SCOTIA'S GAMES

Grand Caledonian Gathering at Goderich.

A Large Number of Spectators—A Magnificent Field of Athletes, and an Unprecedented Turnout of Highlanders and

"O, Canada! I lo'e you weel,
Altho' no son of thine;
Within thy wide domain there beats
No truer heart than mine;
But when a day like this comes round,
Auld Scotia has her claims.

The thistic are comes uppermost,
I'll gang tae see the games." Thus sang the Scotch poet years ago when he was afforded the opportunity of witnessing in Canada the games of his yeuth transplanted from the "land of brown heath and shaggy wood," and similar was the heart's song of many of Scotia's sons who witnessed in Goderich on Friday last, one of the grandest series of Caledonian games ever offered to an enthusiastic and admiring assemblage enthuniastic and admiring assembling of spectators. The day was all that could be desired, with the exception that Old Sol beat down in a most burning manner until toward evening. Early in the day from the country roads leading that the town amaginary of vehicles. into the town came awarms of vehicles bearing anxious ones to see the great demonetration; and at ten o'clock came the emergine train heavily laden with visitors from Stratford and intervening points, and from the W. G. & B. R. and the L. H. & B. R. to Goderich. The evening train of the day before had brought a large numbers of athletes, but the pipers and most of the dancers did procession moved down South-street and along Britannia road, to the entrance, to the ground, followed by a surging mass who almost blocked up the thoroughfare. When the arena was reached, the procession marched around the track and "broke ranks" between the dancing platform and grand stand, which by this time was beginning to fill up rapidly with eager spectators, the majority of whom were ladies.

of Parkhill, was another of the heavy athletes. About three years ago he made his appearance at Caledonian games and astonished the natives as a phenomenal storeputter. He was a long, scrawny young appearance was reaching unward some 6 ft. but when he dropped the shot in front of the best men present it was found that a phenomenon had appeared. Since that time Charlie has broadened out, physically as well as from an athletic point of view, and now brings down the scales at 200 lbs, and takes a hand at everything comprised in heavy competifrom shot putting to wrestling. JOHN MACPHERSON, the abot-putter, now hails from Winnipeg, but is an old Kintail boy. He stands nearly six feet in height and weighs about 185 lbs. John always counts with the big fellows every time when it comes to putting the heavy shot. Besides that line he takes in jumping and occasionally wrestling for side sports. He is well-known at all sporting points between Winnipeg and Kintail, and makes his presence felt wherever he ap-

There was an unusual stir in the village of Lynford. The railway station was thronged with people, and surrounded with vehicles awaiting the afternoon

The Rev. Joseph Alder and the ministers of sister churches conversed together on the platform.

"A glorious charity!" said the Baptist minister, raising his hat to wipe the perspiration from his brow.

"I expect that these poor children will be a great blessing to our people," said the Methodist minister, "in broadening the sympathies and warming the hearts of some who have been oblivious to all interests save their own."

"Yes." replied the Rev. Mr. Alder. 'I have a practical illustration of that, not a stone's throw from where we are

The "practical illustration" consisted of the Roxbury rockaway drawn up amid the other conveyances, with Miss Reliance on the back seat, in a state of mind in which newly-fledged philanthropy struggled with a terror of ragamuffins. She had to come to the conclusion that her visit to the parsonage had been made during an attack of mental aberration; but 'the word of a Roxbury was as immovable as the historic granite on which Zephaniah Roxtury stepped from the "Mayflower" in 1620, and the last representative of the race would not falter now, although seized with dire apprehension whenever her eyes rested on the verbena

It was with a grim determination to brave the worst, that she awaited the train that afternoon, but when the locomotive appeared on the bridge below the village, the thought of the dreadful boy who was coming to invade her peaceful domain nearly overcame her, and her impulse was to order the hired man She could appreciate the emotions of a Roman dame at the approach of the

Sore Eyes

The eyes are always in sympathy with the body, and afford an excellent index of its condition. When the eyes become weak, and the lids inflamed and sore, it is an evidence that the system has become disordered by Scrofula, for which Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best known remedy.

Serofula, which produced a painful inflammation in my eyes, caused me much suffering for a number of years. By the advice of a physician I commenced taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After using this medicine a short time I was completely Cured and on the south side of one of the largest of these, where they could get the full benefit of the sun, lay coiled up, sound asleep, forty-three large rattlesnakes, seven black snakes, and numerous other smaller reptiles, not one of which seemed to recognize our presence. Stover and Dunn do not kill off the whole crop yearly, but leave many for breeding purposes.

"Why," said the former, "that mound there was a stored to be supposed."

"Yes, I'm Scotch, and I believe in oat meal; but I don't think you ought to eat too much of it. I have it at breakfast about three times a week. I am fond of milk, too, and am specially careful to drink it slowly. It's excellent food, but it's very bad to drink it fast. And it isn't good to take much liquid any time; especially at meals. I drink very little at my meals. I have a habit of always drinking a glass of water when I first get up; spring water if I can get it. I don't exactly knew why I do ft. I don't known that it is very good for ma. I guess it is because I like it. There's no accounting for taste, you know.

"Why," said the former, "that mound there contains probably a dozen nests of eggs, and each nest at least ten eggs. I have found nests that contained as high as eighteen young rattiers, the largest not over ten inches in length. Their eggs are about the size of those of a partiage, but have a soft shell." The farm is a tract of virgin prairie, and has never seen a plow, and Dan says in summer its natice grass is very high, rendering it an excellent place for the reptiles to hide in.

After retiring to the house the two anake breeders exhibited a string of rattles several feet in length, which they captured last summer, the whole footing up 768 rattles. Some of the snakes possessed twenty-five rattles and a button, each rattle counting a year to its age and the button a fraction of a year.

Mrs. Stover also had in a box of aswdust under a cookstove, twenty-seven rattlesnake eggs, which, she said, would begin to hatch in a few days, after which event the children would be kept busy catching flies to feed the tuny pets.

Stover and Dunn have several pet rattlers

To answer to a St. Louis Republican reporter's question, a prominent deatist said: "Children should be taken to a dentist as early as the 2nd year of age, and closely watched by him until the second set of teeth are all in place, which may be any time between the 18th and the 40th year of age. Often the wisdom teeth are not erapted until the latter age is reached. Decay of the teeth is a disease of youth, and should be remedied during that period. Children's deciduous—first set—teeth should be filled and kept intact until their places are taken by the permanent set. The first set are twenty in number.

Before starting off the hunters ascertain where a large number of ostriches are to be a found. They are generally met with in the places where there is a great deal of grass, and rain has recently fallen. The hunters commence their journey early in the morning. After one or two days' traveling, when they have arrived near the desired spot, and begin to see traces of their game they halt and camp After settling, two intelligent slaves are sent out to reconnoitre. They carry a goat kin at their side and a little bread. They walk on until they find the isstriches, which are generally on elevated places. As soon as the game in view one lies down to watch and the other returns to convey the information to the camp. The birds are found in troops, consisting often of as many as sixty. The horsefrien, guided by the scout, travel cautiously toward the game. The nearer they approach the spot the greater is their caution, and when they reach the last ridge which hides them from the ostriches they dismount and commenced the bird. them from the ostricties they dismount and creep forward to ascertain whether the birds are still there. If such is the case a moderate quantity of water is given to the horses, and each man mounts again and proceeds. A Note of Warning

MR EDITOR, -In the township of Morris and East Wawanosh, there are per-sons engaged in circulating petitions for the repeal of the Scott Act. I have not seen the petitions, but I have been re-liably informed that they are adroitly drawn up in such a manner as to conceal their design, and that some persons have signed them who did not suspect that they had given their names for the re-peal of the Scott Act, and would not have given them for such a purpose. No doubt these petitions are being circulat ed all through the county. Let every elector friendly to the Scott Act and prohibition be on his guard.

new barn is being built by John McAllister, foreman of the architect's staff, on the Muskoka Farm this week This is Jack's first building.

PERSONAL -Sterling McPhail, of Por ter's Hill, recently returned from the Northwest, and gave our burg a visit tast week. He was shown the Indian camp and the windmill by our engineer, and we also think he left a soft corner of his heavy behind him.

The mill whistle blew with a will on the last Thursday afternoon of June, which was joined by the hearty opposition of the anvil at the smithy, and a squad of benedicts with Queen Anne muskets rang out several volleys in sharp succession, that served with the grand salute to nearly frighten a passing bridal pair on their way to become one. The groom was one of our most popular beaux, but, alas! John has bowed his If You Want Anything in GLASS, knee to married life.

UNFAIR. -Our town man, D Comming attended the recent games in Golerich on the 1st, and in quoiting took a part, meeting two of his old antagonists, Lawof Lucknow, and R McLean, of Goderich, the former winning the first prize with others 18 points and 17. The judges then declared the game closed. Cumming said that the contest should have been continued between him and Mc Lean for the second prize till either got up the remainder of the points. Now, without further remarked, we are au-thorized to challenge Robt McLean, of Goderich, for the championship of Huron, in quoiting in the town of Goderich on the 30th of July, 1887, 5 p.m. to meet D Cumming, who appoints John Beaty as his referee to confer with R Mc Lean, to make the arrangements. He will play for a stake as high as as $2,500, or for honor to see who is the best player.

We expect R McLean's answer next

About three weeks ago a valuable yearling blood colt belonging to Joseph Morris, of Garbraid, was so bally gored that the intestines could be seen between that the intestines could be seen between thearibs. Mr. Morris was anxious that the colt would not be lost, and secured the services of J Aikenhead, V. S., of Goderich for the wounded animal. The Goderich, V. S. visited Garbraid in company with deputy reeve McIntosh, of Tuokersmith who is also a veterinary surgeon. Upon examining the animal they expressed fears of success, but went to work and sewed up the gaping side. Since that time Mr Aikenhead has attended to the case, and with such has attended to the ease, and with such success that the wound is healed up and the colt is as good as ever. Mr Morris desires to return thanks to the vets., for their skilful work.

The council of Colborne met in the ownship hall on Saturday, July 2d. The reeve in the chair and members all present. The minutes of last meeting read and approved. PURE

PARISGREEN, HELLEBORE, INSECT POWDER

On returning from abroad I find myself confronted with a box full of newspaper cuttings, most of which bear in some way or an other on my alleged offences against the unwritten laws of literature. I have not read all these cuttings, because my strength has failed me, but I have mastered enough of them to show me that in many instances they are not remarkable for amiability of tone. Some as me and still more recently abandoned are true in substance and in fact. Among them, too, I find other "strange cases."

I find that "Jess" is copied bodily from I find that "Jess" is copied bodily from the work of an unnamed and forgotten author. Afterward I find that this charge is abandoned. The writer made a slight mistake. He meant that "She" was copied, not "Jess" I find, too (in many papers), that one of the scenes in "Jess" comes from "Treasure Island." In both books some one listens and talks from behind a tree. Further, it seems that in this work "Jess" I am indebted to M. Renan. Also I find it suggested that in "She" I have borrowed, not from "The Epicurean," but from the legend of Urashina, whatever that may be, which has, it seems, recently been translated by Mr. Kataoka, whoever he may be.

It is because these and other charges have been and are still being so industriously spread that I venture, much as I dislike taking up your space, to ask you to print this lector.

In the first place, as to the verses in "Jess."

In the first place, as to the verses in "Jess. In the first place, as to the verses in Jess.
Those verses were sent some years ago by a friend who is now dead, and whose original composition I understood them to be, and I put them into the mouth of Jess. I have only o add that I had no idea of appropriating them as my own. I do not write verses, and therefore the question never presented itself to any mind in the light in which it has been put before the public. But I sincerely regret before the public. But I sincerely regret having published the lines as I did, not because under the circumstances, I think that I did what was wrong, but, because I did a thing what was wrong, but because I did a thing that was open to misinterpretation. Every-body who knows me is, I think, aware that I am quite incapable of wishing to take the credit of the work of others. Those who do not know me may, if they are uncharitable, come to a different conclusion. I regret that I should have thoughtlessly given them this opportunity, and more than all I regret the wrong that I have unconsciously done to the real author of the lines in question, whoever she or he may be.

she or he may be.

Also I wish to take this opportunity to make some further acknowledgments. In my first movel, "Dawn," I have put some lines into the mouth of Angela. Those lines were written by my sister-in-law, Mrs. John Haggard, and mouth of Angels. Those lines were written thy my sister-in-law, Mrs., John Haggard, and published as they appear by her own wish.

In "She" I received the kind assistance of three eminent and learned scholars in connection with the inscriptions, but as I do not think that they would like me to print their names I refrain from doing so.

In "King Solomon's Mines," some foreign gentleman, whose name I forget, translated the inscription into Portuguese. A trifling consideration of five shillings passed upon the occasion, but perhaps my assailants will say that I should have acknowledged his labors.

And now I pass of to the charge against "She." This charge has lately been abandoned. But how has it been abandoned? In a paragraph under the head of "Literary and Art Notes, etc.," the journal which has headed the hunt against me prints my denial, and states that "Such parallel passages as exist in the two books are an instance, it is mow settled, not of imitation, but of literary coincidence." How many people, I ask, who have been impressed with the pomp and circumters of the leading articles the securiously. coincidence." How many people, I ask, who have been impressed with the pomp and circumstance of the leading articles, the sensationally headed paragraph, and all the loud artillery of advertised attack, will be likely to become acquainted with this most modest and retiring withdrawal? So convinced am I that they will be few that I wish again to state not only hat I never read a line of either "The Epicurean" or the poem "Alciphron," but also to give the real source from which "She" was "plagiarized." Some time ago a lady well acquainted with Africa wrote me some notes of native legends. One of them runs as follows: "In the Sneeaw (show) Bergen, Cape Colony, there ap; immense caves which stretch on and on under the mountains, and the end of which has never been found. It is believed by both Boers and natives that in the last by both Boers and natives that in the last cave there is a spring of water which, if one finds and drinks of it, gives eternal youth. There are endless stories told of adventurous parties in search of this water losing their way, meeting dangers both ghostly and bodily, and failing in their object at last. A newly-married couple never returned from their search, and it was believed that harm had happened to them, because of the crimes the woman had committed in order to gain her husband. She had killed her first husband and his brother, whom by native law she would have had to marry, as she had no children, and she had bewitched the man ther second husband) so that he followed her about like a shadow and did everything he was told by her."

Here I found the germ of "She." It will be seen that, without wishing to lay any particular claim to originality, I may fairly say that I have to some extent developed the idea. These charges of plagiarism are easy to make and difficult to disprove. It is quite impossible for anybody to write anything that does not in some way teuch on ground which has already been trodden by others. The human mind is limited and unchangeable; it never thinks a new thought. The most that it can hope to do is to present an old one in a new aspect. I am, sir, your obedient servant,

H. RIDER HAGGARD.

Few peoples are aware of the extent of a peculiar kind of dissipation known as ginger drinking. The article used is the essence of ginger, such as is put up in the several proprietary preparations known to the trade, or the alcoholic extracts ordinarily sold over the druggist's counter. Having once acquired a liking for it the victim becomes as much a slave to his appetite as the opium eater or the votary of cocaine. In its effects it is much the most injurious of all such practices, for, in the course of time, it destroys the costing of the stomach and dooms its victim to a slow and agonizing death.

The druggist who told me about the thing says that as ginger essence contains nearly 100 per cent. of alcohol and whisky less than 50 per cent., the former is therefore twice as intoxicating. In fact, it is the reason why it is used by hardened old topers, whose stomachis are no longer capable of intoxicating stimulation from whisky. They need the more powerful agency of the pure alcohol in the ginger extract. He told me he had two customers—one a woman who had contracted the habit through employing the ginger on several occasions for stomachic panns. The relief it afforded her was so grateful that she took to it upon any recurrence of her trouble. She found, too, that the slight exhilaration of the alcohol banished mental depression. In this way she got to using it regularly, and finally to such excess that she was often grossly intoxicated.

Large doses produce a quiet stupor. Additional doses induce a profound lethargic slumber which will last in some cases for twenty-four hours. From the Saturday Review. From such persons you may hear that, if any one takes the egg out of a raven's nest, boils them so as to render them incapable of incubation, and replaces them, the parent birds will fly to a brook and fetch thence a white stone of the size and shape of the eggs. This stone of the size and snape of the eggs. Aims stone, they say, it places carefully among the eggs and then sits on eggs and stone together. The stone restores vitality to the eggs, and, after the brood is fledged and has flown, it is left behind in the nest. It has, however, suffered a great change. It is now semi-transparent, and in every respect, except in weight and hardness, is exactly like an egg. If it be placed near any poisoned food the yelk begins to move violently, and thus warns the fortunate possessor of his danger. The lapwing is even more given to sorcery. It always deposits a stone of the size of a pea in its nest, What use it is to the bird or its family no one seems to know, but if any one finds it and places it under the pillow of a sleeping person he will answer every question that does not exceed the limits of human knowledge with perfect truth in the language in which it is asked. The marvelous stories told of serpents are innumerable. There is one about a yard in length and as thick as the upper part of a strong man's arm, which haunts dry wooded places. It is so venomous, especially in May, that not only will the first person it bites in that month die himself, but anyone who stands beside or cames to helb him will share the same fate. stone, they say, it places carefully among the so venomous, especially in May, that not only will the first person it bites in that month die himself, but anyone who stands beside or comes to help him will share the same fate. If he falls beneath a tree, that, too, if it be very large, at least one-half of it will be killed. Again, serpents of all kinds are very fond of milk. In the old days, before the railway was built, a coachman, who used to drive on the road between Forgis and Naples, once fell asleep outside a little inn while his horses were baiting. His mouth was open and a snake crapt down his throat. After this he felt unwell, though he did not know why, and none of the doctors could tell what was the matter with him. At last he consulted the professors of the University of Naples. They hung him up by his feet and placed a great bowl of milk beneath his head. The snake, attracted by the smell, crept out to drink, but still kept a great part of its body in the mouth and throat of the coachman. A young doctor sprang forward, publed it out and threw it away, when it was killed. It was about two and a half feet in length. After this the patient was as well as ever.

An-amusing episode took place at Epsom on Tuesday. As Sir John Astley was going into the paddock, he was surrounded by a gang of roughs, one of whom snatched at his watch and ran away with it. With an agility of which one would hardly have suspected him, Sir John gave chase and, having captured his man, and knocked him down, compelled him by the application of gentle pressure to the stomach to restore the stolen property.

Next, as there were of course no police about, Sir John administered a little tap to the eulprit's right eye, not from any feeling of ill will, but merely to make sure of knowing him again when requisite; and a policeman eventually sauntering up, the rough was given into custody, and was sentenced next day to three months' hard labor, in addition to having had his stomach squeezed and his eye tapped.

The frauds that have been perpetrated on the spectacle wearing public by most spectacle dealers and peddlars by giving assumed and fancy names to ordinary glass, speaks for the ignorance of the public generally, in the all-important subject of the preservation of sight. there are only two articles from which the spectacles lenses can be manufactured. viz: Pebble and glass—call glass by any other name. it still remains glass. Pebble, on the other hand, is from nature's own manufactory. It is a natural crystal found generally in freestone formation, and is harder than the ruby and emerald. and nearly as hardas the diamond. The Pebble is not more or less than a transparent stone, cut by aid of diamond dust, and the greatest amount of power is placed immediately over the centre of the grain found in all pebble. REMARKABLE MATERIALIZATION.

Merc's a Man who says He saw the Spirit of a Living Person. From the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

Spending a few days at Onset Bay last summer, I was invited by Miss Helen C. Berry of the Berry Sisters to attend her last regular seance of the senson. There was, as ual, a large gathering, and I occupied a seat at the rear of the room. When the scance was about half through a form materialized some four feet in front of the cabinet, coming up suddenly, as it were, out, of the up suddenly, as it were, out, of the carpet.

Mr. Albro, the conductor, said: "Dr. Moore, here is a lady who wishes to see you." I was taken by surprise, for at no seance which I had ever before attended, either at the Berry Sisters or the various other mediums, had a spirif come to mey in that way (i. e., by materializing outside the cabinet.) As I approached her, she said: "Good evening, Doctor." Being somewhat closely veiled, I did not at first recognize her, and asked: "Who is it?" "Why, don't you know me, Doctor? It is Nellie Berry," partially removing her veil.

Noticing my mute astonishment (for I can assure you that was my feeling for the moment), she said: "Come with me to the light," and she actually led me close up to it in the corner of the room, and, entirely removing her veil with both hands, and smiling, placed her face within a foot of mine, and sure enough, there stood Nellie Berry, who was the anedjum for the seance then progressing. Her face was semi-transparent, clear and soft as that of a chilid.

"Well, I shall return in the same manner," was the reply.

I said: "Nellie, will you please give me some test?" She gave me the strongest test that she could possibly have given.

Having partially recovered from my surprise, I said: "Nellie, will you please come with me again to the light?" She readily assented, and this time the light shone full in her face, and before me stood Nellie Berry unnistakably.

Again we returned to our former position, when she sail, pointing to her own person:

I said: "Nellie, I am to return with you after the seance to the cottage whence you came. On the way thither please speak to me of this marvellous decurrence, for I shall not allude to it till you have. She then took her position to dematerialize in front of the cabinet, and I returned part way to my seat, when it occurred demarerianze in front of the caoinet, and I returned part way to my seat, when it occurred to me that, with her permission, I would relate to the audience what had taken place. This sentence was to me a very remarkable test, and explained why she came clovely veiled at the commencement. I returned to my seat, and, as she came, so she went demarcrializing in presence of some thirty ladies and gentlemen.

Mrs. Amanda M. Spence and Mrs. Lita Barney Sales, who were sitting within six or eight feet of where this occurred, watching our movements, were much interested and questioned me about it at the close of the seance.

Miss Berry and I left the seance room for the cottage where she was temporarily stopping, and her first words to me on our exit were, "Well, Doctor, did you have a good seance."

"Excellent," I replied.

"Did you see anyone you knew?"

"Excellent," I replied.
"Did you see anyone you knew?"
"One," was said after a hearty laugh. I asked: "Did this ever occur with you before, Nellie?"
"No," was her reply, and then she gave this brief explanation: "While entranced in the cabinet I said to 'Charley' [her control]: "Now, I am a spirit with the rest of you, and why can't I materialize and go out?
"He replied: 'You can try,' and the facts, as above related are the result."

Tuesday, July 5.

Regular monthly meeting of the town council was held this evening.

Present - the mayor in the chair, reeve

Johnston, deputy-reeve Cameron, councillors Smith, Colborne, Reid, Lee, John Acheson, Bingham, Humber, George Acheson, Dunlop, Jordan and Butler. Minutes of previous meeting were read and approved.

The mayor stated that the work of the waterworks was progressing. The committee was moving cautiously. It was suggested that Mr Chipman, of Brockville, a competent engineer, should be secured. He would be here about the 15th of July. The $100 had been -paid of July. The $100 had been -paid over to the committee in connection with the Caledonian games. A successful celebration had been had, and after the financial report of the committee w: s made, he would be in a position to further report. Our town bylaws are getting out of date, and should be consolidated, and revised at once, together with the rules of council and cemetery bylaws. Reeve Johnston, he under-stood would report to the council as to the success of his trip to Ottawa in the interest of the town.

The clerk stated that recently two interments from outside sections had been made in Maitland cemetery. The lots were sold at $5 to residents of the town and $7 to outsiders according to the bylaws. In the two cases specified, however, only the local rate had been paid, owing to the bylaw being defective. The deeds, had not yet been signed, and he wanted to know what action the council would take in the

The motion passed on the understanding that the defective bylaw would be rectified at an early date. As one of the members remarked, "if possession was nine points of the law, the present of the council in the controversy."

The treasurer's statement showed a balance of $862.36.

A communication was received from Dom'nion Finance Department, stating that the application of Goderich for a remit in the matter of iron duties re pro posed waterworks, would be attended to shortly at a meeting, when an effort would be made to meet the requirements of the town in the premises.

A communication from the county clerk was received which stated that the county rate for the town of Goderich for 1887 was $1,400,48.

A communication from the board of public school trustees asked that $4,300 be provided for current year.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocca, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame." "Civil Service Gazette."
