HARVARD-CAMBRIDGE RACE

English and American Oarsmen in Exciting Race on Thames

Race Will Probably Decide Superiority of English or American Style of Rowing --- Cambridge was Slight Favorite Before the Contest.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—The newspapers this morning devote many columns to the Harvard-Cambridge boat race, giving their readers all the information possible of every point of interest, the opinions of leading oarsmen relative to the outcome of the contest, the pictures of the men who will row, etc., and altogether do their utmost to make the occasion a great success. All of them admit that the race is an open one, but a majority pick the Cambridge crew to win.

The Tribune declares that it desires to see the race become an annual fixture, adding, one glorious instance makes us all sick today. The soul of sports is stirred to its very depths by this race. It is for no medal, cup or wager, the whole sweetness of the fight is in mere honor's sake.

Spouting Life declares that the contest will decide the question of superiority of English and American style of rowing and strongly advocates making the contest an annual event. We must not always expect the American crews to come to England.

The journal adds: "There is sound truth in the climate theory and it is neither too soon nor sportmanlike for all the races to be rowed in England."

Oxford and Cambridge must emulate their athletic confederates and visit America in turn.

The difference in weight between the two boats is 155 pounds in favor of the Harvard shell. Since the British Cambridge boat weighs less than the Harvard boat, owing to the short notice he had to use from stock heavier oars than he would have liked in building the new shell. The following are the latest weights, that of the Americans being striped, and that of the Englishmen in rowing costume:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Weight. Includes names like Row-R. M. Tappan, No. 2-S. M. Nash, No. 3-A. J. H. B. B. B., etc.

The race between Harvard and Cambridge today, over the famous old Putney-Mortlake course on the Thames, a narrow, winding waterway, four and three-eighths miles in length, was the first dual-inter-collegiate race rowed between English and American crews in thirty-seven years.

In 1869 Harvard sent a four to Putney to meet Oxford in a dual contest. The English crew was victorious by nearly four lengths. Today's race was the first between British and American university eight and apparently has opened the way for many similar contests in the future.

Interest in the rowing event has been heightened by the fact that Harvard's crew earned a decisive victory over Yale at New London in June last, while Cambridge was this year's winner of the race with Oxford. In a way the two crews were representative of the best college rowing talent of the two countries and the result has been awaited with the liveliest interest. The Harvard eight is admittedly one of the best aggregations of college oarsmen ever seen in an American shell, and every follower of the sport has been confident that in the international struggle on the Thames America's rowing strength was typically represented in the Harvard boat.

The race was brought about by the efforts of R. C. Lehman, a member of parliament, who acted as instructor to the Harvard crews for two years, his last visit to Harvard being in 1888. It was agreed that the two crews should be as nearly as possible the same as those which raced against Yale and Oxford respectively.

THE ELECTION OF THE "BLACK POPE"

Rev. Fr. Wernz a German Was Chosen as Head of Jesuit Order Today--No Crowned Sovereign Wields More Power Than He--History of the Order

ROME, Sept. 8.—Francis Xavier Wernz, a German, was today elected general of the society by the congregation of the Company of Jesus, in succession to the late Father Martin, who died last May. Following the election, a messenger was immediately dispatched to the Vatican to inform the pope of the choice, which, to become effective, requires the papal sanction.

(New York Evening Post.) The most important religious event of the present moment, and one of the most significant to be recorded during the year, is the election of a new head of the Jesuit order, which will take place in Rome some time during this week. Everybody familiar with the organization knows that until that result is officially published, all news concerning it will be so much guessing. The history of the Society of Jesus has always been rich in surprises.

There are many reasons why the Catholic world should watch expectantly the gathering in the German College, which is the point from where the whole order is ruled and directed. Not without truth can it be said that the Jesuit order, being nicknamed the "Black Pope," at long periods during the last 400 years has been the policy of the Holy See been guided, if not dictated, by the one man in the church, besides the Pope himself, who has to give account for his acts to nobody except the Holy Father. During the pontificate of Pius IX. this was particularly noticeable, and it is generally recognized that the church gained by this guidance of a group of men who had the courage in these days of scientific skepticism to recognize the logic of the Jesuit's point of view--of that splendidly unmodern doctrine, the infallibility of St. Peter's successor.

The present Pope does not seem to have sought or followed the advice of the chief militant body of the church to the same extent as his immediate predecessors, and to this fact many people ascribe the recent vacillating attitude assumed by the Holy See toward several of the most important problems of the day, and notably toward the crisis in France. This disregard on his part may be due in a large extent, however, to the fact that the order has had no real head since the death of Father Martin, for the position of the Pater Generalis presents such extraordinary features that nobody can live up to its utmost possibilities. And this is one of the reasons why ardent Catholics look forward to the impending election with so much eagerness.

There is no reigning monarch who holds powers so far-reaching as those entrusted to the Jesuit general. He is subordinate to none but the Pope, as has been pointed out already. Every member of the order is bound to obey his slightest word implicitly and unquestioningly. To all the rights and privileges granted the mendicant orders and the secular clergy are added those in the case of the Jesuits. They obey no commands except those of the Pope and their own superior; they may perform priestly functions, even during an interdict; they may grant absolution and exemption from church discipline; they may permit laymen to render service to the church in place of vows made; they may exempt themselves from fasting, from observing Lent, and from other such obligations.

This afternoon at two o'clock the payment of prize money will commence at the manager's office. At 2:30 the judging of the single carriage horses for a prize of a piece of silver plate will commence. The comparative statement of the returns for 1904 and 1906 so far is as follows:
Saturday..... 1904, 1096; 1906, 4072
Monday..... 3,275; 10,908
Tuesday..... 12,279; 11,384
Wednesday..... 15,467; 16,172
Thursday..... 17,480; 14,531
Friday..... 10,363; 9,012
Total to date..... 66,672; 65,779
Saturday..... 3,618
Total..... 70,290

All the indications this morning pointed to a large crowd being present at the exhibition today. This is children's day, and it is expected that the little people will turn out in large numbers. In 1904 the attendance on the last day was 3,618, but as there was a downpour of rain nearly all day on that occasion, the small showing is accounted for. If there are 4,511 admissions today last year's total will be equalled, and it is confidently expected that the day remains clear fully double that number will be present, and last year's total will be eclipsed.

Manager Milligan will not allow any of the exhibitors to remove their goods until closing time tonight, so that those who wish to see the fair today will see everything intact. The children started going to the building at an early hour and prospects looked good for a record breaking attendance. The orphans of the various institutions have been invited by the management to the fair free of charge, and it is thought most of them will take advantage of the offer. The Protestant Orphans' Home, the St. Vincent's and the St. Patrick's Industrial school at Silver Falls, have all been invited. The inmates of the Wiggins Home were present nearly all day, the fair free of charge, and it is thought most of them will take advantage of the offer. The inmates of the Wiggins Home were present nearly all day, the fair free of charge, and it is thought most of them will take advantage of the offer.

Yesterday about twenty of the patients from the Provincial Hospital, Nervous Diseases were present as guests of the management. They were accompanied by two attendants, and seemed to enjoy the show immensely. A number more are expected today. Dr. Anglin is sending over only those whom he considers in fit condition to attend.

This afternoon at two o'clock the payment of prize money will commence at the manager's office. At 2:30 the judging of the single carriage horses for a prize of a piece of silver plate will commence. members of the newspaper profession will assemble at the press room a few moments before the supper. Manager Milligan said this morning that this was not a dress affair, no excuses would be accepted. Any visiting news-writers are asked to accept this announcement as an invitation to themselves and to be present.

THE HARBOR RACES. This afternoon there will be two boat races on the harbor. At 2:30 W. J. Coates and Hilton Belyea will row for the harbor championship, and at three the motor boat race will be held. Great interest is being taken in these events and the harbor front will probably be crowded this afternoon to witness the contest.

ATTENDANCE WAS GOOD. Although yesterday promised very well in the early part of the day, yet later it clouded over and those who predicted that the attendance at the fair would be comparatively small, felt sure they were right. The afternoon, however, brought out a large crowd in spite of the threatening weather, while in the evening it was simply a swarm of happy visitors bent on enjoying themselves to the utmost. All the booths where anything was sold were well patronized and more than one dealer was forced to replenish his stock during the day.

The Pike was crowded, as usual, despite the dripping rain, and the various amusement enterprises did good business. In the grand theatre the attendance was particularly good, while Meyer Cohen's small brocadeed perceptibly as he saw the crowds swarming into his "back top." Probably the "laughing mirrors" show has done the largest business of any of the smaller attractions on the Pike. It was thronged at every opportunity, and the peals of laughter that came from behind the screen at the entrance proved as good an advertisement for the attraction within as did the extremely capable spic who held forth with megaphones at the door. The Indian village was also a centre of attraction on it. Mr. Dorman describes his visitor as a tall, dark-complexioned man, with a loud mouth and an extensive vocabulary of Billingsgate.

This morning a second instance of a press badge in the possession of one who was not legitimately entitled to it came to the notice of a Times representative. The Times man was riding down Leonard street when the conductor produced a press badge and said a friend had given it to him last evening with the information that it would permit him to the exhibition. The newspaper man apprised him of the fact that the press representatives were supplied with tickets in addition to badges and that an attempt to wear the badge game might result disastrously.

TREED TO STOP WATERING CART. Special Policeman Jim Ferris, doing duty on Mill street, created considerable amusement for passers-by on Mill street yesterday afternoon by attempting to prohibit a watering cart from sprinkling its contents upon the street.

The wind was blowing very hard yesterday afternoon and the dust was lodging on the faces of citizens. Officer T. Sullivan saw this, and it was his duty for the watering cart, as there were many complaints. Strange to say, the vehicle appeared and started to put down the dust.

Some good-natured young men saw the special standing on the corner and said to him, "Say, officer, ladies are complaining about the watering cart making so much mud that they get covered with it and they want you to make it quit." "All right," said Special Ferris, and accordingly he requested the driver to desist. That gentleman, however, told him that he had no horse or outfit, and proceeded with the work. The laugh was on the cop.

POLICE COURT. A pair of drunks faced the police magistrates at this morning's session of the court, and at his hands received punishment for their misdeeds.

MANAGER MILLIGAN TALKS. C. J. Milligan, general manager of the exhibition, wore a genial smile when a Times representative approached to solicit his views on the success of the fair to date.

"Are you satisfied?" said the Times man. "I am well satisfied with the Industrial buildings," said Mr. Milligan, "and I feel that if we can beat the industrial show at the next exhibition we will have indeed done well."

As for the attendance it has also been highly satisfactory when we consider that the weather conditions have not been exactly ideal. If we can eclipse the record of the last show I shall be especially well pleased.

"One thing I am not satisfied with and that is the way in which the season tickets have been switched on us. When the directors decided to issue books of thirteen tickets for one dollar each it was with the understanding that these tickets were not transferable and they were issued only for the persons to whom they were issued. In spite of this they were swapped around and in some cases whole families were given tickets."

Mrs. Rodney McLeod, of Roxbury, Mass., who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. G. B. Colwell, left on the Boston train yesterday morning for her home.

ONE GIRL STOLE FROM OTHER. Fifteen year old Mabel Cameron was in court today charged with stealing a watch, a bracelet and fancy waist from Clara McCarthy, aged 14, and daughter of the late John Callahan McCarthy.

The little McCarthy girl said she had been living with Mr. Cooper, 47 Sewell street, and the Cameron girl, who had been employed in one of the laundries where Mr. Cooper was also working, came to the house several weeks ago and remained there only a short time. They occupied the same room, and it was at the Cameron girl left that she had mislaid the articles referred to.

THE TIMES NEW REPORTER

HIRAM AT THE FAIR. Mr. Hiram Hornbeam had the time of his life on the Pike last evening. He visited the merry-go-round with Senator Ellis, looked in the laughing mirrors with Mr. Parley, M. P., had his picture taken in an auto with Mayor Sears, ate dulse with Ald. Willet, and told Ald. Tilly how to get rid of the rats that had gnawed holes in the door of the ladies' cabin on the Leeward.

"By Hen!" said Hiram. "This is the best night yet. Beats all how it wakes a fellow up to get into the crowd on the Pike. I just told the mayor if he wants to make that country market pay he wants to start a Pike where there ain't no 'at' hire some of these fellows to run it."

Hiram was early on the scene this morning, paying a visit to the booths where samples are given away. He says he could find them now with his eyes shut. His powers of observation are keen and his memory good in such matters.

"A dish of that breakfast feed--a cup of berries--an' some crackers--an' an--an' a cup of tea--an' then a smoke of that new tobacco--by Hen! That's good enough for me. An' it don't cost a cent."

Not that Hiram is parsimonious--or too much given to thrift. But the less he

BRUTAL ATTEMPT AT MURDER

VANCOUVER, B. C., Sept. 8.—(Special.)—Goaded to madness by continual teasing, William McLaren, a section worker on the Canadian Pacific, near Albergo, attempted to murder Foreman Albert Dow, stabbing the latter nine times with a pocket knife.

McLaren is a simple sort of fellow and Dow had made him the subject of many wittical jokes. He brooded over his humiliation and misery until finally, when he found him asleep in bed, he threw himself upon Dow, and before the latter was thoroughly awake inflicted nine stabs. One stab in the temple came dangerously near the right eye. Four other gashes were made on the head and the rest are in the arms. The would-be murderer fled to the hills after the stabbing, but was easily captured.

(William E. Soule in Boston Post.) It is hardly strange, in view of the tenable expressions of opinion as to the future course of prices should be heard. Yet, today, all were unanimous in their opinion that the support of the market was good— that the distribution of stocks on a considerable scale had not yet been made.

THE CLOSING DAY

The exhibition which closes tonight may show a larger total paid attendance than that of 1904, but such a result can only be achieved by a larger attendance today than on the closing day of the former fair.

The Toronto fair claims to have a surplus of $40,000. But Toronto can equal in one day the whole week's attendance at a St. John fair.

The Old Home Week in Fredericton was a success, and the management had a surplus. St. John should begin to think of a celebration of that sort for next year.

A jury has decided that the city should pay $1,000 as a result of negligence in the conduct of the ferry.

The Times is informed by a number of merchants that the past week has been a very active one in the stores, and a large volume of business has been transacted in goods of which visitors from provincial points are most likely to be interested.

Some lessons have been learned by the management, and there is always some justification, but the general result is satisfactory.

The buildings should be thronged this evening by a merry crowd, to say farewell to the fair of 1906.

A MAINE RAILROAD

Since 1891, when the Bangor & Aroostook was organized, up to the end of 1905 the increase in population in the three counties served by the road has been 50,000, and the increase in valuation from $41,000,000 to $73,000,000.

These statements, which appear in a Maine paper, suggest somewhat melancholy reflections to the New Brunswick man, who recalls the history of railroads in this province.

Referring again to the Maine road, its chief business has been derived from the trade in lumber, potatoes and other farm products and supplies.

The potato crop for 1905-06 was 7,000,000 bushels, against 6,000,000 the previous year.

The horse then started at a rapid pace around the nail works. Policemen Gosline, who was near by, caught the animal.

The exhibition which closes tonight may show a larger total paid attendance than that of 1904, but such a result can only be achieved by a larger attendance today than on the closing day of the former fair.

The Toronto fair claims to have a surplus of $40,000. But Toronto can equal in one day the whole week's attendance at a St. John fair.

The Old Home Week in Fredericton was a success, and the management had a surplus. St. John should begin to think of a celebration of that sort for next year.

A jury has decided that the city should pay $1,000 as a result of negligence in the conduct of the ferry.

The Times is informed by a number of merchants that the past week has been a very active one in the stores, and a large volume of business has been transacted in goods of which visitors from provincial points are most likely to be interested.

Some lessons have been learned by the management, and there is always some justification, but the general result is satisfactory.

The buildings should be thronged this evening by a merry crowd, to say farewell to the fair of 1906.

A MAINE RAILROAD

Since 1891, when the Bangor & Aroostook was organized, up to the end of 1905 the increase in population in the three counties served by the road has been 50,000, and the increase in valuation from $41,000,000 to $73,000,000.

These statements, which appear in a Maine paper, suggest somewhat melancholy reflections to the New Brunswick man, who recalls the history of railroads in this province.

Referring again to the Maine road, its chief business has been derived from the trade in lumber, potatoes and other farm products and supplies.

The potato crop for 1905-06 was 7,000,000 bushels, against 6,000,000 the previous year.

The horse then started at a rapid pace around the nail works. Policemen Gosline, who was near by, caught the animal.

The driver had been picked up by Policeman Gosline and did not seem to realize what had happened. He complained of his back and head being hurt.

This year the Niagara district alone will produce something like 4,000 tons of grapes. At present there are about 1,000 acres of land in Lincoln, Welland and Wentworth counties planted in grapes.

HIPPLE'S SUICIDE RECALLS OTHER SIMILAR CASES WHICH HAVE SHOCKED PHILADELPHIA

PHILADELPHIA SUICIDES, VICTIMS OF WILD FINANCE.

FRANK K. HIPPLE, trust company president, shot. JOHN S. HOPKINS, bank cashier, shot. FRANKLIN B. GOWEN, railroad president, shot. WILLIAM M. SINGERLY, publisher, banker, poisoned. JOS. G. DITMAN, banker, (supposed suicide), drowned. BENJAMIN H. GASKILL, broker. ROBERT ADAMS, JR., Congressman, shot. JOSIAH R. ADAMS, lawyer-politician, shot. JOHN FIELD, merchant, shot. JAMES V. P. TURNER, lawyer shot. WILLIAM G. ROTHERMEL, broker, shot.

(New York World). Wildcat speculation, followed or preceded either by deflation or betrayal of trust, has been responsible for a startling number of suicides in Philadelphia among men of affairs and prominence in the social world.

Beginning with the sensational failure of the Keystone National Bank, in 1891, which ruined many reputations and was as untimely as that of the president of the Real Estate Trust Company, and which resulted in jail for two of them, Philadelphia has had an amazing series of financial scandals and bank wrecks. Bank depositors have lost millions, and the largest amounts of the wildcat financiers were made in asphalt and in Consolidated Lake Superior. In these two companies, the public, largely in Philadelphia, dropped upwards of $100,000,000.

In nearly every suicide caused by wildcat finance attempts have been made to suppress the facts, as in the case of the president of the Real Estate Trust Company, whose suicide was kept secret by the members of his family, the corner and the corner's physician for six days, and was even suppressed by Philadelphia papers. So determined were these two officials to prevent the news from becoming public, that the physician filed a false certificate of the actual cause of death, ascribing it to cerebral hemorrhage, but omitting to state that the hemorrhage was due to a bullet fired into the brain with suicidal intent.

The circumstances surrounding the self-destruction of Frank K. Hipple and of John S. Hopkins, cashier of the People's Bank, who killed himself in March, 1922, are strikingly similar. Both men occupied positions of trust, were prominent in church work, had a right code of honor, and were strict observers of the Biblical injunction to remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy. Neither would take a public conveyance on Sunday unless the exigency were imperative. Neither would countenance the use of liquor or tobacco in any form. Hipple maintained this attitude to the day he destroyed himself, although he was associated with the most corrupt cabal of politicians in Philadelphia. The People's Bank was Mat Quay's bank. It was while he was in control that he wrote the famous letter to a henchman that he would "shake the plan tree."

The difference between Hipple and Hopkins was in the amount of their earnings. The cashier of the bank, who took away with only $700,000, which he lent on worthless collateral to a concern called the Guarantors Company, and the securities elected on the directors as of value, and when exposure threatened, he prepared himself for death and eased his conscience by writing a voluminous letter of contrite explanation to James McManes, president of the institution. Then he went into the bathroom of his house, on West Spruce street, and put a bullet into his brain.

The fact that Hopkins had taken his own life was kept quiet for three days, not because of any fear of a run on the bank, but simply to spare the feelings of the family. The Philadelphia Public Ledger, which was in possession of the facts as to Hipple's suicide forty-eight hours after his death, and kept it quiet five days, knew also of the cause of the death of Quay's cashier, and that the day he killed himself, but did not make the facts public. Hipple blew his brains out on a Wednesday, and public announcement was made by the directors of the bank on the Saturday following.

The corner of Philadelphia county, Samuel H. Ashbridge, subsequently, however, did not conceal the facts as long as Coroner King, of Montgomery county, did in the Hipple case, but the same policy was observed in the case of the room by the newspapers as well as by county officials. There are many things in connection with the Hipple tragedy which are expected to crop out as soon as it is deemed wise from the standpoint of journalistic ethics in Philadelphia to permit them to become known. Only the barest hint has been given of Hipple's interest in a beautiful woman, not a member of his household. To go into particulars would be deemed cruel and unnecessary, in view of the high moral character of the supposed suicidal pleasures.

Hipple always sought, in the employment of clerks, to bring in young men who were members and regular communicants in some church. He did not differentiate as to denomination. In addition to refusing to have as clerks any users of tobacco or liquor he was opposed to any of his employees reading Sunday newspapers or visiting race tracks. As there are no race tracks in Philadelphia, New York was the nearest place for those who sought that form of amusement.

denly in his home. The story was given out that heart disease had carried him off, aggravated by his financial troubles. After his death the community was startled to learn that he was in debt to the defunct Chestnut St. bank to the extent of $800,000 which he had borrowed on collateral security of $75,000. Joseph G. Dittman, President of the Quaker City National Bank, disappeared mysteriously and for two days it was believed he had been robbed and murdered. After a drive through Fairmount Park his empty carriage and the horse were found. Search for the banker continued for a month. Detectives went to all parts of the United States and large amounts were offered. Forty days after his disappearance the decomposed body of the banker was found floating in the Schuylkill River.

Dittman was brought up in the paper manufacturing business and abandoned it to go into banking. He discontinued paper for his old time associates on the finest sort of collateral. He sunk thousands of dollars in a silver mine in South Carolina. He went into the printing business to recoup his losses and lost more, and in less than two years, through his wildcat speculation and lack of care, he was stripped of every dollar he possessed. His mind became affected and the suicide theory was generally accepted, notwithstanding the judgment of the Coroner's jury that he was drowned by accident.

Benjamin H. Gaskill was one of the most noted exemplars of fraudulent financiers, who cheated his friends and then killed himself to avoid facing them. He was a chief and, for that, his discovery was not made until after his death. In his life-time Gaskill enjoyed the respect and esteem of his business associates. His reputation for probity was of the best and his credit was excellent. After his suicide a diary was found among his effects in which he spoke of himself as a Jewell and Hyde. It was not until a good selection here of the diary was made to avoid minds and that his aspirations were too high for the ordinary mortal to grasp.

Gaskill was not as pronounced a churchman as Hipple, but he made a practice of keeping up a friendship with churches. His religious fervor was of the Standard Oil Company. He kept a double set of stock accounts—one for the forged and raised certificates and the other for his legitimate business. His plan was to buy a certificate of stock, or say ten shares, and raise it to one hundred and then sell it to the Standard Oil Company and deposit it as collateral for a loan. United States Steel and Philadelphia Traction were his favorites for manipulation.

The news Philadelphia announced of death from natural causes was made in Gaskill's case, based on the ground that he had been ill for months, but all the evidence went to prove that he committed suicide. Robert Adams, Jr., familiarly known as "Bertie" Adams, former minister to Brazil, present as one of the original explorers of the Yellowstone region and member of congress from the second district of Pennsylvania, committed suicide by shooting in his home in the Metropolitan Club, Washington, on the first day of last June. Wildcat speculation was his hobby and he was an absolutely penniless, having dissipated a fortune of $800,000. He left a note addressed to Speaker Cannon, in which he said that his personal obligations exceeded his resources he was obliged to abandon the responsible position he held in the house of representatives.

Mr. Adams was fifty-seven years old. He was serving his seventh term in congress. Both he and his two brothers, Francis P. Adams of London, and H. Carlton Adams of Philadelphia, inherited a fortune from their father. The congressman lost money at cards, but the greater part of his wealth went in land investments and in loans on worthless securities. He sent good money after bad in the hope of recovery.

Mr. Adams never passed as a churchman. He was one of the few instances where others did not suffer through his rashness. His creditors were comparatively few and there was ten times as much due him on the day of his death as was owing by him to others. He was prominent in the social life of Philadelphia, and his suicide was the most deliberate of that which is record in recent years. After shooting himself he washed up the blood on the floor of the room where he fired the shot and walked into another room and sat down to await death, which did not come for two hours.

Joseph R. Adams, a prominent citizen and a lawyer and a noted figure in the most exclusive set of Philadelphia's fashionable world, killed himself in a hotel in Philadelphia six years ago. Adams was a man of rare culture. He took a liking for the excitement of political life, and affiliated himself with the Quay machine. He was nominated for judge of the superior court. A bitter attack was made upon him by a local newspaper. He was accused of having conspired with another man to defraud the public by a get-rich-quick scheme, in which it was alleged that hundreds of persons were induced to invest in the scheme.

FIRST HATS AND GOWNS FOR THE TAILOR-GIRL

(By Mary Dean.) As quickly as she escapes the shell of winter the butterfly summer girl once more leaps into plainness togetherness. Not that the stylish tailor things she is now wearing and wearing have any of the bombast of the actual cocoon, but airy flounces and floating veils are being swiftly dropped for the more staid walking styles of autumn. It would seem, indeed, as if fair women feared the decline of her charms, so anxious is she always to aid fashion in her quick changes, which if not always bettering, have at least the fascination of newness. Fine, new, fresh feathers make fine birds always, and though there is a special loveliness in any summer fashions, the first appearance of the autumn girl is made as welcome as the primal bud of spring.

This year as always, too, there is a tendency to repeat nature, for there are no flashing autumn leaves in France, in the matter of colorings. The deep golds and reds of maple leaves are seen in trimmings, which in infinitesimal touches will make somber browns and heavy grays piquant. Lovely black materials are also seen, smooth satiny cloths, fine trilled serges and others of a heavy blanket-like weave. Pretty vests showing embroidery in one color upon materials of another are features of the moment, and there is an effort to revive dressed and rough kid for these. Braids, galloons, stitching and flat bands are prominent decorations with first autumn gowns of tailor essence, and some cuts are so ornamental as to make other trimming unnecessary.

Chief among these are fitted coats with several basques made by the cut, the collar lapping showing also upon the body of the waist. Shoulder capes more or less large, in single, double or triple falls, are also features of the gown styles, while skirts may fall long short, as the wearer wishes. The limp grace of these utterly refutes the possibility of the hoopskirt, which, like the boggy of child days, fashion is forever promising her disobedient children. All the skirt styles deny even the remotest relationship with the honorless cage of olden times, though it cannot be denied that other dainty fancies recall some of the attitudes of the sixties. Such are the little caps which cross at the waist, some narrow drills which even of cloth may riot in wavy garlands over a jupe which should be serious, and certain tiny turbans, which look for all the world as if they should be mounted over huge chignons and tilted foolishly over the nose. The chignons are there, but instead of being at the back of the head, as formerly, they are mounted high on top. Still a fat side curl is shown in a painted plate with some of these charming little hats, so postage after a while the hair structure now so enormous may keep down.

Belted bodies with a peplum fall at the back, also suggest the little peplum things which were in long-trimmed wear times. And apropos of these same rear falls, they afford most facile and fetching opportunities of reviving last season's frills, for whether the bodies cut is empire or not, the peplum drop gives it a face a modish cachet. And now ancient the short-waisted empire styles—they are not downed, far from it indeed. Many bodies still show these influences in high belts, which, with huge buckles at the front, give a pretty slim figure a most fetching look. But at the back there is the coattail—almost invariably—with the waist line at the correct human quarter, or else so short as to give the wearer the piquant look of having outgrown her clothes. Sleeves? Ah, what a question to be answered, for whole books could be written on the subject of modish arm coverings. Some look as if the arm had been there all the time to be sewed over, so fitted, trimmed and altogether related. Elbow puffs distinguish those fluffed up, puffed, pleated, tied and de-highly elaborate sleeves, though a simple tailor one may be in the long modest gipet always approved. Still many more sleeves are short—even above the elbows—and these and the fussy hats worn at once mount a simple gown to points of splendor. Some regulations for smart walking dress given by a French journal are valuable hints toward a correct appearance. First the gown is comparatively simple—black, brown, gray or in any other staid Autumn color, and the silk petticoat worn repeats some dominant note in its accessories of the most faultless nature, shoes, gloves and all neck dressings looking absolutely new.

Great stress, in fact, is laid upon this look of newness, and so much does Parisian chic depend upon it that the smartest mondaine would rather wear a fresh gown in an inferior material than the grandest silk which had been "repeated."

The aristocrat in clothes in "Repetitions" is newness; it does not trace its ancestry back to the Faubourg Saint Germain, where if jewels and lace are real, much dowdy old finery still appears. So comes light gossip from the City of Fashion, and along with it a charming word on jewelry—the pretty pale green gem which strives as far as possible, despite the scornful word, to repeat some of the wonders of the Faubourg jewel boxes.

"The bayadere chains which imitate precious family possessions are the rage here. These are long twisted ropes of pearls mixed with gold and other stones, from which hang far below the waist sometimes all sorts of exquisite trinkets and pendants," such extravagant trifles are also quoted as frequent accompaniments to the plainest tailor costume. And now to go back to time, and had a moment with some actual models ordered by smart women. These are shown by the week's drawings, and effort has been made to choose styles which could vary the degree of dressiness. In the larger picture there are three costumes in individual models, shown by a prominent maker. The simplest of these is a short walking dress of the coarse brown serge, the odd trimming of whose Norfolk bodice peeped out of the neck. A cloth yoke which cut forms the breast pockets of the coat bodice is the most prominent feature here. There are also hip pockets in the same material and novel shape, a leather belt in the gown color and small sleeves docketed with an outside band of the cloth. On the serge skirt this trimming takes the form of down running bands over inverted pleats which open for the footfulness. The hat is a flat turban of brown velvet with a white fancy feather put on at the side at a shapely slanting angle. A tucked white linen shirt, with a high stiff collar and black satin string tie completes this neat get-up.

The second gown shows a fitted jacket with the triple basques mentioned. This is of black cloth, with a narrow crossed waist of white satin-finished linen madras. The elbow puff sleeves are finished with turn-back cuffs to match the triple scheme of the coat. The skirt is full and entirely plain, and the hat is made of a white felt disk laid in folds and ornamented with black velvet ribbon and a black fancy sash. A linen and silk stock and a scarlet silk string tie are the neck finish for the gown.

The third gown in this drawing is in a way the most splendid of all. A loose three-quarter coat and plain skirt comprise the model, with checked grey and black English tweed for material. But this modish texture is made fairly radiant by the vest, which is of white suede embroidered with black and touches of deep yellow. This vest is also cut with the lowness of a man's waistcoat to show a stiff front of white tuckered linen, while the coat itself has short puff sleeves and shawl revers. Black hercules braid outlined with narrow cordage in deep yellow trim the collar, sleeve cuffs and pockets of the coat, while the skirt hangs without a vestige of ornament other than a graceful fold of the accompanying headpiece with this smart gown will be specially remarked, for the helmet shape is to be one of Fashion's winter favorites. Black silk leavers is its material, with soft silk in black and deep yellow for the side revers, and a black ostrich plume for the rear fall.

In the smaller picture, two distinctly novel skirts are given. The smarter gown of the two is of bronze green cloth with only a heavy tailor stitching for additional ornament, for the four-trimmed skirt of this is its chief feature. A smart little black bolero hung over a blouse in rich plaids of bronze green and brown composes the bodice, whose full silk sleeves have deep cuffs of the cloth, put on high above the elbow. A walking hat of brown felt, with ribbon loops in same color, and a bronze green paradise plume, the headpiece.

Very sedate, indeed, is the fifth little frock, which is of deep blue cloth in autumn weight. The round skirt is covered by down-swinging panels, stitched and scalloped at the bottom. A deep puritan cape of the cloth composes almost the entire bodice, for this covers a blue silk waist whose short sleeves are made entirely by heavy falls of blue and black lace. At the front the cape is crossed and there, fastened with blue gem buttons in black trim, and above this rises a stiff white linen collar and little black bow tie.

A large turban made of the gown material, alternating with loops of black velvet, is the headpiece. At the side black quills give a stylish cachet to this.

"Stiff high collars you will see here the prevailing neck dressing, and with the neat string and bow ties worn with them nothing could be smarter for a stylish walking dress. The majority of the French people, in fact, dwell tremendously upon this severe style of neckwear, and some very fancy little Paris frocks display such stern neck treatments, though the high collars are sometimes so splendidly embroidered as to lose the too hard contrast.

The fine cloths in white and pale tints worn last winter, dyers affirm, take no new hues like the duck to water. Many reappear without a sign of shrinking, all this having been done in the first instance, and with sleeves made over, and some new touches, there is my lady so completely disguised her dearest friend would not know her.

VERDICT AGAINST THE CITY

The case of Collins vs. the city was concluded in the Circuit Court yesterday afternoon.

The plaintiff for $1,000. Mr. Justice Landry submitted 14 questions to the jury.

answered all favorably to the plaintiff, and on the jury's finding his honor ordered a verdict to be entered for the plaintiff.

In the forenoon Harvey Stackhouse, a deckhand on the ferry boat at the time of the accident to Mrs. Collins, was called by the defence.

The foreman, S. T. Goding, presented the testimony Mr. Skinner addressed the jury on behalf of the defendant and was followed by Mr. McInerney for the plaintiff.

In the afternoon his honor charged the jury and they retired at 4 o'clock, returning after about an hour's deliberation.

The foreman, S. T. Goding, presented the court's list of questions answered as follows:

1st. Did Mrs. Collins meet with an accident on the boat and float on or about the 15th of January last? Ans.-Yes.

2nd. Did that accident occasion her death? Ans.-Yes.

3rd. Was that accident the result of negligence on the part of the defendant? Ans.-Yes.

The Pure Food Movement

is very strong in Canada today. In no article of diet is purity so important as in flour, for flour is the basis of more than half your food. It is your duty, therefore, to see to it that the flour you use is pure. "FIVE ROSES" FLOUR is made by a process which insures absolute purity. From the time the wheat enters the mill until the flour reaches the cook it is untouched by human hands. The grain itself is thoroughly cleansed before grinding, whilst the flour is sifted, time after time, through the finest silk cloth, in order to remove the smallest impurities. These processes render "FIVE ROSES" an easy and satisfactory flour to use, and insure better results on Baking Day than can be obtained with any ordinary brands. ASK YOUR GROCER FOR IT. SACKVILLE. SACKVILLE, Sept. 8.—Percy K. Atkinson of Amherst and Miss June Bowser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bowser, Salem street, were united in marriage last evening at the home of the bride's parents. About fifty invited guests witnessed the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. B. N. Nobles. The bride was handsomely gowned in white silk with chiffon trimmings, she wore a bridal veil, and orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet. Her attendant was Miss Atkinson, sister of the groom, who was prettily attired in white organdy with trimmings of insertion and Valenciennes. The parlors were tastefully decorated with foliage and sweet peas. A wedding supper was served after the ceremony, after which the newly married pair took the train for St. John. Many elegant presents testified to the esteem in which the bride is held. The home of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Jones, Point de Bute, was the scene of a pleasant wedding on Wednesday evening, when their daughter, Jennie Juanita, was united in marriage to Edward Bodah of Boston. Rev. B. Colpitts was the officiating clergyman. The bride was attractively gowned in cream crepe de chene with trimmings of chiffon and lace, and was attended by her sister, Miss Sara Jones, who wore a pretty dress of champagne color. Miss Ivy Main played the wedding march. At the close of the ceremony and congratulations, a bountiful wedding supper was served. The bride was the recipient of many valuable presents, among them a substantial cheque from her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bodah, will leave on the 10th for their future home in Boston, Mass. The marriage of James Doncaster of Amherst and Miss Clara Bell is announced for the 11th inst. Alderman F. A. Dixon left yesterday for Chatham to resume his duties as inspector of schools. Mrs. C. N. THE EVENING TIMES, ST. JOHN, N. B., SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1906.

Pete the Peddler or A Boy's Start in Life

Pete's ears were wide open to the talk of the two women. He was forgotten for the moment, and the farmer's wife asked of Aunt Hannah: "But what did the man want of the old trunk?"

"Nobody knows. He said that it was an old family trunk and had been sold by mistake, but he probably lied about that."

"Jim Cumberford must have overhauled the trunk when he got it home."

"Of course he did. He's been dead these three years, but the moth-eaten clothes and that they had a great laugh at him because the trunk coat him a dollar. She knew it went to the barn, but she can't say who took it away."

"THE WIDOW CUMBERFORD, HERSELF, MET HIM AT THE DOOR."

"den in old trunks," said the farmer's wife after a while. "So have I. I'll bet there was something of the kind hidden in this one. If there wasn't why would anybody be hunting it up?"

"That was the end of the conversation. Before Pete went away he asked where the widow Cumberford lived, and was told that it was on his road and a mile away. After stopping at two houses he reached the Cumberford farm. The widow was a woman who liked to talk, and she also wanted to make a number of purchases. It was the noon hour, and she gave Pete a kindly invitation to eat with the family. There were three children, but all younger than the boy peddler. During the meal she asked him many questions, but nothing was said of the trunk until she had selected and paid for what she wanted and he was ready to go. Then Pete told her of the conversation he had heard and asked her for further particulars.

THE PIPE-STEM PUZZLE

In the clown's hand you will see what looks to be a difficult puzzle. Look at the solution on the left.

lugged it to the barn and filled it with hay and let the setting hens use it. I supposed it was there yet, but when a man came along the other day and wanted to know about it I could not find it."

"What sort of a man was he?" asked Pete. "He was a keen looking man and a slick talker. He said that it was a trunk brought over from Holland by his great grandmother, and he did not want to lose it. He was willing to pay ten dollars for it. Indeed, he would have found the trunk and had asked him double that I guess he would have paid it quick enough. He seemed terribly disappointed when I said I haven't the least idea. I can't see how it could have got out of the barn without Jim having sold it or given it away."

"And you couldn't tell this man where he might get trace of it?"

"No more than I can you. It seems to me you are also asking a great many questions."

"Yes, but you see I go everywhere, and perhaps I may come across the trunk for you. You are pretty bright for a boy of your age. If you ever set eyes on that old trunk come and tell me and I'll give you half I make out of it."

"Then you must carefully describe it to me," replied Pete. The widow did so, and he had no doubt that it was the trunk the miser was looking for. When he got away from the house he sat down in a fence-corner to think things over. Mr. Mims had hunted for years and not found trace of the lost trunk. He had been peddling for only three weeks and had heard of it. Right there was the barn where the trunk had been stored for three or four years, and now he must set himself to find out who had taken it away. He thought first of hastening back to Johnsville to give the miser the news, but what he had learned would not be good news. The trunk must be traced. And there was another matter that would trouble the old man. Some one else was hunting for that trunk, and some one else must know about the papers under the false bottom. It was no doubt one of the gang of old speculators that had robbed Mr. Mims. If they ever found the papers they would destroy the case against them. No, he would not go back to Johnsville until he had made further inquiries.

The boy tried to reason out how the trunk got away from the barn, but that was a matter that would have puzzled the head of a detective. Would a tramp steal it? No. Would a tin peddler buy it? It was possible but not likely. Would the farmer destroy it? No, not as long as it was in use. What then had become of it? After the boy had puzzled over the matter for a long time he rose up and moved on and tried to dissipate from his mind. That night was passed with a kind-hearted farmer, who refused to make any charge and gave him a good night's rest. The boy was not a tramp, and he was not a tin peddler, but he was a boy who had a good deal of sense and a good deal of courage. He was not a boy who would let himself be taken in by a slick talker, and he was not a boy who would let himself be taken in by a miser. He was a boy who was a peddler, and he was a boy who was a boy.

FOR THE KINGSHIP OF RATLAND.

BY SARAH NOBLE IVES.

There was a fight on, tooth and nail; a great fight for the kingship of Ratland.

The parties contending were Long-tail and Sharp-tooth. The two families had long been hostile, and as they increased in numbers and over the time had come to decide which should rule in the domain of Andrus Barn.

The first trouble had grown out of a change of residence on the part of Long-tail. The Sharp-tooth family had located itself in a fine corner near the barn stable, and the building of a new granary beyond the very partition where Sharp-tooth had his front gate-way made the narrow passage a matter of dispute.

The fame of the Granary region spread in time down to the far end of the hay loft, where the Long-tails were numerous, strong-boned and sinewy. It seemed absurd that the Sharp-tooths should get such a start in life when they were no better than the Long-tails. Indeed, they were not so good—could the Sharp-tooth family trace their ancestry back to the rats that came over in the Mayflower? Clearly, no. Therefore they must be put down from the pride of their nouveau-riche, and the Long-tails must do this thing.

The Sharp-tooth family, meanwhile, was ignorant of this growing jealousy, and on the night when the wheat was first stored in the completed granary it issued invitations to a gnawing bee, the results of the night's labor to be a hole leading from the granary to the hay-loft. Thereafter, those who assisted were to be allowed one hour a week in the wheat bin.

Every rat in the Andrus barn was there—big and little, gray and brown. All the smaller and less important families arrived punctually to the minute—the Long-tails came late. They stood aloof, tall, stalwart and gloomy, until the signs for gnawing began, then they fell to with a will. Father Sharp-tooth was at the head, his wife and sons and daughters close behind him. The others were fired by their splendid example and took their turns at the front. The hole advanced rapidly, and just as the rooster crowed in the neighboring hen-yard, heralding daylight, the teeth of the advance-guard bit the air.

A cheer went up from the crowd, and they fell to with renewed energy. Just as the sun rose the task was completed and the hole nicely concealed from the searching eyes of Farmer Andrus.

And now stepped forth Father Long-tail, towering and majestic. "I call upon Father Sharp-tooth to do battle with me for possession of the territory lying around the Granary Hole! He is only a squatter. You can show me deeds by which he is entitled to keep the rest of us in poverty and subjection. Who is he that we should give honors to his pleasure and profit? One hour a week, forsooth! Come out, Father Long-tail, and let this be a battle of honor to the strongest."

"Honor!" hissed Father Sharp-tooth, aroused to a fire of indignation. "Do you call it honor an in-battle for my own? Am I accountable for the location of the granary? Honor!"

"But," Father Sharp-tooth ground these sharp teeth of his. "You may take your choice, said Father Long-tail calmly. "Either you fight with me, or I and my family, which numbers twice your own, will fall upon you and annihilate you—male, female, the aged and the infant—none shall be spared."

Pete much good advice. He asked the boy if he had met any tramps thus far, and he warned him that there were fellows who would not hesitate to knock him senseless and rob him of his all if they met him in a lonely spot. He told Pete to strike as hard as he could with his cudgel in case any one laid hands on him, and if he was overpowered to give the alarm at the nearest farm-house. He repeated his words in the morning when the boy was ready to depart, and before night Pete had cause to remember them. Half a dozen miles away an exciting adventure awaited him.

the families not interested in this quarrel choose the arena and let them see that there is fair play."

The barn floor was hastily decided upon as a ring was formed. Pale, but with nerves of steel, Father Sharp-tooth faced his burly opponent. A hint or two and the fight was on, for life or death.

Jaws clashed and claws clattered, fur flew and blood flowed. Little by little Father Long-tail forced the adversary toward the barn door. Through the door, out of the door they fought. Into the open yard, where the cows looked on in amazement. Then two other wondering spectators arrived—Jock and Jenny. With towled heads and shining eyes, just out of bed, they looked on from the barnyard gate. The other rats slunk away as these human children appeared, but not Father Long-tail and Father Sharp-tooth. Their eyes were filled with the blood of battle; they saw nothing but their own advantage and disadvantage.

Jock and Jenny came on and stood close by the combatants saw them not. On, toward the hen-house wall Father Long-tail pushed his weakening opponent.

"Once I can get him behind that board fence where it is not so blindingly light I can see to make an end of him," muttered Father Long-tail. Father Sharp-tooth gave one separate lunge, and then turned and spaling eyes upward. Above him he saw Jock and Jenny, round-eyed and excited. Slowly he gave way and disappeared under the hen-house wall. Father Long-tail followed. "Ha, ha," panted the victor, "now I have you."

Jerk, jerk! What was that at his caudal appendage? Father Long-tail felt himself lifted, hoisted and swung in the air. He looked up and saw Jock, whose fingers gripped that long tail that he had left outside as he followed Father Sharp-tooth. He was caught as in a trap.

Father Sharp-tooth, looking out from under the sheltering hen-house, rejoiced. He crept away silently and said to the hidden rats that were waiting under the barn:

"Be glad with me, Father Long-tail is slain, and the Granary remains the property of the Sharp-tooth family." Then he fainted into his arms his friends.

THE FIGHT WAS ON, FOR LIFE OR DEATH.

If you go into the granary of the Andrus barn to-day you will find a hole that has been stopped up. That is the hole where, thirty years ago, Father Sharp-tooth met and vanquished (with Jock's help) his enemy.

THE WHALE'S BANQUET

BY CORNELIA GAFFNEY.

"How the billows are rolling to-night," said Mrs. Pickeral. "The Stormy Petrel is taking his revenge for the slight given his family," replied Mrs. Pike.

"I wonder if this will interfere with the Whale's carnival?" "I hope not, for we are all ready, and the disappointment would be great."

"I heard Mr. Whale spouting for all he was worth this morning because the Sword-Fishes had been invited."

"What objection should he have to the keen-witted Sword-Fishes, when he himself invited the Cod-Fish aristocracy?" indignantly replied Mrs. Pike.

"They claim the distinction of descending from the family King-Fish, and the ancient Indian Saw-Fish," said the demure little Miss Perch, who had been quietly listening to the squabble.

CAPTURING GREAT EEL

BY IRVING KING.

A Great Eel came up out of the sea and killed or drove away all the people in Songs-of-Victory Town. But, after a while, a man who had fled with his family returned, and, with his wife and ten children, began housekeeping in his old home.

There were nine boys and a girl in the family, and one day the eldest boy said to his father: "Why is it that nobody except ourselves lives in this village?"

Then the father told him the story of Great Eel, and how, at any time, the monster might return and devour them.

That night the boy told the story to his brothers, and said: "Come, let us go and kill that monster. I am big and strong, and you, pointing to the second brother, 'have medicine,' meaning by that that the second brother was gifted as a magician and could do all sorts of house-pocus work and sleight of hand."

But for a long time the boys could not find out where Great Eel lived, for their father did not know, and they met no man who could tell them when they went out fishing and hunting.

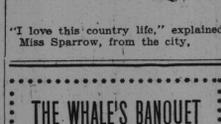

Finally one day they saw Old Man Heron sitting alone upon a rock on the shore, and said to him: "Ho, old Man Heron, you that are so wise, tell us where does Great Eel live, that we may go and destroy him."

"And how will you catch Great Eel?" asked Old Man Heron. "I will catch him with my hands," said Eldest Brother. "I will put medicine upon him," said Second Brother.

The third brother declared he would shoot him with an arrow, and so on all the nine brothers had some way in which he would destroy Great Eel. But Old Man Heron laughed and said: "Go home and listen to what the little bird sings."

The next morning a wren perched upon the corner of the house and chirped "Sine-wal! Sine-wal!" "There," cried the sister. "Great while King Crab and the Butterflies of the ocean held forth with the luminous Pholades and the Shark. The Electric Eel and Phosphorescent Algae added to the brilliancy of the scene.

During the height of the festivities, Count Oyster invited the host's daughter to take a stroll through Oyster Park. There he presented her with a beautiful pearl. Miss Whale was overjoyed; but the act caused a feeling of jealousy in the Fish family. They resented the attentions of the count, and the way he monopolized the balls of the evening.

The Annelides, Sea-Snails and Star-Fishes were sworn enemies of the Oyster family, and succeeded in drawing his fair companion away.

There ensued a battle never to be forgotten. Count Oyster met death bravely. The news of the tragedy spread rapidly through the banquet hall, and instantly the festivities ceased.

The Sea-Fish and Sword-Fish family attacked the host and hostess, who were trying to throw oil on the troubled waters.

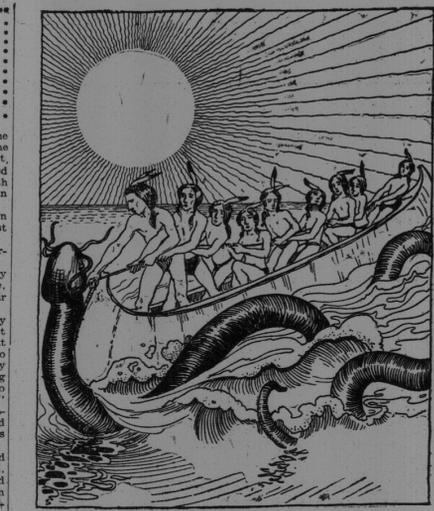

King Crab, followed by the Pikes, Pickerals and Mackerels, made their escape, as did the celebrated Fish family. The only one left to witness the affair was Mrs. Stickleback.

She, with her hostess, stood talking to Miss Perch when the trouble started. Miss Perch slipped in with the Pikes, but poor little Mrs. Stickleback crawled into a crevice and remained there will a chance came to escape. Mrs. Stickleback returned home assisted with her means of conveyance, and vowed never more to leave a dwelling place of her ancestors among the seaweed.

To-day the Stickleback family can be seen ruling over the sea-grass and vegetables of the ocean. If you are near the shore at the close of day, listen attentively and you can hear a whizzing, and see the sea-grass moving.

It is the time when the elder Sticklebacks are relating the story of Mrs. Stickleback's remarkable escape from that famous Whale's banquet.

THEY PULLED THE HEAD OF GREAT EEL INTO THE CANOE.

Eel must be caught with a noose of sinews, and I must make the cord for the noose. Go shoot wrens and draw up their sinews for me."

So the boys went out and shot wrens, and after they had shot them the second brother put medicine upon them and the birds flew away as good as ever.

When the sister had completed the cord of sinews the boys were again to Old Man Heron and asked him what now they should do. "Go to Sealion Town," said Heron, "and there get the latest canoe—the row and which makes the ocean crack with its speed."

The boys went to Sealion Town. First, they tried Fast-Rainbow Trout's canoe Fast-Rainbow Trout stood in the middle of the canoe and when the brothers paddled all together, he fired an arrow forward. It fell abreast of the canoe. Then they tried Stove-Head's canoe. He also fired an arrow from the middle of the canoe, forward, as they paddled, and the arrow fell into the water just astern of the canoe.

Still they did not think that was fast enough, and they borrowed Jellyfish's canoe. When the brothers paddled all together, Jellyfish had an arrow as Fast-Rainbow-Trout and Stove-Head had done, and the arrow fell back in the wake of the canoe. Then they paddled back to Old Man Heron, and said: "It is a fine day; tell us where the Great Eel lives, that we go and destroy him."

But Old Man Heron said: "No, brave men, it is a bad day," and the boys paddled home to Songs-of-Victory Town and told of their adventures.

Early the next day they went out in the canoe again to Old Man Heron and he shouted to them: "It is a good day, brave men! The mist will melt away with the sunshine."

Then he gave them directions how to find Great Eel, and said: "When it sleeps, then go to it. When it sleeps, phosphorescent light shines in its eyes. When there is no phosphorescent light in its eyes, then do not go to it."

They started off. After they had gone along for a while they came to the dwelling of Great Eel, and saw the phosphorescent light shine in his eyes.

Quickly Eldest Brother threw the noose over the head of the monster, and all the other brothers pulled away on the cord of sinews. They pulled the head of Great Eel into the canoe and cut it off.

Then they turned their canoe, and all together they paddled away for Songs-of-Victory Town.

But Great Eel was king of all the eels, and the eels came after them to avenge the killing of their king. But they could not catch the magic canoe. As the brothers paddled, they increased in numbers and over flowed, so fast that it made cracks in the water. Into the cracks Second Brother poured blue hellebore, and the cracks closed up again.

The eels could not begin to catch them, and so they came in triumph to Songs-of-Victory Town, carrying the head of Great Eel, and stuck the head on a pole in the middle of the village.

When the people who had fled from the village heard that Great Eel was dead and his head stuck up on a pole they all came back again to their old homes, and Songs-of-Victory Town was inhabited once more.

The people were so pleased at what Eldest Brother had done that they made him chief, and the sister who had made the cord of sinews was married to the chief of Sealion Town.

THE CAMBRIDGE-HARVARD RACE

Both Crews are Very Fit and an Exciting Contest is Looked for on the Thames Today.

According to despatches, both the Cambridge and Harvard crews are in the pink of condition for their race today. Referring to the big event, a despatch from Putney, England, says: There is still very little betting, although the Harvard men are willing to give 11 to 10 for the Englishmen to win. The Englishmen are again a little more confident, for they think they have in the Cambridge crew one of the best university eighties they have ever turned out. Guy Nickalls, one of the Cambridge graduates, who has been with the crew constantly since they began work, but Captain Filley, a punter, says that the Cambridge eight is weaker than Harvard's. To decide the bet the two boats were taken from the water and weighed.

The new Cambridge eight weighed 278 pounds and Harvard's 283. The Englishmen were much surprised for their new craft is 25 pounds lighter than their old one. In the race they will have to pull 15 pounds more weight in their boat, besides having a conveyor which weighs 20 pounds more than Blagden's.

CAMBRIDGE STARTS BETTER.

Cambridge starts better than Harvard, and it is very likely that it will lead at the start. Harvard expects to row a stern race most of the way, as she did at New London in '05. But the time trials have shown Harvard very fast and able to go over the full course and be strong at the finish. Cambridge is always badly used up at the finish and so far has made no remarkable time.

There is no doubt that Cambridge looks good and that the men are well together, but Harvard has made more life and dash, and the stroke seems less exhausting than that of Cambridge. Harvard hopes to wear out the Cambridge stroke and pull up in the last mile. This is by no means an unreasonable hope in view of Harvard's time at various points along the course, and compared with the time of the Oxford-Cambridge race.

In Oxford-Cambridge races the winner is always picked before the race, and the experts now say that Harvard has at least an even chance of winning. The Harvard oarsmen themselves are now as confident of a victory as they were of beating Yale at New London before the race was rowed.

Blagden is going over the course in a launch twice a day, and knows the course well. The course will not be staked off for the crews as it has been in the past, but crew must look out for itself and get into the other's water at its peril.

RULES FOR RACE CHANGED.

LONDON, Sept. 6. — An important change has been made in the Cambridge-Harvard University boat race rules, signed last night by Captain Goldsmith, for Cambridge and Captain Filley for Harvard, and by Referee R. C. Lehmann, and the effect of that is at any point in the race there should be a serious accident to either boat due to the fault of any individual and materially affecting the result, the umpire is empowered to restart the race, the same or any other day after consultation with Captains Goldsmith and Filley.

Similarly the race may be restarted if either boat should be interfered with by a steamer, barge or other obstacle. All the morning newspapers today give attention to these sportswomanlike conditions, the Daily Telegraph voicing the consensus of opinion in the declaration that "the spirit of fair race and no favour never was better exemplified."

ROLLER SKATING

Merritt Defeated Dalton.

A large crowd attended St. Andrew's rink in evening when the Lally children gave another exhibition of their skill on the roller. The boy half mile race was won by Black, of Amherst, time 1:46. Black took the lead at the start and held it all through, winning by twenty feet.

The next was a mile race from opposite sides of the rink between Merritt and Dalton. Dalton was given a great reception when he appeared on the floor. Both men made a good start. After the first lap Merritt led by a small margin, and at the half mile had increased his lead, and he won by half a lap, in 3:26.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 7.—Assistant State Attorney Barbour today received the following telegram from Assistant State Secretary Osborne who with James Keely is the Chicago Tribune, is in Tangier, Morocco, watching Paul O. Stensland who wrecked Milwaukee Bank of Chicago: (Stensland turned over to us.)

It is believed that Osborne and Keely will start home with Stensland immediately.

National Field Championships.

New York, Sept. 7.—The national track and field championships meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union, which began today and will wind up tomorrow, brought together athletes from all over the United States and Canada. The contests were held on the New York Athletic Club's Travers island oval.

THE TURF

The exhibition race meet closed yesterday with the second days racing at Moosepath and about 2,000 people saw Gloria, the fast bay mare of the W. J. Furubush string of West Newton, break the track record of 2:17.4 held by Phobos W. by winning the free-for-all in three straight heats, each of which sent the former mark skyward, the time being 2:16.2, 2:17.2 and 2:17.2.

The 2:10 class also furnished a lot of excitement. ROLLER SKATING

A large crowd attended St. Andrew's rink in evening when the Lally children gave another exhibition of their skill on the roller. The boy half mile race was won by Black, of Amherst, time 1:46. Black took the lead at the start and held it all through, winning by twenty feet.

When the Liver is out of Order colored, escars, salts, strong liver pills and purging mineral waters won't do any permanent good.

When a person is bilious, the liver is not giving up enough bile to move the bowels regularly—and some of the bile is being absorbed by the blood. In other words, the liver is in a weakened, unhealthy condition.

Now, purgatives don't act on the liver at all. They merely irritate the bowels, and afford only temporary relief. But FRUIT-A-TIVES are the one true LIVER TONIC. They act directly on the liver—strengthen and invigorate this vital organ—and put it in a normal, healthy condition.

FRUIT-A-TIVES also regulate the glands of the skin—and stimulate the kidneys and sweeten the stomach. When skin, liver and kidneys are normally healthy there can be no biliousness, no constipation, no kidney trouble, no impure blood, no headaches.

No other medicine known to science is so reliable and so effective in curing Biliousness as these fruit liver tablets.

FRUIT-A-TIVES are fruit juices with tonic added—and are free from alcohol and dangerous drugs. See a box for $1.50. Sent on receipt of price, if your druggist does not handle them.

WINCES AT READING OF HIPPLE'S LAST LETTER

Adolph Segal

New York, Sept. 7.—With only the barest outlines sketched at the first day in court of the men accused of complicity in the wrecking of the Real Estate Trust Company, Philadelphia is in a turmoil of excitement over the remarkable disclosures of money madness and of the greatest deception ever made by an undisciplined army of looting upon the funds of depositors in the history of any great institution of finance.

It is the probable arrest of directors and other whose positions in society and the business world are equal to those of the man who perpetrated the crash of the institution of which he was president and blacked his memory as an unscrupulous speculator and looter.

No scheme was too wild for Hipple and Adolph Segal when their need was ready cash. Overhaul of hundreds of thousands of dollars from Segal's wildest concerns were honored at Hipple's orders, and with the cash of the bank practically exhausted, the deposited money was drawn upon, and Segal's notes, endorsed by Hipple, were carried and reported to the bank examiners as cash. Good securities upon which loans had been made to responsible parties were fished from the vault and substituted again and again as security for loans to Segal, and the worthless stocks and bonds in his own enterprises, tendered by Segal for his enormous loans, substituted for the gold-edged securities for other loans until the affairs of the bank are in such hopeless confusion that it will take weeks to straighten them.

The men so far under arrest in this ten million dollar looting are Adolph Segal, financial hypnotist who evolved millions from nothing; William F. North, treasurer of the Real Estate Trust Company, vestryman of the high Episcopal church of St. Luke's in Germantown, financier with a record reaching back for more than a score of years, a man of social ambitions and influence, and Marshall S. Collingwood, assistant treasurer of the ruined company, a man typical of the class of "climbers" who basked in the sun of Frank K. Hipple's approval and who did not reveal the crookedness that he witnessed and which finally ruined what was supposed to be one of the most conservative and safe banking institutions in Philadelphia.

Into the story, as it was developed through the examination, were woven the details of note-killing, of perjury, of falsification of account books and of state records, of several brands of false pretences, of jugglery which overruled and consequent lack of case, unparaded and real, of incredible negligence by men in whom absolute trust was reposed, of outright thefts for the commission of any of which a poor man would have been executed publicly and railroaded to the penitentiary, of a disgrace which will endure for generations and a death which will be for years an example and a warning to tempted and faltering financiers.

When F. Wharton Hipple, the son of the defunct man, told how he found his father's farewell message and the accusation, "Segal got all the money," the yellow face of the promoter blanched to the shade of dusty dough, and he leaned his curl-topped brow upon his hand.

The highest light of the dramatic narrative was the testimony of young Hipple. His face was as though carved of stone when he told of the finding of the note, of the open-bottle manner in which he had been made treasurer of two companies with capitalizations of millions of dollars and urged to back them. Only once did he glance toward the tempter of his father, but in that glance was expressed an eternity of revenge.

THE RING

GANS AND BRITT TO MEET.

GOLDFIELD, Sept. 6.—As Jimmy Britt and Joe Gans have both consented to accept the offer of a $25,000 purse made by Ted Richard of New York, the only thing now left for the men to do is to come together and sign articles of agreement. "Will I fight Gans?" said Britt in response to a query. "There's nothing I would like better. I have been smearing under the stigma of that fake he perpetrated on me for months, and want to show him up in his true colors. I lost my head in that battle and struck him when he went down in the middle of a fierce rally. He invited me to the show and then said I paid him to fake."

The fighters were paid off yesterday in Ted Richard's office. Billy Nolan for Nolan and Richard offered $25,000 to Gans, that being the $25,000 he had claimed as the Dan's part of the "house" and an additional $500 he had no deposit.

GRANEY KNEW OF $25,000 OFFER.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—Eddie Graneley, the well-known referee and adviser of Joe Gans, the champion lightweight pugilist of the world, is authority for the statement that a number of sporting men offered Gans $25,000 to quit in his fight with Nelson at Goldfield on Monday.

A friend of Gans advised him to take the money and double-cross the bribers. Graneley told the colored man not to enter into any contract to sit the sureties men. While Graneley will not divulge the names of the men who approached Gans with the enormous bribe, it is well known that some of them are identified with the pool-rooms of Seattle.

KID MURPHY KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT.

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—Harry Jacobs, 23 years old, known in prize fighting circles as Kid Murphy, was struck by an automobile last night and suffered injuries which caused his death later. The auto was operated by B. H. Roper, who is held until the inquest. Jacobs, when struck by the car, was running from a fight on the sidewalk, where shots were being fired. When he stepped off the sidewalk, he was struck by the body of the front wheel passing over his head.

FOOTBALL

There will be a practice of the Marquette football team at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon on the Victoria grounds.

GOLF

The ladies' championship golf series for the maritime provinces ended yesterday in victory for Miss Mabel Thomson, who is again the maritime champion and who is also Canadian champion. The presentation of prizes took place in the club house after luncheon, which was served by the ladies' committee. The next meet will be in Windsor (N. S.) to which place the members have been cordially invited.

On Thursday afternoon the finals for the Conception cup in the tournament were played. Six were entered in this competition but it was finally narrowed down to Miss Robertson, of Rothesay, and Miss C. T. Smith. The play on Thursday afternoon resulted in a victory for Miss Robertson. The afternoon tea Thursday, which was in charge of Mrs. Stratton, Miss Purloing and Miss Warner, was an exceptionally bright function. The attendance was very large and all enjoyed themselves to the utmost.

Yesterday afternoon, besides the championship cup, the handicap medal play of eighteen holes took place. The play resulted as follows: 1st prize, Mrs. Chandler, Moncton; 2nd, Miss Tiffin, Moncton. After tea, which was in charge of Mrs. Franklin Stetson, Mrs. J. Douglas Hain, Mrs. E. A. Smith, Mrs. Herbert Schofield and Mrs. George K. McLeod, Mrs. George McArthur, vice-president of the maritime association, presented the prizes.

The championship cup with the gold medal which accompanies it went to Miss Thomson. The Runner-Up silver medal was presented to Miss V. Robertson; first prize in the driving competition to Miss M. Thomson; second prize, Mrs. E. A. Smith. In putting and approaching Miss M. Robertson won first prize with Miss M. Barker, second, Miss Mary Robertson, of Baddeck, won the consolation cup, and Mrs. Chandler, of Moncton, won the first prize in the middle handicap with Miss Tiffin, of the same place, for second. All players showed a most enjoyable week of golf had been spent here. The afternoon tea, at which the attendance was always large and representative, was especially enjoyed.

A Tweed Suit for Business is about the most sensible wardrobe-investment a man can make—provided he chooses Hewson Tweed.

Hewson Tweeds are of the purest, best wool and make up into suits that look well from first to last—and that last is a long way off from the day the suit is delivered.

Of such firm, soft, beautiful texture, they have always the right hang. There's not the dragging out of shape, the bagging of elbows and knees, or the slouchiness about the coat, which is incidental to cheap, shoddy clothes.

Shabbiness and Hewson Tweeds don't move in the same circle of things—no matter how worn the Hewson Tweeds get—there's no room for shabbiness in pure wool, woven in the way Hewson Tweeds are made.

There's always an "air"—a tone of quality—about these pure-wool, all-wool fabrics, that means much to the man who realises how appearances count in business.

Before ordering that new suit, ask your dealer to give you samples of Hewson Tweeds. If he doesn't keep them, send to us, mentioning dealer's name, and we'll take pleasure in mailing you samples.

Make a note of the trademark, and see that it is on the goods—for the sake of economy and good looks in clothing.

These will be the final performances of these wonderful children in this city, and everybody who has not yet seen them should do so today. Their performance is well worth twice the amount of admission money asked, and their equals will never be seen here again.

SCHEME FOR NEW WHARVES

The board of trade council has appointed President Schofield, T. H. Estabrooks and W. H. Thorne a committee to confer with a committee from the city council regarding a scheme of harbor improvements to be presented to Hon. Mr. Hyman when he visits St. John this month.

E. T. P. Shewen has prepared plans which are understood to be approved by the members.

Mr. Shewen is in favor of building new wharves down toward the Beacon, but his plan includes extending the breakwater to Partridge Island and moving the Beacon in some distance nearer the Gableton shore so as to give a wider harbor entrance. His plan shows four slips each of 700 feet depth and a fifth slip of 1,300 feet. These, with the necessary wharves, would carry the work to the present Beacon, giving twelve berths, and leaving ample room for many more to be put in as the trade demands.

AN ARTISTIC BOOT

The most artistically arranged booth in the exhibition is the Floods Company's, west end of the new building. They are exhibiting a number of very choice pianos, among them being the old reliable Wm. Borne & Son piano. This piano has occupied in Boston, the home of music, the most prominent position with lovers of music. Also the Kroeger piano, which is a wonder for its grandeur of tone and good workmanship. Mr. Kroeger was superintendent for Steinsway & Sons for twenty years, and is a maker of the well known piano. There is embodied in the Kroeger piano all the latest improvements of piano making and there is no piano where a purchaser gets such good value. They are also exhibiting the Dominion piano, which is a lover in price, and a very good piano it is. The pictures of Mr. Williams, R. H. A., are very choice bits of Irish scenery and most faithfully painted. Visitors to the exhibition should not fail to see these pictures at the Floods Company's exhibit. Besides, they are showing other pictures, cut glass and bric-a-brac.

Saskatoon the Bread Basket of the World.

Saskatoon being situated in the heart of the finest wheat area of the world will become in the next year or two one of the largest distributing and railway centres of Western Canada.

St. John people residing in this enterprising city speak in the highest praise of Saskatoon, and its possibilities of the future.

Saskatoon in two years is estimated to have eleven passenger trains running in daily. This city has already seven banks and more are coming.

The Northwestern Land and Investment Co., repeat the advice to local investors to buy Saskatoon land. It is cheap today, but is rapidly increasing in value. What this company are offering today in building lots at $115, cannot be purchased at any such price within a very short time. The easy payment plan of $10 down and $5 per month can be taken advantage of, if required.—Adv.

CHEESE IS HIGHER THAN FOR YEARS

Feed is Also High But Flour Maintains Average Strength --Market Outlook Good.

According to local authority the market outlook, from present indications at least, is very promising and the prosperity of the country will, no doubt, be reflected in the profits of the wholesale grocers when they take off their balance sheet at the end of the year.

The only important change at present in cheese which has taken a decided leap sky-ward, being quoted at 13 3/4 and 14 cents, where a fortnight ago it brought 12 1/4 cents. It is the highest price cheese has been known to sell in St. John for many years.

The chances are that we will see 14 and 15 cent cheese before the end of the year. Rolled oats, on the other hand have dropped off and are quoted at 50c. and less. There is no change in flour at present and the general impression seems to be that Ontario flour is at low water mark now.

It is just possible, however, that Manitoba may lower when the new wheat is placed on the market. Oats meal is unchanged, but feed is very high and scarce. Herring are expected next week, but no prices are quoted for the present at least.

Sugar is unchanged, but the market is very strong and may advance at any moment. Canned goods, such as tomatoes, corn, peas and beans, range about the same. Oodfish has taken a slight advance and fresh herring are expected next week, but no prices are quoted for the present at least.

C. P. R. LINE ON LAKE FRONT

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy Announces That Line Will Make Important Extensions in Ontario.

MONTREAL, September 7.—Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway announces that the company's engineers and surveyors are looking over the ground with a view to the immediate determination whether the Canadian Pacific Railway Company will build a line from the present Montreal-Toronto line at Trenton, Ont., to Toronto, running through the towns on the Lake Ontario water front.

From other official sources it is learned that the proposed line would naturally be directly competitive for the through and local traffic with the present Grand Trunk system.

When the task is completed the data will be laid before the management, and upon the basis of the information submitted the company will decide whether the work will be proceeded with.

The line would pass through Trenton, Cobourg, Brighton, Grafton, Cobourg, Port Hope, Newcastle, Bowmanville, Oshawa, Whitby, Pickering and Scarborough.

OLIVETTE A HIT

The Robinson Opera Company presented Olivette at the Opera House last evening and there was not a vacant seat in the house, the S. R. O. sign being out. Olivette is an old favorite with St. John audiences and the rendition of the popular comic opera lost none of its attractiveness in the hands of the Robinson Co.

Miss Kileys in the title role was all that could be desired, she captivated the audience with her rendering of a number of catchy songs and her portrayal of the part was exceptionally good.

Frank Nelson, as Capt. De Merrimac, scored a distinct hit and his splendid baritone voice was heard to good advantage in a number of selections. Between the first and second acts he sang by special request, "Soldiers of the King" and received quite an ovation. It was Mr. Nelson who sang this stirring song into popular favor in St. John, at the time of the World War, he being here with the Robinson Co. during that time. All the members of the company were in good voice and the opera went with a dash and that was heard to hearty applause.

Harry Burnham, as Coccolibot, kept the audience convulsed with laughter. Miss Essie Barton, John Moore, Frank French and the other principals all looked after their parts in a clever manner. Olivette will be the bill this afternoon and evening when they should have large audiences.

MONDAY'S CARNIVAL

Admission tickets and skate checks for the Salvage Corps carnival Monday night at St. Andrew's Hallway will be placed on sale at the box office in the rink at 10 o'clock Monday morning. Those who wish to have skates reserved for the evening can do so by buying the check and leaving their names with the size of skate wanted, and whether for lady or gentleman. As there will be a big demand for skate checks, those who intend skating should take advantage of this offer and secure their skate checks early.

There is only a limited quantity of admission tickets to be sold, and both skate checks and admission tickets will be sold on the first come first served principle, so that if you are late you stand a chance of not being able to get either admission tickets or skate checks. None will be sold at the rink for the carnival until 10 o'clock Monday, and the box office will be open all day. No orders for skate checks or tickets will be accepted by telephone.

The following ladies and gentlemen have kindly consented to act as judges at the carnival: His Worship Mayor Sears and Mrs. Sears, Senator J. V. Ellis, Mrs. R. W. W. Frink, Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Brown and E. L. Jevett. Remember that all skaters must be costumed and masked or made up.
