Beautiful Cynthia;

Victory After Many Defeats.

CHAPTER XXXI. A LOVE-INSPIRED HOPE.

Instead of replying, Parsons stole from the room and dispatched Betsy for the doctor and Lord Northam. To her amazement and indignation, the former, who arrived first, received the information with calmness and acquiescence.

"Not at all a bad idea, my dear," he said, patting her hand. "A complete change of scene—"

Cynthia smiled wanly, her eyes fixed on his kindly ones.

"I am going out to find him," she said simply.

He nodded. "Well, why not? Your emancipated sex can travel anywhere nowadays. You shall go to India if you like—"

She nodded at him gratefully.

"You are wise as well as kind," she murmured. "You understand. He is not dead, and I shall find him."

"I really believe you will, if he is alive!" he said. "But you will have to be quite well and strong before you can start on so trying a journey and mission."

"How long?" she asked, with a flushed face and shining eyes.

"Not for a year, if you excite yourself," he retorted. "But if you will keep your mind cool, and eat three square meals a day, presently—we'll say in a couple of months."

Northam stared aghast when the doctor informed him of Cynthia's resolutions.

"Going to look for him! Why—why, it's madness! And the poor fellow's dead!"

"Is he?" said the doctor, screwing up his eyes. "Well, upon my word, I'm not sure of it. You see, I've listened to her so often that I'm beginning to believe that she may be right. Anyhow, there's a month before us; and, my dear Lord Northam, I'm old enough to know that much may happen in a month. Are you going to the sale to-morrow?" he broke off.

"What sale?—oh, the Fraynes, the Court? I don't know. Why should I?"

"To employ your mind," responded the wise old man. "Go and buy something. I shall have you on my hands directly; and to tell you the truth, my lord, I've already got a patient who demands all the attention I can spare from my regular ones. Yes; I should go to the sale, if I were you."

Northam gazed vacantly at the boots which inclosed his big and useful feet. Then he looked up with a look of intelligence in his placid eyes.

"I understand," he said. "Right you are! I'll go!"

CHAPTER XXXIII. THE REPENTANT SINNER.

That same afternoon Parsons arranged the table beside the sofa to which Cynthia had promoted herself, and was pouring out the tea for her beloved young mistress when she saw the only station fly draw up to the gate.

A lady stepped out and stood looking up at the windows, and Parsons, in the subdued and cautious manner appropriate toward an invalid recovering from a collapse, said:

"Here's a visitor, Miss Cynthia; but, of course, you won't see her."

"Her?" said Cynthia, with faint surprise. "Who is it, Parsons?"

"Lady Alicia, miss. Bless my heart, and how had she looks! She's that thin and white. I'll go down and tell her that you're not well enough—"

"No," said Cynthia, quietly. "I will see her. Ask her to come up, and bring another teacup."

"The doctor—" remonstrated Parsons; but Cynthia shook her head.

"Well, miss, of course, I can't help myself, if you insist; but I hope you'll tell him it isn't my fault; he's such a fiery-tempered old gentleman—"

Cynthia sat up and waited. She had suffered too much to be overcome by a visit from Lady Alicia; but she knew that the sight of her would bring back that night before the wedding, when Lady Alicia had, alas! persuaded her that it was her duty to break the engagement with Darrel.

Lady Alicia entered and stood for a moment looking at Cynthia, who, though she had been prepared by Parsons' remark, was struck by the alteration in Lady Alicia's appearance.

As Parsons had said, Alicia Northam was but a shadow of her former self; her bright, vivacious air had given place to one of settled melancholy, and the dark shadows under her eyes, the pallor of the lips, spoke of sleepless nights and brooding days.

"Are you sure you are well enough to see me?" were her first words.

"I am quite sure," said Cynthia. "Sit down there and pour out the tea for us. Yes; I've been ill, but—you, too, have been ill, haven't you?"

Lady Alicia drew off her gloves and kept her eyes on Cynthia's face, with the expression of one doggedly carrying out a painful resolution.

"Yes," she replied. "I look what I am, a wreck."

"Are you well enough to come such a distance, to travel?"

"Perhaps not; but I had to come. I've heard of you from Northam. He does not know I am here."

"Not know!" echoed Cynthia, with surprise.

"No," said Lady Alicia slowly, "and I do not wish him to know. I shall return by the night train. A meeting between us would not be pleasant. You told him that it was I who advised you, persuaded you to—to jilt Darrel Frayne?"

Cynthia colored. "No," she said simply.

"Then he guessed it," said Lady Alicia. "He is quicker than most people think. He wrote to me—" she took a letter from her pocket, but thrust it back again. "No, I won't show it to you. Northam can be angry when he likes, and he has not spared me. And I'm not in the humor to spare myself. I've come to make a confession, Cynthia."

"To make a confession?"

"Yes, perhaps it isn't necessary;—" very probably you have hit upon the truth before this. Cynthia, you may say what you like, curse me with your lips as, no doubt, you have cursed me in your heart. I deserve it, and, if you can understand, it would be a kind of relief, though I have been punished enough."

"I don't understand—" said Cynthia, pale again now, but trying to suppress her agitation, for she had to get well and strong quickly. She must not permit herself to be thrown back; she would need all her strength for the journey that lay before her.

Lady Alicia looked at her with a kind of dull curiosity.

"You do not? Cynthia, you will remain a girl all your life! You are unlike any woman I have ever met. Even as a girl I was never so simple or unsuspecting as you; and it was this simplicity that helped me to get my way with you. Another woman would have been suspicious, have asked herself why I should have taken the trouble to dine with you that night, to talk to you as I did. You thought I had come to dinner in the ordinary, casual way? It was arranged between me and Lady Westlake, and I came with the intention of separating you from Darrel Frayne."

Cynthia's face flushed for a moment.

"My aunt acted for the best according to her lights," she said, in a low voice. "She is dead—"

"And I wish I were dead, also!" said Lady Alicia quietly. "You think that I played the part I did out of friendship for her? I saw that. I performed my part well; my friends call me a good actress. I was brought up in a different school from yours, Cynthia, and learned to lie at an early age. I was lying to you that night, if I had been in your place I would have married Darrel Frayne if he had not possessed a coat to his back."

Cynthia stared at her. "And yet—"

"I persuaded you that it was for his own good that you should jilt him. Oh, don't you see? for there was no comprehension in Cynthia's steady gaze. 'I had an object in what I did; every word was uttered with a purpose. I wanted to separate you from him, because, because—'"

Her hard voice faltered and her eyes sank; but no color came to her face. The truth dawned on Cynthia at last, and she shrank back involuntarily.

"Don't—don't say any more!" she breathed.

"Yes; you see now," said Lady Alicia bitterly. "It was because I loved him and wanted him for myself; I would have moved heaven and earth, would have gone through fire to snatch him from you. You look as if you were startled, amazed, you did not deem me capable of so much feeling? You are still so innocent that you do not know that we cold-natured women are more passionate when our hearts are touched than women of warmer natures. With us it is one love, one love in a life! Darrel Frayne's was mine. The first time I saw you and him together—in the Park, you remember—I saw that you were in love with each other."

Trust a woman to know in an instant when another woman loves the man she wants. And I had loved him the first time I met him; had set myself to win him. And you, a bit of a girl just freed from the school-room, were to take him from me! Do you wonder that I planned and schemed, set all my wits to work, to balk you?"

Cynthia leaned back, her hands clasped tightly in her lap, her eyes fixed on Lady Alicia's.

"But—but you spoke the truth; your advice was—was sensible."

Lady Alicia laughed almost scornfully.

"The truth! You didn't see that, robbed of you, Darrel Frayne was more likely to rush headlong to ruin, ruin of body and soul, than to work his way back to his old place! I knew that, and I counted upon his turning to me when his ruin was complete. And I would have taken him all too gladly, thankfully, if he had sunk as low as a man could sink. You were a fool to take my advice, Cynthia."

"Yes," said Cynthia quietly. "I was a fool. I know it now. And that makes my punishment harder to bear."

"It is not harder than mine," said Lady Alicia, "for my remorse is keener, more bitter. We sent him to his death between us; but it is I who must answer for his life; it was I who prompted, persuaded you. Day and night I am conscious of that. I know what a murderer feels when he is haunted by his victim."

"He is not dead!" breathed Cynthia, almost haudibly.

Lady Alicia started and caught her breath.

"You have heard—news?" she panted.

How He Escaped An Operation

And Was Completely Cured of Piles of 14 Years' Standing by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Charles Beauvais. Doctors say that about one person in every four suffers more or less from chronic piles, and who can imagine a more annoying, torturing, disagreeable ailment?

After trying a few treatments without success, and as the ailment grows worse, the medical doctor is consulted. An operation, he says, is necessary. You think of the suffering, expense and risk to life itself, and hesitate before taking such a step.

In many thousands of such cases Dr. Chase's Ointment has made thorough and lasting cures. Read this letter for the proof.

Mr. Charles Beauvais, a well-known citizen of St. Jean, Que., writes:—"For 14 years I suffered from chronic piles, and considered my case very serious. I was treated by a celebrated doctor who could not help me and ordered a surgical operation as the only means of relief."

"However, I decided to try Dr. Chase's Ointment, and obtained great relief from the first box. By the use of three boxes I was entirely cured. This is why it gives me great pleasure to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to all who suffer from piles as a treatment of the greatest value."

The Great Spring Tonic and Body Builder

EMBLEM OF PURITY AND EXCELLENCE SINCE 1860. It is an absolutely pure distillation of malted grain, and as none but sound, clean grain can be malted it is made from the most carefully selected grains. It is a predigested liquid food in the form of a medicinal whiskey; its palatability and freedom from injurious substances render it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach.

It is a gentle, invigorating stimulant and tonic that influences for good every important organ of the body. It is especially valuable for use at this time because it aids digestion that it enables you to get from the food you eat all the nourishment it contains, thus enriching the blood and rebuilding the system that has become run down and weakened from the long strain of winter.

BE SURE YOU GET DUFFY'S

Sold by druggists, dealers and hotels in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY, price $1.25 a large bottle. Get the genuine and be sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. To-Morrow People.

BY RUTH CAMERON.

"When to-morrow comes it will be to-morrow."

"We are going to be so happy next fall," a friend of mine told me the other day. "We are going to move into one of those beautiful new apartments they are building on the Avenue, and I'm going to buy the greatest room furniture we have been saving up for so long, and at last I shall be able to entertain my friends as I want. It seems to me I can hardly wait for fall to come."

"As I look back across my friendship with this young woman, I remember a time when she could 'hardly wait' for the day to come when she and her husband were to leave the place where they were boarding and really go to housekeeping in their first little apartment; and before that, a time when she could 'hardly wait' for her wedding day; and before that a time when she could 'hardly wait' until July for the summer vacation which we planned in the spring.

"And when to-morrow comes, it still will be to-morrow."

There are a great many people in the world who are always about to be happy. In the to-morrow of their fulfilled anticipations they are sure they will find happiness; and they are so intent upon looking forward that they quite forget to realize that today is the to-morrow of yesterday's anticipation. The very best time to do kind deeds is to-day; the very best time to start any good undertaking is to-day; and the very best time to be happy is to-day, this hour, this minute.

"If an inhabitant of some other planet were to visit America," says Orison Swett Marden, "he would probably think that our people were all en route for something beyond, some other destination, and that where they happen to be living is merely a way station where they unpack only such of their luggage as they need for a temporary stay. They are not really settled to-day, do not really live in the now, but they are sure they will live to-morrow or next year when business is better, their fortune greater, when they move into their new house, get their new furnishings or their new automobile, then they will be happy. But they are not really happy to-day."

That is a great indictment of the American people and I am afraid a just one. It is peculiarly our national tendency to be in too much of a hurry getting ready to live, to have any time left for living itself. "Mama" is as much our failing as the Spaniard's, only in a far different sense.

Anticipation has its uses, but it also has its abuses. Look forward to to-morrow's joy by all means, but don't look forward so eagerly that you miss the delights of to-day. Be happy this day, this hour, this minute. You are sure of that happiness.

Ruth Cameron

WOMAN'S WISDOM.

The worried mother wakes up to hear her baby's heavy breathing—little cough—perhaps the croup or whooping cough. She does not want to send for the doctor when perhaps the trouble does not amount to much. Finally she thinks of that medical book her father gave her, The Common Sense Adviser, by R. V. Pierce, M. D. She says "Just the thing to find out what is the matter with the little dear." Two million households in this country own one—and it's to be had for only six cents in stamps—1,000 pages in splendid cloth binding. A good family adviser in any emergency. It is for every woman who is what many women write Dr. Pierce—in respect to his "Favorite Prescription," a remedy which has made thousands of melancholy and miserable women cheerful and happy, by curing the painful womanly diseases which undermine a woman's health and strength.

"My desire is to write a few lines to let you know what your valuable medicine has done for me," writes Mrs. MARGARET ZUBERT, of 203 S. Benton Street, Baltimore, Md. "Before the storm came to our house I was a very sick woman. I wrote you for advice and was kindly given and which made me a different woman in a short time. After taking the first bottle of 'Favorite Prescription' I began improving so that I hardly knew I was in such a condition. I did my own housework—washing and ironing, cooking, sewing, and the worst of all nursed three children who had whooping cough. I hardly knew of the advent ten minutes before—so easy was it. The baby is as fat as a butter-ball. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best medicine for any woman to take when in this condition. I recommend it to all my friends."

Mrs. ZUBERT AND BABY.

Fashions and Fads.

The sashed Eton jacket is one of the new things. Coatees for net toilettes are of embroidered linen.

Some of the newest boots are white, with violet tops.

Sometimes the draped mantlet is in colors to match the sash.

The newest panama hats for wear with sports suits have new curves.

Sashed skirts are worn over elaborate petticoats of net or lace.

Waistcoats to the new French tailored costumes are really enormous.

Wide girdles of black velvet are much liked with white charmeuse gowns.

Sashes are used in a score of different ways, and always with fascination.

Plain black taffeta stocks are embroidered on the tabs with bright-colored woods.

Eton jackets of tojally different color from the rest of the costume are very smart.

Young girls' graduation gowns are being made of net trimmed with shadow lace.

Some of the prettiest white blouses are made of most delicate white net.

Plain and eyelid embroidered volutes are, often combined for afternoon dresses.

Kerchiefs of tulle form pointed square collars worn over toulard and crepon silk dresses.

A semi-tailored suit can be made quite formal by wearing with it an elaborate blouse.

Some of the newest American combinations have decorations of colored handkerchiefs.

Some of the prettiest bolero coats are tied in front with bands of silk, instead of buttons.

One of the new collures shows a slight fringe in front, suggesting the "bang" of years ago.

The side closing with side frills is still a favorite on summer dresses, particularly of dresses.

Flowered crepe de chine is used for bolero habit corages to crepon and charmeuse skirts.

Wool embroidery will actually be seen on some of the new lingerie dresses of tulle or net.

The plainer the cut the smarter the costume. This is the dictum for country daytime dress.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited, Yarmouth, N.S.

Gentlemen.—In January last, Francis Leclaire, one of the men employed by me, working in the lumber woods, had a tree fall on him, crushing him fearfully. He was, when found, placed on a sled and taken home, where grave fears were entertained for his recovery, his hips being badly bruised and his body turned black from the ribs to his feet. We used MINARD'S LINIMENT on him freely to deaden the pain and with the use of three bottles he was completely cured and able to return to his work.

L'AUVEUR, DUVAL, Elgin Road, L'Islet Co., Que.

A good story is told of a Welsh churchwarden, to a most lovable old gentleman, who not very long ago passed away. He was persuaded by his Vicar on one occasion to accept an invitation from the Bishop to attend a conference in London and to stay at the Palace. It was very late when he arrived, and, after a cordial welcome, he retired to rest. Next morning, when the guests had assembled at the breakfast table, the Bishop noticed that the Welshman was missing, and, calling the butler, asked what had become of him. "He's gone out, my Lord," was the reply. "He came down about seven, and telling me he didn't like any fuss, came and had breakfast with me in the kitchen."

C. C. C. Reserve Dance.

A BRILLIANT SUCCESS.

The C. C. C. Reserve Corps held their first annual dance in the British Hall, Friday night, the eve of Empire Day. It was thoroughly enjoyed by the four hundred persons who were present and proved one of the biggest successes ever held under Cadet auspices. The ball room was artistically decorated and illuminated, presented a strikingly attractive scene as well as reflecting credit on the skill and good taste of the reserve members who were responsible for it. Dancing commenced at 9.30 p.m., the C. C. C. band discoursing the music in their usual excellent style. At midnight the entire company repaired to the lower hall where sumptuous teas, provided by the lady friends of the Corps, were partaken of. After the intermission satisfied dancing was resumed. At 5 a.m. the affair was brought to a happy termination. The Reserve people who must have been delighted with the success that attended their efforts deserve congratulations.

Minors Drunk.

The police say they never saw as much drunkenness as was evident on Saturday in the city. Even youths were celebrating the holiday with the "blowing bowl." Saturday afternoon a boy aged fifteen, was seen on Church Hill; he had both sides of that thoroughfare to himself and his condition was disgraceful and disgusting to pedestrians. Two police officers happened to come along and arrested the youthful inebriate, who is being held in custody while an investigation is made as to who served the minor with liquor.

Collection for the Cemeteries

At the masses in the Roman Catholic Churches yesterday, it was announced that on next Sunday the annual collection for Belders and Mt. Carmel Cemeteries would be taken up at the Cathedral, St. Patrick's and St. Joseph's. At the Masses yesterday the matter was referred to the clergy with a hope expressed that the collection would be a liberal one. The energetic committees in charge of the cemeteries deserve all the encouragement that can be given them. At no small expenditure of energy and with commendable zeal, these gentlemen have worked to beautify the resting places of the dead and we feel confident in saying that Sunday's collection will be most liberal and an encouraging tribute to them to continue their good work.

Supt. Hanrahan's School Report.

Supt. Hanrahan in his annual report of the Roman Catholic Schools, of the Diocese of Harbor Grace, points out the increasing difficulty of visitation and inspection during the past ten years, owing to the increase in the number of schools. He states: "As will be readily understood, inspection and visitation of all the schools along such an extended portion of the coast line of Newfoundland and Labrador, becomes more and more difficult with the great increase in the number of schools witnessed during the past decade. The nature of our coast line is such, and the modes of travel so various, that this part of the Superintendent's work is not accomplished without difficulty, hardship, and (very often) danger. The portion of the year most favorable to this work is the time of the mid-summer vacation when all the schools are closed. The month of September is partly taken up with the results of the C.H.E. Examinations, so the work of inspection occurs at the stormiest time of the year in Newfoundland. Under such circumstances it is impossible to visit all the schools; so that, as in previous years, while every educational district has been visited, a few isolated localities have not been seen."
As to salaries, Mr. Hanrahan declares that—
"The outlook for the female teacher is not at all discouraging, and places her in contrast with those who enter other avenues of employment open to females in this country, in a by no means inferior position. But for the male teacher, especially the man with a family, a great deal yet remains to be done. There should be some means whereby this matter could be dealt with specifically. There should be an amount laid down as the minimum for male teachers, which with their augmentation would place them in independent circumstances and enable them to devote their whole energies to their work, instead of being compelled, as at present in many cases, to divide their attention between their school and some auxiliary means of gaining a livelihood."

These Moth Bags are a certain preventive to the ravages of moths, and will protect garments placed in them from stains, dust, etc. They are light and odorless and take up little or no room. They have during the last two seasons been most successful for the purpose for which they are intended. Get one or more for your furs and winter garments. Prices from 25 to 80 cents each, according to size.

Meets Mishap.

When the Fogota was leaving Change Islands last week to come south and while she was hauling off from Robertson's wharf she ran close to a rock there, and the propeller striking it two of the blades were carried away. It did not, however, affect the ship's speed, but she must be docked to get two new blades adjusted. As the dry dock here is not available the ship will likely go on the dock in Harbour Grace.

Schr. Lost at Blackhead.

SCHL. ATHLON LOST LAST NIGHT AT BLACKHEAD.

Five men walked to the city to-day from Blackhead, where they lost their vessel, the Athlon, last night. The Athlon, Burton, master, left Spaniard's Bay on Friday evening last, bound to Sydney for coal. The weather was moderate. On Saturday morning she rounded Cape St. Francis, and Saturday night at dark was off the Narrows. The weather continued very calm with a heavy ground sea running. Last evening the schooner was off Blackhead, and not being able to make headway, as she was becalmed, two anchors were put on shore to hold her. Between nine and ten o'clock the tide and sea increased in violence, causing a great strain on the anchor chains. In a short time the chains parted and the craft went ashore. The crew of five managed to reach the shore in a boat. Scarcely had they abandoned here when the schooner was dashed to pieces on the rocks and became a total wreck. Having lost all their belongings the shipwrecked men walked to the village, where they were met and cared for by Messrs. Geo. Cook and Wm. Fitzgerald. The Athlon was a craft of 100 tons, was owned by Mr. Burton, the skipper, and insured for $1,200. This morning there was nothing to be seen of the Athlon above water but one of her spars, Capt. Burton and crew speak in the highest terms of the kindness and hospitality shown them by the two men mentioned of Blackhead.

LONG BEACH, Cal., To-day.
Too weak to uphold a burden of nearly ten thousand human beings assembled for the festivities of British Empire Day, the land end of the big double deck Municipal pier in front of the City Auditorium collapsed to-day. Hundreds of people on the top deck plunged down on the head of other hundreds crowded on the second deck. The lower deck gave way and all dropped down a chute of shattered woodwork to the tide washed sands 25 feet below. Thirty-three persons, mostly women were killed or crushed by the falling bodies of companions or friends fifty more were seriously injured, while hysteria and fright disabled scores of others.

CALGARY, To-day.
Luther McCarthy, heavyweight champion of the world, died in the ring from a chance blow, delivered somewhere in the region of the solar plexus after one minute and forty-five seconds fighting. There had been one or two mixups of an inconsequential character, then came the clinch. Referee Smith separated the men. Both spectators it looked as though his crouch was simply a fighting position, but he continued to go over and collapsed and fell at full length to the floor of the ring. The referee assuming he had been knocked out, stood over him to count for the young champion Arthur Pelkey, winner of the heavyweight championship at such a heavy cost, stood at one side of his fallen adversary. He could scarcely realize what had happened. The referee now became alarmed and called a doctor, several responding. The Royal North West Mounted police were called to hear the ring of the crowd, which swarmed over the ropes. The doctors worked over the stricken man for eighty minutes when they pronounced him dead. There were ten thousand in the arena. Pelkey was too overcome by the tragedy to make a statement. He was arrested on a charge of manslaughter and later released on bail. The doctors who attended McCarthy contend collapse was due either to organic heart trouble or paralysis of the heart.

Trolley cars on all lines out of Milford, carrying workmen from the Draper machine shops at Hopedale, where the foundrymen are on strike, were stoned by crowds of sympathizers. One policeman was badly wounded in the head.

BERLIN, May 25. The wedding day of Princess Luise and Prince Ernest of Cumberland opened dark, rainy and disagreeable. The streets were crowded, and bunting and evergreen everywhere displayed. All the schools in the German Empire were closed, and the teachers took their children to points of vantage. The wedding functions began rather late in the afternoon, with the robing of the young bride. She wore a wonderfully worked gown of silver brocade with a court train of the same material, embroidered with myrtle and orange flowers, and lined with ermine. The veil, like her entire toilette, was manufactured in Germany. The veil was composed of two yards of lace, the work of 80 Silesian girls, who had worked day and night for six weeks. The last act of robing was the placing by the Empress on her daughter's head the historical crown worn by Prussian princesses at their weddings. The royal couple were married with the rites of the Lutheran church at 5 p.m. at the Royal Chapel, and thus the reconciliation between the Houses of Hohenzollern and Cumberland was sealed; in the presence of King George, Czar Nicholas and Kaiser Wilhelm. The close friendship displayed made the event a demonstration of international policy.

Salaries of Suffragettes

Not princely, according to statements given at the Trial of Leaders.

London, March 15.—Archibald Podkin, counsel for the Treasury, attempted to elicit from the chartered accountant who had audited the books of the Women's Social and Political Union, what had become of the so-called secret service fund of $1,250,000, of which the newspaper, the "Suffragette," had announced $900,000 had been raised. The accountant, however, was unable to throw any light on the subject, which he said had not come within his ken.

The women seated in the prisoners' enclosure smiled broadly at the attorney's futile efforts to get on the track of their funds.

The accountant while on the witness stand produced the salary book of the women's social and political union from which it appeared that the salaries of the leaders of the militant movement were not princely. Miss Annie Kenney received $21 weekly, Mrs. Flora Drummond and Miss Harriet Kerr, $17.50; Mrs. Beatrice Saunders and Miss Rachel Barret, $15, and Miss Laura Lennox, $10. Miss Christabel Pankhurst, who is living in Paris, drew, according to the books, $875 in the last four months.

Things Forbidden in War.

It is not generally realized that the game of war is hedged round by as many restrictions as a boxing contest under Queensberry rules. These regulations, which are under the sanction of all the civilized countries of the world, are designed to ensure fair play for the combatants. When it is intended to bombard a place, due notice should be given, so that all women and children may be removed to a place of safety, and every care must be taken to spare churches and hospitals, as well as all charitable or educational buildings.

All chaplains, doctors, and nurses are protected in every possible way, and are not to be taken prisoners or in any way injured.

Any soldier robbing or mutilating an enemy is liable to be shot without trial; and death is the penalty for wounding or killing a disabled man.

The bodies of the enemy are to be carefully searched before burial, and any articles found on them which might lead to their identification are to be sent to the proper quarters.

Explosive bullets must not be used, and quarter must be given to the enemy whether he asks for it or not. In an attack on the enemy there must be no concealment of the distinctive signs of the regiments; and the use of poisons for polluting drinking water is strictly forbidden.—Tit Bits.

Became Very Ill.

While being transferred from the police station to the Penitentiary, on Saturday afternoon, a young man who was remanded for embezzlement and a series of larceny, was suddenly stricken and fainted. The prisoner's condition looked serious at first, and it was some time before he revived. The unfortunate fellow had been brooding over the rash acts he committed and which was the cause of his illness.

A Donnybrook Fair.

People who were in that part of the country Saturday, say that in at the foot of Mundy's Pond, several some of the residents celebrated the day in a manner which would gladden the heart of a man from Donnybrook Fair. For some time past a feud has existed between parties living near the Pond, "Bogtown" and other places there was a general gathering of the clans Saturday and hostilities which were fierce and furious were kept up for a lengthy period. Most of the combatants were in a bad way when the chiefs called the retreat and at least one of the number had most of the clothing torn off his back. This part of the suburbs is fast becoming a disorderly spot and no doubt the police will give it due attention.

Empire Day at Rossley's Theatre.

Never in the history of the Star was there such a show, such decorations, such crowds, and souvenirs. Rossley certainly spared no expense to make his theatre look as it does. It was one mass of gay-colored bunting and the most highly decorated place in town, and every body was delighted. The only pity is the place is not near large enough to accommodate the huge crowds. The Company engaged at Rossley's theatre are the best seen here in a great while, and to-night the Lorraine Buchanan Co., will offer a stirring Western playlet, entitled "An Arizona Courtship," in which the entire company will take part. Jack Rossley has provided an entire new set of scenery and all equipment, thus enabling the company to give the patrons of the Star Theatre their act complete in every detail, just as it was presented in New York City. Mr. Chester Cook will also do a single turn, singing and dancing. Mr. Billy Devan will sing a beautiful English ballad. Mr. Harry Ingram has also a fine song, together with the pictures and the Star orchestra, of which every one speaks well in some of the latest selections. A show that can't be beat anywhere for quantity and real good quality.

"Elliston Enterprise."

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—This caption does not herald the advent of a new paper into Trinity Bay, but is a tribute to the work of Mr. Robert Tilley in his efforts to brighten up the social life of Elliston in and from its midst a juvenile brass band.
It would be but a trifle to-day to point out the necessity of early training, whether it be in the field of Science, Art or Music, but none the less in honour due to those who not only receive that necessity but strive to meet it.
A glance at the ages of the boys comprising the Elliston band, shows an average age of twelve years, whilst the youngest of the thirteen performers actually plays his part upon an E flat tenor at the tender age of nine.
An entertainment was given here recently in the S. U. F. Hall by this organization, which resulted not only in material profit to the promoters, but also in material profit of another kind to the delighted audience who found in this display of unexpected talent an incentive to emulate their good example in the larger town of Bonavista.
The programme, though rather lengthy, was well balanced and a generous sandwiching of mirth with music, served continually to whet the appetite of the audience until the curtain fell. Five selections were given by the band, led by Mr. Tilley, which evinced careful training and an appreciation of the meaning of music as distinct from the mere production of sound. The drums were cleverly handled and attuned to the rhythm, but were at times inclined to be rather boisterous.

Instrumental selections, songs and dialogues were given by young ladies and gentlemen of Elliston and we regret that space will not permit of a more extended reference to their capital work.
Little Nellie Clouter, however, accompanied on the organ by Clarence Tilley with violin obligato by Thomas Clouter, deserves a line of commendation. Her song was well sung and clearly enunciated, while her accompanists were careful not to drown the childish voice.
Mr. Win. Baker in his various roles showed a sense of humour and played his comedy parts with a restraint that might well be imitated by some professional actors.
The smart military uniform of the boys added much to their appearance upon the platform, and gave the necessary finish to an excellent production.
A neat speech from Rev. A. G. Bayly, explaining that the proceeds were to be devoted to the purchase of instruments and general equipment, brought a most enjoyable evening to a close.
Bonavista, May 22, 13.

POOR FISHERY NEWS.—The Fogolia brings poor fishery news. The only place where there is any decent sign of cod is at King's Cove and Keels. James Brown at the former place has trapped 70 qts. to date. Fish is also very scarce with hook and line and no bait worth while is about. At Pogo, Change Islands and all down round that district last week the traps had to be taken in to keep them from being torn to pieces with the ice which blocked the shore.

DIANA SAILS.—The s.s. Diana leaves to-night for Blanc Sablon, bringing along supplies from St. John's and fishing crews from Trinity. It is yet undecided as to whether the Diana will proceed to the far north from Blanc Sablon or return to St. John's and sail from here.

De Soto.

By H. L. HANN.

Ferdinand de Soto was a Spanish nobleman who closed an adventurous career by discovering the Mississippi river in about the same place where it stands. Several people had tried to discover the Mississippi, in the hope of getting a general drag out of the rivers and harbors bill, but all of them had died en route in a moist and precipitate manner. De Soto was the first white man who ever stood on the banks of the Mississippi with a fish pole and a minny pail, and he had just begun to be able to tell the difference between a red horse and a croppie when he was stricken by the cold, clammy hand of the cholera infantum.

De Soto was not much of a home body, but was continually trying to discover something which had gold at the other end of it. His entire time was employed in running down baseless press despatches about vast deposits of gold which only lacked railroad connection and a smelter, and it finally got so that he wouldn't even come home to vote. De Soto accompanied Pizarro when the humane coyote conquered Peru by killing off all of the male adults over four years of age, but he did not approve of a great many things that Pizarro said and did.

When De Soto decided to discover the Mississippi and thus pave the way for the pork barrel, he surrounded himself with firearms, quinine pills and the flower of the Spanish nobility and sailed in nine vessels for Cuba, where he left his devoted wife, a prey to melancholy and the ardent Havana mosquito. Taking with him a number of peripatetic patriots, he struck Tampa, Florida, at the height of the tourist season, but not finding a hotel that he could stop at for two days in succession without selling the family plate, he began to walk in a northerly direction and running into the Father of Waters, which at that time was not navigated by anything but the open-mouthed carp, he planted the Spanish flag upon its turbulent bosom.

At the same time that he discovered the Mississippi, De Soto made the acquaintance of a new brand of swamp fever, which caused him to expire with considerable urgency and discomfort. He was a tall, bilious man with careworn whiskers and a kind heart, which prevented him from slaughtering a great many people who needed it.

Tommy had teased, begged, and implored his father to buy him a watch. The impatient father's answer was: "No; once and for all, no! If I hear you mention the word 'watch' again, I shall punish you severely!" That evening the family assembled at the dinner table, and, as was their custom before eating, each repeated a verse from the Bible. When Tommy's turn came, he said: "What I say unto one of you, I say unto all of you—watch!" The watch was forthcoming.

In the sixteenth century the word "imp" had a very different meaning from that which it bears now. One sentence of a prayer composed under Henry VIII. for general use in churches ran: "Let us pray for the preservation of the King's most excellent majesty, and for the prosperous success of his entirely beloved son, Edward our Prince, that most angelic imp." The word "brat" has also changed its meaning. A sixteenth century hymn writer, George Gascoigne, refers to "Abraham's brats, that brood of blessed seed." — London Chronicle.

Death of Mrs. Murphy.

Special to Evening Telegram. RENEWS, Friday. There passed away on Tuesday, May 13th, at Broad Cove, Renew, Mrs. John Murphy. The deceased had been in delicate health for some months past but strong hopes were fostered that she would recover with the opening of summer. On Saturday she became alarmingly ill and without delay Father Sheehan was called who administered the rites of her holy church which she received with sentiments of devotion and resignation. She leaves a bereaved husband, two sons and five daughters to grieve for the loss of a devoted wife and loving mother as well as a host of friends who will long miss her kind and genial manner and bright smile.—R.I.P.

ON GARDEN PARTY COLLECTING. Mrs. Tucker says now that the Garden Party season is approaching, it may not be considered out of place for her to suggest an improvement on the plan of collecting, for as she has had some experience both as a collector and donor she feels competent to give a tip or two. Mrs. Tucker knows that there are certain people in this town who look upon Garden Party collectors with dread, as a matter of fact they treat them with a coldness of manner and a sourness of phiz that would freeze a cargo of herring in less than no time, but these people should bear in mind that collectors for charitable objects are doing a work that must be done, and if the congregation won't give enough money to keep up churches, schools, etc., straight out of their pockets to the pastors they must only expect that they will be made part with their coin in another way that may seem more amusing. Up to the present collectors started on their mission having the whole town lying before them; anywhere they felt like collecting they called, the result being that while some folks escaped altogether others were solicited a dozen times in the one week, which caused the former to rejoice and the latter to feel that Garden Party collectors should be consigned to Timbuctoo.

Now Mrs. Tucker thinks 'twould be wise to give each collector or brace of collectors a certain ward of the city in which to work, for by adopting this plan people who are generous won't be bored to desperation, nor will the Cute Man be able to escape by saying that he gave his donation to Mrs. So-and-So. This plan if acted upon will make the work much easier for collectors and will cause the donors to rejoice, for as it is now a lot of time is wasted by the man who gave a donation early in the season, in dodging every lady who steers his way and looks like a collector. Mrs. Tucker says more money will be forthcoming if we adopt the ward system, for when a man is called on he'll give what he intends to give knowing that he won't be rung up again; but now as the collections are conducted he will give a small sum to the first lady who calls, feeling that there are more to follow, but very often this don't pan out and consequently money is lost. A fine day with a good breeze from the South West is the best day for collectors to sail, people feel better on those days, but to hit a man up in a snow shower about May 28th and ask him for a donation for a Garden Party is liable to place him in such a condition physically that Mr. Whiteaway would have to be summoned to convey him to the Hospital for repairs.

Queen Mary.

The Mother on the Throne.

BORN MAY 26th, 1867

In a character sketch of Queen Mary, W. T. Stead points out, and with some reason, that Queen Alexandra's designation in the Prayer Book as "Queen Mother" is hardly appropriate; that while Mother she has been and a good Mother, she has never been regarded primarily as a mother. She has always looked too young and even now looks younger than her children. She was always to her people the Bride, the young woman, Peter Pan's sister, the girl who never would grow old. To her people, Queen Alexandra is Queen Alexandra still and she will remain Queen Alexandra to the end of time. Stead goes on to say that the typical mother is one whose children are children still, boys and girls who have not emerged from the enchanted realm in which Mother reigns supreme, and the nation is rapidly learning that the new Queen Mary is a real Queen Mother, the Mother in Being, the Mother still regnant over children who are still children; the Mother who prizes Mother's chair in the nursery far more highly than the throne of the Queen with all her kingdoms, dominions and empires.

The distinctive note of the new reign is summed up in one phrase—the Mother on the Throne. Her Serene Highness the Princess Victoria Mary Augusta Louise Olga Pauline Claudine Agnes, was born 26th May, 1867 in Kensington Palace. Her mother the Duchess of Teck was the daughter of the Duke of Cambridge, and grand daughter of George III. Queen Mary was the eldest, and once described herself as a child as being "very naughty, very happy and very uninteresting." She was very high-spirited and decidedly wilful and easily took the lead of her younger brothers in romping in the King's Gallery.

The Princess grew up a healthy energetic girl, who luxuriated in a free and open life, taking part in all the games with her brothers. Her mother, however, saw that she was well trained in habits of order and regularity, and it is probably owing to this wise provision that the Queen unlike some Royal personages, is very methodical and depends on her own memory rather than on that of the members of her household.

She studied singing under Toxt and plays the harp and pianoforte while she can converse fluently in English, French and German. The Queen is no blue-stocking, although her literary studies are wide and varied. She was instructed from childhood in all the arts and crafts of housewifery, the making and darning of stockings included. She disliked being idle and would say "Oh, if I only had half the time given me as present, in addition to my own time, which so many girls waste in doing nothing at all." Every Christmas New Year, and Birthday card was kept in scrap books for the poor children in homes and hospitals, and many a sad little heart was made glad by the Princess's Mission. Over and over she visited a poor cripple boy dying of consumption and would talk and read to him, and when the end was near she kissed him and wished him good-bye with tears in her eyes, and this is only one of many similar actions, showing her sympathetic nature.

HER MARRIAGE.

She was very happy in her first engagement to the Duke of Clarence, the elder brother of the present King, and they had, boy and girl fashion, decided that they would dedicate their married life to some great cause, coming to the conclusion that it must be the sacred cause of philanthropy. The sudden death of the Duke of Clarence in 1892, cut short these dreams of youth. This burden of sorrow pressed heavily on Princess May and it is no wonder that she lost her usual self-control, when she saw in a newspaper that she should forthwith marry the Duke of York, and exclaimed with burning tears, "It is too cruel—too cruel! Why may not I have the privilege of privacy at such a time as this, which every other girl in private life may have?"

However, the Princess, who in the opinion of Queen Victoria and Edward VII was fitted for all women to be Queen of England, became the betrothed of the Duke of York in less than twelve months and the marriage took place in June 1893.

There are six children—the first born, Edward, was born on June 23rd 1894 and the next, Albert, who will visit St. John's next month, was born Dec. 14th, 1895. The only girl, Victoria, came April 22nd, 1897 and after her three boys at irregular intervals, the youngest being now nearly seven.

HER RELIGION.

Queen Mary is deeply religious, retaining the evangelical faith in which she was brought up. Her religion is more concerned with morals than with imagination, with conduct more than with belief. She is a regular church-goer and communicant, who is extremely tolerant in her views, but very punctual in reading her Bible every day. She is not attracted either by high ritual or by low Church, she loves the music of organ and the singing of a well-trained choir.

HER VIEW OF THE SERVANT PROBLEM.

She has stated that to her mind the real root of the unsatisfactory state of things is that mistresses are too little concerned about the comfort of those whom they employ. They ought, she says, to do everything they can to make the leisure hours of their servants as agreeable as possible and Her Majesty has practised what she has preached.

THE QUEEN ON THE THRONE.

It is true that Queen Mary will have a somewhat difficult task in succeeding so universally beloved a sovereign as Queen Alexandra. But there is fortunately no sense of rivalry between the two Queens. Between the two Royal ladies there exists the tenderest and warmest affection, and ever since King Edward's death the relations between the widowed Mother and the King and Queen have been characterized by a devotion as touching as ever loving son and daughter displayed in a home desolated by death.

London's Private Picture Palaces.

Free Drinks and Cigars and no Charge for Admission.

Scattered about between Wardour Street and Shaftesbury Avenue, in the West Central district of London, a score or more of exceedingly pretty little cinematograph theatres, none of which make any charge for admission.

More than this, expensive cigarettes and big cigars of the choicest brands are provided free for all patrons, while in connection with certain of the more pretentious establishments there is also a free buffet, where whiskies-and-softs, wines and liquors can be had for the asking. Some of these hitherto palaces start showing films as early as nine o'clock in the morning, and in these there is an interval for lunch at midday, when a cold collation—also free—is served, washed down with sparkling ice-cold lager. Moreover, the pictures that are thrown upon the screen are all new ones—what are called in the trade "first-run reels"—and so, of course, show up to perfection.

A better programme could not be seen anywhere. But it is no use for a member of the general public to try to gain admission to any of these places. Not even if you were prepared to pay for your seat could you succeed in getting in.

For these theatres are private ones, established by the great film-producing companies for the convenience of their patrons, the buyers. Here, day after day, sit keen-eyed, alert men, viewing and silently assessing the merits of the various films that will presently be shown all over the world for the amusement and edification of the public.

They hold note books open in their hands, or laid flat upon their knees, but as the interiors of all picture palaces, little as well as big, must, of course, be kept in darkness while the pictures are being shown, they are not able to do any writing.

Instead, they record their appreciation, or otherwise, of the various items on the programme, by means of a system of dots and crosses. One dot means that a particular scene is good, two dots stand for very good, and three dots for excellent. A cross indicates that the scene opposite to which it is placed does not, for some reason or other, appeal to the buyer, while two crosses mean that the particular scene is barred in his estimation.

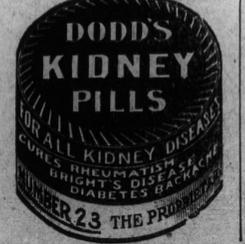

Buyers come from all parts of the world. During an exceptionally busy season, or when a "star" film is being shown, you can hear every known language spoken in these little theatres. That is to say, during the intervals, for while the pictures are being actually projected upon the screen there is very little talking done.

They are all keen on business. Some among them will spend £1,000 or even more, at the close of the day upon the films they have been witnessing. And all this money the buyers have got to get back, with the addition, of course, of a profit, from the proprietors of the ordinary picture palaces with whom they do business.

These latter rent the films from the buyers, who let them out over and over again at ever-decreasing prices. Thus, supposing the "first run," as it is called, of a popular film costs, say, £20, it is possible to get the second run for £18, the third for £16, and so on, until at length old and rainy it is let out for a shilling or two to the proprietors of the halfpenny shows that abound in the back streets of the poorer quarters of most great cities.

This swift transition from virgin freshness to senile decay may seem strange to outsiders, but it must be remembered that the life of a film is like that of a butterfly—short and sweet.
