislation which was rushed through a legislative committee in a few days and now closure is being imposed. As a result, we have a travesty of what could have been a very important and useful social policy initiative.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions or comments.

Mr. Hovdebo: Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Hon. Member to expand a little on one area she commented on.

I have spent a large portion of my career as an educator. One of the concerns which is always before the educational system is the ability of the organization, or the parents in some cases, to be assured that the quality of day care they are receiving, or the quality of education in the case of a larger system, is monitored. To a great extent that seems to be one of the weaknesses of the commercial day care operation.

Is it her Party's suggestion that a course of studies or a monitoring system be put in place for commercial day care operations if they are retained?

Miss Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, in Ontario, as the Hon. Member probably knows, all day care services, whether commercially operated, co-ops run by parents, or operations run by the municipalities, have to meet the same licensing requirements. That includes having qualified staff who are trained in early childhood education and who are able to provide appropriate stimulation and educational experiences for the children. In my view, commercial or profit-making centres should have to meet precisely the same requirements, which they are very often unwilling to do.

I referred to the fact that commercially-operated day care centres tended to have a higher incidence of breaches of provincial licensing regulations and usually those breaches have been along the lines of not providing sufficient staff or trying to get by with less than qualified staff. Obviously where there is a profit motive there is also a temptation to skimp on standards. However, not all commercially-operated day care centres have done this.

I think in theory a commercially operated centre has the capacity to meet the same good standards as a not for profit agency, but of course all day care centres should be very well supervised and subject to unannounced visits and inspections. This is true simply because the children are so very young, often infants, and they do not have a language ability and cannot say how they are being treated. Therefore, it is more important than ever that vigilant adults be there to ensure that the care is not only adequate but good.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the Hon. Member for her very interesting and well researched speech. We are both from Ontario and we both will be unable to tell our constituents that this Bill is a positive step, because it penalizes Ontario children in not having sufficient spaces available for those who are awaiting day care services and should be entitled to them.

I think she told us in her speech that there has been a growth from 1965 to 1980 of some four times the number of spaces, and that it doubled from 1980 to 1985.

This legislation does not even offer that much, Mr. Speaker. It offers 200,000 spaces from now until 1995. Is the situation in Toronto the same as it is in Ottawa where we have a scarcity of good day care centres at this time? Could the Hon. Member tell me about Toronto where the Hon. Member is situated and tell me whether the people in her riding feel the same as those in my riding, that day care access and quality day care is needed?

As well, we need subsidized day care spaces for those who cannot afford to pay. Specifically, does the Hon. Member have any statistics or information on Toronto to enlighten some of our colleagues on the government side who do not seem to be paying attention to this debate.

I would remind the House that this is only the second speaker on the Liberal side. We have had only one round and one speaker today, yet the Government has given notice of closure for this debate. We hope to get as much information as possible to the people of Canada so they will understand that this Bill is inadequate and not a good step.

An Hon. Member: We don't understand your position.

Mr. Gauthier: The Government does not care about day care. All it is worrying about is getting enough pork barreling to satisfy its needs in ridings.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I do not know whether the Hon. Member had a question or not, but if he did the Hon. Member for Trinity could answer it.

Miss Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, Alderman Christie who is a Conservative, and I am sure he did not find any great joy in criticizing this, stated before the legislative committee that Toronto was now facing the longest application waiting list for day care in its history as more and more people were going back to work and as there were more and more one-parent families. If the people in Toronto had been able to continue to access the Canada Assistance Plan they would have foreseen being able to double the number of spaces in the next seven years, but with this instrument which caps growth, it really is creating a crisis. That has also been repeated publicly by the Mayor of Toronto.

Ms. Mitchell: Mr. Speaker, I must say that I share the Member's feelings of anger. I feel very strongly that this Government rammed through the Bill in committee in two days and is now allowing just one speaker per Party, as well as bringing in closure. The Government has had four years to bring in a decent child care Bill. I must say that in committee 100 per cent of the witnesses opposed this Bill. It is a regressive, restrictive, negative Bill that will make child care worse than it is now, and heaven knows it is bad enough.

I know my colleague from the Liberal Party has had broad experience in social policy matters and is familiar with child care. She is also very familiar with the Meech Lake Constitutional Accord. As she knows, in the Constitutional Accord all Parties agree that there must be a clause that when there is spending of federal moneys going to the provinces for social programs the provinces must conform to the national objectives.

What are the Member's views on this, since the Minister refused to push national objectives in this Bill? Does the Hon. Member feel that this denies the whole spirit of the Meech Lake Accord?

Miss Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I am very concerned about the lack of national standards in day care and have been for a very long time. I remember participating in a conference in Ottawa in the late 1960s when people were wanting to see the development of national standards. As I said in the course of my speech, although traditionally education has been under provincial jurisdiction alone, day care involves children who are so much younger and questions of safety arise, making a real need for national standards. I regret very much the Minister was not willing to do what was necessary to achieve national standards for day care or at least to begin working on them.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions and comments are now terminated. On debate, the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to have the opportunity to say a few words regarding Bill C-144. I am delighted because I have an opportunity to speak to this legislation, but most Members of Parliament will not have that opportunity. I think it is absolutely disgraceful that the Government has decided to limit debate on this important social legislation to only a single day in Parliament. This is unheard of. Any progressive person listening, watching, or learning of this debate would say that it is absolutely disgraceful that the Government has decided to say that after a single speaker from the New Democratic Party, the Liberal Party, and the Conservative Party "that is enough. We want to shut down the House of Commons, muzzle it and close off debate. We are setting aside one single day now". It is the most hypocritical move and comment I have heard from this Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and this Government for many months.

What makes it more hypocritical, disgraceful, and disgusting is that the committee decided to call witnesses and when all the witnesses came—

Mr. Fennell: Who is running the country, the witnesses or the Government?

Mr. Riis: I should not say "all" because the Government said: "We are rushing this thing through. We cannot afford to listen to all of the appropriate groups and all the regions of Canada that want to make representations. We will select a handful from essentially central Canada. Forget the rest, forget Atlantic Canada, forget the North, and forget western Canada. Let us go for a handful of those who wish to appear before the committee".

Mr. Belsher: I travelled with the child care committee.

Mr. Riis: Already there was, if you like, a muzzling of the committee looking into this legislation. What happened? We had a parliamentary first. This was the first time in my recollection of years and years in this House when every single witness said the legislation should be torn up. There were 40 witnesses and not a single one said that it was a decent piece of legislation. This has to be a parliamentary first. Who were some of these witnesses, Mr. Speaker? It is interesting. Let me cite a few.

The Child Care Committee of the National Advisory Council on the Status of Women, the Early Childhood Educators of British Columbia, the B.C. Daycare Action Coalition, the Anti-Poverty Group, the National Federation of Nurses' Unions, the Ontario Coalition for Better Daycare, the Inuit Women's Association of Canada, the Public Service Alliance of Canada, the Canadian Union of Public Employees, the Canadian Daycare Advocacy Association, the Kids First Association, the Canadian Ethnocultural Council, the Canadian Association of Social Workers, the Sunflower Co-Op Pre-school, the Ottawa-Carleton Daycare Association, and the Metro Toronto Child Services Group. I could go on and on and list all 40 different groups, all in their own way expert in the area of child care, which said that this legislation was wrong and needed to go back to the drawing-boards to start over. This is a bad initiative. Did the Government listen to these witnesses? It ignored all of their advice.

Then government Members came back to the House of Commons and said that they did not even want to hear debate on this matter from any of their own back-benchers or cabinet Ministers or from members of the Opposition. They want to shut down debate on this, the most critical and important social issue facing us in decades.

Why do government Members not want to have a debate on this issue? What is it that they are trying to hide? What is it that they are trying to cover up? What is it that they are trying to fool the people of Canada about? I want to share some of the reasons for this with the House.

At the moment there are 240,000 child care spaces in Canada. The Conservatives have said that over the next seven years they would like to add another 200,000 spaces. Over that length of time, on an annual basis, that is an increase of about 10 per cent per year. What about the provision of spaces in the past which we know was inadequate to meet the child care needs of the two million Canadian children who now need quality child care services of one kind or another? Spaces have been growing over the years at an inadequate level of 15 per cent.

We have seen a growth rate of 15 per cent under the status quo. Along comes a Conservative Government which says: "Hold it, this is too much, we want to bring that growth down to 10 per cent per year". If the Government had done nothing at all, if it had not even introduced legislation, we would actually have more child care spaces than we will have under this initiative.

What is worse is that the Government is putting a cap on it. It is saying that this is it, it will inadequately fund child care for the next seven years. This is absolutely insane in terms of leadership from a Government. This is not leadership. This is regressive legislation. It is a backward step in time. This Government will make the child care situation worse than it would be if the Government had not bothered to touch it at all.

Can you imagine, Mr. Speaker, what it would be like if the Government had introduced a medicare program that allowed every province to do whatever it wants with medicare? We would have a patchwork quilt. Something would be done in Newfoundland, something different would be done in Manitoba, something different would be done in Québec, something different would be done in British Columbia. What kind of a country would that be? What kind of a medicare program would that be? We would not tolerate that for a moment, and neither would any Canadian.

What about pension systems, whether Old Age Security, veterans' pensions, or disability pensions? What kind of a country would we have if, under pension legislation, each province could do whatever it wants, could set its own standards and guidelines? It would be silly to contemplate the kind of a pension system with every province having its own rules.

What about family allowance? What if we had a different family allowance system in every province of Canada? That would be nonsense, but that is exactly what this Government plans to do with the child care legislation. It is saying that it will provide the money, but Alberta can do what it wants, Saskatchewan can do what it wants, Ontario can do what it wants, and Newfoundland can do something different. What kind of a vision of a country is that? What kind of leadership is that? There is no leadership there.

This is what we have come to expect from this Prime Minister who has no concept of what a country means. He said he wanted to bring Canada together. What he meant was that he wanted to bring Canada and the United States closer together. His ideal child care system would be to have the McDonald's system of child care across Canada, child care for profit. That is the kind of vision that he has for meeting the needs of families across Canada who require quality child care facilities. He would love to see the McDonald's view of child care for profit.

This is a legislative initiative that lacks any national objectives. There is no other alternative but for the Government of Canada to provide very clear objectives for the kind of quality child care the Government would expect; whether in Prince Edward Island, on Vancouver Island, in Inuvik, it does not matter. Canadians ought to have access to the same quality child care no matter where they happen to live in Canada, but under this Government that will not occur.

As a Member from British Columbia, I will tell you why I am particularly concerned, Mr. Speaker. We have a premier there—I should not even call him a premier. Technically he was elected premier. He has turned the Province of British Columbia's political system into a laughing stock. He is a most unprogressive individual. The only book he ever read was a colouring book, and that he did not have to read.

What this person will likely do with federal money for child care is disgraceful. I know what he does when he gets money for post-secondary education. Does the Premier of British Columbia spend a single penny of the money he receives from the Government of Canada for post-secondary education? No, not a single cent. He uses it for other things. There is no matching. We can go on to a whole variety of other areas where there is supposed to be cost sharing.

Mr. Belsher: Nelson, that's false and you know it.

Mr. Riis: You stand up and make a speech if you have the courage of your convictions. When I sit down, you can ask me a question. Until then, I will ask you to be quiet and wait your turn. The Government of British Columbia does not match the money for—

Mr. Belsher: Say they don't match it, don't say they don't spend the money.

Mr. Riis: Maybe I should clarify that for my hon. friend.

Ms. Mitchell: Your Socred friend.

Mr. Riis: My hon. Socred friend from British Columbia. The Government of Canada gives British Columbia money for post-secondary education. That money is supposed to be matched to meet the needs of post-secondary education in British Columbia. The British Columbia Government does not match any of it. It does not spend any money on post-secondary education, and I am saying it will do the same thing for child care. It will not match those funds, and anyone from British Columbia who believes that it will does not understand the mentality of the Socred Government in that province.

Let us go on. This child care Bill fails to guarantee that even current levels of financial assistance available under the Canada Assistance Plan to help low-income families meet child care needs will remain in place, let alone be enhanced. Those families that need support most will not get it with this legislation.

Under this Conservative plan there are some tax credits so that about $200 per family per year will be used through the tax system to assist those people to provide child care. This is the same Government that goes on and on saying that we should not use the tax system to develop social or economic programs. At a time when tax dollars are hard to find, to be putting billions of dollars into the tax system without adequate funding for the development of new child care spaces is again an indication that the wrong priorities are being used.

Let us now look at some of the things that are needed in this legislation but are missing. When providing funds for child care, would it not make sense to use the hard to come by tax dollars to develop child care spaces through non-profit organizations? This legislation will provide support for private sector child care.

I want to make it very clear that there are some good private sector child care facilities. Child care for profit provides valuable services at a quality level in certain instances, but on balance the record is clear. The salaries and wages paid to those who work in child care for profit settings are significantly lower. The child to staff ratios are significantly lower. The training that staff members receive is less extensive. The staff turnover is greater. The health and safety standards are lower. The working conditions as well as the wages and salaries are significantly lower. Those are proven facts, and that is one of the points that this last set of witnesses and others before it made clear time and time again.

Also, and perhaps more important, in child care for profit situations there is little opportunity for parents to be involved in the decision making in terms of the curriculum and the kinds of programs being offered. They tend to be motivated primarily for profit. That is why they are there. They are there to make money for their shareholders or for the owners of the facility, whereas in the non-profit sector the primary motive, of course, is to provide quality care of a variety of types.

One aspect this legislation overlooks are those parents who are at home raising children. There is a lack of opportunity to develop the infrastructure that will support a mother or father who is staying at home raising children. I am thinking here of the funding of play groups, parent-child drop in centres, toy lending libraries, and in areas where there is part-time care for people who do not require day-long care but require care at certain times of the day or week. We would like to see more attention paid to that area. Those parents who have decided to remain at home to raise their children should have the appropriate support system to ensure that the upbringing of their children is facilitated and assisted by some of the programs that would be funded under a child care Bill.

I would also like to say that this particular Act undermines the incentive for have-not provinces to increase child care services significantly due to the rapid phasing out of needed variable cost sharing. I believe this is one of the points made by witnesses before the committee time and time again. Those families who happen to live in have-not provinces will really be prejudiced by this legislation. That is something, we as New Democrats certainly want to see changed, and we have tried to change it. As you know, Mr. Speaker, my hon. colleague from Vancouver East in committee and particularly at report stage consideration made numerous efforts to try to improve at least this extremely flawed legislation, but on virtually every count her suggestions were turned down by the Conservative majority in the House. We are very regretful about that.

There are two million young people in Canada who are presently in need of quality child care. I am talking by and large of licensed child care facilities where parents can feel secure that the quality is of a high standard, that the people involved are skilled in their profession, and that the necessary support systems are in place. It is woefully inadequate. The program of the New Democratic Party would put in place 200,000 new spaces, not over the next seven years with a cap on it after that but over the next four years. We would also put in place significantly increased sums of money to ensure that continued growth of child care spaces is provided and that those most in need of quality child care would have those needs met.

We do not feel at all enthusiastic about the use of tax credits. Under the present financial situation we face as a country, with the resources we are able to mobilize to provide support to our most valuable resource, the children of Canada, we would be well advised to focus those initiatives in the development of child care spaces.

Without national objectives, without clear national leadership to ensure the same level of quality of child care services across Canada from one side of the country to the other, this legislation is seriously flawed. For that and the other reasons mentioned, I think this Bill should go back to the drawing-board. Hopefully, with the election of a New Democratic Party Government after the next federal election, we will have an opportunity to bring in the kind of child care that the young people of this country deserve.

Ms. Mitchell: Mr. Speaker, I thank my hon. colleague for a fine dissertation on the evils of this Bill. I certainly agree with him that it is a very regressive Bill.

The Member referred to British Columbia. We have a number of Conservative Members from British Columbia in the House who support the Social Credit Party, for which they should hang their heads in shame. The Minister in British Columbia has made it official publicly that they are going to use this Bill, but they are going to use it in the way they want. They are going to take the money for capital funds in order to build some new buildings, perhaps for day care, but they are not going to use any of the money available for operating funds to make it possible to put a program into those new buildings. They will not take any money to reduce the fees, to improve the wages, or to enrich the program, something which is desperately needed because most of the day care centres operate on a shoe-string.

Does the Member think that this is fair? What does he think should be done to ensure that British Columbia uses some of that money to reduce the fees? The fees are often $4,000 or $5,000 a year. That is bad enough if there is only one child, but if there are two children it is just impossible.

There is also no guarantee that British Columbia will use any of that money for infant care or care for children under the age of three years. There are no licensed services for that age group. There is nothing really, or very little, in the way of after school care for school aged children as well.

Furthermore, the Premier of British Columbia makes day care subsidies available under the Canada Assistance Plan, but then charges a user fee at the day care centres so parents cannot really use any available subsidies. That is his kind of philosophy.

Can my friend say whether this program will improve child care and make it more accessible to the children and parents from all income groups in British Columbia who need it?

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member's question reminds me of a number of very important issues raised in a report called "Caring for Canada's Children", put forward by the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell). In that report she outlines not only the needs in a very specific way but, more important, the solutions. If there is a problem, there is a solution which she identifies. She mentions latch-key children. When school gets out at three o'clock or three-thirty, depending on what school one is attending, and the parents do not arrive home until six o'clock, perhaps even later, for two, three or four hours out of the day the children are home alone. That concerns us a great deal.

There are also toddlers and young children under the age of three years. There is virtually no mention of very young children in the legislation. One could go on and on. As Members of Parliament from British Columbia, my colleague from Vancouver East and I know that the premier said at the outset of this public discussion that he was not at all inclined to pass along these funds for child care. He said that there were other pressing needs in the province and that he would feel quite justified in using funds from child care to build bridges or whatever else.

When we reflect back on the comments made by the Premier of British Columbia we become very nervous, indeed. I cannot recall a single progressive comment he ever made with respect to child care, although I can recall a number of very unprogressive comments. All we have to do is look at the abysmal situation which exists in British Columbia in terms of those parents who so desperately need quality child care and there is simply no place to turn.

I know it is not only British Columbia. I know the problem exists in other provinces as well, but it is particularly acute in British Columbia where, over the years, many communities have actually regressed. There are fewer services in terms of child care per capita than in the past. When we have a provincial Government that has that kind of mind-set, that has policies which are anti-children, we cannot rely on that premier and his Government to develop and provide quality child care in that part of Canada. We know it is an impossibility. I personally would not have any faith that it would occur.

For those people who are interested in the details, not only in terms of what we believe as New Democrats are the critical concerns and needs with respect to child care but more important the solutions in terms of meeting those needs, I could not recommend more strongly the publication called "Caring for Canada's Children" which I mentioned earlier.

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, I want to make a comment on behalf of people in rural Canada. Often child care is thought of as an urban issue because when people live in cities or neighbourhoods they can go very short distances to get child care.

Could the Member from Kamloops offer us some wisdom on how we could establish a child care system that would treat rural people in an equitable way in terms of providing child care for the sons and daughters of farmers, people in small villages, and people in hamlets where there are sometimes great distances between residences? Often in rural areas people think that the child care program is basically something for urban Canada, for big-city Canada, for people living in Edmonton, Vancouver, Montreal, Toronto, or Regina, rather than for people in small areas.

Could the Member give us any ideas on how we could organize a system that would be fair for people living in rural Canada; for farmers and ranchers and people living in small villages and hamlets?

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, once again the Hon. Member for Yorkton—Melville (Mr. Nystrom) is asking thoughtful questions. He asks about child care for rural Canada. We will be hearing members of the New Democratic Party outlining their concerns in terms of child care, not only for rural Canada but also for native children and for disabled children.

Specifically in regard to the Hon. Member's question in regard to rural Canada, let us understand that we are not in a position to tell small communities or rural parts of Canada what they should do. That decision should be left to them. The funds should be provided at the community level so that small rural towns, villages, or areas that are unorganized can make the decision on what kind of child care best meets their local needs.

That might mean transportation services so that children or their parents can be moved into certain locations. It might mean a resource centre where materials can be made available to mothers or fathers who are at home or others who are caring for the children. It may mean day care centres of one kind or another.

We have to be extremely flexible and recognize that what is appropriate for a small northern Ontario community may not be appropriate for a rural community in southern Saskatchewan. However, the funds must be there. That is our commitment. We must provide appropriate and adequate funding, and then let the decision be made by those who live at the local level and best understand what needs must be met there.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions and comments are now terminated.

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to participate in this debate in regard to Bill C-144, the child care Bill. I want to state my conflict up front. I am one of those Members of Parliament who has children, who believes very strongly that we ought to have in Canada, throughout each and every province of this country, good quality, affordable, accessible day care facilities and individuals who can work with these young persons.

I noted with considerable interest that approximately 40 different groups made their presentations to the committee which reviewed the details and the specifics of Bill C-144. It ought to be noted for those Members who are present that of those 40 different groups appearing before the legislative committee not one was supportive of the substantive thrust of Bill C-144.

Those hearings, which were condensed into a two-and-a-half or three-day period, heard these witnesses on short notice. Nevertheless, the tenor and substance of their remarks ought to be examined fully by Members of Parliament who are in the process of either approving or disapproving one of the most important pieces of legislation to come to this Chamber in over two decades.

We are not dealing with cattle. We are not dealing with fish. We are not dealing with some abstract idea. We are dealing with Canada's most important resource, namely, the human resource. Those small individuals, the lives of whom we seek to protect, to embellish, and to enhance in this great country, ought to be reassured by Parliamentarians of all political persuasions that that which we are putting in place will fundamentally address the concerns which Canadians believe to be important in this debate.

The question of availability of child care spaces is of fundamental importance to all Canadians in all regions. It is not fair if spaces to be made available are more prominent in one area of the country than another because of the way in which this particular Bill is structured. It is not fair to the regions or the communities but, more important, it is not fair to the children who could be served by such child care facilities across the country.

Bill C-144 has targeted an increase of only 200,000 new child care spaces in Canada over the next seven years, which means that only one in four children who will need day care will get it. That is totally insufficient. For the Government and members of the Government to believe, in their own rhetoric, that it is sufficient is, in my view, both irresponsible and an abdication of their duty and responsibility to children across this country.

Bill C-144 may not even provide enough funding for the inadequate 200,000 subsidized spaces. Using federal government figures the National Action Committee's January 1988 analysis of projected costs predicted a shortfall of $1.5 billion in its estimate, even if capital cost contributions were held to $57 million per year.

Seven years, 200,000 spaces; that is what the Government is telling the people of Canada. The witnesses and the individuals who are involved in child care have repeatedly told the Government that that is insufficient, that it does not address the problem. The Government's response has been that half a loaf is better than no loaf at all. I suggest with great respect that, when one is dealing with young lives and the opportunities that we as a state and a nation can provide to them, that in itself is not an answer. It is not a fitting answer for a Parliament seized of a very important issue.

The issue of affordability is paramount in this particular debate. Although Bill C-144 uses the word affordability, it in no way addresses the problem and, in fact, it reduces current entitlements. Under CAP, for instance, child care fee subsidies are offered to low and middle-income families. Under Bill C-144 there is no guarantee that these families will continue to receive that assistance. Do we have a program here for the rich and no program for the poor? Is that what we are talking about?

Under CAP, assistance exists for integrated child care for children with special needs. Under Bill C-144 these entitlements could be bargained away, and no province has yet said that it will reduce special needs entitlements.

• (1730)

However, no provincial Government would be under any obligation whatsoever to maintain these entitlements according to how Bill C-144 is written. Those are important and fundamental issues to the debate on child care.

Bill C-144 recognizes the need for quality but does it establish the conditions that can encourage it? Are national standards defined within the parameters of the statute?

I believe in accountability for expenditures of public money. That is the issue for me. Just as our legislators in the various provinces have to be accountable to their people at election time, we in the federal Parliament have to be accountable to the people of Canada for the expenditures we make. Are we to revert to the days not so long ago when Parliament awarded money to provincial jurisdictions for the purpose of post-secondary education, a laudable purpose, only to find that at the end of the day the money the Government of Canada forwarded to those provinces was not being used for the purposes of post-secondary education for which they were meant but for building roads and drawing pre-election writs in the respective provinces? I suggest that is exactly what is happening with this particular legislation.

We as Members of Parliament are abdicating our responsibility on the fundamental principle of accountability. We have given the provinces so many millions of dollars to conduct child care, but we have not put in place national standards. We have not set pre-conditions and that is irresponsible. It is a breach of accountability and a breach of responsible government.

Joe Howe is a great Nova Scotian who campaigned vigorously across my province on the issue of responsible government, of accountability for the expenditure of taxpayers' money. That is the fundamental issue with Bill C-144. We give away the money without any national standards.

There are those in this Chamber who will say that the community of communities is our concept of Canada. If Ontario wishes to conduct its child care program in a certain way, so be it. If the people of Nova Scotia wish to conduct a program in that province, thank you very much.

But this is not just the use of provincial moneys from the respective provinces. It is the use of money of the Government of Canada, duly authorized by the Parliament of Canada. Therefore it is incumbent upon us to make certain that quality, accessibility, affordability, and those national standards are put in place by the Parliament of Canada and not some other level of government.

Let me try to put a human face on this particular issue of national standards. I recently spoke to constituents, a very dedicated and proud mother and proud father who are trying to provide for their children as best they can. I want to read parts of a letter, without referring to names specifically but to the substance of what this mother is saying. In my view, it addresses the issue of national standards and some of the major omissions in this particular Bill. She wrote:

> I am the mother of four children—

Two children are mildly autistic. She continued:

> I will briefly relate to you some of the problems we have faced trying to provide remedial help for our children. In 1976, while living in Ontario, our second child Shane, then two years old, was diagnosed as having autism. The prognosis was, to say the least, grim. He received help in a daycare-like setting that was fully funded by the Ontario Government. However, two years later, when we moved back to Nova Scotia, there were no such facilities and our only alternative, (albeit a good one), was the Town Daycare Centre.

The letter went on:

> Our problems resurfaced again in 1986 when our son Mitchell, then 21 months, also exhibited the same symptoms— specifically a developmental profile characterized by lack of communication and social passivity. On the advice of our pediatrician, we were referred to the Town Daycare Center. Even though it was a medical problem, we paid top rates again, our family income was over the set limit. Earlier that year, while working as a nurse, I sustained a severe back injury and, because I was not working I could not even claim the fees as a child care deduction on my income tax. Mitchell only attended daycare for eight months—

Listen to this:

> —but the results were dramatic! Today, at three and a half, he presents as a talkative, cheerful and sociable young lad with only a hint of his past problems!

That is the human face. There is one law for Ontario and another law for Nova Scotia. There is one law for Québec and another law for Prince Edward Island. There is one law for British Columbia and yet a different one for New Brunswick.

Who do we sacrifice in the process because we, as federal Members of Parliament, have abdicated our responsibility to the people of Canada? National standards have not been included in this legislation.

When I speak of the disparity that can, does, and will exist as a result of the consummation of Bill C-144, it is real. It is not a make-believe, hypothetical problem which is discussed in ivory towers here in Ottawa. It is a real, human problem.

Doctors and educators agree that a day care social setting would help solve the problems of these children to whom I have referred. This lady has been forced to come up with $650 per month to assist her children. It is a high price which she cannot afford. Canadian children deserve more and they deserve much more from their Government.

Are we here as Members of Parliament to be emissaries and diplomats for provincial Governments, or are we here in Ottawa to stand up for a national cause, the cause of children across this country? The Hon. Member standing next to you, Mr. Speaker, makes reference to the unborn, as do I, important as the issue is. However, when it comes to Bill C-144, there is not the intestinal fortitude to say to Bourassa in Québec, to Peterson in Ontario, that this is a national Parliament and these are national standards and if they do not comply they will get nothing. They will come running. They will have the wagons. They will have the vans. They will be parked out front waiting for their dollars. They will subscribe to the national standards of a national Government.

Mr. Harris: If we had one.

Mr. Dingwall: That is the issue, Mr. Speaker—if we had one. This Government is abdicating its responsibilities. Member after Member on the government side has stood up and talked about the wonders of this legislation. But for whom are the wonders? The wonders are for provincial Governments which may or may not share the objectives of the national Parliament or the will of the national Parliament. It is not the children we are talking about in this instance. The Government is not addressing the problems of child care for children. It is addressing the problems both fiscally and socially of provincial Governments. What could be more abominable, more revolting than Members of Parliament using the children of Canada to satisfy the political egos of provincial First Ministers and Governments across the country?

I would argue and debate with Liberal Premiers, NDP Premiers or Conservative Premiers across the country when it comes to the fundamental issues of our country, particularly as they relate to child care. But what does this Government do? It states: "We cannot do that. We have to wait. They are going to tell us what they want". Then, all of a sudden, we are supposed to accept that as being part of diplomacy within Canada, as part of the unity of Canada. For whom? Is it for this three and a half year old who resides in Glace Bay who, after access to day care, his mother writes in her letter: "—but the results were dramatic!" She continues: "Today", on August 17, 1988, "at three and a half, he presents as a talkative, cheerful and sociable young lad with only a hint of his past problems".

I am ashamed of Members of Parliament in this Chamber for not exercising their responsibilities, who put their Party before the children of Canada. That is what they have done. They have put partisan politics and re-election motives in front of standing up for the young people of Canada.

It was not my Party, it was not the New Democratic Party which took almost four years to introduce this legislation. The Government has waltzed, rocked and rolled with the provincial First Ministers. What has it done? It has said no to the children of Canada. That is not something I want to have on my political record, or to have said of me when I leave this Chamber, whenever that may be. I do not want it to be said that we abdicated our national responsibility, our national will for the young people of Canada to soothe the selfishness of a Government wishing to hold on to power, of provincial Governments which wish that the national Government would resolve its fiscal and, indeed, its social agenda.

In conclusion I say that I will vote against Bill C-144. I will campaign against Bill C-144. I will try to have others both at the national level and at the provincial level address the problems which I believe are germane to the subject matter that we debate here today. At the end of the day when the ballots are cast and when the decision is finally made, I hope members of the government Party can stand in front of a mirror and look themselves in the eye and say: "We did the right thing for the right people". I hope that they can say that, both in their heads and in their hearts. For it is they who are tampering with the fundamentals of this country, namely, our young people.

Mrs. Duplessis: Mr. Speaker, I listened carefully to the speech by the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—East Richmond (Mr. Dingwall), and all I can say is that the Hon. Member appears to be terribly homesick for the Trudeau era. He said the Government had not set any standards. When his own Government introduced its health care system, it did not set any standards either. He fails to realize that this is a matter of provincial jurisdiction, and that under the present Conservative Government and tomorrow, under that Government's next mandate which is fast approaching, we will always respect the rights of the provinces. This is a time of reconciliation, and that is even reflected in our legislation and in the child care Bill. I took part in a number of hearings, not all hearings across the country, but I was at the hearings in Quebec and British Columbia, and in those two provinces, I noticed when I was at the hearings with my other colleagues that people from Quebec and British Columbia who wanted a universal day care system, the same kind of system across this country, were not in the majority.

As I said before, the Hon. Member seems to be yearning for a return to the Trudeau era. Those were my comments.

[English]

Mr. Dingwall: Mr. Speaker, I do not make any apologies to the Government of Canada, the Progressive Conservative Government of Canada, for my views with regard to child care. I do not make any apologies to the provincial First Ministers, some of whom I know personally, with regard to this important matter. I do not make any apologies for standing in my place and fighting for the cause of children. If it means that we have a debate, that we have some words exchanged between the national Government and the provincial Governments, then so be it. I think the children of this country are worth fighting for.

As I said in my opening remarks, I have a conflict. My conflict is that I have three children who have gone to day care facilities. Thank goodness that the quality of child care that they were provided during that period of time was as superb as it was. But I want that same right, that same opportunity for all the children who are out there, whether their father is a lawyer, a doctor, or a politician. I think they ought to be given that opportunity, even if it means in the darkness of night or the earliness of morning that we have to say to the provincial capitals and those individuals who lead them that these are the national standards. I am prepared to do that. I am prepared to suffer the consequences, whatever they may be. I am not prepared, as is the Conservative Member of Parliament, to go back to the days when we just gave the money away to the provinces, when we would have had 10 different systems in operation.

Ms. Mitchell: Mr. Speaker, I certainly agree with the remarks made by the Hon. Member. He is quite correct when he says that he was fortunate to have had good quality child care for his three children. I suppose that he was probably able to afford it. Yet I think of those single mothers out there who are on poverty wages or on welfare and how little resources there are for them. In light of that the Minister would not agree to retain the Canada Assistance Plan in order to protect those children and ensure that there are extra services for them while the general program could be expanded for other families.

I am not sure whether he is aware that when we had witnesses at the legislative committee two things happened. First, Conservative Members insisted that it be only for two days, and there was hardly any notice to get in touch with people from the different regions in order for them to come. The second thing that the Conservative Members insisted on was a limited budget for travel. It meant that even if one or two people from his province, or from my province on the other side of the country, heard about this option, they still did not know whether or not they were going to receive payment for travel expenses to come.

As a result, we did not have one single witness from the Province of Nova Scotia, from P.E.I., from New Brunswick, from Newfoundland, from the Northwest Territories, from the Yukon, or from Saskatchewan. We only had one witness from British Columbia, one from Alberta, and one from Manitoba. The rest were all either national groups or from central Canada. Every one of them, of course, opposed the Bill.

Does the Member think that the kind of process imposed on this committee, which is now being imposed on this House whereby Members from all regions are not able to be heard is grossly unfair and undemocratic? Certainly witnesses from all regions did not have a chance to appear before committee. He knows very well, I am sure, that the situation is very different in his province than it is in other provinces and that we should be hearing from regions on this Bill.

Mr. Dingwall: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member raises a very valid point in terms of the process that has been put in place for debate on this particular subject matter.

Not only was the process expedited to suit the political agenda of the Government of the day, but in doing so it has not only affronted, in my view, the regions of Canada, but it has also denied itself the opportunity to make concrete and substantive amendments in the name of the Government to the Bill, if it would have heard a wide variety of individuals and groups across Canada.

I have read with considerable interest about those who have appeared, but there are a number of individuals who would have liked to have had the opportunity to come before a public hearing and share with Members of Parliament the human face and the human tragedy that they are confronted with.

The Hon. Member's question is indeed very valid, but what is not valid is for the Government of Canada, in exercising its political agenda, to short-change Canadians of all walks of life. We may have had some individuals who would have come before us to speak in favour of the Bill. There was one or two, I think, that would have come from the United States to support this Bill, but it would have been equally important to hear those individual Canadians and other groups from across Canada express their views.

I do not know why government Members on that particular committee refused to share in the suggestion being made by my hon. colleague.

Mr. Crosby: Mr. Speaker, on question or comment, I would like to make a comment on both the speech made by the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—East Richmond (Mr. Dingwall) and the previous speaker from Kamloops—Shuswap. They both made comments which I think are totally unacceptable. In the case of the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis), he said that Bill C-144 contributes nothing to child care in Canada and that we would be better off without the Bill.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I must stress to the Hon. Member that he should only comment on the speech of the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—East Richmond. The Hon. Member for Halifax West.

Mr. Crosby: It is pretty hard to tell these people apart, because they get up in the House of Commons and just go on with unjustified criticism after unjustified criticism. I merely want to make mention of the fact that child care in Canada is a continuing thing. They perhaps do not know this. They do not remember the days of orphanages and when children were carted away and placed in institutions. It took a long time to evolve to this point before the Parliament of Canada, where we have a valid child care legislation. In Nova Scotia and in British Columbia, what we had 20 years ago—and through the last 15 years of Liberal administration—was orphanages. Children were put away. We are trying to break out of this situation to try something new.

What has evolved is day care centres, institutions for child care, and we are trying to advance this. I cannot believe that people would say that this is not a good thing to do and that we should do nothing. I cannot believe that people do not understand the federal-provincial relationship and the responsibility of the provinces versus the responsibility of the federal Government in this area.

I say to my colleague from Cape Breton—East Richmond, does he not understand the role of the provinces in this field? Does he take away from the Province of Nova Scotia the right to run child care institutions? Is that what he is saying? Does he want the Government of Canada to enforce on the Province of Nova Scotia and all other provinces of Canada its view of child care? Is that what he wants?

Mr. Dingwall: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member can rock and roll and he can do the limbo. He can do any kind of dance that he wants, but the fact of the matter remains—and he knows it, from the representatives that have gone to him—that this particular Bill C-144 is a mere abrogation of the responsibilities of Members of Parliament to children across Canada.

Yes, I believe in consultations with provincial Governments. I agree with meaningful consultations with the people in the various provinces across Canada. But when it comes to child care, first and foremost, what must be paramount in any legislation is quality, affordable, accessible day care with national standards to make the Government of Canada accountable to the people of Canada and not to a select club of 10 or 11 First Ministers across Canada.

If the Hon. Member had the intestinal fortitude, he would stand in this place and disavow his association with this Bill and with his Party, which he knows is negatively affecting the children across Canada.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions and comments are now completed. On a point of order, the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS—MOTIONS

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, there have been further discussions this afternoon and there seems to be a willingness to allow the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan) to exchange his private Member's motion with my own, and we basically switched Thursday's private Member's hours issue with Friday's. It is vice versa. I am seeking unanimous consent to have that accomplished.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

CANADA CHILD CARE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Epp (Provencher) that Bill C-144, an Act to authorize payments by Canada toward the provision of child care services, and to amend the Canada Assistance Plan in consequence thereof, be read the third time and passed; and the amendment of Ms. Mitchell (p. 19454).

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Mr. Speaker, I only have two minutes, but I think it would only take me that long to destroy the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—East Richmond (Mr. Dingwall), because his abysmal knowledge of day care and child care in Nova Scotia has just been demonstrated in this Chamber for all to see.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): On a point of order, the Hon. Member for York South—Weston.

Mr. Nunziata: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for providing me with the opportunity to raise my point of order. I believe when the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—East Richmond (Mr. Dingwall) had made his speech that you indicated that I would have had an opportunity to ask—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): That is not a point of order. The Hon. Member for Cape Breton—East Richmond had 12 minutes in questions and comments, but I will recognize him the next time that we have questions and comments. The Hon. Member for Halifax West.

Mr. Crosby: The next time that we have amateur hour in this House of Commons, perhaps those Members can come back and speak. In the meantime, I want to finish this one minute of time.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): On a point of order, the Hon. Member for York West.

Mr. Marchi: I am not sure if the Speaker heard it, but I believe that the Member from Halifax used the words that he will destroy the Member. I am just wondering whether the usage of that word is in fact unparliamentary and that he should perhaps withdraw it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I do not see any problem with the euphemism used by the Hon. Member. I would like the Hon. Member to carry on with his debate.

Mr. Crosby: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is not within my power to destroy him in that physical way, but I invite Members to come back for amateur hour, which commences after six o'clock.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Halifax West has 45 seconds.

Mr. Crosby: Mr. Speaker, let me just say, they can give it but they cannot take it. They have to stand up. Just come back tomorrow and I will give you the facts on child care in Nova Scotia and across Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

VISIBLE MINORITIES

JAPANESE CANADIANS INTERED DURING WORLD WAR II—NATIONAL REDRESS

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, nearly half a century ago, in the crisis of wartime, the Government of Canada wrongfully incarcerated, seized the property, and disenfranchised thousands of citizens of Japanese ancestry. We cannot change the past. But we must, as a nation, have the courage to face up to these historical facts.

The issue of Japanese-Canadian redress is one which I raised in the House of Commons more than four years ago with the Prime Minister of the day when I was Leader of the Opposition. I said then in this House:

> There is a world of difference between regret and a formal apology. Canadians of Japanese origin had their rights trampled upon. The reputation of this country was besmirched.

Since then, Mr. Speaker, the present Government has sought a settlement with the Japanese-Canadian community to put things right between them and their country; to put things right with the surviving members of the Japanese-Canadian wartime community of 22,000 persons; to put things right with their children, and ours, so that they can walk together in this country, burdened neither by the wrongs nor the grievances of previous generations.

It is fitting that representatives of the National Association of Japanese Canadians are present in the visitors' gallery on this solemn occasion because today I have the honour to announce, on behalf of the Government of Canada, that a comprehensive redress settlement has been reached with the National Association of Japanese Canadians on behalf of their community.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: Perhaps the most important element of this redress is the official acknowledgement of the wrongs of the 1940s. But redress must go beyond words and laws—important as they are for our present understanding and our future actions. The Minister of State for Multiculturalism and Citizenship (Mr. Weiner) will be announcing the details of the settlement, and I pay special tribute today to his skill and resolve in this matter, and to the Secretary of State (Mr. Bouchard) who, immediately after his swearing in as a Minister of the Crown, made the resolution of this important moral issue a matter of the highest priority for him and his colleagues. In a special way, I readily acknowledge the strong moral leadership on this particular question and, indeed, others, that has long been provided by the Hon. Member for Vancouver South (Mr. Fraser), the very distinguished Speaker of the House of Commons.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: Mr. Speaker, I think all Members of the House know that no amount of money can right the wrong, undo the harm, and heal the wounds. But it is symbolic of our determination to address this issue, not only in the moral sense but also in a tangible way. In that spirit, we will accept applications for the granting of Canadian citizenship to eligible persons of Japanese ancestry who were expelled from Canada or had their citizenship revoked during these years. We will also accept requests for the clearing of names of eligible persons of Japanese ancestry who were convicted of violations under the War Measures Act—thankfully now gone from our texts of law in Canada—and the National Emergency Transitional Powers Act.

As well, in commemoration of all who suffered these injustices, we will establish a Canadian Race Relations Foundation to foster racial harmony and cross-cultural understanding in Canada.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, not only was the treatment inflicted on Japanese—Canadians during the War both morally and legally unjustified, it went against the very nature of our country, of Canada. We are a pluralistic society. We each respect the language, opinions and religious convictions of our neighbour. We celebrate our linguistic duality and our cultural diversity. We know that the strength of our country lies in the collective energies of its regions. We are tolerant people who live in freedom in a land of abundance. That is the Canada of our ancestors. That is the Canada our ancestors worked to build. That is the kind of country we want to leave our children, the Canada of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, the new Official Languages Act and the Canadian Multiculturalism Act. A Canada that at all times and in all circumstances works hard to eliminate racial discrimination at home and abroad.

[English]

A Canada, Mr. Speaker, that is able to face up to the mistakes of the past, and so become better prepared to face the challenges of the future.

I am tabling at this time the specific terms of the Government's historic agreement with the National Association of Japanese Canadians. I will meet later this morning with the President of the National Association of Japanese Canadians and some of his colleagues who are with him today to formalize this special agreement.

Most of us in our own lives have had occasion to regret certain things that we have done. Error is an ingredient of humanity, so too is apology and forgiveness. We all have learned from personal experience that as inadequate as apologies are they are the only way we can cleanse the past so that we may, as best we can, in good conscience face the future.

I know that I speak for Members on all sides of the House today in offering to Japanese Canadians the formal and sincere apology of this Parliament for those past injustices against them, against their families, and against their heritage, and our solemn commitment and undertaking to Canadians of every origin that such violations will never again in this country be countenanced or repeated.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): It is an honour for me to rise on behalf of my colleagues in the Liberal Party caucus in response to the very historic announcement made only moments ago by the Right Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). My Leader finds himself in Vancouver this morning and, unfortunately, will not be in a position to respond in kind on the floor of the House of Commons. However, he will be making a statement from Vancouver on this very historic announcement later in the day.

As the Prime Minister indicated, the Minister of State for Multiculturalism and Citizenship (Mr. Weiner) will be revealing the details of this redress package later today. I have yet to see those details, but I trust that they will be in keeping with the aspirations articulated so well for so long by the National Association of Japanese Canadians, and agreeable to the Japanese Canadian citizens and residents in that very proud community.

Towards that end, I am pleased today that the federal Government and this Parliament has moved to redress the injustices that were inflicted against an important and integral part of our Canadian society, Canadian citizens who happen to be of Japanese ancestry. In doing so, it closes the chapter of what was a very sad and sensitive memory in our history.

While one's home, land, and business once lost can never be replaced, and while being evicted from one's own community and separated from one's own family and friends leaves a deep and emotional scar that can never be completely erased from the soul of those Canadian citizens, today's commitment by Government and by Parliament will serve as best as possible to heal those very deep wounds and concerns.

Moreover, today's actions are underlined by an important and symbolic message, a message of fairness and justice for all, that this nation stands for equality for all Canadians, and that there can only be, and must only be, one first-class citizenship for all Canadians.

It is with a great sense of pride and history, therefore, that I am able to speak on behalf of my Party and join the Prime Minister in issuing this most important apology to the Japanese Canadian community of Canada.

It is not a sign of weakness for a country to render this apology. Instead, it is a sure sign of strength and a sign of reflection of our country's commitment to try wherever and however to right our wrongs, not merely for the sake of correcting the history books but, more important perhaps, to establish important standards that will serve Canadians today and future generations of Canadians tomorrow. In addition, today's actions are not so much about a multicultural issue as much as about an issue of Canadian justice.

In closing, I wish to pay a special tribute and commend Mr. Art Miki, his colleagues from the National Association of Japanese Canadians, and its members and friends in the Japanese Canadian community at large, for their never ending determination and deep belief in the cause that they carried so well for so long. Today's resolution, no doubt, is a tribute to their sense of purpose, but it is also an appropriate response to those who continue to question the legitimacy and motivation of the leadership of the National Association of Japanese Canadians.

It is also fitting that the Prime Minister pointed out the pivotal role played behind the scenes by our Hon. Speaker who, to I can say publicly to him, offered us a sense of encouragement in the day-to-day questions that we posed on the floor of the House of Commons over the last four years. I join in saluting our Hon. Speaker, and indeed the other Members of Parliament who may not be making a statement this morning but who nevertheless played a significant role.

Finally, on this historic day, we cannot forget the many Japanese Canadians who were interned but who are no longer with us, unfortunately. Their children refuse to forget the hardships of their forefathers. It would have been my hope, indeed it would have been our collective hope, that they too could be with us today to witness and be part of the day that they had dearly longed for.

However, I say today, and I believe all Members share this, that their struggles were not in vain for their efforts kept that flame of hope alive and bright. It was the strength of that flame that provided the foundation for today's resolution. This agreement, in large part, is their agreement as well.

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I listened with great pleasure to the Prime Minister's speech today. Forty-six years ago, the Government of Canada took measures against Japanese-Canadians that were unjust and unacceptable. Today, at last, we have started to make amends.

[English]

In the 1940s our Government, a democratically elected Government, did a great injustice to some 22,000 of our citizens, a permanent injustice to those who are no longer living. This was done, not because of what they had done, but because of who they were. These Japanese Canadians had their families broken up, their property confiscated, their businesses destroyed. They were forced to abandon their homes on the coast of British Columbia and they were forced to move to the interior and to elsewhere in Canada.

They, as Canadian citizens, had done no wrong. They were the victims of intolerance and racism brought about, not because we were at war with them but because we were at war with the land of their ancestors. They had done no wrong to any of their fellow citizens. It was an inglorious moment in our, on the whole, proud history.

Today we are formally acknowledging this wrong, and I am pleased that today's representatives of Canadians of Japanese ancestry have been able to reach an agreement with the Government of Canada. On behalf of all members of my Party and, I am sure in a sense I speak for everyone in the House of Commons and Canadians wherever they may live, I bid a special welcome to those Canadians of Japanese ancestry who are with us today in the House of Commons.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: I would like to stress that when we talk about the grievous injustice that was inflicted, we are not talking about an abstract breaking of an abstract right. We are talking about profound, serious human suffering. As an example, I would like to cite a quotation from an extremely moving Canadian novel by a Canadian of Japanese ancestry. It is called Obasan, and it is written by Joy Kogawa. It is a story of the life experience of families at this time. It is noted that the families are fictional but all experiences are very real. At one point the heroine of the novel, who is in her thirties, describes the impact this has had on her life. I know it is a true story. She says:

> The fact is I never got used to it and I cannot, I cannot bear the memory. There are some nightmares from which there is no waking, only deeper and deeper sleep.
> There is a word for it. Hardship. The hardship is so pervasive, so inescapable, so thorough, it's a noose around my chest and I cannot move anymore.

I repeat, Mr. Speaker, these have been real experiences in real lives for which our parliamentary ancestors have to assume responsibility because they made those decisions that led to that experience. As the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) has said, we all make errors. Our predecessors in this great Chamber of ours made errors. One of the important and fundamental ways of addressing these errors is at least to apologize publicly and acknowledge the serious wrong that was done, and that we are doing. However, in so doing, we must keep in mind that it does not mitigate at all the horrible experience that has been inflicted upon those victims.

The Prime Minister quite appropriately alluded to the work that has been done by present generations in redressing this wrong here in the House. I think it might have been appropriate to cite those people who stood up at the time because they were present. They were Canadians who said it was wrong, who went against the force of public opinion, who fought for civil liberties at a time when it was important to do the fighting and not talk about redressing wrongs that were done by others. It is easy for us in one sense, although appropriate, to do that. I would like to cite a few words of a distinguished Member of Parliament at that time. He had this to say, clearly in the face of public opinion:

> If we are to have harmonious and friendly relations between the oriental population and the rest of our British Columbia citizens, we must stop discriminating against and abusing the orientals. We must find some common ground on which we can work, and I think it can be found . . . I am satisfied that if we treat the Japanese and our other oriental citizens right, we shall get their loyalty, . . .

He went on to say:

> I know them, speak to them; I visit them and have them in my home, and I have not the slightest doubt that what I say is correct. If we are to avoid the troubles that other countries have had with racial minorities, then we must take a realistic view of the situation in British Columbia and attempt to make these people feel at home among us. We will secure their loyalty by fairness and kindness and by the practice of those other attributes which we exercise in our relations with other people.

He was speaking of fellow Canadians citizens. That speech was given in this House on February 25, 1941, by Angus MacInnis, the then Member for Vancouver—Kingsway.

I want simply to conclude by complimenting the Government of the day on behalf of my Party in reaching this agreement and by saying, as one politician: I hope this kind of experience for us as a nation will never ever be repeated.

DANGEROUS PRODUCTS

TRANSPORT ACROSS METROPOLITAN TORONTO—REPORT OF TASK FORCE—STATEMENT BY MINISTER

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure to table, in both official languages, the final report of the Toronto Area Rail Transportation of Dangerous Goods Task Force.

This report was commissioned by the Government in March, 1986, to investigate the feasibility of rerouting or relocating the movement of dangerous goods around Metropolitan Toronto. The task force was also requested to investigate and make recommendations on the relationship between train speed and safety.

This report finds rail movement of dangerous goods in Metro Toronto safe, not only related to other modes but compared to other countries as well. CP Rail is the safest railway in North America; CN currently ranks fifth. This is a tribute, not only to the employees of each railway but also to the commitment the Government has to ensuring safe transportation systems for all Canadians.

When I received the report last night from task force Chairman Harold Gilbert, we had the opportunity to discuss its consultations, findings, and recommendations.

[Translation]

Although the task force submitted 130 recommendations, my comments today will be limited to the two most important aspects of its mandate: train speed and rerouting of traffic.

The task force asked a consulting firm to investigate the relationship between train speed and safety. Although the report is technical in nature, it implies that from the safety point of view, speed reduction might not be necessary. The task force recommends further studies in this area.

[English]

I have considered carefully the representations made by citizens, municipal Governments, and Members of this House. Further, I note that three members of the task force expressed the view that lower speed limits were desirable on the tracks identified as high risk.

I have considered these matters in light of my primary concern, which is safety. I think that the best course is to lower the speed limits on the high-risk routes. I shall immediately take the necessary steps to set and enforce the lower speed limits on the following rail lines: from Weston Road on Canadian National's Weston Subdivision and from Starview Drive on the Canadian Pacific's McTier Subdivision to the West Toronto Diamond, from Kipling Avenue on Canadian Pacific's Galt Subdivision to the West Toronto Diamond, from the West Toronto Diamond along the Canadian Pacific's North Toronto Subdivision to their Agincourt Yard in Scarborough, and from Canadian National's McMillan Yard along their York Subdivision eastward to Doncaster.

The task force recommends that all levels of Government collaborate in approaching the issues of rerouting and relocation. The task force does not see this as an issue solely of safety. It states that relocation has an economic effect, and it has a primary effect on land use and zoning policies on the provincial and municipal Governments.

I could not agree more, and since this is a matter of provincial jurisdiction I would like to inform Hon. Members that I will be writing today to the Hon. Ed Fulton, Ontario Minister of Transportation, seeking the province's position.

[Translation]

During the last four years, the Government's commitment to safety has lead to a number of initiatives, including the regulations on the transportation of hazardous materials, adopted in 1985; the Railway Safety Act, which received Royal Assent on July 28 this year; and the Bill to establish the Transportation Accident Investigation Board, tabled in the House not long ago.

[English]

The Standing Committee on Transport has played a vital role in all these matters, many of which bear on the task force's recommendations. With its knowledge, expertise, and accessibility to the public and industry, I believe, Mr. Speaker, that the standing committee can best advance the work of the task force. Therefore, I am referring this report to the standing committee.

The report I have received includes all public submissions made to the task force. I shall provide these to the standing committee along with a minority report prepared by a member of the task force. As well, I would advise the House that the report of the Vancouver Task Force on Dangerous Goods is expected to be completed in the next few weeks. It is my intention to refer that report to the standing committee.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank Harold Gilbert for his excellent work and dedication to this project. This has been a very intensive and demanding study, and all task force members are to be congratulated for their commitment of time and expertise.

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, we received the report today with a sense of happiness because the process has been completed. Having listened to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Bouchard), I think there are a few remarks that have to be made from this side of the House.

The report is finished. The process was a lengthy one but was very thorough. It had to delve into very complex and difficult issues. Out of that process, 130 recommendations have emerged. Now the Minister must act. We have mixed feelings because this report is vague and in some respects requires further studies. Here is where the political crunch comes. The Minister of Transport must make certain difficult decisions very soon because the process has now come to an end and further studies are not desirable.

It is curious that out of 130 recommendations the Minister has pulled out two to comment upon today. They are, of course, very political and very urgent. These are issues which have been the object of engagement, attention, and battles by individuals and organizations in Metro Toronto over several years in this decade. They have initiated this process and participated in it. I refer in particular to the Metro-Toronto Residents' Action Committee.

The question of speed leaves a lot to be desired in this report. It is true that on page 61 the report focuses on the importance of looking at other factors and urges that attention be given to addressing and removing, on an utmost priority basis, the track, equipment, operational, and track defect causes of accidents. That is good stuff and we concur with that. Those would be, in other words, preventive measures and good and intensive maintenance for every train entering the Metro Toronto area. I suppose that applies to any urban centre across the country.

We agree with that, but why has the speed limit not been spelled out, both in the report and in the statement by the Minister here today? They only refer to lower speed limits, leaving us, the organizations, and the citizens in the dark as to what the speed limit will be. Will it be one kilometer per hour, or will it be 30 kilometers per hour? Will it be 40 kilometers per hour, as suggested by M-TRAC in a number of submissions even before this commission, or is the Minister's limit a faster one? In other words, this vague commitment is not enough and it is not worth very much.

Let me deal with relocation. In this case we see the Meech Lake values emerging again. The Minister will write a letter to the Minister of Transport of the province today, and that is all. The Minister said in his statement that transportation of this kind and relocation has an economic effect and a primary effect on land use and zoning policies of the provincial and municipal Governments. What about the federal Government? Does the federal Government not exist as well? Does it not have an interest as well in this debate and therefore require the leadership of the Minister of Transport of the day rather than a letter to the Minister of Transport of the Province of Ontario? That is not good enough.

I doubt very much that Toronto residents will sleep any easier because the Minister has written a letter. It is a pathetic response to such an important issue that affects millions of people in the Metropolitan Toronto area.

Instead, the Minister should convene a meeting and discuss this with his provincial colleague and municipal authorities in such a fashion as to take leadership on a very complex matter. Canadian National and Canadian Pacific would not have been built if the attitude of the Government of the day were such as the Minister put forward today in the House, saying that it is a provincial and municipal responsibility. It is a federal responsibility as well.

I referred to M-TRAC for a very good reason. It has long been involved in the issue of transportation of dangerous goods. In a way, this report is a result of the efforts of the citizens' organization. These efforts have been persistent and have made the question of public safety the first priority in the transportation of dangerous goods. Progress has been made over the years as a result of that.

Of the recommendations that M-TRAC has made, four were ignored. One recommendation is to treat empty railcars that have carried dangerous goods as full for the purposes of safety restrictions. That has not been dealt with yet.

The second recommendation was to limit the number of hazardous goods cars to 20 per train. I know that the report takes a different position on that, but it remains extremely vague as to what is the optimal length of trains transporting dangerous goods. Again, the Minister must give leadership on this question and come up with an answer that will strike a balance that will give priority to safety.

The third recommendation was that the length of trains with hazardous goods cars that are full should be limited. The report does not seem to deal with this question. The recommendation was that it should not be longer than 1,600 metres, which is more than one and a half kilometers.

Finally, the recommendation to ensure that there are enough inspectors to monitor and enforce safety standards is a crucial issue. It is a preventive measure and a recommendation I would particularly stress to the Minister so that he has in his budget the means to hire the inspectors for trains entering metropolitan areas across the nation. That is where the entrance of the train becomes crucial. That is partially dealt with, although not in a conclusive manner, when talking about train gateways inspections at page 58. However, we must ask whether the inspectors are there and whether the number is adequate. Is the quality of the inspection sufficient?

In conclusion, the Minister has only addressed the first two of many issues. The speed of trains remains unclear. I hope the Minister will soon make a statement as to the speed he envisages when talking about lower speed.

We want the Minister to address the other substantive issues in this report, in particular, the issue that M-TRAC has persistently raised over the years and which, in a way, triggered the process that led to the writing and tabling of this report today.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, of course I have not had time to examine the report. I will keep my remarks general in nature and begin by saying that railways are still the safest form of transport for the handling of dangerous goods.

I know that railways receive many headlines and much coverage when there is a train mishap because it is more spectacular. There is little or no reporting and little public knowledge about the thousands of mishaps in the trucking industry that occur on our highways every year.

I suggest to the Minister and the Government that the continued acceptance of rail line abandonment means an ever greater shift of the amounts of traffic of dangerous goods to our already congested urban streets and main highways.

Both railways want to abandon another 15,000 miles of track over the next seven years. They have already abandoned several thousand miles of track in western Canada. Now it is occurring in central and eastern Canada. Would you believe, Mr. Speaker, that one of the railways wants to abandon the line from Montreal to North Bay through Ottawa?

The continuing trend to allow the elimination of siding and spur tracks in our industrial and warehouse areas in cities all over Canada, not only Toronto, increases the concentration of truck movement of all those commodities, including dangerous goods, on our urban roads system and our main highways. That increases the number of accidents and risks involving trucks.

Many people may not realize in our society that thousands of truckloads or partial truckloads of dangerous commodities move on our streets every day out of sheer necessity. Trucks haul explosives like gunpowder and ammunition to hardware stores. They haul various kinds of solvents and cleaning fluids to stores all over our cities. This occurs every day with thousands of vehicles everywhere in Canada. Let us not delude ourselves into thinking that by doing something about the movement of dangerous goods on railways through our urban centres we will suddenly reduce the risk. Frankly, I do not think it will.

We can handle much of this with present infrastructure along with some modifications, better operating rules, a better system of inspection and better enforcement by the Government of Canada over the maintenance of railway rolling stock and all transportation vehicles, including the trucking industry.

When one sees the railroads reducing their track forces, reducing the number of inspectors and carmen they have at many locations across Canada, one would think that the Government and the National Transportation Agency would show some alarm. But it is always the bottom-line syndrome that takes over. The trucking industry is in regulatory shambles. We were promised, with the introduction of Bill C-19, that there would be an agreement reached among the 13 jurisdictions—the two Territories, the 10 provinces and the federal Government—on a standardized regulatory regime across Canada, whether it was with respect to licensing, load limits, speed limits, handling of dangerous goods, or whatever. The agreement still has not been arrived at. In that respect one of my colleagues mentioned the Meech Lake Accord again.

The federal Government has complete and total jurisdiction and legal authority, constitutional authority, on all trucking that moves inter-provincially and internationally. If the provinces do not want to or refuse to co-operate with respect to a standard set of rules, regulations and practices, then it seems to me that the federal Government must exercise its responsibility and do it.

I want to mention another item about the whole matter of safety. I want you, Mr. Speaker, to visualize something that has occurred and can occur again. In Canada there are thousands and thousands of vehicles carrying dangerous goods which travel our roads and which go over something in the order of 100,000 level crossings. If a locomotive hits one of those vehicles on the Prairies—the thousands of farm fuel vehicles—travelling over all our roads, or in the cities, and a truck bursts into flames with an entire crew in the locomotive, and with them are all the documents that say what are the contents of that train, including which cars have dangerous goods and what kind of dangerous goods, and that locomotive also bursts into flames, who is going to notify whom about what? There is nobody in the caboose because there is no caboose to put up a phone and call the fire department, the police and the ambulances, and to notify the nearest Dangerous Goods Directorate. Mr. Speaker, they would not listen, and the Government has authorized this high risk and unsafe practice.

I want to say one final thing, Mr. Speaker, about rail line relocation, which is fine when you get it in the right location. My own City of Regina is a classic case of approval being given by Government to relocate track and rail yards in the wrong place, and at a cost beyond the financial capacity of the city. I hope the Minister will review and overturn the CTC decision and make that city and the railroads go back to the drawing board. Unless there is a fully informed and consulted public on rail line relocation, then the NIMBY, "not in my back yard", syndrome takes over, similar to what happens with waste disposal sites.

I think the standing committee will welcome the opportunity to deal with the report. I hope it will deal with it with relative speed and hear from people right across Canada. I hope that there will not be any question about the committee being provided with the fullest resources, both financially and staffwise, as well as reasonable time to do a thorough job.

Something that the Minister might wish to consider when he is looking over the Toronto situation, but something which also concerns Thunder Bay, Windsor and Vancouver as well as a lot of other locations, is one wide multi-track corridor with both railroads being required to use it as a possible solution. I think that in many locations in the country this is something that could be looked at which would probably in the long run be cheaper to put in and to keep operating.

INTERPARLIAMENTARY DELEGATIONS

TABLING OF REPORT ON RESIDING OFFICERS' VISIT TO CANBERRA

Hon. Steven E. Paproski (Edmonton North): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 101, I have the honour to present to the House the report, in both official languages, of the visit by residing officers to Canberra for the inauguration address and first meetings of the Senate and the House of Representatives in the new Parliament House, August 21 to 24, 1988.

CANADIAN HERITAGE LANGUAGES INSTITUTE ACT

PRESENTATION OF REPORT OF LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present the report of the Legislative Committee on Bill C-152, an Act to establish the Canadian Heritage Languages Institute. Today is a very appropriate time to report the Bill establishing the Canadian Heritage Languages Institute.

I want to thank the members of the committee for their co-operation.

PETITIONS

CANADA-U.S. FREE TRADE AGREEMENT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is my honour to present a petition pursuant to Standing Order 106 on behalf of a number of constituents from western Canada who believe that the present Government lacks a mandate from the people of Canada to conclude a trade deal with the United States.

They believe very strongly, Mr. Speaker, that as a result of the trade deal Canadian sovereignty would be seriously compromised. They believe also that the deal itself would deny Canada the policy freedom to determine its own economic future and undermine Canada's ability to build a society distinct from that of the United States.

They actually have a whole number of other concerns. Let me simply summarize by saying that they are asking for Parliament to dissolve now to allow the people of Canada an opportunity to accept or reject the proposed trade deal during a national general election.

INSTALLATION OF CANADA POST SUPERMAILBOXES IN MAPLE, ONTARIO

Mr. Anthony Roman (York North): Pursuant to Standing Order 106, I have the honour to present a petition on behalf of constituents asking the Government to intercede with Canada Post regarding the installation of supermailboxes in Maple, Ontario.

These petitioners live in an old, established community which never has had door-to-door delivery and which does not wish to see the problems associated with supermailboxes.

They are much more willing to continue their tradition of general mail delivery and pick up, and estimate that 90 per cent of their community is in agreement. Many of these individuals are angry. They, all of them, look to our Government for an ear to their needs and a stop to this construction.

CHILD CARE—REQUEST FOR WITHDRAWAL OF BILL

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): I have the privilege, pursuant to Standing Order 106, to present a petition on behalf of the residents of Fort Francis and Ignace in my riding.

Mr. Speaker, your petitioners today call upon the Government to withdraw what they see as an inadequate child care Act which contains neither national standards nor adequate funding arrangements.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 397 and 410.

[Text]

CANADA POST CORPORATION

Question No. 397—Mrs. Sparrow:

Has the government ever granted a postal franchise in the Lake Bonavista Shopping Centre in Calgary and, if so (a) during what period of time (b) was there any (i) profit involved (ii) loss to the government and, if so, in what amount?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): 1. No. Providing postal services through a "franchised" outlet is a relatively new approach for the Corporation. A "postal franchise" has never existed at the Lake Bonavista Shopping Centre. However, until recently there was a private sector postal outlet located in the Shopping Centre—known as a Retail Postal Outlet.

In the immediate vicinity of Lake Bonavista Shopping Centre, there are two Retail Postal Outlets currently operating. These include RPO No. 122 in Southcentre Mall, located at Macleod Trail and Anderson Road, and RPO No. 156 in the Deer Valley Shopping Centre, located at Canyon Meadows Drive and Bow Bottom Trail.

The Southcentre Mall and the Deer Valley Shopping Centre have been identified as future full service sites, which will improve the accessibility of products and services in the immediate area. Currently, customers must travel approximately 2.5 km from the Lake Bonavista Shopping Centre, to Postal Station "F" for full service.

In addition to these two full service sites, there will be approximately 12 stamp shops in the area, including one at the Lake Bonavista Shopping Centre.

In keeping with Canada Post Corporation's commitment to providing improved customer access to postal products and services, this new configuration of postal outlets means better service for residents in the Lake Bonavista area.

(a) The Lake Bonavista Shopping Centre Retail Postal Outlet (formerly known as a sub-post office) was in operation for more than a decade, until its recent closure by the operator in early 1988.

(b) Financial arrangements between Canada Post Corporation and its private sector operators is considered proprietary information. The outlet located at the Shopping Centre was a private sector outlet and, therefore, the operator's remuneration was based on revenues at the outlet.

GRANTS/LOANS TO METROPOLITAN TORONTO

Question No. 410—Mr. Redway:

Since September 4, 1984, did Canada Ports Corporation make grants and/or loans to persons or corporations, non-governmental organizations and governments within Metropolitan Toronto and, if so, to which ones and, in each case, in what amount and for what purpose?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): The management of Canada Ports Corporation advises as follows: No.

QUESTIONS PASSED AS ORDERS FOR RETURN

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): If Questions Nos. 388 and 390 could be made Orders for Return, these returns would be tabled immediately.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House that Questions Nos. 388 and 390 be deemed to have been made Orders for Return?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

FEDERAL EXPENDITURES IN KENORA—RAINY RIVER

Question No. 388—Mr. Parry:

Between February 18, 1980 and September 4, 1984, did any government departments or agencies spend money or provide grants in the constituency of Kenora—Rainy River, and if so, by what departments or agencies and, in each case (a) on what dates (b) in what amounts (c) under which programs was the money spent?

Return tabled.

FEDERAL EXPENDITURES IN CALGARY EAST

Question No. 390—Mr. Kindy:

Since September, 1984, have any government departments or agencies awarded grants or loans to individuals, corporations, or non-governmental organizations located in the constituency of Calgary East and, if so, to which ones and, in each case (a) in what amounts (b) for what purposes?

Return tabled.

[English]

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): I would ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

• (1200)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I wish to inform the House that because of the ministerial statements, Government Orders will be extended by 50 minutes, beginning at one o'clock.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, earlier today the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) submitted to the Chair a request for an emergency debate on the issue of the truckers and the others that have lost their jobs as a result of the privatization of CN Trucking.

I wonder if I could get some direction as to when the Speaker would be making a decision as to whether or not that emergency debate will be granted.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair has had no notice of that request, but we will inquire immediately and report back to the House as soon as we have it.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANADA CHILD CARE ACT

ALLOCATION OF TIME TO CONSIDER THIRD READING STAGE OF BILL C-144

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Speaker, I move:

> That, in relation to Bill C-144, an Act to authorize payments by Canada toward the provision of child care services, and to amend the Canada Assistance Plan in consequence thereof, not more than one further sitting day be allotted to the third reading stage of the Bill; and
> That fifteen minutes before the expiry of the time provided for government business on the day allotted to the consideration of the third reading stage of the said Bill, any proceedings before the House shall be interrupted, if required, for the purpose of this Order and, in turn, every question necessary in order to dispose of the stage of the Bill then under consideration shall be put forthwith and successively, without further debate or amendment.

I should not take too long in my remarks in this debate. We have brought forward, I believe, historic, innovative social legislation which, for the first time in Canada, will set up a child care system. It is very much in keeping with the direction of this Government to give people a hand up and not a hand out.

It is innovative in that it has various ways of applying the funding. I appreciate that some will say that it is not enough and others will say that it should be done differently, but we think we have a good start on this social legislation and we want to implement it. We want to proceed as quickly as we can to get this to the Senate, in the hopes that the Senate will move quickly on this legislation.

We have suffered a delay on the Bill at other stages of debate. I am speaking of the days when it was called at second reading, where we considered the Bill in principle.

I would draw to the House's attention the remarks of my friend from Kamloops—Shuswap, who said, as reported on page 19481 of yesterday's Hansard:

> I do not see any reason for wanting to rush this legislation through. We will debate for the rest of the week, all of next week and the following weeks, until it is appropriately debated.

I find that unfortunate. It indicates that my colleague from Kamloops—Shuswap has no care or feeling for the children of this country or for single parents or for parents who work. I know that that Party makes a great to do about looking after ordinary Canadians, but with that one statement my friend has abandoned Canadians with children and Canadian children. I am not sure whether that is now NDP policy or whether he will wish to retract it in his remarks. I would hope that he would, because I know him to be a caring person, and I find that remark to be completely out of character with his normal conduct. Hopefully, during his comments he will retract that.

I do not need to spend any more time on my feet than is necessary. I would say this to the Opposition, that it would be our intention to call this on Monday, and if my friend wants to sit through lunch on Monday and get an extra hour's debate in, we would be amenable to that. We do intend that the Bill will be called Monday, that the debate at third reading will be wrapped up, and this important piece of legislation will be sent to the Senate.

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, we have here another example of the most hypocritical, double-talking Government in recent history. On the one hand we have a Government which continually talks about parliamentary reform, parliamentary democracy, but on the other hand the same Government has used closure more than any other Government in Canadian history. It has used closure and allocation of time to crush debate in this House of Commons more than any other Government. But they are talking out of both sides of their mouth. One minute it is "what a great job we are doing to enhance parliamentary reform and parliamentary democracy", but in Bill after Bill they crush the debate, close off debate, before there is a chance for the debate really to get under way.

In this case, the Minister of State introduced a motion for allocation of time, a motion to close debate for third reading, after only three Members had spoken in this House.

The only people who had spoken were the Minister for National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), who introduced the debate on third reading, then the critic for the Liberal Party, then the critic for the New Democratic Party, and right away the Minister introduced a motion to close the debate.

Once again, the Government, with its large majority, the largest parliamentary majority in Canadian history, is using that majority to crush parliamentary debate in Canada and to stop a discussion on what is one of the most complex and controversial Bills to come before this Parliament in this session.

What is the history of this Bill? The Government promised legislation on day care in the all-Party debate during the election of 1984. It was in the summer of 1984 that this Government promised new legislation on child care. Yet, we only got the Bill on July 25, 1988. We only got the Bill this summer, in a situation where the Government moved that the House sit all summer, because it could not manage its own legislative program. It decided to introduce the Bill on July 25, 1988. The Government is now accusing the Opposition of delaying.

If this Bill is not passed prior to an expected fall election, then surely the fault is not with the Opposition. The fault is surely not with the Senate. The Bill has not even been sent to the Senate yet. The fault is with the Government. It is the Government that delayed the Bill from 1984 until July 25, 1988.

There has not been a filibuster on this Bill. How can the Government say that there has been delay on this Bill when it introduced the motion, when all we had was the Minister and the chief opposition critic speaking?

On second reading, we only had three days of debate. In the legislative committee on this Bill, a very complex and controversial Bill, as I said, we only had three and a third days of discussion and hearings, despite a demand by groups from all over the country that they be heard on this Bill and be given adequate time to be heard.

On report stage, we only had two days, because Your Honour had ruled out of order many of the amendments that had been proposed. We are at third reading and the Government has just put a motion that we limit debate to one more day.

This attempt by the Government to limit debate on this very complex and controversial Bill is totally, totally unacceptable. I want to point out, so that Canadians will know, that in the three and a third days of committee hearings the Government again used its majority to force all the witnesses to be heard in those three and a third days. There were 40 groups that came before the committee to be heard and the Government gave each one of those groups a half an hour or less. Can you imagine, anyone with any experience in Parliament saying to a group that might come from Montreal, Vancouver or the Atlantic provinces, "We want to hear you but you only have 30 minutes to make your presentation and answer questions from members of the committee"? What nonsense. Usually we give the witness groups at least one hour in committee.

These witnesses and members of the committee were forced to deal with this Bill in just half an hour. I say forced, because a motion was passed by Conservative Members cutting off debate in committee, forcing 40 groups to make their presentations within that very short period of time, and all in Ottawa. The committee did not seek opinions outside Ottawa. The groups had to come to Ottawa.

This Bill is supposed to be so good, but what was the unanimous opinion of those groups? Of those 40 groups that received very short hearings before the committee, not one supported the Bill. The Government could not find one group to appear before the committee to support the Bill. The only witness who supported the Bill was the Minister who is sponsoring the Bill.

Forty of the groups in Canada interested in child care came to the committee and said that the Bill was not adequate, that it does not fulfil the needs of Canadian children. Some of them even suggested that the Bill was a step backward, a regression over what we already have. They criticized this Bill first because it has no national standards. It provides money for day care, but there are no standards as to how the provinces, the municipalities and the various groups must perform in providing day care.

The Bill does not meet the needs of Canadian children. There is no provision at all for latchkey children, young children who must come home after school without parents to take care of them. It only provides for 200,000 new day care spaces over seven years. The need right now is for two million day care spaces, due to the fact that there have been radical changes in society, starting in the sixties, with more and more single mothers, more and more mothers working because of the attitudinal changes in society and the need for both father and mother to work because there is not adequate income with only one parent working to cover the housing, food, clothing and educational needs of the family.

This is a controversial, complex Bill. It was opposed by every day care group that appeared in the very short and compressed time before the committee. More debate and more hearings are needed in order to clarify the weaknesses and shortcomings of the Bill and in order to put before the Canadian people the various alternatives on day care.

The Government has a false idea of the role of Parliament. The Government feels that because it has a majority in Parliament, the outcome of a vote is a foregone conclusion. Unfortunately, that is so. We know there are very few independent-thinking Members of Parliament on the Conservative side who will break ranks from time to time on a question of conscience. They will vote in a bloc and defeat the positions of the two opposition Parties.

We know we will be defeated on every vote put to the House, but the purpose of debate, I repeat again and again, is unfortunately not simply to convince Members on the government side. We know we will not convince them. The purpose of the debate in this House is to send arguments on different issues out of the House so the Canadian population can understand the issues. That is why the debates of this House are televised. That is why the proceedings are reported in Hansard. That is why we have a Press Gallery.

We do not expect to convince those stone-age Tories over there. By having a reasonable debate, we want to let Canadians understand the issues behind the Bill. It is a travesty of parliamentary democracy and justice that the Government should give only one more day to this debate on third reading.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I will give the floor to the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap in a moment, but I have been notified, concerning the question raised by the Member for Kamloops—Shuswap as to the emergency debate, that the Chair did receive notice at 9.51 this morning, so we do apologize for not bringing it up. The Speaker will deal with it immediately after Question Period.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, you may have noted that it is dull in the House of Commons. A cloud hangs over the House of Commons once again, the cloud of closure, the cloud of a Government that has betrayed the principles of parliamentary democracy as we have come to know it in Canada.

This is a closure-crazed Government. There has never been a Government in the history of Canada that has so repeatedly decided to muzzle Parliamentarians, those who are elected to represent the people of Canada. As a matter of fact, I remember the day when Conservative Members of the House rushed the Speaker's chair and stopped the House of Commons from performing. I remember other days when, through a misuse of parliamentary tactics, Conservative Members closed down the House of Commons for day after day. The one place where Canadians could speak their minds without fear of reprisal was taken away from them. Those who were elected to represent the people of Canada had no opportunity to express the views of their constituents.

Once again, on one of the most important social issues that has faced this House of Commons in the last four years, the Government has decided not to tolerate any more discussion. As my hon. friend who just spoke indicated, the importance of this discussion is not to try to convince the parliamentary eunuchs across the way, and I call them parliamentary eunuchs because they have no power, they have no influence. Their voices are worthless.

What we are really seeing is the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) deciding that now is the time to jam, to rush, to push this legislation through the House of Commons, and he does not want to hear anybody on the government side speaking on the most important social issue to face us. That is why I call all of those Members across the way government eunuchs. They have no life, no voice, no muscle. We do not hear them represent their constituents.

I would think that there should be a revolt on the backbenches of the Government. Surely to goodness there is someone over there who believes that this is not good legislation. When this was before committee, the Conservative, Liberal and New Democrat members of the committee wanted to have experts come before us. We wanted to bring in the best the country has to offer to advise us on child care, and they came. Not many were allowed to come, because government Members wanted to rush this through the committee in only two days of committee debate.

We brought before us a whole set of witnesses, 40 different witnesses, the best and most expert voices on child care in the country. Do you know what every single witness said, Mr. Speaker? They all said we should tear up the legislation, send it back, throw it out, not proceed with it. This legislation is wrong-headed, this legislation is anti-children.

Where are the compassionate people on the government benches? Are there any? All I hear is sheep-like sounds, just "Baa, baa, baa, tell us what to do, we will cheer, we will clap like seals if that is what we have to do. We are not going to speak out on behalf of our constituents, we are not going to listen to the experts on child care".

This is not democracy. This is a dictatorship. This is dictatorial. The Prime Minister says, no more debate, no more discussion, ignore all of the expert advice on this issue and ram the legislation through. The Government has the numbers to do that, but it abuses the very principles that Canadians hold so dear, the principles of democracy and of open and free debate.

We feel very strongly about this legislation. We think this legislation should be sent back to the drawing-board and drafted properly because it was a rush job. More than four years ago, the Prime Minister said that he had as a priority the introduction of decent child care in Canada. Then 1984 went by, 1985 went by, 1986 went by, 1987 went by and 1988 nearly went by. Then, in the dying moments of this Parliament, the Prime Minister rushes in and says, "Oh, we have to jam some kind of child care legislation through the House of Commons with no decent debate, no decent examination of the legislation". Just get something through because I promised it a little over four years ago. We are dealing with legislation that makes no sense in meeting the really serious needs in Canada.

There are two million children in Canada today, Mr. Speaker, who require quality child care of one kind or another. This legislation before us is providing 200,000 child care spaces over the next seven years to meet an immediate two million space requirements. The situation will have doubled at the end of seven years in terms of need. If the Government of Canada did absolutely nothing, took the legislation and put it in a drawer or threw it away, we would be better off because in several years from now we would have more child care spaces than this legislation will provide. That is why we say it is regressive and bad legislation. It is worsening the situation from the status quo.

It is important that the people of Canada hear about this, and the only way they will be able to evaluate the situation is to hear two sides of the debate. He should provide an opportunity for opposition Members to voice their concerns and then hear from government Members why they think this is good legislation. But to do that, Mr. Speaker, you have to have a debate in the House of Commons on the most important social legislation the Government has introduced. Are we having that important debate? No, we are absolutely not. The Government has decided after one speech from each of the three political Parties—there are 282 Members of Parliament—that enough is enough. The Government has said: "We are cutting off debate and muzzling Parliamentarians, but we will set aside one more day". Can you imagine one more day of debate on the most important social legislation introduced in this House in years and years?

But that is the kind of view that presumably the Prime Minister has of democracy. I am not criticizing my friends opposite. I do call them political and parliamentary eunuchs. I say that because I really do not believe that they can sit there hour after hour and say nothing on this important issue. Yet they are not going to be given that opportunity, thanks to our Prime Minister.

It is undemocratic that this Bill is being rushed through. It is unparliamentary that we are jamming legislation through the House of Commons, using parliamentary Rambo-like tactics to close off debate. People say they keep hearing the distant echo of jackboots time and time again as closure is introduced this week, closure next week and closure again. There is not a Government in the history of this country that has used closure of one form or another more than this Government has.

What does that tell us about the Government? Does it tell us that this Government believes in open, free debate? Of course not. It tells us that this Government does not believe in the most fundamental principles of free speech where those who are duly elected to serve Canadians in the House of Commons have an opportunity to express the views of their constituents. But we are being denied that opportunity. We are having that fundamental responsibility of Parliamentarians to reflect the views of our constituents taken away. We have been trying to reflect the views of the experts from all of the child care groups, the coalitions and the individuals who are respected from one side of Canada to another. They came to the committee and said: "Please, Mr. Prime Minister, start again. Please, Mr. Minister, don't proceed with this backward, regressive legislation. Put the interest of Canada's young people foremost rather than your political interest in terms of jamming some legislation through in the moments before an election call".

I say this is not only a dark day for Parliament but, worse, it is a dark day for the children of Canada that we have a Government that is so uncaring, so callous, so crass in its political efforts that it is prepared to set aside the interests of Canada's young people in order to play a political agenda at the expense of the young people of Canada.

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I hear my colleague across the way saying I will have nothing to say because I agree.

Mr. Gauthier: You agree to everything. You are part of the seal pack.

Mr. Hawkes: Three-quarters of the Members of this House have agreed on second reading, on report stage and on this motion, I anticipate, and they will agree on the passage of third reading.

Mr. Gauthier: It's called dictatorship!

Mr. Hawkes: Three-quarters of the democratically-elected people of this country agree.

Mr. Gauthier: Call an election. We will take care of that.

Mr. Hawkes: What do they agree on, Mr. Speaker? They agree that children need better quality care. They agree that our children are a tremendous asset to this nation.

What is this Parliament asked to agree on in this piece of legislation? The New Democratic Party Member who just spoke said it is regressive legislation. I will tell you what he believes is regressive, Sir. It is regressive to put more money into child care. That is his view.

Mr. Gauthier: That is dishonest and you know it. You are twisting the facts again.

Mr. Hawkes: This is an absurd point of view from my perspective, but that is the view. This legislation is categorized as regressive because we are putting more money into child care. That is a regressive step from a regressive Party which has a regressive view of this country.

What is the next principle in the Bill which the New Democratic Party and the Official Opposition find regressive? That parents should have a choice on how to take care of their children, that parental choice lies at the heart of the policy of our Party and at the heart of this legislation. The opposition Parties say that this is regressive, that more money is regressive, and that it is regressive that parents should have a choice about their own children.

What is the third principle involved in this Bill? That the federal Government respects the rights and the constitutional jurisdiction of the provinces. We hear that that is regressive, that it is regressive that we should have a nation in which there is co-operation between the federal Government and the provincial Governments in the provision of social services. That is not surprising for any of us who sat in this House under the last Government from 1980 to 1984. That Government cared not one whit. It was a Liberal Government which was supported by the New Democratic Party far too often. It cared not one whit for the constitutional arrangements of this country and jurisdiction. Give them half an inch and both Parties would take over education, health care, and the courts in this country. It is also consistent with their philosophy. They want to run the world and forget about provincial voters and provincial Governments.

They say the federal Government can run everything. My experience tells me that is not correct. Decisions made in Ottawa that affect the people in Trochu, Alberta are quite often not very sensitively done. When we are talking about the parents of this nation and their children, we should not have a group of elected politicians in Ottawa or bureaucrats who live in Ottawa telling the people in Newfoundland how to raise their kids. That is really what they are after. The only reason they believe this Bill is regressive is because it does not give central control about how parents should deal with their children. That is what they want, Mr. Speaker.

Mrs. Finestone: Garbage.

Mr. Hawkes: They want their view of what is right for the children of this nation to prevail. That is what bothers them the most. If it is not that, are they concerned about more money coming into the system? Surely they are not against that?

Ms. Dewar: I don't think you have read the legislation.

Mr. Hawkes: Surely they cannot be against parental choice? But they are. They are against more money. They are against parental choice and against respecting the Constitution of Canada and the jurisdictional arrangements between the two levels of Government.

Mrs. Finestone: Not true.

Mr. Hawkes: To highlight their lack of respect for the democratic process and the issue of choice for people, we had a statement yesterday by the Liberal Leader in the Senate. How much respect does that unelected Chamber, full of well paid people appointed by the previous Government have for the democratic process when it tells us in advance, simply on the basis of a Liberal caucus meeting, that it does not matter what democratic people do in the Chamber, it does not matter that three-quarters of the people elected to this Chamber by the voters of this country want this legislation, the Senate will stall and stall and stall and it will not see the light of day?

• (1230)

Mr. Gauthier: That's a lie, and you know it.

Mr. Hawkes: The Whip for the Liberal Party says that that's a lie and I know it. Members of the Liberal Party probably cost the taxpayers of this country $500 million on the immigration Bill alone.

Mrs. Finestone: Look at the mistakes that you made all the way.

Mr. Hawkes: Stalling on Bill C-55 cost $500 million of the taxpayers' money. There was failure to put in place something that the democratically elected people of this country said was right and proper. They stalled for a year. The cost of that, Mr. Speaker, was enormous.

That unelected Chamber is costing Canadians today in the form of higher interest rates. Every time somebody's mortgage goes up a little, or their credit card rate goes up, they should look at the Liberal Party of Canada and its control of the Senate. It is the threat by the Leader of Liberal Party to tear up the free trade agreement, the decision by the Senate to stall the will of the democratically elected Chamber, that is causing problems in the market, higher interest rates, and a devalued dollar. The only antidote to that is the polls. The polls are saying that Canadian people understand that democracy should prevail, appointed people should not.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: On a point of order, the Hon. Member for Mount Royal.

Mrs. Finestone: I was concerned with the relevancy of the remarks made by the previous speaker to the child care Bill. However, as he has terminated his address, we will leave it at that. I hope he will be more relevant next time.

Mr. Hawkes: This is not a debate on the child care Bill, Mr. Speaker, it is a debate on the motion to allocate time, and all of of these comments are relevant to that motion. The opposition Members consistently filibuster things that they do not agree with. It does not matter if it is good for Canadians. If they believe it is good for their electoral chances they filibuster.

I just came out of a committee meeting this morning on conflict of interest legislation. We met yesterday to attempt to organize the committee. We met again today, and we are going to meet again at 3.30 p.m. because the opposition Members are filibustering. They do not want conflict of interest legislation that governs their behaviour as well government Members' behaviour, and they are trying to be clever about it. They simply waste time, waste time, waste time. On this Bill they have wasted lots of time.

It should be clear that the most significant protection that Canadians have in terms of the actions of their Government is their vote. It is their ballot and their opportunity to toss a Government out, put in a new Government, or to continue a Government.

Mr. Gauthier: They are going to boot you out so fast, Jim, you would not have a chance to say anything.

Mr. Hawkes: No Government can afford to be held hostage to the views of a minority in this Chamber. The majority must prevail. That is what democracy is all about. Democracy says that it is time to pass this legislation to put more money in the hands of children and to give more choice to parents to respect the nature of this country and its jurisdictions. That is what the Bill and the policy is about. The majority of Members in this Chamber want that policy in place, and I hope that the other place, controlled by Liberals, will smarten up, respect the voters of this country, and respect the democratic process.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a few comments on the Government's motion to limit the debate on Bill C-144.

I think it is the height of hypocrisy for this Government to tell Canadians that it is so concerned about day care, and then turn around and say it is not interested in hearing the views of their elected representatives.

Mr. Speaker, in fact it has acknowledged its incompetence in this area by letting Members like the Hon. Member for Calgary West (Mr. Hawkes) speak to the Bill. He talked about everything except the Bill and why it was necessary to discuss it in the House. He did not explain why the Government is imposing closure. He did not explain why this Government wants to rush the Bill through the House. He did none of these things. He simply talked about matters that had no connection whatsoever with the business before the House.

[English]

We have before us a motion to limit debate. It is true, as previous speakers have said, that this Government has used time allocation, limitation, and closure more than any other Government. It has a massive majority in this House, yet it cannot control the agenda, or make up its mind so that we can come to terms with the work.

The Government brought in this bill on July 25. I will go through the chronology of how the Bill went through the House. On July 25, 1988, first reading of the Bill; on second reading three days of debate on August 11, 17, and 23. Government Members are the ones who called Orders of the Day. They are the ones responsible for waiting, waffling, and for not being able to make up their minds on this issue. They come in here in August and put in three days of debate.

There were 11 Conservative back-benchers, including the Minister speaking on this Bill at second reading, and there were six Liberal Members, and six New Democratic Members. Is that a filibuster on second reading? No. This Bill was flawed and the Government knows it. We tried to correct it in committee. There were 40 witnesses who were given half an hour to present their points and arguments to improve the Bill. It was railroaded. There were three and a half days in committee from August 24 on. The Bill was reported back to the House on September 15. There were 13 amendments ruled in order. There was one amendment accepted by the Government. On September 22, two days ago, we started third reading of the Bill, which is the last phase of any legislative process. There was one speaker from each Party, then the Government rose and gave notice that it will invoke Standing Order 117, and limit debate to one additional day.

Yet government Members have the gall to rise today and call this a filibuster. I hope that the Member for Calgary West (Mr. Hawkes) will grow and mature a little before he uses the type of silly arguments that he was using this morning. Regressive legislation; indeed it is regressive legislation, distorted legislation, unresponsive.

Come the next election I hope the Member for Calgary West will self-destruct with the nonsense he has put to us today. The arguments he put were as silly as I have ever heard. He said that the Senate will filibuster and block the Bill. The Senate said no such thing. The Senate has not had the Bill yet, it is still here, so it cannot possibly know when it will get the Bill, unless the Government has decided once and for all to bully and bulldoze its way through and get the Bill to the Senate next week sometime. Until the Bill is there, how can the Government tell the media that it is filibustering and that it will block the Bill? I suspect that the least the Senate would want to do is to spend as much time as the House of Commons has, that is, three days at second reading and possibly some good committee work where they would hear these 40 witnesses who were against the Bill. There was not one witness before the committee who was in favour of the Bill, not one.

Mr. Allmand: And they were only given half an hour to respond.

Mr. Gauthier: Yes, the Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East (Mr. Allmand) says they were only given half an hour. That is true. They had half an hour to comment on a very important Bill, one which may have direct consequences on the future of our children. I would like to talk about the mentality this Government has developed over the last four years. It is called a jackboot mentality, and I think it is appropriate. Government members are running the show like dictators. If they do not have it their way, they bulldoze everything, call time allocation or closure in order to put through whatever legislation they have. They cannot debate. I have not heard one Member from the government side yet make a reasonably good argument in favour of the Bill, except for the Minister who is trying to bootleg this Bill through the House so that he can get out there and snap his suspenders or whatever they do in trying to mislead Canadians into thinking this is a good Bill. It is not a good Bill, I regret. It needs to be improved.

In Ontario it will be absolutely impossible for the Government to meet its requirements. The Government of Ontario had planned to expand by 12,000 spaces, but with this Government's legislative capping it at 200,000 spaces, Ontario will not be able to do it. Ontario has already announced that its expansion plans have been cut because the federal Government is refusing to fund its share over and above what Bill C-144 allows. In Toronto there are 4,000 families waiting to get into these day care spaces. Four thousand families are waiting to get their children into an environment which is conducive to good care and good education. But this Government does not care. It will promise 200,000 spaces over the next seven years, but debate has shown that that is very, very inferior to what we need. It is not even coping with the requirements of the day.

If one looks back over the previous years, one can see a doubling, a quadrupling of spaces under the CAP program, but CAP, the Canada Assistance Program, will not work any more because it has been taken out. The Government has put a ceiling of 200,000 spaces so the Canada Assistance Program will not be able to help the provinces cope with the problem of subsidies.

This Government has delayed continuously. It has not wanted to accept its responsibilities. Yet when it gets an idea, and in this case a bad idea, it bulldozes. I want to say a few things about my own preoccupation with my riding.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, in the riding of Ottawa—Vanier there is an urgent need for day care centres. There is an urgent need for spaces for our children, but under the present program, we will have to tell parents: Sorry, the Conservative Government had to set a ceiling, so there will be no room for your children. Come back in a few years, and we might get a grant under the program.

Mr. Speaker, I must say hundreds of families in my riding will be shocked to hear this Government has ignored their needs and turned down their very reasonable request for day-care spaces so that their children will be properly looked after and properly taught. I think it is incredible the Government could be so insensitive as to want to push a Bill through in one day, and I object to this positively odious procedure, there is no other word for it, this use of a bulldozer to get a bad Bill through the House. I wish the Hon. Member would rise in the House and explain in the course of the debate why he intends to vote for this Bill, because I intend to vote against it, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, it is not a happy occasion to have to stand and speak again on a closure motion in this House. I represent the constituency of Prince Albert. That was the seat in this House represented by the Right Honourable John George Diefenbaker for 26 years. I can just imagine what that Hon. Member of Parliament would say if he were here today and saw what his colleagues, the people in his Party, are doing to Parliament. John George Diefenbaker loved this Parliament. He believed that this Parliament was the epitome of democracy and that how it operated was important to the country and to the world. He spoke out often and long about closure when he was in this House. He would abhor the approach the Government is using today in taking away the right of Parliament to investigate and speak about a Bill with which most of the people, we now believe, do not agree.

The Member for Calgary East (Mr. Kindy) made much of the fact that 75 per cent of the Members in this House want this Bill. That is a little bit of a sheepish approach to what happens in this House. Seventy-five per cent of the Members happen to be Conservatives. However, 75 per cent of the people did not vote for them. In fact, only approximately 50 per cent of the people across Canada voted to elect these 75 Members, so they cannot in any way say they represent more than 50 per cent of the population. In fact, their support has declined so much in the last little while, they would have a great deal of trouble suggesting that they now represent more than 30 per cent or 35 per cent of the population. Perhaps a third of the people in the country would agree with the Government, but we do not think that even that many would agree with the Government on this particular piece of legislation. When 40 advocacy groups felt they had some need to speak to this Bill and came before the rushed hearings, not one of them expressed support for this particular piece of legislation. Forty groups came before the parliamentary committee and not one expressed support for this particular piece of legislation.

I spoke about my predecessor from Prince Albert. He spoke loud and long against closure in this House. He believed that this kind of approach to legislation, this kind of closing off of Parliament, was anti-democratic. He would be aghast if he saw what was happening today. Many people who are watching this debate today will remember the pipeline debate on which Mr. Diefenbaker spoke quite often. He took the idea of closure to the people of Canada and they rejected that as a method of getting legislation through Parliament.

The Right Hon. John George Diefenbaker was not the only Conservative who thought that closure was not a good idea and who spoke against it. Not too long ago, on June 9, 1981, one of the members of this particular Government, the Party that controls this House right at the moment, one of the front-benchers, made a few statements about closure. It was the Member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie), the Minister for International Trade. He stated:

> This comes from a closure-crazed government—

One would think he was talking about his own Government—

> —a government which suffers from the crime of parliamentary bestiality. It cannot wait to force these kinds of things through the House.

He went on to say that it is a betrayal of the parliamentary system. We have a parallel here today. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), when he was running for the leadership of his Party, told the people of Canada and the people of his Party that under no circumstances would he support trade with the United States. He has now betrayed this Parliament and the people of Canada by pushing through a policy on free trade which he, at one time, said he would not do under any circumstances.

• (1250)

To go on with the comments of the Member for St. John's West on the subject of closure, he said:

> This is an illustration of what has happened to Canada. Today we have a parliamentary system of government without any checks and balances and without the separation of powers. The Prime Minister has a group of docile sheep in his caucus who keep him in power, no matter what he is doing. They just say, "Baaa, sir, baaa, sir, pass it through the House, sir". As long as they do that, he has absolute power.

That sounds very much as though he were speaking about his own Government, doesn't it, Mr. Speaker? He continued:

> This Prime Minister has absolute power as long as the majority in his caucus give him that unlimited power. They are so busy with their noses in the patronage trough and power trough that they neither know nor care what happens to this Parliament, and we can expect nothing from them.

That is what the Member from St. John's West, the present Minister for International Trade, thought of closure when he sat on the opposition side of the House.

I will go on with further comments by that particular Minister. He said:

> Where are all the defenders of the people on the other side of the House? They are going to come out of their trough in a few minutes. They will hear the bell and they will have to break away from whatever trough they have their noses in at the moment. They will have to come into this House and say "Oink, oink". They will have to say "Aye, aye". They will have to say "Yes" to the stampeding of Parliament, to rushing this bill through the House. They will have to say "Yes" to the gutting of Parliament. They will have to do the dirty work that the parliamentary assistants, assassins and eunuchs have asked them to do.

I think that most of the Members of this House would agree that what is being done here is not good parliamentary procedure. This particular Bill is probably a good example of the inadequacy that the Government has shown during its four years in this House. It promised that it would do something about child care four years ago in the election campaign. It has been in office for four years now and it did not move on this issue until just lately. The Bill was introduced for second reading in the middle of the summer when the election call was imminent. Parliament was asked to give it second reading in the middle of the summer, and the Government is now moving closure on a Bill that had only one speaker from each Party at third reading.

Why is there such a rush to push this legislation through this Parliament if it is so unpopular? Could it be that the Government does not want the people of Canada to hear too much about this legislation because it happens to be a centre-piece of its election program, that it wants to put it before the people of Canada as a plank in its election program? If the people hear too much about how poor this legislation is, they will not support the Government in this particular area.

I abhor, as did the Right Hon. John G. Diefenbaker, a Government that will push through Parliament, without adequate debate, any legislation which should have a full airing before the people of Canada.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak to the time allocation motion that has been brought forward by the Government to limit debate and to effect closure. This abuse of the democratic process by a majoritarian Government is the worst in the history of Canada. Most people who watch Parliament or are interested in Parliament are really not aware of the procedures of the House. I would like to say a few words based on that lack of awareness of some, or perhaps of the majority.

I believe that we have abused the democratic process through the Government's operation in more than one instance. In fact, most Bills that have been of prime importance have ended up with time allocation. Why, with such a massive majority, has the Government not been able to manage its own business? When it cannot manage its own business it tries to scapegoat. It tries to scapegoat the Senate. The amusing yet sad story is that the Senate has not yet even seen this Bill and yet the Government is saying that it is blocking it. That is perfectly ridiculous.

What has been the procedure on this very important piece of legislation, this basic building block to equality, stature, and opportunity for all Canadians? Let us look at what has taken place in order to know where we stand. Twenty years ago a Royal commission under Florence Bird, now Senator Bird, took a good look at what was happening with equality of opportunity for women and families in this land. She noted that one of the important measures to effect equality for women and for families was the application and implementation of child care.

The Canada Assistance Plan then came in which allowed for the growth and development of a child care policy for those who wished to apply for it. We had an evaluation done by Judge Abella. She was looking at equality of opportunity in the workplace and she developed the term "employment equity". That term related to the basic building block which was child care.

Then we had the report *1*Equality For All* which looked at the application of Section 15 of the Canadian Constitution. We addressed the question of child care in that. We then had a parliamentary committee study child care. I sat on that parliamentary committee. I went to British Columbia and heard what they had to say out there.

There was a lot of consultation. The Government is very good in consultation. The one thing it forgets is to listen to what is being said in the consultations. It came back and wrote a Bill. That means it supposedly put into legislative language the attitudes and concerns that were expressed.

After having this full and comprehensive review we were faced with the draft language of the child care legislation, Bill C-144. It has been available for review and study for some time and the Government now feels the pressure to convene this kangaroo court and call closure.

Let us take a look at the facts. The facts are that first reading was given on July 25, and today is September 22. It has not even been before the public to be looked at for two months. On July 25 the legal language came out. No one saw it on July 25, in the middle of what happened to be a very hot summer. On August 11 the Bill received second reading. There were not even three full days of debate. Eleven back-bench Conservatives spoke, six Members from our Party and six New Democratic Party Members spoke to the Bill. It was then sent to committee. The action taken by that committee was absolutely unprecedented. I know that many names were submitted, but of the list that was submitted, 40 witnesses appeared, each with half an hour in which to give an assessment of a Bill that was barely a month old.

Most of these groups are volunteers. They had to organize their members, sit down and work hard to analyse the Bill. It is not easy to get organized in the summer, but they came here and were treated with absolute disdain. These groups were given 30 minutes each to make a presentation and answer questions. How can one have an enlightened approach with that kind of ridiculous structure?

Not one group agreed with this Bill. All of them thought that it did not represent the years of consultation that had taken place. How can the Government say that it was listening? How can it be proud of this Bill? No wonder that it has called for closure. It does not want to arouse public interest and make Canadians aware of the disgraceful way the Government has handled the principles of democracy and justice, let alone being informed about the most important social policy that it is supposed to be introducing. It will not even bring in national objectives. This Bill is a sheer and utter disgrace and the Government ought to be ashamed of itself.

The Government operates by sleight of hand. It packages its policies with pretty words, says much in its preambles, but when it comes to putting it into legislation where it can actually put its words into practice, it has done nothing that will be effective for the children of this country.

What the Government is doing to the children is disgraceful. It will be called to account. It should reconsider the fact that it is calling closure on a vital piece of legislation which should ensure the future of Canadian children through choice by parents in Canada. That is not what the Government has done. This Bill will impact on our children and their families. The Government has put the country into a strait-jacket and it should be ashamed.

How can the Government expect the population to be informed when it ensures that it will be uninformed? How does it expect the Senate to respond when it has not yet sent the Bill there?

We should consider why the Government has developed this jackboot mentality. It does not bring forward the kinds of Bills this country deserves and has demanded. Democracy has lost its meaning. Time allocation and closure are totally unacceptable.

The 40 witnesses who had one-half hour each to comment on the Bill at least had time to say that it is flawed. That committee stage terminated on August 24. Report stage commenced on September 15. There were 13 amendments, only one of which was accepted.

I may have had complaints about the Broadcasting Act, but at least the Minister had been open enough to act in a spirit to accept some amendments. The Chairman of our legislative committee was sensible and open enough to allow an extension of time in order to hear the groups. It is unfortunate that this was not reflected in the Bill and in the amendments, but there was at least a sense of democracy. There is no sense of democracy or understanding with this legislation.

Finally, at third reading three Members have spoken on this vital and key social policy. It just shows what the Government thinks about social policy. It does not know how to implement social policy so it will hide it by passing it quickly so no one knows what it involves. The Government's approach is sheer hypocrisy.

It may be sheer hypocrisy and the Government may believe that it can cover it up, but the election will give us a chance to tell the people of Canada that while the Conservatives may know how to package policies through public relations, they know nothing about content.

Ms. Marion Dewar (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak to this motion of time allocation, which is really a form of closure. It is a disgrace that this Parliament is being presented with a motion like this today.

Government Members suggest we do not want to get this legislation through because we do not care about children. I hesitate to say that there are members of the Government who have not read the legislation because if they care about children they would recognize that this legislation does not focus on children.

Members opposite say that this is progressive legislation, but they cannot stand to hear debate about it. They are concerned about an open debate on this legislation. They restricted the number of witnesses at committee stage over a period of two days. Some 40 groups presented briefs and made representations to the committee, and the Government could not find one group in this country that supported the legislation.

These groups have done much research and study into child care, child development, public policy and family policy. Yet the Government could not find one group to support its legislation. The Government brought this legislation back from committee and allowed three Members to speak on what the Government suggests is historic social policy. There is no historic policy in front of the House. It is a cosmetic package that pretends to present a child care strategy. The Government is essentially allowing tax exemptions for people who already have child care. The Government is not looking after those two million children across Canada who are in dire need of child care.

I take exception to the suggestions by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and other members of the Government that as soon as this legislation is passed working mothers who are concerned about adequate care for their children will have that care available. That is utter nonsense and really misleads the public.

Not only did the Government restrict the number of people it would hear, it heard no one from Saskatchewan, the Maritimes or the Territories. Obviously, in its arrogant stance, the Government decided that these people were not important and that families and children in these areas did not count. I am sure the Government must have beaten the bushes to find someone who would support this legislation but was unable to do so. It could not find any group that would say this is good legislation.

In the 1984 election campaign the Conservatives said that there was need for child care policy. In a public debate the Prime Minister said that it would be a priority of his Government.

Let us look at how the Prime Minister considers this a priority of this Government. He waited until the summer of 1988 to bring forward legislation that he said was a priority. In the meantime, he was busy attempting to deindex seniors' pensions, he was deindexing family allowance, he was increasing the taxes on ordinary families and he was bailing out banks. He did absolutely nothing with respect to child care.

Then he rushed this legislation through in the summer of 1988, during the month of July when many people are on vacation and it is difficult to organize communities to have the kind of participation that something as important as this should have. Even at that it is not enough to cut off the ordinary people across the country. But what the Government is doing is refusing to allow a full and open debate on the child care legislation that has been brought before us.

To suggest that it is putting all this extra money into child care is absolute nonsense. We know that in the next seven years we certainly would, under the Canada Assistance Plan, get the same number of spaces as we would have now. We also know that what would happen is that we would not cut off the Canada Assistance Plan, which is going to happen now, as soon as the provinces decide that they want to become part of this plan. It means that many of those families that are in real need, the families of low-income and poor families, are the ones that are not going to be able to get access to child care. That is a real disgrace.

We have seen the effects of what happened under an insensitive Government in wartime. Certainly we are redressing today some of the things that happened to Japanese Canadians. If this measure goes through, what it is really saying again is that we have an insensitive Government that does not care about what happens to our children in the present or our children in the future.

This kind of child care strategy is no child care strategy at all. What the Government is doing is deleting the ability to use the Canada Assistance Plan. What it is doing is allowing for tax expenditures to be part of the expenditure of the child care program, which really is not adding to spaces at all. What it is doing is putting money into the pockets of the people who now can afford child care. That is not the issue at all. The issue is the two million children out there who have no kind of quality care.

There has been some talk about how maybe we as the New Democratic Party would like to centralize all of the delivery of that service. We are certainly not talking about that at all. This Party would like to see a decentralization of service with some guarantee that there would be quality care, whether one is in the Northwest Territories, Yukon, Newfoundland, British Columbia, Quebec, Ontario, or wherever. That certainly is not central control. What it is saying is that any child in Canada has the right to some quality care. This Government has consistently refused to put in any kind of national objectives. Sometimes I wonder how members of this Government think they grew up themselves. It seems to me that they love to talk about it being fine if parents would stay at home and look after their children.

I think we have to look at the reality that if we take the lowest salary of the two-income family away we will find that 64 per cent of those families are living in poverty. Two people are not working just for the luxury of working. Two people in a family today are working because they are trying to provide a home, a shelter, education and nurturing for their children.

Surely the Government should recognize that its responsibility is to be able to assist that. It does not matter where Canadians and Canadian families are living. It is most important that we have some kind of a child care policy that says that those children are guaranteed quality care. But this Government is insensitive. It is uncaring. It likes to package things in a cosmetic, superficial way that pretends it is doing things when it is doing nothing. It is terrified to expose itself to an open debate in which the Canadian people can really understand what a sham this legislation is. This is an insult to the intelligence of Canadians.

The only good thing that can happen is that we have an election soon so that the Canadian people can make a judgment on the kind of legislation we will have before us. This Government will not allow it to happen in the House of Commons because it will not allow that kind of debate. All it does every time it brings something in is to hurry it through and then decide right away that we must have closure we must have time allocation. That is because the Government cannot allow the people to debate this because they might understand what it is all about.

I see that my time is up. I hope that the time of this Government is up fairly soon.

[Translation]

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Mr. Speaker, as you said, and rightly so, this is not really a debate on the substance of the Bill before the House, Bill C-144. I am sure Canadians would like to know what this Bill is about. And in fact it is an Act to authorize payments by Canada toward the provision of child care services and to amend the Canada Assistance Plan in consequence thereof.

The debate we are having right now is not, however, about the substance of the Bill but about procedure. This is one more instance, and I see my Quebec colleagues are very interested in the debate, this is one more instance of the Government bringing in a very important Bill and deciding to push it through the House and impose it on Canadians.

This is a very important Bill. This is a Bill that was promised us in 1984, during that great and glorious election campaign. And then all of a sudden, on July 25, 1988, four years later . . . Is the House to blame? Certainly not! Is the Opposition to blame? Not at all! It's all because one day the Government decided to get out its 1984 election platform and realized, in the process, that . . . Oh, dearie me! In 1984 we promised them a day care Bill, and we haven't done anything about it. Let's set a bill drafted, good or bad, and use our majority to push it through the House. We have to make sure that in the next election campaign, we can go to Quebec and everywhere else in Canada and say that we fulfilled our election mandate. Well, this is against all the rules of intelligent procedure in this House.

Mr. Speaker, as you know, we have tried to update the House of Commons and the way we operate. We had this vast parliamentary reform that was supposed to give parliamentary committees enough time to consider a bill and allow them to call witnesses to ensure that Canadians and Quebecers understand what the Bill entails. However, the Government is getting nervous because it realizes that the end is near, and so its says: whether you like it or not, we are going to push this Bill through, whether it is a good Bill or not. As far as I am concerned, it can't be that good, since only four witnesses were heard in three or four days, and none spoke out in favour of the Bill. so why the rush to limit debate?

Well, it seems there may be an election pretty soon. It doesn't matter whether the Bill is good or bad. The Government must be able to go before Canadians and say it has fulfilled its mandate. Quebecers, however, should wonder why the Government waited so long. Why did it wait until the very last minute—we want to introduce this Bill we just happened to overlook! I really have the impression that someone must have looked at their election platform and their promises, then reached the conclusion that a number of important items had been forgotten and, in the end-of-session panic decided to get those last promises through the House of Commons.

Mr. Speaker, this is not a healthy way to operate in a parliamentary democracy. The Government had four years and a month to schedule the implementation of its election promises.

• (1320)

[English]

This Government had four years, four long years, to implement this piece of legislation. Here we are, almost at the very last minute of the last two weeks—maybe, as my colleague from the third Party is saying—when the Government seems to have reopened the book of its promises of 1984 and realized that it has forgotten a few items in it, not to say many, and therefore will force, ram through the House of Commons, this issue.

I can imagine a Cabinet session where the Right Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and his Cabinet instruct Mr. Lewis, the Deputy House Leader, by saying "I don't care how you do it, ram this through the House because we may call the election". Who knows? Maybe Mr. Bourassa will call a provincial election. If such were the case, then there would be no federal election. That is what I heard this morning, and I will not give too much credit to that. But anything can happen.

Why is there this sudden urgency? It is a bad Bill. How can everybody who is involved in this subject matter be opposed to it? I am not an expert in this domain, but I hope I have enough intelligence to understand that everybody who is involved in this subject matter should oppose the Bill.

I know that in my district, especially the new one, I will most likely have the honour to run in the next election. I was already chosen there on May 1 with over a thousand people in attendance without being opposed, on a Sunday afternoon, with all my provincial Liberal friends present—two Ministers plus a few others, plus the municipal councillor. It just shows that sometimes in Montreal we can work together. In that district, this subject matter is extremely important and I am very sensitive to this subject matter.

My father was a doctor, and he delivered over 9,000 babies. Many of them are now having babies in my district. But since my father's days, society has changed dramatically. Society has changed unbelievably. Some people cannot adjust to these changes.

We may like to revert back to the good old days of yesterday, but we cannot. I see these single parents having to cope with working, being on welfare, and having and raising children. It is extremely difficult. It is extremely difficult in the kind of area where I live. They cannot cope with that. They are discouraged. They do not understand why a rich society like Canada cannot have a tough first-class day care system for our future citizens.

I keep saying that this is the best investment that we can make. If we want to have a prosperous Canada, a good Canada, a new Canada, we must have a very strong population. Youth must be capable of replacing us. But they will have to face a greater difficulty than we have known, than my friend from Alberta has known, than we have all known in our youth. It was easier for us in our youth. But not today.

We must help these people who are most in need of help. We must provide for them the quality and the care that is expected in a civilized country like Canada.

I regret to say that we do not see this help in this project. It is long forgotten. It was put forward to the Canadian people in 1984 and it was suddenly reinvented on the very eve of an election. I do not like the urgency of ramming it through the House as it is being done now, after very little debate and after no consultation. After having rejected every plea of every expert in the domain, the Government intends to go ahead anyway. I do not think that that is good, and it does not reflect the spirit of the reform that we have had in the House of Commons.

Therefore, I will definitely vote against the fact that this Bill is being imposed so rapidly on the House of Commons, without having any real and honest debate and any real consultation, and without flexibility from the Government to listen to those who oppose it. A lot of these experts should not be taken for fools. They know what they are talking about, and they oppose the Bill. If they all collectively opposed the Bill, I do not see how I could give my consent to that Bill.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I, too, want to join in this debate on time allocation.

The Conservative Government, I think, will go down in history as a four-year Government.

Mr. Hawkes: Wishful thinking.

Mr. Angus: It is a Government which was only elected for four years, but a Government which wasted a lot of time throughout those four years by not dealing with commitments that it made to the people of Canada while deciding at the last minute to rush a number of things through. Child care legislation is one such example. We did not get it until the summer, in a session that was not supposed to happen in the first place. Once again, because of government mismanagement of the business of the Commons, it was unable to bring forward any kind of concrete action until the eleventh hour. That action that it brought forward is flawed.

I hope to have an opportunity, whenever the Government brings the Bill forward for debate, to speak to the issues within the child care Bill, the areas that point out why we disagree with what the Government is doing.

Let me deal for a few moments with the process that is basically taking away the right of this Parliament, of this Chamber, to debate substantive matters. It is not forever and ever, but for a reasonable period of time, so that members of the opposition Parties and members of the government Party can state their respective cases. In some cases, yes, we repeat particular aspects of those concerns. But we are a diverse lot here. We represent this country. We come from different areas. We have different needs, whether it is in child care or municipal infrastructure or redress to our citizens who have been abused in the past.

That is what the Commons is all about. It is a meeting place of representatives of the people from one end of this country to the other, from the American border to the Arctic Circle and beyond, to come together to speak on behalf of all Canadians.

If the Government is going to move immediately to restrict debate at third reading, or at report stage, or at second reading, then it is limiting our ability and our right, in fact, to represent our constituents properly.

Since I have been in this House, I have seen time and time again not only how the Government has abused its powers, but how totally it made a mockery of majority government.

Time and time again I have seen the Government move closure at a time when anybody who is the least bit familiar with the rules of this House would know that within two, three or four more hours of debate it would have collapsed.

We have within our Standing Orders provision that for the first eight hours, I believe it is, after the first round of speeches, speeches are 20 minutes in length, followed by 10-minute question and answer periods, and after that eight hours of debate we are into 10-minutes speeches. One does not need to be a mathematician or have a computer to do a count of the bodies on this side of the House. Regretfully, there are many fewer of us than there are of government Members. Even moving motions that would refer the matter back to committee for six months or send it into nowhere for six months do not add much more time to the debate.

The reality is that the Government will get its legislation, no matter how we may feel about it and no matter what attempts we may make to delay it. I want to remind my hon. colleagues that my Party and the Liberal Party co-operated at the start of this Government's mandate to bring in reforms that eliminated some of the tools that were available to opposition Parties. Quite frankly, these were tools that the Conservatives used when in opposition to tie up Parliament, not for a few hours, not for a day or two, but for weeks. We accepted those changes because we recognized that in a democratic society and in a parliamentary system, the Government of the day does have the constitutional right to legislate. Our job as opposition Members is to review, to challenge, to test and, yes, to oppose. By opposing, we hope we can push the Government of the day to make changes to legislation.

We have been successful at making changes. There is not one Bill with which I have dealt as a critic for my Party in which I have not been able to achieve some changes. Sometimes the changes make a good Bill a bit better, sometimes they make a bad Bill a bit better, but they are changes nonetheless. Those changes were not made just because I sent the Government a letter saying that I wanted these changes. I had to plant seeds, encourage and fertilize the ideas, so that the Government recognizes why those changes are important to make or why particular measures have to be thrown out, much as we did with the cost recovery clause in the Canada Shipping Act. It took a long time. It took a lot of networking in the marine industry to put pressure on the Government. It took time in the House, but that time gained us much. It gained us a better Bill without a clause that would cripple a particular industry.

I have seen the Government make many mistakes. What the Government does not realize it is doing by introducing time allocation on Bill C-144, the child care Bill, is waving a red flag, not in the House but in the other place. It is giving legitimacy to that ancient body down the way, giving it the excuse to delay because the House of Commons legislative committee was not allowed to travel across Canada to hear witnesses. It was forced to stack 40 witnesses into a two-day period, witnesses every one of which was opposed to the current legislation.

The Government is playing into the Senate's hands by distorting the way in which this House operates, by making a mockery of the legislative process which is designed to ensure that the public of Canada, the citizens who quite frankly pay our bills and to whom we are responsible, has a chance to understand legislation and its ramifications. We believe strongly that what the Government is doing in the child care Bill is wrong. It is the wrong direction. We are prepared to fight that here in the House and on the hustings.

I say as well that it is important that we allow the House to work properly, to ensure that there is reasonable debate. We should avoid the attitude that we have to get it out of here and into the Senate because there may be an election call and we have to get it through. The reality is that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) will call the election when his pollster tells him he has a chance of getting a majority Government.

We could be playing this game of chicken, rushing things through the House, from now until next spring. Yet every week the Government will say that we have to rush things through. If the Government were that serious about child care, why was this Bill not placed on the Order Paper in the fall of 1984? Where was the urgency then? Where was the urgency for a lot of the other things we are seeing happening at the last minute like building roads and pipelines? One would think a municipal election was coming up the way the Government is doling out money to try to bolster its support.

I realize that my time is almost up. I regret that once again the Government has decided to use its majority to push through this legislation. Representatives of the people of Canada, members of the Liberal Party and the New Democratic Party, have listened to the key people involved in child care, the ones who are responsible for trying to provide the spaces and the services. Every one of them said that this Bill should go. I regret that the Government, instead of listening to them and to the Opposition, has decided to ram the Bill through this House, waving the red flag in front of the Senators. I can guarantee that it is all for naught.

[Translation]

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, I too should like to join in this debate and denounce the Government which, for one reason or another, is always prepared to impose closure and cut short our parliamentary debates.

For openers, Mr. Speaker, let me make it clear at the outset that it was this Government which in the early days of its mandate raised the issue of parliamentary reform. We in the Opposition co-operated with the Government precisely because we believe that indeed Parliament is the appropriate forum to debate legislation such as this measure on child care. So this is a major issue in our society and there should be no need to resort to the kind of tactics this Government used in the past when it was on this side of the House. We all vividly remember that when the Conservative Party was in Opposition it kept the bells ringing for two weeks.

Now that we are dealing with an important piece of legislation like child care, the Government could hardly wait for the official Liberal opposition critic and the NDP Member to finish their speeches before bringing in closure. Mr. Speaker, is that what the Conservative Government had in mind when it began selling parliamentary reform to Members of all Parties in this House? What a scandalous contrast. When the Conservatives were in Opposition they tried every trick in the book to upset the parliamentary timetable of the then Government, but now that they sit on the Treasury benches they lower the boom and will not let the democratically elected Members have their say.

Mr. Speaker, 40 witnesses appeared before the parliamentary committee which considered this Bill. The 40 witnesses were allowed a measly half hour each. They were paraded before the committee one after another like sheep. This way in, and this way out. Thirty minutes each! All 40 of them denounced the Bill. So, Mr. Speaker, the fact that not a single organization came before the parliamentary committee to give its views on the legislation and that all 40 witnesses did speak out against it would indicate that something is wrong with the Bill. And we are supposed to be here to debate and correct defective legislation.

If the Government sets a limit on the time allocated pursuant to the Standing Orders and under the parliamentary reform proposed and adopted by this Government with the co-operation of the opposition Parties, we cannot speak out, we cannot even attempt to improve this Bill which everybody has found seriously lacking. How can we be expected to rise in this debate and support this measure?

Mr. Speaker, I used the word demagogy. The Government would have us believe that Canadians need this Bill if we are to upgrade the child care system, but we know full well that the Bill as drafted will not produce anything worthwhile. First they say it will be phased in over seven years, Mr. Speaker, so what do we do about the urgent needs of the people?

Mr. Speaker, the truth is that we are headed straight for the hustings! Belatedly, after wasting time for four years, the Government—

• (1340)

[English]

After mismanaging the time of the House for four years, now all of a sudden the Government gets a social conscience and says: "We need some social legislation. What about child care?" This was a promise which the Tory Party made in 1984. Here, on the eve of the election, they say: "Why not? Let's rush to the House. Let us put the gas on this piece of legislation and muzzle all the democratic rules," which the same Government introduced and approved. That is how disgusting this attitude is at the end of a Government's term of office. I am sure Canadians will remember that. We are going to make sure Canadians remember that.

The legislation is not even in the Senate yet, but the Government is blaming it for blocking the Bill. How can the Senate block it when the legislation is still here in the House of Commons? That is how the Tories' minds work at this time because they are planning an election and they are doing everything they can so that they can again con Canadians and make believe, as they did in 1984, that they can do beautiful things. But once they get into office and get power they do the opposite. That is what we are talking about here today.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I simply must speak out against this unacceptable and shameful Government approach. We will do everything we can to reject undemocratic practices which fly in the face of the parliamentary reform we began in the fall of 1984 shortly after we were all elected to come here to Ottawa.

As I said before, Mr. Speaker, I think this measure is unacceptable, but if the government Members really thought it was good, why did they not introduce it sooner? If the Government is convinced that it is a good Bill and that Canadians will accept it, call an election right now and give them a chance to say what they think of the Bill. If the Government is re-elected the Bill will pass right then and there. However I am sure that the people will not accept the Bill, and so we will do everything we can to bury it, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, just so our listeners will understand exactly what we are saying and why this Government chose to take such an antidemocratic and totalitarian approach—debate has been cut off—certain dates will make it clear for the listeners why this debate is so important and why we are opposed to this antidemocratic measure.

Mr. Speaker, let us just say that four years ago we were given a list of committees, reports, studies, commissions and what have you, much too long to go into details here. I might simply refer to a few recent dates. On July 13, 1988, the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) who is sponsoring this Bill announced that something like $1 billion would be made available and that 200,000 additional spaces would be created. We wonder what that is going to solve over a seven-year period. Given the extent of the problem, Mr. Speaker, that is just like a drop in the bucket.

But the Bill was first introduced on July 25, 1988, so there was a waste of time right there. Had the Government been really serious and intent on having Parliament adopt this legislation before the elections it would have tabled the Bill on July 13, minutes after the Minister's statement. No, it chose to wait until July 25, twelve days later. And now they want us to pass it in one day, after 40 witnesses appeared to say it is not good enough. They expect the Senate to do the same thing in 24 hours. Well now, Mr. Speaker! Is that democracy, or are we up against Conservative dictatorship? I am sure that Canadians will not stand still for this kind of procedure.

Mr. Speaker, you are signalling that my time has expired. I thank you for your attention and consideration, and again I want to say that this approach is not in keeping with the spirit of the parliamentary reform which this Government has implemented with the full support of both opposition Parties, the Liberal Party and the New Democratic Party. Within the bounds of democracy, Mr. Speaker, we will do everything we can to prevent this Government from generating into a dictatorship here in Canada.

[English]

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, I want to say a few words during this time allocation motion moved by the Government yesterday. I oppose the allocation of time on the Bill before the House today, a Bill on child care, and I do so for a number of reasons.

First I want to remind you, Mr. Speaker, because you were not a Member of Parliament before 1984, that prior to 1984 the Conservative Party used to complain loudly and clearly about the Liberal Government in those days invoking time allocation over and over again. I suspect that if you were to go back through the records you would find that the Conservative Government is invoking time allocation at least as often as the Trudeau Government did, perhaps even more often than the Trudeau Government did in its many years of office.

I know the two senior Alberta Members across the way, the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) and the Hon. Member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers) are probably very discouraged that their Party is cutting off debate, using time allocation, bringing down the parliamentary guillotine in the same way that the Trudeau Government did year in and year out. In fact, I know the Member from Bow River would like to get up in the House now and criticize the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) for cutting off debate, freedom of speech, and invoking time allocation after only one speaker from each political Party. I cannot recall in my 20 years in Parliament a Government before that brought in time allocation or closure after only one speaker from each of the political Parties. I know the Member from Bow River, who served many years as a Social Credit Member in the Province of Alberta, who was also a Cabinet Minister, and who defeated the Right Hon. Member for Yellowhead (Mr. Clark) for a nomination to run for the federal House of Commons, has never seen this happen before.

I would be interested to hear him speak his mind. I know after a long and distinguished career he is going to retire from this place. Perhaps he could go out with a burst of glory by speaking out, defending democracy in this country and freedom of speech. I know it must bother him, he is a man who generally speaks his mind.

I appeal to you, Mr. Speaker, and to Members across the way not to be afraid of the Prime Minister, to speak their minds, and to say: "We need more than one day of debate on third reading on child care and that after one speaker per Party it is neither right nor fair nor democratic to have time allocation or closure brought in at the end of this debate".

At one time this would be absolutely unheard of. In fact, the Conservative Party across the way used to complain when the Liberals brought in closure after four, five, seven, or eight days of debate. I remember sanctimonious speeches on this side of the House. The Tories would ring the bells, storm the Chair, and do all kinds of things in protest against an undemocratic Government across the way. How people change once they get into office. How the leopard changes his spots once he is in office. If you were not in the chair, I am sure you would like to get up and complain about the cutting off of debate. I know that is exactly what is on your mind as a fair-minded lawyer from Montreal. I am sure you have looked back in the old debates to see John Diefenbaker, Jed Baldwin, and all the Conservative Party Members complaining about Liberal after Liberal cutting off debate. Where is parliamentary supremacy? Here I see the young man, the Hon. Member for Parry Sound—Muskoka (Mr. Darling), who I understand is running as a Member again. I commend him for that.

I imagine he too must be disturbed that his Prime Minister invoked closure after only one speaker per Party on child care. It has never happened before in the history of this Parliament. I am sure, unless he wants to be a cabinet Minister after the next election, that he will rise and speak his mind. He must be disturbed about what is going on.

I see that I am being so persuasive you are cutting me off, so I will sit down and continue later.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being 1.50 p.m., I do now leave the chair for 10 minutes until 2 p.m.

At 1.50 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO STANDING ORDER 21

HOUSING

SITUATION OF CERTAIN FAMILIES LIVING IN CITY OF OTTAWA UNITS

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I have in my constituency a number of families living in low-cost housing units owned by the City of Ottawa and managed by City Living, who are faced with excessive rent increases of up to 8.8 per cent for the current year. This is almost twice the then 4.6 per cent inflation rate. To make a bad situation worse, the poor state of repairs of some of those units forces tenants to board up their windows and even in some cases to condemn some rooms because the houses are too cold in winter.

Mr. Speaker, I feel this is an unfair and inhumane way to treat tenants who, because they do not earn high salaries and cannot afford a comfortable, well-insulated house, have to live in low-cost housing units. Those people are victimized.

In order to deal with the problem and help those people, I urge the Government to reinstate RRAP, the Residential Rehabilitation Assistance Program, as to the municipalities eligibility to the program, so they can get federal support to rehabilitate, repair and perhaps better insulate their houses, in order that the tenants of those low-cost housing units in my constituency can live comfortably and be treated like full-fledged citizens for which we care.

NON-ACCREDITATION OF KURELEK MURAL

Mr. Rob Nicholson (Niagara Falls): Mr. Speaker, the Ukrainian community makes up a large part of Canada's multicultural society. One of the best known members of that community, the late William Kurelek, is one of Canada's most accomplished artists.

Since 1983 we on Parliament Hill have been able to enjoy a significant work by the artist. The Canadian Pioneer, a six-panel mural, was acquired by the Government of Canada from the Niagara Falls Art Gallery. The mural depicts Kurelek's pictorial interpretation of the history of Ukrainian immigration to Canada. Since Canada's railway played such an important role in bringing Ukrainian pioneers to the West to settle, this work is appropriately displayed in the House of Commons Railway Committee Room.

The work's name and the artist's name are not identified at the present time. I think that this is unfortunate. I am sure that all Members would agree that such a noteworthy exhibit should be clearly identified for all to know and appreciate. Let us correct this oversight.

FISHERIES

CLAM DIGGING ON VANCOUVER AND GULF ISLANDS

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, since 1986 there has been a substantial increase in commercial clam digging on Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands. Residents are under siege by diggers who harvest at low tides both day and night. There are few limitations on anyone seeking a commercial licence, and the number of diggers has increased dramatically as the price paid for clams has risen.

In response to my letter of November, 1987, the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Siddon), acknowledged complaints from Gulf Island residents. However, he did not offer any solutions at the time, and I am pursuing the issue with him once again.

A recent meeting of Salt Spring Island residents, organized by Island Trust, unanimously concluded that the whole island be closed to commercial clam harvesting. The meeting put forward recommendations calling for the creation of a federal-provincial investigation into commercial clam digging, new and tougher licensing regulations, harvesting limits, and designated commercial harvesting areas in accordance with local zoning regulations.

It is not enough to bring in size limitations and toughen up restrictions as to bag limits and the activities of these clam diggers, as the Minister of Fisheries has promised. Most important is the need to expand enforcement. The regional shellfish co-ordinator admits that there are not enough fisheries officers available to do the job.

POLITICAL PARTIES

THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION

Mr. Marcel R. Tremblay (Québec-Est): Mr. Speaker, the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) is challenging the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) in order to cash in on his popularity and win the attention of Canadians. People in Canada certainly would be interested in knowing the motives and the arguments of the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition on the following subjects: The quality of his leadership within the Liberal Party of Canada and his Party's financial position; his suggestions to the non-elected Liberal Senators who are holding Canadians hostages on matters of national import; his lack of understanding of the Free Trade Agreement, his insult to the Quebec Premier; the economic position Liberals left Canadians in when this Conservative Government came to power; the passive and active complicity of federal Liberals over these last 20 years in the area of the environment, because they are truly responsible for pollution in Canada.

When the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition is ready to answer those questions, let him say so, and Canadians will certainly be interested in hearing him apologize and contradict himself.

TRADE

BROILER HATCHING EGGS—CALL FOR IMPORT CONTROLS

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, the Canadian broiler hatching egg industry needs border controls on hatching eggs and chicks.

In November, 1986, the Canadian Broiler Hatching Egg Marketing Agency was established, having as signatories the Provinces of Alberta, Manitoba, Ontario, and Quebec, thus representing 80 per cent of Canada's broiler hatching egg production.

The purpose of that exercise was to establish border controls on imports of these products under Article XI of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. Without such controls, the U.S. controls presently 60 per cent of breeder replacement pullet growers, 90 per cent of the broiler hatching egg producers, and 14 broiler hatcheries are prevented from realizing fair returns to labour.

We need supply management in this industry. Before the last election the Conservative Government stated that it was in favour of supply management. Perhaps free trade has changed its mind. If the Tories are still in favour of supply management, why do they not want to have this industry provided with the tools in order to have supply management for broiler hatching eggs?

VISIBLE MINORITIES

FULFILMENT OF COMMITMENT TO JAPANESE CANADIANS INTERNED DURING WORLD WAR II

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, in May, 1984, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), then the Leader of the Official Opposition, said: "Canadian citizens whose rights were abused and violated and trampled upon indeed should be compensated". He went on to say: "If there was a Conservative Government I can assure you we would be compensating Japanese Canadians".

Today that commitment has been kept. When history records the story of the Prime Minister and of this Government, and of this Parliament, the redress of Canadians of Japanese origin may very well be just a small footnote. Hopefully, however, that footnote will make it quite clear that this was their finest hour.

HOUSING

TORONTO—PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT'S FIRING OF JOHN SEWELL

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, finally the Government has recognized that there is a housing crisis in Toronto. In Toronto itself there has been one individual more than anyone else who has tried to ensure that affordable housing is not a thing of the past. John Sewell has pushed strongly for more public housing. He has advocated the redesign of existing public housing units, and he has worked hard toward the goal of reducing profits in order to make housing more affordable.

Rather than being thankful for a job well done, the Ontario Housing Minister, and her boss, the Premier of the Province, gave Mr. Sewell his walking papers.

If the Ontario Minister of Housing and the Premier of that province were really serious about doing something to help the City of Toronto through the worst housing crisis in recent memory, they would not have fired the one person who, more than any other, was making a difference.

I have some advice for the Government. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) wants Torontonians to believe that he is finally taking the housing problem seriously. That, it appears, is why the Downsview land was released last week. If the Government really wants to demonstrate that it means what it says, it should offer Mr. Sewell the job of overseeing the release of public lands in Toronto and co-ordinating a first-rate affordable housing program on the Downsview lands.

I have discussed this with Paul and Mike Flaherty from the Toronto area who are present today, and that is what they think as well!

RAILWAYS

TRANSPORTATION OF DANGEROUS GOODS THROUGH TORONTO AREA

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, the Gilbert Task Force Report on the transportation of dangerous goods by rail through the Toronto area states that among the major causes of rail accidents are track operational and equipment deficiencies.

We recognize that railways provide economically and ecologically preferable modes of transport. Yet throughout this country for many, many years we have persisted in priorizing what we spend on air and highway transportation. If we were to spend on air and highway transportation a fraction of what we spend on improving railway equipment and track conditions, we would provide this country with safe and speedy transportation that would be much better in conserving the environment.

I hope that among the points made in this task force report what will be taken with utmost seriousness will be the need to upgrade our equipment and track conditions.

FORESTRY

PROPOSED NEWFOUNDLAND FORESTRY CENTRE PROJECT

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, while the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) is running around the country announcing billions of dollars of promises on a weekly basis in a desperate bid to shore up his Party's position in advance of an election campaign, I beg him to give pause for thought to old promises made and not kept. In July of 1984, the Prime Minister, in the heat of an election campaign, sent a telex to the Mayor of the City of Corner Brook, Newfoundland. In that telex he said: "I want to assure you of my and my Party's full support for the establishment of a federal forestry centre in Corner Brook, Newfoundland". He said: "Statements to the contrary by the sitting Liberal M.P. are simply untrue". In July of 1988, the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Crosbie), Newfoundland's representative in the federal Cabinet, wrote a letter to the mayor in which he said: "There are simply no funds available. This decision is final and is not a contradiction of the Prime Minister's previous comments on the matter".

The people of western Newfoundland want to know two things; when is a promise not a promise? When is a contradiction not a contradiction? And how much is the paper the Prime Minister's commitment was written on worth because so far it has brought us nothing but a cynical view of the value of the Prime Minister's word and the commitments of this Government, in particular, the dog in the manger attitude of the Member for St. John's West who now wants to build that badly needed forestry centre in his own backyard? Newfoundland is bigger than just the City of St. John's.

MINES AND MINING

MINING EXPLORATION IN QUÉBEC—ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT IN ABITIBI—TÉMISCAMINGUE

Mr. Gabriel Desjardins (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, the Association des prospecteurs du Québec had its 14th Annual Convention in Val d'Or from September 14 to 16. Over 620 members registered for the convention, the highest attendance ever recorded, a sign of the keen interest of Quebec prospectors in the mining industry.

Mr. Speaker, one of the conclusions of the convention was that 1988 was a difficult year for the prospecting sector in Quebec. This is partly due to the changes in mid-flight that were made in the flow-through shares system, at various levels of government, but especially to the stock market crash which had a severe impact on the mining industry.

During the convention, people from the prospecting sector sent a clear message to both levels of government, and I urge the Ministers of Finance to consider very carefully a number of demands that are aimed at giving a boost to an industry that is already flourishing and is very important to the development of Abitibi—Témiscamingue.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to congratulate Mr. Guy Bourassa of Rouyn-Noranda, who was elected President of the Association des prospecteurs du Québec for 1988-89. I am sure Mr. Bourassa will meet this challenge successfully, promoting the interests of the mining industry in our area.

I want to offer my full co-operation to the new President and to the Association des prospecteurs du Québec.

PIPELINES

ANNOUNCEMENT OF VANCOUVER ISLAND NATURAL GAS PIPELINE PROJECT

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, British Columbians can be forgiven for being skeptical upon hearing news that the Conservatives have once again announced that they will build the long awaited, often promised Vancouver Island natural gas pipeline.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Waddell: This was, after all, the same group of Conservatives—the ones applauding here—who promised the pipeline before the last federal election only to have the then Minister of Energy, the Hon. Member for Vancouver Centre (Miss Carney), and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) renege on their promise only weeks after the election. Indeed, this pipeline has been promised by successive Liberal and Conservative Governments going back to 1954. It rivals the P.E.I. Causeway as a political football.

Fortunately, as you know, Mr. Speaker, we in British Columbia are patient folk. However, we are not dupes. This time we will wait until construction actually begins before really believing the Conservatives are going to come through.

We would also like to see an environmental impact statement. We want to know why the price has come down from $500 million after a few years. We also want to know what efforts will be made to ensure that island industrial users are prepared to convert to gas. So we are waiting.

POSITION OF LEADER OF NEW DEMOCRATIC PARTY

Mr. Murray Dorin (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, earlier this year the Government made important changes to patent legislation. This has triggered an avalanche of investment, research, and jobs in the pharmaceutical industry. However, the Leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Broadbent) has now promised that a Socialist Government, led by him, would repeal the current drug patent legislation. If he recognized what this legislation means to western Canadians, he would not be so quick to condemn it.

In Vancouver, for example, Pacific Pharmaceutical has invested $40 million in expanding cancer treatment research. Chembiomed Ltd., an Edmonton firm, continues its research into stopping the reproductive process of the AIDS virus, secure in the knowledge that what it develops will not be exploited by others.

Universities and hospitals in Calgary and Edmonton were pledged $132 million in increased research funding following the introduction of the patent legislation. These investments were brought about by Bill C-22. In short, the promise to tear up the patent legislation is a promise to curb medical research, to discourage the diversification of the western economy, and to deny Canadians new medicines developed by this research.

IMMIGRATION

TORONTO—RELOCATION OF AREA OFFICE

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, the scandalous closing of the immigration office at 130 Bloor Street in Toronto and its relocation to the riding of the Immigration Minister (Mrs. McDougall) just to satisfy her political interests, has cost her constituents and, indeed, all Canadians, $30,000 in moving expenses, according to the Department of Public Works.

The new lease agreement, originally signed for five years, is a further waste of taxpayers' dollars because the Minister has seen fit to relocate the immigration offices after a protest by her constituents. Again, Canadians will have to reach into their pockets to relocate her office-on-wheels to the tune of another $30,000 in moving expenses.

Furthermore, the Minister has elected to use this office for other immigration purposes so she has conveniently created a new need for services in an attempt to defuse this political embarrassment at a cost of $600,000 per year over five years, a tab of $3 million for taxpayers to pick up. It is, indeed, unfortunate that taxpayer's dollars have been wasted to subsidize the Minister's personal and partisan political interests in a riding she is going to have great difficulty in winning. She should not mix her national responsibilities with her responsibilities as an individual Member of Parliament.

CANADA LABOUR CODE

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY—EMPLOYEES' ATTENDANCE AT SAFETY COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the provisions of the Canada Labour Code, Canadian Pacific Railway is supposed to allow designated members of its health and safety committees to attend meetings on a regular basis and pay them for the work they miss when they attend these meetings.

It has come to my attention in a meeting with various representatives of CP rail unions that this practice is not being followed, that designated members of the health and safety committees are being compelled to take work on days when the committee is meeting or suffer loss of pay. They are being pressured to send their alternates, so there is not a regular attendance at these meetings.

When representatives of the unions have brought this matter to the attention of the national transportation agency which is responsible for rail safety in this country, nothing has been done.

The cosy relationship which used to exist between the CTC and the railways continues to exist between the NTA and the railways, and I call upon the Government at this time to look into this matter and ensure the safety provisions which entitle workers to attend these meetings on a regular basis, and to be paid for it, are adhered to.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

SALE OF MOISIE BASE—FAVOURITISM—PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. In this morning's Le Soleil, in an article by Marc St-Pierre, we read that the sale of the base at Moisie in the Prime Minister's riding was surrounded by a great deal of favouritism and financial fiddling and also that there was an incriminating tape about the involvement of the Prime Minister's office in this transaction, which Mr. St-Pierre heard. I want to ask the Prime Minister, considering the allegations of favouritism after bids were called and of corruption in high places, and allegations by a senior official who confirmed this was part and parcel of the Tory Party system, what kind of explanations he can give to the House in his defence and what steps he has taken to get rid of this phenomenon.

[English]

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, perhaps in the absence of the Minister of Public Works I can be permitted to respond.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Beatty: The Hon. Members ask questions and they don't want responses. My understanding is that the winner of this contract was the lowest bidder.

Some Hon. Members: Lowest bidder?

Mr. Beatty: I am sorry, it was the highest bidder, the one who gave the best bid.

Second, my understanding is that there is not an ongoing criminal investigation. The RCMP looked at the package which was left with them and found no basis for further investigation.

• (1420)

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to Prime Minister. I can inform the Minister of Defence that he was right in his initial answer when he said the lowest bidder got the contract. But since we are talking about a sale, it should be the highest bidder!

Mr. Speaker, at noon I had a chance to listen to the tape in question, and I would like to share with you some of the passages, including what was said by Mr. H.D. Hyland, who said: "I retired. It was too crooked. It is awful! They made a deal with Mr. Lefebvre. The legal opinion we got was that the procedure was not correct. The system is very close to the Conservative Party." And worse, he said in a second conversation to which I listened: "The contract was awarded because of his connections. He made some changes. This is sheer robbery. Mulroney's office was involved. Not local people, people from Ottawa".

Mr. Speaker, that is what was said, and I wonder whether the Minister has any explanations to give as a result of these allegations.

[English]

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I want to repeat to the hon. gentleman that, on the basis of all the information that has been available to me, there is nothing of any sort that has been indicated which would suggest any impropriety whatsoever.

If the Hon. Member, or the Hon. Member's colleagues, have any information whatsoever that would contradict that, they should be turning it over to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. If they are not in a position to hand such information over to the RCMP they should not be making unsubstantiated charges on the floor of the House of Commons.

[Translation]

ALLEGATIONS OF IRREGULARITIES IN LETTING OF CONTRACT—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary. The Prime Minister should answer this one, because it concerns his riding and involves his own integrity and that of his office.

On July 12, the newspaper Le Nord-Est, in the Prime Minister's riding, indicated on the basis of the allegations that were made, and I quote: "It seems that this was caused by high-level political meddling, which has angered the mayor who feels insulted by the system and with him, the entire community. He summarized his mood very neatly when he said: "Instead of having someone here who represents Ottawa, we should have someone in Ottawa who represents us!"

At the time, the Mayor of Moisie raised all kinds of allegations about irregularities in the procedure for awarding this contract.

I want to ask the Prime Minister what he has done about this since July 12, when he read about it in his local paper, which I imagine he did.

[English]

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition was quoted in the press earlier this month as saying there is a world of difference between an allegation and the truth. The Hon. Member, in this particular case, should know that.

I repeat to the Hon. Member again, if the Hon. Member has any evidence whatsoever to substantiate any allegation whatsoever of irregularities, he has an obligation to turn that information over to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. If he does not have such information, he has an obligation to the Canadian people not to make unsubstantiated charges.

REQUEST THAT WITNESSES APPEAR BEFORE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. What we are seeing today is the kind of thing we have been seeing for four years, the excesses of patronage, of financial fiddling and the dishonesty of this Conservative Government.

Mr. Prime Minister, considering the allegations made everywhere in the press, are you prepared to ask the Public Accounts Committee to sit, starting tomorrow, and allow the Committee to hear witnesses in order to find out the truth about this unsavoury situation?

[English]

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I would remind this hon. gentleman of what his Leader has said with regard to allegations. He said: "Unless you know the facts, and I really mean know the facts, don't say them".

If the hon. gentleman has any evidence whatsoever, let him turn it over to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. If not, let him stop making false charges.

[Translation]

REQUEST THAT PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE BE CONVENED

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I will reserve my question to the Prime Minister. If you are sure you are guilty—you already said about the Stevens affaire that there was no wrong doing. Nixon said he wasn't guilty. We know how that turned out! If you are sure you are not guilty, why don't you call a meeting of the Public Accounts Committee to hear the witness and find out the truth? If you refuse, then you must be guilty! Why won't you?

[English]

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Speaker, if I may point this out to my hon. friend, during my chairmanship of the Public Accounts Committee, and during the chairmanship of the Member for Trinity from his Party, the Public Accounts Committee was not engaged in partisan politics and witch hunts. That is the way it was in the past, that is the way it is going to be.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT—ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister for International Trade. The Minister will know that in recent months in this House serious questions have been raised about the environmental impact of the trade deal on Canada.

Today, in 18 centres across Canada, the Canadian Environmental Law Association released a study condemning the federal Government's trade deal as having an enormous adverse impact on the Canadian environment. It specifically cites the Government's hypocrisy in claiming to be concerned about the environment, on the one hand, but totally ignoring it in this deal, on the other.

Will the Minister tell the House why there was a specific clause in the trade deal which did permit subsidies for exploration and development of gas and oil, but there was no such clause permitting subsidies for environmental matters?

While he is answering that, will he tell the House whether the Minister of the Environment actually asked for such a clause and, if he did, why was it ignored?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, this, of course, is another wild goose chase by the NDP in connection with the FTA. There is nothing in the FTA—nothing—which interferes with Canada's ability to introduce tough environmental standards. As a matter of fact, the House just passed the Canadian Environmental Protection Act which is concrete proof that we can continue whatever measures we think are required to protect the environment. There is no requirement in the FTA to harmonize environmental standards. As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, the FTA specifically incorporates our rights under the GATT to have regulations for environmental protection reasons.

Why is it that the Opposition must raise these false claims, these attempts to witch hunt, these attempts to arouse alarm? Why is it they will not stick to rational arguments about their alternative to the free trade agreement which is autarky for Canada?

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, it may be just a touch ironical to hear this Minister defending rational arguments. It is a welcome conversion on his part. We will look forward to the evidence.

BRITISH COLUMBIA REFORESTATION LEGISLATION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, a group of legal people from right across the country, not affiliated with any political Party, prepared this and they just happened to disagree with the Minister, as do most Canadians, on this important issue. The Minister said there is nothing in the deal. He knows that there is a provision for the discussion of subsidies for the next five to seven years and that is what it is all about.

More concretely, I would like him to acknowledge to the House, if he will be direct on this, that the Government of British Columbia, not long ago, went to Washington in the hope of getting approval for its new legislation pertinent to the question of reforestation in that province. It had to withdraw a clause that permitted subsidies for reforestation purposes on the grounds, they were told by the Americans, that it was inconsistent with this deal.

Will the Minister acknowledge that that has already taken place, that we were losing the sovereign right to control, manage, and conserve our forests? Will he admit that?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, of course I am not going to admit any such silliness or any such silly suggestions from the Leader of the NDP.

The United States has no greater latitude to challenge Canadian environmental programs as unfair trade subsidies under the FTA than it has at present. If anything, the likelihood of its doing this is reduced because we will have bi-national panel reviews which will discourage frivolous attempts to use U.S. trade remedy law in this way.

I repeat again, despite the attempts of the Leader of the NDP to be devious and unfair and to attack this deal in any underhanded way that he can imagine, there is—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Crosbie: Are we to have a chance to respond to the nonsense we hear from the Opposition or not?

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member will put his next question.

• (1430)

ENVIRONMENTAL PURPOSE SUBSIDIES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I say to the Minister that to attack this Government one does not need to be devious, one just has to tell the truth. It devastates them.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: I would ask both hon. gentlemen to recognize that I think their approach and their language are creating some consternation in the Chamber. I would ask the Hon. Leader of the New Democratic Party to put his question as directly as he can.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, the Minister will acknowledge, if he does pay attention to the agreement from time to time, that there is a section of it which requires Canada and the United States to negotiate and decide what constitutes a subsidy, over the next five to seven years. There are many people in this country, dare I say on both sides of the House, who already know that things like social programs and regional development programs, according to the Americans, have to be discussed.

Now environmental groups as well as many other Canadians are saying that environmental subsidies are in that category. Why did the Government not do what it did with gas and oil and specifically put in the agreement that it was understood to be acceptable to have subsidies for environmental purposes? Why was that not put in the agreement?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, that was not put in the agreement because it is unnecessary to put it in the agreement. If the Leader of the NDP will cease telling falsehoods about us we will cease telling the truth about him.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: The question of subsidies and what are trade related subsidies is an extremely complicated question that is not settled in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and not settled between the U.S. and Canada. We have agreed to set up a group which will work on a commonly agreed definition of what is a trade distorting subsidy. It is quite clear to us, and I do not think it would be challenged by the United States, that any attempt to assist in the reduction of pollution, or grants from government to assist in controlling detrimental environmental consequences will not be challenged as trade distorting.

This is another wild goose chase by the hon. gentleman in his dishonest attempt to argue against this agreement.

DISASTERS

1985 GANDER AIR CRASH INVESTIGATION

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. It concerns the worst air disaster ever to occur on Canadian soil, causing the loss of 256 lives in Gander, Newfoundland, on December 12, 1985.

Last night on The Journal, Canadian Aviation Safety Board members stated that vital pieces of evidence had been withheld from them by members of the investigative staff of the Board. This included a report by the FBI Criminal Investigation Division, autopsies performed by the U.S. Army, the Cargo Manifest, the U.S. Army Investigation Division report, and so on.

Why is the Minister allowing a system to exist whereby members of the Canadian Aviation Safety Board are prevented from doing their job? Why is he allowing that to happen?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, it was allowed to happen in 1983 by the Liberal Party when the Bill on CASB was passed. We have to live with the Canadian Aviation Safety Board which was asked to investigate the Gander crash in 1986.

The Member should know that the final report has not yet been issued by the Canadian Aviation Safety Board. As long as this report is not issued I do not think we should comment, even if my friend was on The Journal last night.

Mr. Boudria: It is not the law that is wrong, it is the interference by the Government with the operation of the Canadian Aviation Safety Board.

ALLEGED OBSTRUCTION OF INVESTIGATION

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Minister of Transport. Minutes of the meeting of the Canadian Aviation Safety Board dated November 24, 1987, state that the Director of Investigation, Mr. Tom Hinton, obstructed the investigator in charge of the Gander crash, Mr. Peter Boag, "from carrying out his duty to answer questions".

I have a copy of that internal document in my hand. Why does the Minister not tell us once and for all who is trying to hide what in the issue of the Gander crash? Why can we not find out the truth? Why can the information not be tabled in the House of Commons? Why can the members of the Canadian Aviation Safety Board not be provided with the information? What is he trying to hide?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I repeat that the Hon. Member could ask the same question 20 times, and I would always say the same thing. In our country, when we put forward a committee to make an investigation, as the CASB does, Canadians ask that we wait, as for any board that must make a report. Before making any comment on the official report we should have the report. As is usual with him, we do not know where my friend gets the information and documents to which he is referring.

I will wait for the final report. He can ask the question 10 times, and I will tell him that I will wait for the final report of the Canadian Aviation Safety Board.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT—USE OF LOW SULPHUR WESTERN COAL BY ONTARIO

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. He will be aware that for many years citizens from western Canada, including British Columbia, Alberta, and Saskatchewan, have been pleading with the federal Government to assist them to move more low sulphur coal to Ontario which would not only reduce acid rain emissions but create as many as 26,000 permanent jobs.

In a report released today the Canadian Environmental Law Association says that under the trade deal government support to move this western coal to Ontario would not be allowed.

What steps is the Prime Minister prepared to take to ensure that this western dream of moving coal to Ontario, with the creation of 26,000 jobs, is not sacrificed on the altar of the trade deal?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I thank my hon. friend for the question. It is a very important one.

I will respond in the absence of the Deputy Prime Minister who has been chairing a committee and meeting regularly with the Premier of Ontario, for example, as well as others with regard to precisely this kind of transaction that would be so beneficial to the interests of western Canada. I know that the Deputy Prime Minister will be analyzing the suggestions contained in that report.

At the moment, having successfully initiated on behalf of western Canada a major new development in Lloydminster, and announcing one in Vancouver today on the Vancouver Island pipeline—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: —being from western Canada I know my hon. friend will support those initiatives on behalf of the Deputy Prime Minister just as I will convey to the Deputy Prime Minister the Hon. Member's concern with regard to what may very well be a very important new project for western Canada.

PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, we appreciate that the Deputy Prime Minister may be in British Columbia announcing, I think for the fifth or sixth time now, the construction of the natural gas pipeline.

However, the Prime Minister knows that in the last few weeks we have heard a number of multi billion dollar announcements on capital intensive energy projects. This particular project will create 26,000 permanent jobs throughout all of western Canada. It will result in significant reductions in acid rain emissions in central Canada. Why can we not expect the Prime Minister to indicate now what the Government intends to do to make this project a success, rather than wait until the eve of the election to make this announcement?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I indicated to my hon. friend that the Deputy Prime Minister upon his return from western Canada will be happy, I am sure, to respond in greater detail to my hon. friend. I know that they have worked together and that the Hon. Member has been encouraging in regard to the Deputy Prime Minister's initiatives to make the transaction work with the Government and the people of Ontario.

My hon. friend refers to the energy projects as being capital intensive. They are capital intensive but, most of all, they are labour intensive. Thousands of new jobs will be created in western Canada. If we can put these energy projects together, which is important, together with the Vancouver pipeline which I know my hon. friend will support, then the support will be so large in western Canada that my hon. friend may vote for us.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

PUBLIC SERVICE

WAGES OF NAVAL DOCKYARD WORKERS ON EAST AND WEST COASTS

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for the Treasury Board. The Minister will recall that back in the 1960s the Pearson Government gave Canadian St. Lawrence Seaway workers wage parity with American St. Lawrence Seaway workers, thus touching off a very severe round of inflation in Canada.

Bearing all that in mind, is it the intention of the Minister and the Government to discontinue its policy of regional wage rates in connection with the East and West Coast ship repair workers?

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Speaker, as I indicated yesterday there are mediation talks presently going on with respect to this labour dispute and both parties have agreed not to comment publicly.

I want to pick up on what my hon. friend said with respect to the question of paying federal employees wages that are based on rates of pay which are prevailing in the private sector in specific geographic regions. The Government has no intention of abandoning that policy. In fact, Mr. Speaker, if you look at surveys of private sector employers across Canada you will find that the practice of paying regional rates of pay is quite common. The Government intends to continue that policy.

PUBLIC WORKS

SALE OF FORMER RADAR SITE IN MOISIE, P.Q.

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. It concerns the reports of the sale of the radar site in Moisie, Quebec, in the Prime Minister's riding. In answering questions the Prime Minister said that these are unsubstantiated allegations, that there is no evidence of criminal wrongdoing.

The Prime Minister ought to know that the allegations in question were made by the former Director of Property Management, Public Works, Montreal, a senior federal civil servant who said of the sale, and I quote from the taped transcript: "The party in question got it because of his connections. It is a rip-off. It was Mulroney's office behind all of this".

The question is not necessarily one of criminal wrongdoing, although that may be appropriate. The question is whether or not fairness and an appropriate system were in place in awarding this base to the highest bidder.

Is the Minister denying that the gentleman who was originally the lowest bidder for this Crown asset subsequently changed his bid and was awarded the radar site? Is he denying as well the words of the director that the Prime Minister's office was directly involved in the submission allowing for a second bid to be made?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, let me deal with the various allegations that are being made by the hon. gentleman. First, there is no evidence whatsoever of any action by the Prime Minister's office here. Second, there is no indication whatsoever of any criminal impropriety. The RCMP has found that.

Mr. Tobin: How about political impropriety?

Mr. Beatty: Third, the person who received the contract was the one who gave the best bid.

Additionally, according to the Department of Public Works, there was a significant difference between the two bids which was better in terms of the individual who won the contract.

SOURCE OF ALLEGATIONS

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, the Minister has not answered whether or not there was an opportunity for one individual to bid twice or to adjust a bid. The Minister made an incredible statement a few moments ago in the House. He said this matter has all been investigated, and there is no problem.

A former member of the Conservative Party provided the RCMP with those tapes of that conversation with a senior federal public servant, a retired one now, only yesterday. The individual in question is in Spain. How could there have been a complete, thorough and full investigation when the information was provided only yesterday, and when the person who is alleging interference by the Prime Minister and his office is out of the country and has not been contacted?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, surely Canadians are entitled to something more responsible than Members of the Opposition simply coming in and making unsubstantiated charges. Indeed, Canadians are entitled to answers and not to false accusations by the hon. gentleman.

In terms of the first bid that was received, the two highest bids were from Mr. Lefebvre for $100,000, and from Mr. Thibault for $50,000. The difference was substantial.

In terms of the final bids, again, on the final bid after more property was added because DND freed up more property, Mr. Lefebvre offered $170,000, plus $17,500. Mr. Thibeault offered $167,500, plus $17,500. It was the best bid that won.

The hon. gentleman has an obligation to the Canadian people not to make false accusations.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

CFB SUFFIELD—NERVE GAS TESTS IN 1960S

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, yesterday my questions were to the Minister for National Defence. Yesterday the Minister felt that there was little reason to have a public inquiry into the nerve gas tests at Suffield. Last night I spoke to Roy Wheeler, a 21-year veteran of the Canadian Forces who was involved in the nerve gas tests at Suffield in the 1960s.

Since the Minister has confirmed that proper records of the participants do not exist, and since Mr. Wheeler suffers from serious medical problems associated with the long-term toxic effects of nerve gas, will the Minister, in the interests of the health of those involved, call a public inquiry to ensure that all participants—the researchers, the volunteers, and the military personnel—are found and evaluated as a group for negative side effects to nerve gas tests?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, first, let us get clear what the Hon. Member is alleging. Is he alleging that this gentleman is suffering long-term effects from nerve gas testing? Or is he simply trying by innuendo to suggest there is a possibility of that?

What I indicated yesterday was that all the employees of DRES are required to take annual medicals, that in no instance have we ever found a case where there has been any long-term effect whatsoever. Nor are we aware of cases where, in military personnel, there has been any evidence of any long-term effects.

Notwithstanding that fact, in order to respond to the irresponsible actions of the NDP in terms of trying to create fear, what we have done is to instruct that we try to locate every single individual who volunteered during those tests, and do a follow-up investigation to ensure there are no medical side effects. That is precisely what we are going to do.

REQUEST FOR PUBLIC INQUIRY

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, Mr. Wheeler left the Canadian Forces in 1974. Once one leaves the Forces one does not get one's annual medical check-up. The Minister of National Defence should know that.

I spoke this morning to Dr. Peter Spencer, the head of the Institute of Neurotoxicity at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York. He said that these kinds of symptoms are associated with long-term low-level toxicity in relation to nerve gas tests.

This is not fearmongering, the health of Canadians is involved. Some fellows over there might not be involved.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Fulton: There are a couple of points here. The Minister states that the records on this matter are incomplete. Medical tests will be provided only to some of the participants, those who are known. Since yesterday's records are incomplete and cannot be completed without public assistance of people like Roy Wheeler, will the Minister call a public inquiry which, unlike the Barton review which is not public, will have the powers to seek out the whole truth and all the individuals who were involved in the nerve gas tests at Suffield?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I have already indicated that in order to calm fears which are being systematically created by the NDP we are going to seek out anyone who participated in any of those tests whether he is in an employee of DND, retired, in the private sector, or anything else. We will be doing follow-up studies.

In addition to that, two and one-half months ago I asked Mr. William Barton, who is the Chairman of the Canadian Institute for International Peace and Security—

Mr. Fulton: He is not allowed to look into the sixties.

Mr. Beatty: That is false. It is typical of what the NDP has been doing. It has been making allegations that are simply false.

I have spoken with Mr. Barton. I have made it clear to him that his terms of reference as written by me give him full scope to look into any matter that is in any way relevant.

Mr. Barton has already undertaken his inquiry. It is under way at the present time. It will be completed, we hope, by the end of this year. The results will be made public.

Instead of trying to inspire fear on the part of Canadians, Mr. Speaker, perhaps the hon. gentleman could operate in a way that is in some way proper.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

RAILWAYS

CARRIAGE OF DANGEROUS GOODS—REQUEST FOR TORONTO SPEED LIMIT

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport. This morning the Minister announced that trains carrying dangerous goods would be limited to low speed limits in four high-risk areas of Metro Toronto. In view of resolutions passed by Scarborough City Council and Metro Toronto Council and in the interests of clarity of public confidence, will the Minister consider imposing a limit of 40 kilometres per hour for dangerous goods traffic within Metro Toronto until a new rail corridor outside Metro has been completed?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I tabled this morning the Toronto Area Rail Transportation of Dangerous Goods Task Force report. I think it is a very good and important study which does not, by the way, propose specifically to control the speed limit in Metro Toronto. However, in the absence of conclusive evidence, prudence dictates that we take appropriate steps to answer safety questions by lowering the speed limits in some parts of what we call the high-risk sectors of Toronto.

I announced this morning that we will take the necessary steps with the National Transportation Agency to request that some high-risk sectors of the Metro Toronto area be considered sectors where we will impose a speed limit.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

NORTHUMBERLAND STRAIT—CHEMICAL SPILLS

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Right Hon. Prime Minister. Certainly in his capacity as a former Member of Parliament from Central Nova, I am sure he will want to respond. The Prime Minister will know that the Boat Harbour treatment facility in Central Nova emits 25 million gallons of pollution effluent per day from the Scott-Maritime Company into the Northumberland Strait. He should also know that there have been four reported toxic chemical spills of what is best known as green liquor into Pictou Harbour by this company, the last two spills having taken place on August 28 and September 8. A company spokesman confirmed the other day that no company money has been used to clean up the spillage.

What action has the Government of Canada taken with regard to this particular spillage? Has it directed the company to clean up this environmental pollution? Has it contemplated charging the company for violation of the Environmental Protection Act? If not, why not, in view of the statements the Prime Minister has been making in the House and around the country with regard to his concern for environmental matters?

Mrs. Pauline Browes (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to respond on behalf of the Minister of the Environment and to state how pleased we are that the Hon. Member opposite has also become interested in the environment. We are very encouraged by the force of the Environmental Protection Act that was passed just some few months ago, which was the first piece of environmental legislation that was passed in this House in over 11 years. In the specific case the Hon. Member has mentioned, I will take it up with the Department and will return to him with a specific answer.

PICTOU HARBOUR POLLUTION

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, typical of the Prime Minister, he has once again forgotten the people of Central Nova. The Prime Minister ought to know very clearly that the Department of Fisheries and Oceans has warned against the harvesting of local shellfish on the beaches at Lighthouse Point, and in addition, fishermen in that area are worried about how long the lobsters they catch in that area will remain fit for human consumption.

I want to ask the Prime Minister a serious question. What will he do with regard to the pollution of Pictou Harbour? Will he direct that that company clean up that spill, or will he do nothing for the people of Central Nova as he has for the past four years?

Mrs. Pauline Browes (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the record of this Government on environmental legislation and initiatives is one of the most important aspects of the last four years. In relation to Pictou Harbour, which I had the pleasure of visiting just a few months ago, I will certainly bring that to the attention of the Department.

There has been a good number of initiatives right across Canada in terms of what we have been able to accomplish, whether it be the acid rain abatement program, the international accords that we have been able to establish—

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain.

Oral Questions

EMPLOYMENT

SITUATION OF OLDER WORKERS

Ms. Marion Dewar (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for Employment. The President of the Economic Council of Canada has stated that she is shocked that the Government has failed the older workers of Canada. Where there is a program for older workers under the Innovations Program, would the Minister guarantee that that kind of funding can be continued?

[Translation]

Hon. Monique Vézina (Minister of State (Employment and Immigration) and Minister of State (Seniors)): Mr. Speaker, we have a job strategy that makes use of the skills and qualifications of all our clients. The various components of our job strategy also make use of the skills of older workers, and we are very attentive to all needs. There is always room for improvement, and as the Minister responsible for senior citizens, I intend to consult with people and truly respond to their needs.

[English]

REQUEST FOR GOVERNMENT FUNDING

Ms. Marion Dewar (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, the Government announced two and a half years ago that it would have a program, not a strategy, for older workers. The Hamilton Help Centre, under Innovations Canada, has had an 86 per cent success rate. Can the Minister please guarantee some funding under other CJS programs now that Innovations has finished?

[Translation]

Hon. Monique Vézina (Minister of State (Employment and Immigration) and Minister of State (Seniors)): Mr. Speaker, as I said before, we have a job strategy that is working very well. We have been successful with the strategy and with the Innovations Program to which the Hon. Member just referred and which is an excellent source of job creation. Of course, older workers can also apply under this program.

TRANSPORT

TRANSPORT ROUTE CANADA—REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT AID EMPLOYEES AND TRUCKERS

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. The Government continually refuses to do anything for the employees of Route Canada who have lost their jobs because of the closure of that former Crown corporation. They have been to see the Minister, he said he would look into it, yet the Government has done absolutely nothing.

The truckers need to be able to work in order to pay for their trucks. The Minister cannot give them intra-provincial licences but he can give them extra-provincial licences for trucking undertakings. Yet that has not been done. The Government has not looked into the $3 million trust fund administered by the Royal Bank of Canada in the winding up of this company. There are things that the Government could do if only it were concerned for the workers instead of padding the pockets of the owners. When will the Government do something?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I think my friend will agree with what the Government did in 1986. We gave 2,600 workers the chance to work for more than two years, and I think that was not possible with the option proposed by the Liberal Party which was to close the shop. They have repeated that since Monday. The company, Route Canada, has not yet officially declared bankruptcy or receivership, and I believe my friend will agree that the Government does not interfere in the process of the private sector.

About what we can do for the contractors, already 25 contractors have asked Route Canada to be released from their contracts so they will be able to work for other companies, and it has been done. The other contractors who would like to be released by Route Canada will make the same request and it will be answered positively by the company.

• (1500)

REQUEST THAT AGREEMENT BETWEEN CN AND ROUTE CANADA BE MADE PUBLIC

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, the Government laundered this closure through the private sector. That is why the company was sold in the first place.

Why doesn't the Minister give the operating licences that he can give so these people can work? Why doesn't he make the agreement between CN and Route Canada public so we will know what the entire aspect of the give-away is? When will the Minister do something for these people? They cannot pay for their trucks. They are owed thousands of dollars. They are not being paid. It is a rip-off of the Canadian people and it is a rip-off of these workers. Surely the Minister can see that. Surely the Minister realizes that he is putting these workers right across the country in an intolerable position. They are on the street without jobs and without compensation. Will he do something?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, there is no rip-off at all. I believe my friend knows very well that it is a question of legality of the action which the Department of Transport can take. He asks why we don't open the books of CN and Route Canada. That is the private sector. As long as the books are not public—they will be public if there is a bankruptcy—the Government and the Minister of Transport cannot do so.

Mr. Benjamin: You can.

Mr. Bouchard: I think my friend knows that when I met the workers the day before yesterday I told them that if there is anything irregular, at the moment the company declares bankruptcy we will do all the investigations. I repeat what I said. It is not permitted for the Minister of Transport to interfere in private sector operations.

Mr. Benjamin: It is not true.

Mr. Bouchard: Yes it is.

Mr. Speaker: This will be the last question for Question Period. The Hon. Member for Kenora—Rainy River.

FORESTRY

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT EXPENDITURES

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, my question, since it concerns Canada's most important industry, is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister who should know that levels of research and development in Canada's forest industry are causing widespread concern, being at approximately one-third or one-quarter of the levels in the United States or Sweden.

Now that we have seen the Government's final conversion to the creation of a Ministry of State for Forestry, when will we see some serious commitment to an increase for research, development, and regeneration in this most important industry?

Hon. Frank Oberle (Minister of State (Science and Technology)): Mr. Speaker, perhaps you will allow me to answer the question. If there is any area where Canada has made a great effort in the improvement of our research, to permit, as my hon. friend says, Canada's most important industry to make the transition to more intensive forest management practices, it is in forestry.

The problem of course is—the Member would not recognize it—that not only has the Canadian forestry service improved its effort but efforts are going on in universities; there are federal-provincial sub-agreements, for example, with Québec and British Columbia and, of course, in other government laboratories such as the National Research Council. The effort has vastly improved in this area and so it should, as the Hon. Member would agree.

[Translation]

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT BEGIN NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary. The Minister must be aware of the fact that uncertainty about the renewal of contracts for resource development has already lead to cut-backs in reforestation, especially in the Province of Ontario. When will the Government tell its officials to start the negotiations this industry needs so badly?

[English]

Hon. Frank Oberle (Minister of State (Science and Technology)): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member would have to be reminded that the renewal of our forests, the replanting of our forests and the protection of our forests are in the main and principally a responsibility of the provinces.

I can tell my hon. friend that in my Province of British Columbia and in the Province of Québec the effort for forest renewal and protection has doubled in the last four years. In fact, in British Columbia efforts in forest renewal are four times what they were during the former regime.

The present forest agreements are in place. They have another two years to go, and I have every confidence, as will be demonstrated by the recent establishment of a full Ministry of Forests, that the federal commitment will stay in place whether or not it is delivered through a sub-agreement. That though will have to be seen and established.

POINT OF ORDER

TABLING OF TERMS OF REFERENCE

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, during Question Period the Minister of National Defence referred to the terms of reference of William Barton in looking into matters at Defence Research Establishment, Suffield.

Would the Minister table those terms of reference for the interest of Members of this House and the general public?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, not only would I be happy to table them, I would invite the Hon. Member to read them before he starts making unsubstantiated allegations.

Could I seek the unanimous consent of Members of the House to table, in both official languages, the terms of reference of the inquiry by Mr. William Barton and Mr. Barton's biographical notes? If that consent is forthcoming, I could table those immediately.

Mr. Speaker: Does the House give its consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: I know Hon. Members will want to hear the Hon. Member for Windsor West on the usual Thursday afternoon question.

Business of the House

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I want to raise a point of order to pose a question to the Deputy Government House Leader. Will he give us a statement of the government business that he intends to call for the coming week? Also, could he outline the government business that he intends to call until the break provided in the rules of the House for this Chamber in mid-November?

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Speaker, this afternoon we will continue the debate on the time allocation motion on Bill C-144. We will then proceed to the completion of report stage of Bill C-136, the Broadcasting Act. We do hope that we will be able to complete both those items prior to five o'clock. There has been an agreement, and we will arrange those votes for 6 p.m. Also if there is a vote on the private Member's Bill we can do that at the same time for the convenience of Members.

Tomorrow, if possible, we would like to proceed with third reading of Bill C-136, the Broadcasting Act, and to complete that. That would be the business of the day for tomorrow. There is a possibility that we may try to deal with Bill C-152, the Heritage Language Institute from 10.00 a.m. to 11.00 a.m., but we will have to see if that is convenient to the other Parties.

On Monday, it will be our intention to call Bill C-144, the child care Bill for third and final reading.

Mr. Gauthier: You are anticipating the results of the House.

Mr. Lewis: That could be anticipatory. In any event, that is what we are going to do.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Lewis: On Tuesday, we will have Bill C-158, the variable entrance requirements Act, followed by the Act to reorganize the Department of Industry, Science and Technology.

As to the rest of the week and right up to the Remembrance Day break, I have not got it finalized just yet but I am sure that as soon as I have that opportunity my hon. friend will be one of the first to know.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, now that we have a list for the next few days at least, does the Minister have any idea when the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) will call the election?

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, as the House knows we have been waiting for the other Parties to catch up. If you could give us a readiness review, we would be prepared to put that into the hopper.

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, just one simple question. In order to facilitate planning for all Members on all sides of the House, could the Minister tell us what House business might be on Monday, November 21?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, we have not got it finalized but I am not sure that my hon. friend will like the result in any event.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I have a question concerning House business for the Deputy House Leader. Could he tell the House whether the Government intends to proceed shortly with the Bill on political rights, Bill C-157, or is the Government getting cold feet again in not moving it up because of pressure from the unions? Are we, indeed, going to deal with this matter so we can defeat the thing?

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, this Government has passed 32 per cent more legislation than the last two full Parliaments in five fewer months. We have that on our agenda. I can assure my hon. friend that time permitting we will proceed with it.

• (1510)

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, before we broke for 10 days, I gave a letter to the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski), with regard to the Election Expenses Act. The Government House Leader indicated that there would be a response shortly. To my knowledge, I have not received a reply.

I wonder if the Government House Leader is in a position to indicate when the Government will make its position known with regard to election expenses and the Bill before us?

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I am not in a position to indicate that today.

MOTION TO ADJOURN UNDER S. O. 29

TRANSPORT ROUTE CANADA INC.

Mr. Speaker: I want to bring to the attention of the House the fact that I have an application from the Hon. Member for Regina West on a matter that has been taking up some time in this House, and it is a serious matter. I will recognize the Hon. Member.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I have sent you a notice, or a request, within what the rules require. Since there was no other opportunity to debate the subject, except under the Standing Order regarding emergency debates, and since the sale of CN Route to Route Canada was authorized by the Government which, in my opinion, is a swindle of taxpayers, employees, and independent for-hire truckers, bringing it to light in debate is the only way to do it. Therefore, Sir, I am asking you to allow, under Standing Order 29, an emergency debate on the subject of the current crisis facing those people who are employees and contractors with Route Canada.

Route Canada was once part of Canadian National. It was sold under the Government's privatization program. Several government Ministries are now involved in the affairs of Route Canada, including those of transport, finance, privatization, and labour. It appears at this time that the Government has no intention of allowing any opposition days in the House in the foreseeable future, so an emergency does in fact exist because of what has happened to those thousands of people across the country. It is the only way in which Hon. Members of this place can have an opportunity to discuss this urgent and pressing matter. I hope, Sir, that you will give favourable and sympathetic consideration to my request to use up a few hours this evening to have this whole matter aired.

Mr. Speaker: I have put some consideration into this matter, and I have heard the Hon. Member. I would like a few more minutes to consider the matter, and I will return to the Chamber as soon as I can and give my response to the application.

THE ROYAL ASSENT

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that a communication has been received as follows:

Government House,
Ottawa,

September 22, 1988

Sir,

I have the honour to inform you that the Honourable Gérard V.J. La Forest, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, will proceed to the Senate Chamber today, the 22nd day of September, 1988, at 3.30 p.m., for the purpose of giving Royal Assent to certain bills.

I have the honour to be,
Sir
Your obedient servant,
Anthony P. Smyth
Deputy Secretary, Policy and Program Branch

CANADA CHILD CARE ACT

ALLOCATION OF TIME TO CONSIDER THIRD READING STAGE OF BILL C-144

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Lewis for the allocation of time to consider third reading stage of Bill C-144.

Time Allocation

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. We may have left something a little loose in the business exchange. Is there unanimous consent in the House to defer all votes today until the end of the day?

Mr. Gauthier: No.

Mr. Hawkes: There is not unanimous consent?

Mr. Gauthier: No.

Mr. Benjamin: You have a lot of nerve asking for unanimous consent after what you did today.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Yorkton—Melville is seeking the floor on debate.

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, I rise to complete my remarks on time allocation. Before we broke for Question Period, I was saying that it was very strange to see the Conservative Party across the way bring in time allocation on the child care Bill after only one speaker from each Party has spoken in the House. I have not seen it happen before where time allocation was brought in so quickly by the government Party. I see across the way many long time Members of Parliament who were here in the days of the Trudeau Government when time and again they complained about time allocation and closure being brought in by that Government.

There are more occasions now when time allocation is brought in than there were in the previous five or 10 years. There are more occasions when time allocation is used than we had in the days when members of the Conservative Party complained. I see the Hon. Member for Burlington (Mr. Kempling) hiding his head behind the newspaper in shame because of what his Government is doing.

I have here a copy of a speech made by the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Crosbie) on June 9, 1981, when he complained about the Liberal Government bringing in time allocation. The Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn) is very embarrassed and shouting from his seat.

I wish to quote something stated by the Minister for International Trade when time allocation was brought in by a Liberal Government. He said:

> The same little group comes in here on every closure motion. The same little group of parliamentary eunuchs, the same group of parliamentary assassins—the House Leader, the assistant House leader, the hon. member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Evans), the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Bussières)—are in here all the time, assassinating this House and removing the good from the House. That is why I call them the parliamentary eunuchs. The good has already been removed from them.

The Hon. Member was talking about parliamentary eunuchs in the Liberal Party. I do not disagree with him. However, now that the Conservative Party is in power it is doing exactly the same thing.

Back in 1981 the Minister for International Trade further stated:

> Where are all the defenders of the people on the other side of the House? They are going to come out of their trough in a few minutes. They will hear the bell and will have to break away from whatever trough they have their noses in at the moment. They will have to come into this House and say "Oink, oink". They will have to say "Aye, aye". They will have to say "Yes" to the stampeding of Parliament, to rushing this bill through the House. They will have to say "Yes" to the gutting of Parliament. They will have to do the dirty work that the parliamentary assistants, assassins and eunuchs have asked them to do.

Now the Minister for International Trade is on the government side of the House. What is he doing? He is bringing in time allocation, closure, and asking his mindless backbenchers, who are now the new parliamentary eunuchs, to get up and approve what he wants and approve what the Prime Minister wants in terms of cutting off debate on the child care legislation before the House.

I ask my friends across the way, and the Hon. Member for Burlington who is hanging his head in shame as he reads the newspaper, to get up on their hind legs and speak out in favour of parliamentary democracy. I say to my friend, the Hon. Member for Parry Sound—Muskoka (Mr. Darling), who has been here for many years, that he must rise and say the same thing now that he is in government as he said when he was in opposition, that Parliament should not be throttled, that parliamentary debate must continue, and that the people of Canada must have their say.

For years I remember John Diefenbaker sitting in the corner of the House to the left of the Speaker and rising and saying time and again that the Governments of the day were not allowing a full and complete debate, and saying that there had to be full parliamentary participation.

We have a Bill before the House today where there has only been one speaker per Party at third reading, and down comes the guillotine; a Bill before the House today where there were only two days of hearings in the City of Ottawa by the parliamentary committee that spent hundreds of thousands of dollars, and down came the guillotine; a Bill before the House today where the Province of Saskatchewan wanted to present a position and it was not heard.

The Province of New Brunswick was not heard, the Province of Nova Scotia was not heard, the Province of Prince Edward Island was not heard, nor was the Yukon or the Northwest Territories. Those provinces were not heard because the parliamentary committee only met for two days before the Government brought in closure.

Where is democracy? I ask some of the Members opposite, who used to be rugged individuals, who used to stand up and speak for freedom of speech and ask that the democratic process play a role, to speak now. It would be interesting to see if the Minister for International Trade was correct when he spoke in 1981 about Liberal Government back-benchers being parliamentary eunuchs afraid to get up and say their piece. He said they were parliamentary sheep who would say "bah bah" in the House of Commons as they voted in favour of the Government bringing in time allocation.

Where is the Minister of Justice? He used to pretend to be so indignant when he was on this side of the House and the Liberals brought in time allocation. Where is he now? He is a yes-man for the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). How can he agree now to impose time allocation when the Province of Saskatchewan did not have its chance to present its position on child care before the parliamentary committee? How can he do that as a senior Saskatchewan Minister? I am really shocked that the Minister of Justice who at one time was progressive, another John Diefenbaker defending parliamentary freedom, freedom of speech and the dignity of this institution, would now sit back with the power which has gone to his head and watch as his Prime Minister rides roughshod over the wishes of the people of Canada.

It is with a great deal of sadness that I speak today as I watch my friends opposite. For instance, our good old friend from Parry Sound—Muskoka, who has been here a long time, is hiding behind his newspaper. His head is sort of bowed in embarrassment. He is turning a bit redder all the time. Why does that Member not get up and speak now and ask the Government to withdraw this time allocation motion? How can he justify one speaker per Party? How can he justify only one day of debate on third reading of a very important Bill? There were over 40 witnesses at the committee and every single one was in opposition to this Bill.

Mr. Kempling: All arranged by the NDP.

Mr. Nystrom: Not all arranged by the NDP. The Government of Saskatchewan could not even present a brief, and it has a Conservative Premier, Grant Devine. The Provinces of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, and Prince Edward Island could not present briefs and they are not NDP Governments. We cannot arrange for Brian Peckford or Grant Devine to say anything. I ask you, Mr. Speaker, to allow some of my friends across the way to rise, speak their mind, and prove they are consistent in government as well as in opposition when they spoke in favour of free speech in the Parliament of Canada.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I will be very brief. This is one of the few times I have heard the Hon. Member for Yorkton—Melville (Mr. Nystrom) speak in the House recently. I simply want to assure him that I am here and that I am fully in support of this motion which was moved in view of the obstruction of the Opposition, particularly of the New Democratic Party.

I want the people of Canada to remember that here is a Party that likes to hold itself out as being the social conscience of Canada, but when we bring in the first child care program in the history of this country the NDP is out there blocking every move in order to thwart this program for the people of Canada. The New Democratic Party of Canada should be ashamed of itself. I think the next time the Member goes back to Saskatchewan—and we are all waiting for him to come back soon because we only see him there once in a while and it is a great pleasure for us—he will have some explaining to do. When he goes from Aylmer back to Saskatchewan I want him to tell the people of Saskatchewan why he, now the great defender of the Government of Saskatchewan, is blocking this legislation. Why is he standing shoulder to shoulder with the Senate of Canada, with Allan J. MacEachen, to block this legislation so that the people of Canada will be denied the largest input of money in the history of this country for child care? This program was brought forward by a Government which has a social conscience, which does not only speak about it, does not wear it on its shoulder, but in fact demonstrates it by actions.

I want the Hon. Member for Yorkton—Melville to go to Saskatchewan and explain to the people there why he has tried to block this particular legislation. I have listened to a lot of speeches in my day. When I was in opposition, I used to write my own speeches. I never had to resort to quoting speeches from, for instance, the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Crosbie). We were more creative when we were in opposition. This is a sham, a façade. The New Democrats are reading our old speeches in support of their position. What has happened to the New Democratic Party? Where is the spirit of J. S. Wordsworth? He must be rolling in his grave because the New Democratic Party of Canada is blocking child care.

Mr. Nystrom: Point of order.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I will conclude my remarks to allow the Member to get up on a specious point of order.

Mr. Nystrom: It is just very embarrassing, Mr. Speaker, as a fellow Saskatchewaner and university graduate, to point out that it is Mr. Woodsworth, not Mr. Wordsworth.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, Canadians watching this debate might well be asking themselves why the Government is so desperate to force through this time allocation motion after so little debate on what the Government is claiming is such an important measure. I think the answer is obvious. The answer is that in spite of the Government's claims that this is progressive, forward looking legislation, it is just the opposite. This legislation is grossly inadequate.

The Government says that this Bill will provide 200,000 more day care spaces, but in this country we need 1.6 million day care spaces. We not only need 1.6 million day care spaces, but we need them in centres which meet the same basic national standards right across this country so that every child who needs day care will not only receive it but it will be in up-to-date, modern centres with well trained, well paid staff. We need national standards and this Bill does not provide for national standards. In fact, this Bill will provide fewer spaces than if the Government had done nothing and just left the Canada Assistance Plan in place.

The Government does not want the Canadian people to find out the truth about its so-called national day care legislation. It is not a truly national piece of legislation. It does not provide day care for Canadian children who need it. Therefore, we must defeat this motion and go on to defeat this Government so that we can have truly accessible, affordable, universal day care for Canadians. We are not going to get it from this inadequate Conservative Government. Let us defeat this motion.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being 3.27 p.m., the two hours provided for the consideration of a motion now before the House have expired under the provisions of Standing Order 117. Accordingly, under the terms of the Standing Order, it is my duty to interrupt the proceedings and put every question necessary to dispose of the motion. Mr. Lewis moved:

> That, in relation to Bill C-144, an Act to authorize payments by Canada toward the provision of child care services, and to amend the Canada Assistance Plan in consequence thereof, not more than one further sitting day be allotted to the third reading stage of the Bill; and
> That fifteen minutes before the expiry of the time provided for government business on the day allotted to the consideration of the third reading stage of the said Bill, any proceedings before the House shall be interrupted, if required, for the purpose of this Order and, in turn, every question necessary in order to dispose of the stage of the Bill then under consideration shall be put forthwith and successively, without further debate or amendment.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion, which was agreed to on the following division:

Mr. Speaker: Is there agreement?

Mr. Riis: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion carried.

MOTION TO ADJOURN UNDER S. O. 29

TRANSPORT ROUTE CANADA INC.

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members will know that earlier today there was an application for an emergency debate moved by the Hon. Member for Regina West. I have been giving the matter some consideration. I have indicated to the Hon. Member that I will hear him further on the matter.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate your consideration. It will allow Your Honour to consider further the propriety of my application for a debate this evening.

Earlier today I spoke of the Route Canada debacle—

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I understand the sincerity of my colleague's request for an emergency debate. I know that this is an important matter. However, as I understand the rules under which one requests an emergency debate, the actual wording of the request is what is read into the record. There is no opportunity to embellish that. I have lived this for a long time now. I appreciate that the Government has no opportunity to tell its side.

In view of the time requirements I request that we stick to the Standing Orders.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, obviously there is no precedent being set here. Certainly Your Honour has the right in your position to hear a short intervention by the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin).

I want to say that earlier in the day there was a problem in terms of the conveyance of the request for the emergency debate. I understand what happened. It was nobody's fault. It was a matter of a piece of paper not moving in the right direction at the right time. There was nobody to blame.

I think that as long as Your Honour recognizes that there is no precedent being set, because there was a marginal foul-up earlier today, to spend a few moments to hear the case would be quite in order.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, may I just make a comment. I do not understand the Government's sensitivity here. The Speaker himself—

Mr. McDermid: He just said: "Okay, go ahead".

Mr. Gauthier: He did not say anything. He said that this is wrong. The Speaker himself asked for comments.

Mr. McDermid: He just said—

Mr. Gauthier: I ask the Minister to shut up. The Minister should shut up and go back to his seat. I am not talking to him. I am talking to the Speaker.

The Speaker has invited the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) to make statements or further comments to help him in deciding whether or not there is need for an emergency debate. I do not see any point in the Government getting up and being all excited. I wish the Government would keep cool—keep cool.

Mr. McDermid: The House Leader just said: "Okay".

Mr. Gauthier: Go look after housing.

Mr. Riis: Do not ask us for any co-operation. He has asked for a small generous offer. The first thing that happens is that he is bad-mouthed by the House Leader.

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps Hon. Members would assist the Chair by quieting down a little.

I wonder if the Hon. Member for Regina West could give me in as succinct terms as possible exactly what he feels could be done if this debate were held this evening in terms of action taken by this place or the Government.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, once again I thank you and I appreciate your providing an opportunity to present evidence for you to consider whether or not you will accept my application for an emergency debate. In my earlier remarks I called this a swindle of the taxpayers, 2,300 employees and over 350 truckers.

• (1600)

To illustrate what I hope will persuade you, Mr. Speaker, I got a letter this morning from a lady in Oshawa which illustrates the results of this privatization authorized by the Government. Her husband was with CN Route for 23 years and then transferred to the private sector, namely Route Canada. He is now out on the street, as are over 2,000 other ones.

Further, I asked the Minister if he would intervene and ask the provinces to issue highway traffic board permits to these truckers, even to the ones who got their trucks and licence plates and insurance back from Route Canada. Route Canada still holds the highway traffic board permits for them to haul freight, and they cannot move. They are left out in the cold, and one has lost his trucks because the banks have seized them. One has lost his house. If there was ever an emergency, this is it.

Mr. Speaker: I understand the very serious matter. We have listened in the House and heard Members on both sides acknowledge that there was hardship here. However, having listened very carefully to the Hon. Member and after asking him to add somewhat to his remarks earlier today, I am afraid I must say that given all the circumstances it does not justify an emergency debate.

However, let me say this. It is one of these matters of considerable anguish that Hon. Members in this place, on both sides, have to face, and it may well be that the Hon. Member and other Members, and Members on the government side, may be able to pursue it further in Question Period. Perhaps there may be some way in which all Hon. Members can find some way to alleviate the difficulties that these people are in.

I do have to say to the Hon. Member, with the greatest respect and keeping the rules in mind, that it is not appropriate to proceed tonight with an emergency debate.

THE ROYAL ASSENT

[English]

A message was delivered by the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod as follows:

> Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Deputy to the Governor General desires the immediate attendance of this honourable House in the chamber of the honourable the Senate.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker with the House went up to the Senate chamber.

And being returned:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that when the House went up to the Senate chamber, the Deputy Governor General had been pleased to give, in Her Majesty's name, the Royal Assent to the following Bills:

> Bill C-146, an Act to amend the Tax Court of Canada Act and other Acts in consequence thereof—Chapter No. 61.
> Bill C-205, an Act to protect heritage railway stations—Chapter No. 62.

Member for Kenora—Rainy River (Mr. Parry)—Trade—Tax on Lumber Exports/Imports of United States Lumber.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BROADCASTING ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed from Tuesday, September 20, consideration of Bill C-136, an Act respecting broadcasting and to amend certain Acts in relation thereto and in relation to radiocommunication, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee; and the amendments of Mrs. Finestone:

Motion No. 71

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 34 by adding immediately after line 29 at page 24 the following:

"(3) The Minister shall consult with the Chairman before the Governor in Council makes an appointment to the Board."

Motion No. 73

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 39 by striking out line 14 at page 26 and substituting the following therefor:

"hold office for a term not exceeding seven".

Motion No. 76

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 74 by striking out line 20 at page 45 and substituting the following therefor:

"behaviour for a term not exceeding seven".

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, the first of these amendments relates to Clause 34. We were discussing the consultation between the Minister and the Chairman of the Board of CBC to ensure that there was no conflict of interest and that the members to be appointed by Governor in Council to that board were to be appointed in a way that would enrich the board to its fullest.

I know that the Minister has made appointments to the board, and the last group of appointments she made were appointments of fine, qualified people of which all Canadians would be quite proud.

Miss MacDonald: Including women.

Mrs. Finestone: Including women, right. It is true that those appointments have been good appointments. I would hope that the Minister to be appointed following the election that is about to take place will make the appropriate appointments as well based on those needs.

I would like to recommend the acceptance of this amendment because one has to prevent the perception of patronage appointments. I am sure the Minister would not want that perception to impinge on the making of proper appointments.

The second group of amendments in this grouping are Motions Nos. 73 and 76. They relate to the length of the term of service of both the President of CBC, as found in Clause 39, and the tenure of office of the officers and commissioners of the CRTC, as found in Clause 74. These motions, if passed, would provide that the appointment of the President of the CBC would be for a period of seven years and full-time appointments to the CRTC would be extended to a period of seven years.

These are key administrative and tribunal positions. It is important that the holders of these positions have the fullness of time in which to render the kind of decisions that will be in the best interests of the Canadian broadcasting system. I think it would further strengthen the arm's-length relationship between the corporation and the Government.

One of our concerns, from the very outset, has been of a tremendous potential for interference. Much of that has been removed, but I would strongly recommend that this measure be adopted to do the same thing.

Under Bill C-136, a Government would change the top management of two traditionally independent bodies during its term of office. The rule of a seven-year term for heads of Crown corporations is always intended to avoid this in order to protect the independence and to safeguard the arm's-length principle. At present, the President of the CBC, the Chairman of the CRTC, and the Governor of the Bank of Canada have been the significant exceptions to that rule. It was because of the very sensitive nature of the positions of the Governor of the Bank of Canada, the Chairman of the CRTC, and the President of the CBC that that was so.

Again, we do not want to have a sense of political interference with the increased patronage potential. Certainly, the perception of patronage appointments would exist because of the very nature of this change. Because of the structure of the CBC, with the chairman being a director of the board, it is most regrettable that we could not change that situation so we could determine who was the boss of the CBC, but it would have been a little too complex to make that amendment. Otherwise I would certainly have included in this amendment the position of the chairman of the board.

I would like to recommend that Motions Nos. 71, 73, and 76 be given very serious consideration and that they receive favour with the Minister of Communications (Miss MacDonald).

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, as communications critic for the NDP, I would like to speak to this set of motions, Motions Nos. 71, 73, and 76, all brought forward by the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). Motion No. 71 provides that the Minister should consult with the chairman of the CBC before making appointments to the board. I do not have any particular problem with that. It is kind of odd, though. The Conservative Minister, if it happened right now, would be consulting with the Liberal President of the CBC.

Miss MacDonald: I consult with him every day.

Mr. Waddell: It is quite interesting. The motion simply says to consult. One can consult and then simply leave, so it really does not mean all that much, but—

Mrs. Finestone: It's better than nothing.

Mr. Waddell: It's better than nothing, perhaps. What is important, and the Member touched on this in her speech, is appointments to the board of the CBC. I have been making a special point since I became the NDP critic to take advantage of the procedures under the reformed rules of Parliament whereby we can call upon all appointees to the board of the CBC and cross-examine them for 10 or 15 minutes, and it is worth while to do that.

Recently we cross-examined Diane Lamb from Vancouver and Ron Collister, who, even though they are both Conservatives, are both pretty good people, and in spite of being Conservatives, they are good Conservatives. I was satisfied that while they had their own viewpoints on certain issues, these people were dedicated to protecting the interests of the CBC generally, and that was important.

That has not been true of all appointments made by the Government. Especially in the beginning of its term, not so much by this Minister but by her predecessors, appointments to cultural agencies including the CBC were dumping grounds for Tory patronage appointments for so-and-so's campaign manager, the Prime Minister's secretary, someone else's friend, and so on. They were pretty awful appointments, and the appointments recently got a lot better.

• (1620)

Motions Nos. 73 and 76 would extend the term of the President of the CBC and that of the CRTC commissioners to seven years. I think seven years is probably too long for one appointment. Indeed, I am told that the President of France—God knows how he loves his seven-year term—is considering a national referendum to shorten the presidential term to five years. If it is good enough for the President of France to shorten the term, we might consider that seven years might be a bit too long a term. As I said to Mr. Juneau in the committee hearings, it certainly avoids any messy by-elections or anything like that.

I would not support Motions Nos. 73 and 76 but would support Motion No. 71.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I want to make a few comments in support of Motion No. 71 introduced by my colleague from Mount Royal. The clause she is seeking to amend provides that a person who is engaged in the production or distribution of program material suitable for use by a broadcasting undertaking may be appointed director of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation if that is not his or her main occupation.

I should like to say a few words concerning the power of the Government to make appointments to boards of directors and to emphasize how important we think it is that individuals appointed to the boards of these corporations and agencies be quite familiar with their new environment and truly represent the interests of the various Canadian groups. I am referring of course to francophones who at times get hauled over the coals when it comes to appointments to such national bodies as the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation or the CRTC. I mention this because the Canadian Diaspora is divided into two majority groups. First we have the anglophone Canadians in general who see to it that their colleagues and fellow nationals are duly represented, and I agree with that.

Then there are the Quebecers who make sure they are represented on the various Government Boards, but then there are the minority groups. It has always been a problem for both anglophones in Quebec and francophones outside Quebec to be appointed to the CBC or the CRTC, for example. I was looking at the CRTC 1987-88 annual report and I am impressed, as was my colleague from Mount Royal, by the quality and especially the representation of women, and I am in favour of that. The point I want to make is that we have to be sure that the directors appointed by the Government—I hope the Minister will exercise that power in the future, maybe not this Minister but the Minister of Communications who will have to act with diligence and make sure that the appointees represent the Canadian community as a whole and that the various commissions, particularly the CRTC and the CBC, have people on the board who understand the aspirations of the official languages minority groups, that is anglophones in Quebec and francophones outside Quebec.

I should like to get back to what seems to be a problem these days, the famous TV5 network. I fail to understand why in the past two or three days, responsible and serious journalist Michel Vastel of the fairly respectable newspaper Le Devoir should always be referring to the problem which TV5 creates for French-speaking Canadians outside Quebec. Mr. Speaker, I can quote these articles in Le Devoir which constitute an attempt—not strong enough, I would suggest—to depict what I mean by fair representation of linguistic groups.

I see in today's Le Devoir a statement made by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), and I quote:

"TV5 is an excellent network and we will make it available everywhere"

Another nice promise! Hon. Members will recall that yesterday the Minister of Communications (Miss MacDonald) and the chief executive of TV5 were also quoted in an article by Michel Vastel.

Mr. Speaker, I will quote word for word, what TV5's General Manager, James Baird, confirmed to Le Devoir, namely that "... Consortium de Télévision Quebec-Canada is getting ready to apply to the CRTC, within a week at the most, in order to offer TV5 to cable distributors in English-speaking Canada at a price lower than the 27 cents a month paid by Quebec subscribers ... " This is a serious promise indeed, and I think it is a step in the right direction. And to quote further: "It is felt within the Canadian Department of Communications that this application should be dealt with rapidly, as a regulatory matter by the CRTC, in order to allow early penetration by CTQC, the Consortium de télévision Québec-Canada, of that market outside Quebec." Again it seems to me that this is a promise. They are saying: it is coming. I was told this week, I think it was Tuesday last, September 20, by the Minister herself, that I was impatient. Well, things have moved since then!

Wednesday, September 21, and today, September 22, two good articles support my position, which is simply to widen the choice, the viewing grid, in order indeed to include the famous TV5, a Canadian government initiative that cost $1.6 million of Canadian money and that, in my view, is really needed to allow for the development of our official language minorities across Canada, giving them access not only to Radio-Canada's French services, but also to another network, TV5, which as we know is an international entreprise, to the extent it is a consortium of several countries—which Canada, France, Belgium, Switzerland and the province of Quebec—agreed to put that programming together.

I am sorry, but I have to quote from an article, again by Michel Vaste in today's Le Devoir:

> Miss Flora MacDonald indicated to Le Devoir that regulatory arrangements could be soon negotiated between TV5, the cable distributors and the CRTC. The latter promised yesterday to deal "expeditiously" with any application.

But the Minister is here. I for one trust her. I think she is a Minister to be trusted. If she says to those newspapers people she is serious and really wants to help us, let her do so. As it seems to me, the least she could do is tell the CRTC's president, whom she herself appointed, to act, to do something positive. Let her tell Mr. Juneau: "Enough pussy- footing and dilly-dallying. Do something. The time has come to act on that, and we want TV5 to be accessible to English-language cable distributors outside Quebec so it can be relayed to French- language viewers outside Quebec!

It seems to me we are not asking that much, but it is all connected with this particular amendment. The kind of directors we have, the kind of people we have to make the decisions and recommendations all depends on how these people see their role. I see them as representatives of the diaspora. I also see them as strong representatives of various interest groups, including francophones, women, native people and multicultural groups. I think all these people should be very well represented. I think the Minister should give serious consideration to the amendment submitted by the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) which says the Minister should consult. That is all we want her to do. We want her to consult properly and at length before making appointments, so that we can be sure of the qualifications of the people up there, that they are really on top of the situation and can provide the kind of service that truly meets our expectations.

[English]

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I want to make a very short intervention on the three motions before us. In terms of Motion No. 71, this would make it a requirement that the Minister would have to consult with the chairman of the CBC before any appointments were made. I see that as a protection for the Minister and for the board itself.

After an election and the enthusiasm of a new Government, whatever its stripe, rewards are made. Not immediately after the 1984 election but later, when there was a move to appoint new people to the board of Air Canada, we saw people being appointed not because of expertise in transportation or even expertise as a consumer of that particular mode of transportation. The best the person involved could come up with was that she had a driver's licence and a Tory card.

It makes sense to give the Minister the power to hold off the patronage boys. Whatever the structure is, whether it is a committee of the PMO or whatever, it ought to be able to say: "Hang on. Thank you for your suggestions. Let me take them back to the chairman of the CBC and take a look at the mix, the regional mix, and the level of knowledge and understanding of broadcasting, whether it is on the technical side or on the performing arts side".

Even though it may be done informally now, I suspect that there is that type of give and take. The Minister and the Government would not drop it on to the chairman and say: "Here is your new crew". There is some consultation. This is an added bit of protection so that the Minister cannot be overruled or forced to put some people on the board of the CBC who would not go with the wishes of the Minister herself or himself, whoever the Minister may be at the time.

I encourage the Government to accept this amendment. It does not prevent it from making the appointments or unduly restrict it. It formalizes in law an informal process that occurs today.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Motions Nos. 71, 73, and 76 were grouped for debate. Motion No. 71 will be voted on separately and a vote on Motion No. 73 will apply to Motion No. 76.

The question therefore is on Motion No. 71, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 73, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

Mr. Gauthier: On division.

Motion No. 73 (Mrs. Finestone) negatived.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The vote on Motion No. 73 applies to Motion No. 76, so Motion No. 76 is also lost on division.

Motion No. 76 (Mrs. Finestone) negatived.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The next motion is Motion No. 75 which will be debated and voted on separately. On a point of order, the Hon. Minister of Communications.

Miss MacDonald: I would like to advise the House that I am prepared to accept this amendment.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The next motion is Motion No. 75.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway) moved:

Motion No. 75

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 52 by striking out lines 24 to 30 at page 34 and substituting the following therefor:

"poses to carry out a substantial change to business activities in any period in a manner that is not consistent with the last corporate plan of the Corporation in respect of that period, the Corporation shall forthwith notify the Minister in writing of the inconsistency in the manner of carrying on the business activity."

He said: Mr. Speaker, I wish to explain Motion No. 75 and thank the Minister for accepting it. Under Clause 52(3) the CBC is required to inform the Minister when it "proposes to carry on any business or activity in any period in a manner that is not consistent with the last corporate plan". This amendment states:

"poses to carry out a substantial change to business activities in any period in a manner that is not consistent with the last corporate plan of the Corporation in respect of that period, the Corporation shall forthwith notify the Minister in writing of the inconsistency in the manner of carrying on the business activity."

I believe that such notification should only be necessary when a major issue has arisen, and that is why the use of "substantial change". I am pleased that the Minister has accepted it.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): I wish to thank the Minister. I am pleased that my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell), moved the amendment. It came to me as a great surprise. It was refused for consideration in our deliberations in the legislative committee, therefore I did not submit it. I was pleasantly surprised when I found it in the Bill, and I am pleased that the Minister has agreed. I am pleased that my colleague moved it. I guess everybody is happy.

The only thing I would like to find now is a five-year plan that has a financial commitment. I can see no reason why we cannot do that for the CBC; we do it for all kinds of other things.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The next question is on Motion No. 75, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 75 (Mr. Waddell) agreed to.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The next motions are Motions Nos. 75A and 75B which will be grouped for debate and voted on separately.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway) moved:

Motion No. 75A

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 70 by striking out line 4 at page 44 and substituting the following therefor:

"7. Neither the Company, nor its parent, nor any".

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

Motion 75B

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 70 by striking out line 5 at page 44 and substituting the following therefor:

"affiliate of the Company shall".

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, Motion No. 75A states:

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 70 by striking out line 4 at page 44 and substituting the following therefor:

"7. Neither the Company, nor its parent, nor any".

Page 44, line 4, of the Bill states:

Neither the Company nor any person controlled by the Company shall directly or indirectly hold a licence issued under the Broadcasting Act or carry on a broadcasting undertaking within the meaning of that Act.

That is contained in Part IV of the Act entitled "Amendments to Other Acts" and it refers to the Bell Canada Act. Clause 70 states:

> Section 7 of the Bell Canada Act is repealed and the following substituted therefor:
> "7. Neither the Company nor any person controlled by the Company shall directly or indirectly hold a licence issued under the Broadcasting Act or carry on a broadcasting undertaking within the meaning of that Act".

The company, I gather, is Bell Canada. Both Motions Nos. 75A and 75B deal with Bell Canada. I read the amendment that we proposed. Bell, which is big enough to swallow up the whole broadcasting industry, cannot get involved with any undertaking under Bill C-136. That is what it states in the Act, unamended. However, Members could ask themselves if it involves all of Bell. Bell has this great ability, and as a matter of fact it should go in the Guinness Book of Records, because the child is able to produce a parent. It is the only thing in the world which reverses the natural order, the child produces the parent. I am speaking of Bell Canada International and Bell Canada Enterprises. The company of Jean de Grandpré makes a billion dollars a year in profit. One sees Mr. de Grandpré on the cover of the Air Canada magazine or other magazines bragging about how he got away from being regulated by the regulators because he was able to spin off another company, and it became a deregulated company.

When we addressed this clause in the clause-by-clause part of the legislative committee, the Minister was asked whether Bell Canada Enterprises—where I talked about the child spinning away the parent, the child being Bell Canada and the parent being Bell Canada Enterprises—was covered by this prohibition. In other words, was Bell Canada Enterprises prohibited from getting into broadcasting? The answer was no. In fact, I believe it was Mr. Palmer of the Minister's Department who said that in response to a question from the Hon. Member for Don Valley West (Mr. Bosley) who was a member of the committee.

What we are saying with this amendment is that Bell Canada and Bell Canada Enterprises have consistently made efforts to avoid Canadian regulations and regulators by spinning off new companies. Indeed, a Bill was passed by this Government to allow the child, Bell Canada, to give birth to the parent, Bell Canada Enterprises. What we are saying is that this amendment should be perfectly clear and that the prohibition should apply to Bell Canada Enterprises as well as to Bell Canada. The Bell Canada Act, under Amendments to Other Acts states:

> "Neither the company nor any person controlled by the Company shall directly or indirectly hold a licence issued under the Broadcasting Act or carry on a broadcasting undertaking within the meaning of that Act".

We want to amend that to "neither the Company nor its parent, nor any person controlled by the company". Therefore, we make it quite clear that we are talking about Bell Canada and its parent, Bell Canada Enterprises. I think that is the nub of this amendment.

• (1640)

We know how close the Minister is to Bell Canada Enterprises. We remember the famed Saudi caper of recent vintage. That is when the Minister worked hand in hand with Mr. Jean de Grandpré, the President of Bell Canada Enterprises, to end run a CRTC decision. The CRTC had ruled that Bell Canada must use $21 million from overseas operations to cut telephone rates in Canada. The Minister went so far as to write a letter of support for Bell which was used by the company in its appeal to the CRTC. I believe the courts have recently rendered a decision with respect to the Government's continuing interference in this matter. I want to quote Mr. Andrew Roman when, in front of the legislative committee, he said:

"This may sound weird, but I would even give consideration to going the other way. What you see under the Broadcasting Act is both broadcasting and cable, and cable is essentially not very different from the telephone companies. While I do not think I would like to have the news brought to you by Bell Canada today in the sense that they are writing the news, I do not see why on the transmission side of it they should not, since they produce fibre optics, coaxial cable, and digitalized network, to be able to provide some competition for the cable companies. But then I have always felt that the hardware delivery side should either be taken right out of the Broadcasting Act or put into a special section and dealt with not as if it were broadcasting. I think it should be dealt with as if it were transmission, which is essentially a hardware and transmission function.

I do not mean by this that it should be dealt with only on the telecom side through the Railway Act, but it should perhaps be left in the Broadcasting Act but dealt with as a separate entity. To the extent that we would not want Bell Canada carrying on the broadcasting activity, I would think that it should cover any associated or affiliated company, yes, because it is so easy to spin off another subsidiary that does the same thing or virtually the same thing under a different label, but when it comes to transmission I would be happy to see them competing with the cable industry because, for one thing, it would bring rates down and for another, it would probably bring quality up."

I do not agree with Mr. Roman's somewhat mischievous suggestion about Bell entering the broadcasting picture. We think that Bell Canada Enterprises and Bell are perhaps even bigger and more powerful than the cable industry, which is already powerful enough. In a short time they could well take over the entire distribution side of broadcasting. We do agree, however, with Mr. Roman and the public interest advocacy group that the distribution undertaking should be dealt with separately and perhaps have similar provisions that apply to Bell in the Railway Act apply to cable companies. I have already offered amendments along these lines which have been voted down by the Government.

However, this amendment, if I may just summarize it, makes sure that we catch Bell Canada Enterprises, the parent, that was spun off by that miracle child.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I can only support the remarks made by my colleague and suggest to him that based precisely on what he has brought to the attention of this House I think perhaps my amendment is a bit fuller in its concept. It covers more. It covers the momma, the poppa, and all the aunts, uncles, sisters, and brothers that might possibly become affiliated. I think the major point here is the fact that cable is a hybrid system. If we were to allow the telcos, particularly Bell Canada, as the first step, into the operations of transmission as a cable system, we would then find them moving into the next step that which we have now accorded to the cable system, and that is as a programmer.

I would like to remind the Minister of her views, which she expressed very succinctly subsequent to my bringing my concerns in this respect to her attention when we were dealing with Bill C-113 on Bell Canada. With respect to Bill C-113, on May 6, 1987, the Minister said that she favoured a preventing of affiliates, not just subsidiaries, of telephone companies from holding broadcast licences. The Minister went further and said: "I believe such a restriction should apply to all federally regulated telephone companies". I would go beyond that and say "all telephone companies", notwithstanding that she went on to say: "We do not tend to favour the telephone company investment in broadcasting receiving undertakings whether directly or affiliated companies".

I recall talking about the child that gave birth to its parents, which is quite a unique undertaking in anyone's world, but it gave birth to a rather unique parent. This parent ended up earning $1 billion profit last year. I would say, therefore, it was a very well fed child in the end. Actually, the child who gave birth, Bell Canada, is still a very productive part of the Bell Canada Enterprises. I would suggest that we do not want Bell Canada, Bell Canada affiliates, Bell Canada Enterprises, or any one of them, involved in the broadcast Bill.

The amendment which appears under the Bell Canada Act, through Section 70 of this Act, now prevents Bell Canada only, the regulated monopoly telephone company and its subsidiaries, what flows from the Bell Canada Telephone Company, from holding a broadcast licence. It does not touch Bell Canada Enterprises. I would suggest to the Minister that we would be moving into a very serious situation if we would start with a monopoly transmission facility lending its help and aid to a subsidiary or a sibling or a parent, as the case may be, as one of the affiliates might apply for such a licence.

The potential for conflict must not be permitted. Broadcast and telecommunication policies are not currently advanced enough to allow the entertainment of this particular idea. I would like to suggest that our amendment is valid. The previous Minister of Communications tried such a provision in his first attempt at a Bell reorganization Act under Bill C-19. I would suggest that it was not in the country's interest then and it remains not in the country's interest now. I would strongly recommend the Minister give consideration, through consultation with her own staff, to which one would cover most broadly either Motion No. 75A of my colleague or my own Motion No. 75B. One or the other, I believe, should be adopted.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I want to comment briefly on this amendment. The effect of the amendment is to ensure that Bell Canada cannot indirectly, through Bell Canada Enterprises, do what the Bill says it should not do directly, for example, entering into the broadcasting area.

I am surprised the Government would not have accepted this amendment by now, because it has been made quite clear over the course of the past 15 or 20 years that Bell Canada has systematically been seeking to evade regulatory authority of the Government of Canada. It has been aided in so doing by the Liberals when they were in power prior to 1979, again since 1980, and now by the Conservatives in their first full term in office for a very long time.

I ask myself: What is the reason for that? Why this excessive lassitude when it comes to Bell Canada? Why this complicity with Bell Canada in terms of trying to build it up or allow it to do things which one would have thought the Government agreed it should not do? The only answer I can arrive at is the fact that the Government, be it Liberal or Conservative, has a soft spot for Bell Canada. Of course, I have difficulties with that in a couple of ways. I recognize that Bell runs a more efficient and useful telephone system than many that exist in the world. We benefit from the fact that the telephone system as a whole in North America works pretty well. However, at the same time one must ask whether the cost of that should be to allow continued growth in the non-regulated side which appears to be financed or facilitated by the regulated activity. I think that is a very serious question which the Minister should have taken up.

• (1650)

While I am on my feet, if one wants an example of the problems and corporate irresponsibility which exists, you can look at the situation which is occurring right now. This is a shade distant from the specific purpose of the Bill, but I, as a Member of Parliament, want to register my concern in human terms for the fact that the Bell workers have now been left out on the street for a period of 13 weeks and it looks as though it is going to go on for a lengthy period of time. I want to voice here in the House of Commons my concern for my constituents who have suffered and also for my constituents who are small business people and are suffering because of the deterioration of Bell service. Constituents of mine and other people in this area who are seeking to move into homes or change telephones have also suffered a deterioration of service.

I would like to register my concern for the junior managers who have had to work 60 or 70 hours a week because of the obduracy, obstinacy, and stubbornness with which Bell Canada has continued to hold out against reaching a decent and just settlement with its workers.

That is relevant to this particular clause in the sense that this is a company whose primary objective used to be seen as a public service. That does not mean that it was not in the business of making a profit as well. It obviously did. It returned a reasonable stream of dividends and Bell shares were always seen as a safe investment, et cetera. However, a company whose primary objective appeared to be public service seems to have been taken over by an ethic which says that we do not care whether we are in the mortuary business, the telephone business, or anything else, the object of our business, first and foremost, is not to serve our customers, not to look after our employees, not to be good corporate citizens; it is first, last, and foremost just to make a buck, to make as many dollars as we can, and to have the company grow as large as it can.

If that is the guiding principle which is impelling Bell Canada right now, then that means if Bell Canada is prevented from getting into broadcasting, if broadcasting continues to be a lucrative area of endeavour, then Bell Canada will be looking to go indirectly into an area from which it may be barred from going directly. That is why I am suggesting that this amendment, which would ensure that Bell Canada cannot do indirectly what it cannot do directly, should be accepted. I ask the Minister to comment on that when she participates in the debate on this particular section.

I would also like to have her comment a bit about the human situation of a company which I think is doing itself long-term harm in terms of the way it is handling its labour relations. It is doing a lot of harm to its workers, its customers, its clients, and a lot of small business people across the country when this goes on and on. Surely there must be a more sensible way of running a major enterprise with such an important role in our society, as well as our economy, as Bell Canada has, than to hold out, to keep the last tenth of a per cent out of a wage increase for its employees, to give nickels and dimes only when it comes to a second vote to the point where the employees felt they had no choice after 11 weeks but to reject the company's offer.

There is something wrong with that and I put a lot of the responsibility on Bell management. In acting as they have they have engendered the inquietude and distrust which leads my Party to suggest that this amendment would be appropriate in order to ensure that Bell does not use the back door to get into broadcasting.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I want to participate in this debate on this particular motion put forward by my hon. colleague from Vancouver—Kingsway. The section in the Bill to which it refers is Clause 70(7) which presently reads:

> Section 7 of the Bell Canada Act is repealed and the following substituted therefor:
> "Neither the Company nor any person controlled by the Company shall directly or indirectly hold a licence issued under the Broadcasting Act or carry on a broadcasting undertaking within the meaning of that Act".

This amendment expands this somewhat. At first glance it certainly appears that it is a step in the right direction that Bell Canada, or any person controlled by the company, shall not directly or indirectly hold a licence issued under the Broadcasting Act or carry on broadcasting within the meaning of the Broadcasting Act.

It misses, of course, the point made by my hon. colleague from Vancouver—Kingsway, that is, the fact that this company is controlled by Bell Canada Enterprises. With Bell Canada Enterprises exempt from this, you might say that the parent of the company is exempt. I do not think that was what the Minister intended.

The Member for Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) has suggested that Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 70 by striking out line 4 at page 44 and substituting the following, "Neither the Company, nor its parent". That will take in the concern that Bell Canada Enterprises also be under the authorization of Bill C-136, Clause 70.

The spokesperson for the Liberal Party has indicated that we should also include on line 5 at page 44 an "affiliate of the company". I think that is more than reasonable because one of the problems we have seen in the past, when it comes to escaping regulation, not only with the Broadcasting Act but other forms of regulation, is that you simply have to spin off a subsidiary and that takes care, if you like, of escaping beyond the net of the regulatory network.

I do not expect that we want to see that happen and my hon. friend, the spokesperson for the Liberal Party, has suggested that we also include an affiliate of the company. I think that is a reasoned suggestion such as she normally puts forward in the House. I was hoping the Minister would have indicated she would have supported the inclusion of the term "affiliate" or, as my hon. friend from Vancouver—Kingsway has indicated, recognized that the parent of the company should be recognized.

I need not repeat some of the arguments put forward earlier by the Member for Vancouver—Kingsway, who indicated some of the ways in which Bell Canada Enterprises has operated to circumvent a number of regulations in the country. I think of some of the ways they use to circumvent the Tax Act and the way they have circumvented regulations in a variety of business and industrial pursuits. We are concerned about this one because it refers to broadcasting. This is critical. We all, of course, fear further corporate concentration in the broadcasting field. Therefore, my hon. colleague has moved what we would call informally a friendly amendment. However, the Minister indicated she would not consider this amendment to be acceptable although he is simply asking that the parent also be involved. He referred to the offspring and the parent and this is kind of a backward movement when we want to bring the parent company under this section as well.

Miss MacDonald: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I know that we are coming to the close of report stage of this Bill and we have now been discussing the various amendments for a great deal of parliamentary time. There have been 79 various amendments put forward. I have accepted a number of them in the course of debate here in the House and in committee.

• (1700)

We are within one amendment of completing report stage of this Bill. I know I have consent from the critic for the Liberal Party, the Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). I would like to appeal to Members of the New Democratic Party to spend the time it would take to finish report stage of this Bill this afternoon.

Mr. Gauthier: It is five o'clock.

Miss MacDonald: We are within one amendment of finishing.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I listened carefully to the Minister's request. On the surface, it would appear to be a reasoned request. Taken in the context of the way the three Parties have approached this legislation, it might make sense.

However, a few minutes ago in the House, on the most important piece of social legislation in decades, the child care legislation, the Government made no indication of even a decent debate on it. It brought in closure after a single speaker from each of the three Parties.

While one is encouraged, and I quite frankly believe that the Minister has a legitimate concern about this, since we have already debated closure in the House I do not think the request is reasonable.

However, we look forward to rapid passage of report stage as soon as it is called again.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being five o'clock, the House will now proceed to the consideration of Private Members' Business as listed on today's Order Paper.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS—MOTIONS

[English]

FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS

ADVISABILITY OF INFORMING DEPOSITORS WHEN DEPOSITS ARE UNINSURED

The House resumed from Thursday, August 18, consideration of the motion of Mr. Riis:

That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should consider the advisability of co-operating with the provinces in establishing a system whereby those individuals who deposit money in financial institutions not covered by deposit insurance be required to sign a waiver form indicating that they are fully aware that their deposits are not insured in the event that the institution goes bankrupt.

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to be able to continue my debate on this particular issue brought to our attention by the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis). I have glad tidings for the Hon. Member. In fact, it is probably more than he deserves after the way he has been treating the Government with respect to child care, the free trade agreement and everything else. However, when we on this side of the House think someone has a good idea, we go along with it.

In a few moments I will be introducing an amendment which will render this private Member's motion acceptable to the Government. It will not change it in any major way but will simply tidy up the wording.

In my previous presentation I said that this is a good idea. There has been all manner of problems in Canada of late, of people making deposits in various deposit-taking institutions not knowing whether or not those deposits were insured under CDIC or being of the assumption that these deposits were insured. In the long run they found out to their chagrin that that was not the case.

It is good fortune for the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap that he has before us today a motion and not a Bill. On issues such as day care and free trade the Liberals and their good friends the New Democratic Party have been encouraging an attitude of recalcitrance in the Senate. This has flowed over to the ideas put forward by the Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) with respect to heritage railway stations. That Bill has been given a rough ride in the Senate. It is lucky for the Hon. Member that he does not have to go through that route.

I want to make one small comment before going through a prepared presentation. It deals with waiver forms, if we adopted a system of using waivers.

When one goes into a bank or trust company to open an account and puts some money on deposit, one ends up with a whole sheaf of forms, all written in legalese. We are told to sign in the various places marked with an x. If we do not sign, they will not take the money and will not open an account. Very few people read those forms. If there was to be a waiver, it should be in bold print on a separate piece of paper that no one should mistake.

A review of the debate on this motion thus far would show that the House is virtually unanimous in its support for the aims of the Member for Kamloops—Shuswap. As many Members on both sides of the House have pointed out, however, there are a number of problems with the specific proposal which his motion is putting forth.

I agree with several of my colleagues who have indicated that while they support the spirit of the motion, they are unable to support it in its current form because of those shortcomings.

Consequently, in order to ensure that the House is able to convey its support for the swift development and implementation of measures to improve the availability to consumers of information regarding deposit insurance coverage of deposits and deposit-like instruments, I move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Kamouraska—Riviere-du-Loup (Mr. Plourde):

> That the motion be amended by striking the words following the word "establishing" and substituting the following:
> "new ways of notifying clients of financial institutions of the existence or absence of deposit insurance coverage or similar forms of protection for deposits and deposit-like investments."

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair finds the amendment to be in order. Resuming debate.

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox—Powell River): Mr. Speaker, this is a very important proposal. Many Canadians have been caught in a situation where they have placed their deposits in an institution in the belief that in the event the investments of the institution were lost they would have protection for those deposits and would be able to recover those deposits from the institution.

A number of organizations in the early 1980s invested in land. As interest rates escalated and the prices of the land dropped, they were unable to obtain a return on those investments. The depositors in those institutions lost their shirts.

After the smoke and dust had cleared, the people who had put their life savings into these institutions found that there was absolutely no protection for those savings. Had they known this when they first encountered the situation, there certainly would have been some caution and probably another form of investment. I know people who lost virtually their life savings in such organizations. There certainly would have been a great deal more caution in placing their investment, such as by spreading it out into different institutions to protect them from such an occurrence.

We have before us this afternoon an extremely important proposal. I notice in the amendment put forward by the Hon. Member who sits on the government side that the proposal is acceptable and that the Government will support it.

One question I have to ask, however, and it is one which I hope the Government will respond to, is with respect to what seems to be proposed here, although more than acceptable to us because of the action being taken to assist, is that some clarification is needed on how that notice to prospective depositors might come about.

Certainly the fact is that an individual must sit down and have the proposal explained, especially the fact that the deposit is not covered by the Deposit Insurance Corporation and that there is no protection should deposits be lost through investments that do not yield sufficient money to return. We watched the same type of thing happen with the B.C. Teachers Co-op. It is an organization that for many years operated successfully. It accepted deposits from teachers and turned around to pay returns on those deposits. In the final analysis it got caught in the escalating interest rates and declining land prices and left a great number of its members holding the bag.

Hopefully, the Government will explain the mechanism that it intends to use to have prospective depositors fully informed of the lack of coverage, or the nature of coverage of deposits.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being 5.14 p.m., pursuant to Standing Order 36(2) the time provided for debate has expired. Accordingly, the question is on the amendment standing in the name of Mr. Nickerson. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the amendment?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I declare the amendment carried.

The next question is on the main motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I declare the motion carried.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Motion, as amended, agreed to.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 66 deemed to have been moved.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS—FRASER VALLEY—EMISSIONS FROM BURRARD THERMAL GENERATING PLANT

Mr. Ross Belsher (Fraser Valley East): Mr. Speaker, I have asked for an opportunity to address the House during this adjournment debate to pursue a question I asked the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Shields) on July 27. Briefly, I asked if the Government would reconsider the effects on the environment of the Fraser Valley, especially the District of Chilliwack, in making the decision whether or not to reissue the permit to B.C. Hydro for energy exports using the Burrard Thermal Generating Plant.

Although the Parliamentary Secretary replied to my question, I have several points which I would like to highlight, and a couple of questions I wish to raise. First, a quick view of the environment in the Fraser Valley is necessary. The Fraser Valley is one of the world's most productive areas for fish, wildlife and agriculture.

Surrounding the cities of Chilliwack and Abbotsford are rich and abundant crops of raspberries, blueberries, corn, large dairy farms and pastures for raising cattle, sheep and pigs and chicken farms. Farther up the river at Hope and Boston Bar are the forests which make B.C. famous around the world. We are proud of the valley's beauty but, now, we are concerned about its environment and the people who live there.

The Burrard Thermal Generating Plant located outside my riding of Fraser Valley East is a 912 megawatt generating station. Unfortunately for us in the valley the prevailing winds from the West which bring the rain to grow our crops also bring nitrogenoxide. Anyone who has done any study on the environment knows that when sulphur and nitrogenoxides combine with water vapour the result is acid rain.

Ozone—not the ozone layer in the upper atmosphere—is a particular reactive form of oxygen that can harm the respiratory system and has been shown to cause leaf damage and reduced crop growth rates. It is produced during warm months when sunlight causes a reaction in the nitrogenoxide and hydrocarbons coming from automobile exhaust and plants. The effects of ozone and acid rain are not new to Canada. I have only to remind the House of the thousands of lakes and forests that are dying in eastern Canada to point out why we are seriously worried about the emission coming from the Burrard Thermal Generating Plant.

We are told that the current air emissions permit for the Burrard generating station will come up for renewal at the end of this year. It will provide for curtailment of operations if ozone levels have reached or are likely to reach 100 on the air quality index. One hundred is the rate of very poor.

Why must we allow the rate to drop so low just to satisfy a clause in a permit? I am sure that I speak on behalf of the mayors and councils of the Chilliwack district and Abbotsford, as well as the residents, when I say that we had better not wait. Our farmers now and our future farmers should not have to suffer for the sake of a permit to export energy.

The long-term health and environmental effects of most of the chemicals now being found in the environment are not known. We do know that some groups of individuals, for example, the elderly, and some specific ecosystems are more susceptible to these contaminants than others.

In 1987 the National Task Force on the Environment and Economy endorsed the replacement of a remedial reactive approach by an anticipate and preventive approach. This is what we should do in the valley.

As I have said already, why should we wait until it is too late? I am pleased that the federal Government has taken a strong stand on environmental issues. We have been the forerunners of some very constructive international environmental measures, such as the Montreal Protocol. We now have the Environmental Protection Act which gives the Canadian Government the necessary authority to implement the Montreal Protocol. This agreement will cut in half by 1999 the emissions of chlorofluorocarbons which seriously affect the global environment. This is good news.

I mentioned that I had some questions. However, I know that time does not allow them to be answered now. First, can the Minister tell us by how much the National Energy Board has agreed to increase the exports from B.C. Hydro using the Burrard plant? Second, what measures have been taken which would make the people in Chilliwack and the valley aware that steps have been taken to prevent the possible negative effects to the environment from the emissions from the station? A reply at a later date will be appreciated.

My constituents recognize that energy, such as that produced by the Burrard station, is necessary for economic development and social progress, but we are also aware of health and safety issues. Scientific data compiled by the Vancouver Pollution Control Board and the provincial Minister of the Environment show that the plant will send out nitrogen oxides equal to the emissions from a hundred thousand cars annually.

This is a very frightening figure when we think in terms of adding that much pollution to the already polluted air.

Yes, we are concerned. The Burrard Thermal Generating Plant requires our immediate attention. It is not too late to do something about the situation right now.

Mr. Lee Clark (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, first of all, I would like to compliment the Hon. Member for Fraser Valley East (Mr. Belsher) for his continuing interest in the environmental concerns of those who reside within that region. I would also note that the question which he is raising today of course is not only one of considerable consequence, but is also one of very considerable depth. I hope he will appreciate the fact that we may only be able to address some of the points which he has raised in his question.

As you and I both know, and I am sure the Hon. Member for Fraser Valley East knows, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Masse) has a very keen interest in ensuring compatibility between energy and environmental policy. As a result of that, the new electricity policy which was announced a short period ago did address environmental policy.

As a result, we have his commitment and that of the Government to environmental protection. I think we can conclude without too much doubt that the decision by the federal Cabinet to approve the issuance of export permits for electricity from the Burrard Thermal Generating Plant was made only after careful deliberation.

Certainly, the Hon. Member who just spoke is well aware of the history associated with the authorization of exports from this plant. As he knows and as others know, B.C. Hydro applied to the National Energy Board for a licence to export electricity from the province in 1980. The National Energy Board provided approval but excluded exports from this particular thermal plant from the licence.

The situation was repeated in 1983, when B.C. Hydro again applied to the board for export licences. Power from the Burrard plant was excluded from the licences because it lacked a pollution control permit, inhibiting the operation of the plant. Since that time, the Burrard station has upgraded its pollution controls and has been granted both a pollution control permit and an energy removal permit or licence from the B.C. regulatory authorities.

B.C. Hydro reapplied to the National Energy Board, seeking approval to use the Burrard station to support electricity exports authorized under the original licences. The National Energy Board and Governor in Council subsequently approved the amendment to the licences.

I would like to stress the following points with reference to the federal authorization of electricity exports from the Burrard station. First of all, the matter has been reviewed not only by the National Energy Board, but also by the Greater Vancouver Regional District and the Environmental Appeal Board of the Province of British Columbia. Each of these agencies, on the basis of evidence studied, has found in favour of permitting B.C. Hydro to operate the Burrard plant.

The waste management permit issued to B.C. Hydro for the operation of the facility restricts pollutant emissions to levels that meet or exceed federal guidelines for emissions from new thermal power generation sources, and B.C. Hydro is committed to reducing its NOx emissions from the plant by an additional 20 per cent.

B.C. Hydro must provide meteorological forecast information to the GVRD for the purpose of assessing air quality conditions whenever the power plant is operated.

The permit furthermore requires B.C. Hydro to advise the district director of the GVRD five days in advance of any planned operation of stations, and gives the director of that agency the authority to curtail operation of the Burrard station when air quality levels of ozone or nitrogen dioxide reach or are predicted to reach specified levels. The specified levels have been set to prevent air quality from reaching the maximum in tolerable levels established by the federal Government for the protection of public health.

Based on these factors, the Government and the Minister are confident that the Burrard Generating Station can be operated without causing air quality in the lower mainland of British Columbia to deteriorate to an unacceptable level.

Furthermore, the waste management permit is up for renewal in December of this year. If circumstances change, and the waste management permit is rescinded or not reissued, the issue will be re-examined at that time and I am sure that the Member for Fraser Valley East will be speaking to the issue at that time.

TRADE—TAX ON LUMBER EXPORTS/IMPORTS OF UNITED STATES LUMBER

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, my application to be heard on the adjournment motion arises out of a question which I directed to the then Minister for International Trade, the Hon. Member for Vancouver Centre (Miss Carney). It concerns the softwood lumber export tax that was imposed at the behest of the American lobby.

The reason I was dissatisfied with the answer was essentially that the Minister, while providing some information of a more or less relevant type, did not address the gravamen of my question. If I can quote, I asked: "What will the Minister do to attempt to ensure that the tax is not costing Canadian lumber producers Canadian markets?"

This is the major concern in the imposition of the softwood lumber export tax. It would not only reduce Canadian exports to the United States, but by the drastic changes that it involved in the cost of volume equations, it would lead to a much improved ability of American producers to compete in the Canadian market. That prognostication appears to have indeed come true.

I have some recent press reports which I think would be worth citing in terms of that projection. The June 4, 1988 edition of The Globe and Mail records that the President of the Council of Forest Industries of British Columbia, Mr. Apsey, is still calling for Canada to get out of this clause in the softwood lumber tax agreement.

The 15 per cent tax which was imposed on Canadian exports has allowed American producers, now that they have much more secure access to their home market, to increase their production, to drop their marginal cost, and therefore be able to sell into the Canadian market. The lumber tax is not just costing Canadian exports to the United States, but also Canadian shipments to the domestic market.

If I can quote another article on August 27, 1988, also in The Globe and Mail, about a company, Green Forest Lumber Corporation:

> One or Canada's leading lumber wholesalers has turned to U.S. wood, U.S. trains and U.S. dollars to help it stay profitable in difficult economic times.

It goes on to talk about what this company is doing, obviously in response to market forces and the desire, indeed the need, to make a profit, which is taking lumber that it buys in the United States, shipping it across the United States, west to east, and then selling it into the southern Ontario market, which of course is the largest market for construction weights of lumber in the country.

There are a number of other press reports that I can quote of mills shut down because of the 35 per cent tariff on cedar shakes and shingles. We then have the 15 per cent export tax on our softwood lumber exports to the United States.

It appears that we do not have the mechanisms to force the United States to bring, for example, the plywood standards dispute, which is another related and very serious issue, to the Dispute Resolution Tribunal. Under American law they can seek redress before the Federal Trade Commission against the application of that standard which they feel to be discriminatory.

The second supplementary question the Minister answered by stating that Canada was selling record amounts of lumber to the domestic market. That is certainly something we would want to look very closely at if we were to accept that statement. The second question was: "What is the Government prepared to do to ensure that we have our share of the Canadian market?"

I would like to know from the Parliamentary Secretary, who is replying for the Government, what discussions in fact the Government has had with the United States Government regarding this problem of the export tax not only cutting Canadian exports to the United States but, in essence, making the reverse advantage also possible; that is, giving American producers a competitive advantage in selling to Canada.

• (1730)

Mr. Bill Kempling (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, during Oral Question Period on November 17 last, the Hon. Member for Kenora—Rainy River (Mr. Parry) directed a question to the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Crosbie) concerning the export charge on softwood lumber products and alleged increases in imports of U.S. lumber into Canada. In addition, on June 20, the Hon. Member directed a question to the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) concerning a legal action brought against the federal Crown by a group of lumber manufacturing companies, most of which are located in British Columbia. I am pleased to respond to the Hon. Member's request for comments on these matters.

The Hon. Member made the allegation in the preamble to his question of November 17 that the sale into Canada of U.S. lumber was de facto dumping and was obviously contrary to the spirit of the free trade agreement. There appears to be considerable confusion in the mind of the hon. gentleman since the case he cites seems to contradict both these statements.

In order for U.S. lumber to be dumped in the Canadian market, it must, by definition, be sold at a price which is lower than the price at which it is offered in the United States market, or sold at less than the cost of production. This is not the claim being made either by the Hon. Member or by the industry spokesmen to whom he referred.

In fact, the Hon. Member stated that the U.S. producers have been able to offer their lumber at competitive prices due to a reduction in their unit costs of production. All of us here would agree that if a company were able to lower its cost of production, it should be allowed to benefit from this achievement in the international market-place without undue restriction.

Canadians have always been able to purchase U.S. lumber on the open market and there have always been imports of U.S. lumber into Canada. These have been traditionally much smaller than the Canadian exports of lumber to the United States, but imports from the U.S.A. are not uncommon. The fact that these took place after the imposition of the export charge on softwood lumber products does not imply in any way that the U.S. products were dumped, and certainly not that the spirit of the Canada-U.S. free trade deal was thwarted.

Canadian exports to the U.S.A. have declined slightly, but this has been more than offset by growth in both the Canadian and other export markets. I note particularly that the Japanese market has taken much more of our lumber than it has in past years. The growth in exports and the buoyant domestic market in Canada have resulted in an over-all increase in Canadian production of softwood lumber in 1987 over a year earlier. While the 1988 market is off somewhat, the current high levels of production point to another reasonable year for the industry.

In summary, no evidence has been presented that Canadian producers are losing a share of the Canadian market due to unfairly traded U.S. lumber. On the subject of the legal action brought against the Crown, it would not be appropriate for me to comment directly on the issues now before the courts.

I would like to comment briefly, however, on the agreement which is the basis for the questions the Hon. Member has raised. It is worth recalling that Canada entered into the Memorandum of Understanding as a means to resolve a major trade dispute with the United States and to avoid the imposition by the U.S. of a countervailing duty on our softwood lumber exports. As a result, provinces have retained the flexibility they need to make changes in their forest management policies. Revenues which would have otherwise gone to the U.S. Treasury remain in Canada. In the first year the export tax was in place, this represented approximately $400 million. This has been distributed to the provinces.

Moreover, all lumber produced in B.C. is exempt from the export charge following implementation of replacement measures by that province, and the charge has been reduced from 15 per cent to 8 per cent for exports from Québec, the second largest producing province, again on the basis of replacement measures. In fact, most of the softwood lumber exports are now exempt from the export charge.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 10.00 o'clock pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

BROADCASTING ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed from Thursday, September 22, consideration of Bill C-136, an Act respecting broadcasting and to amend certain Acts in relation thereto and in relation to radiocommunication, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee; and the motion of Mr. Waddell:

Motion No. 75A

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 70 by striking out line 4 at page 44 and substituting the following therefor:

"7. Neither the Company, nor its parent, nor any".

And the motion of Mrs. Finestone:

Motion No. 75B

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 70 by striking out line 5 at page 44 and substituting the following therefor:

"affiliate of the Company shall".

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. We are on the twelfth grouping, Motion No. 75A. which is my amendment, and Motion No. 75B. which is the amendment of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). I do not think we have dealt with them yet, is that correct? We have simply debated them.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: We have debated them, not voted on them. The motions are to be debated together but voted on separately. Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The first question is on Motion No. 75A. standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), a recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 75B standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), a recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The last motion to be debated at report stage is Motion No. 79.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

That Bill C-136 be amended by adding immediately after line 6 at page 57 the following:

"92.(1) Five years after the coming into force of this Act a comprehensive review of the provisions and operation of Sections 7, 8, 19, 26 and 27 of this Act, including the effect of such provisions, shall be undertaken by such committee of the House of Commons as may be designated or established by the House for that purpose.

(2) Within six months after the completion of the review referred to in subsection (1), the committee so designated or established for that purpose shall submit a report on the review to Parliament including a statement of any changes to the committee would recommend."

She said: I am pleased to rise to discuss Motion No. 79 which is a sunset clause. It is a clause that would provide for an automatic review in five years after the coming into force of this Act. It is an identical review clause that the Minister included in her employment equity Bill, Bill C-62, when she was Minister of Employment and Immigration. I would like to suggest to the Minister that we are setting no precedents here. We are being consistent in asking for consideration of the implications of this Bill which has been seen as quite flawed by many of the players in this particular broadcast area.

This review clause has some specific provisions which would provide for the comprehensive review of the operations of Clauses 7 and 8, which are the CRTC clauses. Under the CRTC we have an established panel. That panel system has had a series of different points of view. Some call it the "Meechifying" of Canada. Some have referred to it as a serious mechanism that can, in a sense, destroy the national broadcasting system in terms of providing the kind of broadcast policy that would be evenly applied across this country. If we do not have a built-in review system we will not know just how this is working. Will regional commissioners be captured by their regional responsibility and become advocates for their region instead of proponents of a policy for a national broadcasting system?

The second area of concern I have highlighted is with respect to Clause 19 which, as I said, provides the CRTC panels. Clauses 7 and 8 are the Governor in Council power of direction. The Minister feels she has removed the potential for arm's length incursions in this Bill. It is true she has removed a number of them but there is still, in my view, one that remains which could create some very serious interventions, not just arm's length interventions but shoulder to wrist intervention by the Minister. Clauses 26 and 27, with respect to the Governor in Council variance and review of the CRTC decisions, fall into the same bloc.

There were a lot of concerns and because the debate was split, I think with this motion we would be rendering the best of service. Although I have not clearly enunciated other provisions, I would suggest that we are going to have to look at this because the Minister has not accepted further definition or clarity as to what has happened at the CBC in light of the fact that there is no real boss defined. Has this Bill "Meechified" Canada's Broadcasting Act, as was suggested by Mr. William Johnson? Are we having the separate standing committees that are in the CBC now as a mandate rather than as a decision of the board, which would be the normal structure? How is that going to affect the radio and television sense of delivery of service to Anglophone minorities in Québec in areas like Chicoutimi, Gaspé, the Outaouais, and Sherbrooke, the small towns across this country, not to mention the large cities such as Montreal? What is going to happen to the Francophones in Saskatoon, Regina, Manitoba and Winnipeg? Will the services be delivered in an equitable way if we have divided this board of directors the way the Minister directs in this Bill?

What will be the impact of the lack of clarity of the definition of broadcasting, the fact that the deregulation of the programming services into non-programming services which will not fall under the CRTC telecom side rather than the broadcast side? What will happen with respect to fair and due process and the fact that we have given the CRTC a mandate that allows it to develop the rules, examine them, apply them and fine people when these rules are not being applied, in other words, be judge and jury in its own case? It is really a very unfair principle in law and we are concerned about that.

What about the bottom line, the free trade agreement? Has it really affected our radio song content? Has it allowed for the Americanization of our network because we have not decided we would control the number of American stations that can come in? We have not decided to license. We have not accepted the grandfathering of the 22 American stations that come in on our TV sets. It is of ongoing concern that this supposed Canadian broadcasting policy will enable the Canadian people to have the option of good Canadian programming when they select their Canadian channels.

As we well know, we have a situation where we have a hybrid cable system which we are allowing to expand, and we do not know the impact of it, we have an American system mixed with ours, and our own system carries those American networks, and we are now demanding more and more from our broadcasting in terms of input of money and production of good quality programs. These are all valued goals, but will they be met under this Broadcasting Act? There is a big question mark at this time.

I have requested serious consideration by the Minister of a sunset clause which will be consistent with other clauses that have been undertaken by Governments. I would just add one other point. We have been very concerned about the CBC and five-year funding. Whereas we demand a five-year operational plan, which is good business sense, we are not prepared to give CBC the dollars to put it into effect.

All in all, I would like to recommend strongly the acceptance of Motion No. 79 which would add a new Clause 92.1 at the end of the broadcasting Bill, Bill C-136, to ensure that the experience and examples which I have just outlined have been properly effective in order to have a strong Canadian broadcasting system from coast to coast for English and French constituents, whether their mother tongue is English or French or whether they are watching because they wish to appreciate another culture, learn another language or just see themselves expressed in that particular perspective.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, this group we are debating now is our final group of amendments. It only includes Motion No. 79 from the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). It is a sunset clause for all the provisions which change the Government's power vis-à-vis the CRTC, the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, which is the over-all regulator of broadcasting in Canada, and the change in the decision-making practices of the CRTC itself. It states that after five years a committee of Parliament shall review the effects of those changes, and so on.

As I mentioned earlier this week, on the specific matter of the CRTC, the Minister and I, with a few exceptions, are more or less on the same wave length. This was not always the case. I think we in the legislative committee can take some credit for having improved this aspect of the Bill in the short and rushed time in which we dealt with the Bill in committee.

The Minister's original plans for the CRTC were objected to by almost all the witnesses who appeared before the committee. There were significant concerns expressed about whether the decentralization of the CRTC would have a profound affect on the consistency of the commission and whether the powers taken by the Governor in Council, the Cabinet, if you like, Mr. Speaker, would lead to excessive political interference in the affairs of the commission.

Fortunately, at the legislative committee, and to the credit of the Minister, we were able to pass five important amendments which improved this part of the Bill. I am pleased to say we were able to propose many of these amendments. The first amendment was to Clause 7 of the Bill. This ensured that if the Government used its power of policy direction, the directions themselves would be broad and of general application, not specific. These amendments brought substantially greater clarity to the Act and I think reflected in effect the original intent of the Minister, in any event.

The second amendment was to Clause 19 and ensures that the new panels that will be established to make CRTC decisions—the principle is that she or he who hears decides—shall consist of at least two full-time members in order to ensure consistency. I believe Ray Peters of BCTV, among other people, made this suggestion. I moved the amendment and it was incorporated in Clause 19.

The third amendment also applies to Clause 19 and suggests that members of the panel shall consult with other members of the commission in making their decisions.

The fourth amendment was the deletion of Clause 26 in the original Bill which was the Government's power of exemption. This was deemed by just about everyone to be an excessive and potentially dangerous power.

The final amendment extended the term of part-time commissioners from three to five years. As was mentioned by someone in the committee, three years on the CRTC apparently barely gives commissioners time to find the washroom.

The amendment proposed in Clause 79 by my hon. friend from Mount Royal is a positive one I think. Our legislative committee sat for a short time and yet we made some fundamental corrections to clauses in this Bill. I think most Canadians would agree with the statement that Members of Parliament, no more or less than the Minister of Communications, are not infallible.

These clauses represent an important change to the structure of regulatory affairs in this country. I think that after five years we should have a pretty good sense of how they are working in practice. I therefore support the amendment proposed by the Hon. Member in order to ensure that a review is conducted to see how we are doing after that period.

That is the end of my remarks on that particular amendment. I am pleased that the ministry accepted some amendments. I think that is the way we should do things in Parliament. I hope that before the Bill is finally voted on the Minister will have a look at some of the other amendments that were rejected, perhaps in the heat of the debate here in the House. Perhaps with altered wording or some adjustments the Minister might accept them. I think of Clause 39 and Clause 35 and others in that area which dealt with Canadianization of the air waves which tried to reflect, we thought, the recommendations of the all-Party committee on broadcasting.

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, in support of Motion No. 79 moved by the Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), I would like to put on record the concerns expressed by the Canadian Bar Association whose brief, it is my understanding, was not studied in committee. That is regrettable because the brief by the Canadian Bar Association contains a number of very interesting and significant observations which ought to be taken into account.

I will give you three examples. One, the Canadian Bar Association expresses the desirability and concern that this Bill ought to be consistent with the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Without going into details, obviously the Canadian Bar Association would not express such a preoccupation if it had not concluded that this Bill needs to be brought in line and made consistent with the Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

This is, of course, very important legislation and the Bar Association says that very little time was given to interested groups to review the draft language of Bill C-136. It is in this context that the submission and input from the Canadian Bar Association is to be seen. For the life of me I cannot understand why a Bill of this significance was moved through the committee with such speed.

Second, the Canadian Bar Association expresses the view that the Act should be sensitive to questions of fairness and due process in the administrative law context. One need not elaborate on that. That is an observation of substance which says it all.

The Canadian Bar Association makes the most important point in its submission when it addresses another aspect of Bill C-136. It urges that the language should be clear, unambiguous, and readily understandable. We all know that it often happens that legislation is drafted in an obscure manner. This observation applies to Bill C-136 as well as to other pieces of legislation that we tend to look upon in a rather technical manner and not from the review point of the layperson who wants to understand the substance and the message in that particular legislation.

It is also important to put on record the views expressed by some observers in the fourth estate. I was rather struck by an article by William Johnson in The Gazette. He made the observation that this Bill "threatens the unity of Canada as a community of communications. It contains within it the seeds of fragmentation." That is part of the Meech Lake virus that is now permeating and penetrating a number of executive measures as well as legislation such as this in particular.

It is interesting to note how The Gazette, through Mr. Johnson, goes on in analysing this Bill. It says:

> The bill attempts to decentralize the decision-making of the one body in this country which ensures the integrity, the consistency, the adequacy, the national purpose of our far-flung system of radio and television: the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC).
> It abolishes the executive committee of the CRTC, which till now made most of the day-to-day decisions.
> The new regional commissioners, resident in their region, backed by a regionally hired staff, will be considered as spokesmen and champions of that region. They will lose touch with the coherent, country-wide vision of broadcasting which now animates the collegial decision-making of the CRTC members who sit together in the capital.

As the media and communications loss actions of the Canadian Bar Association argued in their submission to the parliamentary committee, the "he who hears decides" principle is chiefly important where facts, not policies, are the relevent consideration of the hearings. That is a very important basic consideration.

The article continues:

> To meet some of the criticisms, the government made changes to the bill requiring that at least two, and not just one, of the members of a panel must be full-time CRTC members, and further requiring that the panel members, before a decision, "shall consult other members of the commission or any officer of the commission for the purpose of ensuring a consistency of interpretation of the broadcasting policy.
> But fragmentation remains likely when just two members of the CRTC can make fundamental decisions for the whole CRTC.

You can see that this analysis is very distressing because it shows that we are dismantling national unity. We are decentralizing, evidently. Therefore, we are heading for a system of broadcasting which will probably make the network system an assembly of original systems at the expense of a national system as we have known it so far.

• (1030)

I wonder whether the Minister is not distressed, knowing her stand in previous decades about what Canada is all about, by the trend she is now allowing to be set in motion through this Bill. I wonder whether she is comfortable with this notion of regionalizing the Canadian radio and television system the way this Bill is now attempting to do.

It is important that this amendment by the Member for Mount Royal not only be aired and put on record, because it would provide a sunset clause for an automatic review five years after the coming into force of the legislation, but that it give an opportunity for interested Members to express their views and support it in the hope that at least we will have this experiment of regionalism limited to five years rather than become a permanent feature in our radio and television system.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I would like to comment very briefly on Motion No. 79 in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), a motion I believe will ensure that Canadians can expect a review of the performance of the CRTC every five years.

[English]

Motion No. 79 is very good. It is what is called in legislative language a sunset clause motion. In other words, it includes in the Bill a review process automatically after five years of the coming into force of the Act. The provisions of this clause allow for a comprehensive review of Clauses 7 and 9 that provide for the Governor in Council to give direction to the CRTC. I want to address this subject because it touches on a very difficult and sometimes very sensitive point.

[Translation]

Recently, Mr. Speaker, I read a CRTC press release, which contains some interesting statements. According to the CRTC, we have one of the best systems in the world, and I would like to quote verbatim from the press release dated September 14, 1988. This was fairly recent, when they published their annual report. I quote:

> We know how highly regarded Canada's broadcasting system is, by the number of delegations from abroad who visit the CRTC to examine our system. These outside observers are awestruck by our achievements and continuing progress . . . They want to know how we have handled the overwhelming American presence over the years. Until now, Europeans, Australians, and others have been isolated from the impact of American broadcasting. But the reality of satellite communications has forced them to face this problem, and they look to the Canadian experience for guidance.

Mr. Speaker, that is what I mean when I ask the Government to give Canadians access to programming and to ensure that cable TV distributors transmit the TV5 signal. That is the point I am trying to make. I want French-speaking Canadians living outside Quebec, and I am one of them, to have access to TV5, and I want the CRTC, supported by the Government, to ensure the signal is available. All week people have been saying: Gauthier, don't be so impatient! This week the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) said to the media: It is an excellent system. I agree. But we don't have it, and even when we do, it is incomplete.

For instance in Ottawa, the capital of this country only half the city gets TV5 and Canal Famille, and only those two, instead of the five signals they get in Québec. We pay six dollars. East of the Rideau Canal, we pay six dollars more to have access to this program, while in Québec it only costs $1.63 for all five signals. I think that is unfair. I think the Government should do something. I want to ask the Government and the CRTC to take the necessary action so that we can honestly say: Yes, we do have Canadian programming and we have taken steps to ensure this programming is diversified and meets the needs of our various communities. That is all I ask. I am not impatient. I just wonder why Ottawa Cablevision west of Bronson, in Ottawa, the capital of this country, says; No, we don't provide the TV5 signal. We are an English station, an English company. That is the answer we got this week. I don't understand that.

There are Francophones living in the western part of Ottawa, and there are Francophones living across this country, but cable TV does not give them acess to adequate programming. And as the CRTC's annual report says, we have managed to counter American influence and Amrican programming, and God knows it can be invasive, but good grief, Mr. Speaker, we should be able to do something! We usually have acess to only one French channel: Radio-Canada. And we had to fight for years to get that far. We succeeded when the federal Cabinet agreed to a policy of accelerated coverage in 1972-73. Since that time, we have had to fight every inch of the way to be able to continue to live and work in our own language.

Mr. Speaker, I don't think it is unreasonable to ask for as much as, but not less than what the others are getting.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 79 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion, the nays have it.

Motion No. 79 (Mrs. Finestone) negatived.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House deferred the putting of the question on Motion No. 74. The Chair will now put the question on Motion No. 74. Mrs. Finestone moved:

Motion No. 74

That Bill C-136 be amended in Clause 44 by striking out line 14 at page 28 and substituting the following therefore:

"contemplated by sub-clause 3(1) and in particular paragraphs 3(1)(j) and 3(1)(k)".

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion, the nays have it.

Motion No. 74 (Mrs. Finestone) negatived.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Normally at this time the House would proceed to the taking of the deferred divisions at report stage of Bill C-136. However, pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 13(5), the recorded divisions will stand deferred until six o'clock, Monday, September 26, 1988.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT, 1971

MEASURE TO AMEND

Hon. Flora MacDonald (for the Minister of Employment and Immigration) moved that Bill C-158, an Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Mr. Benno Friesen (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to begin debate on Bill C-158 on behalf of the Minister who could not be here today but who has a great deal of interest in this legislation.

This Bill is an amendment to the Unemployment Insurance Act to extend the variable entrance requirement, what we now call the VER. According to the provisions of the Unemployment Insurance Act, the person applying for unemployment insurance benefits must have a minimum of 14 weeks to qualify. Since the late 1970s, the VER has been used to make this requirement more flexible and responsive to the needs of unemployed Canadians, especially those who have been unable to accumulate more than 10 to 13 weeks of insurable employment to their credit.

The unemployment insurance program plays an important role in our social security system. Unemployment insurance benefits replace lost income. They help maintain the stability of local economies and also protect the jobs of people employed by those communities.

According to the VER, the number of weeks that an unemployment insurance claimant needs to qualify depends on the rate of unemployment in the region where he or she lives. Therefore, in regions of high unemployment claimants can qualify for unemployment insurance benefits with as few as 10 weeks of insurable employment.

• (1040)

As Hon. Members know, the present VER legislation is in effect only until January 3, 1989. We propose to renew it again in order to enable thousands of Canadians living in regions where the economy is not as strong as in other areas of the country to qualify for UI benefits. Despite the continuing decline in the unemployment rate since our coming to office we think that it would be beneficial at this time to maintain the protection provided by the VER.

Statistics show that the over-all Canadian economy is doing extremely well. Unfortunately, in some regions economic recovery is slower and the rate of unemployment remains higher than the national average. A failure to extend the variable entrance requirement at this time would have serious negative consequences for those regions.

One of the priorities of our Government is its desire to help those regions that are experiencing economic difficulty. The VER recognizes that it is more difficult to find and keep a job in a region of high unemployment. This is, in fact, one of the most important aspects of the UI program, since it takes into account the labour market conditions in each region of the country.

As the Minister announced on August 16, 1988, Employment and Immigration Canada is conducting a full review of the economic regions used to determine the minimum number of insurable weeks needed to qualify for benefits. We want to ensure that our system of economic regions is still responsive and sensitive to the changes that occurred as much in the distribution of people as in the employment opportunities in Canada.

If the VER is not renewed all claimants will, as of January 4, 1989, need at least 14 weeks of insurable employment to be entitled to unemployment insurance benefits. This means that more than 80,000 unemployed Canadians would be unable to meet the entrance requirements to receive UI benefits.

Thousands of Canadians would thus find themselves in difficulty, and most would have to turn to other sources to support themselves and their families. This would inevitably have an impact on provincial welfare programs. The Government wishes to continue to provide financial support to Canadians in designated regions, that is, those who need it the most.

It is important that Bill C-158, to renew the VER for a 12-month period, be passed as quickly as possible. In this way unemployment insurance claimants will know where they stand with regard to their entitlement.

As I mentioned earlier, the VER enables us to recognize economic disparity between regions when deciding the entitlement of UI claimants. It is in this connection that the VER was created, and it is for this reason that we want to continue it for the next year.

I am asking for the support of all Members in passing this amendment for the renewal of the VER for a 12-month period until July 6, 1990.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, the Bill before us, Bill C-158, proposes to extend the period for variable entrance requirements, known as the VER, to January 6, 1990.

We will indeed support this legislation. The Government, of course, in its explanation was rather short and sweet. It is a simple Bill, I agree. It is not very complex. It proposes to extend the variable entrance requirement of the Unemployment Insurance Act and freeze the level of contributions for one year.

We all know that the variable entrance requirement provides that to qualify for unemployment insurance employees must work for 10 to 14 weeks and make contributions. They can qualify with 10 weeks of work if they live in a region where unemployment is over 9 per cent. The requirement increases from 10 weeks to 14 weeks when the rate of unemployment declines below 9 per cent. This provision is in recognition of the fact that in some parts of Canada it is very difficult to find work, which is why we provide in this legislation more unemployment insurance benefits in those regions.

I just looked up the figures a few minutes ago for the Ottawa-Hull area, and I want to put them on the record.

[Translation]

The qualifying period for unemployment insurance in the Ottawa—Hull region is now 20 weeks for the first application. For the second application, it is from 14 to 20 weeks, depending on the number of weeks of benefits received as a result of the previous application. In the Ottawa-Hull area, the unemployment rate was 6.1 per cent in August 1988, compared to 7 per cent in August 1987. The number of people in the labour force in August 1988 was 443,000, compared to 419,000 last year. The number of unemployed was 29,000 in August 1988, compared to 32,000 in August 1987; nationally, the unemployment rate was 7.5 per cent in August 1988 and in Ontario, the rate for the whole province was 4.8 per cent.

Mr. Speaker, although we support this Bill, we regret that the Government has gotten into the habit of waiting nearly until the end of the session. Last time, it was just before Christmas. The day before the Christmas adjournment, or almost, the Government came to us in a mad rush with a Bill that it said had to be passed quickly. Today again, it is coming to us in a mad rush, and I am sorry that it is so, and telling us that this Bill must be passed. We agree. The Government could have called the Bill before to give Members and critics a chance to give the matter really serious consideration and to make suggestions to strengthen the provision whereby those who are out of work in Canada receive unemployment insurance.

We know that the unemployment rate has increased by about 0.1 per cent in Canada since last month. The main reason for the increased rate of unemployment was that 15,000 more people were looking for work in Canada; it was not due to an administrative change or a significant change in the level of employment or unemployment. The number of unemployed Canadians increased by 12,000 to 1,069,000, while the number of jobs throughout Canada increased by 3,000 to 12,367,000. This is despite some four years of economic growth. Indeed, I would say that the economic recovery began in 1983. This recovery is due to the growth in the world economy. The Government can claim that it is entirely responsible for this recovery, but I must say that it began before the Government took power in 1984. Furthermore, it is not confined to Canada; there is economic recovery throughout the world, in the United States, in Japan, in Europe. So that is not the reason.

The reason we have an economic recovery since 1984 is not the election of a Conservative Government. They were not there in 1983 or 1984. They took power in the fall of 1984, and God knows that since then, they have had a lot of luck and a lot of help from the world economic recovery.

And despite this sustained growth, the policies of the Mulroney Government have not reduced the unemployment rate below what it was before the 1982 recession. Even after six years of economic growth, we have not returned to the unemployment rate of before the 1982 recession. The average annual rate for 1980-81 was 7.5 per cent, which is not a seasonally adjusted figure. Job gains this month were recorded in Quebec with 13,000 and British Columbia with 4,000. The participation rate remained unchanged at 66.8 per cent. In addition, the proportion of the population with jobs also remained unchanged at 61.5 per cent. Compared to September 1984, the unemployment rate went down from 11.7 to 8 per cent, a drop of 3.7 points. The participation rate increased by 1.6 points, from 65.2 per cent in September 1984.

Mr. Speaker, the number of full-time jobs declined by 49,000 to 10,441,000, while the number of part-time jobs increased by 43,000 to 1,893,000.

As I said before, the situation in some regions of the country is disastrous! There are areas where the youth unemployment rate is 15 per cent. We must be concerned and aware of the difficulties these people face. And that is why there is a Bill before Parliament to amend or extend the Bill passed in 1976, if I am not mistaken, so that the period when the number of weeks that an insured person, other than a new entrant or re-entrant to the labour force, shall have in order to qualify for benefits (based on the regional rate of unemployment) is extended until January 6, 1990.

Mr. Speaker, I do not want to prolong the debate. I think that it is simple enough, but I would have preferred that the Government give us more notice and be more aware of the situation. But I think that many Members from the outlying regions hard-hit by unemployment would like to talk about this Bill. So I will conclude my remarks with one final point. Mr. Speaker, the Government must not forget that it is important to review all of these social programs. Free trade must not be allowed to threaten our social programs and I say sincerely that free trade must not influence the way the unemployed are treated, nor be seen by Canadians as influencing it.

I would just like to assure the House that we Liberals are concerned about this and after the coming elections, we will make the necessary changes so that unemployed Canadians are treated fairly and justly.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have an opportunity today to speak on behalf of my Party on Bill C-158. My colleague, the Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez), had planned to speak on this when he anticipated that it was being brought forward on Tuesday of next week. As usual, the Government has not been able to follow through on its legislative agenda and, therefore, I get to fill in.

I am quite pleased, because I have been really upset about the Unemployment Insurance Act for quite some time. I should point out that we will be supporting this particular Bill because we recognize that, whatever else is wrong, at least in some areas it helps people in need.

The purpose of this Bill is to extend the variable entrance requirement, which has already been stated, and ensures in some areas of this country where there is higher unemployment than the national average, that people need only 10 weeks at the most to requalify.

It has a down side, too. Let me deal with the region that I come from, the region as defined by the Unemployment Insurance Commission and the Act. It is all of northwestern Ontario. The main community in that region is the City of Thunder Bay, which crosses two federal ridings, and then a lot of smaller communities, isolated hamlets of First Nations, spread throughout a very large area, an area that is larger than all of southern Ontario by many, many times. That is one region, for the purposes of this Act.

If you have a booming economy in Thunder Bay, the smaller communities, the outlying communities, need more and more weeks to requalify.

Let me use the example of the community of Atikokan. This is a community that now has a population of about 4,200 to 4,300. It used to employ 1,100 men mining iron ore. In 1979 and 1980, those mines shut down. The companies went in search of higher profits at other locations. But 1,100 jobs were wiped off the map. That community has been struggling since 1979 and 1980 to rebuild itself.

Through Canada Employment and Immigration and the local advisory committee for Atikokan, we did a study of that community. Because the community is so much smaller, we were able to go to every citizen to get a sense of their employment situation. What we discovered was that in 1987, one out of every two adults who were available for work were out of work for some point of time during that year. They did not get any benefit from Thunder Bay's booming economy. They were forced to adhere to the variable entrance requirements. As the economy in Thunder Bay improved, they needed more and more weeks to requalify. The same goes for Fort Frances, Kenora, Dryden and Ear Falls. Ear Falls is another community that saw a mine closing.

I was pleased to hear the speaker for the Government indicate that they are looking at those regions. If we are going to continue the variable entrance requirement—and I want to say something about that a little later—we should take a look at dealing with cities, not regions. We all know that there is almost full employment in Metropolitan Toronto. What does that say for other parts of Ontario that are part of that region? It means that those people are being punished because their neighbours are doing very well. That is also the underlying philosophy of the variable entrance requirement. The Government assumes—not just this Government, because this program was brought in by the previous one—that just because somebody else has been able to get a job, the person who is laid off will get one, too.

I see that you are indicating, Mr. Speaker, that my time at this point has run out. I want to give you notice that I will continue after we resume debate on this after Orders of the Day.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being eleven o'clock, we will now proceed to Statements by Members.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO STANDING ORDER 21

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT—PROTECTION OF ENVIRONMENT

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) proclaimed: "The challenge we face is not to choose or trade off between economic development and environmental protection".

Is this statement credible? If the Prime Minister means what he says, then why did the Environment and Forestry Committee establish the fact that the environmental implications of the trade deal were not studied?

• (1100)

Why were there no follow-up studies to the Canadian Environmental Advisory Council report of January, 1986? It strongly recommended that "it will be necessary to examine the environmental implications just as systematically as the economic ones". Why was it not done?

The warning by Canadian environmental groups is the most recent one, and it amplifies concerns repeatedly raised about water export, the harmonization of pesticide regulations in Schedule 7 of the agreement, and the possible weakening of Canadian standards.

For the Government to be credible, it must match rhetoric with action. The link between the trade agreement and the environment has been ignored by the Government until now. What a sham, Mr. Prime Minister.

THE PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, earlier this week the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) once again showed Canadians why they find him so hard to trust. A few days ago he said that the Conservatives "are the only Party who cares a whit for fiscal responsibility".

A "whit" in the dictionary means "the least possible amount". The Prime Minister has in fact abandoned any semblance of fiscal responsibility, and by the latest count he and his Party have committed to $22 billion in election promises for the coming election, and that is before the writ is even issued.

Where will the money come from? Again, the evidence is clear. The Prime Minister is a man who listens to well-to-do Canadians such as Robert Campeau, rather than to the average Canadian family. This week Mr. Campeau, who has converted to the Conservatives, and to whom the Prime Minister referred approvingly, said that the Conservatives will have to pay for their promises, if they keep them, by cutting social spending like Medicare.

There you have the Tory agenda, Mr. Speaker. Get the Conservatives re-elected at any cost on election promises, and when the bills come due, pay those bills by slashing services for average Canadians and their families.

VISIBLE MINORITIES

ANNOUNCEMENT OF REDRESS FOR JAPANESE CANADIANS INTERNED DURING WORLD WAR II

Mr. Bill Tupper (Nepean—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) apologized to Japanese Canadians whom the Government of Canada mistreated during and after the Second World War. He also promised to pay $21,000 by way of redress to every living Japanese Canadian whom the Government relocated, interned and/or deported, expropriated, or otherwise deprived of the full enjoyment of his or her fundamental rights and freedoms simply because of his or her ancestry.

The Government will also clear the names of eligible Japanese Canadians who were convicted under the War Measures Act. It will also give $12 million to the Japanese Canadian community for educational, social, and cultural activities, and contribute $24 million toward the creation of a Canada Race Relations Foundation.

This morning I was pleased to note that the Minister of State for Multiculturalism and Citizenship (Mr. Weiner) said that he will also be happy to discuss the concerns of other multicultural groups.

The Japanese Canadians whom I met with yesterday in Nepean-Carleton were shedding invisible tears of joy and pride. I, too, was proud, not only because of the outcome, but also because it was this Government that had the care and understanding to resolve a long-standing blemish on our history. Yesterday was a great day for Canada.

BILINGUALISM

POSITION OF LIBERAL PARTY CANDIDATE IN LEEDS—GRENVILLE

Mrs. Jennifer Cossitt (Leeds—Grenville): Mr. Speaker, as we all know, the Liberal Party of Canada is a Party of principles; and if you don't like them, it, of course, has others.

However, one principle we thought all Liberals respected was that of official bilingualism. The Liberal candidate in Leeds—Grenville has yet to make up his mind whether or not he does stand with his Party on this issue. When he was a provincial candidate for the Party one year ago, he clearly stood against his Leader, and he has stated that he has not changed.

That is not all, Mr. Speaker. The previous two-time federal Liberal candidate in Leeds—Grenville has recently declared that literally millions and millions of dollars have been dumped into Québec to buy votes.

Is this how all Liberals now view co-operative federalism? Is this how they see the policy of building a stronger Canada for all Canadians, or is this perhaps just another example of Liberals trying to conquer by dividing Canadians against one another? Is it one more indication of the continuing inability of the Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Turner) to state clearly once and for all what he and his Party do indeed stand for?

The people of Leeds—Grenville, and the people of Canada, have a right to know.

HOUSING

SITUATION IN METROPOLITAN TORONTO

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have some news for the Government, and that is that there is a housing crisis in Toronto, particularly in the area of affordable housing.

I say that I have news for the Government, because we have been asking questions on this subject for the life of this Parliament, and the answers that we have been receiving from the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) are to the effect: "Housing crisis? What housing crisis?" The Prime Minister cites and puts on the record statistics about housing starts.

There may be no housing crisis in some parts of Canada. I know that in some parts of Canada house prices are falling. However, that is no solution or comfort for the people of Toronto.

I would again urge the Government to look at the problem that we have which has been made worse by the Government's policies over the last four years, for example, the cut-backs at CMHC, particularly in the area of co-ops, and the refusal to support the infrastructure program. The Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Turner) announced yesterday that we would be prepared to support that program, as he did in 1986.

I urge the Government to reinstate the Home Ownership Savings Plan which was established by a Liberal Government, and cancelled by this Government. It permitted young people to save money on a tax-free basis to buy their first home. I urge the Government to get serious about the under-used land in the Toronto area, not as it has done, wait for an election to be called, and put on the table a half-baked promise about land in the Downsview area.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

CFB SUFFIELD—NERVE GAS TESTS IN 1960S

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, the contradictions and double-talk about what has gone on, and what is going on at the Defence Research Establishment, Suffield, are shocking.

The Minister of Defence (Mr. Beatty) has now admitted that lethal nerve gas tests took place at Suffield using both military personnel and civilians as guinea pigs. At a briefing this week the Assistant Deputy Minister stated that there were 10 or 12 such tests conducted over seven or eight years. It now appears that there were far more, and considerable numbers of military and non-military participants.

The Minister states that there are no records of lasting ill-effects, but admits that there are no records of participants. He offers medical tests and compensation without knowing how much or to whom.

In June, base spokesman, Brian Laidlaw, stated that there were atmospheric tests of tabun, saran and soman during 1987. This week the Minister contradicted that and stated that there were only soman and tabun tested, and that these tests were carried out in 1986.

On June 27 the Minister stated that there is no agreement on chemical and biological weapons between Canada, the United States, the United Kingdom, and Australia. On June 28, Lieutenant Colonel Bill Johnston, director of Nuclear Biological Chemical Co-ordination for Canada, confirmed that there is, in direct contradiction of the Minister.

In June, Dr. Hollingsworth, a chemistry professor at the University of Alberta, stated that the lethal nerve gas releases at Suffield pose a real and immediate public health threat to communities and the public near the base, and the Minister says that everything is fine. A public inquiry is clearly in order.

PIPELINES

ANNOUNCEMENT OF VANCOUVER ISLAND NATURAL GAS PIPELINE PROJECT

Mr. Ross Belsher (Fraser Valley East): Mr. Speaker, yesterday at Whistler, British Columbia, an agreement was signed with the province via the federal Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Masse) to conclude an agreement for the Vancouver Island Natural Gas Pipeline. I applaud both Governments for coming to a conclusion of this agreement, which will enable the residents of communities in British Columbia to have natural gas available for their energy sources.

It is difficult to believe that, in this day and age, there would be 400,000 people who are not already served by natural gas, yet they live within less than 200 miles of the third largest city in Canada.

There will be 65,000 households, 12,000 commercial and industrial customers, and seven pulp mills that will have access to this pipeline. It will take some 18 months to build the pipeline, after all the various agreements have been put in place and the environmental concerns have been addressed.

Some of the communities that will be served are Powell River, Comox, Port Alberni, Nanaimo, Ladysmith, Duncan, and Victoria.

It seems strange that Members who represent communities such as Comox, Powell River, Duncan, and Ladysmith are silent on this. However, I can well imagine the smile on the face of the Hon. Member for Port Alberni, Nanaimo—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but his time has expired.

TELEVISION

OTTAWA CABLEVISION LIMITED—PARLIAMENTARY BROADCASTING CHANNEL

Mr. David Daubney (Ottawa West): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the many constituents in Ottawa West who have contacted my office, I would like to call publicly on Ottawa Cablevision Limited, which serves the west end of the city of Ottawa, to reconsider its decision to move the parliamentary channel up the spectrum.

This decision has deprived hundreds of cable viewers in my riding of the ability to view the House in action. Many of those cable viewers and subscribers are senior citizens who cannot easily afford the additional costs involved in purchasing new equipment required to receive the parliamentary channel.

These subscribers entered into a contract with Ottawa Cablevision to receive the parliamentary channel. Therefore, in my view, they are entitled to access to that channel. Accordingly, I urge Ottawa Cablevision to return the House of Commons channel to Cable 33 in the city of Ottawa, or alternatively to provide its senior citizens subscribers, at no cost, with the required equipment to receive the broadcast.

THE ENVIRONMENT

OPPORTUNITY TO HAVE NATIONAL PCB ELIMINATION POLICY

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, it took another ecoligical disaster, the one at Saint-Basile-le-Grand, to make the present Government take steps to deal with this threat to our environment.

Last week, the Canadian Council of Resource and Environment Ministers agreed to ban the use of PCBs by 1993. This agreement does not go far enough, since it does not cover the 300 million tons of hazardous products we still have in this country.

There is cause for alarm when we realize that in Ottawa alone there are fourteen locations where PCBs may be found. And how many more locations contain waste that is just as toxic if not more so?

In the national interest, the Conservative Government has a duty to act immediately to prevent further accidents. We need a national policy for eliminating toxic waste, and we need the political will to do so.

Mr. Speaker, the Liberal Government that will be elected very shortly will make sure there is a comprehensive policy to deal with hazardous waste.

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS

TERMINATION OF FEDERAL FUNDING PROGRAM

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, over the past four years members of the New Democratic Party have had a lot to say about the Mulroney Government's habit of promising one thing and doing just the opposite. Liberal Members have tried to get in on this but their history of the same bad habit has made their words ring hollow and insincere. We now have another classic example of that.

Yesterday the Liberal Leader (Mr. Turner) made a big election promise of funding for municipal infrastructure rebuilding. He said we only have to look at what has happened in many American cities to see what could happen here if we do not provide the funds to rebuild our sewers, water systems, roads and bridges. He is right, but he does not have to look south of the border for examples. They are right here in Canada.

Why is the infrastructure of so many Canadian towns and cities in such bad shape? Because in 1980 the federal Government stopped providing assistance to municipalities to do this kind of work. They have been increasingly starved for funds ever since. Who was it that cut off the funding? The Liberals. Some days it is even harder than others to believe the Leader of the Opposition means what he says.

The Liberals let Canada's municipalities down and so have the Conservatives. There is only Party, the NDP, which has consistently pressed for a fair deal for Canada's towns and cities. There is only one Party they can count on to hold the same views after the next election.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

TORONTO AREA CLEANING CONTRACT

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, I want to talk about a very tender subject, the tendering process used by the Government when awarding contracts. One of these very tender issues was the awarding of a Canada Post contract to do cleaning in the Toronto area.

It seems Canada Post has learned from the former Minister of Public Works, the Hon. Member for Joliette (Mr. LaSalle), how to award contracts. What it decided to do in this case was to ask the second lowest bidder to lower its bid by 10 per cent to make it less than the low bidder. Why? Quite simply because it would not have the presence of union people in the Post Office.

That really tells us something about the philosophy of the Government. The Tories are anti-union and now Canada Post is as well.

AGRICULTURE

ALBERTA—NEED FOR IRRIGATION PROJECTS

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I rise to inform Members that there has been rain on the Prairies recently but that it is simply not enough. It is an encouraging sign, but Members need to understand that in the area of southern Alberta where I come from, indeed in most of Alberta, we are into the thirteenth year of a drought. That means ground water supplies are down and we need more dams.

There is a proposal on the books for a Milk River dam which is receiving good federal and provincial response. I hope Members will support us when it comes forward. There is also a project for irrigation on the Blood Indian Reserve and I hope Members will support us when that comes before Parliament. It is very important for southern Alberta that every drop of water is maintained and managed in a productive way. I know Members will support us when those projects come before this House for financing.

INDUSTRY

BRITISH COLUMBIA FOREST PRODUCTS COMPANIES

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, the recent takeover of British Columbia Forest Products by Fletcher Challenge of New Zealand does not serve the interests of the workers of British Columbia, nor does it serve the economy of Canada. Rather, it serves the corporate interests of the transnationals. This was shown last week by the announcement of the lay-off of another 40 workers from the sawmill at Youbou, British Columbia. Right now in British Columbia we have talk of a takeover of Domans Industries by Louisiana Pacific.

Is it not time that we had a Government in both British Columbia and Ottawa that would ensure that the resources of this country are used for the interests of the people of this country and the workers of this country, instead of being hived off by multinational corporations with headquarters in New Zealand, the United States, Europe, or any place other than Canada? Let us use the resources of Canada for the people of Canada.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

MOISIE AFFAIR—RCMP INVESTIGATION—MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Defence. Yesterday, the Minister gave the following answer to my question about the Moisie case:

> The RCMP looked at the package which was left with them and found no basis for further investigation.

Mr. Speaker, I am sorry to say that yesterday, the Minister of National Defence lied to Parliament, to the press and to the Canadian people. I just spoke to Inspector Pierre Lange of the RCMP at the commercial crime section in Montreal, and Inspector Lange confirmed that a criminal investigation was being conducted into the whole question of the sale of the Moisie base near Sept-Îles in the Prime Minister's riding.

I therefore want to ask the Minister of National Defence whether he intends to explain or tender his resignation.

An Hon. Member: Right on!

[English]

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, first of all, may I invite you to review Hansard and the "blues" to look at the allegation made by the Hon. Member?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: That will be done. The Minister may answer.

Mr. Beatty: Then let me respond. Since yesterday's Question Period, material was delivered to the RCMP in Montreal. They are currently looking at that material. As long as that study is under way it would be appropriate to allow them to do their job without in any way interfering here on the floor of the House of Commons.

REQUEST FOR REFERRAL TO PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, yesterday when the Minister answered my question, I told him that the tape was handed over to the RCMP Wednesday afternoon, not yesterday, around 2.30 or 3.00 p.m., and that the RCMP in Sept-Îles obtained the tape. The Minister told me the investigation was closed, but we all knew that was impossible.

Considering the involvement of two assistants of the Minister of Public Works, Mr. Gosselin and Mr. Lefebvre, of a Tory go-between, Mr. Jean-Guy Côté, and a personal friend of the Prime Minister, Mr. Rodrigue Tremblay, will the Minister and the Government agree to refer this whole mess to the appropriate committee so that it can examine the Government's procedure for awarding contracts and doing cover-ups?

An Hon. Member: The Moisie mess!

[English]

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, first of all, I am informed again by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police that the subsequent material was received by them yesterday afternoon in Montreal following Question Period. In addition, I would like to be able to report to the House some additional information.

As I said to the House yesterday, no representations with respect to this sale were made by any official in the Prime Minister's Office. After Question Period yesterday I was advised that a junior officer in the PMO did inquire of the Department of Public Works, prior to a planned visit to the riding by the Prime Minister, as to when a decision was likely to be made. This was entirely a routine inquiry. Beyond that the RCMP are now conducting a review of this matter and it would inappropriate for me to make further comments, or for the Hon. Member to make further comments, which might prejudice that review.

[Translation]

Mr. Lapierre: Mr. Speaker, I don't need the advice of a Minister who yesterday misled this House and also misled the Canadian people!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I would ask the Hon. Member to put his question in such a way as to refrain from saying that yesterday, the Minister said things that were not true. However, I believe the Hon. Member for Shefford knows the Standing Orders as well as the Chair.

The Hon. Member for Shefford.

HASTE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I want to thank you for reminding me of the Standing Orders, but the facts are self-explanatory.

Yesterday, the Minister informed the House that no investigation was under way. He went even further. He said:

> The RCMP looked at the package which was left with them and found no basis for further investigation.

Mr. Speaker, the documents . . . the tape had not even been examined at the time the Minister rose in the House, but the RCMP had received the tape Wednesday afternoon.

I want to ask the Minister . . . We know there are various elements involved in this case. There have been meetings since April 22 and 28 and the beginning of May. The Minister of Public Works received a personal letter at his home, advising him of all these aspects. Why do we have to raise the matter in the House to get an investigation going? Why didn't the Minister of Public Works or the Prime Minister, who read about the case in his local paper on July 12 this year, why didn't they immediately order an investigation instead of trying to cover up the whole thing?

• (1120)

[English]

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, again let me correct what the Hon. Member is saying. Following Question Period yesterday, the RCMP in Montreal received the material in question. They are currently studying that material. As long as that study is under way, it would be inappropriate for any of us on either side of the House to take any action that could prejudice the results of that investigation.

STATUS OF RCMP INVESTIGATION

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, the Minister has changed his tune today. Today it is inappropriate to comment. Yesterday he said that there is no indication whatsoever of any criminal impropriety—the RCMP has found that.

What conversations did the Minister have with the RCMP that led him to rise in the House of Commons yesterday to report to the House of Commons that (a), there had been an investigation, that (b), there was no evidence of any criminal impropriety, and that (c), the RCMP had come to an official conclusion that he kindly passed along to the House of Commons?

The fact is that this matter was referred to the Minister of Public Works in a private letter sent to his home by Mr. Hylandss, a senior Government of Canada official who was subsequently removed from the file. Mr. Hylandss asked for an investigation but no investigation was forthcoming. Why is the Government engaged in a coverup in this radar site sale in the Prime Minister's riding?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, this is a precise example of the sort of thing that I am concerned about, and that is the abuse by opposition Members of Parliament of their position in Parliament by making allegations that they cannot substantiate.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gauthier: Go back to your tricycle, for God's sake. Don't give us that nonsense.

Mr. Beatty: Mr. Speaker, here again Hon. Members rise to their feet and insist on getting answers, and when we attempt to answer them, they attempt to shout us down. If the Hon. Member wants an answer, I would like to give it to him.

First, there were two sets of material in question. Yesterday the RCMP had completed some investigation of the first set and found nothing to suggest any criminal impropriety. Subsequent to Question Period yesterday, the RCMP in Montreal received further material which they are currently studying. It is entirely appropriate that the RCMP should be given the opportunity to study that without Members of Parliament on either side of the House in any way prejudicing their study.

REQUEST FOR REFERRAL TO PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, it is entirely appropriate, when the Director of Property Management for Public Works in Montreal writes a personal letter delivered to a Minister's home address detailing what the Director believes to be gross political interference in the administration of the awarding of a contract or a tender and asking that Minister to investigate, that the Minister ought to do his job expeditiously. It is ridiculous that the matter has to come up weeks later in the House of Commons.

The detailed, sordid story of political interference carried in today's Montreal Gazette involves aides to the Minister of Public Works. The Minister of Public Works has failed to act.

We now know that an official from the Prime Minister's office was at least indirectly involved because the Minister of National Defence has indicated that. Conservative Party organizers, including a chief organizer for the Prime Minister in the last election, were involved. As well, it resulted in the dismissal from this file of Mr. Hylandss, a senior public servant with no Party affiliation. Why is the Government of Canada refusing to refer this matter immediately to an appropriate all-Party committee of the House of Commons for a quick and immediate examination of all the facts?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, now that the Hon. Member has unburdened himself of that little bit of theatre, let me return to the facts. It was Hon. Members opposite who were stressing the fact that the RCMP—

Mr. Tobin: The facts are like the nuclear submarines; they are buried from sight. They disappear.

Mr. Beatty: Here we go again. Perhaps the Hon. Member could contain his hysteria for a minute.

What are the facts? As Hon. Members on the other side had indicated, the RCMP have received material which they are currently studying. It is precisely to avoid this sort of trial by headline, guilt by association and innuendo, in which the Hon. Member is engaging at the present time, that the practice in the House has been that when the RCMP is making an inquiry, we do not interfere. I would ask Hon. Members on the other side to respect that principle.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT—ENVIRONMENTAL CONSIDERATIONS

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I would like to put a question to the Minister of State for International Trade. I would also like to congratulate him on his appointment.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Langdon: The Government has been seeking, through all sorts of mechanisms, to show its commitment to the environment. Yesterday some 90 environmental groups from right across Canada concluded that the Government's trade deal with the United States would have profound and disastrous implications for the Canadian environment.

Would the Minister and the Government be prepared to meet with representatives of those 90 environmental groups to review these key clauses they indicate are so dangerous, and be prepared to make changes to put some real teeth behind the commitment the Government has stated to environmental protection but which seems to be contradicted by this trade deal?

Hon. John McDermid (Minister of State (International Trade) and Minister of State (Housing)): Mr. Speaker, I read with some interest the report of the Environmental Law Association and I can tell the Hon. Member that environmental concerns are valid concerns which are shared by the Government. We have a great, solid track record on environmental issues, and I will cite it chapter and verse if the Hon. Member wants me to do so.

However, this report does a disservice to the cause of the environment. It indulges in what I consider to be a campaign of total distortion. This report has given complete distortions and misinterpretations of the free trade agreement, along with doomsday scenarios in which every conceivable environmental ill has been laid at the feet of the Free Trade Agreement. It is totally, totally wrong.

Mr. Langdon: Mr. Speaker, it is quite possible that, despite the Minister's elevation to the Cabinet, he does not have quite as much environmental expertise as these 90 groups from across Canada. I suggest that he take some time to talk with these groups and to review very carefully the charges they have made.

[Translation]

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Specifically, on the question of acid rain, these environmental groups stated that the risk would increase as a result of the trade deal with the U.S. They mentioned the very real possibility that we might not be able to support investments by industry to eliminate hazardous emissions. What is the Government going to do about this?

[English]

Hon. John McDermid (Minister of State (International Trade) and Minister of State (Housing)): Mr. Speaker, since the Hon. Member is getting specific, let me get specific as well. Let us talk about Chapter 6 of the agreement, technical standards. In Article 602 there is the affirmation of the GATT Agreement. "The parties affirm their respective rights and obligations under the GATT Agreement on Technical Barriers to Trade". Article 603 deals with "no disguised barriers to trade" and says that "the demonstrable purpose of such measure or procedure is to achieve a legitimate domestic objective".

Let me tell the Hon. Member what the definition of a legitimate domestic objective is. It means "an objective whose purpose is to protect health, safety, essential security, the environment, or consumer interests". I refer the Hon. Member to page 73 of the Free Trade Agreement.

Mr. Langdon: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Hawkes: Have you read it?

Mr. Langdon: Oh, yes, long before the Minister, let me tell you.

REFORESTATION GRANTS

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, the full-scale Minister told my Leader yesterday that there would not be grants challenged by the United States that would help control detrimental environmental problems. Why is it the fact that within the Free Trade Agreement, perpetuated forever, the softwood lumber agreement stops us from being able to make reforestation grants which are directly and completely a contribution to the environment of this country?

• (1130)

Hon. John McDermid (Minister of State (International Trade) and Minister of State (Housing)): Mr. Speaker, the Free Trade Agreement does not prevent the provinces in any way shape or form from reforesting their provinces. They are responsible for their resources and again I will refer the Hon. Member to the Free Trade Agreement, if he wants to take a look under Article 601: "The provisions of this Chapter shall not apply to any measure of a provincial or state government". Accordingly, the parties need not ensure the observance of these provisions by state or provincial Governments. The Hon. Member knows full well that the provinces have the right to reforest the forests. The provinces have that right and there is nothing in this agreement that prevents that.

The other day the Hon. Leader of the New Democratic Party said that the Free Trade Agreement prevented provinces from doing that. There is nothing in this agreement that says that. He is totally wrong.

PUBLIC WORKS

SALE OF LANDS AT MOISIE, P. Q.—LETTER REPORTEDLY SENT TO MINISTER

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I want to return to the Minister of National Defence and to the Moisie affair. What we are dealing with here is a parcel of land owned by the Government which was appraised at $4.5 million and sold for $187,000 to friends of the Prime Minister after the bidding process was interfered with and altered. This is on the record and not denied. I want to ask about the letter which was delivered to the home of the Minister of Public Works by the Department Section Head responsible for supervising this tendering process.

The simple question I want to ask the Minister is this. When the Minister of Public Works received that letter at his home toward the end of May or in early June, what happened? What did he do with that letter? I ask that question specifically aware that it has nothing directly to do with the RCMP investigation under way but has everything to do with the standards of this Government.

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member prefaced his question with a string of allegations and innuendo. As always, unfortunately, that is what he does.

Mr. Kaplan: It's right on the record.

Mr. Beatty: The hon. gentleman is a former Solicitor General of Canada, as I am. He should know that one of the obligations that every Member of Parliament has is to co-operate fully and do nothing that can in any way impede work being done by the RCMP.

Mr. Lapierre: What did you do yesterday?

Mr. Beatty: If what the Hon. Members are implying were correct, that there was any impropriety here, it is entirely appropriate that the RCMP should take a look at that. All appropriate officials and all information in the hands of the Government of Canada would be made available to the RCMP, as would always be the case. If the hon. gentleman opposite has any information whatsoever in any way relevant, let him turn it over to the RCMP.

FATE OF LETTER

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Minister of National Defence again whether that letter, when received by the Minister of Public Works, was turned over to the Government, to the Prime Minister? Was it give to the RCMP? Was it burned? What happened to that letter when the Minister of Public Works received it?

Mr. Boudria: Where is it?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, again what we get is a series of attempts by innuendo to raise questions when the hon. gentleman knows full well that the police are currently looking into this matter.

Mr. Boudria: Is this today's police or yesterday's police?

Mr. Beatty: As long as their inquiries are under way, it is appropriate for them to be given that opportunity.

Mr. Kaplan: Where is the letter?

Mr. Tobin: Where is the letter?

Mr. Beatty: If the Hon. Member opposite has any information whatsoever which is in any way relevant, let him turn it over to the RCMP.

[Translation]

SELLING PRICE—IDENTITY OF BUYERS—INTERESTS OF CANADIANS

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa—Centre): Mr. Speaker, yesterday there was no investigation by the RCMP and today one has been ordered to get rid of the issue and give the Government a chance to cover its tracks until after the election. My question is this: Does the Minister of National Defence believe it was prudent of the Government to sell a property with 90 houses and several other buildings, as well as land with good recreational value on the Moisie River, for only 4 per cent of its value, estimated at $4 million by the Department of National Defence? Why did the Government go ahead with this sale to friends of the Prime Minister instead of withdrawing the offer and seeking a better return for the people of this country?

[English]

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I thought there was a rule in this House about imputing motives. The way in which the Hon. Member prefaced his question was to impute motives to the Government in terms of its actions, motives which are simply false.

The Hon. Member should know the fact again that an inquiry is under way, a study is under way by the RCMP. If that can be concluded quickly, and I hope it can, and I hope the results of it indicate there was no criminal impropriety whatsoever, the Minister of Public Works will then be in the House and will be available to respond to any questions whatsoever, including unfounded allegations and innuendo by the other side.

REQUEST FOR INQUIRY BY PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, we are talking about a matter of judgment by the Government. We are talking about questions of patronage which may or may not have criminal effect but which are also questions of judgment by this Government which constantly gets into these problems of dealing in a favourable way with people who are close to the Conservative Party. We are talking about prudence, about a Government which sells a $4.5 million site for $187,000, which sells houses for $3,000 or $4,000 a piece, when people across this country cannot buy houses for more than $100,0000 because they cannot afford them.

Will the Government agree to an inquiry by a Commons Committee, by the Public Accounts Committee, into all aspects of this affair, apart from the criminal aspects which are before the RCMP?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member in his question itself suggested there may be a criminal matter involved here. Surely the Hon. Member owes it to the Canadian people and to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to ensure that nothing is done in this House which in any way impedes the ability of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to study that information. I hope—

Mr. Cassidy: To fix it.

Mr. Beatty: Pardon me, Mr. Speaker, if I could complete my answer. I hope that the results of the inquiries being made by the RCMP will be available soon. If they are, any and all questions the Hon. Member wants to ask, including ones based on false imputation of motives and innuendo, can be answered.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): You are a disgrace to your constituency.

Miss MacDonald: How often have you had to withdraw charges?

NATIONAL DEFENCE

CFB SUFFIELD—NERVE GAS TEST ALLEGATIONS

Mr. W. R. Bud Jardine (Northumberland—Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Minister for National Defence. The Member for Skeena made serious allegations yesterday that a former member of the Canadian Forces is suffering medical problems associated with nerve gas tests in which he participated at Suffield in 1965. Can the Minister advise this House whether in fact these allegations are true?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Yes, Mr. Speaker. Following Question Period yesterday I made inquiries. I can report to the House that the Member for Skeena overlooked informing the House of Commons that the individual in question contacted him, not to complain about any problems but to suggest that volunteers might be traced through their pay records, that he was not sure he was ever exposed to nerve gas, and that he believed his symptoms were the result of natural causes.

We also did a full study of what in fact the individual in question participated in. The individual in question was never exposed to nerve gas. He participated in tests of mustard so dilute that there were no effects whatsoever at the time and it would be impossible for the symptoms in questions to have been caused by these tests.

Unfortunately, as in the case of these propaganda wars by the NDP, the truth is the first victim.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

PUBLIC WORKS

SALE OF MOISIE LANDS—LETTER REPORTEDLY SENT TO MINISTER

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Minister of National Defence. It relates to the Moisie bid-rigging case. In May of 1988 the Minister's colleague, the Minister of Public Works, received a letter, a very serious letter, from an official of his Department, Mr. Hylands concerning the case at Moisie. Did the Minister's colleague receive that letter? Did he get it? What did he do with it? And where is the letter now? Did he give it to the Prime Minister? If so, when? Did he give it to the RCMP, and when? Can he give us that information, at least?

Mr. Mayer: Louder! We couldn't hear you.

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Here we go, more shouting from his seat.

Mr. Boudria: You didn't hear it the last time.

Mr. Beatty: Mr. Speaker, once again the Hon. Member prefaces his question with an allegation, an allegation of criminal impropriety, bid-rigging. Bid-rigging is an offence under the Criminal Code.

Mr. Tobin: Where is the letter?

Mr. Beatty: It is precisely for that reason that the procedure in this House traditionally has been that we do not interfere in matters which are before the police.

Mr. Cassidy: Answer the question. Where is the letter?

Mr. Beatty: As soon as the RCMP have had the ability to complete their study, any and all questions posed by any Hon. Members in this House, no matter how unfounded they are, can be answered.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I won't talk about the unfounded answers of the Minister yesterday which he had to retract today.

LETTER SENT BY MEMBER'S OFFICE

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): I want to direct another question to the Minister of National Defence who is answering on behalf of the Minister of Public Works.

• (1140)

A request from my office was sent on July 7, 1988, with particular regard to the Moisie base, asking to have all the files concerning the sale of that base and the other bases. Is it just a coincidence that that letter was never answered, just a happy coincidence, or is it because the Government knew very well the trouble it was in?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I did not retract any answers. I informed the House, at the earliest possible opportunity, of new information that has been made available to me since Question Period yesterday.

Mr. Boudria: Not true.

Mr. Beatty: The question asked by the hon. gentleman indicates how thin his allegations are if he has to demand answers with regard to the timing of responses to letters he sends and make imputations of impropriety on the part of the Minister.

Mr. Boudria: You're withholding information.

Mr. Beatty: He now alleges that information is being withheld.

The practices are well established. I say again, as a former Solicitor General of Canada, that our obligation as Members of Parliament on all sides of this House is to do nothing that will interfere with the work of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Those are not standards that are too high to be accepted by Members of Parliament. They have been accepted in the past. I think every Member of Parliament has the obligation to meet that standard.

HOUSING

TORONTO—DOWNSVIEW LANDS DEVELOPMENT

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister responsible for housing. It has now been a week since the Minister announced that the Toronto Downsview Airport lands would be released for the construction of some 5,000 housing units. Today we know as much about the development of these lands as we knew last Friday, which is zip-all.

Would the Minister of Housing share with the people of Toronto and the rest of us his plans for the development of that site? If he has those plans would he table them in the House today?

Hon. John McDermid (Minister of State (International Trade) and Minister of State (Housing)): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member knows the planning procedures that go on in a municipality. These lands were generously turned over from the Department of National Defence. My colleague, the Minister of National Defence, announced that those lands would be given up to CMHC for development in Toronto.

The plans are that a minimum of 25 per cent of the product placed on those lands is going to be affordable housing. At this moment meetings are going on between CMHC and the planning department at North York. The Mayor and his Council are being briefed, and once we have completed our negotiations with North York on the plans for the site they will be made public.

REQUEST FOR DETAILS OF DEVELOPMENT

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, we have been kind of nice to the Minister for the past week because he is a new Minister and the new guy on the block, but today we want to know some details about how that land is going to be disposed of, how it is going to be developed, and what the timetable is for developing that land. I think the people of Toronto are entitled to know that information now before an election is called. Now that we have the potatoes, where's the beef?

Hon. John McDermid (Minister of State (International Trade) and Minister of State (Housing)): Mr. Speaker, that question was read from the editorial in The Toronto Star yesterday, word for word. If the Member read my remarks delivered last Friday he would see that they give a timetable of when we expect to be able to put a plan on there. They indicate where the homes are going to be located and our idea of how we are going to develop the land.

We are also providing new housing for married staff of the Department of National Defence, which is a very positive side-effect of this development. We hope to start building those in the spring because there has to be some transfer of lands.

I am good, but I can't build homes in a week, and he knows that.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

MOISIE AFFAIR—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I would like to get back to the Moisie affair and ask the Minister two questions about public servants who, in this case, are being bullied by the Government and sometimes forced to retract under pressure.

In this morning's Gazette, Mr. Hylands is quoted as saying:

[English]

> It was too hot. They had to pull me off the file because I wouldn't go along with the deal to give it to (Raymond) Lefebvre (et fils).

I admit that there are two questions here. One is criminal and the RCMP will look after that. The other one is public accountability and the Government's accountability to the House of Commons.

Will the Minister give us the assurance in this House today that indeed the Government will refer this whole question, either to Public Accounts for examination, or to Government Operations, for a thorough examination by Members of this House?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman will be aware of the fact that his colleague, who raised questions earlier, referred to this as a bid rigging case, an allegation of criminal impropriety. The hon. gentleman behind him repeats that and says that that is what it is.

If indeed that was what took place, clearly anything that involved pulling departmental officials off the case would be relevant to the RCMP investigation.

You cannot have it both ways. Either the RCMP should be permitted to look into any aspect of this that they want to whatsoever, without interference from us, or the Hon. Member and his colleagues should be allowed in engage in innuendo and making allegations on the floor of the House of Commons. We all have the obligation to allow the RCMP to do their job without interference.

[Translation]

INVOLVEMENT OF PRIME MINISTER'S OFFICE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, the Minister informed the House this morning that a member of the Prime Minister's staff was involved.

In order to avoid making scapegoats of public servants or at least to avoid forcing them to do things they are not supposed to do, is the Minister prepared to provide the name of the person to whom he referred and the position that person now holds in the Prime Minister's office, since the Minister himself told us there was someone from the Prime Minister's office? We would like to have the information at least the name and the position.

[English]

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the reason I mentioned this fact to the House of Commons this morning was that I felt I had an obligation to the House of Commons, when new information was given to me following Question Period yesterday, to report at the earliest possible moment. I do not have the name of the individual with me. I can report that—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Beatty: Here again we get shouting from the other side of the House in the middle of an answer.

Mr. Lapierre: Are you so stupid?

Mr. Beatty: I can indicate to the House that it was staff in the Prime Minister's constituency office. The sole purpose of the inquiry was to find out the timing and process that was followed here. No representation whatsoever was involved. This was simply in preparation for a visit to the constituency by the Prime Minister.

Again, the name of the individual, any information involved, anything related to this case, would be made available to the RCMP if they wish it.

DROUGHT RELIEF PACKAGE—REQUEST FOR ASSISTANCE FOR GRAIN HANDLERS

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State responsible for grains. It is my understanding that sometime in the next two weeks the Government will be announcing some form of drought relief measures for the farm community. This is a matter that his Ministry and others have been looking at.

Will they, at the same time, announce assistance for those who handle grain, whether they be railroaders, grain handlers, or seafarers, no matter where they are in the country, who have lost their jobs as a direct result of the drought? Is the Government going to include in its drought relief package assistance for these men and women?

Hon. Charles Mayer (Minister of State (Grains and Oilseeds)): Mr. Speaker, we are looking at the problem that has come about because of some very poor weather this past growing season which has resulted in a severe drop in production. It is going to cost us some of our exports, as the Hon. Member well knows. It is an over-all problem for the industry, not only in the area that he comes from, Thunder Bay, but right across the Prairies and in parts of Ontario where the crop yield is down.

The Hon. Member should know that the Chief Commissioner of the Canadian Wheat Board was in Thunder Bay on Tuesday to sit down with the people in the grain business to bring them up to date first hand on what is happening.

We have had an interdepartmental committee looking at how we can be of assistance to people using present programs, and we are going to do everything we can to see that people who are affected by this can be given as much assistance through present government programs as we can possibly give them.

SITUATION OF GRAIN HANDLERS

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, the Minister knows that a number of people have been falling through the cracks in existing programs. For example, more and more grain handlers, because of the downturn in the grain economy, have been unable to requalify for unemployment insurance, so they will not be helped by existing programs.

The Minister also should be aware that this is not a short-term problem. The situation is probably going to be even worse next year for these people throughout the system.

• (1150)

The Minister did not really answer the first question. Will the drought relief package that will be announced in the next couple of weeks include specific measures for those who handle the products that were affected by the drought?

Hon. Charles Mayer (Minister of State (Grains and Oilseeds)): Mr. Speaker, we are aware of the problem. I think the Hon. Member will know that so far traffic has not been down nearly as much as we would have anticipated. As a matter of fact, general traffic is up. I believe that last year at this time there were some two million tonnes of general traffic through the Seaway and this year it is up to 2.3 million tonnes.

The Seaway has also had some additional traffic as a result of the problems experienced on the Mississippi. Some of these factors are going in favour of the Seaway.

The present situation is not nearly as bad as we thought. For the Hon. Member to get up now and talk about all the things that will happen next year is, I think, in some ways crying "wolf".

We will do everything we can to see that people are not nearly as affected by the weather problems, given that there are many programs in place now and that we really do not know what will happen next year. The Hon. Member says that it is likely to be worse next year. He does not know that. We hope that there will be much better prospects for a crop next year. If that is the case, as we look toward next year, things may not be as bad.

TELEFILM CANADA

FEATURE FILM FUNDING

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, one year ago the President of Telefilm, Jean Sirois, in news conferences across Canada said that Telefilm was broke. The Minister of Communications allowed this misinformation to stand, yet we had indicated that it was false from the very start. It was really a cover-up for the Prime Minister's friend Sirois while scapegoating Peter Pearson, the Executive Director of Telefilm.

Now it is reported that Telefilm is broke again. Is Telefilm feature film fund all spent or is it just committed? Would the Minister advise the industry and the House as to the state of the Telefilm funds?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has made it her practice in the House to try to undermine Telefilm. I want to report to the House that Telefilm is one of the basic institutions that support our Canadian film industry. If she does not believe that, she should ask people in the film industry.

This year, compared to last year, Telefilm has already funded 26 feature films in five months. In all of last year it funded 23 feature films.

Last year, it put $20 million into that. This year already it has put $30 million into it and it has not utilized the new funding that has been allocated to Telefilm for feature films.

I could go on and give the details in the broadcast series and how much better it is this year in five months than in the whole of last year when the utilization of funds at that time was $76 million. So far this year in the broadcast series $47 million has been allocated and there is still an additional amount of funding up to $20 million that has to be allocated.

Mrs. Finestone: I am not the one who appointed or supported the appointment of Jean Sirois. The Minister did that.

PRIVATE SECTOR FUNDING—CAPITAL COST ALLOWANCE

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, this Party did not cut the capital cost allowance which cost the film industry $150 million in private sector funds. When will the Minister see to the reinstallation of the 100 per cent capital cost allowance so that the private sector can be funded by private sector, not strictly public sector subsidies?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, now I find that the real motive is that she does not want public funding going into the film industry. We believe that we should be helping our film industry to fund Canadian cultural films.

Last night I was at the Ottawa premiere of the great Canadian film Les Portes Tournantes. I recommend all Members in the House to see it.

The person to whom I listened very carefully there was René Marleau, one of our great producers from Québec. He is a great Canadian. He underlined personally and publicly how important it is that the funding allocated to Telefilm by the Canadian Government be continued. He thanked Parliament for what it has done in this respect. I hope that people would listen to people like René Marleau, a great producer.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

CFB SUFFIELD—NERVE GAS TESTS IN 1960S

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Defence. It is interesting that Suffield's records are now suddenly, today, so accurate and complete. I must say that I am sure Mr. Wheeler is thankful after waiting 23 years to find out today that it was mustard gas that was tested on him.

Perhaps the Minister today could tell the Canadian public what nerve gases were tested on what individuals at Suffield? Can the Minister tell Canadians accurately what nerve gases were tested on what individuals at Suffield during the 1960s? Can you or can you not?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I would have imagined that after his rather tawdry performance both inside the House and outside the House, where false allegations were made that this individual in question had been exposed to nerve gas, and the Hon. Member repeated it in a piece of paper he handed out outside the House, that the Hon. Member would have at least had the decency to apologize for this misinformation.

I have indicated to the Hon. Member that we are currently trying to find any and all individuals who participated in any way in these tests in the past. These inquiries are under way at the present time.

I suggest to the Hon. Member and his colleague from New Westminster—Coquitlam that the function of the Member of Parliament is to serve the people of Canada, not to use them.

DEPARTMENTAL RECORDS

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, the Minister continues to beat around the bush. There are military and civilian personnel who participated in nerve gas tests. International experts have told me that the symptoms suffered by Mr. Wheeler are those associated with those who had come into contact with nerve gas. The Minister has not advised those military or civilian participants what nerve gases were tested on them. Will the Minister rise in the House and tell the people of Canada if he does or does not have accurate records of who participated in how many tests and with what nerve gas? Yes or no?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is trying to make a rather unsuccessful recovery from his performance yesterday. What he said flatly to the House of Commons and what he repeated in this little sheet he passed around was that Mr. Wheeler had been exposed to nerve gas. The hon. gentleman knows now that what he said was false—read my lips—false.

Instead of engaging in a campaign of fear, the hon. gentleman should be co-operating and trying to give the reassurance to Canadians that the investigation by Mr. William Barton that is under way at the present time will be full and complete. The results will be made public, and the Department of National Defence is looking for any and all people who participated at any time in these tests. It will assist them in having medical checks, even though there has been no evidence whatsoever to date of any long term effects. Stop trying simply to scare people for partisan reasons.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT—CANADIAN ENVIRONMENTAL ADVISORY COUNCIL

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for International Trade. Earlier in Question Period he described as a campaign of distortion the views expressed and the warnings expressed by Canadian environmental groups on the Mulroney-Reagan trade deal.

In January, 1986, the Canadian Environmental Advisory Council reported to the Minister of the Environment that: "It will be necessary to examine the environmental implications just as systematically as the economic ones". They were referring to the trade proposal.

Would the Minister describe the submission and the report of the Canadian Environmental Advisory Council as a campaign of distortion?

Hon. John McDermid (Minister of State (International Trade) and Minister of State (Housing)): Mr. Speaker, I noticed that the Member was referring to a request back in 1986, I believe, two years before the Free Trade Agreement was signed. It was a caution from the advisory committee to ensure that environmental matters did not come under the Free Trade Agreement and would not in fact be harmed by the Free Trade Agreement.

Those cautions were heard and the environment is fully protected under the Free Trade Agreement. That is why these concerns that are being raised today are really misleading and tell half truths. For example, Article 1201 in the Agreement, which the Hon. Member can read, is a commitment to the GATT obligations of the partners to this agreement. According to that particular section, XX(b), the environment is obviously protected by the GATT Agreement.

• (1200)

Environmental issues are fully protected. This Government can, has, and will take any action that we feel necessary to protect the environment and Canadians.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The last question of Question Period will be asked by the Hon. Member for Davenport.

PRIME MINISTER'S STATEMENT

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, environmental regulations are not protected. Pesticide regulations are not protected. Water exports are not at all protected.

Where has the Minister been all these months? How does he reconcile the fact that the environment was the only major sector that was not studied by the Government, yet his own Prime Minister a few days ago made the great declaration that we must not choose between economic development and environmental protection?. How does he reconcile that contradiction?

Hon. John McDermid (Minister of State (International Trade) and Minister of State (Housing)): Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member was here earlier in Question Period he would have heard me read the technical standards section of the Free Trade Agreement. I will read it to him again.

Under Article 602: Affirmation of GATT Agreement states:

The Parties affirm their respective rights and obligations under the GATT Agreement on Technical Barriers to Trade.

A legitimate domestic objective is protected. The definition of a legitimate domestic objective is as follows: "—an objective whose purpose is to protect health, safety, essential security, the environment, or consumer interests;"

The Hon. Member has asked where I have been for the last two years. I know where I have been. I have been working on this agreement. I ask him where he has been. Obviously he has not read the agreement or he would not ask such silly questions.

RETRACTION OF UNPARLIAMENTARY WORD

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): A point of order, Mr. Speaker. You seldom occupy the chair during the Oral Question Period and I would not want to offend you.

I realize that early in the Oral Question Period I got carried away and used the word "lie". To abide by the Standing Orders and your instructions, I withdraw these remarks although the facts speak for themselves.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) on a point of order.

PRIVILEGE

REPLIES GIVEN BY MINISTER OF NATIONAL DEFENCE

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I believe the privileges of all Members of the House have been affected today by the type of answer that the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Beatty) has been giving us.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gauthier: I will go further. He has also impugned the reputation of public servants, and I want to make that clear.

In his first answer to us he said this was a junior member of the Prime Minister's office. Then he said further, to impart more information, that it was a representative of the Prime Minister's constituency office. There cannot be thousands of people working for the Prime Minister in his constituency office.

I ask the Minister to give me the name of that individual. What position does he occupy? Will the Minister come forward with all the information?

An Hon. Member: That is not a question of privilege.

Mr. Gauthier: This is a question of privilege. I have been misled by that Minister.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Dick: You are a sleazebag.

Some Hon. Members: Withdraw.

[Translation]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I would suggest that the question raised by the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier, important though it may be, does not constitute a question of privilege. It is a matter which might be raised during a future Question Period.

TRANSPORTATION OF DANGEROUS GOODS

REFERENCE OF DOCUMENT TO STANDING COMMITTEE ON TRANSPORT

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Speaker, yesterday, the Minister of Transport (Mr. Bouchard) tabled a document entitled The Transportation of Dangerous Goods. The Hon. Minister would wish this item to be referred specifically to the Standing Committee on Transport. We have had discussions among the Parties. I think Your Honour would find that there is unanimous consent to make that a strict specific referral to the Transport Committee.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there agreement with respect to the proposal made by the Hon. Minister of State?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

REQUEST FOR EXIT VISA FOR SOVIET CITIZEN

Hon. CANADA-U.S. FREE TRADE AGREEMENT

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to table, pursuant to Standing Order 106, petitions that are certified correct as to form and content signed by a number of Canadians who are concerned that the Conservative Government has no mandate from the Canadian people to conclude a free trade agreement from the United States.

Since the proposed trade agreement not only denies Canadians the secure access to the U.S. market that was the key objective of negotiations but threatens the loss of hundreds of thousands of Canadian jobs, the petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to hold a national general election prior to any consideration of moving forward with the trade agreement.

MOTION TO ADJOURN UNDER S. O. 29(1)

NERVE GAS TESTS AT CFB SUFFIELD

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I have today given notice to the Speaker of my intention to rise under the provisions of Standing Order 29 to seek leave to adjourn the House for the purpose of discussing a matter of urgent and pressing concern.

As you are aware, Mr. Speaker, the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Beatty) has in the last several days acknowledged that an undetermined number of Canadians were subjected to nerve gas tests at the defence research establishment at Suffield, Alberta, particularly during but not limited to the 1960s.

Since the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) and I raised this issue several days ago we have received numerous calls from across the country from individuals who were subjected to such tests. In many instances these individuals are now suffering from medical disorders which may be directly related to these nerve gas tests.

The impact of such tests on the long-term health of the subjects has been well documented in other countries. I believe that it is absolutely vital that the federal Government conduct an open and public inquiry into this matter so that those subjects who were in fact exposed may be medically checked for any long-term effects.

An emergency debate in the House of Commons would serve that purpose in that it would further expose this issue in the public domain and thus assist those individuals who were or who may have been tested to come forward for immediate medical testing.

• (1210)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair thanks the Hon. Member for notice given to the Speaker, and the Chair recognizes that it is a most serious and important matter. However, I regret to tell the Hon. Member that her request does not meet the requirements of Standing Order 29, and therefore I must respectfully deny the request.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT, 1971

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mrs. McDougall that Bill C-158, an Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Mrs. Claudy Mailly (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, my comments on this Bill will be brief, since its purpose is simply to reconfirm certain rules that were established to allow Canadians in a number of peripheral regions who are experiencing hardship to have access to unemployment insurance. However, I would like to take this opportunity to point out that we still have no reply to our requests for applying the 10-week employment rule for unemployment insurance to our regions as well.

A number of Members, including myself, have asked to have certain parts of our ridings included among the regions that are eligible for unemployment insurance after only ten weeks. The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) said earlier that once again, the Government has waited until the very last minute to introduce this Bill. The Hon. Member knows perfectly well that Bill C-158 is one of those Bills that are introduced regularly on an annual basis and which do not contain any new elements. However, the request to allow certain areas in our ridings access to unemployment insurance after ten weeks of employment is new, and we are very anxious to see this done.

For instance, in the northern part of my riding, the communities of Notre-Dame-du-Laus, Poltimore and part of Val-des-Monts have a lot of unemployment, partly because of the sawmill that closed in the winter of 1984. To earn a living, these people have to leave home at five o'clock in the morning to get to work in Thurso. Mr. Speaker, you can imagine what this does to family life and the quality of life of these people?

I would also like to mention that in the 1987 report on the economy of Quebec published by Regional Industrial Expansion Canada, there is a very good description on page 93 of improvements in the economy of the Outaouais region. However, although there was a definite improvement in employment compared to 1986—an increase of 7.2 per cent—in 1986 this region was the only one where the number of persons holding a job decreased. When I say region, I am referring to the northern part of my riding and part of the riding next door, Pontiac—Gatineau—Labelle, where the unemployment rate is above the national average.

Mr. Speaker, with these few words I just want to point out to the Minister that we absolutely must have a quick decision. For two years we have been waiting for a decision to include these areas among the regions where unemployment insurance is allowed after ten weeks. Of course, the answer would be to create jobs in these regions. In fact, we hope that as a result of the free trade agreement, the pulp and paper and forestry sectors, for instance, will expand very significantly, and we will thus be able to create jobs, which means that these people would no longer need unemployment insurance.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Atikokan on a point of order.

Mr. Angus: Mr. Speaker, I must apologize to the House. I was on my feet at eleven o'clock, when Question Period started, and had every intention to resume my contribution to this debate. Regretfully, I was out of the House and things moved a little faster than I anticipated. I wonder if there would be unanimous consent to allow me to make a few additional remarks.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent to allow the Hon. Member to speak?

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Gauthier: If the Member for Ottawa—Carleton (Mr. Turner) is going to be so miserable, he will force me to move that that Member now be heard, and he would be very embarrassed if I did that. I would suggest that we come to an agreement, that we be gentlemen, and that we be very careful about what we do here, and that the request made to you, Mr. Speaker, be acknowledged.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, the Government has no difficulty in allowing this. These things do happen from time to time. I think the House would be well served by allowing him to conclude his remarks.

Mr. Gauthier: Thank you very much.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair does understand that there is unanimous consent and recognizes the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Atikokan.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to thank my colleagues, both in the Opposition and in the Government, for their intervention. I appreciate the spirit of most of the people in this House.

When we broke at eleven o'clock, I was talking about the community of Atikokan and the difficulties that they have because of their location within the UI region of northwestern Ontario. I was pointing out that in 1987 one out of every two—in other words, 50 per cent of the employables in that community—were out of work for some period of time. Yet, because Thunder Bay's economy at that time was doing very well, they were forced to meet the same requirements as Thunder Bay in terms of the variable entrance requirements. Right now, that unemployment level is not much better in Atikokan. It is roughly between 8 and 9 per cent in Thunder Bay and the region, where they are required to have 17 weeks in order to requalify. That is a community that does not have the jobs to go around.

While we are hoping for a major announcement shortly due to some initiatives of the community, with the assistance of the federal and provincial Government, right now they are not benefiting in any way from Thunder Bay's prosperity, if I can put it that way, and they are being penalized for their location.

The other area that I am concerned about in terms of variable entrance requirements is based on two things. It is based on Statistics Canada's random sampling of the region, which again tends to be just Thunder Bay and which tends to be in the magnitude of 200 to 300 phone calls per month, which gives one a sense of the unemployment rates. Because of that sample size that we have seen in Thunder Bay, it is like a yo-yo. One month it is 12 per cent, the next month it is 8 per cent. It has been crazy.

They have fine tuned it by increasing the sample size a bit, but it still has a margin of error of 3.9. In other words, right now, when the unemployment rate is somewhere between 8 and 9 per cent, it could be 4 per cent or it could be 12 per cent. Yet, that is the statistic that determines the number of weeks that an individual is required to work in order to requalify.

The second part of that is that it is on a sliding average of over three months. As we saw this spring, fall and summer, because of the impact of the drought, in terms of the crops that were available to come through, plus some other distortions within the Western Grain Transportation Act, more and more railway workers, seafarers and grain handlers, as well as some government inspectors and weighers, were laid off. But that did not affect the unemployment rate fast enough to ensure that those who were laid off, who had been in a laid-off position previously and got called back to work, did not have enough weeks. They did not even have the 18 weeks that were then required. We have a situation where the system is not able to respond quickly enough.

I want to serve notice that when we get to report stage next week I want to move a couple of amendments to this Bill. One would in effect remove the variable entrance requirements and peg everybody at 10 weeks. I do not care whether you are a worker in Newfoundland, Yellowknife, Atikokan or Victoria, it does not mean that, just because your neighbour has been able to go out and get a job, you are automatically going to get one.

I am supporting this Bill because we do not want to see everybody get 14 weeks, because that will penalize those who obviously need the shorter qualifying period of 10 weeks that is provided for. Let us treat everybody equally with a ten-week qualifying period.

The other amendment I wish to give notice on will depend on what the Government does with my first amendment. If the Government does not accept the first amendment, I want to change it from a regional rate to a local rate, so that it is the unemployment rate in Thunder Bay, Corner Brook, or Saskatoon that decides the variable entrance requirements for that community, and not some larger piece of the pie where there may not be any relationship between employment and unemployment from community to community.

While I am speaking on the Bill, I would also like to make some general comments on unemployment insurance. During Question Period today I asked the Minister responsible for Grains and Oilseeds (Mr. Mayer) if there was going to be assistance for the handlers of grain in any disaster program for the farmers. I pointed out to the Minister that some people are falling between the cracks. There are a number of grain handlers who have gone through three or four bad years of employment who cannot get 14, 15, 16, 17, or 18 weeks of work. We are finding that a number of them are being ruled ineligible to receive unemployment insurance on the basis of number of weeks. We are also finding that the rules of the game are making it even more difficult.

Currently, because of a mix up between Revenue Canada and the Unemployment Insurance Commission, vacation is treated differently. When an employee is off on scheduled vacation and is receiving payment from his or her employer, unemployment insurance continues to deduct the dues. However, Revenue Canada has ruled that vacation weeks cannot be counted, even though they are in the middle of the work period, and not at one end where they are used to perhaps circumvent the rules as they are today. Those employees are denied unemployment insurance benefits because they have been on paid holidays, which is part of their work, and part of a necessary component to ensure the mental and physical health of that employee. The system is not working on behalf of the people for whom it was designed. I would encourage the Government to make changes to it.

I also wish to point out that an all-Party standing committee of the House unanimously recommended a ten-week qualifying period. That has also been recommended in some platform material and positions put forward by my Party.

My comments today are based on information from people who come into my constituency office in Thunder Bay or Atikokan. The bulk of our work is assisting people through the red tape of the Unemployment Insurance Commission. What happens to a laid off worker when he or she becomes sick is a real insult, particularly with respect to older workers. We have had cases where an individual on unemployment insurance, perhaps out of work for the first time in his or her life, has a heart attack. Many of these people who are in their early or late fifties obviously have extra stress when they are out of work. They are okay if they become sick in the first half of the claim period, but they do not dare get sick in the second half because they are cut off. That type of treatment of the unemployed has to stop.

Finally, we talk about the need to get people off unemployment insurance. I strongly believe that the vast majority of men and women want to work. In some cases industries are shutting down. I mentioned the situation in Atikokan where the iron ore mines closed in 1979-1980. When people are laid off and are in an industry which has a declining workforce, either in their area or nationally, they know that they have to learn a new trade or develop a new skill. However, it cannot be done on unemployment insurance unless it involves one of that small group of programs under the Canadian Job Strategy that are specifically a seat purchase at a community college. There is no provision to allow someone to go to university to get his or her B.A. degree and move on to another skill area. If we really want to encourage people to get off unemployment insurance and into a full-time job, let us give them access to the educational system and allow them to claim unemployment insurance while they are going to school, for example, single parents, or mother-led families with the added burden of child care, who want to go to school to get an education.

One week ago I talked to a young woman who was attending Lakehead University. She told me that the Province of Ontario has cut her off in terms of her informal child care arrangement, because the budget was used up for the year. This woman is in her fourth year of university. One can imagine a single parent on welfare going to university because she knows that she needs the tools that education will provide her to get off welfare and be an employee in the community.

A number of things in the system need to be changed. I am pleased that I had an opportunity to contribute to the debate today. I hope that when the Bill is returned for report stage I will be present. These days one does not know when Bills will be returned, and even during the course of the day we are not sure. I hope to be here to move my amendments. If not, my colleague, the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez), will move them on my behalf.

I appreciate your patience, Mr. Speaker, and I thank the Members in the House who allowed me to come back in, as it were. I regret that one Hon. Member saw fit to try to make life a little more miserable in this place.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Gander—Twillingate.

Mr. Baker: On a question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There are no questions or comments. However, I am sure the Hon. Member for Gander—Twillingate will do a good job on debate.

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, I wanted to add to what the hon. gentleman has just said about the discrimination in vocational schools, in universities, and in all institutions of higher learning where there are some people who are collecting unemployment insurance and other people who are not collecting unemployment insurance. That is determined if one is in receipt of what one calls a "manpower seat". The Unemployment Insurance Commission, through the local employment office, determines that when a person is laid off it would be of benefit to that person to continue his or her education or go into a new field, therefore he or she is permitted to draw unemployment insurance.

In every province in Canada, starting in September in the vocational schools, when one goes into a typical classroom, one will find that one out of three or half the number of people are drawing unemployment insurance, and the other two-thirds or one-half are not. That is determined by whether or not you are acquainted with the system well enough to be able to, prior to your lay-off, go into the unemployment insurance office and get what is commonly referred to as a manpower seat.

Therefore, I agree with what the hon. gentlemen put on the record a few moments ago about the absolute and total discrimination of the Unemployment Insurance Act. Imagine the outrage people feel that Members of Parliament from the three political Parties sit in this Chamber and deal with the Act and have dealt with it over the years, yet we and the Senate do not agree on changing the system to make everyone equal. In fact, to put it on the record, perhaps most Members of Parliament and most Senators do not even know it is going on anyway.

Also for the record, this Bill before us today will continue what is commonly referred to as the variable entrance requirement. If the Bill does not pass what would it mean? The Bill affects only repeaters. It does not affect new entrants, or re-entrants as some Members have said. It does not affect how much unemployment insurance you get or who gets it. Not at all. What it affects is how many insurable weeks you need if you are a repeater.

You know what a repeater is. A repeater is a person who draws unemployment insurance consistently over 52 weeks. He re-enters the workforce and then applies for unemployment insurance. The variable entrance requirement comes into play depending on where you are in Canada, if you are a repeater and only if you are a repeater, not if you are what is referred to in the outrageous Act passed by this Parliament in 1978 and the outrageous Act that was passed by this Parliament in 1977 as a new entrant or a re-entrant. That has nothing to do with this Act. You can throw it in the garbage. It has to do with repeaters.

The Hon. Member stood up a few moments ago and said, my goodness, I am from the Outaouais, I believe it was, and she said, "We are longing for this Bill". If your unemployment insurance rate is fairly low and you are shouting for people to get unemployment insurance, then you had better vote against this Bill. You see, if the Bill is not passed, no matter where you were in Canada you would require 14 weeks of insurable employment to collect unemployment insurance, not 20 weeks as it is in a great many areas in Canada, nor 18 weeks, or 17 weeks, or 16 weeks, or 15 weeks. You would require 14 weeks right from Cape Spear, Newfoundland over to British Columbia. If you threw the Bill in the garbage, certain areas of Canada would benefit, if you were supporting people to get unemployment insurance with fewer weeks required. Everybody would be the same. However, for the areas where presently you need only 10 weeks, up to 14 weeks, they would be required to get 14 weeks to collect unemployment insurance. That is what the Bill does. It does not do anything else.

Back in 1977 and 1978, as the present occupant of the chair will recall, this Chamber changed the law. Prior to 1977, as you will recall, you needed only eight weeks to collect unemployment insurance right across Canada. A Bill came in that changed that. That was followed by another Bill in 1978, and that Bill brought in the most discriminatory legislation that I have ever seen in this Chamber. We have lived with it ever since. I say today that what exists in the law today is outright and total discrimination. That is, a re-entrant to the workforce requires by law twice as many insurable weeks as a repeater.

In other words, what you find is this. In seasonal industries in northern Québec, northern Ontario, northern British Columbia, the northern part of every province in Canada, in rural Canada, at a fish plant, for example, you will find on the working lines that a lady works maybe for three months, four months or five months of the year off and on during the summer. She gets maybe 15 weeks of insurable employment. When she is laid off, when she is no longer called back, she can collect unemployment insurance because she collected unemployment insurance the year before. However, next to her on the assembly line is another lady who, last year or the year before or the year previous to that, made the mistake of having a child. Then that lady is doomed forever never to qualify for unemployment insurance. Now, isn't that an outrageous thing to have in legislation?

Mrs. Mailly: Yes.

Mr. Baker: It is there. I do not understand how Governments can come and go in this country and not correct that outright discrimination in the Unemployment Insurance Act. That lady who took a year out is now regarded by the law of Canada under the Act as a re-entrant into the workforce. Therefore, what does she require in Newfoundland? Twenty insurable weeks of employment within one year. You cannot space it out over two years.

The repeater with whom this Bill deals does not require 20 weeks by law passed by this Parliament. I suppose you could say that the same discrimination lies in our young people in Canada. They are not affected by this Bill either because they are what you call new entrants. New entrants are classified the same way as that lady who took one year out to have a child. They also require five months of insurable employment in order to be a new entrant as defined under the Act.

The real things that are wrong with the Act that revolve around this legislation called the variable entrance requirement are the things that should change. In fact, I just wonder which political party will try to set the record straight in the election and have as part of its platform the removal of that discrimination under the Act. I do not know of any political party as yet that has adopted that policy. What political party is going to turn around and correct a grave injustice in this country?

If we use the example of the fish plant worker in Canada drawing unemployment insurance, this woman with 15 weeks can draw it but another woman cannot because she took a year out. As you know, it has been a bad fishery in eastern Canada. Why is it that the fishermen of Canada cannot collect unemployment insurance? If a fisherman has 10 weeks, 20 weeks, 30 weeks, 40 weeks, 50 weeks, 60 weeks or even 1,000 weeks, he cannot draw unemployment insurance today. It is not allowed.

This Parliament, in its infinite wisdom, passed a law that said that a fisherman could only draw unemployment insurance commencing November 15, the time when he could file, and he would get his first cheque on December 12, and his last cheque would, by law, be limited to May 10. That is obviously discrimination. One fish plant worker is collecting unemployment insurance because he has 12 weeks or 15 weeks. Another fish plant worker, a lady who had a child two years ago, cannot collect it because she had a child two years ago and had to take the year off. In order to re-enter, she now requires 20 weeks. The fisherman who brings in the fish cannot collect unemployment insurance at all until the middle of November. He then has to file for it and wait for two weeks.

In fact, most fishermen wait more than two weeks. A fisherman filing in Grand Falls, Newfoundland, which is not as yet in my riding, would have to wait eight weeks. The eight-week rule is that if he quits, he cannot get the benefits for eight weeks, six weeks of penalty and two weeks of waiting time. They are so overworked and understaffed in some of those unemployment insurance offices that the fisherman files but all he gets are forms in the mail.

What political party will have the wisdom, the common sense and the sense of fair play to tell Canadians that it will right all the wrongs in the Act? What Government will do what the courts of Canada have started to do? There have been some decisions lately by the Federal Court of Appeal including a recent one dealing with the spouses' aspect of the Unemployment Insurance Act. There have been two cases overruling that section of the Unemployment Insurance Act.

People are asking why parliamentarians cannot right the wrongs in the Act. They are asking why they have to go through these appeal procedures and end up not winning when they know that there is discrimination in the Unemployment Insurance Act.

I intended to say only a few words about the trade school students to whom the Hon. Member referred a few moments ago. Again, there is discrimination in the Unemployment Insurance Act. Half a trade school class in carpentry is allowed to collect unemployment insurance and the other half cannot. Half a secretarial class at a trade school is allowed to collect unemployment insurance but the other half is not. One person is collecting unemployment insurance but the person sitting next to him in class who did the same job and has the same history is not allowed to draw unemployment insurance. That is discrimination, is it not? Any court would say that that is outright discrimination under any charter of rights.

Maybe this is not the fault of the politicians. Maybe a lot of the politicians do not know what is really happening in some cases. Maybe that is the problem. Cabinet Ministers have their dinners at the Parliamentary Restaurant and operate in a different sphere from someone who is unable to receive unemployment insurance, cannot buy school books for his or her children while his or her children cannot get student loans.

That is another thing. Why does a student have to be 21 years of age in order to get a student loan without the income tax information of his parents? There are all kinds of things that are discriminatory. Why is it that when a student is past the age of 21, he can get a loan, but when he is 19 or 20, he can't?

Mrs. Sparrow: Yes, he can.

Mr. Baker: No, he can't. Let me explain this for those who do not understand it. Obviously the Hon. Member agrees with what I have said.

Mrs. Sparrow: No, there are loans.

Mr. McDermid: That's the first time I've seen you stopped in your tracks.

Mr. Baker: A student requires a statement from his parents—

Mrs. Sparrow: Well, why don't you say that?

Mr. Baker: Look, I thought you would understand that. People are all hoping that their sons or daughters will last in university until they are 21 years of age so that they can at last get a student loan without having to produce the income tax records of their parents. That is federal legislation, operated by the provinces, and there are different programs in different provinces, but that is the law in eastern Canada.

Mrs. Sparrow: What about western Canada?

Mr. Baker: Western Canada is the same thing. In fact, western Canada—no, Mr. Speaker, I will not get into that.

I am not saying whether or not I agree with this. The other day, the Federal Court came down with a ruling that said that a person can hire his or her spouse and the spouse can collect unemployment insurance if there is a contract of service. The lady who was successful in the appeal is from a different province, Digby, Nova Scotia, in fact. The case is commonly referred to as the Druken case because the lady's last name is Druken. She carried it through to the Federal Court of Appeal and won the case.

The Federal Court of Appeal has agreed with a district judge who said that the entire section of the Unemployment Insurance Act that deals with the elimination of a spouse being able to draw unemployment insurance is completely illegal because it violates the Charter of Rights. The Charter provides that we cannot discriminate against someone because of this, this, and this and because of family considerations.

I know what the natural consequence of that decision will be if the federal Government does not appeal it, and I happen to know personally enough people in the Justice Department to know that the Minister is considering appealing this to the Supreme Court of Canada, and probably will after the election is called when no one is paying attention to it.

I see that you are indicating that I only have a couple of seconds left. I have not even got to the point I want to make.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Baker: The point I want to make is this: the court has made that ruling, and we know about the problems in the high unemployment areas of Canada. There are rules that state, for example, that no one is permitted to be hired on a works program or summer student employment program if the person who signed the contract with the federal Government is a relative of that person. The town clerks in these small communities have to sign the contracts. It is difficult to find someone who is not related to someone else in these small communities.

Mrs. Mailly: Especially in Newfoundland.

Mr. Baker: Especially in Newfoundland. That student cannot go to work because his mother or father is the town clerk, the mayor or someone else who signed the contract.

The Federal Court of Appeal is saying that what the Unemployment Insurance Act has done is illegal because it is in violation of the Charter of Rights. Not only that, but the same is true with all the works programs.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ellis): Order.

Mr. Baker: I know you are going to tell me that my time is up, so I will sit down, but I just want to say, for goodness sakes, let us deal with the real issues. Whichever political party supports the removal of this 20-weeks requirement for new entrants and re-entrants and says that fishermen should be able to draw unemployment insurance is a Party that I will support.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ellis): Hon. Members will know that it is very enjoyable to listen to the Hon. Member, but my wife has a saying: "Don't listen to what I'm saying, listen to what I'm thinking," and that is what we have to do when the Hon. Member speaks.

Mrs. Mailly: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I am sure that the Hon. Member for Gander—Twillingate (Mr. Baker) would want to know that something was lost in the translation when I spoke. He has given exactly the opposite interpretation to what I said in French. I said I was not waiting for this Bill because it was merely a routine matter that comes up. What I want to see is the redistribution of these regions so that in the regions in the northern part of my riding—which is not Ottawa-Hull, by the way, it is very rural, very poor, with a lot of unemployment—people can work for 10 weeks and then have access to unemployment insurance benefits. That is totally opposite to the interpretation the Hon. Member put on my speech.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair has heard a rumour but is not clear exactly as to where the Bill will be going. I will ask for the guidance of the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Deputy Prime Minister.

Mr. Hawkes: I think, Mr. Speaker, you will find a general predisposition in the House to approve the second reading motion and then, by unanimous consent, to move to Committee of the Whole. There has been a signal from opposition Members that they would like to move some amendments. We can deal with those in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair thanks the Parliamentary Secretary.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and, by unanimous consent, the House went into committee thereon, Mr. Danis in the Chair.

Mr. Chairman: Shall Clause 1 carry?

On Clause 1—Qualifying weeks

Mr. Angus: Mr. Chairman, I distributed to the Government, to the Liberal Opposition and to the Table Officers a proposed amendment which I would like to move. I move:

> That lines 11 through 15 on page 1 of Bill C-158 be deleted and the following substituted therefore:
> "Person shall have in order to qualify for benefits shall be 10".

The purpose of this amendment is to provide for a fixed period of time for qualification for all citizens of Canada of 10 weeks as opposed to the flexible requirement at this time that provides for anywhere from 10 weeks to 18 weeks in order to qualify for unemployment insurance.

The Hon. Member who raised her point of order just a couple of moments ago talked about her riding where there are regional distortions and there is a need to have community standards. This amendment would ensure that all Canadians, no matter where they live, no matter what their employment prospects, would only be required to have 10 weeks of unemployment insurance credits. That is all I wish to say. I think the matter is self-explanatory and I would hope the Government would move quickly and positively to accept this amendment.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Chairman, the Member for Thunder Bay—Atikokan did provide the Official Opposition with a copy of the amendment to Bill C-158. I wish to indicate that the Official Opposition supports the amendment proposed by the New Democratic Party. The Standing Committee on Labour, Employment and Immigration, which examined the whole question of unemployment insurance entitlements, recommended unanimously, that is, members from all three Parties, Conservative, Liberal and the third Party in the House, the New Democratic Party, that such an amendment be made to the Act and that the qualification criteria for benefits be applied equally across the country. But what we do not see today in this Bill, unfortunately, is a requirement to get rid of the 20-week rule for re-entrance.

I represent a riding where unemployment is among the highest in the country. For example, in the Port au Port Peninsula the unemployment rate is between 50 per cent and 60 per cent, even during the height of the fishing season. It is ridiculous that someone who managed to get a job last year and is going back to the same seasonal job this year, needs 10 weeks to qualify for unemployment insurance purposes, but someone who was so unfortunate as not to get a job last year, one of the ones who are not employable, not for lack of trying but merely because of lack of opportunity, needs 20 weeks.

What could be more insane than asking the workforce who lives in that part of Canada where their way of life depends upon seasonal economies, be it the fishery, the forestry or certain agricultural sectors, to wait 20 weeks? What could be more ludicrous than saying that those who seasonally find employment to give to themselves and their families the dignity of a pay cheque, can qualify after 10 weeks of employments, but those who fall between the cracks, those who are required to go out and scrape, to almost beg or steal, to find enough income to make it through the summer months and into the fall, must wait 20 weeks? Because they had a bad year, they did not qualify in one year, so the next time, in order to qualify, they are required to have 20 weeks of employment.

I would have hoped the Government, paying attention in a reformed Parliament to the progressive and enlightened views of Members from all three Parties on the standing committee operating in a non-partisan manner and seeking to make better laws for all Canadians, would have come in with a Bill to get rid of the variable entrance requirement and make it ten weeks across the country.

The reality is that anybody who can work beyond ten weeks will work. I do not know anyone who does not want to work. There may be a rare case, but one cannot build a law for the country based on a rare case. People whom I know want the dignity of a day's work, the pride that comes with bringing home a paycheque. This nonsense that we need a variable entrance requirement because the country, en masse, is going to lay down its tools and go home now that they have qualified is nonsense.

There is a work ethic that ought to be reflected in faith in the working people of this country by the Government of Canada bringing in an universal 10-week requirement and getting rid of the terrible discriminatory 20-week re-entrance requirement. Unfortunately we do not see that in this Bill today.

The Chairman: The Chair finds the amendment of the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Atikokan in order.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, this is the first time I have been in this position in Committee of the Whole. I have been on the other side for a few hours in this Chamber over the years.

Close to 20 years ago I became involved in doing research work across this country related to employment concerns from coast to coast, Newfoundland included. I would like to confirm my hon. friend's observation that Canadians want to work. They want to work productively; they are hard-working people. We have no reason to be afraid of a free trade deal because our people will make it work and the opportunities will enable them to have the jobs.

We do have arguments about the best way to provide jobs. I remember the arguments in 1984. We brought in our first Budget and opposition Members, who came to that budget process like they had come to four years of governing, said that it would be a catastrophe, that our unemployment insurance fund would be bankrupted because there would be so many unemployed people. Four years later there are 1.25 million more Canadians who pay money into the unemployment insurance fund, and there are a whole lot less people who take money out.

Voters will have a chance to decide which Party's view is the most appropriate one. We offer four years of experience of creating jobs and reducing the costs of unemployment insurance versus the preceding four years when jobs disappeared and unemployment insurance payments went up. We believe that Canadians who want jobs will vote for us, and we believe that that is the overwhelming majority of Canadians.

On the amendment, the research data shows that beginning at about 12 weeks and going up to 20 weeks and beyond is probably the best statistical definition of the Canadian labour force. If people do not, by and large, have that kind of attachment—not in every single year, but through the passage of time—it is hard, in a statistical sense, to say that they are part of the labour force. It is important to have other social programs that look after their economic needs when they are not part of the labour force, and we do have such programs.

However, the Unemployment Insurance Act compels people to put money. Every employee in the country on a wage must put money in. It is a tax, kind of a hidden tax in a way, but people do not have an option. They must put money in and the money that comes in is topped up by government, but it has to match the money that is paid out.

If we try to meet all our social needs, all our income needs for things like the welfare system under the Canada Assistance Plan, through unemployment insurance, then we would have to tell the employees of the country that they have to put more money in, that we are going to tax them higher. We would have to tell the businesses of the country that we are going to have to tax them higher to pay for that.

Any tax on labour should be entered into very carefully because it is a carrot to business to discontinue with a job, to replace a job with a machine. That is what a tax on labour does, and if we are really concerned about those Canadians who want jobs then we really have to be careful. The Opposition has put forward, and both Parties seem in agreement on this, an increase in taxation for those who have jobs.

The Member opposite raises the standing committee report. At the point at which that report was brought to Parliament, I was the chairman of the committee so I think I indeed know an awful lot about that report. It bothers me that some days in the House of Commons the report is distorted.

Members worked very hard with the resources we had. The hours, the days, and the weeks went by and we proposed a major restructuring of the unemployment insurance principle. We did not have the resources to do all the research, but we believed that it would produce better benefits at lower taxation.

When we pull a single recommendation out of the over 50 recommendations we are not treating the Act as a whole, as a total arrangement. This amendment is simply proposing an increase in taxation for people. That is really what is being proposed, whereas the Bill that the Government has brought in is saying that in areas where jobs are not available, where it is very difficult to get more than ten weeks of work, one shall qualify. However, if one lives in an area like downtown Toronto or southwestern Ontario where there is almost a labour shortage today, where jobs are readily available, one has to work longer, because jobs are there, to get one's pay.

It is the Government's view that those who really need the help because they come from an area where jobs are hard to get shall benefit under unemployment insurance, but we do not want those same people to pay the costs of people who come from downtown Toronto where jobs are readily available.

That is the reason for variable entrance. We do not want to tax the poor to pay the rich. This amendment would force us to tax the people from high unemployment areas higher to pay benefits in downtown Toronto. We think it should work the other way, that those coming from areas where jobs are readily available should pay more to help Canadians in other parts of the country where jobs are very difficult to get.

I would urge government Members to vote against this amendment for those reasons.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that what the Hon. Member from Calgary is doing is defending the program which the Liberals put in place when they were in power and which the Liberals are apparently now prepared to recant.

I would just recall to him the argument made by my friend from Thunder Bay—Atikokan pointing out that people in a high unemployment area of his constituency are still forced to have 16 or 17 weeks of contribution in order to get benefits because of the fact that the unemployment rate is relatively low in other parts of the region on which that calculation is based.

I know northern Ontario. It is a substantial drive between Atikokan and Thunder Bay. In winter it is a very substantial and dangerous drive because the roads are icy. It is just simply not feasible for a person living in Atikokan to take a job in Thunder Bay. Therefore, we do not have one labour market, we have several. The effect of the present rules is to create real inequities because of the way they are applied.

The Hon. Member has also tried to suggest that this is a tax on working people, et cetera. I would have thought that this kind of amendment would be acceptable to a Government which was committed to having full employment, not only in southern Ontario but through the rest of the country as well. In other words, if we had a Government which was committed to bringing down unemployment to the level that prevails, for example, in Sweden, down to a 3 per cent or 4 per cent level in Canadian terms, we would not be talking about major expenditures.

We are talking about potentially major expenditures now because the unemployment rate in Canada is an average of 8 per cent. In many regions of the country it still runs as high as 12 per cent or 13 per cent.

Mr. Tobin: 17 per cent.

Mr. Cassidy: It is 17 per cent in parts of Newfoundland as my friend, the Hon. Member for Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe remarks. It is scandalous that the Government should be talking about the fine job it has done in economic management when many parts of the country have unemployment rates comparable to many of those that prevailed at the time of the recession in 1982.

The Parliamentary Secretary is trying to suggest that what is needed for the problems is a stick so that in areas of labour demand workers would not sit on their backsides, as he might, say, but would get a job because they would not be able to get unemployment insurance.

I would point out to him, among other things, that to generalize like that may not in fact make sense. I have walked along Bloor Street in Toronto where there are signs offering jobs. I have walked in areas of my constituency where there are signs in retail stores offering jobs.

It is a fact, as Peter Cook pointed out in The Globe and Mail this morning, that the rate of unemployment among older workers in Canada today is very substantially higher than it is in many other countries. Older workers aged 55 or over cannot easily get jobs waiting on tables in restaurants, standing behind counters at McDonald's, or selling trendy designer sportswear in a sporting goods shop. They may ask for a job but the manager will hum and haw, look rather embarrassed, and say that he does not think it would be appropriate for that person to take that job.

It has been suggested that in time 69-year-olds will be serving hamburgers at McDonald's because the flow of young people into the labour market is diminishing and the demand for their services will increase. While that may come in time, right now a 17-week requirement of attachment to the workforce may be very cruel to older workers who have difficulty getting sustained employment even if they live near an area of relatively low unemployment.

I suggest the Government has a stereotype of how workers just want to lie in the sun and therefore must be forced to work. My experience is that people want to work. People find a great deal of their identity and part of their contribution to society in working. Certainly people with children at home do not want to go home to say they spent the day on the beach because they did not care to look for a job. Kids expect their parents to have jobs. Parents feel inadequate if they do not have a job. Therefore, the suggestion that people under the 10-week requirement would then more or less rip off the Canadian taxpayers does not do credit to the Government.

There should be a program in Canada that is dedicated to ensuring full employment and that jobs are available in every part of the country to all Canadians, young and older workers alike. I believe that kind of program can be accompanied with a program that is relatively flexible and accommodates the fact that people at certain ages, perhaps with certain skills, unfortunately may find themselves unemployed with less than 16 or 17 weeks attachment to the labour force. That could be accommodated by the kind of amendment proposed by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Atikokan.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Chairman, I want to take a moment to speak to this amendment offered to Clause 1 by the Member from the New Democratic Party. The Hon. Member for Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe made a very eloquent speech a few moments ago in support of the amendment. I am sure Members on all sides of the House took note of the very excellent speech. Not only did he support the initiative, which is a good one, he added a very important component of which I hope Members opposite will take note. It is the fact that the 10-week variable entrance requirement that exists now in certain regions of Canada only applies to a person who is unemployed and had worked a sufficient number of weeks in order to qualify.

What about a new worker who is not only a young person coming out of school. Let us take the case of a woman who is re-entering the workforce after a number of years. Interestingly enough, the Government has a job re-entry program specifically designed to help women who have not worked for 10 years, 15 years, or not at all get into the workforce. The Government takes credit for inventing this program to assist them to get back into the workforce, yet when this woman gets back into the workforce in an area where this 10-week rule applies, she must have 20 weeks attachment to the workforce even though she is in that 10-week VER region. She has put all that time on this course to enable her to join the workforce. It is a double standard. The Government cannot claim credit for this re-entry program on the one hand while at the same time creating a situation that allows this to happen.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, in the riding that I represent, which you know very well—I am sure that most Members know it a little because I talk about it from time to time in the House of Commons—the Hawkesbury area, for example, has a very high rate of unemployment. But it is a small group in the whole population of Canada; it is not a region in itself, it is not even a mini-region, so to speak, for census purposes. It is not big enough for that. So the region that I represent, the Hawkesbury region, might have an unemployment rate of 12, 13, 14 or 15 per cent, but it is still within a larger region which has a much lower unemployment rate.

So when the unemployment rate is calculated for this region, it is taken for Prescott—Russell as a whole for statistical purposes; Glengarry is something else. The unemployment rate for all of Prescott—Russell is something like 7 or 8 per cent. But we know very well that for Prescott County, the unemployment rate would be about 11 per cent, and for the immediate area of Hawkesbury, maybe 13 or 14 per cent. Nevertheless, those people are not eligible for the 10-week qualifying period because they live in a region that supposedly has a lower rate of unemployment. My colleague, the Hon. Member for Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin), told us that the 10-week rule should apply everywhere. And he is right, because if someone is out of work, be it in Hawkesbury, in Ottawa, in Toronto, where there are many jobs, or in Newfoundland, the effects are the same. The person involved has no salary.

It does not give one much comfort to know that when one is unemployed one is part of a smaller group as opposed to part of a larger group. In other words, if one is unemployed in an area of lower unemployment or an area of higher unemployment, the effect is the same—one does not have a job. Therefore I think the 10-week rule should apply everywhere.

As people have indicated this has been suggested by various groups to committees in the past. To end on that point I want to say that the unemployment insurance rules are hard enough. I know that they are abused sometimes. Whenever they are, of course, people are quick to remind us, as they should, that it is unfair that they are working for low wages sometimes while another person is taking advantage of the rules and so on and is collecting unemployment insurance when they should not be. I appreciate that position and sometimes it is accurate.

However, we cannot generalize and say that those people who are unemployed are so by their own design. I say that because in just about 100 per cent of the cases people who are unemployed are on unemployment because they cannot find employment.

I had a case this week in which my office went to defend a person before an arbitration panel. It was a case of an unemployed worker in my constituency who wanted to get back into the workforce. What this worker did is he went out on his own to follow a training course which would then guarantee him a position. Interestingly enough, the training course is with a Crown corporation. Once this training course of 15 weeks or so is over, then he will have a full-time position. This training course that he is taking is for four hours per day. He has now been disqualified from UIC because he is unavailable for work, but he is unavailable for work because he is training so that he can get a job.

Does that make sense? It does not make any sense at all to me. That is why we went to defend the case. I am quite sure that in this particular case we will win because the decision that was originally given, as far as I am concerned, is ludicrous.

Those are the kinds of things that workers face sometimes. My same constituent could very well have been taking a course sponsored by UIC, being paid by UIC to take it, as well as receiving a little money on the side to pay for transportation to and from the course, but he did not ask for anything. He went out on his own, to get this training course in order to get a full-time position, which he is going to get in a few weeks from now. If he had done nothing at all, if he had just sat around, he could have collected benefits for a long number of weeks. My constituent did not want that; he wanted to go back to work, but the system in this case has penalized him.

I bring this to the attention of Hon. Members to give an example of how difficult it is for people who are on unemployment, and how rules that are obviously designed to make things better sometimes do the exact opposite of what there were intended to do.

I say to the Parliamentary Secretary and to the Government that if the Government had this 10-week rule in place 100 per cent of the time the system would still not be perfect. However in my opinion it would be at least a small step toward making it more fair for Canadians. Therefore I ask my colleagues to accept this amendment.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Chairman, just for the official record I want to point out that in order to collect unemployment insurance one has to prove that one is available for work. One has to prove that. One has to prove it sometimes over and over when a call is received from Unemployment Insurance Commission investigators who have been hired by the Government. One has to prove that one is available for work.

In other words, availability means that one has to be available at one's place of residence. One must be available to travel. One must be available to go wherever the job is. If one is offered a job or finds a job, then one's unemployment is cut off. Not only that, but everything one received has to be paid back because automatically the charge is then made by the commission that one was not available for work last week if one was not available for work this week, or if one is not available when one started to draw. One has to prove one's availability. If one is offered a job one has to accept it or one's unemployment is cut off and one is asked to pay back everything.

One cannot quit one's job just to collect unemployment insurance because as you know, Mr. Chairman, one is then penalized six weeks, plus two weeks waiting. That is two months. I do not know of anybody who can live on fresh air or water if one has any water—and some communities do not have any water to drink.

Someone might say that that person could go to welfare. If one goes to welfare one might end up in jail. What does one do if one qualifies for unemployment insurance and one goes to to welfare? The first thing one has to do is one must sign a form. One says in that form that when one receives one's unemployment insurance the welfare department will be paid back what has been received. It does not only apply to unemployment insurance. It applies to Canada pension, Canada pension disability, old age pension—it applies to anything one gets from the Government. Then one signs another form that states that in accepting the money from welfare—I call it welfare, it is social assistance in some places, I suppose, but welfare is the term that we know on the coastline of Newfoundland—one may now be guilty of neglect if one has a family or people to support because one has quit one's job.

That normally results in a jail sentence. There are thousands of cases every year of people who end up in jail because they quit their job. They have to wait the eight weeks for unemployment insurance that they cannot prove to the Unemployment Insurance Commission because they were working in the woods. They cannot prove there was no roof over their heads. We have had cases like this. He is not fed any food so the guy decides to quit and go home. In signing the form for welfare he ends up in jail. It is pretty difficult when one is in jail because then one cannot collect unemployment insurance at all.

Mr. Boudria: Because you are not available for work.

Mr. Baker: One is certainly not available for work, as the hon. gentleman has pointed out. From doing constituency cases it seems to be the norm now that people in rural areas, poor people, have become used to going to jail for non-payment of this or for owing the Unemployment Insurance Commission money.

That is the second thing. If one goes to welfare one runs the risk of being put in jail and being charged with non-support. Somebody might say that if we open up the system more somebody might want to stay on unemployment insurance. They could just work the 10 weeks and then go on unemployment insurance. How much does one make on unemployment insurance?

Have you ever asked yourself the question, Mr. Chairman, how much you would make if you were to go on unemployment insurance tomorrow? How much would you get in your cheque? I will tell you how much you would get. Your insurable employment is up to a maximum of $560 a week. That is a maximum, but you do not get that. You could be making $10,000 a week, but the maximum of insurable earnings is $560.

Once upon a time, one used to be able to get unemployment insurance, but prior to 1974 one would get 66 and two-thirds per cent of that unemployment insurance. No longer. The maximum any man or woman could make on unemployment insurance in Canada is 60 per cent of $560, which is what—$340 or $342?

An Hon. Member: $336.

Mr. Baker: The hon. gentleman says "$336". That is the maximum that one can get.

For those people who draw the maximum unemployment insurance, they run the risk in December of having to pay it back. Why? Somebody said to me one day: "You know what is wrong with the Unemployment Insurance Commission. A fellow goes out and makes $70,000 a year and then goes on unemployment insurance. He makes that during the winter and goes on unemployment insurance for the rest of the summer". That is not right. As you know, there is a law that says that there is a maximum one can make from one's total income for the year plus one's unemployment insurance. If one makes any more, one has to pay back the unemployment insurance. It is on one's income tax form.

Somebody who fills out income tax and claims unemployment insurance benefits knows what I am talking about. Some people who do not collect unemployment insurance, like Members of Parliament, do not know what I am talking about. But one fills it out. That maximum level is monitored by Revenue Canada.

How many cases do we have in Canada of school teachers who lose their jobs, are supposedly qualified for unemployment insurance, but at the end of the year, December 31, when they do their income tax for that year they find that they have gone over $40,000 in total income, that is, from their work plus unemployment insurance. National Revenue governs this. What happens? They have to pay back their unemployment insurance to the Department of National Revenue.

We have these checks and balances within the Unemployment Insurance Act if one tries to collect the maximum on unemployment insurance which, as we proved a moment ago, is about $340 a week. Boy, what a fortune that is, that is, if one claims the maximum. One runs the risk of having to pay it back to the Department of National Revenue at the end of the year because one was in a high paying job prior to that.

What is the average? What do people make on average in unemployment insurance throughout Canada? What is the average cheque that we would find in the area of the Hon. Member for Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe with the inshore fishermen? An additional 10 per cent is knocked off the 60 per cent if he owns a boat. Anyway, that is another story. We will find that it averages to about $150 a week. One may say: "Well, $150 a week, boy, he might quit his job and go on unemployment insurance".

The average man collecting unemployment insurance in the riding of the Hon. Member to my left would receive about the same as he would receive from welfare if he quit his job and went on unemployment insurance. That is the truth of the matter.

Since the Government of Canada took office four years ago, it cut out the mobility grants. It cut them out,

You just cannot get a job where you are after you get laid off.

Mr. Tobin: If you are broke, you cannot move.

Mr. Baker: If you are broke, you cannot move, as the hon. gentleman says. There is one group of people whom I noticed the other day who get mobility grants.

Last Tuesday, the Government of Canada sent out letters to all those air traffic controllers who were fired in the United States in 1981, offering them jobs in Canada. Mobility is totally paid for. On the job training allowance for eight months is over $1,000 a week.

An Hon. Member: What?

Mr. Baker: Yes. It is the select group. Perhaps we should raise it in Question Period at the beginning of the week and ask the Government of Canada, through the Minister of Employment and Immigration who sponsors this Bill, why on the one hand it signed a piece of paper overruling the Immigration Department's guidelines on the employment of federal public servants and on the other hand approved mobility money for the movement of U.S. air traffic controllers who were fired in 1981 to fill jobs across Canada. There are 45 of them going to Pearson International Airport. That is the double standard we get.

What a change there has been for a person who draws unemployment insurance being able to land a job like they have now offered to the Americans, all those air traffic controllers, so that they can come in and fill the best jobs we have in Transport Canada, the best jobs from the point of view of money, because they are very high pressure jobs.

A lot of Canadians just wanted to write the exams for entrance to air traffic control. They are going to be surprised to learn that the Americans are being offered those jobs automatically and getting over $1,000 a week for on the job training.

What I was trying to say is that when one is looking for a job and is on unemployment insurance, one has a more distressing problem today than one had over four years ago, because the Department of manpower or the employment Department sponsoring this Bill no longer keeps records of people in manpower offices. The records are no longer kept. There is no longer a computer.

One used to be able to go in, prior to the entrance of the present Government, and register. A fellow would keep one on file and if something came up, one got a phone call. There is no more registration of a general worker who gets laid off. They do not keep all those files because the Government of Canada said that there were no jobs around. Perhaps we should not keep the files.

When we once talked about going down to register at the manpower office, that used to be the call. "Let's go down and register at the manpower office". Well, there is no such thing any more. One cannot do it. In fact, it used to be interesting, because one was either actively looking for work, where one came in every three months, or one was on the less than active file. There are no more files.

Even for the federal employment programs that hire people drawing unemployment insurance the call is: "Do you want a job? Listen to the radio. If you are not listening to the radio when the jobs are advertised, then you cannot get a job because for the 10 workers that were advertised at two minutes after one o'clock on radio station CKGA, we have already had 10 phone calls or 100. We take the first 10". Consequently, if there is a job for a captain of a ship on an ice-breaker up North, a fellow might be sitting at home who was not listening to the radio. He might have been a captain for 22 years and had the best record on the Atlantic Ocean. However, he was not listening to the radio. There may be another guy who perhaps did not have enough experience but was able to hop in and get the job because he was listening to the radio.

The entire system has changed and because of that system we now need a total revision of the Unemployment Insurance Act. It cannot be picked at or dealt with by bringing in a Bill such as the one we are dealing with today. I do not disagree with the Bill. However, it only deals with repeaters. It does not deal with new entrants or re-entrants. It does not deal with anything but repeaters. It deals with the status quo.

In the interim the mobility grants have been removed so that someone cannot go from point A to point B. Perhaps someone tells an unemployed fellow down in Bay St. George in Newfoundland that there are lots of jobs in Toronto and in southern Ontario doing drywall. Do you know what drywall is, Mr. Chairman? It is gyprocking. Then the fellow says: How am I going to get up there? I can't get mobility any more".

The Government so restricted mobility that under the new rules a person has to prove that he or she has a job that is guaranteed for over one year. The employer must also advertise locally for six months, and the employer has to guarantee a job for one year before the Government will pay up. How is a person supposed to get money to go to Toronto if he or she is poor, does not have any money, and his or her family does not have any money? I suppose he or she could hitch-hike, but that is kind of difficult.

When the person reaches Toronto there is an additional problem. If the person wants to stay anywhere, he or she has to put down a downpayment on accommodation. Just imagine someone making $120 week on unemployment insurance trying to keep the family going, hitch-hiking all the way up there, and then being told that a month or two month's rent in advance is needed.

The Department of Employment and Immigration no longer keeps any records to refer a person to the job that she or she is best suited for. That was changed when the present Government took over. There are no longer mobility grants available to go for a job search. That has all been changed. When the system is changed so completely, it has to be counterbalanced and some attempt made at taking care of the people who are being hurt by the system. That is why I would support any of those measures mentioned by the hon. gentleman.

The Chairman: Shall the amendment carry?

Some Hon. Members: No.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Amendment (Mr. Angus) negatived.

The Chairman: The Hon. Member for Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe.

Mr. Angus: Mr. Chairman, I have a further amendment to move.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Chairman, I am in the hands of the Chair. It has always been my want in this place to see the House make progress in an intelligent, systematic, and responsible manner. If it makes more sense for the Member for Thunder Bay—Atikokan to move his second amendment now, I am willing to yield the floor.

The Chairman: The Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Atikokan.

Mr. Angus: I wish to thank my colleague, the Hon. Member for Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe, for not speaking at this moment in order to give me the opportunity to move this amendment. I move:

> That line 14 on page 1 of Bill C-158 be deleted and the following substituted therefor:
> "on the local rate of unemployment that".

The purpose of this amendment, Mr. Chairman, as I indicated during my contribution at second reading debate, is to change the trigger mechanism that decides on the variable entrance requirement for an individual.

Under the amendment that we are dealing with as a whole today, the variable entrance requirement is based on the regional rate of unemployment. My amendment changes that to the local rate. That would mean that Statistics Canada would have to examine unemployment city by city and community by community. Using the word "local" provides flexibility so that rural areas could be grouped together with a like kind of situation.

At the present time the Atikokans of the world are forced to have the same number of weeks' requirement as Thunder Bay because it is in the same region. However, Atikokan's unemployment rate during 1987 was 50 per cent, and its current unemployment rate is up into the 20 per cent range, as compared to Thunder Bay which is in the 8 per cent to 9 per cent bracket.

It is an important change, and it is consistent with the review that the Government itself is doing in looking at the regions. I am short-circuiting that review by placing an amendment that would ensure that entrance requirements reflect the local situation and not, as in the case of northwestern Ontario, an area that is 400 or 500 miles away.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order. The Government is in accord with the intent of the motion, however you must rule whether or not the motion is in order.

The word "region" appears throughout the Act, and it gives the Minister the legal authority to undertake, on the basis of regions, the type of activity that the Minister cares about. On August 16, the Minister announced a special study of those 48 regions in an attempt to be more sensitive, and the urban rural split is being looked at. If the wording is changed to "local area" in this particular clause, without consequent amendments to other parts of the Bill, we may create a legal difficulty which might work against the type of thing that is important to Parliament, that we have sensitivity throughout.

I do not know if you will find the amendment in order, Mr. Chairman, or perhaps the Member would like to reconsider and seek unanimous consent to withdraw it on that basis.

Mr. Angus: Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the government spokesperson for his comments. I do not want to prejudge what you, Sir, may decide in terms of the appropriateness of the amendment, but I am looking at the clock and I am guessing that we will not reach third reading stage today and there would be some time, assuming that you, Mr. Chairman, rule it in order—

Mr. Chairman: If the Member will give me a second, I will make a ruling right now.

The Chair finds the amendment to be in order. The Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Atikokan has the floor.

Mr. Angus: Mr. Speaker, I thank you for that ruling. I recognize the comments made by the government spokesperson. I would rather leave it to the House to decide today. If there is an opportunity for the Government to examine the amendment when we come to third reading, and assuming the House does not accept it, but perhaps it will, perhaps there will be a chance to put it forward after the Government has done some research.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I think the proposition put by the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Atikokan is the appropriate one, given that the Parliamentary Secretary to the Deputy Prime Minister and the President of the Privy Council has said that the Government is in accord, at least with the spirit or the intent of the amendment that the entrance rate be determined by circumstances in the local region.

If such an amendment were accepted, it would necessitate other changes in the Bill in order that the language was consistent throughout the Bill. Between now and third reading I believe there is every opportunity for the Government to have its draftsmen look at the Bill to reflect not only in spirit and intent what it desires, but also to reflect what the Member has properly proposed by way of amendment. It is more than a good wish, a goodwill, or a desire, but it is spelled out in the Act as now drafted.

There is another area which the Government, between now and third reading if it chooses, could address to remove a major piece of discrimination in this Bill. There is only one group of people in Canada who have a special set of requirements that apply to them based on the definition of their work. Every other worker in Canada qualifies or is disqualified for unemployment insurance based on a variable entrance requirement, and the rules that apply throughout the Act apply to every working person in Canada. However, there is one group of workers who have a set of rules designed only for them. That group of workers is fishermen. Only fishermen have a clause in the Unemployment Insurance Act tailor-made for them.

Canadians watching could be saying to themselves: "What a fortunate group of people these fishermen are, a special clause just for them. My gosh, they are well represented in the House of Commons in that they were able to cause such a tremendous feat to occur that they have special rules just for fishermen".

What is this special rule? It is a rule which says that a fishermen cannot qualify, cannot receive, cannot be paid, cannot cash an unemployment insurance cheque between May 15 and November 15. No fisherman in Canada for that period of time, six months, between May 15 and November 15, can receive an unemployment insurance cheque. Why? It is because fishermen are supposed to be fishing between that time.

It is a perfectly logical, rational rule brought in by a previous Liberal Government and maintained by the current Conservative Government. It was well intentioned but it no longer works in some areas. I represent the great northern peninsula of Newfoundland.

Mr. Lewis: That is their problem.

Mr. Tobin: It is a problem for the Government, of that there is no doubt. Members can laugh, but on the great northern peninsula of Newfoundland we will find some of the hardest working, heartiest, dedicated people with the biggest amount of pride and dignity in their belly. They manage to scrape out a living, and a decent one, in difficult circumstances, clinging on by their fingernails to the rocks at the edge of the salt water, harvesting the resource of the sea. Proud people, proud to go out and work when they can, while they can, in every kind of circumstance, overcoming every kind of difficulty.

Yet there is one thing they cannot overcome with this rule that says they cannot collect unemployment insurance from May to November. They cannot overcome the fact that some 14 feet of ice does not melt on the great northern peninsula until July. Yes, throughout the winter, right straight through until the middle of July some years, can find ice rafted up in the harbours, barring the boats, and on the land right into July. Yet the rule says that by May 15 they should be fishing. Therefore, on May 15 there is no more unemployment insurance. From May 15 through June 15 to July 15, two months, there is no income. Why? It is because some lad in Ottawa sitting in his ivory tower, with his coffee cup and his pack of butts, perhaps with his feet on his desk and his central air-conditioning on, contemplating lunch with his buddy down the hallway in the subsidized cafeteria, said that Genge or Anchor Point is supposed to be out fishing so, damn it, let them fish.

They cannot fish. It is physically impossible. There is ice as high as the gilded roof of this glorious chamber on their front doorsteps, their boats are barred in, but some bureaucrat has said they have got to be fishing. It is impossible, so every year from May until July these fishermen, year in and year out, are penalized. They are discriminated against because they cannot go fishing. In the interim they cannot receive an income.

That is only half the story. There is another problem. This time of the year, September 23, you can do down to Dow's Lake on a Saturday with your sweater on, if you have a good day you can do down in your bikini, and watch the pretty boats sail around. It is a wonderful day. However, on September 23, if you are in Port au Choix, in St. Anthony, Quirpon, or if you are in Anchor Point, Flower's Cove, Savage Cove, Sandy Cove, or Bear Cove, you are not going down to the water to watch the pretty sailboats in your sweater or maybe your bikini. No, we have another problem, invented by God. It is called weather, fall weather.

We have the fact of no fish because the fish migrate. God invented that as well. He set up a migratory pattern and the fish move in and the fish move out and at a certain time of the year they move off again. Also at a certain time of the year, the fall and winter weather begins. Anyone who does not live there does not know what happens on the North Atlantic. They have no concept of what it is like to be in a small boat at sea at that time of the year. From September until November 14 these fishermen cannot fish either. There is a six-month period in which they cannot qualify because they are supposed to be fishing. For three of the six months they cannot fish. It is not because they do not want to fish, nor because they are not prepared to fish, nor because they do not have every desire to be out so they can have the dignity of a paycheque. It is because it is physically impossible.

What does the Parliament of Canada say as it brings in Bill C-158 to those fishermen from the great northern peninsula or the other Atlantic provinces in similar circumstances? There are some regions where the fishery is a winter fishery and not much is done at all during the summer season. Do we say "let us invent an Act that has a variable zone recognition like we have a variable entrance requirement recognizing this fact of life, this creation of God, this planet earth where not all things are consistent"? No, that does not happen. What we have every year is the status quo. Every year the fishermen are told that we will take a look at it next year. Every year the civil servant, whoever he is, who advises that faceless, nameless Minister, puts his feet back on his desk, once again sucks back deep on his coffee cup, thinks once again about his meal over at Hy's restaurant, his expense paid lunch, and says: "We will get around to it next year".

Let this be the last year that this Parliament, in the splendid comforts of these felt covered chairs, these great stained glass windows, these hunks of marble, sits here in comfort and forgets the plight of hardworking fishermen on the great northern peninsula of Newfoundland who want nothing more than a fair shake. They want, for once, these people who draft their Bills on the edge of the Rideau to think about those people who live on the edge of the Strait of Belle Isle, who work hard for a living, and want nothing but a fair shake from the Parliament of Canada.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS—MOTIONS

[English]

SOCIAL SERVICES

OVERPAYMENTS TO BENEFICIARIES

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should consider the advisability of prohibiting any federal department or agency which has in error made an overpayment to an individual under a social program from claiming repayment or withholding the overpayment from future payments to the individual, unless the individual is responsible directly or indirectly for the error.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I rise to deal with what many Canadians will think is a small injustice, but it is an injustice nonetheless. What attracts me to it is that it is an injustice from which poor people in Canadian society suffer more than others.

The matter came to my attention through the coincidence of three constituents coming to me with exactly the same type of problem. They were living on the benefits of one government program or another. In the case of all three, they were veterans living on veterans' pensions. Because of a computer error made in Prince Edward Island, I suppose, because that is where the administration of the veterans' pensions is, they received overpayments for, in one case, a year and a half.

During that period of time these people received more money than they were entitled to under a government program, but not a lot more. They were not in a position to confirm the exact amount of money they should have been getting. They simply received cheques, took them to the bank, and lived on the amount of money they were getting. In one of the three cases there was no other source of income for the family. It was the entire income of an elderly couple.

It turned out in these three cases, and as my investigations have shown in hundreds and hundreds of other cases across Canada, that a computer error had occurred. The computer was not wrong; it was human error, but it is an understandable error that can occur in a government department.

After the mistakes were discovered, the Government got in touch with these people and told them that they had received overpayments and that their subsequent payments would be reduced while the Government paid itself back for the excess amount it had paid out. It creates a very great hardship for people who find themselves in that situation. It is not that they were entitled to the overpayment. They were not entitled to it, but they were unaware of it.

When the time came for their payments to be reduced, it was extremely difficult for these people to adjust. They wrote to me as their Member of Parliament and I got in touch in one case with the Ministry of Veterans Affairs and in another case with the Ministry of Employment and Immigration. The Ministries feel that their hands are tied and that they have no recourse but to recuperate the overpayment. That is why I am inviting my colleagues on all sides of the House to pass a resolution to give some guidance to the Government in cases like this.

Unfair is perhaps not the exact word for this kind of circumstance, but it is very unfortunate and it is also a circumstance which is in no way the fault of the people involved. They were the beneficiaries of an overpayment, but as Hon. Members will see from the language that I have used in my resolution, an important factor in not reclaiming payment is that the recipients not be at fault.

In other words, I am not addressing the situation of the recipients of overpayments giving wrong information to the Government or, as happens in a lot of other cases that are very regrettable, failing to reveal that they have jobs and are collecting unemployment insurance at the same time, and then down the road, someone learning about it and the unemployment insurance payments have to be paid back along with interest and in some cases penalties. I am addressing in this resolution only situations in which it is wholly the Government's fault that people received overpayments in the first place. In cases like that, they ought to be allowed to keep these usually very modest overpayments.

I will not speak a long time on this motion. It is a simple idea and I do not think it takes an a lot of explanation, but I would like to indicate that when I raised this matter before the parliamentary committee that considers these matters, committee members asked a very good question.

[Translation]

They asked me how such a situation would be handled, say where someone receives a payment that is a million dollars more than what was sought. I admit that can happen!

We often read in the newspapers of people who got something like $10 million instead of $10 from some government department. I am ready to admit that this must be considered.

If the Government is prepared to accept the motion, and if the Members of the House accept it, setting limits of say 15 or 20 per cent in excess, I would be very grateful for such a policy.

I do not want . . . I am not suggesting that if a public servant gives a citizen one million dollars too much, that person should keep it. We can imagine conspiracies, situations where a government official wanting to help someone could have the computer make a mistake and give the individual in question a million-dollar overpayment. One can ask whether it would be fair to keep that money. This is not what I am talking about.

I ask Members who will speak to consider the situations they no doubt know of in their ridings, like cases where people have received overpayments that the Government wants back.

By setting reasonable limits, we can control extreme cases. [English]

I do not want to write a blueprint for getting super windfalls when the decimal point is five or six digits out of line. I am only referring to the very real and increasingly frequent situation of a modest overpayment over a prolonged period of time, resulting in a really tough time for elderly poor people who rely on government payments, did not know the amount was excessive, and are suddenly forced to live with an important amount of money less than they were getting before. I think that is the kind of situation that my resolution is meant to address. I hope that Hon. Members will support it, that it will pass, and that the Government will adopt it as a policy within the range of a certain margin of error.

Mrs. Barbara Sparrow (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, in response to Motion No. 167, let me begin by thanking the Hon. Member for raising the matter of overpayment to an individual under a government program and for providing an opportunity for the House to debate the issue.

The Government is of course very aware of the importance of its social programs and the concerns expressed by the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan) about the recovery of overpayments. It has been and continues to be the practice of this Government to deal with such matters with compassion and understanding. To this end, the Government, in 1986, included specific statutory provisions authorizing the remission of overpayments resulting from administrative error in program legislation such as the Canada Pension Plan, the Old Age Security Act, the Family Allowances Act, and the War Veterans Allowance Act.

• (1410)

Section 65(3) of the Canada Pension Plan, which is typical of such provisions, provides that the Minister may remit all or any portion of an overpayment on any one of four grounds, and I quote:

> The amount . . . cannot be collected within the reasonable foreseeable future.
> The administrative costs of collecting the amount or excess of the allowance are likely to equal or exceed the amount to be collected.
> Repayment of the amount or excess of the allowance would cause undue hardship to the person or institution, or
> The amount or excess of the allowance is the result of erroneous advice or administrative error on the part of an official of the Department.

During the last fiscal year over 11,000 overpayments were written off under these provisions. Furthermore, in the event that an unforeseen situation arises for which no specific provision has been enacted, the Minister concerned can turn to the regulations made pursuant to Section 18 of the Financial Administration Act which provides for the writing off of debts as uncollectable on grounds of hardship.

From what I have just outlined, Mr. Speaker, I believe that the necessary legislative authorities are in place for a compassionate implementation of the recovery of overpayments. The Government will, of course, continue to monitor the situation as part of its ongoing regular review of program delivery and will make any statutory adjustments that may be required as the needs arise.

I would like to point out that what may appear to be an administrative error may in fact be a deliberate strategy aimed at ensuring continuity of payment. The Government is acutely aware of the need for Canadians on fixed incomes to be assured that they will receive their payments regularly and without interruption. Cheques are, therefore, often prepared in advance, on the basis of expected entitlements and adjusted later, if necessary. This practice does not normally present major financial difficulties when the adjustment is made immediately, that is, on the subsequent payment.

However, as I am sure you can understand, Mr. Speaker, the alternative of verifying entitlement before each and every payment is just not practical for all programs. First, it would cause delays while the Department concerned waited for the benefit recipient to file the necessary information. Second, it would create an additional administrative burden for both the recipient and the Department and would result in a waste of resources which could better be used to process new applications and improve service to the program recipients.

In some cases, entitlements may be scheduled to be adjusted quarterly, semi-annually, or even only annually. Because of changes in a recipient's status in the intervening period, entitlement and hence the payment may be reduced on the next scheduled adjustment date. However, the higher amount received during the previous period should not be classified as an overpayment, but the amount to which the individual was entitled during that period. Nor is the subsequent reduction a recovery, but merely a reflection of the revised entitlement.

This House should also bear in mind that in the case of general programs like the Canada Pension Plan and family allowances, not all recipients are living on a limited income. To remit automatically all overpayments, even where recovery would not cause hardship, would be unfair not only to all taxpayers in general, but more important, to the other program recipients who would not receive the same "windfall". I maintain that the current system which allows Ministers to remit overpayments on a case by case or class basis provides a reasonable balance between equity and compassion.

Finally, the Government is continuing to take action to improve the accuracy and response time of the complex and automated systems used to deliver benefits. For example, the Department of Veterans Affairs has just completed the implementation phase of a major overhaul of its benefit delivery systems. The Department of National Health and Welfare has embarked on a similar exercise. Such improvements, of course, must be done in such a manner as to respect the dignity of the individual as well as the provisions of the Privacy Act. Otherwise, I am sure that the Hon. Member for York Centre would be among the first to complain about government intrusion and data matching.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I want to participate in the debate today on the motion put forward in the name of the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan). I want to compliment and thank him for bringing the motion forward. It is an important issue.

When I called my constituency office in Thunder Bay to update my memory in terms of work we have done in this area, my constituency assistant, Rosemary Cox, was quite excited about the motion because it is an area with which she has to deal quite frequently. She gave me examples of three areas where we have had problems, but they are only a reflection of many problems because, as Hon. Members know, the constituency offices which are provided to us by Parliament are there to help our citizens work through some of their problems with government bureaucracy. We are really the one focal point they have to find out how they can appeal what has been done to them.

I have found that all the problems centre around people who have very small incomes. Whether it is unemployment insurance, veteran's allowance, Canada Pension Plan, or old age security with the income supplement, by and large we are talking about men and women who do not have that much money.

Therefore, we are talking about people who, when asked to make a repayment for whatever reason, have great difficulty in doing so. They can and they do make those repayments, but it means their meagre income for that repayment period is reduced. Even if it is only $10 a month that is agreed to for a repayment plan, it has an impact on a senior who only has the old age pension with the income supplement. It is important that we highlight this problem. Hopefully, the House will send a direction to the Government, as suggested by the Hon. Member for York Centre in terms of the motion. The motion reads:

> That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should consider the advisability of prohibiting any federal department or agency which has in error made an overpayment to an individual under a social program from claiming repayment or withholding the overpayment from future payments to the individual, unless the individual is responsible directly or indirectly for the error.

We have had a number of such cases with the Canada Pension Plan where through no fault of their own but through some bureaucratic mix-up seniors have received more money than they were entitled to. There was no fraud or attempt to beat the system. Someone along the line pushed the wrong button in the computer or misread the regulations and the pensioner received an overpayment. The Government then came, as is its responsibility, and said "I am sorry, you were overpaid. We have to get that money back".

In some cases they are able to negotiate with the individuals to find a repayment scheme that is acceptable to them, that is within their financial means to handle. Other times, and again through the same kind of bureaucratic snafu, all of a sudden the cheques stop coming and that creates a panic because they rely on them.

Under old age security with the income supplement, because it is based on your over-all income, in some cases there is retroactivity. You find when you fill out your income tax form that you goofed on your projection, that you actually made a couple hundred dollars more than you told the Government you were going to when you applied for your income supplement. The Government sees this and matches it with its other records, decides it overpaid you, and wants the money back. These are, again, people with meagre incomes.

We had one case where the Unemployment Insurance Commission ruled that an individual was eligible to receive unemployment insurance benefits. That individual received them for one full year and, lo and behold, Revenue Canada decided that unemployment insurance had made a mistake, that this individual was not eligible. It demanded full repayment of a full year's worth of unemployment insurance benefits.

The final example I want to use is a program called Futures developed by the Province of Ontario. It was designed as a youth employment training program to provide a combination of classroom studies, life skills, how to do resumes, and how to dress for an interview, plus some on the job work experience.

At the start of the program the students involved applied for unemployment insurance and were told that this program was eligible, that they would be able to count every week in this program because they were getting paid by the Province of Ontario to be trained to get a job. They were told that every week they were in this program would be counted as a UI week.

Later, after the program was over, the rules changed. I do not know whether it was somebody higher up in UI, but they decided that only the time spent at the on the job training was eligible for UI. These young people were making minimum wage and would not have received all that much in any case because, as we know, the level of unemployment insurance benefits is based on earnings. In effect they would be getting less than minimum wage in UI benefits. They were told that they had to repay almost half of what they received from unemployment insurance. That is not exactly a good way to introduce them to the working world, is it?

There are hundreds of examples out there. If Members just talk to their constituency assistants I am sure they can all provide examples. This motion does not say how to do it, and I recognize that there is some ministerial discretion. That is tied up, too, in the bureaucracy, and getting to that level takes time. These people do not have time.

Our seniors, the people who built this country, really get upset when somebody in authority comes knocking at the door saying that they owe the Government money. It makes them feel as if they they did something wrong, that instead of being the victims they were the perpetrators. I think it is important that we give them the benefit of the doubt. The former Minister of Veterans Affairs turned his Department around when he took over that portfolio. He made massive changes based on the premise of giving the veteran the benefit of the doubt.

That is what the motion of the Hon. Member for York Centre does. It gives the benefit of the doubt to those individuals who, through no fault of their own, through no attempt to beat the system, find themselves in an overpayment situation and unable to deal properly with it. I hope the Government is listening.

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, this is certainly an important motion introduced into the House by the Hon. Member. It is important because today there are thousands of Canadians who have third party attachments on their wages. The province you are in determines how much money you get out of your cheque. If you are the only person working in a family of four, in most of the provinces you can be assured that all you will get from your cheque is less than $200 a week because of a third party attachment placed there by the Government of Canada for an overpayment you received.

When you look at the Auditor General's report you always see—and this is what makes the news—that under such and such a program millions and millions of dollars were paid out to people who were not eligible to receive those payments. We were talking about unemployment insurance a minute ago. All those payments are called overpayments.

I listened very carefully to what the hon. gentleman who introduced the motion said and then to what the government spokesperson said following his address. What she said sounded very fair. Imagine, Mr. Speaker, that you owe the Government of Canada money as hundreds of thousands of Canadians presently do through no fault of their own. They are receiving a benefit from unemployment insurance or any of our social security programs. Of course, the rules vary from the Department of Verteran Affairs to National Revenue or the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

Thousands of people go before judges. I always recall the words of one of the foremost authorities on overpayments in Canada today. His name is Justice Dubinsky. He is a Federal Appeals Court Judge. He always says that the forgiveness of the overpayment is in the hands of the Minister or, in the case of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, in the hands of the Commission. He knows they cannot afford to pay it back but he cannot do anything about that. The court, in Canada, is not authorized to forgive an overpayment. That is in the hands of the Minister or the Commission.

The Hon. Member who spoke on behalf of the Government sounded very eloquent when she said "in cases of undue hardship", or did she say "in the case of extreme hardship"? I am not sure which she used because the wording differs in various regulations. "Undue hardship" is the most common expression.

In the case of undue hardship the Minister may—not shall—forgive the overpayment, or if it costs more money to collect it than the Government will get back, it does not collect it. She mentioned another one which does not apply to all social legislation, that is, if the error is made by an official of the Department it shall be deemed not to be paid back by the person who received the money.

• (1430)

The fact is that there are thousands of people in Canada today who are getting $120 a week to feed their families because there is a third party attachment on their wages by the Government. These are not rich people. These are people who had overpayments on a social security benefit, not from the stock market.

Members of Parliament go before a judge on behalf of constituents to say that a constituent should not have to repay a that particular overpayment. It was not his fault. He did not do anything wrong.

An Hon. Member mentioned a few moments ago cases he had where the Unemployment Insurance Commission made a mistake. The funny part about it is that it did not make a mistake because an overpayment and the determination of eligibility do not rest with the Department of Employment and Immigration. They rest with National Revenue.

When one applies for benefits, the official fills out the form, sends it in, and the cheque is sent. The error takes places after because the determination of eligibility in the case of the largest social security program in this country, unemployment insurance, is made by National Revenue. It has nothing to do with the Unemployment Insurance Commission. The Unemployment Insurance Commission has no more to do with determining eligibility of a person drawing unemployment insurance than I do with going to the moon.

Who has made the mistake? No one has made the mistake. The official down in National Revenue perhaps made a correct judgment. Let me give an example. An accountant working for a company by the name of Beothic in eastern Canada, which deals with fish products, was wrong and therefore made incorrect receipts for people who sold to that company. Therefore, 293 people now have to pay back to the Government amounts varying from $2,000 to $30,000. That occurred within the last two years.

I could list other cases where many people have been trapped by this. Somebody will say that they received a letter from the Government of Canada saying that they owe a certain amount of money. They want to know why. Is it because an accountant made a mistake in a company? The person, according to the law of Canada, under all these programs, is responsible for paying it back if a mistake is made even by the government Department concerned. That is in the Unemployment Insurance Act that the hon. gentleman was quoting a few moments ago.

The problem is that the Minister will not use the ministerial authority granted under the Act to forgive those payments. That is the problem.

There is only one other way to overcome the problem. It is to drag it out long enough in the courts to go beyond the three years which is normally the period after which one cannot be held accountable for money owed to the Unemployment Insurance Commission. Stretch it out as long as you can, ask for an adjournment or a postponement until you get to the point where they cannot collect it anyway. That is the only choice.

However, if people do not work the system that way or cannot afford the lawyers, in some cases they are left with having third party attachments on all their wages and end up getting anywhere from $120 to $190 a week regardless of the size of their family until the money is paid back. That is wrong.

Mrs. Monique Tardif (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, with your permission, I too would like to speak to Motion M-167 introduced by the Hon. Member for York Center (Mr. Kaplan). He proposes that the Government consider the advisability of prohibiting any federal department or agency which has in error made an overpayment to an individual under a social program from claiming repayment or withholding the overpayment from future payments to the individual, unless the individual is responsible directly or indirectly for the error.

On April 26, 1988, the Hon. Member also suggested to the House that the Government should not demand repayment for excess amounts when the recipient is not responsible for the error.

Mr. Speaker, I am sure we all share the basic sentiments expressed in the Hon. Member's motion. The federal Government would rather not make life any harder than it is for people drawing such social benefits as those paid under old age security, the Canada Pension Plan, or family allowances. We are aware that the recipients generally have a low income and cannot readily cope with reduced benefits.

I would point out to Hon. Members that the federal Government thinks it is important for Canadian men and women who are in a difficult financial situation to know that the amount of their benefits will not be reduced overnight. As an example, Mr. Speaker, I would say that under the income security programs which I just mentionned and which are administered by the Department of National Health and Welfare the procedure followed to recoup overpayments is very flexible indeed. In difficult circumstances, overpayments may be repaid in very low instalments, in fact as little as $1 a month in the case of people with limited income.

In additoin, Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the Old Age Security Act, the Familly Allowances Act and the Canada Pension Plan the Minister may waive such repayments in extraordinary circumstances, including unforseen difficulties, erroneous advice or administrative mistakes on the part of the Government.

The federal Government can appreciate the situation of low income and underprivileged Canadians, but still it has to answer to the taxpayers.

Overpayments under social benefit programs are debts against the Crown and if they are not recouped they must be offset through higher tax levies on all Canadians. After all, it boils down to financial responsibility, and I would suggest that this federal Government has done very well in that respect.

In the discharge of our mandate we have maintained a policy to recoup excess benefits by using procedures which respect both the people who are overpaid and the taxpayers of the country, but every year such overpayments still account for millions of dollars in government outlays.

Clearly, Mr. Speaker, no system is perfect. Further, simple solutions to the problem might lead to new problems in other areas. The Hon. Member's motion in my view is a good example. If implemented, his proposal would require a new, complex, and costly bureaucratic process to determine whether the claimant is directly or indirectly responsible for the error that led to the overpayment.

This process could be long and arduous, and generate various delays. Participation from public servants, judges and lawyers could be needed, as well as a relevant appeal mechanism. In addition to imposing a new burden on public servants and taxpayers, such a system no doubt would be frustrating and confusing for claimants, especially where their own testimony could be the only available evidence to determine whether an error had been made or not. No doubt, in a great many cases, a clear and satisfactory decision might be impossible. Therefore, such a system could lead both to a miscarriage of justice where the evidence was limited, unsupported or unverifiable.

Some people might suggest, Mr. Speaker, that there is another solution than the existing systems or the one put forward by the Hon. Member's motion, namely that the Government should delay initial payments on social programs until an absolutely accurate computation of benefits can be made. Or, alternatively, it could be suggested that the Government should make smaller payments while waiting for further information concerning the computation of benefits.

Such a procedure, Mr. Speaker, could however do significant harm to a number of claimants. For instance, one could wait up to two years after the initial benefit payment in order for the current Canada Pension Plan benefits to be adjusted based on an updating of the claimant's gains by Revenue Canada.

Similarly, benefits based on income under federal programs such as Guaranteed Income Supplement and Spouse Allocation normally are calculated on the claimant's income during the previous year for income tax purposes; under certain circumstances, they can be based on an estimation of the claimant's current income, subject to possible review.

Overpayments made in either of those cases would not necessarily be the claimant's fault. It is my view that serious attention should be paid to the matter before introducing a system, the underlying principle of which would be that an error can always be blamed beyond the shadow of a doubt to someone. Indeed, Mr. Speaker, when considering the practicality of the Hon. Member's motion and any relevant proposal, legislators should evaluate whether those very real negative impacts would be warranted.

As I explained, the ways used by the Canadian Government to recover overpayments made under social programs are both sensitive and flexible to Canadians who receive those overpayments, and they are indicative of this Government's responsible attitude toward Canadian taxpayers.

Mr. David Daubney (Ottawa West): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have an opportunity to join in the debate this afternoon on the issue raised by the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan). I am sure we all have sympathy for people who, through no fault of their own, are suddenly asked to make a substantial repayment of an overpayment to them. The bewilderment, the panic, even the anger involved must be considerable.

We have heard already this afternoon that there are a number of safeguards in place to protect Canadians who have been overpaid unwittingly by federal Departments. I would suggest that the worthy objectives in the motion before us have already been met or can be met provided those safeguards are compassionately administered.

In effect, this motion calls for the House to make a blanket amnesty for anyone who was overpaid. In other words: "Keep the extra money. Good luck to you on the windfall". The only people who would be asked to repay money to the Crown under the motion are those who are responsible directly or indirectly for the error. I think of the recent case three or four months ago involving a women, who I think lives here in Ontario, who received a cheque from the Department of National Revenue, I believe, for several hundred thousand dollars, thanks to a computer gone wild. On the plain reading of the motion before us today there would be no discretion whatsoever in the Minister or the Crown. They would be obligated to allow this person to keep that type of windfall. I think that where the public's money is involved we have to do better than that. I believe we need more checks and balances than that.

I believe that in order to judge whether any new legislation is needed we should first see how the present regulations are working.

I wish to take a few minutes to look at one Department in particular. Reference has already been made to it by the Hon. Member from the New Democratic Party who spoke earlier. I refer to the Department of Veterans Affairs. This is a Department which sends out over 200,000 cheques every month. Disability pensions, which are not subject to a means test, account for 144,000 of those monthly cheques.

With such a volume it is not surprising that overpayments are made from time to time. For instance, a veteran may die and his widow may forget to inform Veterans Affairs of his death for a period of time.

Naturally, every possible effort is made to recover these overpayments. It is worth noting that the recovery rate is in the 90 per cent to 95 per cent range. What that tells us is that Canadians are honest. They do not want to receive a benefit to which they are not entitled. They are very understanding when they realize that they have received money and are not entitled to it. Generally, they are quite willing to pay it back.

For the other 10 per cent or so this is where the safeguards come in. When it is plain that recovery in whole or in part could result in undue hardship to a veteran or his family, a recommendation for recovery of a partial settlement or for a total write-off is made under Section 18 of the Financial Administration Act.

It is important to know that recommendations for write-offs are also considered seriously when it is clearly evident that an overpayment was due to an administrative error.

I want to outline how Veterans Affairs handles the question of overpayments involving war veterans and civilian war allowances. These benefits are only paid to needy veterans. In other words, they are subject to a means test.

There are over 64,000 veterans or their families receiving allowances. Given the average age of this clientele overpayments do occur. The whole nature of the allowance program means that at age 65 the male veteran becomes eligible for Health and Welfare support programs and so is less dependent on Veterans Affairs.

Because of this transition the War Veterans Allowance Program administration was overhauled in 1986 in order to cut down on overpayments. It is now closely aligned to the Guaranteed Income Supplement and spouses' allowance programs of Health and Welfare. This alignment I am advised has greatly reduced the chance and the number of overpayments.

One key improvement was the annual reporting by war veterans allowance recipients of changes in their financial status and the subsequent adjustment of Veterans Affairs in the annual rate of payment. But overpayments still do occur, and doubtless always will.

I think it is instructive to see how Veterans Affairs deals with these overpayments. The then Minister of Veterans Affairs, the Hon. Member for Northumberland (Mr. Hees), told his Department in 1984 when we formed the Government that he wanted all veterans and their dependants to be treated with the utmost generosity. That instruction has been followed to the letter when it comes to overpayments. The remission of an overpayment is usually the most favoured position.

I think this is illustrated by the operational guidelines given to to those involved with the allowance program. I would like to quote the opening paragraphs in full because I think they render this motion unnecessary. They state:

> The very nature of the services provided under the Acts and Regulations administered under the direction of the Minister of Veterans Affairs dictates that the general policy and overriding principle to be considered in the handling of overpayments must be one that is based on justice, equity, compassion and human dignity.
> Translated into practice, this means that all cases, remission of an overpayment must be considered before any further action is taken. If it has been determined that the overpayments are not eligible for remission, the subsequent recovery or deletion action should never, in any case, deprive the veterans or his dependants of any moneys required to live in dignity.

I suggest that those instructions to bureaucrats on the front line are more compassionate and effective than any new legislation we could pass today.

Mr. Jean-Guy Hudon (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to speak today to motion No. 167 which was moved by the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan) and which states:

> That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should consider the advisability of prohibiting—

Already the wording of the motion seems to indicate that there is something tortuous about this.

As I was listening to his remarks a while ago, I could not help wondering how it is that as a former Solicitor General and Cabinet Minister, he could move such a motion.

How can he ask the Government to consider the advisability of not seeking repayment when an overpayment has occurred? Does he not realize that such a situation could be interpreted as a way for the Government to encourage incompetence and for the individual to justify keeping the money by arguing: I may not be entitled to this money, but why should I advise them of this overpayment, since they are not going to ask me to pay it back? I suggest that we are here to develop and emphasize the competence of our employees and also promote integrity.

Mr. Speaker, it is clear that such a motion will look very nice in Hansard or in householder mailings. Yet, this Hon. Member who sat on Government benches for 15 years would have been taken much more seriously if he had moved this motion at that time, instead of waiting until he sits in the Opposition. But since we live in a democratic system, I will deal with this proposal. If I may, I should like to develop the two major ideas I put across a while ago by providing concrete examples associated with the unemployment insurance scheme. A great many people have visited my office—you know how in a hurry people are when they visit their elected representatives—to ask me to rush a decision concerning an employment insurance application. It is not dishonest but quite normal. When a man or woman working in the Beauharnois—Salaberry riding—or any city or town for that matter—does not get his or her unemployment insurance benefits they pay us a visit and accuse federal employees of procrastinating, for they have bills to pay.

Our employees, on the other hand, must be very careful with our taxpayers' money, they have to go by the book, and I am full of admiration for all those working in unemployment insurance offices who always hear bad news and never good news. As their former Parliamentary Secretary, I saw the long line-ups in the morning and I am full of admiration. It is a job that has to be done, but let me tell you that you forget about the 3, 200 others who got their cheques in time when every morning you get complaints from 40 or 50 people who blame the delays on your incompetence.

What's happening, for example, at the Unemployment Insurance Commission? What would happen in a Commission or Government where the staff are not responsible or where they are . . . But how far can responsibility take us? If a civil servant makes an error resulting in an overpayment, can the Government claim repayment? I think that government officials would be the first to be unhappy with such a law because it would minimize their role and bring discredit upon the civil service. People could ask John Doe: "Why don't you make a mistake and give me just a little more; it doesn't matter since they can't touch you." I am sure that most if not all our civil servants are honest people and would not entertain such a suggestion. That is primarily why they try to respect the laws and regulations. On the other hand, as I said a few moments ago, I don't know if most citizens would be happy with such a law that, in fact, encourages a certain flexibility in its enforcement.

If I were to get $2,000 more than I usually draw in family allowances it seems to me I would notice. The fact that I get an extra $2,000 in benefits does not automatically mean that it is due to me, it is something that does not belong to me!

What is to be done for example in a case like the unemployment insurance incident I referred to earlier? People imagine that if the UIC paid $2,000 too much it was not aware of it. Imagine a citizen saying he did not know! "If you got an overpayment of $2,000 you have to pay it back!" Generally speaking, I must say that people were aware of it.

Again recently, unemployment insurance recipients came to see me at my office. Yet we know very well that full-time students are not entitled to unemployment benefits. He was overpaid by mistake because the inquiry had not been completed and a false statement was made.

In such cases, Mr. Speaker, the Unemployment Insurance Commission takes the situation into account. In the case I just mentioned there are two important elements: first an administrative error and, second, a false statement. This is altogether different from a case where there has been a clerical error, for example, and the individual receives a cheque for $182 when in fact the benefits should not be more than $172. I can understand an average man not realizing he is getting $10 more a week. But I am sure he can tell the difference when he aplies for unemployment benefits to which he is not entitled.

Mr. Speaker, the UIC takes into account specific cases and the situation of the person who has been overpaid. Where for instance repaying the overpayment leads to undue hardship, I suggest, Mr. Speaker, and I am convinced that the appropriate afficials should, where there has been no dishonesty, schedule repayments so that the claimant can refund within the prescribed period, while abiding by the existing Act and regulations.

Mr. Speaker, this is a very simple concept because it takes responsibility into account. We, as managers of the Unemployment Insurance Fund, are using our money, not only government money. One third of the money comes from the Government. As we know there are three partners in this . . . employers and taxpayers also are involved. We have absolutely no right to be free-handed in the management of assets that come from the Government. But we have no right either, and still much less, to be free handed with moneys that are entrusted to us by taxpayers, moneys entrusted to us by companies and moneys contributed by the employees.

Because of the very nature of payments and the source of those funds, we must make absolutely sure that we are dealing fairly with all Canadians. It would be unfair, for instance, to those who had contributed, if an overpayment caused by an administrative error, is automatically written off. Some might suggest that the matter already was dealt with in another Private Member's Bill, right at the beginning, I remember it was in 1984 or 1985; it said that any debt to Revenue Canada should be written off. Well, simply preparing my income tax return and stating that I owe a debt and I will have it written-off . . . Nothing is as simple nor as nice!

Administrative errors of this kind reflect badly on our competence.

In closing, I repeat that federal employees must be guided by legislation which bars them from making negative value judgments. They also need such legislation for their own personal satisfaction. An honest citizens also want the money they provide for the poor to be spent wisely because, all too often, people jump to conclusions.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The hour provided for the consideration of Private Members' Business has now expired.

Pursuant to Standing Order 42(1), the order is taken off the Order Paper.

CRIMINAL CODE

MEASURE TO AMEND

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston) moved for leave to introduce Bill-329, an Act to amend the Criminal Code (protection of the unborn).

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House that the Hon. Member shall have leave to introduce the Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, since the Supreme Court of Canada rendered the Criminal Code provisions relating to abortion as being contrary to the Charter of Rights, Canada has been without any federal law regulating abortion.

The Bill I am introducing today is the identical Bill introduced in the Upper Chamber, the Senate, by the Hon. Senator Stanley Haidasz on May 18 of this year. That Bill is presently being debated in that place.

The net effect of this Bill would be to afford protection to the innocent unborn from the moment of conception with one exception and that is where the life of the mother would be in danger.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

PETITIONS

PROHIBITION WITH REGARD TO KNIVES

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and duty to present a petition signed by a number of constituents of Vancouver East. It concerns the high incidence of crimes, including murder, robbery, and sexual assault, which are committed with knives. This is on the increase in all major cities across Canada.

Whereas the federal Criminal Code and court decisions allow people to carry knives for self-defence, the petitioners state that this is directly responsible for knives being used in a variety of crimes. Therefore, the petitioners ask Parliament to amend the federal Criminal Code to prohibit the carrying of knives by citizens in public places with the exception of those activities where the use of a knife is integral to legitimate work or for religious reasons, such as in the case of the Sikhs.

CANADA CHILD CARE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed from Wednesday, September 21, consideration of the motion of Mr. Epp (Provencher) that Bill C-144, an Act to authorize payments by Canada toward the provision of child care services, and to amend the Canada Assistance Plan in consequence thereof, be read the third time and passed; And on the amendment of Ms. Mitchell:

That the motion be amended by deleting all the words after the word "That" and substituting the following therefor:

"Bill C-144, an Act to authorize payments by Canada toward the provision of child care services, and to amend the Canada Assistance Plan in consequence thereof, be not now read a third time but be referred back to the legislative committee for the purpose of considering Clauses 3, 4, and 5."

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. There have been negotiations and discussions. The Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) would like to be recognized on debate. I understand the Hon. Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby) had the floor when we adjourned this debate last week. I have talked with him. He has generously and very nicely agreed to step down temporarily to give his place to the Leader of the Opposition, with the proviso that he maintain his position after this speech, that is, that he be recognized for the 18 remaining minutes of the speech which he was going to make this morning. I would like to thank him and all Members of the House. I hope there would be unanimous consent to allow the Leader of the Opposition to take the floor.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier has indicated that there is an agreement in the House. I might say to all Hon. Members and to the public that this is an example of the courtesies that are extended in this place. I want to thank the Hon. Member for Halifax West.

I take it that there is consent. Is that agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, nothing is more important to us as Canadians than the future of our children. We want the very best for them. We want to give the next generation the very best we can give: good education, a good apprenticeship in life, opportunities for a meaningful job, a secure future. In terms of today's living, one of the most important priorities for the next generation for our children is affordable, accessible, high quality child care.

You and I know, Mr. Speaker, that society has changed dramatically in the last 20 years. Today only one in six Canadian families fits the traditional family pattern, the nuclear family: the wife at home with the children, the husband at work. Many families are headed by single parents, most of whom are young single mothers. More than half of all women with pre-school children work outside the home, but only about one in five of these children is served by an adequate child care system.

Hon. Members know that there is a child care centre here on Parliament Hill because some time ago we recognized the needs of the people who work here and the needs of their children. The same need exists right across the country, but it is obvious from this legislation that the Government of Canada really does not have a deep understanding of this need. The legislation before Your Honour and before the House is nothing more than a cruel hoax on the children and parents of Canada.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I could find at least a good dozen reasons for the importance of this debate. Today's debate will shape the future. It is a debate about justice and social balance. It concerns our children and grandchildren and the place they will have in our society.

What we are talking about today is of course not just a plan or a system to look after our children. What we are really talking about is the kind of society we want to build. Our policy will have a direct impact on social peace, family harmony, equality of opportunity, criminality and even the demographics of our country.

Families have to face very different challenges, responsibilities and objectives than our ancestors or even our parents did. By changing the family structure, the evolution of society has also changed the role and responsibilities of our governments.

[English]

We ask ourselves, Mr. Speaker, how the Conservative Government has responded to that challenge. What is the Government's approach to the future of our children? First, it must be said that the Government has dragged its feet for the last four years. We have had study after study, delay after delay, and only now, on the eve of an election, has the Government suddenly discovered the importance of child care. The three-year-old who needed child care at the time the Government was sworn in is now seven years old and no longer eligible for the programs under this legislation. The single mother looking for affordable child care still does not have it under this legislation.

Worse than that, the Government has been playing politics with our children's future. After four years of delay and double talk the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) is now trying to blame the Senate. Last week he posed on the steps just outside this House and declared to reporters that the women of Canada were not going to be denied child care by a bunch of elderly Senators. That is the kind of shallow cynicism we have come to expect from our Prime Minister. It is the kind of cynicism that I do not believe Canadians will tolerate any longer.

Let us begin with the facts. The Government hesitated, delayed, and postponed for four years the bringing in of this legislation. This Bill reached the floor of the House only on July 26. There were only two days of committee hearings. Before that committee there was almost unanimous condemnation of this legislation.

After four years of procrastination the Government had the arrogance to impose closure on a Bill of this magnitude and importance. When the Prime Minister blamed the Senate last week this Bill was still before the House of Commons; this Bill was still before the deliberation of Members of Parliament from all sides of the House. If the Prime Minister wants us to facilitate his timetable, his agenda for an election, he should tell us the date. He should let us know what he has on his mind.

Frankly, as a Canadian I would really like to know what the Prime Minister sincerely believes about this Bill. He slipped into the House of Commons early on the evening of August 11. He did not say much about child care. I have searched that speech and I cannot glean his views. I have no perception of what he really understands about the issue. The speech was nothing but a ritual bombast boasting about the flimsy record of the Government.

As I recall that evening, Mr. Speaker, even you were moved to accept the intervention of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Bourassa (Mr. Rossi), and point out to the Prime Minister that there are rules in this House that we have to speak to the subject, that we are bound by relevance. I suppose one really could not expect the Prime Minister to understand that, he so seldom participates in debates in this House.

In that speech the Prime Minister boasted that his program was better than that offered by Governor Dukakis or Vice-President Bush in their mutual quest for the presidency of the United States. The branch plant manager says that he is doing better than head office.

• (1120)

The last time I looked, I thought we were talking about Canadian children. I thought we were talking about improving Canadian social programs. To make a comparison with a country that has a completely different approach to social justice, to social equality, to fairness and opportunity, is both misleading and irrelevant.

When the Prime Minister spoke in the House on August 13 about trade, again his speech did not really deal with the issue. It was largely a list of citations from business people. It was a speech of paid endorsements. Surely in the speech to the House of Commons on this issue on August 11, he could have found at least one endorsement. We would have been presented with them if he had them. It is significant that he was unable to bring one shred of evidence from one recognized group in this country having any knowledge or appreciation of the problem facing the future of our children and Canadian families. There was not one citation. The reason was that he could not find any.

During these truncated, restricted hearings before the committee limited to two days by the Government, there was unanimous condemnation of the Bill. There were 40 witnesses, including the Canadian Teachers Federation, British Columbia Daycare Coalition, the Advisory Council on the Status of Women, the National Union of Provincial Government Employees, the Canadian Ethnocultural Council, the National Action Committee on the Status of Women. They were limited to half an hour each, but unanimous in their condemnation of this legislation.

We are prompted to ask you, Mr. Speaker: Who then supports this legislation? Only a Conservative Government, only that Government.

Inadequate child care is a major barrier to providing equality for women at work. It is not just a woman's issue. It is not just an issue for parents. It is an issue for all of us. It is an issue for everyone in this country. It is an issue for parents, yes; women, certainly; Governments, of course; and employers. But fundamentally it is an issue that this country must face and with which every Canadian must come to grips.

We need a system that catches up to the demand. We also need a system that provides minimum national standards negotiated with the provinces. We need equality of treatment across the country. We need accessibility that is equally distributed across the country. The Conservative Bill does not even come close to meeting those criteria.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, there is a major flaw in the Tory system, and it is that child care should be aimed exclusively at children of pre-school age. This means leaving thousands of school children alone, without supervision, for several hours a day for a number of years.

These are the so-called latchkey children, usually wearing around their necks the key to their home or apartment. It worries me, every time I meet one of these children with a key around his neck. I am not only worried but downright apprehensive about what might happen to them.

I think it is absolutely essential to take a comprehensive approach to child care that must not be restricted to children of pre-school age. By excluding children between the ages of 6 and 13, we would certainly save money today, but we would also incur a disproportionately high social cost in the future. It is my firm belief that Canada must have a child care system that is designed to give Canadian families the widest possible range of options and, within that range, child care that is of high quality, accessible and affordable.

[English]

We also know that Canada now has approximately 240,000 accredited places either in day care centres or at home. The Conservatives want to add a maximum of 200,000 additional spaces in the next seven years. That would less than double the number of places by the year 1995.

Some of the evidence that was addressed in committee indicates that based on past trends and the current funding arrangements, the number of licensed places would have increased by about 300,000 over the next seven years without the Government's Bill. The Government is saying that over the next seven years we will get 200,000 additional places. That is why I said that this Bill is a hoax. If your child happens to be No. 200,001, tough luck, you are out.

Moreover, by trumpeting this totally inadequate program, the Government is trying to make Canadian parents believe that it offers a solution to the problem. The reality is that it is no solution at all. The fact is that 70 per cent of our children who require child care services will still not have access to this program after seven years. We find that totally unacceptable. Canadian parents know that. Canadian families understand that. That is why, universally, they are condemning the Government for putting forward a totally inadequate plan for child care in Canada.

Part of the Government's so-called strategy for children is to increase the tax deduction for child care expenses. Tax deductions give the highest priority to those families in the highest income brackets. Under this legislation the family that happens to be in the top tax bracket and has two pre-school children will receive a total deduction of $3,600 per year. A single mother will receive $200. That is the Prime Minister's idea of fairness.

It is the same lopsided idea of fairness that has motivated the entire tax policy of the Government during the last four years. The rich get richer, the poor get poorer, and the total burden has been placed almost completely on the lower and middle income groups.

[Translation]

I think it is shameful that the Government of Canada has taken so long to realize it has a responsibility to ensure that in the distribution of joint programs to Canadians, the basic principle of equity is observed, wherever they may happen to reside. Establishing national standards would give Parliament and Canadian families the assurance that across this country, federally-financed child care services will not fall below acceptable levels.

Our basic criticism of this Bill is that it does not contain national standards nor provide for national accessibility. There is nothing in this Bill!

The Government's Bill is also disturbing in other respects. In addition to setting a ridiculously low ceiling on development of the network, the Tory program makes no provision for transferring to subsequent years any unused budget surplus for a given fiscal period.

This means that if for some reason, a province is unable to invest all of its federal funding within the prescribed time-frame, it will not have a chance to catch up during the following year. Here again, it is Canadian families who will be deprived of a service they really and urgently need.

• (1130)

[English]

I clearly indicated my position at the beginning of what I had to say this morning. I firmly believe that we must provide Canadians with a child care system offering a wide range of services of the highest possible quality. After having read this Bill, it is clear that families and community groups will not receive the support they need to develop a high quality child care system in this country.

We in the Liberal Party have committed ourselves to establishing a national child care foundation. This organization will provide groups with the funds needed to create and build the facilities which would best serve their needs. These facilities would then be eligible for cost-sharing grants to cover operating costs.

We on this side of the House are convinced that child care services in our native communities must be compatible with and not in conflict with their culture and traditions. Money put aside for native child care in this Bill is not only inadequate. It is discretionary and left to the whim of the Cabinet as to how and when to spend it.

We in the Liberal Party believe that any child care system that merits our approval must be based on two principles—on sharing the burden and on providing choices. Our proposal is that parents, the private sector and Government, provincial and federal, share the costs of the program. It will be a mixed program with more facilities and help for those who do not have access to those facilities, particularly in rural areas. It will give all parents a choice.

The establishment of a national child care program is essential. We must allow everyone, particularly women, to participate in the economic, social, cultural and democratic future of our country.

We must relieve parents in Canada of the agonizing choice between the children they love and the jobs they must have. We must invest today in young Canadians who will build the future of Canada. Any system should provide adequate support for low and middle income families. A percentage of this child care support should come from the conversion of the child tax deduction into a refundable tax credit. This support should allow an average family to pay for 50 per cent of child care costs, while giving low income families freer access to child care.

We must also encourage business, our professions, and private companies to provide quality child care support for their employees. They will immediately benefit in terms of improved quality of work, in terms of improved peace of mind and, indeed, in terms of minimized absences for family reasons. To promote this type of program, I have proposed a capital cost deduction which exceeds 100 per cent over five years.

This child care legislation now before you, Mr. Speaker, and before the House is not a plan designed to protect and nurture our children. It is a plan designed to protect and nurture this Conservative Government at the end of its mandate. It is designed to deceive Canadian parents into believing that the Government was serious when it said that it would give our children an adequate child care plan. It is yet another reason in the upcoming election that Canadians are going to replace this Conservative Government with a Liberal Government.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): It will be a Liberal Government which will give Canadian children and Canadian families a child care system of the highest quality, a system which is accessible, which is affordable, and which is available for every family in the country.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to continue the debate on Bill C-144, the Canada Child Care Act. I have particular reason to participate in the debate at this point, having just heard the best arguments of the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) against Bill C-144.

I must say, and I think you will agree, Mr. Speaker, that while the Leader of the Opposition was eloquent in his remarks, he did not provide one cogent reason for delaying the passage of Bill C-144, never mind stopping its passage in this House or in the other place through his friends in the Senate. I urge him to instruct his colleagues and his friends in the New Democratic Party to get on with the business of passing this piece of legislation so we can start on the road to accomplishing some of the goals and aims that he outlined.

I have to say that the Leader of the Opposition is new to the matter of child care, and especially new to its priorities in the House of Commons. On March 20, 1987, he made it clear to The London Free Press and to the students at the University of Western Ontario that child care did not have a high priority with him or with the Liberal Party. In fact, he said that it would be done responsibly, that it had to be done within the financial capacity of the country to digest it. He said that there were greater needs in national defence, a guaranteed income plan, and tax reform, but that he had first to create a system in which business could flourish, and that that was his Party's greatest concern. The words sound a little hollow in the House of Commons today when they are compared with statements made in the past with respect to child care.

That is partly why I rose to participate in this debate. It was not because of the outlandish comments made by some of the members of the Opposition in the last day's debate wherein the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—East Richmond (Mr. Dingwall) made comments which I thought were simply not in accord with the facts relating to child care or the provisions of the legislation before this House of Commons. I also heard the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) denigrate this initiative in terms that simply are not supported by the facts and the provisions of the Bill.

What is the purpose of the Bill that we have before us? This is another step along the road to an evolutionary process that has had dramatic changes over the last three decades with respect to the care of children in Canada. I think that some of us in this House are old enough to remember the history of this evolution and the beginning of it.

One only has to go back to the late fifties and early sixties to remember the orphanages that were present across the city centres of Canada, and I speak particularly of the City of Halifax where, in the 1950s, we had organizations such as St. Joseph's Orphanage wherein children were hidden away from public view because their families could not support them or, indeed, they were unable to support them due to their economic problems or for other reasons. It was only in the late sixties, 1968 and on, that there was a dramatic change in this attitude and, in fact, in the City of Halifax—and I was very much proud to be a part of this transition—St. Joseph's Orphanage was phased out and a new kind of institution was created which became known as St. Joseph's Day Care Centre and which is now called St. Joseph's Child Care Centre. For all that period of two decades it has been leading in innovative care for children in Halifax and in other parts of the Province of Nova Scotia. As I say, this was part of an evolutionary process which is ongoing and which is present in Bill C-144.

In dealing with day care I have specific reason to recall 1970 because in that year Nova Scotia passed what I understand at the time to be the first day care legislation in Canada. I was a party to the creation of that Bill, and I am very proud to stand here today and make reference to it. That too was a milestone in the evolutionary history of child care in Canada. I think there were people who denigrated that initiative at the time. In 1970 people said that this was not, enough, that it was going in the wrong direction, or that should try something else.

Those who lead the way always have to take risks. In being innovative, they always have to put their ideas down on paper and present them to the legislatures, to the Parliaments, and to the public and accept the criticism from those who would delay their actions and divert them from their goals.

Does the Leader of the Opposition and do opposition Members realize that in this very day in Canada the only access to federal funds for child care is through the Canada Assistance Plan? Do they not realize that that plan contains a means test, which excludes most of our married couples from assistance for day care services? Is that what they want? Is that why they would delay and stop passage of this Bill, because they do not want the very medium income families mentioned by the Leader of the Opposition to have access to high standard day care with government assistance? Are they against that? They simply say that we should take no action because they do not like the action that is proposed.

We heard mention of other features of this system, and nobody is arguing that the national strategy implemented by Bill C-144 is the be-all and end-all. As I said, it is part of that evolutionary process. It is part of going down the road to an ultimate solution to day care and child care in Canada.

Let us talk about the need for day care. I think that is what the Leader of the Opposition and his colleagues are forgetting. We have in Canada at the moment a real need. Some would argue that people should be left to their own devices in order to provide for their children. Some would say that providing a system of child care is encouraging women to leave the home. While we understand and appreciate the views of all our people, I think, on balance, we recognize that women in the workforce, married women with children in the workforce, are part of our society in this day and age. I think every Member of this House and most of the public accept that.

I think it is important to note that this is in fact reflected in the statistics. We have 60 per cent of women who care for children under five years of age in the labour force today. If we were to create a situation in which those women could not remain in the labour force but had to return to the home to look after their children, we would dramatically increase the number of Canadian families below the poverty level.

I understand that with a statistic of 850,000 families below the poverty level that would increase that number of families by almost a half-million. I think that that is an argument in itself for prompting the House of Commons and the Parliament of Canada to take immediate steps to assist the situation so that we will not have that reversal and we will proceed on the road to economic equality and not reverse our process.

One thing I have always noticed in my involvement with the social services field is that it becomes, in the words of a current TV advertisement, a "pay now or pay later" situation. If we do not provide the assistance required by Canadians, particularly young Canadians and indeed children, we will simply pay for it later in other kinds of social costs.

The ultimate cost is that of keeping a person in prison. That is the ultimate failure of society in providing social assistance to our citizens. We end up paying what we refuse to pay in child care and in other social services and benefits, in the cost of maintaining the person in a prison institution. That is really why we have to continue to look at our social services programs to determine whether they are adequate to keep all Canadians and all Canadian families moving in the direction of progress.

We just had an election in Nova Scotia, and we got used to listening to the hollow complaints of opponents, people who denigrate and criticize the system and so on. We have heard in Nova Scotia from the New Democratic Party, its view of a new world and its criticism of the existing world. What happened? It won two seats, down from its current holding of three seats. Some 30 of 52 candidates lost their deposits in the Nova Scotia election. The Leader of the New Democratic Party, that paragon of virtue, won her seat by 26 votes, and that is currently under recount.

Members of the New Democratic Party have no monopoly on virtue. They have no right to preach to the people of Canada and to tell them what to do, because the people of Canada, particularly those taxpayers who are directly involved in government expenditures, know what kind of services they can afford. They are now squawking. They have come to life and they are worried. Nationally, they are saying the same things that their counterparts in Nova Scotia said, and it was rejected. They have dropped in popular vote. Their two winning candidates only had 36 per cent of the vote, the minimum required for victory. When we hear them talk and shout, we know that very few people are listening, and thank God for that.

With that in mind, I want to review briefly in the time remaining the provisions of Bill C-144. We have all heard that Bill C-144 sets out the national strategy for child care. That national strategy is to build on the existing system, to take advantage of 20 years of accumulated experience of people involved in institutions like St. Joseph's Children's Centre in Halifax. We should not throw that out and start again because of some ideological position taken by some political pundit in the New Democratic Party or by the back-benchers of the Liberal Party. We have to add to what has become an evolutionary and sensible system.

What is the Government of Canada going to do? It is going to pay 50 per cent of the cost of child care across Canada in all its aspects, up from 35 per cent. Who could possibly oppose that? The Government is going to spend $6.4 billion over seven years, and it is going to add 200,000 new subsidized child care spaces.

The Leader of the Opposition told us: "Oh, no, they are not going to do that, because there is going to be over 300,000 subsidized child care spaces created in the normal course". If the normal course creates 300,000 new spaces, then we will have 500,000 spaces in Canada because the goal and determination of the Government is to create 200,000 new subsidized spaces. Again we hear the Opposition saying: "This won't happen. Don't pass the Bill because that won't happen".

My advice to opposition Members on behalf of the people of Canada is: "Let it pass. See if it does not happen. If there is no new subsidized child care spaces, then you can come back and complain. You will not even need to do that, because the people of Canada will know what has happened. Do not stop the progress and the measure because you fear some evil resulting from it that might adversely affect the political interest of the New Democratic Party or the Liberal Party. Let it go ahead in all its evilness, and see what difficulty transpires".

I know and I think that the members of the Opposition know—

Mr. Cassidy: It is a lousy Bill to put into place.

Mr. Crosby: —that their fears will not be realized, that that is not the purport of the Bill, and I will tell you why. It could not possibly be, because the Bill provides that national strategy will provide $100 million for a child care innovative fund. That means new directions for child care and that handicapped children who cannot be accommodated in current child care facilities will have an opportunity to have financial expenditures that will allow them to be accommodated. Are the members of the Opposition against that?

Ms. Mitchell: We want child care to be accessible. That is no way to make it accessible.

Mr. Crosby: If they are, stand up and say so. Stand up and say that you are against innovative action for handicapped children in our care system.

The other day I received a call from a woman—believe it or not—listening to the debates in the House of Commons. She explained the situation. She has three autistic children and she cannot find accommodation for them on a subsidized basis. This kind of innovation may resolve that problem.

Members of the Opposition say: "Stop the Bill. Get the Senate to stop the Bill. We do not want this". They are acting against the interests of Canadians when they say that. Then they say: "We want a national system. We want a national system right here. We in the House of Commons are going to establish a system for all Canadians, and we are not going to listen to anybody from the provinces when we do that". That is not a system of government in Canada.

We have a federal system, and each provincial Government plays a role in that system. I defy any Member to say differently. We all stood up and endorsed the Meech Lake Accord that assured each province participation beyond what they are now guaranteed in the Constitution of Canada.

Mr. Cassidy: What about national objectives? We have the right to do it. Do it.

Mr. Crosby: Now they want us to go back and say: "No, no, no. National standards. Forget about the promises". Pay no attention to them. They do not know anything about child care.

I ask the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy): What does the federal Government know about child care?

Mr. Cassidy: Nothing, according to this Bill. Nothing at all.

Mr. Crosby: I have not seen the federal Government under the Liberals in the last 20 years establish any day care centres. I have not seen them change any orphanages to new, modern institutions. That has been done by the people of Canada in the provinces, and they are represented by their Government, just as they are represented in this Parliament of Canada.

• (1150)

What we need is co-operation: co-operative federalism. Do Hon. Members want to go back to the Trudeau days? Do Hon. Members want to tell the provinces to shove it, that we are not paying any attention? That is not what national reconciliation is all about. National reconciliation is getting together, recognizing the problem, and proceeding to resolve it. That is what the national strategy on child care is.

I want to mention one other aspect of child care, which is tax reform. I did not stand up here the other day like the Leader of the Opposition did when he changed his view from March, 1987, threw out his documented views expressed in March, 1987, and took a new tack on child care. I started my campaign in 1981, and I have the Debates in the House of Commons to prove it. In 1981 I asked the House of Commons to change the tax laws relating to child care. Finally, eight years later, after four years of refusal by a Liberal Government, the Progressive Conservative Government is finally changing the laws with respect to the tax treatment of child care expenses.

We propose a child tax credit that will increase to $760 in 1989, doubling the allowance for child care expenses from $2,000 to $4,000 and removing the limit of $8,000. That is exactly what we asked for in 1981. It has taken all that time because, first, the Liberals would take no action for four years. The New Democratic Party never will be in power, so it does not make any difference what its Members say about it. Now we have a Government that will look at the problems, will study the issue, and will recognize that we have to be financially responsible in implementing these matters. The Government had a parliamentary task force look at the whole situation, responded to the task force, and came up with a piece of legislation that creates a proper balance between the needs of people in the area of child care and the limits of the nation and each province within the nation to provide that type of child care.

We have achieved that balance. It is not the end; it is not the ultimate; it is not a panacea. Canadians will still have to be careful in their expenditures. They will still have to be prudent in how they provide for their families. They will not get a bonus beyond that which they have earned. What we are getting is a balanced system and a recognition by the national Government in 1988, and never before recognized, that there is a serious obligation to provide child care in Canada. It is a serious obligation to the women of Canada who should have the full opportunity to participate in the labour force. However, more important, it is in pursuance of an obligation to the children of Canada to see that each child receives the type of care that will allow them to be nourished and to flourish in our society. If we do not, we will pay a price down the line. What we save in child care and in other social benefits, we will expend in other ways.

Let me conclude my remarks by saying that we have a goal in child care and we have a national strategy to implement that goal. It is a system that is responsible, respects the rights of women, respects the interests of children, and realizes that Canadians have to pay a price and that all Canadians should contribute to the payment of that price. It combines the national Government and provincial Governments, and the private and public sectors. That is what national reconciliation is all about. That is what co-operative federalism is. Jointly, as Canadians we can achieve that goal. All we need is not to be stopped or delayed en route to achievement of that goal by petty arguments in the House of Commons, by procedural delays, and by misuse of the process. Let us get on with the job.

Mr. Cassidy: In view of the commitment of the Conservatives to national reconciliation and the talk that we heard three or four years ago about the commitment to women, why is it that the Government has chosen to ignore the comments of the people who know best about day care?

In fact, representatives of some 40 groups came before the legislative committee on Bill C-144. All witnesses stated that the Bill was inadequate, it should not go forward, it was a bad Bill, and it represented a failure to provide an adequate base for expansion of day care services across Canada.

Why did the Hon. Member not stand up and ensure that the Government at least listened to women or to families from eastern Canada? Is the Hon. Member not concerned about the fact that not a single group from his constituency, from his province, or from his region, came before the legislative committee to comment on Bill C-144? Is the Hon. Member not concerned that only two groups came from the Province of Québec? From all of eastern Canada, east of the Ottawa River, only two groups were able to appear before the legislative committee. Does that not suggest that the Government was acting in undue haste because of the failure to act before?

The Hon. Member suggests that it is a bad Bill but that it is the Bill that is here, so let us go forward and do it. Is that not a ridiculous manner in which to treat families across Canada who have need of adequate child care services and who will not get it with Bill C-144?

Mr. Crosby: If the Government of Canada did not want to listen to the people of Canada on the subject of child care, did not want to afford an opportunity to groups to make representations, why did it allow a parliamentary task force to be appointed? Why did it allow that task force to sit? Why did it allow the task force to send out invitations to all interested parties to come before the task force? Obviously, it was because the Government of Canada did want to consult with interested parties. Nobody ever made the commitment to take what was said in each case and inscribe it into a law. That would be ridiculous. That is not what the consultation process is about. It is about listening and then deciding, because it is the Government of Canada that is responsible for child care in Canada. It is not the National Action Committee on the Status of Women, although everybody wants to hear what its representatives have to say, and they said it. They said it in spades. Hundreds of pages were reviewed. Therefore, what is the point that the Hon. Member makes?

Is the Hon. Member mad because every recommendation made to the committee was not written into the Bill? Let the Hon. Member look at the Bill. The Bill does not deal with those types of recommendations. The Bill states that the Government of Canada will agree with the provinces on a number of matters. That is the system.

If the Hon. Member wants to debate the system, I suggest that he rise under the constitutional heading and debate the system. Do not come into the House of Commons with blind nonsense and empty statements and complain about the system in relation to child care when the Hon. Member supports the system in all its other respects.

Ms. Mitchell: I would like to comment on a couple of points made by the Hon. Member. First, he does not seem to realize that the report that he held up, which is commonly called the Katie Cooke report, is not a report of the National Action Committee on the Status of Women. It is a very comprehensive research document commissioned by the former Liberal Government. It recommended comprehensive child care. It is interesting that the Liberal Party has also not picked up on the recommendations contained in that report. That report recommended a comprehensive system of child care across the country that would be available to all children where there was a need and would be developed systematically over a period of time. I wish to correct the Hon. Member on that point.

I was on the special committee on child care established by the Government, and in my view the main purpose was not to deal with the Katie Cooke recommendations. In fact, we repeated a tour across Canada. Many people felt that was an unnecessary expense. We learned that most of the witnesses who spoke to us recommended the same things as Katie Cooke, and the same things as those recommended by the witnesses who appeared before the legislative committee. We must have a national program of comprehensive, quality, affordable, accessible child care. Of course, that is what this Bill is not doing. It is a capped funding. It finishes after seven years. It does not even give adjusted funding for the poorer provinces after seven years.

It is really a very restrictive program, even worse than the Canada Assistance Plan.

The Hon. Member referred to one issue with passion and I know he feels strongly about it. That is the issue of handicapped and disabled children, or special needs children as they are sometimes called. It is very costly to provide child care for that group of children. In any good quality child care program we cannot have a token federal initiative which may or may not provide a program here or a program there for a few disabled kids. Some groups who are specialists in this field said disabled children have the same right as other children to be in regular child care centres, just the same as they have the right to be in school. We must start in the pre-school years to open up spaces for them. That means we have to have extra capital funding and extra staff. That costs more. This program does not do that. We felt that there should be at least a $2 per space per day top-up for those kinds of spaces, and the Hon. Member thinks an initiative fund, which will be gone in probably a year, is the way to deal with disabled children.

Mr. Crosby: Mr. Speaker, I do not know how long that speech was but it certainly went beyond the bounds of a question. I cannot even begin to take the time of the House to answer it but I will try and do it this way.

I listened carefully to the Hon. Member and sometimes I think her and her colleagues in the NDP, not only in this House but right across Canada, do not want to solve these problems. They want misery. They live on it. That is how they get elected. If you eliminated poverty in Canada they would be gone. They would be dead. They would have nothing to talk about. They do not want to solve the problems of day care. If you cannot get everyone in there who wants a space, then close the day care centre. Leave them out on the street. If they are out there they are on television and the NDP have a problem to present to the House.

If that is your attitude, oppose the Bill because it does not spell things out the way you want. If you want to keep people out of day care centres, if you want to keep children from having improved benefits, stop the Bill. Criticize it. Complain about it. Worry about whether the cover on the report is yellow or orange. Point these things out. Carp and crab and stand in the way of progress if that is what you want to do, but you are going to have to stand up and be counted. In Nova Scotia people found out what you were doing and they are going to find out nationally.

You thrive on poverty. You are going to nationalize poverty to eliminate it, but you cannot do it that way. You have to go out and fight it in the streets. You have to fight it in the institutions. You have to build the system, not denigrate it, not carp about resolutions or solutions. We are trying to resolve the problem. You are trying to stop the resolution.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The period for questions and comments is now over. The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) now has the floor.

[English]

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Madam Speaker, I would like to thank the Hon. Member for entertaining the House with his comments and suggest that when he leaves this House, as he may well do after the election, he apply for a job at Skit Row row on Elgin Street in my constituency.

I would like to remind you that the history of this country over the last 50 years is that the New Democratic Party and the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation were the Parties consistently at the cutting edge in the fight for social reforms. Whether adequate pensions, medicare, or hospital insurance, it was the CCF that carried the fight. It was an NDP Government in Saskatchewan that brought in hospital insurance and medicare. The Conservative Party, backed by its allies and friends in the business sector, has consistently been on the opposite side, carping, complaining, bitching, and trying to find every way possible to oppose these social progress measures. I could go back to the 19th century—

Mr. Crosby: That is where you are.

Mr. Cassidy: —when people like the Hon. Member were saying we could not have laws to prevent child labour. They were saying Great Britain could not afford that and making similar arguments here. I think it is about time we had a Government that responded to the needs of average Canadians and their families. The legislation before us, Bill C-144, fails to do that. Nothing could indicate that more clearly than the fact that every one of the some 40 groups who appeared before the legislative committee on this Bill opposed it. They told the committee in very explicit terms how inadequate and flawed this legislation was.

The Hon. Member who just spoke on behalf of the Progressive Conservative Party, and I am not sure why they call themselves Progressive Conservatives, said: "Yes, it is a bad piece of legislation. It really does not do the job very well. However, do not criticize it. Accept it, try it out, and let us see what happens. In five or ten years we can turn around and maybe do something better".

There has been time enough and advice enough that we can do better now. That is why the NDP opposes this legislation. That is why we have been so unhappy and angry with the way the Government has pursued this legislation.

[Translation]

The Government has been in power for four years now. It was elected with a huge majority on September 4, 1984 and it has had a lot of time to implement a plan to finance and expand the child care system in Canada. Since 1976, Madam Speaker, the proportion of mothers in the labour force with children under three has increased from 30 to 60 per cent. Madam Speaker, if one includes all mothers in the labour force who have children that do not attend school full-time, the figure is now 75 per cent. So there is a great need for child care services, which is not at all being met by the inadequate measures proposed by the Conservative Government.

Personally, Madam Speaker, I am disappointed by the way the Government presented this Bill. Since its election four years ago, instead of bringing in a social reform package to implement a national child care system, the Government has chosen to use delaying tactics and schemes. It set up a special committee on child care, which admittedly heard a great deal of testimony and traveled across the country, but the recommendations made by families and Canadian men and women were ignored to such an extent that when Bill C-144 was presented in August 1988, this Bill was already challenged by the 40 groups that had an opportunity to testify before the Committee in the mere two days reserved for hearings.

Madam Speaker, I wonder how a Government that prided itself on fiscal responsibility and on planning could wait until August, that is, until the 47th month of its term, to bring in a Bill to expand child care services in Canada. Madam Speaker, what did the Government do in those 47 months? The answer is that it found all sorts of ways to delay its decision.

Finally, what did it do? At last, it presented a Bill! Parliament again sat during the summer, because the Conservatives no longer know how to manage Parliament's business so that it sits 10 and not 12 months of the year.

The House met, we had maybe three days of debate at the second reading stage of the Child Care Bill, and after that, a legislative committee was formed. Did the Committee give the right to travel? Did the Committee give the right to hear all representations from groups interested in this Bill? No, it did not. Madam Speaker, the schedule set by the Tory majority for this Committee provided only two days for hearing witnesses, during which we heard about forty groups. There were no groups from Newfoundland, from Nova Scotia, from New Brunswick or from Prince Edward Island to make representations on the Child Care Bill. So there was no testimony on the impact of this Bill on the four poorest provinces in Confederation. Madam Speaker, the fact that the provinces are supposed to drop their support for day-care under the Canada Assistance Plan in order to receive the assistance proposed in this Bill is certainly significant to many groups in the Maritimes, since in many parts of the Maritime provinces, financial resources are such that they cannot even pay half the cost of commercial day-care, for instance, which will be subsidized under the system proposed by the federal Government under this Bill. However, we had no testimony from these provinces.

What will happen in Quebec? Only two out of forty groups that testified came from Quebec. I think it was the FTQ and the Coalition pour les garderies de la province de Québec. Only two groups were able to testify within the limited timeframe allowed the legislative committee by the Tory majority. Subsequently, amendments were examined in Parliament, at the report stage. This took about three or four days. After that, we got to third reading. At the third reading stage, the Government imposed closure to limit the debate to one day, which is today, which leaves us only a day or a day and a half to listen to the debate on third reading.

Madam Speaker, if the Government was truly proud of drafting legislation that had the support of Canadian families and Canadian women, would the Government have imposed closure? No. The Government would have been so sure of the Bill that it would have put the Opposition in a position where it had to support the Bill proposed by the Government. Madam Speaker, the reason we are opposed to this Bill is that we know we can defend our position before the electorate in a general election that will be called very shortly.

As you know, Madam Speaker, we will be criticized. True blue Tory Canadians will say, as did the Hon. Member for Halifax, that if the New Democrats are opposed to this Bill, they are opposed to supporting day-care. That is not the case. Canadians know our Party favoured a bill that would increase day-care services at a faster pace, by providing more spaces in less time and at a lesser cost then the Tory Government's proposal. We are proud of what was said by my hon. friend, our day-care spokesperson, the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) and by my Leader, the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent), on the New Democratic Party side.

I notice that in the polls, the Conservatives do not enjoy the same support among women as they do among men in Canada, and one wonders why. Could it be partly because the Tories continue to ignore the needs of Canadian families and that, although equality is now a fact, young children continue to be more the woman's than the man's responsibility, more the wife's than the husband's?

Such conditions still prevail, although we are trying to change the situation.

Canadian women know that the Conservatives' child care policy will not meet the needs of ordinary Canadian families.

Madam Speaker, what are the weaknesses of this Bill? It fails to set national objectives, and everybody came here to tell us that under the Meech Lake Accord we have the right . . . The national Government of Canada, the federal Government of Canada has the right to define in the legislation the national objectives which the provinces must fulfil if they are to benefit from the assistance proposed in a Bill on cost sharing programs.

Second, there is a lack of vision in terms of available child care options. In ever more families people seeking good jobs have or will have to choose between working the 8-to-5 shift or perhaps from midnight to 8 a.m.

Madam Speaker, what can we say to waitresses and women who work as hostesses, good work in a restaurant but more often than not they have to work evenings. Wages and tips are better in upper class restaurants, but invariably this is evening work. Are child care facilities open at night? Of course not. In addition, Madam Speaker, the jobs that are open require people to work outside normal hours.

Madam Speaker, if we want to tell women that they have just as much right as men to hold well paid jobs in non-traditional trades, if we want women to apply for work as electricians, plumbers, long distance truck drivers and similar employment, child care services will also have to be available during non-traditional hours because this kind of work is not necessarily done between 7.30 a.m. and 5 p.m. This issue has hardly been mentioned and there is no way the federal Government can force the provinces to set up child care facilities during such odd hours.

Madam Speaker, we could not help notice that child care Bill C-144 gives no special consideration to a number of groups such as the Inuit and native people. Just one more problem ignored by the legislation! There is no guarantee that the necessary services will be offered by the governments or by child care centres.

Madam Speaker, the Government has promised the creation of 200,000 new spaces over a seven-year period, but we in the New Democratic Party believe this objective can be achieved within four years. The Government's premise is that the development of child care facilities in this country will slow down over the next seven years, and then nothing will happen after that. The funds made available for child care capital costs under this Bill will be expended at the end of seven years. After that, nothing at all!

Funds will be paid to child care agencies without any assurance that in certain cases existing child care agencies would be subsidized, something which would create new spaces under the measure proposed by the Government.

Madam Speaker, perhaps I might quote . . .

• (1210)

[English]

I would just like to mention as well that in deciding to give as much assistance to commercial day care centres as it is the Government is making a serious mistake. Among other things I fear that the Government may be opening the door—and the free trade deal will add to that—to for profit American day care chains establishing themselves here in Canada and to Canadians being unable to limit them—

Ms. Mitchell: The Liberals agree with that.

Mr. Cassidy: Apparently the Liberals agree with that—and by using the clauses respecting services in the trade deal to restrain them from any limitations by a federal Government or by the provinces. I know of some commercial services which are provided by small operators, let us say, a husband and wife who provide day care. There is a hands on delivery of service. Those kinds of services can, in certain cases, work well. However, some of those services, even where there is a hands on delivery and they are commercial, can work extremely badly.

• (1220)

I have been quite close to the case of a day care facility in the City of Nepean in the Ottawa area where members of the staff were paid from $9,000 to $12,000 per annum, but they were forced in certain cases to work longer hours than were being recorded on their pay sheets. In other words, their wages were being driven down by tricks like that. The operator used to come in and scream at her staff, and there was no qualified director despite provincial regulations that that be the case. The turnover was enormous. Often the requirements in terms of the minimum number of staff required to meet minimum ratios were not being met because workers were walking out in anger. People were not being paid. The workers finally got so angry that they chose to have a union but then the operator refused to bargain in good faith in order to establish a contract.

I could go on with this particular case. This is one of the problems which will emerge with the Government's unregulated proposals that do not set out national objectives, do not ensure quality day care, and will effectively leave things in the hands of provinces without really knowing exactly what is going to come out of it. In his own speech—

[Translation]

Madam Speaker, in his speech on the subject, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) stated that the Government wanted to introduce a child-care system that would be available, affordable, high quality and accessible. Unfortunately, the four objectives stated by the Prime Minister have not been met by Bill C-144.

As far as affordability is concerned, Madam Speaker, the Government will reduce instead of increase the growth of day-care spaces in Canada over the next seven years.

Affordability—if only it were affordable! Madam Speaker, in Sweden, under a Social Democratic government which has been in power for fifty years, a family with an income of about $25,000 earned by the head of the family and perhaps a joint income of $40,000 or $45,000 in Canadian dollars, pays about $200 a month for day-care services for each child. This is affordable, and this is a national service that exists across the country. People accept that. The situation is the same in France and in many other industrialized countries in Europe.

From time to time, people in Canada say we must compete with the Europeans. I agree. But I wonder why, in European countries, day-care is available for everyone, at a limited and affordable cost, while here many parents have to pay for informal services. They either have no access at all to day-care or they have to pay $800 a month, I believe, the service.

They used to say in England that if you were a member of the upper classes, as soon as your child was conceived, you had to enrol it in one of the famous public schools such as Eton or Harrow, to be sure the child would be able to go to that school once he was seven years old.

Madam Speaker, it seems we now have the same situation for day-care. When a child is conceived or even if you are only considering the possibility, if you want day-care for an infant under the age of two in Ottawa, you should consider registering it with a day-care centre because there is such a shortage of spaces.

We on this side of the House, Madam Speaker, believe that the Governement has proposed a poor way of spending taxpayers'money on children. Some people I meet on my door-to-door campaign have told me: I can't afford day-care! My answer was: You know that a lot of what the Government is saying is aimed at giving people in the middle or upper-middle class a minor tax reduction because instead of ensuring a good supply of day-care services, in terms of spaces, the Government is wasting a large proportion of this money just to ensure that seven years from now, only 25 per cent of the spaces required for children whose parents work outside the home will be available.

Madam Speaker, I conclude by pointing out that nearly a million children in Canada live in poverty. We have a problem of poverty in Canada. This problem is in no way solved by Bill C-144 on child care. All who are closely interested in our children's needs, in our families' needs, oppose this Bill from the Conservative Government. So I say to the Conservative Government: Withdraw your Bill. You presented it too late for it to pass before the elections. Propose something really worthwhile for all Canadian families.

[English]

Mrs. Collins: Madam Speaker, despite all the rhetoric at the end of the Member's speech, I think he is talking to a different group of Canadian parents than the parents I have spoken to in the last few months. These are parents who are very happy and supportive of the initiative this Government has taken for the first time to make some very significant advances in the provision of child care services and to allow parents choices. Both the profit and non-profit sectors will be involved in the provision of child care.

I would really like to comment on the fact that both this Member today and his colleague, the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis), spoke last week about the fact that representatives who appeared before the legislative committee oppose this Bill. To set the record straight, in the goodness of the hearts of government Members on that committee, they proposed that the witness who appeared before the committee would be chosen by the Opposition. We gave up our spots and enabled the opposition Parties to choose the witnesses. Naturally they chose witnesses who opposed the Bill.

There were 44 groups that appeared. They represented a cross-section. There were witnesses from British Columbia, from Alberta, from Ontario, and from Québec, and they were groups which had an interest. Most of them would like to have universally available and financed child care, a goal which is just not realistic in terms of the cost to the country at this time. I was not surprised when I heard that those groups were not particularly supportive, but I do not believe they represent the broad interests of Canadian parents, Canadian parents who support this Bill and support this initiative.

I do not find it very surprising that the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy), the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap, and other members of the New Democratic Party are asking the Government to scrap the Bill and are critical of it because they had a relatively small handful of groups and organizations from central Canada which were opposed to the initiative appear before the committee. I remind the New Democratic Party that the early committee, chaired by the now Minister of State for Transport (Mrs. Martin) went across the country—and many of my colleagues served on that committee—and heard from hundreds of organizations. They were presented with a wide variety of viewpoints and had a lot of support for the kinds of initiatives we have now brought forward.

This legislation is a major step forward and does indeed have the support of the majority of Canadian parents who will benefit.

Mr. Cassidy: Madam Speaker, I want to comment on the intervention of the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mrs. Collins) who represents one of the wealthiest ridings in the country. Perhaps tax breaks assist her constituents, but I would like to point out to her that if there were groups involved with the problems of families, of women and of kids across the country that supported the day care legislation, they have had six weeks or seven weeks to speak out. If the Conservatives agreed that those groups would not appear before the committee, why have those groups not spoken out in other ways? Why have we not been reading about their interventions in The Globe and Mail or The Vancouver Sun? Why have I not had correspondence from them urging me and members of my Party to support Bill C-144? The groups that have come forward carry a great deal of weight. I notice that the Canadian Day Care Advocacy Association was opposed to Bill C-144, as were the Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women and the National Action Committee on the Status of Women.

• (1230)

Does the Hon. Member for Capilano suggest that those groups have no credibility on this particular issue at all? Does she think that on day care we should be listening only to the Business Council on National Issues, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, or the Citizens' Coalition in London with its right wing views? Is this whom we should be listening to, or should we in fact be listening to women?

The Labour Congress, the Canadian Union of Public Employees, the National Federation of Nurses' Unions, the Canadian Association of Social Workers, the Ottawa-Carleton Day Care Association, the teachers, and many other groups oppose this legislation.

The Hon. Member for Capilano speaks of the initiatives taken by her Government and suggests that those have aided families. Does she mean the deindexing of the family allowance, the deindexing of the child tax credit, the increase in taxes on average families of more than $1,000 since 1984 while taxes on rich people were reduced to aid people in her constituency? Does she mean the deindexing of the child tax credit? Are these the measures of which she is so proud? Let her defend those during the election campaign.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I was listening to the exchange about the committee. I wonder if we could have an explanation of why, if the Conservatives wanted to bring people forward to the committee, to support their Bill, they limited the committee hearings to only two and a half days.

Surely if the Conservatives were worried that only one side of the argument was being presented they must share the blame for forcing the committee to restrict its hearings to only a few days.

Furthermore, I am given to understand that the opposition Members on the committee did not refuse to allow people who supported the Bill to come forward. If the Conservatives had people who wanted to come forward to support the Bill, they certainly could have had them on the witness list. I am sure Members will agree that the record speaks for itself. If no one came before the committee to support the Bill, that means that there was not a good word to be said about it by those who know the most about the child care field.

Mr. Cassidy: Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member's comments are well taken. I am puzzled. As I said earlier in my speech, if the Government wanted to ensure that there was adequate time to consider this matter, of course it could have brought its legislative project forward six months or a year ago. Instead, it was so tied up with the trade deal that it did not do so. Therefore it has boxed itself in. I suspect that this initiative will not be put into law and proclaimed because the House is likely to be prorogued for the election by the end of this week. If that is the case, the blame and responsibility are solely on the Government.

I appreciate what the Hon. Member says. I do want to say though, perhaps more in sorrow than in anger, that I noted with some concern that the official Liberal policy, although not mentioned by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) today, is that the Liberal Party stands for expanding day care as the deficit is reduced. That suggests that its commitment to child care is a little less strong than he perhaps tried to suggest in the speech today.

The Liberals have supported funding for commercial child care. and I heard the Leader of the Opposition say today that there would be a child care foundation set up which would mean, effectively, that the ability of the Government of Canada to determine national objectives for child care would to some extent be either delegated or mitigated, or perhaps weakened, by such a foundation.

I believe that in the forthcoming election we will be talking about the record, not only of the Conservatives on major issues like day care but also about the record of the Liberals. Many people whom I meet on the doorstep these days are telling me that they do not like what the Conservatives are doing but that they still cannot forget what the Liberals failed to do when they were in office.

Bear in mind, Madam Speaker, that while child care funding did come out through the Canada Assistance Program, as the number of working women increased and the number of families in which day care was a necessity increased because there was only one income earner, one parent, in the family, there was no initiative to meet that from the Liberals. There was no national child care strategy proposed. In fact, if anything, the Liberals were trying to cut back in a number of these areas through such means as the Established Programs Financing Act, which of course took away funding from the Canada Assistance Plan at the provincial level.

I remark on that because, while the Hon. Member's comments on what the Tories did were well taken, I would not want people to fail totally to remember some of the problems in this area which existed under the previous Liberal Government.

Mr. Rob Nicholson (Niagara Falls): Madam Speaker, I am pleased to make a few comments on this debate. I would suggest that there is probably no Bill, certainly that I have heard of or witnessed, that has come before this Parliament on which there is so much misunderstanding and misinformation. It is clear, and the point should be made, that Bill C-144 will result in improved access to quality licensed child care in Canada. If the opponents were completely frank and open, they would acknowledge that.

I think that members of the Opposition know that by delaying it until after an election they will be breaking faith with the provincial Governments which are, at the present time, expanding their child care systems in the expectation that 75 per cent of their capital expenditures, and in the case of have-not provinces more than 50 per cent of their operating expenditures, will be reduced by the federal Government. If they do not allow this Bill to go through, they will have to answer to the provincial Governments which will not be able to get the funding upon which they are basing their present plans. As well, they will be breaking faith with the parents and children who will benefit now from an expanded child care service program.

If some of the simple facts were ever to get through to the Canadian people the opposition Members would be justly condemned as obstructionists by the parents, children, and provinces in Canada which have so much to gain by the passage of Bill C-144.

Instead of allowing this debate to go forward they want to distract the people of Canada. They put out misinformation which I think they know is incorrect in an effort to obscure the purpose of this debate. We should make very clear that this debate is about helping children in this country and that help will be delayed if the NDP and Liberals get their way in this debate.

It would be an endless task for me and every government Member to try to refute all the misinformation that has been placed before this Parliament, particularly by members of the NDP. However, I would like to touch on a couple of the different areas that I have heard discussed in this debate over the last couple of days.

We will remember some of the comments that were made by the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis). Some of those comments were picked up by the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) a little over an hour ago. I would like to comment on some of those arguments and point out to this House why it is misinformation.

First, there is the red herring that while there were approximately 240,000 licensed day care spaces in Canada in 1987, there were two million Canadian children who needed licensed day care and that, therefore, this Bill's goal of adding 200,000 licensed subsidized spaces over the next seven years is totally inadequate to meet the needs.

I know that you have heard that argument, Madam Speaker, on many occasions throughout this debate. That figure of two million children represents every child in Canada under the age of 14, both of whose parents or whose single parent is working for pay or is a full-time student for at least 20 hours a week. Of these children about 850,000 are under the age of six while the rest are between the ages of six and fourteen. Can one jump to the conclusion that all these children, or even the ones under the age of six, required licensed day care?

Clearly the answer is no. That is not what Canadians told a special committee on child care.

• (1240)

The fact that children aged 6 and over are in school is a point that seems to be lost in this debate. They are in school for more than 20 hours a week and many under the age of six are in nursery school, pre-kindergarden or forms of non-parental care that are not counted in the total of licensed day care spaces. Many others are being cared for by a neighbour or relative in their home or in the parental home.

Also, many parents are able to arrange their work schedules so that one of them is at home with children while the other is earning. These facts have been completely ignored. I have not heard them mentioned at all in this debate by members of the Opposition.

We are told by opponents to the Bill that these so-called informal arrangements are forced on the parents by the absence and lack of licensed day care spaces. That is nonsense. In February, 1981, Statistics Canada surveyed Canadian families on their child care arrangements. At that time there were 1.13 million children under the age of six receiving some form of non-parental care. Of these, just 127,000, or 11.2 per cent, were cared for in licensed day care centres.

Parents were also asked to give up to three reasons for their current child care arrangements. The parents of only 89,000 children gave as one of their reasons that it was the only arrangement available or that they were not aware of alternatives.

Parents were then asked if they wanted to change their child care arrangements. The parents of only 165,000 pre-school children answered yes. When asked to give up to three ways they would want to change their arrangements, the parents of only 48,000 children gave as one of their desired changes an arrangement in a day care centre.

I am not saying that we only require 48,000 new child care spaces in Canada. The survey to which I referred was done seven years ago. While tens of thousands of licensed day care spaces have been put in place since then, I believe that the need has increased. But the survey demonstrates that the vast majority of parents then using informal child care arrangements were satisfied with those arrangements and did not want to change to have their child cared for in a licensed day care centre.

I would like to have seen a follow-up from that 1981 study, but I do not believe that the situation has changed to justify the argument that licensed day care spaces are required for every child of earning parents.

Those listening to this debate may not have guessed that this is an area within provincial jurisdiction. Our Government, under the leadership of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), is attempting to stimulate the provinces to add at least 200,000 new licensed subsidized spaces over the next seven years. What is the response to that? I have already mentioned the House Leader of the New Democratic Party. He said: "If the Government had done nothing at all, if it had not even introduced legislation, we would actually have more child care spaces than we have under this initiative". That is ridiculous.

Unfortunately, this comment was picked up by the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition. No economist or person has studied what has actually happened in the day care field who would honestly and fairly make that kind of statement.

The NDP House Leader says as well that at the moment there are 240,000 child care spaces in Canada, and the Conservatives have said that over the next seven years they would like to add another 200,000 spaces. He said: "Over that length of time on an annual basis, that is an increase of about 10 per cent a year. We have seen a growth of about 15 per cent under the status quo".

Let me indicate what is wrong with that argument. First, the goal set by this Bill is one of adding at least 200,000 licensed subsidized spaces, not licensed spaces. Second, there are not 240,000 licensed subsidized spaces now, as suggested by the NDP House Leader. There are in fact 160,000. Our Government is proposing to increase that to at least 360,000 over the next seven years. That is the appropriate comparison and the one that should be made in the House in this debate. Of the 15 per cent annual growth in licensed spaces between 1982 and 1987 which the NDP House Leader refers to, just under 40 per cent was in commercial day care spaces. That is a form of child care which his Party would like to abolish. Obviously he did not take the time to reconcile his quotation of the facts with this fact.

Third, I believe that it is a rather elementary principle of arithmetic that growth rates tend to decline as the bases from which they are calculated increase. For instance, if one begins with 20,000 day care spaces in Canada and adds 20,000 each year, the growth rate in the first year is 100 per cent, then 50 per cent and 33 per cent the year thereafter. In short, the growth rate falls despite the fact that we are maintaining the same level of increase. That is what is happening to the growth of licensed day care spaces in Canada. We are encountering the law of diminishing returns.

The provinces have told us that growth rates and absolute levels of growth in licensed spaces, much less in subsidized licensed spaces, would not be as sustained unless more generous cost-sharing arrangements than the Canada Assistance Plan provisions now available are provided.

Continuous growth in the number of day care spaces cannot be assumed. Between 1976 and 1978, the number of licensed care spaces available in Canada actually dropped by a total of 1,241. This occurred at a time when the female participation rate in the paid labour force increased from 56.8 per cent to 59 per cent, well above the average for the past 15 years.

Of those 160,000 licensed spaces which are subsidized either from direct operating grants or through parental subsidies, many are subsidized at very low levels, such as 38 cents a day or 50 cents a day. That is the present situation under the Canada Assistance Plan.

Under the legislation now before the House, we will not count any new subsidized space toward our goal of 200,000 unless it is subsidized by the province by at least $2 a day. We will not count the spaces that are subsidized at 38 cents and 50 cents. In other words, even saying that there will be an increase from 160,000 licensed subsidized spaces to 360,000 understates the extent of the improvement because many of those 160,000 spaces are subsidized at less than the level that would be brought about under this Bill. Only members of the New Democratic Party can describe that improvement as bringing the growth rate down.

In describing the recent 15 per cent annual growth rate in licensed spaces as inadequate, the NDP House Leader overlooks the fact that that is all his own Leader is proposing. He recently said that he would increase the number of licensed spaces over the next four years by 200,000. It is the same annual, inadequate growth rate of 15 per cent quoted by the NDP. The New Democratic Party states out of one side of its mouth that a 15 per cent annual rate is inadequate; then out of the other side of its mouth it trumpets its commitment to increase the number of spaces over the next four years by 15 per cent.

Finally, let us look at the growth rate record in licensed day care spaces in Manitoba from 1982 to 1987. When I was on the child care committee I could not wait to get to Manitoba. Manitoba alone would have the perfect system in Canada from all I heard about the NDP commitment. I was waiting with bated breath to find out what would happen in Manitoba.
