THREE FAMOUS MURDER TRIALS ENDED.

Three remarkable murder trials were brought to a close on Saturday.

At Montreal, the young Irishman Shortis was found guilty of murdering John Loy, an officer in the Beauharnois cotton factory, in which he had been employed. There was no question as to the killing of the man. It was admitted that Shortis slew him without provocation, and that he intended to kill others besides him. The defense was that the prisoner was subject to fits of insanity, and evidence was given to show that in Ireland, as well as in Canada, the prisoner had been subject to fits of mental abercentended, Shortis murdered his vic- responsibility for their safety. Dr. Bucke, superintendent of the Asylum for the Insane in this city, and other insanity experts were examined in support of the view that the prisoner was mentally irresponsible at the time the crime was committed. They asserted that it was possible for a man to have periods of mental collapse, in which he had no control whatsoever over his actions. The prosecution combatted this view with threats made by the prisoner against the son of a carpenter and a Kanaka the mill managers some time prior to woman. the commission of the crime, and the jury, in giving a verdict of "Guilty," have upheld the assumption that, no matter how many mental lapses a man may have, if he knows it is wrong to kill, and proceeds to murder, he must

To cover up his crime, he murdered the Pietzel boy at Indianapolis, and the two Pietzel girls at Toronto, and there can be no doubt that if he had not been overhauled by justice he would have killed Mrs. Pietzel also. His one idea was to get rid of every witness against him. Subsequent investigation has revealed the fact that Holmes has murdered twenty-two persons, who he at one time or another thought stood in his way. He was an educated man, but a villain of the deepest dye, who turned his undoubted talents to the worst possible use. It is fortunate for this Province that he has been convicted of one of his numerous diabolical crimes at Philadelphia. If he had been acquitted, he would have been brought to Toronto for trial on the charge of murdering the two innocent children of Pietzel, and that trial might have cost the Province $10,000. As he stood in the dock at Philadelphia, Holmes was a man absolutely without friends. The merciless, heartless scoundrel cannot too soon be dropped from the public eye.

Then he slowly sat down, and at the request of counsel the jury was polled. That is, each of the twelve men separately listened to the člerk's query, and responded with the finding. As each name was called, Holmes wrote it on the margin of a newspaper in his hand, and the fingers holding the pencil never shook.

MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL. Immediately after the announcement of the verdict, the usual application for leave to file a motion for a new trial was made. District Attorney Graham did not oppose the motion, and Judge Arnold fixed the 18th of this month for a hearing. The principal reason urged will be lack of time for the preparation of the defense. a new trial be refused, an appeal will be taken to the Supreme Court and argument heard at its next sitting in this city, January, 1896. So, even if everything goes against him, Holmes has vet some time to spend on the ulent manner. Holmes made up his troops will then be withdrawn from earth, from which he is alleged to have sent so many mortals.

THE VERDICT A SURPRISE. The verdict was a surprise to many persons, who did not believe the crime Holmes spoke to his counsel, Rotan and Shoemaker, in the cell-room be-fore he was taken back to Moyamen-To them he said: that this condemns me. It was an unthat.

IN THE JURY ROOM. The jury retired to deliberate at 5:40 p.m. According to one of their number, they reached their verdict be-fore the doors of their room closed upon them. For hunger's sake they ate their supper first. Then they took a ballot, and without hesitation every man of the twelve answered "guilty of murder in the first degree." KNOX CHURCH REOPENED.

Rev. Dr. Milligan, of Old St. Andrew's on the Character of Issac-Special Music by the Choir.

Knox Church, South London, was thrown open to public worship yesterday afternoon, after being entirely remodelled and enlarg. ed. A full description of the changes wrought and the greatly improved appearance of the structure has already appeared in the "Advertiser." Yesterday the wisdom of re-arranging the interior was amply demonstrated, when at both services every word which fell from the preacher's lips could be heard clearly and dislow, lot 11, con. 9, Dereham, burned tinctly in any portion of the house. The flames spread to Not an inch of seating room has been wasted and although 200 more can be accommodated in the new building, it was found necessary season's crop of grain, were entirely to place seats along the aisles to provide for consumed. The barn was insured for the large crowds attending the opening services. The sermons were preached by Rev. Dr. Milligan, of old St. Andrews, Toronto, and it has seldom fallen to Knox or any other congregation to listen to more earnest, elequent and convincing sermons. In the morning he took as his text a portion of the 29th verse of the 20th chapter of St. John's Gospel, viz. - "Thomas, because thou hast seen Me, thou hast believed."

In the afternoon a children's service was held, which was also largely attended by parents. Rev. Mr. Talling and Rev. Mr. Walker assisted the pastor, Rev. Mr. Stuart, in the service, which was exceedingly interesting and instructive to the children and others. The choir supplied the music. Dr. Milligan's evening text was taken from Genesis xxxi., 53—"And Jacob swore by the fear of his father Isaac." The lesson contained in the sermon circled around the character of Isaac, who has been charged by many prominent ministers, including the author of "Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush," with having been passive, unenterprising and neutral; passive because he had submitted without demur or protest when his father was about to offer him up as a burnt offering, unenterprising because he was content when re-possessing his father's lands to reopen the same wells which the Phillistines had filled up when they had taken the land, and neutral or dull because he was content to be a tiller of the soil and to work and wait seven years for the woman he loved. The reverend gentleman met each point with convincing logic. He asserted that Isaac,s submissiveness in his father's hands was the submission of belief and not that of a dolt. Isaac was 25 years of age and perfectly able had he wished to resist. He pointed out that in the old land, wells, when owned for a long time, became as title deeds to the property on which they were situated, and for Isaac to reopen his father's well showed a spirit of "no surrender" that was admirable. He hoisted the flag as it were on the very spot where the enemy had conquered when he repossessed the wells. As to Isaac being neutral because of his choice of an agricultural pursuit, the preacher declared that to a person of the temperament would bring them back or tell where have possessed to an unusual degree. In the morning the anthem, "I have surely built thee an house," was exceed ingly appropriate and well rendered. the offertory was being presented Miss Laura Brown Sang "The Shepherd of the Fold" most acceptably. Messrs. Blakie and Givens took the solo parts of the anthem in a very pleasing manner. In the evening the anthem was "Calvary," and the choir did full justice to the majesty of the creation. Mr. Blakie sang a beautiful tenor solo, "Hosanna in Excelsis."

Rev. James W. Pedley, lately of Vancouver, B. C., assumed the pastoral charge of the First Congregational Church yesterday, and at both morning and evening services preached to arge congregations. Mr. Pedley created very favorable impressions. He is of a very striking appearance, possesses a pleasing and graceful manner in the pulpit, and discourses in a soft voice, which can be distinctly heard at every point in the edifice. His sermons yesterday were more in the nature of general talks, and given with the object of instilling into the minds of the members and adherents the idea that a vigorous work was to be carried on, and that he wanted the enthusias-

"GUILTY AND CAPABLE."

Verdict of the Jury in the Shorsis. Murder Trial. Beauharnois, Que, Nov. 4.-Proceedings in the Shortis trial car Saturday consisted of Mr. MacMaster's address on behalf of the crown, and Judge Mathieu's charge to the jury in French and English.

Yesterday morning it seemed as if the whole male portion of the population of this village had turned out en masse and gone to the court house to hear the verdict in the Shortis case. All the counsels were present. The judge ascended the bench at 9:10 a.m. After the roll call the jury were asked if they had found a verdic

A death-like stillness prevailed, and the clerk repeated his question in both languages. "Guilty and capable" were the fatal words that came from the dozen throats in the jury box.

Judge Mathieu then put the three questions he had left for them to decide upon: "Did the prisoner murder John Loy on March 1st last?" Answer-"Yes."

"At the time of the murder was the prisoner in a state of mind which rendered him incapable of judging the nature and quality of his acts, or of knowing that such act or murder was wrong?" Answer-"No." "Is the accused guilty or not guilty?"

Rights of Officers to Search Their

Prisoners. Windsor, Nov. 4.-The decision Judge Falconbridge that the police have no right to search prisoners unless they are of the opinion that they have in their possession arms or instruments to do bodily harm has caused considerable adverse criticism in the Dominion. In speaking of the matter on Saturday Judge Falcon-bridge said: "That portion of my charge to the jury in the recently tried case of Gordon vs. Stephen, which dealt with the right of an officer to search a prisoner, has been much quoted, and is possibly capable of generalization to an extent which would be inimical to the efficiency of the police and to the interests of justice. My remarks applied to the circumstances of the particular case, and were only illustrating the principle that there is no law rendering a person, whose presence is required as a witness, and who has been arrested on that ground alone, liable to the regulations of a police officer as a criminal."

SHOP GIRL NOW PEERESS.

Lady Dudley is probably the only peeress of England who has risen from the rank of a shop girl to her present social eminence.

True, she bore prior to her marriage the name of Gurney, one of the most ancient in Norfolk. The young countess' father, however, met with business reverses, resigned his partnership in the Gurney Bank, and surrendered all his possessions for the benefit of his creditors.

Mrs. Gurney opened a millinery shop in London, but met with scant success. her two daughters, who acted as assistants, ultimately becoming saleswomen in the shop of a modiste.

About a year previous to Lord Dudley's marriage, the now widowed Duchess of Bedford and her sister. Lady Henry Somerset, interested themselves on behalf of the two young girls, and removed them to more congenial surroundings.

Rachel, the eldest, became a member of the household of the Duchess, while the younger, now Lady Trowbridge, was adopted by Lady Henry Somerset. It was as the adopted daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Bedford that Rachel Gurney married young Lord Dudley.

THE FRENCH CRISIS. crisis which France is passing through at present is certainly the gravest that has supervened since the Boulangist movement. It involves not merely a change of Ministry, but a hange in the principles of government, seeing that for the first time a purely Radical Ministry has been summoned into power. The fall of the Ribot Cabnet was a surprise to no one. It had been anticipated by all who knew how the Carmaux strike and the Madagasar expedition gave additional strength to the Opposition: Nor was any one surprised when M. Faure entrusted the formation of a Cabinet to M. Bourthe formation of a Cabinet to M. Bourgeois. GOVERNMENT LEADERS NON-COMMITTAL. Two non-committal speeches have been made by Unionist leaders. Lord Salisbury had more to say about agriculture than anything else, and vaguely discussed relief measures for reducing the burdens of taxation and increasing, by light railways, the fa-cilities for carrying produce to market. His lack of faith in the efficacy of these measures was shown by his em-phatic references to the destructive effects of free trade upon English farming interests. The Duke of Devonshire made no attempt to forecast the Government policy, but contented himself with covering Lord Rosebery's recent thirty-two and a third million quarters.

LABOR TROUBLES. It would not be easy to exaggerate the calamitous nature of the shape that the ship-building crisis has now assumed. With the lock-out ordered on the Clyde for Tuesday, the most important industrial fight that the British have known will be in full blast. In the number of men involved the deadlock will not compare, of recent course, with many others of recent times, but in value to the nation of interests involved and in the danger of irrevocable damage to the country it has no parallel. The great builders of the Clyde and of Belfast say they are forced to stand together, because if one began to cut the other in wages or other matters it would be impossible for either to maintain himself against foreign competition; hence an agreement of masters under which the Clyde firms now shut out their men because the Belfast men are on strike. It is suspected that three Clyde firms which got the Admiralty contracts will withdraw from the association and keep their yards open, but even if they do this will affect the situation only Newcastle men are, they can accom modate only a fraction of the work which the Clyde and Belfast send begging, and already important contracts have gone to the German yards at Stettin and Dantzig, and others are reported to be transferred to America. The experience of London shows that ship-building is the most difficult of established, and the possibility that the enormous business of the Clyde and Belfast, incomparably the greatest in the world, is to be ruined and dis-persed may well frighten the whole nation. Efforts at mediation are still proceeding in Belfast, but both sides display the characteristic Ulster mul-

DOMVILLE'S DESERTION:

Popular Grand Trunk Official Under a Cloud

Said to Have Left With Another Woman -His Wife's Story.

Porf Huron, Mich., Nov. 4 .- Port Huron's latest sensation is to the effect that Charles Domville, superintendent of the tunnel, has deserted his wife for another woman and abandoned his family. Three weeks ago Domville left on his annual vacation. On Thursday his wife received a letter from him postmarked New York city. The ter stated by the time she received it, the writer would be out of the counand pitched and tossed, would give try, and that he had a woman with you—poor thing—seasickness only to look at it. You, dear young lady, him whom he loved better than he did his wife and family. The following story is told by his wife: have grown very tall since then: you have suffered from many fashions as "Charley was the superintendent at the tunnel, and was drawing a good salary. Up to about three months ago he was a model husband, and took excellent care of his family. About that time he commenced staying out late at nights, and not getting home sometimes until 6 o'clock in the morning. I was informed that he was frequenting a questitonable house. I afterwards learned that he had brought an English housemaid from his father's residence in Hamilton, Ont., to this city, and was keeping her at this house, and this is the woman who is with him now. Three weeks ago he received his vacation, leaving home on Saturday. He told me that he would return on the following Friday. The letter I received was the first I heard from him. He has not paid his bills for the past two or three months, and has borrowed money whenever he could. He also mertgaged our household furniture. He has not given me any money for the past two or three months. He did not take many clothes less droll when the knights held it, but with him. He always thought a great deal of his children, especially the youngest, a little girl, whose picture he took with him."

Domville's father is mechanical superintendent of the southern division of the G. T. R. and resides at Hamilton. He has been telegraphed for by the deserted wife. Port Huron papers state that at the depot and around the tunnel yards everyone has a good word for Mr. Domville, and can hardly believe the story. The opinion is that he may have got into fast company and become so deep-ly involved in debt that he was discouraged and has gone away to get rid of his creditors. Stoves! stoves! Baseburners, cook stoves and parlor stoves at the Bed and Hair Mattress Cleaning Factory. Dealer in general house furnishings. ## PUBLIC SCHOOL TRAINING.

A New System of Religious Training Adopted.

Kingston, Nov. 4:--Principal Grant visited the Central school the other day to inquire into the system of religious instruction now being carried out. This is only the beginning of his visits, as he intends calling at all the public schools and getting a clear knowledge of the work being accomplished, as he intends using the information for a magazine article. The system adopted involves a new departure in religious instruction. In September a circular-letter was delivered to the principal of each school, containing full instructions, including the Apostles' Creed, the commandments, beatitudes and the international lessons and golden texts for the four months ending Dec. 31, 1895. A month after the new departure had been tried, Mr. W. G. Kidd, the inspector, was asked for a report upon the manner in which the board's regulation had been carried out, and he replied as follows:

"The regulations relating to religious instruction, recently issued by the board, are being carefully observed in every class in the public schools. In many of the senior classes the pupils have Bibles and read the lessons with the teacher. In the primary classes the Scripture lessons are read by the teachers, and the commandments, the creed or the beatitudes are repeated by the pupils.

"All appear to be delighted with the exercises. The teachers are pleased be-cause the work is now definitely prescribed. Already very fair progress has been made in memorizing the golden texts, the com-mandments and the beatitudes.

"The parents of the pupils appear to be well satisfied. Many of them have spoken

Baking Powder work this morning at the Grand Trunk shops. They are a portion of the staff laid off last June, and are not sorry to find themselves in work again. Whether the job will be steady all winter or not, the men do not know. They are engaged on a number of freight cars, making them of a uniform height, so that the couplings will be safer. The fact of even such a small number of men being put to work so soon is a welcome sign to East Enders, who had begun to think that it would be spring at least before anything could be done.

lack of physical courage, but on this occasion, when he struggled to his feet, he made for the door in a hurry, whereat Martin contemptuously kicked little as he would have known what at and missed him. Springer, how-ever, whom Golding had to pass, was no special cleverness in deducing caught the traveler by the coat collar plain facts from the chief's incomplete and trousers and ran him down the path to the gate more vigorously, if not more rapidly, than he cared to go. And when Golding had disappeared from the doorway, Dutton, who had sat up in bed to watch the fracas, lay down again with an amused smile. Golding turned in exasperation at last and struck at Springer, but the storekeeper dodged back and the blow fell short. With an oath Golding then ender in the name of the law, emphasizing his command by flourishing revolver threateningly.

just tried to rob the house!" joined in incoherently. Mrs. Warren family unprotected even now, Henry and Elsie stood in the front door, and Babson, who said he could spare the Gran'pa Kirk hobbled around from the shady side of the house, where he had been napping.
Golding looked and listened in evident surprise, and for a moment seemed undecided what to do.

"Get down and hold his horse, Jackson," said the chief.

The subordinate obeyed, and Williams continued to cover Golding with his

"Now, now, gently, or that might go off," said Golding, recovering his presence of mind. "I see it's cocked, and it's dangerous to hold a weapon that way when you're on horseback. What's the charge against me? You can't ar-rest me, you know, without a warrant or a charge, unless you saw me committing a crime; you know that. I heard you talking about it yesterday to Judge Drew." "Didn't you say he just tried to rob this house?" asked Williams, turning to Martin. The instant the chief turned Golding rushed forward and twisted the revolver from his hand. "None of that!" cried Jackson; "I've got the drop on you!"

Golding looked at the muzzle of the subordinate officer's revolver, and said 'Oh!" nonchalantly.

"Here, chief," he added, "take your gun. I don't want it. I thought I'd show you a point or two in police tactics, that was all." "Keep him covered, Jackson," said Williams, deeply mortified, as he received his weapon. Martin answered the question that had been addressed to him: "Yes, he was trying to steal something or other, and he struck Mrs. Warren." "Is this so, madam?" asked Williams. "It is," she responded quietly. "He tried to rifle the sick man's clothes that were hanging in the closet."

"Guess that's enough," said the chief.
"I'll take the names of witnesses. I know yours, Mr. Springer; and your name? John Martin? Thanks. Mrs. Warren, the daughter, and who is the old gentleman there?"

"I wouldn't take Gran'va Kirk's name, if I was you," suggested Springer. "He didn't see anything, and he's so old, you know." asked Golding, leaning over "Say," and speaking in a low voice; "excuse me interrupting, but did you say the old gentleman's name was Kirk?" "Yes, Mrs. Warren's father," replied

"That's enough. I surrender. Why couldn't I have thought of that name

This last was said to himself more than to the others, and of them only Martin was especially struck by it. He wondered what it meant. Chief Williams dismounted and spoke in a low tone to Springer.

"I'm glad we got here in time," he said, "but as I understand it, there's a good deal to do yet. There's a black villain expected to call here sometime today to demand a ransom for the missing girl-"

"Why, there she is!" interrupted Sam, pointing to the doorway, where Elsie still stood with her mother. "That one?" exclaimed Williams. "I supposed it must be the other daugh-

When did she escape?" "There isn't any other daughter, and she didn't escape; she was rescued," and Sam told the story with co able brevity.

"Well, I must say," commented the chief, "I'm glad it came out so well. "You'd make a detective, Mr. Martin." "P'raps," drawled the hero of the rescue, indifferently.

"At the same time," said Williams, "it doesn't modify my instructions.

The judge sent me out, not to arrest that man in the buggy, though that was a part of it if he should do anything out of the way, but to capture the black man."

"The judge doesn't give out small jobs, does he?" said Martin. "Do you mean that the arrest of the black will be a difficult matter?" "You've guessed it. I don't mean any disrespect to you, but I don't believe the policeman lives who can take that man now that he's got a start."

"What start has he? He's after a diamond, and he's bound to come here to get it, as I understand." "This talk of diamonds," said Martin. "puzzles me, but it don't make no difference about the movements of this fellow Wanga, now. Don't you see, he was in Denby early this morning.' As has been seen, Golding had no "Why! who told you that?" Martin was honestly surprised at the question. He had never regarded himself as especially gifted in synthesis, statement. "You told me yourself," he responded simply. "You've just come from Denby-no one needed to be told that, and if you know that Wanga is coming here it must be because he's been there to give that information. It's the only place he could find Warren."

"Yes, he saw Warren in the lockup." "Well, to cut it short, then, Wanga climbed into his buggy, but before he had turned his horse around, Williams and Jackson galloped up. They drew rein one on each side of the buggy, and the chief called on Golding to surtender in the page of the law emergence. started from Denby to Granite. "Warren was certain he would."
"Huh! Warren didn't know Elsie'd Wanga wouldn't dare to come till night anyway, and meantime he'll go to his hiding place. He'll find the girl gone and his partner dead. What's the use of his coming here,

"Wouldn't it be possible to set a watch at the cave and take him when he goes there?"

"I've thought of it, and it had ought to be tried, but I don't believe 'twill work. He's too cunning. If it will work at all it will be within a few

"Exactly," said Williams, "and that's just my difficulty now that I've got a You haven't any lockup here, I suppose?"
"No," responded Springer; "but we might find a way to stow him for you for a few hours." Sam and Martin exchanged glances. "I was thinking of my smoke-house,"

"He could tip it over," declared Martin, with a shake of his head. "And the worst of it is," said Williams, speaking in a still lower voice, "there isn't a pair of handcuffs between us. We came off in a rush, you The judge wouldn't have us

"Might tie him in the cellar of the meeting house," suggested Martin.

"Just the thing!" exclaimed Sam.

buggy, while King and Turner rode in the latter's. They traveled moderately fast, but at nowhere near such speed as had been taken by Golding and the pursuing officers, so that it was more than an hour after Williams and the others had started for Wanga's hiding place when the four drew up in front of Springer's store.

Few of the villagers were there at the time, but those few promptly tagged after the carriages, which pro-ceeded after a short pause, to Mr. War-Pills. As the business done by the Can ren's house. The neighbors gathered in the yard while Mr. Warren went in to embrace wife and daughter and hear their accounts of what had happened. Mr. Warren had been fully informed, of course, by Will of the events attending the first search and the rescue, but it was not until some minutes had elapsed that he learned that Golding had burial. The officers came up and they arrested him."

Mr. Warren had listened intently. "Did he get anything?" he asked. "I don't think so. I didn't see."

"I'll find out." He rose and went to the spare room, Mrs. Warren and Elsie following. The wife had it on the tip of her tongue to ask him how he could find out if anything was missing from Dutton's clothing, but she recalled the painful episodes and suspicions of the previous morning, and was silent.

Dutton was awake, and his eyes looked bright and healthy when Marren entered.

"Dut," said Warren, "I'm going to examine your vest to see whether Golding took anything. You trust me?" Dutton assented with his eyes, and Mr. Warren opened the closet door and felt in his vest pockets. A moment later he closed the door and returned to the sitting room. Without looking at the patient he remarked, "All right, Dut;" but when he was out of Dutton's hearing he said to his wife: "The scoundrel has taken the 'Presi-

WHEN INDIAN SUMMER REALLY COMES.

Not Until the Bright Days of Mid November.

Many persons, if they were asked about it, would say without hesita-tion that the last days of October are the real Indian summer. The term is vaguely employed, and at one time or another has been stretched to include almost all the attractive weather with which we are blessed between the close of August and the 1st of December. Thanks to the almanac, we have gotten the idea very strongly into our heads that summer ends on the 31st of August, and when we find the skies still warm and grateful after that date, and the woods and fields still calling to us with persuasive voices, we are a little perplexed as to what we ought really autumn or summer come again -Mr. Bert Geene spent Saturday and Thus we fall back upon the familian Sunday in the city with friends. Bert is one of London's boys who has secured a good situation with one of the largest wholetion for our selection of the uncertain phraseology.

It would be much more satisfactory with the month of August. There is nothing in the atmosphere or in the appearance of the natural world to indicate any radical change in the season at or about that date, and the increasing custom of lengthening the vacation outing at the sea shore or in the mountains is proof sufficient that we are gradually coming to appreciate tober have put a change on the face of things, and this will not only be nearer the truth than the established conception of the season, but will enable us also to get at a fairer idea of when Indian summer makes its appearance. The lexicographer Worces ter quotes Dr. Freeman as saying that the term Indian summer is used in North America to define a season of pleasant weather in the late autumn. and this notion of its date is brought out in various ways by most of the poets and versifiers who have discours ed upon the subject, and a very profitable sourse of verse it has been Here is one rhymer, for instance who tells us that Indian summer comes in the autumn's dotage, mid-November, when skies seductive woo the earth," and another who places it within the period when "the woodland foliage is gathered by the wild November blast," when "even the thick leaves upon the oaken bough are fallen, to the last." Samuel Longfellow says: "Summer has gone; but summer days return; the winds and frosts have stripped the woodlands bare," and a fourth poet tells us that the season comes "after October's biting frosts."

The popular impression of November is not a kindly one. We associate the month with cold and biting breezes, dismal days of cloud and smoky haze and sullen reminders in sea and sky of the quick-coming winter. But this is an unjust conception of the month. $7 50, for $5. If we will take the trouble this year to note the comparative frequency of the pleasant and unpleasant days of November in this latitude, we shall be surprised to see how many of the whole number are pleasant ones, devoid of the harsher characteristics popularly associated with this time of the year. Warm days and bright sunshine will bring back attractive meseason still. This belated summer is one of the pleasantest features of our New England year, and anyone who studies the subject with the for instance, to guide him, will be sur-prised to see what a deep impression it has made upon the mind of the English-writing bard .- Providence Journal.
