PREFACE.

In presenting this, their first edition of the Directory of Quebec, Three Rivers, Levis, Sorel, etc., to the public, the compilers gratefully acknowledge the large patronage so liberally bestowed, and flatter themselves that this work will prove a valuable aid to the business men of the several localities as well as to visitors.

We have personally canvassed each of the principal places, and trust the work will be found as perfect as any of the kind can be. For errors, which are unavoidable, we request a lenient criticism. It has been too long a custom to fill a directory with a quantity of matter altogether foreign to the character of the work, and which only adds to its bulk as well as to its price. We have avoided all such matter, and claim for our work nothing more than what a directory should be.

For our historical and descriptive sketches we acknowledge our indebtedness to the Histories of Messrs. Miles, Garneau and Hodgins, as well as to the writings of Messrs. Lemoine, Anderson and others.

It is our intention to issue an edition of the work next year which will comprise several other places of importance and other valuable information in addition to that contained in the present volume. Respectfully soliciting a continuance of the patronage so generously awarded us, we beg to tender our thanks for the generous encouragement and support which our enterprise has received.

HISTORICAL SKETCH,

In the year 1525 Verazzani, a Florentine in the service of France, explored the American coast from Carolina to Nova Scotia, and gave the name of New France to this extensive country, which, by the right of discovery, was claimed by France. Previous to this, however, fishermen from Basque and Brittany visited the banks of Newfoundland, and gave the name of Cape Breton to a headland since including the adjoining land.

On the 20th of April, 1534, Jacques Cartier, a mariner of St. Malo, sailed from that port with two small vessels and one hundred and twenty men, and on the 24th of July landed on the coast of Gaspé, an Indian word signifying Land's End. Here he erected a cross thirty feet high on which he placed a shield bearing the fleur de lis and an inscription as emblematical of the sovereignty of France in America. Thus was accomplished a most memorable event, and thus was Canada silently and quietly incorporated as a part of a great Empire. Thus too was completed that three-fold act of discovery in America, England in Newfoundland, Spain in the West Indies and France in Canada, which, as a natural consequence, placed side by side, on a vast unknown Continent, the symbols of sovereignty of the greatest nations of Europe.

The second voyage of Cartier resulted in the discovery of the gulf and river St. Lawrence. On the 7th of September, 1535, the small fleet reached the island of Orleans, or "Isle of Bacchus" as it was first called on account of its abundant grape vines, and on the 16th the ships reached the promontory since known as Cape Diamond. Here in a little estuary of the St. Charles, called by him St. Croix, he moored his ships for the winter. In the angle formed by the confluence of this river with the St. Lawrence stood the village of Stadaconé, to which the strangers were cordially invited by the native chief Donnacona. Passing up the river, Cartier reached the large town of Hochelaga, and returning, wintered at Stadaconé, where his men suffered greatly from scurvy and cold. In May he returned to France taking with him Donnacona and four other Indians.*

* This act of treachery cannot be excused, the unfortunate captives pined and died soon after their arrival in France. They had been baptized with great pomp in the Cathedral of Rouen.

Several efforts to colonise the new country proved unsuccessful until Pierre du Gau, Sieur de Monts, who was appointed Lieutenant-Governor of the country, after having failed in a first effort, fitted out two vessels under the command of SAMUEL DE CHAMPLAIN, an officer of the French navy, and the Sieur de Pontgravé, to traffic with the natives and explore the St. Lawrence.

On the 3rd of July, 1608, Champlain arrived at the spot which Cartier had visited seventy years before. Here his people disembarked, cleared a site, and erected cabins on the point now occupied by the "Lower Town" of Quebec, and in a short time he had the pleasure of seeing a fort of respectable dimensions and strength erected, while the neighboring land was prepared for tillage and other necessary uses. Thus after many years of varying fortune, doubt and disaster, a permanent footing was at last obtained, and the infant capital of New France, yet to become one of the most famous cities of the continent, was founded in the presence of the wondering red men of the forest, and from that centre of civilization radiated, in later years, a series of French settlements which embraced the islands of Newfoundland, Cape Breton and Prince Edward, as well as Acadie on the east, and on the west from Montreal to Frontenac, Niagara, Penetanguishene and Detroit, and then across the continent to Florida and Louisiana.

For a period of twenty-seven years succeeding the founding of Quebec, the history of the colony is almost identical with that of Champlain. They present details of romantic incidents, fortitude, courage and a contempt of difficulties which entitles him to a high rank among the celebrated men of his time. For political purposes, and to extend his facilities for discovery, he entered into an alliance with the Hurons and Algonquins against the powerful Iroquois, their hereditary enemies. The first encounter took place in the neighborhood of the site of Fort Ticonderoga on the 30th July, 1609, and resulted in the defeat of the latter tribe, and this unprovoked interference of the white man inaugurated that fierce and bloody warfare which for many years devastated the country, jeopardised the very existence of the colony and destroyed the lives of hundreds of the people.*

In April, 1615, several vessels left Harfleur, having on board supplies for the colony, artisans and laborers, and four fathers of the religious order of Franciscans called Recollets (Jamay, D'Olbeau, Le Caron and Du Plessis) as missionaries to Canada. The first mass ever celebrated in Canada was performed in June by Jamay and Le Caron at the River des Prairies, and by D'Olbeau and Du Plessis in Quebec.* From this period the history of the country is inseparably connected with the proceedings of the religious missionaries who were the real pioneers of French influence among the tribes of the interior. These "Missions to the Indians" have survived the vicissitudes of upwards of two centuries, and exist to the present day in forms and localities regulated by the progress of civilization.

* Samuel de Champlain, a native of Bronage in France. Explored the St. Lawrence from Tadousac to Three Rivers in 1603-7. On the 3rd of July, 1608, he founded the city of Quebec. In 1609 he ascended the river Richelieu and discovered the lake that bears his name. In 1615 he ascended the Ottawa to Lake Nipissing descended French river to Georgian Bay and from Lake Simcoe, passed by a long portage to the head waters of the Trent and thence to Lake Ontario. He died in 1635, greatly regretted.

At this time the population of the city did not exceed fifty souls, but such was the devotional spirit of the age, that different monastic orders were enabled through the liberality of the pious in France to found amidst the Canadian wilds vast establishments of education and beneficence which are still the boast of the Canadian. In 1617 the first immigration properly so-called took place, and the first emigrant to Canada was LOUIS HEBERT, who with his family arrived in that year. Hebert cleared a portion of the land on which Upper Quebec now stands. Couillard is another of the earliest names of the first cultivators of the soil, which was done entirely by hand until 1628 when bullocks began to be employed. In fact the fur trade engaged the whole attention of the people. The first wedding in Quebec was that of one Couillard with the daughter of Hebert, and the first baptism recorded was that of Eustache Martin, son of "Master Abraham Martin," from whose christian name the Plains of Abraham take their designation. In 1625 three Jesuit fathers, (Lalemant, Massé and De Brebœuf) arrived. In 1627 the celebrated "Company of One Hundred Partners" was organized by Cardinal de Richelieu and invested by the King with the Vice-royalty of New France and Florida, and with the attributes of seigniority and justice-ship" and "with power to assume for its enfeoffed lands, such titles, deeds, honors, rights, powers and faculties as should be judged fitting." Thus was the seigniorial tenure or feudal system established in the colony. † The King also raised twelve of the chief seigneurs to the rank of French noblesse. By this act also did Canada pass from a royal to a commercial regime.

* RECOLLETS.—Friars Minor of the strict observance order of St. Francis. They originated in Spain. Introduced into Italy in 1825, they were there called Gli Re-formati, and invited to France in 1592 by the Duc de Nevers. He first established them in the Couvent des Recollets, its name thenceforward distinguished this branch of the Franciscans. The name is derived from the practice of strict, spiritual recollection required of the fraternity. They were approved by Clement VII. in 1532. John of Zumarraga, first bishop of Mexico, was a Recollet.

† The Seigniorial tenure was abolished in 1854.

In 1629 Quebec was captured by the English under Sir David Kerkt, but was restored to the French in 1632, and soon after a large influx of immigrants, including numerous families, arrived; the names of these people were recorded in the annals of the city and of Three Rivers.

The wars with the Iroquois and Anglo-Americans make up an interesting chapter of the history of the country, but it is not possible in a brief sketch to follow up the details. Missionary zeal and a restless spirit of adventure characterized the age, and names of high reputation added a lustre to the annals of New France.

BATTLE OF ABRAHAM'S PLAINS.

THE PLAINS OF ABRAHAM.—At the time of the great battle the plains extended from the wall to the woods of Sillery and St. Foy, and were bounded on one side by the St. Lawrence and on the other by the St. Charles. The Grand Allée and the St. Foy roads passed through them. The limits have been greatly circumscribed, and greater part of the scene of the battle is now occupied by the race course and the level field adjoining. The battle which decided the fate of the colony was fought Sept. 13th, 1759. According to the most reliable information, though authorities differ, Montcalm's forces consisted of about seven thousand men exclusive of a few hundred marks men and Indians and two or three six-pounder field pieces. Many of the Canadian Militia were armed only with muskets and knives, and were without bayonets.

Wolfe's army consisted of four thousand men—trained soldiers completely armed and equipped for battle. The details of the conflict are well known. The French attacked, opening a well directed and incessant fire, which was not returned by their opponents till they were within a distance of forty yards, when a single volley flashed from the British, followed by the advance of the whole line. The French for a while stood their ground, but at last were forced to retire. Montcalm, who commanded in person, used every exertion to preserve order but in vain, the rout became general. The gallant Montcalm, struck a third time, fell from his horse and was carried into the city. De Vaudreuil, the governor, on whom the command now devolved, rallied a number of the troops, and for a while successfully resisted the advance of the victorious army into the city, but the battle was already decided, and on the 18th of September the city of Quebec was formally surrendered to General Townshend. From the moment the general advance was made by the French the battle had not lasted fifteen minutes. The British lost sixty-one officers and men killed, and upwards of six hundred wounded. The French loss, consisting of killed, wounded and prisoners, amounted to nearly fifteen hundred men. Among these mortally wounded were Montcalm's immediate subordinates Senezergues and St. Ours. Thus was this memorable battle fought and won, and thus, in the memorable fall of Quebec, fell, also, in Canada (although the after-struggle was protracted for a year) that imperial power which for more than one hundred and fifty years had ruled the colonial destinies of New France. The history of French rule in America is full of heroic achievements—of touching and memorable incidents and its termination, though decisive, was still worthy of that great nation, whose history is parallel to our own in noble deeds and chivalrous renown.

On the death of Montcalm, General De Lévis, who succeeded to the command, retired with his army to Jacques Cartier river, 27 miles from Quebec, and de Vaudreuil went to Montreal. After reinforcing various posts de Lévis rejoined the Governor, and awaited aid from France. After the capitulation of Quebec, General Murray, the British governor, strengthened the defences of the city, and Admiral Saunders was sent to England with a thousand prisoners.

Although the scanty succours sent from France failed to reach it, Governor de Vaudreuil determined to make a final effort to retake Quebec. He sent de Lévis, therefore, from Montreal with all his available forces. After great difficulty; Bourlamarque with an advanced guard, gained a footing in the rear of the city in April, 1760. Gen. Murray, anxious to attack the French before they could concentrate their strength, at once marched out to give them battle. About 3,500 men were engaged on each side. After a desperate encounter at Sts. Foye, the British were forced to retire within the city walls, leaving their artillery in the hands of the French. De Lévis having arrived, now commenced the siege, and both parties anxiously waited for reinforcements from home. Those for General Murray having arrived first, de Lévis was compelled to raise the siege and retreat, leaving all his stores and some of his artillery behind him.

Montreal was invested by a force of 17,000 men under Gen. Amherst. Resistance was useless; and on the 8th of September, 1760, was signed that memorable document, by which the whole of Canada was solemnly transferred from the French to the British crown. And after one hundred and fifty years of heroic struggle, with scant means of defence, against powerful rival colonists and a relentless Indian enemy, the first promoters of European civilization and enterprise in Canada were compelled to give place to a more aggressive race. But they did so with honour, and as a parting tribute to their unflinching valour and fidelity, the last defenders of Canada, ere returning to France, obtained from their conquerors, and left as a legacy to their countrymen, a guarantee for the free exercise of their religion, and for other privileges which were dear to a people about to be transferred from their own to the protection of a foreign flag.

Wolfe's monument is erected on the spot where the wounded general was carried to die. He received his last wound, (for he was several times wounded) on the height a little above, where the new jail now stands. It is a very chaste circular column rising from a square pedestal, and surmounted by a sword and helmet. On the one side of the pedestal is an inscription, as follows:

Here died

Victorious
Sept. 13
1759.

And on the other side

The Ste. Foy monument occupies the site of Dumont's mill, famous as the scene of a succession of sanguinary attacks and repulses on the day of the battle of Ste. Foye.—It bears on the north side of the pediment a Gallic Cock, on the opposite an inscription testifying that it was erected by the St. Jean Baptiste society to the memory of the brave men who fell there. On the shield to the east is the name MURRAY and the British Insignia, on that to the west LEVIS, surmounted by the arms of France. The foundation is of stone and the column of fluted bronzed iron, forming an exceedingly well proportioned and handsome monument. The foundation was laid with much ceremony in 1855, but the column was not commenced till 1860 and the inauguration took place only in October, 1863. It ought to be mentioned that the statue of Bellona was the gift of Prince Jérôme Napoléon. The statue is ten feet in height and the monument seventy feet in all.

In 1775 the Americans under Arnold and Montgomery invested the city and an assault was made on the 31st December which was repulsed, and Montgomery was killed and Arnold wounded, but the siege was maintained until the following spring and soon after the Americans withdrew all their forces from the country.

In 1791 the province was divided into Upper and Lower Canada, and in June, 1792, parliamentary government was inaugurated in Lower Canada. The provinces were again united in 1840 and the DOMINION OF CANADA was created July 1st, 1867.

CITY OF QUEBEC.

There is no city in America more famous in the annals of history than Quebec, and few in the continent of Europe more picturesquely situated. Whilst the surrounding scenery reminds one of the unrivalled views of the Bosphorus, the airy site of the citadel and town recalls to mind Innsbruck and Edinburgh. Quebec has witnessed beneath its walls the two foremost nations of Europe arrayed in battle to decide the fate of empire in the New World, and having offered in its environs a refuge and winter quarters to Europeans so early as 1534, this city must ever awaken the deepest interest in every student of history.

Mr. J. N. Lemoine, in his very interesting "Maple Leaves," says:— "Viewed from any one of its approaches, it impresses the stranger with a conviction of strength and permanency. The reader of American history, in wandering over its squares, ramparts and battle fields, puts himself at once in communion with the illustrious dead. The achievements of daring mariners, the labors of self-sacrificing missionaries of the Cross, and the conflict of military heroes who bled and died in the assault and defence of its walls, are here re-read with ten-fold interest. There the lover of Nature, in her grandest and most rugged forms as in her gentlest and most smiling moods, will find in and around it an affluence of sublime and beautiful subjects."

The celebrated PROFESSOR SILLIMAN, who visited the city in 1819, writes: Quebec at least for an American City, is certainly a very peculiar place. A military town—containing about twenty thousand inhabitants—most compactly and permanently built—stone its sole material—environed as it is to its most important parts by walls and gates—and defended by numerous heavy cannon—garrisoned by troops having the arms, the costume, the music, the discipline of Europe—foreign in language, features and origin, from most of those whom they are sent to defend—founded on a rock, and in its highest parts, overlooking a great extent of country—between three and four hundred miles from the ocean—in the midst of a great continent—and yet displaying fleets of foreign merchant men in its fine capacious bay—and showing all the bustle of a crowded sea-port—its streets narrow—populous, and winding up and down almost mountainous declivities—situated in the latitude of the finest parts of Europe—exhibiting in its environs, the beauty of a European capital—and yet in winter, smarting with the cold of Siberia—governed by a people of different language and habits from the mass of the population—opposed in religion, and yet leaving that population without taxes, and in the full enjoyment of every privilege, civil and religious: such are the prominent features which strike a stranger in the City of Quebec," but material changes have taken place since the above was written, the Imperial garrison has been withdrawn, the fortifications in many instances demolished, the gates, with one exception, removed, the city has increased its boundaries, and the population, has reached the respectable number of 60,000 in 1871.

Quebec is situated on the left bank of the St. Lawrence, in latitude (of North East bastion) $46^{\circ} 49' 6''$ N., longitude $71^{\circ} 13' 45''$ W., mean temperature in winter 10° , in summer 68° Fahr; mean of the year 39° . Distant 400 miles from the mouth of the St. Lawrence, 180 miles N.E. of Montreal and 328 miles N.N.W. of Portland, Me. The city consists of the Upper and Lower Towns. The Upper Town occupies the higher part of the promontory, and is surrounded with walls and other military works, making it one of the strongest fortresses in America. The Lower Town, which is built around the base of Cape Diamond, is the seat of commerce. In many places the rock has been cut away to make room for the buildings. On the St. Charles side the water at flood tide formerly washed the foot of the rock, but solid foundations on which whole streets are built now occupy the side where formerly ships of large burden rode at anchor. The streets are said to follow the old Indian paths, and are generally narrow and irregular, and the houses are principally of stone and brick. The banks of the rivers are lined with warehouses and wharves, the latter jutting about 200 feet into the stream, the water being of sufficient depth to float vessels of the largest size. The ascent to the Upper Town is by a steep and narrow winding street and long flights of steps, that leading from St. Roch's numbers 117.

The following are the chief object of interest.

THE ENGLISH CATHEDRAL.—This is said to be one of the most perfect and pleasing specimens of architecture in Canada. It is built of grey sandstone, and is 136 feet in length and 75 in breadth. The church was consecrated in 1804, and King George III presented it with a magnificent communion service, altar cloth, books, etc. The ground was originally the property of the Recollet fathers. Their church and convent were destroyed by fire in 1796, and this part of their property was bought and the church erected by the bounty of the Government.

There are here a handsome monument of white marble to the memory of Dr. Mountain, the first Protestant bishop of Quebec,* and one to the Duke of Richmond, a former Governor-General, who died of hydrophobia near Ottawa in 1819.

THE FRENCH CATHEDRAL.—This is the largest and internally the most magnificent church in the city. Its length is 216 feet and its breadth 180. It was erected under the auspices of the illustrious Laval, first bishop of Quebec, and consecrated in the summer of 1666 under the name of "The Church of the Immaculate Conception." It is divided into a nave and two aisles, and two chapels in each aisle. The lofty ceiling is elegantly vaulted in stucco, and there is ample accommodation for four thousand persons. This church suffered severely when the English batteries at Point Levi hurled shell upon the town previous to the victory at Abraham's Plains. A great part of the lower town was destroyed, and the church was set on fire and so shattered that it became almost a total ruin. All the interior decorations were destroyed as well as the many fine pictures with but one exception, that of the present grand altar piece, representing the Conception, after the style of LeBrun. After the province was ceded to the British, the church was repaired, and the pictures which now enrich it were placed there.

CHURCH OF NOTRE DAME DES VICTOIRES.—This ancient church is an object of great interest. It was erected previous to 1690 on the site of the fort erected by Cartier's men in the autumn of 1535. The ground is now much lower than at that date. In the first mentioned year amidst the joy caused by the defeat of the English forces under Sir William Phipps who besieged Quebec, the fête of Notre Dame de la Victoire was established and ordered to be annually celebrated in the church on the 7th of October, that being the day on which the first intelligence of the coming of the English was received. On that occasion "M. de la Colombière, the Archdeacon, delivered a most eloquent discourse." Twenty-one years later, when the news of the

* It is said the King was greatly perplexed when called to choose a bishop for the new see of Quebec, and that on an occasion when Dr. Mountain was present he asked his advice. "Sir," said the Dr., "if your Majesty had faith, the matter might be easily decided." "Pray explain," replied the King. "If your Majesty had faith," replied the witty divine, "you would say unto this Mountain," placing his hand on his breast, "be thou removed into that see, and it would be accomplished." That Mountain was moved accordingly.

shipwreck of an English fleet under Sir Hovenden Walker, on its way to attack Quebec, was received, this second victory, as it was called, was celebrated as little less than miraculous. Again the eloquent voice of the worthy Archdeacon was heard, and the church received the name of "Notre Dames des Victoires." It was nearly consumed by fire during Wolfe's bombardment, but was afterwards repaired. It is a very plain building. In a little chapel is a full size figure of the Saviour, and there are a few paintings on the walls.

THE URSULINE CONVENT.—The first and principal object of the French colony in Canada was the propagation of the faith and the diffusion of the Gospel, the glory of God and of the Christian name. And hence many of the earlier grants were made to religious bodies for this express purpose. Among the first who took an active interest in this laudable work was Madeleine de Chauvigny, better known as Madame de la Peltrie, a young widow of Alencon, of rank and fortune, who came to Quebec on the 1st of August, 1639, with three nuns, and for thirty-two years devoted her whole time to the education of the young Indian girls as well as those of French origin. The first building was destroyed by fire in 1650, nine years after its foundation, and again in 1686, but was again rebuilt, and portions of it still stand: it occupies with its gardens and outbuildings seven acres in its own fief of St. Joseph. Its school has long maintained its reputation as one of the first in the province. The remains of Montcalm were buried in the garden of the convent and were disinterred in 1833, when the skull, in an excellent state of preservation, was enclosed in a glass case, with its base surrounded by a military collar, and is now in the custody of the chaplain, the Rev. Mr. Lemoine.

In the chapel of the convent built in 1724 there are many fine paintings. One of large size, immense value and high merit represented Christ at meat in the house of Simon, the Death of St. Jérôme, St. Nouns admitting St. Pelaginus to Penance, the Wise and Foolish Virgins, the Miraculous Draught of Fishes, the Virgin and Infant, St. Catherine, St. Thérèse in Ecstasy, the Adoration of the Shepherds, the Saviour preaching, and others. There are also a number of relics, including the body of St. Clement, the skull of St. Justus, pieces of the holy cross and of the crown of thorns. Upon the wall of the chapel is a small mural monument erected to the memory of Montcalm by Lord Aylmer bearing the following inscription:

"Honneur à Montcalm ! Le destin en lui dérochant la Victoire l'a recompensé par une mort glorieuse."

"Honor to Montcalm ! Destiny in depriving him of Victory recompensed him with a glorious death."

THE CONVENT OF THE GREY NUNS.—The convent of "Sœurs Grises," or Grey Nuns, is a handsome building, immediately without St. John's gate and overlooking the valley. It was founded in 1848 by Monseigneur Turgeon. The sisters are in number sixty-six, with twenty-four novices and give shelter to one hundred and thirty-six orphans and infirm persons; they also give instruction to about seven hundred female children. It is supported by the labor of the sisters, a small fee by some of the pupils, and a grant from the Government.

THE ASYLUM OF THE GOOD SHEPHERD.—This institution is similar in its object to the convent of the Grey Nuns. There are twenty-four sisters and nineteen novices, and about five hundred young girls receive instruction. In the Asylum there are several penitents and also in the reformatory.

THE GENERAL HOSPITAL.—This is one of the oldest public institutions in Quebec, and was founded in 1693 by M. St. Valier, second bishop of Quebec. It is situated on the banks of the St. Charles opposite the peninsula of Stadaconé, near the spot where Cartier wintered in 1535-'36, and about a mile from the upper town. The object of the endowment was the relief of the sick and disabled poor of all descriptions, and Charlevoix describes it as "the finest house in all Canada, and would be no disparagement to our largest cities in France." The founder expended one hundred thousand crowns in buildings, furniture, etc. It is in charge of the nuns of St. Augustine, a separate and independent community consisting of a Lady Superior, forty-five nuns and several novices and postulants, who have entire charge of the hospital and school. Within the chapel lie the remains of the founder of the hospital and also those of the Reverend Mother Louise Soumand, the first Superioress of the convent. It was here that the American general Arnold and several of his companions in arms were conveyed from the field of battle, and where it is needless to say they experienced the kindest treatment.

THE MARINE HOSPITAL.—This is a magnificent building of cut stone standing on the rock of the peninsula near Cartier's bay. The foundation stone was laid by the Governor, Lord Aylmer, May 28th, 1832, and it was opened in July, 1834. The exterior of the Marine Hospital is of the Ionic order, and the proportions are taken from the temple of the Muses near Athens; with the wings it measures 206 feet from east to west. The wings are 100 feet in depth, and the whole premises contain an area of about six acres for garden, grounds, etc. There are Roman Catholic and Protestant chapels, clergymen's apartments and wards for upwards of six hundred patients. It is supported by a tax on the tonnage of each vessel arriving from sea and a part of the Emigrant tax. The edifice cost over one hundred thousand dollars.

THE HOTEL DIEU.—This hospital was founded by the Duchess D'Aiguillon, who about the year 1637 obtained from the "Company of Merchants" a concession of the fief Ste. Marie and twelve acres within the city, on which the Hospital now stands. The chapel was completed March 16th, 1646. The first building was of wood. In 1645 the foundation of one of stone was laid by the Governor de Lauzon, and a portion of this is still standing and is occupied by the female ward. In 1696 great additions were made, and it gradually assumed its present appearance. The community consists of a Superior and thirty-three nuns.

THE QUEBEC SEMINARY.—This institution was founded in 1663 by M. de Laval, the first Bishop of Quebec, and was intended chiefly as an ecclesiastical institution.* In 1666 the Grand Seminary was built of wood, and two years later the Little Seminary was opened. The former is strictly theological, the latter literary and scientific. When the order of Jesuits was abolished the members of the Seminary threw open its doors to the youth of the country generally, and secularized the establishment in a great degree. The stone buildings of the Seminary enclosed by high walls are 684 feet in length. During the sieges they suffered greatly, and from fire in 1701, 1705 and 1865. In 1704 the entire number of inmates numbered fifty-four, now the personel exceeds four hundred. Attached to the buildings is a beautiful garden covering six or seven acres in the heart of the city. The chapel contains several fine paintings.

LAVAL UNIVERSITY.—The three large and fine cutstone buildings of the Laval University occupy one of the most prominent sites in the city, and were erected in 1852 by the corporation of the Quebec Seminary at the enormous cost of $238,788. The University has in the province six educational establishments, in affiliation with it. The library contains 55,000 volumes in every department of literature and science, upwards of 6,000 geological and mineralogical specimens, about 4000 specimens of beasts, birds, fishes, insects, and a number of other rare and interesting objects. There is also here a splendid collection of paintings. The University has a royal charter and faculties of theology, law, medicine and arts.

* The Right Reverend François de Montmorency Laval was born at Laval, in France, in 1623. In his youth he was known as Abbé de Montigny; and, in 1659, he came to Canada as Vicar Apostolic, with the title of Bishop of Pétrée; in 1674, he was named first Roman Catholic Bishop of Quebec. He founded and endowed the Quebec Seminary, in 1663, (which, in 1852, became, by Royal charter, the Laval University). He also established an industrial school and model farm, at St. Joachim, below Quebec. He made great efforts to prevent drunkenness among the Indians; and, by his influence at Court, had the administration of government transferred from a viceroy to a superior council, under certain wise restrictions, which he had submitted to Louis XIV. He effected great good in the colony, and died amid many regrets at Quebec, 6th May, 1708, at the venerable age of 85 years.

MORRIN COLLEGE.—This is a large stone structure consisting of a centre and two wings, and was built by government in 1812 for a prison, and was occupied for the purpose for upwards of fifty years. Its original cost was $75,000. It was purchased for $12,000, was greatly altered and repaired, and was endowed by the founder, Dr. Morrin, as a Presbyterian College. It is affiliated with McGill University of Montreal. The north wing is occupied by the splendid library and museum of the Literary and Historical Society, which was established in 1825 by the Earl of Dalhousie under royal charter.

THE JESUIT COLLEGE.—This building is deserving of mention as the oldest edifice in Quebec. It was erected in 1635, destroyed by fire in 1640, and rebuilt in 1646. After the capture of the city in 1759, General Murray "finding no place so proper as the Jesuits' College to lodge the provisions, that the fathers are few in number and the society being in general remarkable for intrigue, I acquainted them with the necessity I was under to take possession of the whole building, and gave them leave to depart where they pleased." It was occupied as a barracks until a few years ago. It is about to be converted into government offices.

DURHAM TERRACE, GOVERNOR'S GARDEN AND WOLFE AND MONTCALM'S MONUMENT.—Durham terrace, the favorite promenade of the citizens of Quebec, is more than 200 feet above the river, and furnishes a prospect which for varied beauty and grandeur cannot be surpassed. It occupies the site of the old castle of St. Louis, founded by Champlain in 1623, and which was the residence of the governors of Canada until the end of the last century. It was totally destroyed by fire on the 23rd of January, 1834. The old castle was a fine stone building over two hundred feet in length. It stood near the precipice and its solid stone buttresses may yet be seen.

A little southward from Durham Terrace is the Palace or Governor's garden, where stands Wolfe and Montcalm's Monument, the foundation stone of which was laid on the 15th of November, 1827, by Lord Dalhousie, then governor general. The monument is of granite from a design of Major Young of the 79th regiment and cost upwards of £700. It is sixty-five feet in height, and bears on its pedestal the following inscription from the pen of the late Dr. John Charlton Fisher.

WOLFE. MONTCALM.

Mortem Virtus Communem.

Famam Historia.

Monumentum Posteritas.

Dedit.

"Military virtue gave them a common death: History, a common fame; Posterity, a common monument."

For this chaste and appropriate inscription Dr. Fisher was awarded a golden medal.*

The remains of Wolfe were conveyed to England by the "Royal William," an 84-gun ship, and buried in a vault of the parish church of Greenwich, where his parents are also interred. A monument to his memory was erected in Westminster Abbey.

Montcalm died two days after the battle, and was interred in the chapel of the Ursuline convent.

THE FORTIFICATIONS.—The fortifications of Quebec, originating in the necessity of guarding against the inroads of the Iroquois, have from their beginning by Champlain in 1635 eventually attained such proportions as to give Quebec the name of the "Gibraltar of America." Recently great changes have been made, the Imperial Government has withdrawn all the troops, and the garrison consists of only a few of the Canadian Militia; but the interest attached to the massive old walls will not be the less diminished.

The line of fortifications enclosing the ancient city and citadel is about two and three quarter miles in extent. From the south point of the citadel to the artillery barracks, about two-thirds of the whole line, they consist of a massive wall erected in the perpendicular rock, protected by several batteries of various strength placed at intervals, the most formidable being known as the Grand Battery, consisting of twenty-four thirty-two pounders and two mortars. This battery is two hundred feet above the St. Lawrence. The citadel though within the city walls is a complete and independent fortalice, and occupies about forty acres.

From the flagstaff a panoramic view may be obtained which is scarcely to be surpassed. From this point the position of the city is well defined. The St. Charles and St. Lawrence are seen forming the promontory on which it is built, the beautiful Isle of Orleans, the long, bold wooded sides of the river as far as the eye can reach, the range of hills to the left, Point Levi on the opposite shore, ocean and river craft of every

* Louis Joseph de Montcalm (Marquis of St. Veran), a distinguished French general, was born at Condiac, in France, in 1712. He distinguished himself at the battle of Placenza; and, in 1756, was made a Field Marshal. Having succeeded General Dieskau in Canada, he took Oswego from the English in that year, and Fort William Henry (Lake George), in 1757.

James Wolfe was born at Westerham, Kent, in 1726. He had distinguished himself in the campaigns on the continent of Europe when in 1757 he was, at the age of thirty-one years, created a Major General and sent to aid in the conquest of New France. In conjunction with Boscawen and Amherst, he captured the strongly fortified post of Louisbourg, Cape Breton, in 1758. He was afterwards entrusted with the expedition which resulted in the capture of Quebec.

description, the villages of Beauport and Charlesbourg, and the white-washed cottages of the habitants, all combine to form a fitting foreground to the lofty mountains in the far distance encircling the whole.

THE POST OFFICE—Is a fine building, recently erected. The celebrated figure of the Chien d'Or or "Golden Dog, which was formerly over the door of the old building, has been preserved, gilt, and placed over the door of the new building, with the following lines beneath :

"Je suis un Chien qui ronge l'os,
En rongeant je prend mon repos ;
Un temps viendra, qui n'est pas venu,
Que je morderai qui m'aura mordu."

"I am a Dog knawing a bone,
While I knaw I take my repose ;
The time will come, though not yet,
When I will bite him who now bites me."

The old house was built by M. Nicolas Jacquin Philibert in 1735, and it is said the figure of the dog was intended as a lampoon on the Intendent Bigot, whom Philibert regarded as an enemy. The exasperated intendent in revenge employed an officer of the garrison to assassinate the unfortunate merchant. The murderer was, however, pursued by a brother of the victim to Pondicherry in the East Indies and there slain.

Among other objects of interest, which our space will not permit us to describe more particularly, may be mentioned the following :

The Convent of the Congregation of Notre Dame opposite St. Roch's Church, erected in 1843 ; (the Rev. M. Charest, parish priest of St. Roch, subscribed $32,000 of his own personal means to this and other charitable and educational institutions in his parish ;) the Ladies' Protestant Home, St. Bridget's Asylum, the Findlay Asylum, Beauport Lunatic Asylum, Holland House, Montgomery's head-quarters in 1775, the humble one story frame house, where the unfortunate general was carried after being found in his snowy shroud at Près-de-Ville ; the Maternity of St. Joseph and the numerous Catholic and Protestant churches not before described. A pleasant drive of about eight miles brings the visitor to the famed Falls of Montmorenci. The height of the fall is about 250 feet and the width at the brink about 20 yards. The Chaudière Falls, about nine miles above Quebec, are extremely picturesque. The Falls of St. Ann, 24 miles above the city, are also noted for their extraordinary beauty. Lake St. Charles and a number of other small bodies of water in the vicinity are noted for their fine fishing, and are much frequented. In commercial importance, wealth, and population Quebec ranks next to Montreal, and as a seaport next after Halifax and St. Johns. The local trade and that with the maritime provinces is large, but the chief business is ship building and the lumber trade. A large number of vessels from 1000 to 2000 tons and even larger are launched annually and millions of feet of lumber are exported. The North Shore and Ives and Kennebec railways will greatly benefit the city and with the Grand Trunk will open direct communication with the railway systems of the New England and Western States and Ontario. Quebec has at several times suffered greatly by fires, but these have been invariably followed by the great improvement of the burnt districts in which substantial brick and stone buildings have replaced the old wooden ones. The extensive water works and telegraph system will almost certainly prevent the recurrence of those disastrous conflagrations which so seriously impede a city's prosperity. Quebec is the summer point of departure of the Allan line of steamers for Liverpool and Glasgow and also of a weekly line of steamers for the maritime provinces and the gulf ports. Two lines of steamers ply daily between Quebec and Montreal, and another line makes four trips weekly to the Saguenay and the fashionable watering places.

LORETTE.

About eight miles from Quebec, on the St. Charles river, is the Indian village of Lorette, occupying a portion of a reservation owned in common by the tribe. These people are the remnant of the Hurons, who at one time numbered upwards of 30,000 souls and occupied the beautiful country between Lakes Simcoe and Huron. Almost annihilated by the Iroquois, this location was granted them in 1650 as a refuge. They cultivate their lands and derive a considerable revenue from traffic. The Government also supplies them with sundry articles. They are all Roman Catholics and possess a neat parish church. They number about seventy-five families. The Falls of Lorette are very much admired.

BATISCAN.

A large and prosperous village and parish on the north shore of the River St Lawrence, county of Champlain and district of Three Rivers, 69 miles from Quebec, 21 from Three Rivers and 111 from Montreal. Ocean steamers and other vessels here await the high tide to enable them to pass the Richelieu rapids.

This parish was first established in 1827 and erected May 11th, 1841. A part of it, St Geneviève de Batiscan, was united with the parish of St. Narcisse October 16th, 1866.

The village is pleasantly situated on the Batiscan river. There is an extensive lumber, flour, tanning and general business done here. The steamers from Quebec and Montreal stop here, and the Montreal Telegraph Co have an office here, and it will be a station of the North Shore Railway.

From a hill at the East point, on the top of which is a race-course, a most beautiful view is obtained down the St Lawrence: the church of Lotbinière, twenty-five miles distant, is plainly seen, and on the south side of the river from Gentilly, St Pierre les Becquets, and to St Jean d'Eschailions at the point called Cap la Roche, and on the north from Point a Citronelle up Batiscan to St Anne de la Pérade and Grondines.

The beautiful parish church, erected at a cost of $30,000, is a notable feature of this pleasant village.

SOREL!

The flourishing town of Sorel is pleasantly situated at the confluence of the St. Lawrence and Richelieu rivers, on the south shore of the former, seigniory of Sorel, district of Richelieu. It was incorporated as a town in 1860.

Sorel possesses an extensive and well supplied market, several shipyards, foundries, and a number of other industrial establishments. The harbor is the winter quarters of a large number of the steamers and other crafts plying between Montreal and Quebec, and vessels are laden here with sawn lumber for the South American and the West Indian markets. There are large shipyards on the opposite side of the Richelieu. A railway between this place and Upton or Richmond is under consideration.

Sorel is the chef-lieu of the district of Richelieu, which comprises the counties of Berthier, Richelieu and Yamaska. The Superior and Circuit courts are held here three times a year and the Criminal court twice.

The town is built on the site of a fort erected in 1665 by M. de Tracy, and was for many years the summer residence of the governors of Canada. The streets are wide, laid out at right angles and bordered with elm and other ornamental trees which add greatly to its appearance. The Royal square, with the magnificent elms in its vicinity, is the admiration of all visitors. Steamers daily to Quebec and Montreal. Distant from Montreal 45 miles, Quebec 135, Three Rivers 45, St. Ours 12, and from Berthier 6 miles. Population 7,000.

HISTORICAL SKETCH.

In the year 1599-1600, under the patronage of Henri IV, King of France, Pontegravé, a merchant of St Malo, and Chauvin, a master mariner of Rouen, made several voyages to Tadousac, at the mouth of the Saguenay, and returned with valuable cargoes of the rich furs which had been collected there from the country north of it. These partners visited the site of Three Rivers, and Pontegravé expressed a desire to establish a trading post there, but was overruled by his associate in favor of Tadousac, where a stone building, the first in Canada, was erected, and a party of sixteen men left for the winter; the greater part of them, however, perished of hunger or disease before the spring following. In 1603, Champlain, on his way to Hochelaga, stopped at the mouth of the St Maurice and examined the fitness of the locality for a trading post, and soon after the germ of the future CITY was planted, by the arrival of a small body of officials of the company, and in 1615 regular religious services were established here as also at Quebec and Tadousac.

During the year 1618 the colony was reduced to the greatest extremities through the defection of its Indian allies. The station at Three Rivers had become a favorite resort, and while many hundred savages were assembled there, a petty quarrel occurred at Quebec between a few Indians and colonists, and two of the whites were killed. This outrage was followed by a conspiracy, which was entered into by the Indians at Three Rivers, which had for its object the destruction of the entire colony; but fortunately the Recollet brother Duplessis discovered it, and was successful in turning the savages from their design, and a reconciliation was accomplished.

In the year 1624 the Recollet Fathers Sagard and Le Caron, who had long labored as missionaries among the Hurons, were instrumental in promoting a peace between the French and Hurons on one side, and the Iroquois and other tribes on the other. The Recollets accompanied a flotilla of sixty Huron canoes down the Ottawa and St Lawrence to Three Rivers, at which place, in the presence of Champlain, it was intended to agree upon and ratify a general treaty. On the way they were joined by twenty-five Iroquois and thirteen Algonquin canoes bearing deputies. The usual ceremonies being observed, and presents exchanged, a treaty of peace was formally concluded, and the several contracting parties agreed to remain on friendly terms with each other. This treaty was not, however, long observed by the fickle and barbarous Iroquois, who seized every opportunity to harass their hereditary foes. The Hurons brought their peltry and other products of the chase from the Ottawa regions and the Upper St Lawrence to the trading posts at Quebec and Three Rivers, and this afforded their enemies opportunities of indulging at once their ferocity and their cupidity. The Iroquois at this time traded with the Dutch colonists of the Hudson, who supplied them with fire arms, ammunition and ardent spirits. The great injury thus inflicted on French commerce, added to other causes, served to renew hostilities. On another occasion the Governor induced the Iroquois to again send deputies to Three Rivers for the purpose of negotiating terms of peace. During the interview several Huron canoes appeared in sight, and the Iroquois suddenly broke up the meeting and rushed out in pursuit of the unsuspecting visitors. As one of the conditions of peace they demanded that the French should abandon the Hurons and Algonquins to their mercy but as no such conditions could be entertained, no satisfactory peace could be established.

In the year 1634 the settlement of Three Rivers was greatly augmented by the arrival of large numbers of persons who permanently resided there, and many of whose descendants are yet to be found in the city and neighborhood. In 1635, on the death of Champlain, M. de Chateaufort succeeded him for a short time; but on the arrival of de Montmagny, the new viceroy, he became Governor of Three Rivers. Montreal was founded May 18th, 1642.

The fur trade had been for many years almost altogether monopolized by the Company of One Hundred Associates, but about the year 1645 they found it advantageous to concede the right to traffic under certain restrictions to the inhabitants of Quebec, Three Rivers and Montreal upon payment of one thousand beaver skins annually, and certain local expenses to the Government.

This arrangement was confirmed by royal edict, and the company denounced all further claim to interfere in the internal management of the affairs of the country.

The early history of Three Rivers, like that of the other settlements of New France, may be summed up in the general statement of varying prosperity, dread of Indian incursions and the other circumstances incident to a new colony. For a long time, indeed until after the cessation of French rule,* Three Rivers was, in point of trading importance, the successful rival of Quebec and Montreal.

In 1662 M. Boucher, commandant of Three Rivers, was sent by d' Mesy, the Governor, to France, to solicit aid against the Iroquois. The mission was successful. The King sent out a regiment under the command of Sieur Dumont, which was soon after followed by several other large detachments, including a portion of the famous Carignan Regiment. These arrivals afforded great relief to the inhabitants.* In the following year it was determined to employ these troops in the chastisement of the Iroquois, and on the 23rd of July, 1666, the advanced guard arrived at Three Rivers, which up to the very time of their arrival had suffered from the attacks and depredations of the savages. This expedition was very successful, and resulted in a peace which continued for eighteen years.

In the year 1690 three expeditions against the English settlements were sent from Quebec, Montreal and Three Rivers. That from Montreal arrived at Corlaer or Schenectady on the 18th of February, and at midnight attacked the unsuspecting victims, sixty of whom were massacred and twenty-seven carried into captivity. The Quebec party captured and destroyed the settlement of Casco near the present city of Portland, Maine.

The expedition from Three Rivers was commanded by François Hertel, who had with him his three sons and about fifty others, a few being Indians. Their route was by the St Francis and Connecticut rivers. After a weary march of two months they came to Salmon's Falls, now Portsmouth, New Hampshire. On the 27th of March, a similar tragedy to that of Schenectady was enacted. About thirty of the inhabitants were killed, a number

* In addition to the military reinforcement numerous immigrants arrived this year, including two hundred young women sent out as wives for the colonists.

* The posts of Three Rivers, Sorel, Montreal, Tadouac, Catarauqui (Kingston) and the Falls of Chambly were protected by palisaded enclosures of sufficient strength to protect them from any attack the savages were capable of making.

were taken into captivity, and the dwellings and other buildings were burned; upwards of two thousand domestic animals were also destroyed. The French lost only one man. In this year M de Ramezay commanded the troops at Three Rivers, and large reinforcements arrived. In 1697 the Ursuline convent was founded by Mgr de St Valier, second Bishop of Quebec. About the year 1715 the Governments of Quebec, Montreal and Three Rivers were sub-divided into eighty-two parishes.

After the cession of Canada the district of Three Rivers was governed by Col Burton with an Executive Council. In May, 1776, the Americans, after their unsuccessful attempts under Arnold to capture Quebec, fell back to Three Rivers, but their stores and artillery were captured by Carleton, and their retreat changed into a rout. The remnant arrived at Sorel, but were with the American garrison in that place obliged to surrender and soon after they left the country.

The progress of Three Rivers has been of a very marked character, and as soon as the opening up of the vast territory of the St Maurice is accomplished its prosperity will advance in proportion and, with its advantageous situation, great manufacturing facilities, and especially its yet undeveloped mineral wealth, which attracted the attention of the early explorers, together with its intelligent and enterprising population, a bright future is evident for the fair city of Three Rivers.

THE CITY OF THREE RIVERS, in extent, population and importance, is the third in the Province ranking after Montreal and Quebec. It is pleasantly and advantageously situated on the north shore of the St. Lawrence at the mouth of the St. Maurice river, which, together with the several islands there situated, is included within the limits of the Corporation.

This city is the seat of a Roman Catholic bishop, and the Cathedral is one of the finest edifices of the kind in the Dominion.

The law courts of the District are held here by a resident judge. The improvement of the river St. Maurice by the Government, in 1853, greatly aided in augmenting the prosperity of Three Rivers. About two hundred thousand dollars were expended in erecting booms, slides and other works on the river, which has already attracted the investment of upwards of $1,000,000 in lumber operations alone. The source of the lumber supply furnished by the St. Maurice and its confluents extends over a territory of about

MEDAILLES À L'EXPOSITION DE DUBLIN, 1865, ET À L'EXPOSITION DE PARIS, 1867.

7 Rue Buade, H. V., Quebec.

200,000 square miles. Immense quantities of lumber are annually exported, this being the chief depot whence it is shipped to Quebec, England, the United States, the West Indies and other places. This being a port of entry, goods are bonded if necessary. Great facilities for ship building, iron works, brick making and other manufactures are afforded here.

The causes that have heretofore militated against the greater development of the numerous and extensive resources of this District, namely, the want of railway communication and the extent of impracticable navigation of the St. Maurice in rear of the city, have been to a great extent removed by the building of the Three Rivers and Arthabaska branch of the Grand Trunk railway, thus opening up direct communication with the New England States, which require an immense supply of lumber, and Three Rivers being the nearest base of supply, almost monopolizes the trade. An Act of Parliament, granting a land aid and providing for the construction of a railway from Three Rivers to the Grand Piles on the St. Maurice, seventy miles distant, was passed several years ago, but no decided steps towards its commencement have yet been taken, but it is to be hoped the necessity of the undertaking will cause an immediate favorable consideration of the project. The North Shore railway from Montreal direct to Quebec will greatly facilitate the settlement of the country, open up its vast mineral resources, and, by the greater demand for labor, encourage emigration, and prove a source of incalculable advantage, not only to the city and vicinity but also to the Province.

The principal buildings are the Cathedral a magnificent edifice of cut stone. St Joseph's Seminary, the Court House the Market Hall and the Post Office a beautiful brick building which was erected at the sole expense of the postmaster C K Ogden, Esq. The public gardens opposite the City Hall, are pleasantly laid out with trees, statues and summer houses.

Steamers from Quebec and Montreal stop at Three Rivers. The famous and beautiful falls of Shawenegan, by many said to be only inferior to Niagara, are about twenty-four miles from the city, and those of the Grand Mère are thirteen miles further up the St. Maurice. Ferry boats are in direct communication with Doucet's Landing, the station of the railway on the opposite side of the river.

DISTANCES.—Montreal 90 miles, Quebec 90, Sorel 45, Arthabaskaville 35, and from Batiscan 21 miles. Population 10,000.
