Special Telegram to the Iribune. Wallace Walks into the Week-kneed-Great Enthusiasm in the Government Ranks---Traitors Denounced--Tilley to Speak Next.

OTTAWA, Oct. 31. Joly followed Thomson. He said the Government took money and Sir Hugh were proved to call for the Government's defeat. He did not tell the House he would have taken a seat in the same

Wallace (Norfolk) characterized the action of the leader of the Opposition in placing his resolution before the House as going it blind. The motion was framed to ignore the Comim ssion, and then asked House to convict the Minis-Flour, Groceries & Liquors, try on the evidence taken before that Commission. He then reviewed the evidence. The Opposition rested their case on Sir Hugh's letters, but ignored some of the letters which did not D. E. DUNHAM, suit them. He contended that the member for South Bruce (Blake) should not have attacked the judges who Rooms, 1 and 2 Bayard's Building, sat on the Royal Commission as parti-sans, seeing that he was the son of the (UP STAIRS.)

106 PRINCE WILLIAM STREET. | sans, seeing that he was the son of the venerated judge of the Court of Chancery, Persons intending to Build or Remodel their Buildings would do well to call at the above office before consulting caroenters, masons, &c., as the Sabsoriber guarantees to give all the information that can be obtained from the most practical mechanic, his theory being Beauty, practical mechanic, his theory being Beauty, Economy and Strength, so combined as to make the outlay worth, when finished, what it cost.

The base of the Court of Chancery, and his brother was a judge to-day. (Cheers.) He had called the three judges partisan because they were the nominees of the Premier. Would he consider that his brother was a partisan because he too was a nominee of the Premier? The remark was an insult to the pro-HAVE a fresh assortment of Medium and fession, and calculated to bring the judiciary into disrespect. [Cheers.] The forward charges which they could not prove, which their own resolution showed that they had abandoned? No; their only object was to rule, if it were over the ruins of their country. (Cheers.) He who in such a crisis as this deserted his friends, from fear of consequences, was a traitor and a coward. (Cheers.) He who from disappointed ambition or personal feelings voted contrary to the wishes of those who had sent him here acted the part of a traitor (cheers), because he betrayed those who trusted him. He was a traitor to his country, because he was selling its interests for the promotion of his own selfish ends. (Cheers.) He was a traitor to his manhood, because he was recreant to his own truth and honor. (Great cheering.) Tilley moved the adjournment of the

J. L. STEWART,..... EDITOR. SATURDAY EVENING, NOV. 1, 1873.

Mr. Tilley has made a splendid speech has already held the reins of Government, and this is a good opportunity for deserting him and coming in with the deserting him and coming in with the rising tide." But Mr. Tilley, who could have chosen his own reward for consenting to "speak now" at Mr. Blake's bidding, as E. B. Wood did in the Ontario ding, as E. B. Wood did in the Ontario ding, as E. B. Wood did in the Ontario charges, became satisfied that there was no foundation for them, and then resolved to stand by his friend though the waves of partisan slander swept them both from power and place. Mr. Tilley's speech should be an example for the countries and request them to subscribe say for 60 cts. a plece towards paying up Mr. Dixon (as I believe this is the only Mr. Dixon (as I believe this is the only object in the way to the final settling of object both from power and place. Mr. Tilley's speech should be an example for the others.

We happen to know that Mr. Tilley, worn with the weight of heavy official responsibilities, was inclined to leave the Government after having placed the finances in a satisfactory state, and retire to the pastoral calm of the Government House at Fredericton for six years, but that he gave up this dream of wellearned repose when he hecame convinced that his slandered friend needed his countenance and counsel. Mr. Tilley has acted a noble part—a part that has not lost him one friend in this constituhas acted a noble part—a part that has not lost him one friend in this constituency and gained him many admirer among his political enemies.

If it had come squarely to the front and demanded the ruin of Sir John and the placing of Mr. Mackenzie in power its afluence against the Government would not have been half so great. Whether designedly or blunderingly, we care not which, the Government cause has been injured, and the McMullenite scandal spread, more effectually by the 'masterly inactivity" of the Telegraph than by the open assaults of all the pro-fessed McMullenite papers in the Mari-time Provinces. We are sorry that the tone of Mr Tilley's speech did not banish from Mr. Domville's mind the bitter feelings that led him to make a sharp personal attack on Mr. Burpee, instead of replying to that gentleman's constitutional arguments. Among the old offenders was, first, Mary Beers, who drank too much beer, was placed on a bier and taken to the Station. She said it was more weakness than liquor that caused her fall, and in order to give her time to have her lost strength entirely restored the Magistrate sent her to gaol for two months.

Hugh McCormack was another very old man and old offender. He did not wish to be sent over the flats again, but would the vote for Mackenzie's amendment. (Loud Opposition cheers.) He contended that the House adjourned till the thirteenth of August with the understanding that they were then to receive the report of the Committee. There being no report, he thought Parliament could have continued in session and there decided how the investigation should proceed. For these reasons he signed the memorial against prorogation.

THE ITALIAN DOCTOR'S TALE.

Fifty-five years ago the "Divine Son ag" stood upon the boards of La Scala. It was a night of wondrous triumph for the Milanese; for long had the battle raged and desperate between the opera-tic powers of Rome, Naples, and Milan, ere the palm of victory had been awarded to the latter.

My professional duties had detained me late (I was a young, struggling M. D. at the time); and I entered the theatre, but as the air shook with the wondrous applause elicited by Sontag's rendering of Ah. Non Credea, in the "Somnambula," I was especially disappointed to have missed that aria-to me the gem of the entire pera. But who could deem himself illused if in time for the Gunurer : so, men tally thankful it was no worse, I made my way to my seat-one, fortunately very near the stage; and had taken it, and was bowing to some English friends seat ed in the boxes adjacent, ere the wild tumult of applause had ceased to deafen my ears, or the floral tributes to be enthus astically showered at the lady's feet. One wreath, remarkable for its singular beauty, I remember, composed of some deftly woven, strange, red exotics, caught my gaze as I turned toward the stage, in the act of its descent. An instant more, it caught my hand as well; for, unatentionally, in the act of turning, hat in and, the latter struck it, thereby swervng it from its original destination, directly into my own grasp. A moment more, stood the centre of attraction in my im nediate sphere, bending forward with what grace I might, offering it to Soutag. The kindly, gracious smile with which he received it will probably dwell in my nemory as long as aught earthly. Verily, ts remembrance thrills me with a strange sense of pleasure, even upon a fifty-year's recall.

The graceful figure, in its slender beauty, yet bent before me, the crimson wreath lightly resting against her breast, when a second one, dropped lightly from above and literally crowned Amena as she stood. It was a deft trick, and one which immediately called forth the delighted appreciation of the audience.

The building absolutely rocked with the gibration caused by the second burst of ibration caused by the second burst of catalic acclamation.

One odd feature of the incident important that the

her wasted face, and the large eyes kindled into an unearthly transient glare of life as they met mine; then pointing to a tiny enveloge upon the tible beside Ler, with one loud, triumphant burst of inexpressibly sad melody, she raised herself sud lenly to her full hight in bed, stretched forth her arms wildly, and with a choking, gurgling rattle of the throat, fell forward upon her, literally deluged in her own life-blood.

The note, directed simply to me, contained these words in a slender, Italian hand:

hand:

"Doctor, you say I cannot live—and I know it. My prayer is for one more song in life—and that she may hear it. I pay the price knowingly—and only too willingly—Life for a single song?"

She had verily paid it. An examination of the poor girl's effects showed her to have died in extreme poverty. She might have been wealthy in former times; but her recklessness and sad extravaguace had long since passed into a proverb among those who knew her best.

That evening, while watching in the dim twilight of the room wherein she laid, a tall figure of a woman, shrouded to the temples, glided noiselessly beside me. Without a word, I felt a purse pressed into my hand, and in an instant effect he mystery disanneared as noise-
