A Great Intrigue, —OR, THE—

Mistress of Darracourt.

CHAPTER XIII.

"Like most sorrows that are born with us," he went on, "this shadow did not trouble this man much for a time. He was young, and Fate, which had put this thing upon him, had given him health and strength to help him to bear it. He lived apart, communing with himself, and with no confidants but Nature. As the years rolled on, and he grew to manhood, it seemed as if the shadow had grown lighter, and that it would not matter much, and he grew, if not contented with his lot, at least resigned. Let

Fate have done what she might in the past, for the present there was the sunshine for him as well as his fellows. With Nature for his close friend and companion, life promised some show of gladness even for him. Then there came suddenly, unexpectedly, a change. A man who had stood by him and permitted him to live in the place of his birth, died. The young man, deprived of his protector, was to leave the place. In wretchedness and misery, he was taking a farewell of it, when there suddenly came before him, like a star from heaven, a flower from the Garden of Paradise—a woman.

He paused and drew a long breath, but did not raise his eyes or move.

Lucille gathered the coat more closely round her, and turned her face farther away from him.

"Till that moment he had never given a thought to women; love was a thing he had read about only to marvel at. All womenkind were alike, and nothing to him. But in this one moment, something, of which he knew nothing, fell upon him like a spell. She was beautiful, more beautiful than anything he had ever dreamed of; but it was not her loveliness that seemed to strike him and touch his heart; it was something vague and undefined, something that he could not put into words, that seemed to enter into his life and take possession of him. It was worked, this miracle, in an instant. He did not know that it was love; he only knew that there was standing before him a being who could draw him after her, through life or death, with a word, a look, a smile!"

He stopped and let his hands fall to his side.

"Shall I go on?" he said, in a low voice.

Lucille murmured a word; it sounded like "Yes," and he went on.

"He found that this beautiful creature, who seemed to him like a goddess, was indeed as far removed from him as a goddess could be. Circumstances had made her almost his mistress; he begged and prayed that she would let him remain her servant, and she consented.

"From that hour his life was changed. In place of the peace which he thought he had found, there was a dull, aching pain in his heart, which never rested day or night.

"His books—his solitary life had made him studious—became dull and meaningless. There was room for only one thought in his mind, only one feeling in his heart—the thought of her, the longing to be near her.

"He was a coward, you say! Yes, he was a coward; but he fought hard at first. A hundred times an hour he told himself with savage force that she was as far above him as the stars are beyond the muddy pool on which they shine. He told himself that he was not even as other men; if he had been like his fellows, equal even to the lowliest of them, he might have gone into the world and struggled and fought and climbed until he had reached a place at least beside her feet. But ambition was barred to him; though he had become the greatest among men, there would still be the shadow upon his life—the shadow which would stand like a figure clothed in black between him and her.

"And yet, although he knew this, he could not cast aside his madness; it grew until it possessed him like an evil spirit of old, body and soul! He lived only on one thought, the desire to be near her, to hear her voice, to bring in the light that beamed from the lovely eyes which had enshrined himself in his heart. He was her servant, and he saw her now and again. Day by day his madness grew until all things took its color. All the world was represented by the beautiful creature to whom he was but a servant. He treasured every word she spoke to him; the dumb things she touched with her dear fingers became precious to him; a glove she had worn was as a thing sacred, and hoarded as a miser hoards his gold.

"And all the time he knew that the passion he was fighting against would at last turn and rend him, that the fire which burned in his heart must in the end consume it. He saw that in the future a greater misery would be in store for him. Some day one would come, her equal, who would love her—ah, not as he loved her, no other could love like that!—but would come and take her away. There was no vestige of hope in his heart, his madness never reached that pitch, there was only black despair and helpless rage against the fate which had dug so deep a pit between them forever and ever."

He paused and stretched out his hands, with a deep sigh.

"For a time he hugged his secret, persuading himself like a fool that he could hide it from all eyes, from hers especially. But at last the time came when he knew that his strength was failing him, that his madness would drive him some day into telling her—her, his mistress, his goddess!—that her servant, the wretched man upon whose life there rested so deep a stain—that this man whom she regarded as little higher than her dog or her horse—loved her! Loved her with as passionate a devotion as a prince could feel! Loved her so dearly that he could live no longer within the sunshine of her presence and keep silence! He knew with what scorn she would drive him from her, he knew that the contempt which must burn in her eyes would live within his memory to torture him till he died, but he knew that the day would come when, overmastered by his love, he would draw that scorn down upon him."

There was silence for a second, while he took breath, then he went on in a low voice:

"What was there left for him, for this madman, Miss Darracourt, but to go away? Go where he would, he must carry his wound with him. While there was sight in his eyes and memory in his brain, he would see her and hear her, though he put miles between her and him; but at least he could go away and save himself the misery of knowing that she knew his secret and scorned him."

His voice broke, and his head sank lower, and there was stillness for a moment or two.

Lucille leaned against the tree, motionless as a statue, though it seemed that the throbbing of her heart must be heard by him.

Every word he had uttered seemed to fall like fire upon her ears; her face was crimson, and then white, her lips tremulous.

"What should she do? What should she say? It is easy to blame her, to say she should have silenced him and sent him away. An ordinary girl, brought up under the wing of a watchful mother, would have known what to do in an instant, and would have done it; but Lucille was not an ordinary girl. She had been brought up in a large school into which romance never entered. She had had no mother to instill into her a reverence for the proprieties and the rules which regulate conventional lives. She had never heard a word of love from lips of man until this moment. Like a ship in a storm, anchorless and rudderless, her mind drifted to and fro in helpless confusion and indecision.

But amid all this bewilderment and confusion was a strange feeling of wild happiness and satisfaction. He loved her! This great, handsome man, who had saved her life, loved her! He was her servant, yes; but what servant had ever spoken as she had spoken? There was not a word, not an inflection in the musical voice that might not have come from a patrician.

And he loved her so deeply, so passionately, that he must go away from her, out of her sight. A dull pang assailed her at the thought; and then there flashed another thought upon her.

A wild, mad idea, but it came and stayed for a second.

Suppose she were to turn to him and say, "Harry, do not go! Stay, for I have no scorn for you, but love!"

At the thought the blood ran riot in her veins, and her heart gave a wild leap. Then she recollected what he had said—that there was a shadow on his life which divided them as a gulf. What did he mean? What was it? Drifting in an unknown sea, she asked herself the question again and again in the few seconds which elapsed, while he stood silent, then she heard his voice, and came back from dreamland to listen to him.

WAR SESSION OF THE LEGISLATURE.

YESTERDAY.

At 3 o'clock the House met. The Select Committee, through Mr. Devereux, presented the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne and was adopted without comment.

The Bill relating to War measures, giving the Governor in Council power to make rules and regulations as may be necessary in the interests of the country while war is on, was read a first and second time. As the Bill had not been considered by the Opposition, its further progress was delayed to give the Opposition an opportunity to become better acquainted with it.

The Public Enquiries Bill, extending the present Act, so that all doubts should be removed as to the powers of the Governor in Council to confer on a Commission the power to subpoena witnesses, etc., passed through all the stages.

The Volunteer Bill was put through the First and Second Reading and all the sections but two passed the Committee. These were deferred for further consideration. The Prime Minister in introducing the measure gave a short account of the Old Volunteer force. Objection was taken to two clauses by Mr. Kent and Mr. Lloyd and they were deferred at the instance of the Prime Minister, who suggested a conference on the matter. After the House adjourned a Conference took place between Sir Edward Morris, the Minister of Justice, Mr. Squires and Messrs. Kent, Coaker and Lloyd and an amended section will be introduced to-day.

The Bill requiring all sailing steamers to have wireless telegraphs and Morse signal apparatus installed passed all stages.

The Bill providing against unreasonable prices on food-stuffs went through all stages with some amendments after a discussion between the Prime Minister, the Leader of the Opposition, Mr. Lloyd and Mr. Coaker. The House then adjourned until 2.30 this afternoon when the Address in Reply will be presented to the Governor.

IN THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

On Wednesday.

When His Excellency had returned after reopening the Legislature, Hon. Edgar Bowring, in rising to move the appointment of a Committee to draft an Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne, emphasized the solemnity of the occasion, which necessitated the unusual session of Parliament.

He dwelt particularly on the fact that Britain had not entered the conflict until all possibilities of peace

PARISIANS MEET SITUATION WITH COMPOSURE.

Special to Evening Telegram.

PARIS, To-day.

Paris again to-day showed remarkable adaptability to the circumstances, the allusion to a certain contingency had been strictly forbidden to newspapers. That the Government would be transferred to Bordeaux was an open secret several days ago among journalists, public officials and military circles. Among these persons the effect of the announcement had been largely discounted. The public, after its first surprise, is viewing the situation with composure. To-night there seems to be a better feeling all round. Military secrets have been so well guarded that all reference to them is largely speculation, but it is a reasonable supposition that Joffre prefers to accept a decisive battle against the Germans in front of the forts and entrenched camps.

THINK GERMANS HARD HIT.

PARIS, To-day.

The Temps' this evening, prints another article, in which it predicts final success for the allies. The newspaper's reasons for its optimism are contained in the following resume of the situation as the Temps sees it: The diminution of pressure by the enemy on the extreme left of the allies' line, the absolute inactivity in the centre and progress of French troops in Lorraine and on the right bank of the Moselle, which passes a few miles South of Lorraine in the Department of Meurthe and Moselle. These circumstances are taken by the Temps as evidence that the enemy have been hard hit and is suffering from losses in men and lack of supplies. The Temps' writer an English officer who arrived here this morning from Pierrefitte, twenty-eight miles southwest of Paris, as saying he was

When 700 Britishers Faced 5,000 Germans

London, Aug. 29.—The Daily Mail's Boulogne correspondent, writing of the battle of Tournai, says: "The battle of Tournai should go down in British history beside Rorke's Drift and Magersfontein, as a revelation of the prowess of the British Army."

At Tournai a German cavalry force of 5,000 men overran a British force of 700, who hourly expected relief which never appeared.

"The Germans were victors at a terrible price and only after their own ranks had been sadly thinned. The British stood their ground until all hope was lost, and only 300 remained. Then they retired, calmly and coolly carrying their wounded, and harassing their pursuers all the way."

"The story of this last stand, is somewhat belauded by the British charge that the Germans finally turned the tide of battle by mounting quick fire in Red Cross wagons."

"The British survivors fell back on Wednesday afternoon, the fight having lasted from 11.30 in the morning."

If you want a good tonic for the fall, one of the best is our Quinine and Iron Tonic, prepared in our laboratory here in Newfoundland. This tonic has now been before the public for several seasons, and has established a reputation which increases with each year, as a medicine which will strengthen the nerves, improve the appetite, and impart a good tone to the entire system. We claim no magic virtues for this preparation, and it is not of any service in acute diseases, but it will be found of the highest value in run-down conditions of the body, where there is no organic trouble, and for these purposes we recommend it. Price 40 cents a bottle.

Bovels Herb Tablets are useful in biliousness, liver trouble, constipation, and in many cases of headache. A mild cathartic, and convenient laxative. Price 25c. a box.

Magnificent Coup

BRILLIANTLY CONCEIVED AND ABLY EXECUTED.

The most sensational coup of the war, if true, has come to light from passengers who landed at New York yesterday. Their story is that 72,000 Russian troops were landed at Aberdeen, the great northern port of Russia, at the mouth of the River Dwina in the White Sea. It is said they were entrained to Grimsby, the great fishing port on the "Sons" banks of the mouth of the River Humber, to Harwich, the principal port for Holland and Belgium and Dover the principal stepping off port for Channel steamers. Their destination is given as Ostend, where British marines were landed and British warships have been stationed. The conception of such a feat was brilliant, and only equalled by the capacity with which it has been carried to a successful conclusion. The organizing power, which has conducted it without a hitch is no mean one. It shows that no mistake was made in putting Lord Kitchener at the head of the War Office, for no any mistake made by him in keeping a strict censorship over War News, at which some even of the most responsible newspapers have been cavailing. It throws fuller light on the hint thrown out by Kitchener that the resources of Britain and Russia were not exhausted, and that both countries must combine to strengthen France. It was, however, not realized that at the moment he was carrying out a plan to throw Russian troops in Belgium to use them in co-operation for a blow from the shores of the North Sea. It shows too that the naval raid, executed with such skill & courage, under Rear-Admiral Beatty was no isolated move to smash a few German cruisers and destroyers, but part of the general plan to insure the safety of the transport of these troops both in the wider waters between Norway and Scotland and the narrower waters between England, France and Belgium. The general movement itself points not only to the strengthening of Ostend, Dunkirk, Calais, and Boulogne, but to their use as bases for a striking force to attack the rear of the German right wing which has been overrunning the department of Nord, Pas de Calais, Somme and Aisne, and whose latest exploit, mentioned in to-day's despatches is the capture of Amiens and LeFer. To do this will require a much larger army than 72,000 Russians. These have probably been strengthened by another British division, and by Belgian troops. It may take some time before this force can do anything very effective, but the fact that nucleus armies of the allies is gathering to the right rear of the German right wing should have its natural effect. The Germans are evidently preparing for this, as may be seen by the withdrawal of the Austrian and German corps which were reported as crossing the Rhine at Basle and moving on Belfort, but which were later reported to be withdrawing and being sent to strengthen the German army in Belgium. It probably accounts too for the weakening of the German forces further north in Alsace and Lorraine. Unless the Germans can check this move, it must delay the advance of the German centre and right wing on Paris, where apparently a most persistent, pertinacious and stubborn resistance is being offered to the German advance. The allies are fighting for time, and time is of the essence of the campaign of the allies, for the greater the delays forced on the Germans and the Austrians, the stronger the allies will become, as the Russian myriads are brought up from the distant parts of the Russian Empire and the contingents of Britain from the homeland, Egypt, India, and the Dominions can be put against the German and Austrian hordes.

Pope Benedict XV.

Pope Benedict XV., who succeeds Pope Pius X. in the Chair of St. Peter, is Cardinal James Della Chiesa, Archbishop of Bologna, Italy. He was only created a Cardinal at the last Consistory of Pope Pius X. in May last. He was for some time attached to the Roman Curia, and later appointed Archbishop of Bologna. The celebrated prophecy of St. Malachi gives to Pope Benedict the motto "Religio depopulata," one that may be of particular significance at this awful crisis in European affairs. It is now one hundred and fifty-six years since a Pope of this name occupied the See of Peter, the last one being Benedict XIV., or Prospero Lambertini, who reigned from 1750 to 1758. He was successor to Pope Clement XII.

Special to Evening Telegram.
NEW YORK, To-Day.
A Russian army of 72,000 men, transported from Archangel, Russia, and landed at Aberdeen, Scotland, on August 27, were conveyed to Harwich, Grimsby and Dover, where transports were waiting to take them to Ostend. According to officers and passengers of the Cunard liner Mauretania, which reached here last night from Liverpool, every precaution was taken by the English and Russian military authorities, persons on the Mauretania said, to keep the fact that foreign soldiers were being transported to England from becoming known, and the service on the east coast railway lines was suspended during the seventeen hours the troop trains were on the journey. Passengers said the trip of the Russian troops from Archangel to Aberdeen occupied three days. As the lines around Paris tighten and German forces draw closer to the French capital, official statements to the Press grow briefer and are more and more lacking in details. So far as the public are concerned, little is

CONFIRMED RUSSIAN VICTORIES.

OTTAWA, To-Day.
Good news from the War Office reached the Government to-day by a cable message which contained an official confirmation of the report of the great Russian victory at Lemberg with a capture of many troops, and a large number of guns. It is only a matter of time says the despatch, before the Russian army arrives at Vienna. The message contained the reassuring mention of the position of the allies in France. They are described as having had good success.

ENGLAND.

The die of war is cast, England, my England;
The die of fate is cast, And the hour has come at last When the dead heroic past Wakes for England!
Should we answer guns with words, England, my England?
Load guns with civil words? Then our blood were whey and curds, We should live by naught but words, Here in England.
There's a red patch on the foam, England, my England;
There is blood upon thy foam, Where thy mighty navies roam, And a chained fleet snarls at home Close by England.
Or old try sea-folk died, England, my England;
Yet they rise again in pride, On the great historic tide Where their children's warships ride Here by England.
What would our Drake have said, England, my England,
And the mighty souls who led Their ships when seas were red With the great heroic dead, Dead for England?
Say ye, who are not dumb, England, my England,
Strike ye, whose hands, not numb, Can answer to the drum That bids home and outlands come And strike for England!
We hear their tramping feet, England, my England,
Thy children's children's feet In the snow or Southern heat, On the age-long war-path greet The call for England.
God's truth! Thou hast the men, England, dear England,
Who can cast by plough or pen And give battle once again, Tho' they were but one to ten, For England, dear England!
—Mr. Roberts, in the Morning Post.

Eishery Reports.

Aug. 27th.—From B. Ferry (Catalina South Head to North Head).—The total catch is 1,550 qts. and for last week 50. No traps are out but 60 dories and skiffs are fishing. One banker, the Drummer's Tax, has arrived with 40 qts. but no schooners from the grounds or Straits. Prospects are very poor. There is a little fish to be had if enough squid could be obtained for the use of trawls.

Aug. 29th.—From R. Brown. (Upper Amherst Cove to Cape L'Argent). The traps have all been taken in, but 38 dories and skiffs and 8 boats with six men each, are fishing. The catch to date is 5,500 qts., with about 500, but not more, for last week. The Laura, John Russell, has arrived from Gross Island with 40 qts. There was a sign of squid yesterday, but none to-day. The fishery is improving on the offer grounds, and boats with 6 men brought in as much as 8 qts. to-day. On the inside grounds, cod is very scarce.

Aug. 29th.—From (Spot) Cove to Grate's Cove).—One local and three Lunenburg bankers are here, but no vessels have returned from the grounds as there is some squid to be had, if the weather were favourable.

The total catch is 19,000 qts. and for last week 1,200. No traps or boats are out, but 600 dories and skiffs are still fishing.

Aug. 29.—From A. J. Pearce. (Twilight to Trump Island).—The total catch is 2,000 qts. and for last week 150. About 35 traps and 50 skiffs are fishing, but no dories or boats. Prospects are very poor and this week cod is scarce all round. The bait supply is herring, but it is very scarce. Owing to stormy weather many of the traps have been taken in, and the catch was consequently lessened. The fish has struck off, but hook and line would do better if the weather improved.

Aug. 29th.—From P. J. Ward. (Salmon Cove Point to Colliers North Point).—Prospects are good and no doubt good work would be done if sufficient squid could be obtained, as the men say there is plenty of cod on the different ledges. There is a good supply of herring, but only a sign of squid. The past week's fishing was the best for the season. The catch to date is 110 qts. with 40 for last week. All the traps have been taken in, but 25 dories and skiffs are still fishing.

American Passion Play

AT THE CRESCENT.
The Crescent Picture Palace will present to-day and to-morrow the famous two-act picture of the Holy City, called the American Passion Play. This picture has been presented at the New Strand Theatre, New York at prices ranging from 25c. to one dollar. The management of the Crescent has made arrangements with the Film Co., so that they will be able to show to their patrons this really artistic and instructive picture at the usual prices of 5c. and 10c. This is a picture that no child should miss seeing at the matinee as it fully portrays the life of Christ, the entrance into Jerusalem, the Last Supper, healing of the halt and the blind, the blessing of little children, etc. The scenes were all taken in Jerusalem, the Holy City, and over 500 people are employed in this great art work, and it cost a good size fortune to produce. Miss Clark will sing "The Holy City" accompanied by Professor Spencer, who will play appropriate music on the organ.

Last Two Days

Mrs. Rossley's Real Living Pictures. Every one should see this novel and artistic act. It has made a sensational hit, by those who have seen it, and there is only to-night and Saturday for its run. There are all new pictures to-night again. On Monday Mrs. Rossley will present an up-to-date and novel show with her pupils in a laughable patriotic production, entitled "John Bull's Boarding School." The war songs arranged by Mrs. Rossley will be a treat; but the dance of the nations in all new costumes will be something very fine, besides the great three-act feature "The French Spy," the finest picture ever filmed.

Dear Sir,—I have analyzed a sample of Sulphate of Ammonia made at your Works and I found 29.5 per cent. of NITROGEN, Sulphates of Ammonia and Nitrate of Soda are the two principal Nitrogen manure. Sulphate of Ammonia is less soluble than Nitrate of Soda, consequently it is a safer manure to use during a wet season.

Love at First Sight.

There are certain subjects that people must have talked about from the beginning of the world and will talk about until the end thereof, because by their nature they are incapable of being set aside. One excellent example of such subjects is: love at first sight?

About once in so often a letter friend solemnly propounds that question to me. Before I can answer that I must propound another question: "What do you mean by love?"

Do you mean that wonderful compound of friendship, tenderness and sex attraction mysteriously blended into a supreme emotion?

Or do you mean what passes for love in so many cases—sex attraction? Unquestionably there is such a thing as sex attraction at first sight. In fact it is one of the commonest things in the world. Sometimes, to be sure, the people thus moved toward each other by the "cosmic urge" turns out to be otherwise, congenial and love gradually develops. Quite as often there is no congeniality and nature, having accomplished her purpose with her pawns, the one that has held them together is broken, and misery or divorce (or both) follows. I have noticed that in a surprisingly large number of divorces the parties "eloped after a short and romantic courtship." "Love at first sight," their friends probably called it. I also believe that there is sometimes at first sight, an attraction not merely of the senses. Hand in hand with the love-at-first sight controversy goes the equally familiar discussion as to whether for each of us there is only one perfect mate, one person in the world whom we can each truly love. My belief in this question is that there is not one person, but one type with which we can each be happily united. Now when two people of congenial types meet there is frequently felt an immediate attraction between them. After this has developed into love, which it sometimes does and sometimes does not, they may look back and think it was love from the very beginning. But none of these are really love at first sight.

One day Robert Louis Stevenson saw in the window of a restaurant a woman who, to his eyes was the perfect woman. "She's the only woman I shall ever marry," he said at once. "That certainly was love at first sight, and since he married her and was very happy with her, we cannot doubt its reality. But that was Stevenson. Rare souls like his may at once sense their mate, but in common every day life such things seldom happen—so seldom that Stevenson is but the exception that proves the rule.

Kaiser's War Plan Foretold by German Officer

Over two years ago General Friedrich von Bernhardi, of the German Army, considered one of the leading authorities on military matters in Europe, wrote a book called "Germany and the Next War," in which he outlined with startling exactness the very course which Germany is now pursuing in her war against her foes. "Foreseeing the refusal of Italy to fight on the side of Germany and Austria and taking fully into account the numerical superiority of the combined Russian and French armies, over the Germans and Austrians, as well as the commanding advantage of Great Britain on the sea, he passionately exhorted his fellow-countrymen to a war of aggression on land, a war of sudden and deadly blows, if they would avert the downfall of their native land as a world power.

In her war of self-preservation, wrote Von Bernhardi, Germany may make everything count. "Neutrality is a paper bulwark," he exclaimed contemptuously—a statement which, in view of Germany's disregard of treaties, concerning Luxembourg, Belgium, Holland and Denmark, shows him to have been a mouthpiece of those now directing German strategy. Germany's Naval Tactics. That Germany must not be an aggressor on the sea against Great Britain was perfectly clear to the German writer. He urged upon his countrymen a naval campaign of extreme caution, in conjunction with vigorous resistance to landings of British troops. This policy, apparently, has been decided upon by Germany. She seems to be holding back her warships and preparing herself against British attacks on land by ruthlessly brushing aside the neutrality of Belgium, Holland and Denmark.

Von Bernhardi also counselled the speedy crippling of the Russian fleet, to keep it from helping Great Britain and France. Here, too, he seemed to be perfectly clear to the German writer. He urged upon his countrymen a naval campaign of extreme caution, in conjunction with vigorous resistance to landings of British troops. This policy, apparently, has been decided upon by Germany. She seems to be holding back her warships and preparing herself against British attacks on land by ruthlessly brushing aside the neutrality of Belgium, Holland and Denmark.

Makes Hair Grow

The time to take care of your hair is when you have hair to take care of. If your hair is getting thin, gradually falling out, it cannot be long before the spot appears. The greatest remedy to stop the hair from falling is SALVIA, first discovered in England. SALVIA furnishes nourishment to the hair roots and acts so quickly that people are amazed. It destroys the dandruff germ, the little pest that eats the life that should go to the hair from the roots.

ed to speak with a foreknowledge of the future, his countrymen in the Baltic already having struck hard at the Czar's navy and driven it into the Gulf of Finland, far from the fleets of its allies.

Von Bernhardi's book created no end of a stir. On account of the high position of the author, it was looked upon as practically an official forecasting of the policy that would be followed by Germany in case of war. Now that the war is actually being waged, the official nature of Von Bernhardi's statements is evident on every page.

Particularly interesting just now are the ideas advanced in the book on how Germany should meet England's great sea power and endeavor to offset its unquestioned superiority to the German naval forces. The author points out that, whereas on land Germany will have the help of Austria, she will be thrown on her own resources on the water, and is not strong enough to take the offensive even in the form of a sudden attack like that of Japan on Port Arthur. He writes:

Defensive War at First. We should at first carry on a defensive war, and would therefore have to reckon on a blockade of our coasts, if we succeeded in repelling the probable English attack.

Such a blockade can be carried out in two ways. England can blockade closely our North Sea coast, and at the same time bar the Danish straits, so as to cut off communication with our Baltic ports; or she can seal up on the one side the channel between England and the Continent, on the other side the open sea between the north of Scotland and Norway, on the Peterhead-Ekersund line, and thus cripple our overseas commerce, and also control the Belgo-Dutch, Danish and Swedish shipping.

A close blockade in the first case would greatly tax the resources of the English fleet. According to the view of English experts, if a blockade is to be maintained permanently, the distance between the base and the blockading line must not exceed 200 nautical miles. Since all the English naval ports are considerably further than this from our coast the difficulties of carrying on the blockade will be enormously increased. That appears to be the reason why the capture of Harwich has recently been transformed into a strong naval harbor. It is considered the best harborage on the English coast, and is scarcely 300 nautical miles from the German coast. It offers good possibilities of fortification and safe ingress and egress in time of war. The distance from the German ports is not, however, very material for purposes of blockade. The English, if they planned such a blockade, would doubtless count on acquiring bases on our own coast—perhaps also on the Dutch coast.

Our task, therefore, is to prevent such attempts by every means. Not only must every port which is suitable for a base, such as Heligoland, Bursum and Sylt, be fortified in time of peace, but all attempts at landing must be hindered and complicated by the fleet in daytime by submarines; by night torpedo boats may co-operate if the landing forces are still on board.

Such close blockade offers various possibilities of damaging the enemy. If the coast fortifications are so constructed with a view to the offensive that the fleet may rally under their protection, and thus gain an opportunity of advancing from their stations for offensive operations. Such possibilities exist on our north coast, and our efforts must be turned toward making the most varied use of them. We must endeavor by renewed and unexpected attacks, especially by night, partly with submarines and torpedo boats, partly with battleships, to give the blockading fleet no breathing time and to cause it as much loss as possible.

"We must not engage in a battle with superior hostile forces, for it is hardly possible at sea to discontinue a fight, because there is no place whither the loser can withdraw from the effect of the enemy's guns. An engagement, once begun, must be fought out to the end. And appreciable damage can be inflicted on the enemy only if a hold attack on him is made. It is only possible under exceptionally favorable circumstances—such, for example, as the proximity of the fortified bases—to abandon a fight once begun without very heavy losses.

"It might certainly be practicable, by successful reconnoitering, to attack the enemy repeatedly at times when he is weakened in one place or another. Blockade demands naturally a certain division of force, and the battle fleet if the attacking party, which is supposed to lie behind the furthest lines of blockade and observation, cannot always hold the high seas in full strength. The forces of the defending party, however, lie in safe anchorage, ready to rally out and fight."

Granting these objections, von Bernhardi figures that England will discard the close blockade, and if she chooses to blockade at all, will attempt to seal up the English Channel and the sea passage between North of Scotland and Norway. He points out that only a small force is required to block the Channel, as the navigation route there is very narrow, and all the great English naval depots—Dover, Portsmouth, Portland and Plymouth—are on the line of blockade or close behind it. Furthermore, the line is covered on the north by Sheerness and Harwich, so that a retreat of German ships to the coast of Germany might effectually be cut off.

As for the northern line, if this scheme of blockade should be adopted by the British, von Bernhardi declares that they are no less favorable, since the blockaders would have a base in the great naval harbor of Fosyth, and a squadron of cruisers might lie in support off the Orkneys. Under these conditions, he figures that every attacking fleet from the German north coast would be vigorously attacked itself from Rosyth and Sheerness and its retreat cut off.

In view of all this, he thinks that the only wise course for Germany in such an event would be to advance from the Baltic against the northeastern part of the British blockading line, since retreat in such an event would be tolerably safe. He writes: "This accentuates once more the supreme importance to us of keeping open, at all costs, the passage through the Sound and the Great Belt. The command of these straits will not only secure the Baltic basin for us, but also keep open the sally ports for our offensive operations against the English blockading fleet.

But the German writer does not think that Great Britain will content herself with a mere blockade in this form. In order to bring the war to a quick end, he is convinced that the English will try to land troops. Of this eventually he writes: "They could not obtain a decisive result unless they attempted to capture our naval bases—Wilhelmshaven, Heligoland, the mouth of the Elbe, and Kiel—and to annihilate our fleet in its attempt to protect these places, and thus render it impossible for us to continue the war by sea.

"It is equally certain that our land forces would actively operate against the English attempts at landing, and that they would afford extraordinarily important assistance to the defence of the coast by protecting it against attacks from the rear, and by keeping open the communications with the hinterland."

The success of the English attack will much depend on the strength and armament of the coast fortifications. "Such a war will clearly show their value both as defensive and as offensive works."

"Our whole future history may turn upon the impregnability of the fortifications, which, in combination with the fleet, are intended to guard our coast and naval bases, and should inflict such heavy losses on the enemy that the difference of strength between the two fleets would be gradually equalized. Our ships, it must be remembered, can only act effectively so long as our coast fortifications hold out."

choice of favorable moments for attack, and can give such early information of the operative movements of the hostile fleet that we can take the requisite measures for defence, and always retreat before an attack of superior numbers."

"The numerical superiority of the English cruisers is so great that they shall probably only be able to guarantee rapid and trustworthy 'scouting' by the help of the air fleet."

"The importance of the air fleet must not, therefore, be undervalued, and steps must be taken to repel the enemy's air ships, either by employing specially contrived cannons or by attacking them directly. (To be continued.)

Do You Feel Moody, Irritable, Depressed?

When That Languid, Lasy, Easily-Tired Feeling Comes, Your Liver is Slow. Tells How to Cure Quickly. "Even when I was young I was not robust and healthy like other girls. I suffered from headaches, and had sort of blue feelings that deprived me of the joyful spirits and pleasures other girls seemed to get. After I married I found I could not throw worries off like other women, and those full feelings of despondency and weariness made me very unhappy. There was no cause to feel so, and my doctor said my liver was sluggish, and this accounted for my poor color, my tiredness, languor and despondency. The pills the doctor gave me were too purgative, made me weaker because they were too active for my constitution. Dozens of my friends recommended Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and they were so mild and helpful. Well, I never used a pill that acted so quietly as Dr. Hamilton's. They were so comfortable to use, I was afraid they might not help. But in a week I knew they had been actively engaged in cleaning up my system. They did the work of a tonic and blood medicine combined. I improved to a marvelous degree with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and I now maintain the most perfect kind of health by using them just once or twice a week."

It is Mrs. E. V. Erlanger, well known at Gloucester, who relates the above experience. She proved what you and all others, men and women, anything but Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. are best for restoring health and best for keeping the system in perfect running order. Don't be misled into using anything but Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. a box, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid by the Ctriarhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

GERMAN LINE BROKEN.

PARIS, Sept. 3. An official despatch from Antwerp states that in the Provinces of Antwerp and Limburg, the Germans have set fire to several farm buildings and that Merchten has been attacked. The Russian Embassy at Paris confirms the report of the destruction of Lansberg, Cessel and Bischofsstein by Russian Cavalry and that they have broken the lines of the enemy between Heilsberg and Koenigsburg.

A SEPARATION ALLOWANCE.

OTTAWA, Sept. 3. The Government has approved of a Separation Allowance of twenty dollars a month being paid to the wives and families of married men serving with the Canadian Expeditionary Force. This will be paid direct to the wives and families by the Paymaster General's Office in the Department of Militia and Defence to Ottawa. This allowance will be paid to the wives and families of those left at Valcartier after the contingent sails. The Government reserves the right of withholding this allowance from any who are in receipt of pay from two sources. This special allowance of twenty dollars per month to married men is in addition to the pay of one dollar and ten cents per day which they receive as private.

ANOTHER GERMAN AEROPLANE DESTROYED.

The Governor of New Zealand has received a message stating that the German Governor of Samoa has surrendered and that he has been sent with other German prisoners to the Fiji Islands. The landing of troops in Samoa was carried out with great expedition. The Union Jack was hoisted over German Samoa on the afternoon of August 29th.

WAITING FOR MONTENEGRINS.

ROME, Sept. 3. A telegram from San Giovanni de Media, Albania, twenty miles south of Scutari, says the bombardment of the Austrian seaport of Cattaro has not begun because the Anglo-French squadron is awaiting for the Montenegrins to transport their siege artillery to Mount Levcen. This move is intended to put Cattaro between two fires. The garrison at Cattaro has tried several sorties against Antivari, but all were frustrated by the Montenegrins. The Austrians, the despatches state, lost many men and two cannons in these sorties.

WIT AND SCIENCE WIN.

LONDON, Sept. 3. A Daily News correspondent writing from Gournal, a town near Rouen, says the German advance is amazing. A great battle is raging, with what result I know not, but I do know that the French and British armies are intact and still confident of ultimate success. Incredible as it seems, the tremendous mass of men that the Germans have hurled at the allies have not overwhelmed them. It seems that while the Germans have weight, the allies have wit and science, and those with reinforcements will eventually win.

GERMAN TROOPS BECOMING WORSE OUT.

LONDON, Sept. 3. The Chronicle's correspondent at the front writing from an unnamed town in the Department of Somme on Tuesday says: "The superiority of the British artillery coupled with the pluck of British Infantry is rapidly telling on the German attackers. A few more days such as Sunday and Monday and the German army invading Northern France will have destroyed itself completely. No army that ever existed could endure and survive the terrible losses sustained by the Germans in the last few days. Whole divisions of Infantry have been blotted out and shattered and the German ranks are beginning to show demoralization. In the latest assault the Germans manifested immediate signs of unsteadiness and were seen to waver and frequently break and flee in confusion. As a result of this prolonged battle the German line has advanced a few miles but has not gained any marked or decided advantage."

ANOTHER BALACLAVA.

LONDON, Sept. 3. The Daily Mail correspondent behind the British lines describes the charge of the Ninth Lancers, which occurred at an unnamed spot during the recent series of tactical retreats, as a second Balclava. He says: "Terrible havoc had been caused in our ranks by shells from a battery of

"MISGOTTEN GAINS."

A society man by day, a thug by night—this is Briggs, who poses as a nobleman to win the daughter of a wealthy old man. A naval lieutenant is her real lover. He returns from a cruise and, after remarkable adventures with the crook's gang, saves his sweetheart on her wedding night.

"THE TIGER"—A thrilling Vitagraph. The trainer kills his wife, the beast smarting under its master's abuse, serves in the hands of the girl's father to wreak vengeance upon him. Charles Kent and Anita Stewart sustain the dramatic situations with great power.

THE PAWNBROKER'S DAUGHTER—A drama, with Alice Joyce. MIXED NUTS—Comedy. PATHE WEEKLY—Interesting.

DeWitt C. Cairns sings that old time Popular Ballad, "Daddy." Professor P. J. McCarthy at the Piano. Joe Ross, Effects, Realism.

EXTRA PICTURES FOR THE CHILDREN AT THE SATURDAY MATINEE.

Misgotten Gains.

The pictures to be presented at the Nickel Theatre to-day are splendid ones, and will afford the greatest pleasure to all who attend. Great taste has been shown in the selection of them. There is a two-reel picture by the well known Kleine-Cines actors who have a large number of first class plays to their credit. It is entitled "Misgotten Gains" and tells of a man in two characters, that of a society lion and a thug. He poses as a nobleman to win the daughter of a wealthy old gentleman. She is in love with a naval officer who returns from a cruise and after exciting adventures with the crooks saves his sweetheart on the night of her wedding. It is a delightful film and no one should miss it. "The Tiger" is also a thrilling drama, such as St. John's audiences prefer. The dainty actress Alice Joyce is seen in the "Pawnbroker's Daughter." "Mixed Nuts" is a very funny comic. There will also be a Pathe Weekly, Mr. De Witt C. Cairns singing the popular ballad: "Daddy," last night and was heartily applauded. The children's matinee to-morrow will have extra films. Send the little ones they will enjoy themselves and be out of harm's way.

MINARD'S LATEST CUBES GANGET IN COW.

The second squad of volunteers to be attested, numbering ninety-four, paraded at the C. L. B. Armoury last night. Rt. Hon. Sir E. P. and Lady Morris were present, and the presentation of the badges was made by Lady Morris.

This morning at 9 o'clock the squad marched to Pleasantville to go into camp.

Lincoln Beachey.

Red McGhee

Red McGhee says: In circus sideshows long ago they used to have two stunts to show that always got my goat. One guy ate fire. 'Twas some more trick. The other guy'd get up an stick a sword right down his throat. For darn sake I n g freaks I thought those guys copped out the medal, belt an prize. But they're just pikers now. Their rating doesn't go so high since I've seen Lincoln Beachey fly. My hat's off an' I bow.

When birdmen first began to fly Link Beachey gave the game a try an' soon became a star. As soon's he'd hear of something new he wouldn't rest until he'd do that something with his car. 'Most every guy that flew the game when Link was spiraling to fame is underneath the grass. But dapper little Link don't die. Why, le an' Death play 'round the sky like school kids after class.

He loops the loop, flies up-side-down, turns spirals, glides—he's like a clown when he gets in the air. I've seen him in his Curtis plane race

More Fires.

Fires provoke immediate sympathy for the sufferer and also thankfulness for personal escape. Another thought should be whether one is personally and sufficiently protected? An insurance policy with Percis Johnson would provide for you this desired security and at small expense. Have you enough insurance?

All My Corns Are Gone

Every day, legions of people get rid of their corns with Blue-jay. This easy method now removes a million corns a month.

You who suffer with corns do yourselves an injustice. Blue-jay will instantly stop the pain. And in 48 hours, without any soreness, the corn comes out completely.

About half the people know this now. When a corn appears they put Blue-jay on it. Then they forget it. In a couple of days they lift out the corn and bid it good-bye forever.

You can't do that by paring corns, and you can't with old-time treatments. You may get relief for a little while, but the corns simply stay and grow.

Try this modern, scientific way—the way now employed by physicians and hospitals. Get rid of the corn. It is just as easy, just as painless as the ineffective ways.

The Lure of the Summer Resorts

Summer is an unlovely season in New York. Its fetid crowds of tired, strapping pedestrians, its baking pavements, sizzling sidewalks, and breathless streets, send those of its four million who can afford it, pell-mell to sea-shore or mountain. Those who cannot go, become irritated and half-crazed. Coney Island drags tens of thousands of the city's heat-maddened multitudes into its wild vortex, affording them its bizarre diversions.

Marian had reached the point where the city's crowds were beginning well nigh to craze her. Sweating in her little room, she strove to write, but knew that her efforts brought forth little more than gibberish. Mastersy of brain and body had not yet come to her. At first it did not occur to her to be gone. When the thought finally invaded her heat-frenzied brain, she longed for quiet, for the earth, grass, the woods, for a canoe on a quiet, winding stream.

That day she dropped into the Grand Central Station and procured railroad booklets of summer resorts far and near. She dropped into a chair and began running through them, an enchanting diversion for one ready for flight from blazing, hostile summer in a big city. Her brain swam with indecision as to where to go, yet she shrank from the thought of attempting to sleep for even another night in her hot room. On the subway, she continued her fascinated examination of pictures and descriptions of places to go. For one thing, she was astounded at the price schedules for hotel and boarding house accommodations. She knew she must go slow. She had been anything but extravagant with the proceeds that had come to her in two surprising amounts from the magazine where Jack Meadows, plotter of prosperity,

A Thought for the Times

CHAPTER II.
 I. C. MORRIS.

The suddenness with which this war has burst upon the world is one of its surprises. Of course, everybody who has kept in touch with the manoeuvrings of the European Powers, must have been fairly convinced that sooner or later war should come—even though our better judgment had hoped that warfare was past. But with the record of the past quarter of a century as a basis of calculation, it could not be otherwise. The spirit of war was in the air, and the clouds were ominous, and men of all classes saw them deepening.

Thirty-five years ago the Rev. Mr. Kirk, which stood where now stands the present edifice, said, when speaking at George Street Church during the week of prayer on the topic of "Nations and Their Rulers," that "Europe was like a powder box, and only required the application of the torch to set it off."

Mr. Patterson's statement was quite true even then, but it is much more so now. We have seen the torch applied, and now we behold the explosion. This explosion is embroiling all Europe, and has a tendency of menacing the peace of the world—and never was the world so much prepared for war. Since the time that Mr. Patterson spoke those pregnant words we have had several outbreaks among the different European nations, but they have mostly been of a local or minor character, and have not seriously affected the world's commerce or finance, hence we speak of a half century or of a century of peace.

Among the wars of the past forty years, and which we speak of as being minor, the most serious were the Afghanist and Egyptian and the Armenian and Turkish. The latest of the lot was the war of the Balkan States. This latter war seemed to have disturbed the world's finances very much, but the present war is telling a much heavier blow; and the effect of which must be felt for years to come. The wars of which we have speak may not be all directly termed European wars, but they affect Europe directly and therefore all the world, for Europe is the centre of more governments and dynasties than any other continent. Man was first placed upon Asia, but Europe seems to have been his chief battle-ground.

For a generation past the nations have been doggedly preparing for war. Ship after ship has been built and gun after gun has been cast, until the armaments of the armies are counted by myriads. Every invention of the period both in science and in mechanics has been turned to the furtherance of war. Even the conquering of the air by the flying machines has been utilized by the War Department. How, then, could war be longer averted? It had to come, and now that it is upon us the great question of concern is: "How long shall it last?" and what will the upshot of it be?

Tremendous questions these, and questions fraught with the world's welfare. But only a prophet could forecast this end. At the same time it is not difficult to trace the indications of the times, and to map out the future full of retribution and equally full of vengeance. "As we sow we reap," and so shall it be in the course of this war. Germany has applied the torch, and the toxin of war has sounded throughout the world. Upon her head will fall the responsibility of the suffering, and of the death, and the toll of the conflict. She cannot possibly long resist the enormous force of the allied powers arrayed against her. The task would be too herculean and the price too steep. Prepared though she has been, and sudden as has been her swoop upon the nations, she cannot hold the field when once surrounded by the armies of her enemies. And yet these nations were not her enemies, but by her action she has made them her enemies, and most of them against their will.

If the future checker-board of Europe can be drawn from the present aspects of the war, and if its indications stand for anything, then there is but one result, but one climax: and it will be the humiliation of Germany in the eyes of the world. Her desire was to gain territory, but her failure will be colossal. With victory she could have accomplished her purpose, but by defeat she will be impoverished, and her welfare be retarded for two generations. The loss to her trade alone will be of such magnitude as to seriously affect her industries; and being so circumscribed as she is, this loss will be all the keener. She cannot but emerge from this conflict on the losing side and as a lesser power. Her indemnities will of necessity be very great, and in the arrangement for them may lie the key board of some alterations on the map of Europe. Germany has made an untimely move, the results of which must fall upon her own head.

But what, after all, is the map of Europe? It is but so much territory, so much land and water over which men have fought for ages, and will fight until the day of universal peace dawns upon the world. It is not the acres of Europe that we mourn for, it is the loss of life; the nation's strength and beauty, the glory of manhood in its prime. It is the broken hearts of mothers, the burning tears of fathers and the sighing of the children. It is the terrible suffering of the battle-field, and the carnage of its guns and the horror of its surroundings. On the battle-field will fall the love of thousands, and when its noise is past and gone as smoke, the anguish will be felt in the homes far distant. True, war has its triumphs, but its horrors blacken the sky, and rob it of much of its glory.

At the R. C. Cathedral yesterday a solemn High Mass was celebrated as a supplication for peace. His Grace Archbishop Howley occupied the Throne and was attended by Rt. Rev. Mons. St. John and Very Rev. Dr. Kitchin. The celebrant of the Mass was Very Rev. Fr. MacDermott, assisted by Rev. Frs. Pippy and Conway as deacon and sub-deacon respectively, whilst in the sanctuary were Rev. Frs. Kelly, Sheehan, Nangle and Dr. Greene. In the evening there was exposition of the Blessed Sacrament from 7 to 8 o'clock, during which crowds of worshippers visited the church. Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was imparted to the large congregation by His Grace, and the priests in the sanctuary chanted the Litany of the Saints. At St. Patrick's there was also an hour's exposition of the Blessed Sacrament, followed by Benediction.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office, its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modern and dependable, equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKER CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. Mr. Percie Johnson represents this world known firm in Newfoundland.

The Splendid Tattered Flag.

By the Duchess of Somerset,
Come rally round the Flag,
The splendid tattered Rag
Of the brave and the true,
The red, white, and blue,
Its fame must not be lost,
For whatever be the cost
We must rally, boys, rally round
The Flag.

This, the heritage of ages;
While unfurled for Nelson's fight,
When the hero bravely taught men
How to die for God and Right;
Bear the hardships of the Battle;
Face the cruel musket's rattle,
Stern duty calls once more to-day,
And all her dauntless sons obey.

Come rally round, etc.
Tis the glory of the nation;
Tis the symbol of the free;
It waves o'er lands far distant,
And it floats o'er every sea.
When 'tis challenged foes may mutter,
But aloft it yet will flutter,
Its guardians are the brave,
Who death disdain that Flag to save.

Come rally round, etc.
It gives shelter to the exile,
For the slave 'tis wide outspread;
It is high unborn in honor
Of the King, and mighty dead.
When foes proclaim the Flag's defeat,
And say 'twere better to retreat,
They have not reckoned with the host,
Back flinging all their foolish boast.

Come rally round, etc.

War and Work.

The nations of Europe are wading in slaughter, the sound of their conflict encircles the world; some thrones may collapse and some dynasties totter before the red flags of the fighters are furled. The men of our village are vastly excited, they sit by the pump in the big public square, explaining how Germany's plans should be righted, how Russia and France are both up in the air. They point out the errors of Serb and of Belgian, they criticise legions, the rank and file, and hope they may never either swallow or smell gin, if they couldn't manage those armies in style. Their wives, in the meantime, are bitterly sighing, the woves by the doorway all threatening lark; the children are hungry, for wieners' wailing crying; their dads are entirely too busy to work. I'm sorry for Europe, that knows not the beauty of Peace, for poor Europe, whose rivers are red, but foremost and first I regard it my duty to rustle around for the liver and bread. The first of the month will be here ere we know it, and if I can't pay for my coffee and hash, the grocer will have little use for the poor whose sympathy kept him from earning the cash.

Party Loyalty.

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Slivash."

Party loyalty is the glue which binds the voter to the politician. It is the chief stock in trade of the latter. Without party loyalty he would be as helpless as a mason without mortar. Whenever a politician's voters drop off of him he is a gone gossling and has to spend the rest of his life working. Therefore party loyalty means more to the politician than the ten commandments or the constitution or Roberts' rules of order. He can get along without all of these, but without party loyalty he can't make the voters stick to him while he fixes conventions, ignores platforms and does humorous things with the Declaration of Independence.

The politician uses party loyalty as a cement, but the voter uses it as a substitute for brains. If a voter has enough party loyalty, he can get along without thinking at all. This is a great inconvenience for the voter but it is an even greater blessing for the politician who is using his party for revenue only, and who could be easily bothered if all the voters insisted on doing their own thinking before voting.

Party loyalty holds the party together in adversity and enables it to sweep gloriously to victory later on. Sometimes it sweeps to victory like a crusader's vessel and sometimes like a pirate ship, but the man who is afflicted with party loyalty doesn't care how it cruises, just so it fits there.

The man who has party loyalty in its parais state believes that no man in his own party can be bad and that no man in another party can be very good. He knows the difference between right and wrong, but believes that whatever his party does is right. He hates wickedness and graft, but there is one greater sin than those—not voting the straight ticket.

If we had less party loyalty in this country we could have a great deal more national loyalty, and the smooth grafters who edged into control of a party could have that party to themselves.

Household Notes

In order to insure lightness in a cake, it should be put into the oven as soon as the baking powder or her rising medium has been added. All linen should be hung straight to dry, and all pieces will wear better if a third or half of the napkin or tablecloth is hung over the line. To remove milk or cream from woolen goods, pour cold water on the spots until the water runs through. Then rub with a cloth that has no lint.

Soups and stews should be planned at least a day before they are wanted, and the soups should not be thickened till just before they are used.

When arranging pillows for an invalid, place the first pillow lengthwise with the person and the second one across the upper half of the first pillow.

To clean white wool yarn, sift warm cornstarch through it and roll in a towel. In two days shake the starch out of it and it will be perfectly white.

A warm quilt for winter is made of a pair of bordered cotton blankets with cotton put in as far as any other quilt. Tie with wool the same color as the border.

It is a convenience, to hang on the bedpost, a simple bag with a yawning mouth held open by a wooden ring. Into this bag a handkerchief is slipped for night use.

If a baking dish has been scorched or burned, fill it with cold water to which a pinch of soda has been added. Allow it to boil and the dish can be easily cleaned.

It makes a sponge cake very light and spongy if a tablespoonful of water, with the chill off, is put into cake mixture directly after putting in the eggs.

After washing quilts and comfortable, and while they are still on the line, but nearly dry, beat them with a carpet beater and they will be wonderfully light.

Soot from a stove or chimney where wood is burned, if put into a pitcher and boiling water poured over it, makes a healthy drink for house and garden plants.

In very cold weather when there is difficulty in keeping warm in bed where the windows are up, try putting a layer of newspapers between the mattress and the springs.

To dry a woolen sweater so it will not lose its proportions, shape it while it is wet and lay it flat on a folded Turkish towel. A vest should be hung on a coat hanger.

A few scraps of fat meat that have been saved will brighten up a dying kitchen fire. Then put on a few bits of charcoal, and when this is burning add the hard coal.

TO THE PEOPLE OF NEWFOUNDLAND.
FELLOW COUNTRYMEN:
The Mother Country has been compelled to go to war and preserve, among other things, the rights and liberties which we all enjoy as citizens of the Empire.
Newfoundland in common with the other Oversea Dominions, has pledged itself to assist the Mother Country with material help in the present extremity.
This is to take the form of an increase of the Naval Reserve from Six Hundred to One Thousand men and the raising of a Regiment of Five Hundred men for land service abroad, and the Colony has further undertaken to assume the full cost of this contingent of Five Hundred men during the course of the war.
It is our duty and privilege, as loyal and patriotic citizens of the Empire, to voluntarily assist in supporting this movement, and, to raise a fund for that purpose. This Patriotic Fund will be applied primarily in making provision for the depending relatives of those who undertake to fight the battles of the country and the Empire by land and sea and afterwards to such other objects connected therewith as may be deemed desirable.
The need is great and in the confident expectation that this appeal will evoke a prompt and generous response, we respectfully but strongly urge all who can, to give as liberally as possible towards this most deserving object.
The undersigned, on behalf of the Patriotic Committee appointed to undertake the organization and despatch of this regiment, appeal for subscriptions toward this Fund. Contributions may be sent to the nearest magistrate, to the branches of any the Banks doing business in the Colony, or to the Treasurer, J. S. Munn, Esq., and they will be gratefully acknowledged.
