Clifford.

The old Daly house is these days being moved along William street to occupy a new site between Mr. French's and Mr. Seeley's, Mr. Fritz having sold it to Mr. Buhrow of Carrick.

We are pleased to note Mr. H. Wendt fully recovered from his recent illness. His store and residence have each been fumigated by officers of the Board of Health.

The building for the new stock scales at the railway yard is now completed. The scales will be set up right away. The village has been put to large expense in the matter. The scales have been put there for the convenience of stock producers and shippers.

The trustees of Clifford public school have engaged Miss Dobson, daughter of Rev. A. B. Dobson, Fordwich, as teacher of the intermediate department for 1909 at a salary of $3.50. There were several applications.

We regret to learn of the illness of Rev. H. Bruer, Lutheran pastor, at Alsfeldt. The many friends of the devoted pastor will hope for a speedy recovery. He will be off duty for a week or two, probably.

LOYALTY OF THE LOCAL PAPER

The following paragraph from that excellent trade paper, Printer and Publisher, contains a few facts which are either not thought of at all, or very much appreciated by local business men everywhere, including quite a few in Mildmay.

"There are but few editors in this province who have not made a vigorous continuous fight against the mail order house. This has been done in the interest of the home merchant, and without money and without price. If the editors of the land had received regular advertising rates for all they have said against these enemies of the country merchant, they could now be wearing diamonds. Now the department store man appreciates advertising space and is willing to take all the average country editor has for sale, and at a good price. What other class of business or professional men would refuse business to help their friends, especially as many of said friends never seem in the least to return the compliment or even appreciate it?"

HICKS' WEATHER FORECASTS DECEMBER.

A Reactionary storm period is central on the 2nd, 3rd and 4th. This period is at the crisis of the Mercury period, and near the center of the Venus disturbance. The moon is on the celestial equator on the 3rd. By the 2nd rising temperature, falling barometer, cloudiness will appear in western sections. Winter rains, with lightning and thunder southward, be expected by the 3rd, turning general and destructive sleet northward. An early December, in all probability, will follow northwest.

A regular storm period covers the 7th to the 11th, having its center on the 8th. The Venus period is on the 10th, with moon at its greatest declination on the 9th, and rising on the 7th. We calculate that very general and severe winter storms will visit most parts of the country between the 7th and the 11th. These storms may come over from the preceding period in a spell of prolonged, threatening weather; but they will take on renewed and very decided force not far from the 7th, and during the 8th, 9th and 10th, they will move like vast storm-trains eastwardly across the country, bringing general blizzards of sleet and snow to all central and northern sections. Many wild and menacing storms and gales will be encountered on the north Atlantic Ocean and along the coasts.

A Reactionary storm period will be central on the 13th, 14th and 15th. It must be kept in mind that the Venus period together with December solstice make all this part of the month dubious and dangerous, especially on the seas in all parts of the northern hemisphere. Wintery gales and many driving, violent snow storms must be counted on, even in central to southern parts of sea and land.

A Regular storm period covers the 17th to the 22nd. This period is at the center, or crisis of the winter solstice. The moon passes across the celestial equator on the 17th. About that date it will turn warmer in the west, the barometer will begin falling, and storms of rain and snow will appear. During the 18th to 21st these storms will pass in regular order from west to east across the country. Within seventy hours of sunset on the 23rd, a seismic wave will be felt in many parts of the earth, especially in regions south of the equator. We will name Wednesday the 23rd, to Saturday the 26th, as the days of greatest seismic probability. Watch for yourself.

A Reactionary storm period is central on the 24th, 25th and 26th. Very severe and general cold will spread southward over sea and land, beginning in our own northwest about the 24th, reaching far southward progressively from about the 25th to 29th. We predict a hard winter for the country generally, with some extreme weather far into the south.

A Regular storm period is central on the 31st, beginning on the 29th and extending into January, 1909. The moon is on the equator on the 30th and at first quarter on the 31st, hence falling barometer, cloudiness, change to warmer and return of rain and snow may be expected in western parts of the country on the 30th and 31st. These storm and storm conditions will move eastward, reaching regions along the Atlantic seaboard about January 1st to 3rd, 1909.

Additional Locals.

—County Council meets at Walkerton next week, commencing on Tuesday.

UNCLE DICK;

Or, The Result of Diplomacy and Tact.

CHAPTER IX.—(Cont'd.)

He knew that to be a lie! Hope, that he had thought entombed, rose again. One thing incorrect, why not all? He said sharply—"You are mistaken!" "I don't think so, sir." "That hideous smile. Accursed this time by a pitying woman's pity for his simplicity. Like the generality of men—written under pity. It acted on him, the irritation of a rasp. He controlled himself sufficiently to enquire—" "Tall, fair, blue-eyed young lady?"

The description elicited a second edition of the pity—third of the head shaking, as the woman answered—

"That's the mistress, sir." It is difficult to keep a watchful eye on the safety valve. The indignation within him was seething to boiling point. He was getting up steam so rapidly as to create the impression that his emotions were arranged on the principle of the tubular boiler. He blurted out—"I tell you, you are wrong! Her name is Miss Mivvins!"

Combination of every unpleasant wrinkle that the human face is capable of assuming as she replied, with the incisiveness of a knife cut—

"Very likely that's one of her names, sir. Now I come to remember, I did once in a shop hear her called so—called so by her own child."

That was the last straw! the safety valve was discarded.

"Her own child!" "Yes. The little girl who's always with her. The one with the curly hair as some people call her."

Amazement! Consternation! Disappointment! A combination of these feelings, and many other indescribable ones, made him break out with—

"Then—then she is married?" All the subtle devilish suggestions in her came to the surface. To emphasize the point of her answer, slow head-shaking was necessary—"I couldn't say as to that, sir."

She smiled too that horrible smile again! The desire to speak evil of others assails some natures irresistibly. She really could not resist—October lodger or no lodger. "Thank you. That will do."

He managed to dismiss her so, and the landlady left the room. She was fearful of having gone a little too far; yet was filled with the complacency with which such utterances—to such natures—is fruitful.

CHAPTER X.

The closing of the door behind his landlady was unheard by Masters. He did not move from the position in which the woman had left him for many, very many minutes.

When at last he rose, lifting his head, he caught sight of his own reflection in the mirror. Started back, almost cried out: there was such a deathly pallor on his face.

His mouth felt as parched as Sahara. Mechanically he mixed a whisky and soda, drank it off. Then laughed. Not a pleasant laugh; one of those built up on a sob.

Then self-railery: the old, old, ever sought useless salve. What a fool! What a fool he was to care! A woman! Just as he had always pictured them—always till the book he was now engaged on. When he thought how chaste and good and pure his last heroine was, on paper, he laughed again. The same laugh; with the same choking little catch-in-the-throat in it, too.

work came to him. Lying on his desk was a bundle of corrected galley proofs, which should have been posted to his publisher. Now it was too late: the post bag would be made up.

He was annoyed that he had allowed the incident—he was miserably failing in trying to label it so to himself—to interrupt the routine of his work. Another glance at the clock and he kicked off his slippers and horned on his shoes. Putting on a cap, fastening his greatcoat as he went, he hurried railway stationwards. For all the thickness of his coat he was not warm. There was no coldness around his heart as if it were ice-bound.

The last up-train left at 8 o'clock. In October the passengers made no great demand on the guard's attention; in the season he might have been, with justness, likened to a sardine packer. Entrustment of the bundle of proofs, to be posted by the railway man on arrival in London, was an easily arranged matter.

Crossing the hand with a piece of silver is as effective with the average guard as it is with a gypsy: the oracle is worked thereby. The proofs would reach the publisher by first post in the morning.

Masters had effected this arrangement by five minutes to eight; five minutes before the scheduled time for the train's departure for London. Having lighted a cigar, in the shelter of the waiting-room doorway, he buttoned up his coat, prepared for his return walk home.

As—buttoned up, cigar in mouth—he emerged from the station's precincts, he could not fail to observe the lights in the back windows of Ivy Cottage. The bungalow stood three minutes' walk away.

That he should have avoided, he knew; but the night was dark; he would not be seen. Moreover, he was in no way different from other moths who flutter round candles. So, more or less unconsciously, he was attracted; slowly walked in the direction of the light. The little god with wings is as experienced in the use of the magnet as the dart.

The corner of the road, which the rear of the house faced, was reached. Suddenly the back door of the house was opened. By the light in the passage behind he saw a man and a woman silhouetted in the door-frame, evidently engaged in actions of a farewell.

The woman had her arms lovingly round the man's neck. She fervently kissed him—his lips—again and again. Her sorrow at the parting was apparently of the deepest kind; at times she applied her handkerchief to her eyes. Not a detail of the incident escaped the attention of the man in the road.

Masters stood quite still watching them. Not an act due to ill-breeding; he was for the moment simply incapable of movement. Had his existence depended on a forward step, Death would have added another name to his list.

The couple came out in the garden; walked towards the gate. The path led straight from the door; the hall lamp still showed him the positions; the woman's arms clinging around the man.

It was well he stood in the shadow on that road; well that they were so occupied as to prevent their noticing him. Perhaps the iron that had entered into his soul travelled via his face. That would account for the seared look on it. It was as the face of the dead.

So different. Ah! So different had he thought her. Had linked up, in his mind, the purity of the snow in connection with her. This was the woman he had pictured; she was ever before him that tion. Then came the sound of a whistle, followed by the rumbling of the departing train.

Footsteps! He knew them—short as had been his acquaintance with them—along the gravel path; then the door of Ivy Cottage was shut. The blackness of the night could not have been heavier than the thoughts he was alone with. Ideas of things seemed to grow more entangled and confused every instant.

From the moment that he had despatched his parcel, he had been mentally accusing himself of folly of the highest class. Did so whilst lighting his cigar and on the way from the booking office—with the back of Ivy Cottage fronting him. Why had he believed those wretched over-the-wall gossips, when there was the face—those soulful eyes—of the woman herself to look into?

That he had listened to and questioned his landlady, was an insult to the woman of whom his mind was so full. He knew how those glorious, plumbless blue eyes of hers would flash contempt for him did she but know; she must never know! Standing there—near the house which enshrined what he thought the dearest and best in the world—he almost cursed himself. For his folly in doubting her. His future faith should obliterate the memory of that moment.

Then—then the back door had opened! It was a shock; a horrible shock. But there was confirmation of what he had been told. The scales fell from his eyes.

Minutes—they seemed to him like centuries—passed. The mist before his eyes cleared away; the veiling disappeared. But he felt that it would not be a display of wisdom to turn homewards, just yet.

Masters was a sensitive—hyper-sensitive is perhaps a better word—man. To rub up against inquiries from a garrulous landlady as to his health would prove more irritating than sand paper. He knew that his appearance would provoke comment; felt how he looked; determined to try and walk the look off.

By setting his face eastward, continuing on the station road for a mile or so, he would come out on the shore at what was known as The Gap. By walking along the sands therefrom, past the private owner's wall, he would be able to mount to the parade by the steps which faced his seat.

Lips tightened and his fingers clenched when he remembered the reference to this as "our" seat. The walk would do him good; he laughed a little at that last idea. As if, he thought, anything in the whole world would ever do him any good again!

Shaken faith is a wound that smartens acutely; the only surgeon able to apply a salve is Time.

CHAPTER XI.

It was a fitful night; one on which the clouds travelled swiftly. One moment the brightness of a silvering moon; the next comparative darkness. When the extinguishers hid the lamp of night; the illumination of the heavens was left to the stars.

There was sufficient light for Masters to find his way over the breakwaters without stumbling. At times, though, despite the brightness of the moon, his eyes saw dimly. With a swiftness bred of anger he knocked the dimness away, cursing his own irrespressible folly that

His heart—soul—was at a bursting point. If he could laugh, he thought; or cry himself! What an immense relief it would be!

Walking, smart was the only relief he experienced. Mental exertion was a sedate to mental energy; sufficient energy to last indefinitely. When on till he fell, that there was a fact; resting that tumultuous tion surged from himself. He was from the a fool as a fine as a ideal was shattered, he still loved its ruins. Therein lay the hopelessness of it all—and he knew it. Striding on, he savagely kicked out of his way, now and then, a stone. Poor sort of relief again.

The configuration of the coast line brought him to an abrupt standstill. The cliff, jutting out, was met by a barrier of high rocks. These latter were overgrown with seaweed of the slipperiest sort: defiance bidding Nature's sudden intervention in his proceedings produced a corresponding interruption in his thoughts.

Why should he think about this woman any longer? She was not worth wasting thought over. He had been happy enough without her—before he knew her. He would be happy without her still.

Cut the thought of her clean out of his mind; out of his heart. That, he told himself, was the correct thing to do. Life should be for him as if he had never seen her, never looked into the unfathomable depths of those forget-me-not eyes. It would be quite easy; a little effort of will was needed—that was all.

All that he meant; every word of it. Framed a resolution that he looked on as adamant. But he ignored an important factor; made no allowance for the strange vitality of that pure white flower: Love.

The axe of common sense may be laid to the root of the tree; may cut 't down root and branch. Still one small remaining tendril, hidden from the sight, will work its way into the heart; spread and grow until in its magnitude it overshadows every other thought. Such is love.

The Farm

HINTS ON SELLING POULTRY.

Have as good an article as you know how, just a little better than you have seen.

Above all, be honest, no matter what the other fellow does. Have your goods as represented.

As a rule I would rather sell poultry dressed. When sold alive there is a chance of tramping or smothering and for the beginner especially the shrinkage seems unreasonable.

If live poultry is fed a mash before shipping the shrinkage will be heavy. If fed at all give dry grain.

I do not think it right to starve poultry from twelve to twenty-four hours before sending on a journey that will take as many more hours. Twelve hours' starvation will clean the stomach.

Live poultry that pays for shipping should be docked at the farm. Never mix dead or alive poultry. Live will sell the former.

shouldn't be any). Burn all rubbish. Then owls, hawks, cats and crows can readily see and catch all field mice.

As a rule, the man who succeeds as an extensive farmer must keep stock to consume the bulk of the products of the farm, and no department of farming calls for greater intelligence and skill than the profitable feeding of stock. Whether kept for meat or milk, the greatest profit will always result from full feeding.

A herd of cows, properly fed and cared for, will turn out first-class butter, having a first-class color; but, if they are improperly fed and cared for, the butter will be correspondingly inferior and defective in color. These failings are concealed by artificial coloring, and the consumer has this inferior butter imposed upon him, for a first-class article, when, in reality, it is far from it, and lacks in the nutritive and healthful qualities of first-class butter. Honesty requires that everything should be sold for just what it is.

If you have no suitable shelter for the sheep, construct one. That is one way to put money into the pocket. If it is not possible to build a sheep barn that can be completely closed when that is desirable, construct a simpler shelter. Remember that the great object to be achieved is not warmth, but protection from storms. Sheep are well protected from the cold, but against storms they ought to have good protection. A very simple structure is a shed open on one side with a yard in front. It may be covered with straw or hay, but a better roof than that, and a more permanent one, is desirable. Build racks all around the shed.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Feed the horse from a low manger and not from a high overhead rack. It is not natural for a horse to get his rations in that way; naturally, he eats from the ground. A lot of dust rattles down by the overhead method.

The cow, whose food is largely cornmeal, will be likely to wear out early, but when there is a proper digestible ration given to cows, they may be fed liberally, so as to produce the best results in milk and butter and will last longer than will those cows that are so fed that they are always spring poor.

Overfeeding and high feeding do not mean the same by any means. High feeding means giving the animal all the food it can profitably digest and assimilate, and, in order to practice it successfully, there must be a variety of food, and the ration must be a digestible one and suited to the purpose intended. The intelligent farmer will not feed the same ration to a growing animal that he does to one he is fattening for the butcher, or to the cow he is

TWENTY-FIVE WERE KILLED

Gas Explosion in Excavation in Brooklyn Causes Their Death.

A despatch from New York says: Twenty-five persons are believed to have lost their lives in an explosion of gas which tore up a great section of Gold street, Brooklyn, on Friday. It is definitely known that fifteen persons were buried under the hundreds of tons of earth and timber that were thrown into the air by the explosion, and ten more persons are missing. The explosion occurred in a fifty-foot deep excavation that had been made in Gold street between York and Front streets, where a water main was being laid. The gas main recently sprung a leak, and in a manner unknown a spark came in contact with the escaping gas. There was a terrific explosion that lifted the surface of the street for half a block in both directions, and hurled dirt, paving stones and debris into the air.

When the smoke and dirt had been cleared away it was seen that the street had been opened from doorstep to doorstep over an area of nearly a block. The loosened earth and debris had fallen into the excavation, burying the score of laborers who were at work when the accident happened. Great tongues of flame shot out of the crevices in the street, and beside them geysers of water leaped into the air from a water main that had been shattered by the explosion. Two bodies were sticking out of the wreckage. Gold street was crowded with school children, when the explosion occurred, and that scores of children were not killed or injured was remarkable. A woman and three children were almost opposite the excavation when the earth crumbled under their feet and they were swept down into the hole under tons of wreckage. Two other children were on the opposite side of the street when the sidewalk caved in and they lost their lives.

Samuel Trout, who lived near the scene, lost his life in attempting to save a woman who was passing through Gold street at the time of the explosion and fell into the trench. Trout was caught by the flames from the blazing gas main and roasted alive. The woman was dragged out of the trench and saved by a boy.

MURDER IN RAILWAY CAR.

C. P. R. Car Cleaner Under Arrest at Winnipeg.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Thos. Hicks, a C. P. R. car cleaner, is under arrest, suspected of murdering Eccles Lennox, a Grand Trunk Pacific brakeman, at Portage La Prairie. On Monday Lennox started for the Old Country to bring his family to Canada; his dead body was found in a car the next morning in the C. P. R. yards at Winnipeg. He was shot through the head, and a revolver lay by his side. There was $60 in his pocket, and it is thought to be a case of suicide. Hicks is charged with having killed Lennox, after having had a row with him over money, and left the gun by his side to suggest suicide.

SUICIDE AT OTTAWA.

Chas. T. Moffatt, Law Clerk, Shoots Himself Dead.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Chas. T. Moffatt, law clerk in the office of Gemmill & May, took his life at noon on Sunday. He went into the janitor's room of the Carleton Chambers, where his firm has offices, and fired a bullet from a forty-four-calibre revolver through his head, dying instantly.

ED. LEE CAPTURED!

German Police Think They Have Toronto Jail Breaker.

Y., has received information that Edward Lee, alias Blackie, who it is alleged murdered Patrolman McCormick and seriously injured Patrolman Manger of the Niagara Falls, N. Y., police on the evening of July 22 last, after escaping from Toronto Jail with five others, has been apprehended in Berlin, Germany. The German authorities claim the man they have answers in every detail to the description sent them of Lee, and ask if the American authorities will extradite.

GIRL KILLED COASTING.

HELPLESS IN FACE OF DEATH

Twelve-Year-Old Dundas Girl Run Over and Fatally Injured.

A despatch from Hamilton says: Violet Norton, the twelve-year-old daughter of Edward Norton, Flamboro' street, Dundas, was run over by a Hamilton & Dundas car in Dundas about 5 o'clock on Thursday evening and received injuries from which she died at her home about 10 o'clock the same night. Miss Norton was crossing the tracks near the canal when her foot caught in the frog. She tried to pull it out, but without success, and though she called for help, no person was near. Shortly after her foot was caught she heard the car approaching. She cried to try and attract the motorman's attention and threw her body to one side, but the spot was unlighted and he could not hear her cries over the noise made by the car. The first she knew of the accident was after the car wheels had passed over her foot. This was terribly crushed near the knee. She was taken home, where Dr. Ryckert was called. He thought she would be brought to the city hospital for treatment, but she was too weak from loss of blood and shock, and rapidly declined.

CATTLE MARKET.

Toronto, Nov. 24.—Sales of the best butchers' steers and heifers ranged from $4.25 to $4.50 per cwt. Good loads were sold at $4 to $4.25 and medium at $3.35 to $3.75. Common cattle could be had from $1.75 per cwt. upwards. Quotations for light stockers ranged from $1.75 to $2.25 per cwt.

For the best milch cows as high as $70 was paid. The ordinary cows sold around $30 each. Choice veal calves are wanted. Sheep were steady and unchanged, while lambs were slow of sale. Select hogs continued to sell at $6.25 per cwt. fed and watered, Toronto.

WILL HANG FOR MURDER.

Stephen Szewryda Found Guilty at Brampton.

A despatch from Brampton, Ont., says: "Stephen Szewryda, the judgment of this court is that you be taken from here to the place whence you came, and there kept in close confinement until Thursday, the 11th day of February, 1909, and that you be taken thence to the place of execution, and there hanged by the neck until you are dead, and may the Lord have mercy on your soul." This was the sentence that Mr. Justice Riddell pronounced upon the Ruthenian who under the guise of friendship enticed a young fellow-countryman, Olvickh Loutick, a stranger in Canada, into a lonely wood near Erindale, and with a heavy bludgeon beat the poor boy to death.

A MAMMOTH ELEVATOR.

Plans of the Grand Trunk Pacific for Fort William.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Mr. W. R. Sinks, General Manager of the Stewart Company, who will build a big handling warehouse for the G. T. P. at Fort William, is here preparing to undertake the contract. He says this mammoth elevator involves the largest contract of the kind let in America. The tanks of the new storage warehouse will be of concrete and will have a capacity of three and a quarter million bushels, and the estimated cost is about $1,250,000.

SMALLPOX IN LUMBER CAMPS

ANDREW FOX MURDERED.

Thrown Out of Cab and Killed Behind Galloping Horse.

A despatch from Montreal says: Andrew Fox of Toronto was found dead on St. James street at 1 o'clock on Friday morning. He was thrown out of a cab by the cab-driver and dragged behind his galloping horse. The tragedy occurred on St. James street near the Grand Trunk station. Fox was in the cab with one or two other men, when a quarrel arose, and it is said the cab driver took part in the row. Two young men who profess to be eye-witnesses say that the cabby had smashed the man on the face and knocked him apparently unconscious to the ground. After knocking the man down the cabby got into the sleigh, caught hold of the unconscious man by the foot, and drove off down the street east at a furious pace, dragging the man after him over the rough snow.

GREAT FIELD OF COPPER.

Discovery Near Flor Island, Thunder Bay District.

A despatch from Port Arthur says: One of the richest and most extensive discoveries of copper in this district was made within the last few days near Flor Island, off Isle St. Ignac, at the entrance to Nepigon Strait, by Didace Carufel of Sudbury. It is said to extend for miles, and the deposits seem to run through a chain of mines continuing from Lamb Island lighthouse eastward. Carufel and his associate have taken up seventeen claims.

"Will Berlin be incorporated as a city next year?" is a question that will agitate the minds of the progressive citizens of the town during the next few months.

The council meeting on Monday evening the first steps were taken when a resolution, fathered by Aids. Lang and Clement, was passed requesting the town solicitor to inform the council what measures are necessary to be taken to make Berlin a city.

Hans came in from his ranch to buy a horse. "I've got the very thing you want," said Ike Bergman: "it's a fine road horse, five years old, sound as a quail, $175 cash down, and he goes ten miles without stopping." Hans threw up his hands skyward. "Not for me," he said—"not for me. I wouldn't give you five cents for him. I live eight miles from Astoria, and I'd haf to walk back two miles."

Forest fires during the recent dry autumn swept through a considerable portion of the Greenock swamp, clearing up a lot of undergrowth and killing much valuable timber, which, in consequence, must be taken out this winter, as if left for a year or so will rot and become worthless. To facilitate matters along this line Mr. W. D. Cargill, the owner, will run a railway into the centre of the timber limit and connect it with his mills. This means that this winter will witness great activity in the lumber camps, where a great rush of hands is wanted.

It has been decided that the act of last session, respecting the sale of patent medicines, shall come into force on the 1st of April. After that date any preparation which contains chloral, acornite, ergot, strychnine, or any other of the numerous list of deadly drugs will have to be approved by experts of the department of Inland Revenue, or bear a printed statement on the outside of each package that there is a deadly drug in the preparation, and the name of the drug.

A good deal of dickering has been going on during the last few days between John P. Klempp, proprietor of the Royal Hotel, and J. H. Mosack of Posmosa, for the sale and purchase of this hotel. We understand that they have agreed on the price, which, with the furniture is in the neighborhood of twelve thousand dollars, but that the writings have not been executed yet. And so it is a case of a sale and yet not a sale.—Telescope.

M. C. M. Bowan's house in Southampton was nearly burned last week. Men had been boiling oil on the stove to oil the floors. If it had not been for the good work of the fire brigade there would likely have been a bad fire.

Leaving a couple of men to assist in guarding the prisoners he remained with his force outside. But during the night these two men overpowered the sentries, set free the three imprisoned men, and with their assistance opened the gates to the Guides, who gained a firm footing in the fort before the garrison knew what was happening."

It was "The Guides" who furnished an escort of some seventy men to Cavagnari's mission to Kabul in 1879, and were massacred to a man. In the fourth sortie from the Residency the last Englishman was killed. Knowing this to be the case the enemy called on the remainder of "The Guides" to surrender, promising them their lives.

"Left in command was Jemadar Jewand Singh, a splendid Sikh officer of the Guides Cavalry, and not one whit behind his British officer in brave resolve. He deigned no word of answer to the howling crowd without, but to the few brave survivors within, perhaps a dozen or so, he said: 'The sahibs gave us this duty to perform, to defend this Residency to the last. Shall we then disgrace the cloth we wear by disobeying their orders now they are dead? Shall we hand over the property of the Sirkar, and the dead bodies of our officers, to these sons of perdition? I for one prefer to die fighting for duty and the fame of the Guides, and they that will do likewise follow me.'"

AND THEY MARCHED OUT TO DIE.

"The annals of no army and no regiment can show a brighter record of devoted bravery than has been achieved by this small band of Guides." So reads the inscription on the memorial at Mardan, which the British Government raised in memory of Kabul.

There has always been a keen competition for enrolment in "The Guides," and in the early days, when Lumsden was in command, there were sometimes as many as thirty men receiving no pay and maintaining themselves and their horses while awaiting a vacancy.

"And great indeed was the excitement when Lumsden, in his bluff, breezy way, would say: 'Well, here's a vacancy, and I don't for the life of me know which of you to give it to. Come along down to the rifle range and shoot it off amongst yourselves; the best shot gets the appointment.' The demeanor of the winner on such occasions would have made a Master in Lunacy look grave. The happy young fellow would jump into the air, yelling and prouetting, brandishing a sword, and at frequent intervals letting off a gun, while most of his friends did likewise."—London Tit-Bits.

HUSBAND AND WIFE

Both Restored to Health by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

"Both myself and my wife can truthfully say that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been of great benefit to us, and we are constantly recommending them to our friends." Thus writes Mr. Ernest L. Archibald, Truro, N. S., who further says:—"In my own case I had been subject to dizzy headaches for over a year, and three boxes of the Pills completely cured me of the trouble. About a year ago my wife began to complain. She seemed to be completely run down; was very pale and weak; she could not walk up stairs without stopping on the way to get breath, and ultimately she grew so weak she could not sweep a floor without resting. She tried several tonics but received no benefit. Then I persuaded her to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and got her a half dozen boxes. After she had used a couple of boxes her appetite began to improve and the color to return to her face. She continued using the Pills until she had taken the six boxes, and today she is perfectly well, feels stronger and looks better than she has done for some years. While she was taking the Pills she gained twelve pounds in weight."

Dr. Williams' Pills cure troubles like these because they are rooted in the blood. Bad blood is the cause of all common diseases like anaemia, rheumatism, indigestion, neuralgia, St. Vitus' dance, general weakness, and those ailments that only women folks know, with their attendant headaches and backaches and irregularities. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a sure cure when given a fair trial, because they enrich the blood—and thus reach the root of disease. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail a' 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MURDER FROM THE DOCK

SOME EXCITING SCENES IN COURTS OF LAW.

What Occasionally Happens When Prisoners Come Armed Into the Dock.

The worst case of the kind occurred only a few weeks ago at the Indiana city of Terre Haute. A prisoner found guilty of arson suddenly whipped out a revolver and fired from the dock at the sheriff, the head of town police, who had been the principal witness. The unfortunate man fell dead, and the prisoner emptied his revolver into a group of other witnesses, wounding no fewer than five. By that time the police had drawn their own pistols, and the murderer fell dead, riddled by four bullets.

A similar outrage occurred in Paris, France, on May 22nd last. Only here the assailant was not a prisoner, but the unsuccessful plaintiff in a case involving the ownership of three-quarters of a million francs. His intended victim was his lawyer, who he believed, had lost the case. He fired straight at the head, but his aim was bad as his temper. The man, and smashed the head of a female figure in the Republic.

LEGENDS OF IRELAND

SUPERSTITION STILL LINGERS IN THE GREEN ISLE.

In Rural Ireland Many Tales of "Banshee" and "Dullahan" are Told.

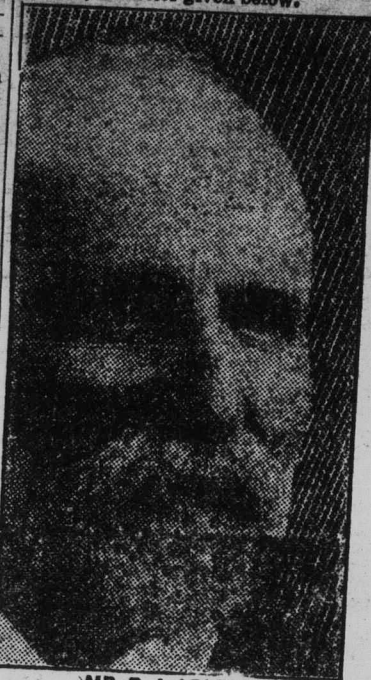

In rural Ireland linger many superstitions which in more enlightened parts of the three kingdoms have long since died a natural death. Maud G. Sargent, in the New Ireland Review, writes with sympathy and knowledge on the subject. "The tide of civilization and education is surging over Ireland, and in towns and large villages steam and electricity, motors and bicycles, libraries and newspapers, have dealt a death-blow to many picturesque old customs and romantic legends; but, amid the wide stretches of bog, in the wild glens and mountain passes, and along the stormy Atlantic coast, ancient rites and myths linger."

The writer, first of all, deals with the superstition which are embodied in the powers of healing, occur, and then continues:—

No wonder strange superstitions linger in the scattered hamlets of the sea, or in the lonely rocky islands, round the coast, for on wintry nights the mighty surges break against the towering storm-wind wails within the hollow caverns and where the deserted powerful chieftain look down on the curlew echoes across wide one might hear sounds wondrous wanders the moor or of

NASAL CATARRH PRODUCES DEAFNESS RELIEF IN PE-RU-NA

Mr. R. J. Arless, 401 City Hall Ave., Montreal, Quebec, is an old gentleman of wide acquaintance, having served thirty-eight years in the General Post-office of Montreal, a record which speaks for itself. Concerning his use of Peruna, see letter given below.

"I have been afflicted with nasal catarrh to such a degree that it affected my hearing. This was contracted some twenty years ago by being exposed to draughts and sudden changes of temperature. I have been under the treatment of specialists and have used many drugs recommended as specifics for catarrh in the head and throat—all to no purpose. About three years ago I was induced by a confrere in office to try Peruna. After some hesitation, as I had doubts as to results after so many failures, I gave Peruna a trial, and am happy to state that after using eight or ten bottles of Peruna I am much improved in hearing, and in breathing through the nostrils."

COLD BROUGHT ON KIDNEY DISEASE

BRANTFORD LADY SUFFERED
TILL CURED BY DODD'S
KIDNEY PILLS.

Mrs. A. H. Thomson had Heart Disease, Lumbago and Rheumatism, and Tells How She was Restored to Health.

Brantford, Ont., Oct. 12. — (Special)—How Colds, La Grippe and other minor ills settle on the Kidneys and develop Rheumatism, Heart Disease, Bright's Disease and other terribly dangerous ailments; and how any and all of them are cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills is fully shown in the case of Mrs. A. H. Thomson, whose home is at 48 Albion Street, this city.

Mrs. Thomson was, some years ago, taken with Cold and La Grippe and Straining, which affected her Kidneys, and the result was Backache, Lumbago, Rheumatism and Heart Disease, which caused both her and her friends grave anxiety.

She had suffered some years when she heard of cures effected by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and bought a box, which she used with such splendid results that she continued to take them till she was cured. Since then she has used Dodd's Kidney Pills in her own family and recommended them widely to her friends, all of whom have warm words of praise for the Standard Canadian remedy, Dodd's
Kidney Pills.

Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Lumbago and Bright's Disease are all Kidney Diseases or are caused by diseased Kidneys. You can't have any of them if you keep your Kidneys sound. Sound Kidneys strain all the impurities out of the blood.

WHY THE NEIGHBORS SMILE.

Little Willie was a perfect
"dear"; at least, so thought his mother till recently. She missed the youngster one day for some time, and when he reappeared she asked:

"Where have you been, my pet?"

"Playing postman," replied the pet. "I gave a letter to all the houses in our road. Real letters, too."

"Where on earth did you get them?" questioned his mother, in amusement.

"They were those old ones in your wardrobe drawer, tied with ribbon," was the innocent reply.

Willie now wants to know what he was spanked for.

MILDMAY

This is the month of real fall, the month to purchase cold weather Merchandise. Months ago this store began making preparations for the cold season, and we're determined that every shrewd buyer will have all the reasons for buying here strongly in their favor.

Only a few weeks till Thanksgiving. This means to all women who have the New Furs, New Coat, New Millinery upon the want list, no time to lose.

To Mothers it means New Warm Clothing for the boys and girls, and it means to the Men new Colder Weather Wear.

No store is better ready to supply all the wants of its patrons than this—Your Store.

This store offers larger and better choice in all wanted things, and everything has been marked at inviting Prices.

FARM PRODUCE TAKEN SAME AS CASH.
